Fish Fry Finale Today

Rides and a carnival, fish dinners and a beauty contest will be among the highlights today of the 30th annual Costa Mesa Fish Fry and Carnival, which ends this evening.

The event, sponsored by the Costa Mesa-Newport Harbor Lions Club, benefits youth activities.

Saturday's annual parade was marred by two serious accidents.

Eight-year-old Raymond Gonzalez of Costa Mesa died beneath the wheels of a float trailer as horrified parade-goers watched. His mother and older brother were among the 15,000 spectators who lined the streets.

A motorcycle stunt performer was injured about two hours later when eight members of the Tijuana Police Suicide Squad fell while executing a pyramid maneuver on one motorcycle.

Armado Olayo Alvirer was reported in satisfactory condition at Costa Mesa Hospital after suffering a broken leg.

Today's schedule for the carnival begins with rides, exhibits and fish dinners at noon. A beauty contest is slated for 2 p.m., a baby contest for 3:30 p.m., the Arlee Higbee Dancers at 6:15 p.m. and the awarding of the grand prize at 8 p.m.

The carnival is located in Costa Mesa City Park at the intersection of 18th Street and Park Avenue.

Climb Too Tough?

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The first woman to scale Mt. Everest, the world's highest peak, said Saturday the climb is too difficult for women and she would have never reached the top without male Sherpa guides.

Junko Tabei, a 35-year-old Japanese housewife, reached the 29,028-foot summit on May 16.

Little-Remiro Murder Trial Jury Still Out

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Jurors in the Marcus Foster murder trial reviewed the testimony Saturday that led to Symbionese Liberation Army member Russell Little's attack of a witness on April 29.

Little and codefendant Joseph Remiro, also an avowed SLA member, sat attentively during the 55-minute reading of testimony as the jury wound up its second day of deliberations.

The jurors returned to a hotel for the night after the court reporter read the testimony to them. Court officials said deliberations would resume today.

Among the testimony reviewed by the jury was that of Christopher Thompson, a former friend of Little. Thompson said he sold a .38-caliber Rossi revolver to Little in March 1973.

Little, who conducted his own cross-examination of Thompson during the two-month trial, suggested that the weapon was sold for $65 to Nancy Ling Perry so that Thompson could repay a debt to Willie Wolfe.

Mrs. Perry and Wolfe were among six SLA members who died in the May 1974 shootout with Los Angeles police. Kidnaped newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, now a fugitive sought with SLA members Emily and William Harris, said on a tape after the shootout that she had loved Wolfe.

The prosecution claims that Dr. Foster, Oakland superintendent of schools, was slain Nov. 6, 1973, with cyanide-tipped bullets fired by a .38 Rossi and a .380 Walther automatic pistol.

The Walther was found on Remiro when he and Little were arrested early in 1974. A Rossi was found near the body of Mrs. Perry at the Los Angeles shootout, but it was too badly damaged by fire for experts to link it to the Foster shooting.

when the Costa Mesa Fish Fry Parade's fun turned to tragedy shortly before 1 p.m. only a few blocks from his new one-story, stucco home.

The accident occurred in the 600 block of West 19th Street.

"We were there watching," said his mother, Mrs. Rosemary Gonzalez of 1086 Meyer Place. "The kids were all running up to the float to get candy and balloons. I don't know how he got caught."

She spoke quietly as she sat in her family's new home, surrounded by relatives and friends who had come to comfort her.

Lt. John Regan of the Costa Mesa police said investigators are uncertain whether the boy attempted to climb onto the float and fell or whether he was accidentally knocked over by the other children gathered around the float.

About 20 or 30 children had crowded up close to the Shakey's Pizza Parlor float to get the giveaway goodies despite warnings by police and persons on the float to stay back, Lt. Regan said.

Police rushed young Gonzalez by patrol car to Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, not waiting for an ambulance to arrive. He died at 1:34 p.m. of a fractured

Beirut Blast Strikes ITT

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An explosion shattered an ITT office in downtown Beirut on Saturday, and fighting between Christians and Moslems south of the capital took the life of a village merchant.

In Madrid, a senior U.S. official traveling with President Ford said war in the middle East is a certainty if there is no progress toward a settlement within two years.

He described the upcoming talks between Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Ford today and Monday in Salzburg, Austria, as crucial and said Sadat "wants some progress."

No casualties were reported in the Beirut explosion, which also damaged several other offices in the building. The blast in the office of ITT's aerospace, electronics, components and energy group came after most of the shops and offices in the Starco Commercial Center were closed for the weekend.

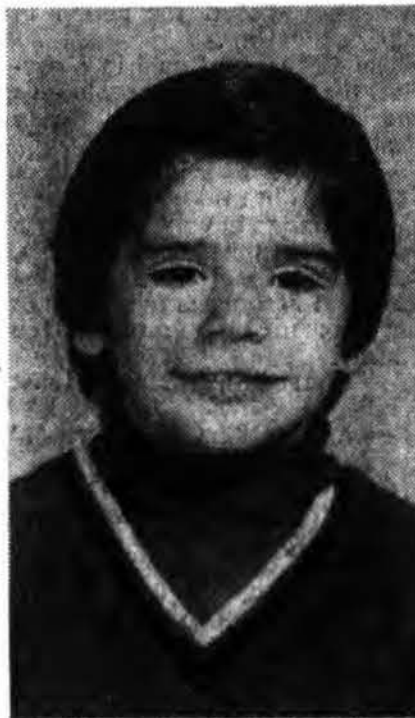

skull. Funeral arrangements are pending.

The boy, a second grade student at Pomona School, had moved to Costa Mesa from Fullerton April 17 with his mother and his older brother, Richard, 11.

"We wanted to get near the beach and then my sister lives out here," Mrs. Gonzalez explained. Her voice trailed off, then she added:

"He enjoyed going to the Nazarene church. He wanted to go to summer school and we just signed him up for football. He liked everything, go-karts and horses."

"Tomorrow we were planning to go to the beach to play."

Ford, Franco Agree on U.S. Bases in Spain

MADRID (UPI) — President Ford won a basic agreement Saturday from Generalissimo Francisco Franco for U.S. forces to remain on Spanish bases. He hailed it as a "major contribution" to the defense of Western Europe.

But Spanish sources said they foresee the United States losing at least one of the four bases it maintains in negotiations to be completed next month.

After a sun-splashed, fiesta-type welcome, Ford met with Franco for four hours. The meeting ended with both sides expressing confidence a satisfactory agreement will be worked out in detailed negotiations in Washington.

Franco was believed to be seeking a treaty with Washington, an infusion of U.S. tactical short-range weapons and a reduction in the number of American troops in Spain.

The current pact, due to expire in three months, allows the United States to use four Spanish military bases: the Polaris submarine base at Rota, two airfields near Madrid and Seville and an aerial gunnery range at Zaragoza, which has been mothballed. The bases are home for about 20,000 American troops.

Spanish sources said the United States could wind up losing at least one base, probably the one at Torrejon, a strategic air command bomber base 10 miles from Madrid.

The base is considered obsolete, and the Spanish government has always felt uneasy about allowing a major military target that close to a city of almost four million people.

A White House spokesman, however, said he could give no indication whether the United States, while retaining base rights, might lose one of the bases. He said the question is still in confidential negotiation.

Assistant Secretary of State Arthur Hartman briefed reporters on Saturday's breakthrough in the talks and indicated there may be changes in the current base set-up. One aspect could be a specification of how the Americans are to use the facilities.

2 Men Hurt In Laguna Collision

Two Glendora men were hospitalized in Laguna Beach Saturday following a two-car collision on South Coast Highway at center Street.

Brian Theodore Duda, 17, and his passenger, Perry Martin Cornish, also 17, were reported in "guarded" condition at South Coast Community Hospital Saturday night. They were undergoing testing prior to being admitted to intensive care.

The second driver, Harold Gene Minyard, 45, of 2526 E. Jacaranda Ave., Orange, was not injured.

Officer Mark Everton of the Laguna Beach police said the circumstances of the accident are unclear because of conflicting testimony. He said the investigation is continuing.

Iran Base Contract Goes to Rockwell

The government of Iran has contracted with Rockwell International, headquartered in Anaheim, to build an intelligence base from which Iran could monitor military and civilian electronic communications throughout the Persian Gulf, government officials said Saturday.

At Rockwell's Anaheim headquarters a company spokesman said he could not comment "at this time."

Mike Sanders, a spokesman for Rockwell Autometrics Division, added that Rockwell may issue a statement on the contract within a week.

A State Department press officer, Steve Wagenseil, said he understood that Rockwell has already dispatched personnel to Iran to begin work on the project.

Pentagon sources said an okay for the project, described as a commercial transaction, also had been given by the Defense Department's Office of Strategic Trade and Disclosure.

That office is responsible for determining whether the U.S. technology involved in a proposed project should be shared with a foreign government or kept secret.

Wagenseil, the State Department spokesman, said he did not know the dollar value of the contract. However, the New York Times quoted sources as saying the base would eventually cost as much as $500 million. The Times, in a story in today's editions, said the contract was a personal request of the Shah of Iran. The project was code-named Ixex, after the wild mountain goats, the newspaper said.

The Times article, which was written by Seymour Hersh and attributed to unnamed U.S. officials, said the contract called for Rockwell to recruit former employees of the National Security Agency and the Air Force Security Service.

The Shah plans to use both airborne and ground-based electronic receiving and recording equipment in the intelligence-gathering system, the Times quoted its sources as saying.

Ixex could be used to gather information about dissidents within Iran as well as about other nations in the Mideast, the sources told the Times.

Hazy skies kept beach crowds light Saturday, Orange Coast lifeguards reported, with only 40,000 reported in Newport Beach, 17,500 in Huntington Beach, 6,000 in San Clemente and 11,000 on county beaches.

Air and water temperatures were low, between 62 and 65 degrees. For nationwide and local weather forecasts, see page A10.

Reagan Sees Ted Kennedy As Candidate

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California predicted Saturday that Democrats will turn to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy as their presidential nominee in 1976 in order to keep the nomination from Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

Reagan's address to the Georgia Republican Convention followed predictions by several Southern GOP leaders that the region will back him for the Republican nomination over President Ford.

State party chairman Bob Shaw said Saturday he believes Reagan can deal a sharp blow to the Wallace organization in the South by swinging potential Wallace voters into the Republican presidential primaries, instead of the Democratic elections.

But, three hours after he spoke, the convention overwhelmingly rejected a resolution to give unequivocal support to Reagan.

The resolution, which said the convention gave its support "without any reservation" to Reagan, was defeated on a voice vote.

Its author, Preston Stokes of Chatham County, interpreted the vote to mean that "the convention does not endorse Reagan."

But a seatmate, Don K. Clements, disagreed. "That absolutely does not indicate a lack of support," he said, and added that it means the convention isn't ready to take a stand.

Legislature Urged To Act on Insurance

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — There will be "a setting for disaster" in the state if the Legislature adjourns in September without resolving the malpractice insurance issue, the head of the California Medical Association said Saturday.

"The situation is such that doctors in California cannot continue to practice under the insurance premiums that are now present," Dr. Carl Goetsch, CMA president, said in an interview.

"I feel the pressures of the moment are such that the Legislature could not possibly go home without effecting at least a significant part of the changes that we need. If that happens, this would be a setting for disaster."

"I can't conceive of many doctors who could continue practicing under those circumstances. I hope this isn't interpreted as a threat," Goetsch said, "but simply a statement of reality. If the doctors have to again withdraw their services, I guess the Legislature will have no choice but to reconvene and act."

Goetsch said he would term such an action "more of a lockout than a walkout."

Anesthesiologists in the state began a voluntary walkout May 1 to protest high malpractice insurance rates. Most were expected to be back at work Monday as part of a temporary agreement with the state Legislature.

The agreement says doctors will return to work after a statewide pool of 400 liability insurance carriers sets up malpractice insurance at lower rates while the Legislature works on the problem.

The policy-making body of the CMA was meeting this weekend at the Beverly Hilton Hotel in special session — its first in 30 years — to endorse "a workable legislative program" and to decide "what financial resources we will commit to achieve our goal," Goetsch said.

There are 400 CMA delegates, representing the CMA's 26,000 members. Some 283 delegates attended the session Saturday at which more than 100 resolutions were introduced for action in today's meeting.

The CMA chief said in a preview that today's top resolutions and actions would undoubtedly include:

- A short, absolute statute of limitations in malpractice cases.
- A change in what evidence is admissible in malpractice trials, including disclosure of total financial resources available to persons making malpractice claims.
- Court-administered trust funds.
- Restrictions on attorneys' contingency fees.
- A workable alternative to court litigation that would resolve liability disputes and compensate injured patients quickly and equitably.
- And a limit to the liability a doctor must assume.

Youth Crime Seen Linked To Television

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The amount of student crime and vandalism may be related to the amount of violence a child sees on television, according to the report released by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"Since the acting out of youth could well be related to inputs at a younger age, and since it is estimated that by age 12 the typical child has witnessed 10,000 acts of violence on television, the association believes that television entertainment programs displaying specific acts of violence should be reduced significantly by regulation of the Federal Communications Commission," the report said.

"Student crime and vandalism may well be related to an emphasis in the entertainment world upon violence," it said.

The report said this places new responsibilities on the schools to help young people analyze and criticize the nonclassroom "educational networks," including films, advertising, television and popular songs.

The report cited another problem, caused by the contradiction between what students learn on television — drugs, nutrition, premarital sex — and what the schools are expected to teach.

"Society and schools continue to place youth in the middle on such issues and schools have only limited impact upon the attitudes of youth under these circumstances," the report said.

FORD ...

close ties to the Arab world, would not let the United States use the bases for logistics support of Israel during the 1973 Middle East war.

Cheering crowds estimated at more than 400,000 lined the route of Ford and Franco's motorcade route into Madrid after Ford's arrival Saturday morning for a 22-hour stay.

A squadron of silver-helmeted, plumed and caped horsemen heralded the two leaders' arrival as if they were kings.

Fight Kills 2 At Soledad

SOLEDAD (UPI) — Two inmates at the California Training Facility died from stab wounds and six others were injured Saturday in a fight between whites and Mexican-Americans in a security unit in the north facility.

One of the victims was killed outright and the other died later at a hospital in Monterey. None of the other injured convicts was considered in serious condition.

The security unit, housing 600 convicts, was placed on a 24-hour lockup after the fight.

Susan, Class 'Bump' At White House Gala

From Wire Services

WASHINGTON — After a dinner on the presidential yacht Sequoia with three of her closest friends and their dates, Susan Ford played host to her senior prom at the White House Saturday night.

Seventy-four girls and their dates attended the exclusive Holton Arms girls' school senior prom, the first party of its kind ever held in the White House.

Susan, in an apricot backless dress with a corsage of three white roses, and her date, Billy Pifer, a medical student from Winchester, Va., led the dancing to the hard-rock band Outerspace in the ornate East Room.

"It's like any other prom," said Susan Ford as her class gathered. "I think everyone is looser than before" the prom.

As she talked, couples danced under the solemn gaze of George and Martha Washington, whose portraits hang on the walls. The students did the Bump, the Swing, and even the old-fashioned Lindy.

Susan said her parents had planned to attend the affair but "where they are is so much more important." President and Mrs. Ford are in Europe.

Did her father give her any advice?

"Be good," Susan said. "He trusts me."

Pifer said they first met at the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, where Susan was crowned queen several weeks ago. She called him afterwards and invited him to be her escort at the prom.

Pifer said he is a house guest at the White House for the weekend and is staying in the family quarters on the third floor. He got up early Saturday morning and was given a tour "of the places you don't ordinarily see," Pifer said. He was impressed.

One of Susan's classmates, Margi Brawner of Washington, approached a reporter and said, "Do you want to interview me? I'm the class vice president."

Over the loud noise of the band, she said, "The band is really hyper. They've never played any big gigs like this before."

Of the prom itself, she said, "It's too public. Nobody knew all these cameras and press would be here."

No. 6,000 at Fairview

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Kenneth inhabits a whole new world today, but it is a world similar to his crippled mind and memory to those long, concrete corridors and dormitories full of other different people at Camarillo State Hospital, where he lived for 10 years.

His new world — after only eight recent months at home with his parents in Los Angeles County — is Fairview State Hospital, Costa Mesa.

He is 15 years old physically and four years, four months old mentally.

He is the 6,000th patient admitted to the big hospital for the mentally retarded and severely physically handicapped over the years since it opened in 1959, the year before his birth.

SUNDAY SPECIAL

The story of Kenneth could be called truly tragic.

His thick client file compiled by the clerical staff at Fairview when he arrived Wednesday reveals he was an unwanted child even before birth, at which time he was placed with the only Mom and Dad he has known.

One week after they took him home, his mother began to worry and wonder.

"His head was shaped funny..." she is quoted in his record.

The baby also seemed compelled to bang it on hard surfaces, as though the tiny bundle of his body bottled up some uncontrollable anger at a world he never asked to enter anyway.

Today, Client No. 6,000 is less of a problem that way, although the road of life still looms all uphill for the adopted black youth.

His occasional violent outbursts have decreased since a recent psychosurgical operation, identified by the tongue-twisting term: bilateral six-target innominate mygdalotomy.

His parents are pleased, but also concerned about his resumption of life in a big institution, because while he has lashed out in temper like many children in the past, he is timid.

The five foot, eight-inch, 170-pound boy does not defend himself when bullied, records indicate.

Extensive evaluation at the UCLA neuropsychiatric center ironically produced a split diagnosis. He either suffers from schizophrenia, the classically designated split personality; or autism, a little-understood mental syndrome.

The specialists could not agree.

He is also severely mentally retarded, which is a definitely separate problem, although many among the three percent of California's population who are retarded also suffer from certain forms of mental illness, compounding their trials of life.

One may say that Fairview Case No. 6,000 has much in common with an older arrival, Case No. 11, except that she is a young woman.

Records show No. 11 was admitted the first day Fairview opened in 1959 and she remains there today, at 23, her girlhood gone with time's passage.

No other retarded person has been in the Costa Mesa institution that long over its 16-year history.

Recent changes in California's method of administering programs for the handicapped have partially changed the nature of those admitted to such facilities.

They are primarily those with such severe mental retardation or physical handicaps that they will require long-term, if not life-long

Save the Michigan

One More Time for Old Tug?

By TIM O'HARA

Capt. Richard Blake Shaw and his mighty Michigan are crumbling.

Dry rot, age and the pounding of many rough seas are closing in on the ship and her master.

But wait. The flagship of the Balboa Island Sculling and Punting Society may have one last fling. Like Zsa Zsa Gabor, she may have enough inner structure for one more facelift.

At least that's the hope of Dick Shaw and a band of Michigan fans who plan what they modestly call a giant bash (at $7.50 per person) next Sunday to finance one more attempt to keep her afloat.

The Giant Remember the Michigan affair involves, more or less, a beauty contest, a 118-member drum and bugle corps performance, a big-band dance and a buffet at the historic Pavilion on Balboa Peninsula.

"Everybody should come," says Shaw. "If they shouldn't come, they should stay home."

The Orange County Kingsman Drum and Bugle Corps is scheduled to perform and march from the Balboa Pier at 1 p.m. From that point, the schedule — like Shaw — is subject to alterations, substitutions and fits of whimsy.

"It's a settled, solid deal," is the the assuring word from Bob Dugan, bartender at Uncle Hubert's Royal Caboose saloon up Main Street from the Pavilion. "Roast beef, the big band, the beauty contest — one hell of a deal for seven-fifty."

("Is Dugan a member?" asks Shaw. "I don't remember him.")

the Lido Isle bridge. Today, Michigan maintains sort of a floating waddle in front of the Rusty Pelican restaurant in Newport Beach.

In the period between, the Shaw-Michigan combination has brightened many a day for harbor cruisers. A onetime Monterey Fisher, Michigan is described physically by her owner as "24 1/2 feet of pure fun."

Pure fun or no, Michigan is a mess topside and inside. The proud crest of the Balboa Island Sculling and Punting Society — magnificently executed by Shaw's fellow cartoonist Virgil (VIP) Partch — peels and fades on her cabin. The yellows, blacks, whites of Michigan's crazyquilt decor fleck into the bay.

Shaw is indefinite about what steps might be taken to restore Michigan.

"We could lift the paint back chip by chip — and pour resin in behind," suggests Partch.

"Now, we did that last time," says fellow punter and sculler Bill Veneman.

"You can't find anyplace to nail anything to," says boater Bob Andjulis. "Put in six nails and five of them go right on through."

Shaw, alternately optimistic and pessimistic, changes the subject by cursing the (relatively) modern-day marine engine somewhere in Michigan's bowels.

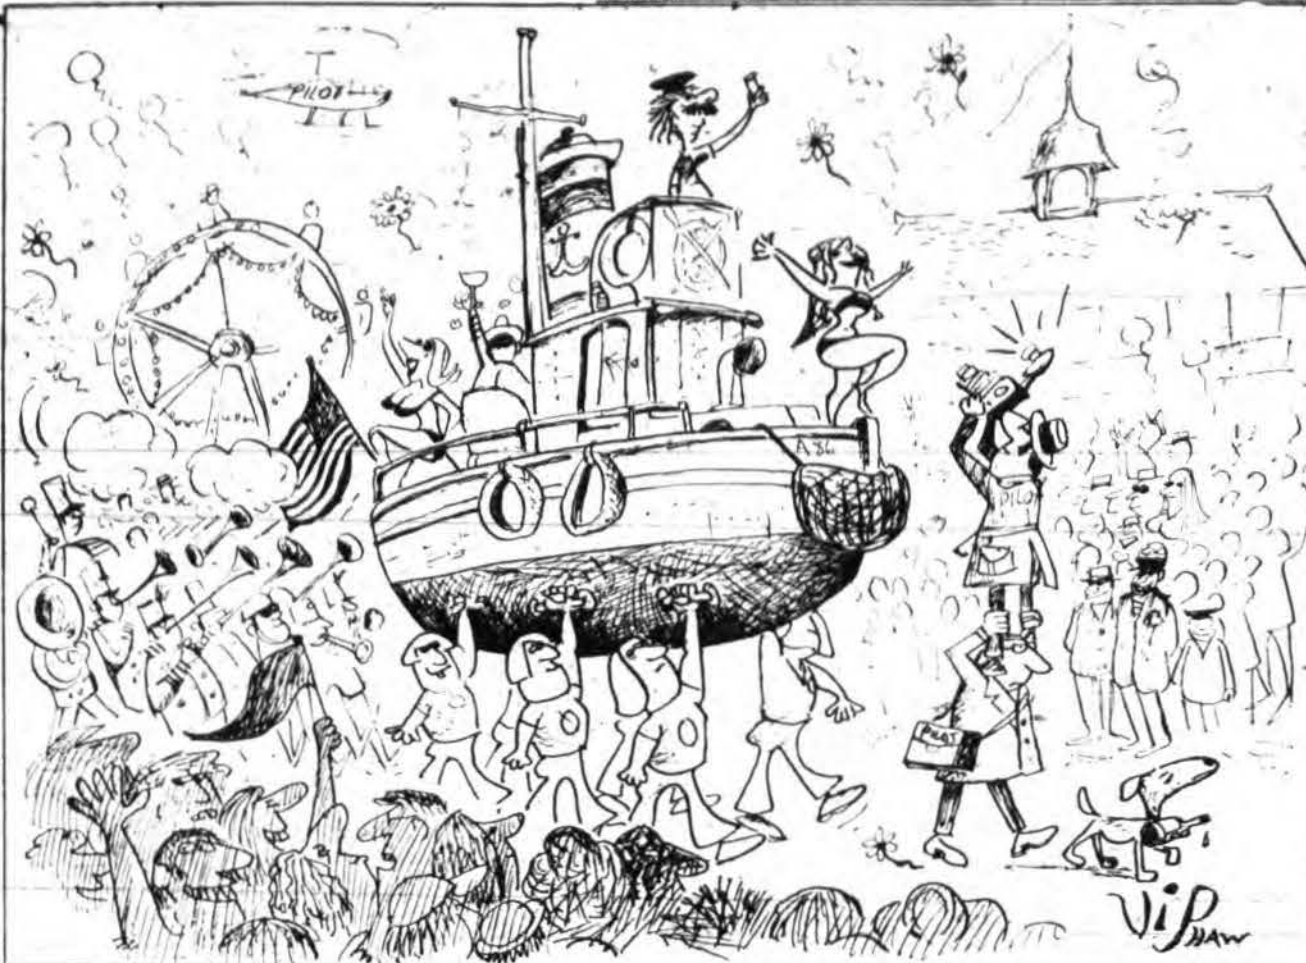

"Never should have taken out the Model A engine," muses the skipper. "You can get parts at Sears for a Model A. I don't know where to get parts for whatever is down there now."

The Model A engine might have saved Michigan from one of her most embarrassing performances. Trucked to San Diego for a race against the Coronado ferry seven years ago she chugged and jerked to inglorious defeat — sending a dejected Shaw home without even a taste of the Winner's Cup.

At this point, it's not even known if Michigan will make it to her own party. There's talk in some of the Balboa bars about adding an outboard to her fantail as power for a token performance at next Sunday's party. The Coast Guard, Harbor Department and other safety-conscious entities may have other ideas.

Whatever her state, Michigan will be playing a familiar role next Sunday. She'll be the focal point for a bash — "a giant bash," as Shaw emphasizes.

Michigan and her skipper will be in form for that performance. They've been there before.

FV School Meet Heated

By KATHY CLANCY

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Fountain Valley residents apparently will vote alone Nov. 4 on forming their own new unified school district within city borders.

A move to extend the vote to all residents of the Garden Grove Unified and Huntington Beach Union High School Districts barely lost in a vote at a meeting of the Orange County Committee on School District Organization Friday night that lasted until early Saturday morning.

At the same time, the committee voted to ask the State Board of Education to allow residents of southern Huntington Beach to vote Nov. 4, as well, on a unification plan for their area. Committee member Barbara Shirley abstained.

The proposed district will include the Huntington Beach City (elementary) District, as well as the Huntington Beach strip of the Fountain Valley (elementary) District.

About 350 persons attended the heated five-hour debate at Dwyer School in Huntington Beach, including a large contingent of Fountain Valley residents wearing blue and white lettered tee-shirts favoring their unification.

"I didn't know I was supposed to come in costume," said Zeta Wessa, a Fountain Valley resident opposed to the plan.

The committee was reconsidering a May 6 decision made on a 6-3 vote to ask the State Board of Education to allow the extended vote.

That recommendation would have flown in the face of the state's April 10 decision to allow only residents of Fountain Valley and the Fountain Valley School District to vote.

And proponents of the Fountain Valley unification contended they petitioned directly to the state in the matter and hadn't wanted the county committee to become involved anyway.

Garden Grove School Board President Frank Kellogg, whose district stands to lose Los Amigos High and three elementary schools, charged Fountain Valley residents are trying to oust minority students from Los Amigos, creating a "lily-white high school."

But Frank Bryant, co-chairman of the Fountain Valley effort, countered, claiming Garden Grove buses minorities to Los Amigos, keeping its ethnic minority at 24 percent, more than twice that of any other Garden Grove school.

Four 'Mob' Members Helped CIA?

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency relied on four underworld mobsters for intelligence used in planning the ill-fated 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, the Sacramento Bee says in its editions today.

The CIA's underworld informants, all former Havana casino bosses, had buried $750,000 in Cuba when they fled Fidel Castro and therefore had a stake in encouraging the United States to undertake the invasion to overthrow him, the newspaper said.

"The information they supplied to the CIA supposedly pinpointed troop and naval vessel positions," said the story by Bee reporter Denny Walsh.

"More importantly, perhaps, the mobsters also reported that many of the people of Havana were unsympathetic to Castro and would almost certainly rise up in support of a counter-revolutionary force once it had established a beachhead," the Bee said.

In exchange for their help, the mobsters had been promised they would be allowed to recover their buried cache unhindered, the Bee said.

The newspaper said the four men had their own boat, with one CIA man aboard, standing off Cuba when the Bay of Pigs invasion started. But when it became obvious that the invasion of 1,400 exiles was a failure, the boat returned to Florida, the account said.

And Fountain Valley City Councilman Roger Stanton angrily shot back at Kellogg, "I think it is incredible that you actually believe what you said up here."

During that battle 12 spoke for the vote extension and 17 against.

In a two-hour hearing on the Huntington Beach unification, Seal Beach Schools Superintendent Marx Dressler, a Huntington Beach elementary official and a spokesman for parents in the Huntington Beach part of the Fountain Valley elementary district, spoke favorably.

Eleven persons argued against it, including officials of the Huntington Beach Union High, Ocean View and Westminster School Districts.

They contended the proposed district would leave the rest of the high school area with lower tax wealth and with 12,000 high school students to put into facilities built for 8,000, while the new Huntington Beach district would have 5,000 students in schools built for 6,000.

Glen Dysinger, assistant high school superintendent contended the committee meeting was just another in a five-month series of "keystone cops meetings that can only serve those in favor of unification by confusing the electorate."

He charged the plan being debated had not been distributed before the meeting, so action should not be taken.

But Committee Chairman Dave Brandt argued it had been available to the public for several weeks through the Orange County Department of Education.

The Native Tongue

More and more accommodation seems to be offered to Americans with a native tongue other than English -- particularly in states such as Texas and California, with relatively large numbers of Spanish-speaking persons of Mexican descent.

State and federal forms offer bilingual instructions, offices are required to be staffed with Spanish-speaking personnel, unemployment insurance instructions are given in both languages, schools are pushed to offer instruction so it can be understood by students who have difficulty mastering English.

At the federal level, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission has recommended that children whose primary language is other than English be taught in their native tongues, with English being taught as a secondary subject.

A new federal voting rights law soon will ban literacy tests as a condition to voting. Further, election information will be required to be published in foreign languages if sizable minority groups reside in the area.

Certainly the rights of citizens should be protected, even if they have not mastered the basic language of communication of this nation. Too often, the heel of the law -- or the heel of unfair treatment -- have come down harshly on unfortunate minorities unable to explain adequately the why and where of particular circumstances.

Yet we must wonder if this broadening pattern of accommodation is really in the best interests of those minorities.

After all, English is the language of this nation and anyone unable to use it easily in his everyday life is operating with a tremendous handicap. Programs designed to protect the non-English-speaking minorities have an unfortunate liability in that they too often encourage them not to learn the country's basic tongue.

They also have a tendency to isolate the minorities and keep them outside the mainstream of society.

Millions upon millions of us here in the United States today came as immigrants who spoke only a foreign tongue when they left their native lands. In time, and often with some difficulty, they adopted their new language -- and became Americans first, and Greeks, Armenians, Italians, Poles and Germans second.

Minority children with language difficulty deserve special consideration in their early education to overcome an initial handicap of basic learning.

Beyond that, it should be remembered and emphasized that the language of communication in this country is English. Those who are citizens, or who wish to become citizens, certainly should be able to use that language adequately.

First Step In Cha-cha Detente With Cuba Up to U.S.

By WALTER C. CLEMENS JR.

The stage has been set for rapprochement between the Latin-American spearhead of revolution and the United States gendarme of world order. This development has come about in part through the initiatives of Washington and Havana, aided and abetted by a nudge from Leonid Brezhnev.

How can Washington and Havana maintain this momentum? How can they avoid the actions (or inactions) that often undermine the attempts of governments to improve their relations? Three lessons may be drawn from Washington's dealings with Cuba and other countries throughout this century.

THE FIRST lesson is that exploitation of one country by another does not pay, except perhaps for the short run. The U.S. interventions in Cuba since 1898 have been justified in moralistic terms, and some American influences on Cuban development have been progressive.

On balance, however, U.S. policies helped to perpetuate a one-crop economy in Cuba and political institutions that benefited a small section of the Cuban people, American consumers of sugar, and U.S. business interests on the island.

There was also some gain for the strategic interests of the U.S. and its allies from the Guantanamo Naval Base.

These same policies, however, led to conditions that bred Castro's revolution, the nationalization of foreign and Cuban economic interests on the island, and the costly and dangerous efforts of Washington's crisis managers to overthrow Castro. They also created a Soviet presence in the Caribbean -- the first major breach of the Monroe Doctrine.

Indeed, the dynamics of American-sponsored counter-revolution and Soviet strategy almost led to the brink of a global holocaust in 1962.

HOWEVER much Yankee interests may have benefited from U.S. influences on Cuba prior to 1959, these gains have been decisively wiped out by the costs and dangers flowing from the Cuban-Soviet-U.S. confrontation since that time.

A second lesson is that relations premised on mutual aid offer a better chance for long-term gains to both sides. Henry Ford understood this principle when he decided to pay automobile workers sufficient wages so that his products would have buyers.

Relations between heavyweight and lesser powers are difficult to conduct on premises of mutual aid, but U.S. relations with Puerto Rico and the Philippines came much closer to this goal than did U.S. dealings with Cuba.

The results, though far from perfect, have been relatively positive -- both for the citizens of Puerto Rico and the Philippines and for their governmental and business relations with the North American colossus.

A third lesson may emerge from U.S. relations with Moscow, Peking and other Communist governments. These policies have followed what psychologist Charles Osgood has dubbed "GRIT" -- graduated reciprocated initiatives in tension reduction.

WASHINGTON and Havana have already moved in this direction, for example, with their joint actions to discourage aerial or naval piracy.

As with the Soviet Union and China, a logical "next step" for Washington would be to lift restrictions on trade with Cuba, moving eventually toward granting of most-favored-nation status. Cuba, like Russia, might be asked to make some compensation for nationalized U.S. properties in exchange for long-term credits.

While it takes two to cha-cha, initiatives for peace can more logically be expected from the stronger side, for it can better afford whatever risks may be entailed.

Congress Must Ask Hard Questions

The Mayaguez Strategy

Two weeks after the victorious rescue of the Mayaguez off the Cambodian coast, hard questions are still being asked about the incident. These questions are hardly less explosive than the original capture of the freighter.

The biggest question of all, of course, is whether the only way the 39 seamen could have been released was through the use of massive force, involving as it did the death of 15 marines and perhaps more than 100 Cambodians.

The sequence of events begins with the seizure of Mayaguez in waters where 25 ships from other nations had only recently been stopped and searched because of what Cambodian officials considered to be unauthorized passage through their territorial waters.

SINCE THESE search-and-seizure actions by Cambodia were publicized, the question naturally arises why our intelligence services did not alert our own ships in the area.

Once the Mayaguez was seized and its crew arrested, the United States protested the act as a violation of international law. The United States, however, neglected to bring its protest before the International Court, which exists for precisely the purposes of resolving questions of international law.

The problem here was whether Cambodia was right in contending that the Mayaguez came within its sovereign limits, or whether the United States was right in contending that the Mayaguez was on free seas. The International Court was not called upon to resolve this question. Why not?

In the same sense, no attempt was made to invoke the machinery of the U.N. Security Council before resort to force, as required by the U.N. Charter. Again, since the United States had charged Cambodia with a violation of international law, the U.S.A. was bound by its own signature to the charter to bring the case before the Security Council before resorting to armed force.

QUESTION: Why did the United States bypass the very instrument that it urged the Arabs and Israelis to accept in the interest of peace in the Middle East?

Even assuming that the United States had good and sufficient reason for not attempting to use international machinery, why was no deadline set for the release of the ship and the crew before the United States sent its bombing planes and Marines into action?

A deadline would have put the Cambodians on notice about the precise point at which the United States would start shooting if its ultimatum was not respected. Conceivably, this might have saved some lives.

How many Marines were killed or wounded after the United States learned that the seamen were being returned?

Was the use of force by the United States disproportionate to the problem?

Was the United States more eager to demonstrate that its humiliation in Vietnam was not to be interpreted by other countries, especially in Asia, as a sign that the United States could be trifled with?

IF THE ANSWERS to any of the foregoing questions show that a direct attack was not absolutely necessary, then the United States had not demonstrated strength but weakness in its action on May 14.

In any case, there is much that needs to be known. It may be difficult for Congress, given the mood of celebration over the Cambodian incident, to set up an inquiry for the purpose of ascertaining all the facts.

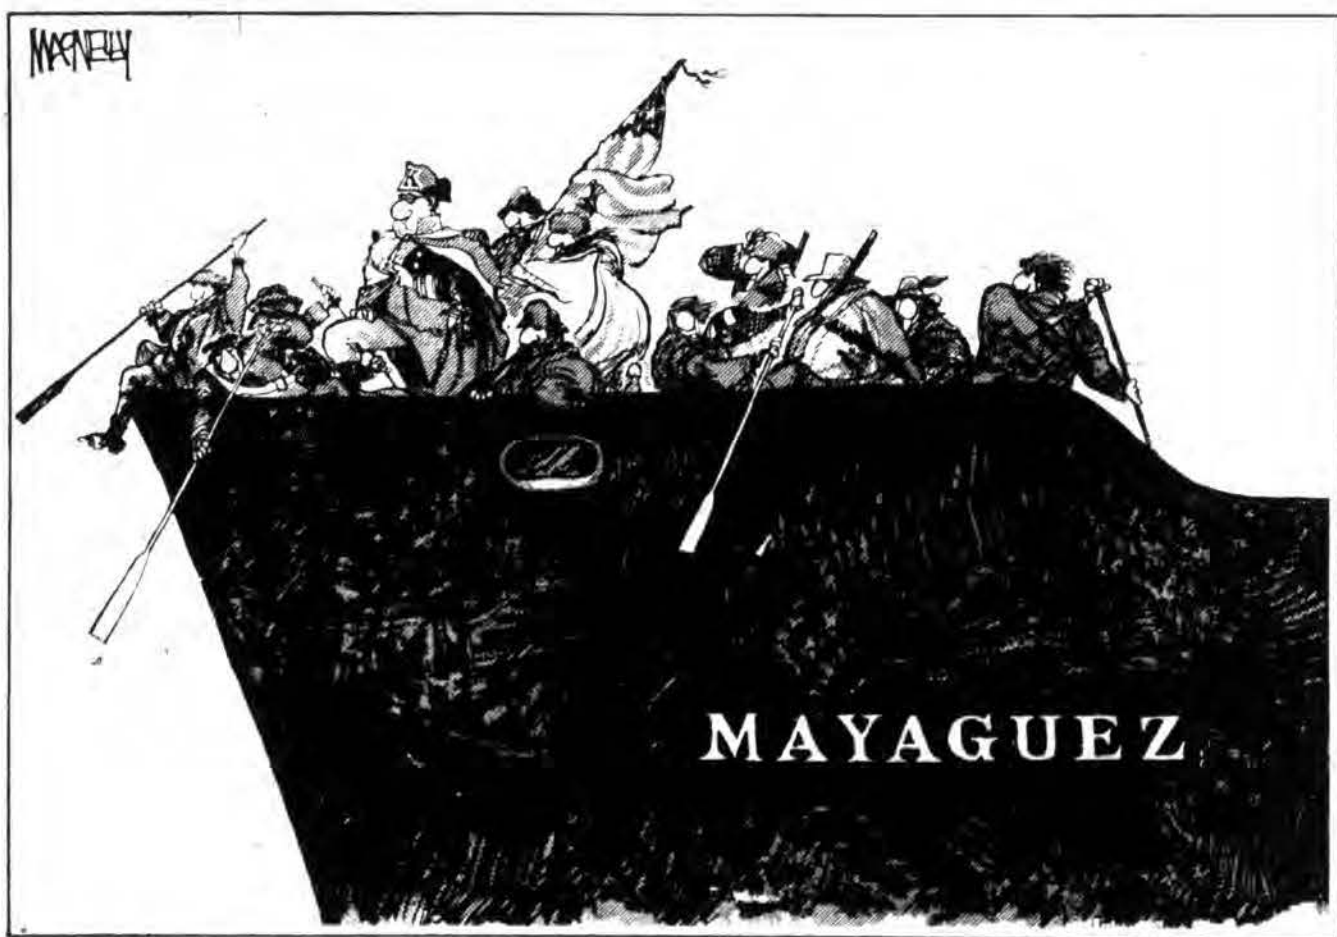

But the strength of a free society is manifested more by the right of people to ask and the obligation of government to answer than by sending Marines into action.

Are National Leaders Human?

By MELVIN MADDOCKS

President Ford gets by on five hours sleep and falls sound asleep in 10 seconds. For lunch he eats cottage cheese with A-1 sauce. About every 10 days he has his hair cut. He works out by doing 20 push-ups and pedaling a mile on his exercise cycle, at the firm setting.

These are among the facts revealed in a New York Times Magazine article by the novelist and journalist John Hersey, who logged a working week in the White House observing the President for 10 to 18 hours a day.

Meanwhile, another diarist, Benjamin C. Bradlee, then Newsweek's Washington bureau chief, now executive editor of the Washington Post, has spilled a bean or two about an earlier President in "Conversations With Kennedy" (Norton, $7.95).

THERE ARE behind-the-scenes scenes of Lee Radziwill teaching the Twist to JFK and Benji, as the President called him. The President is portrayed beefing about a $40,000 charge run up by Jackie at department stores.

"He was really upset, but he kept a faintly amused and quizzical expression on his face."

At less tense moments, we learn, Jackie took the liberty of calling him "Bunny."

Are these revelations part of the mosaic of history? Or are they gossip -- inside plays in a game of presidential trivia?

THERE ARE questions of ethics -- or at least taste -- too. For instance, has Benji served his old friend well by revealing that he and JFK once killed time by attending a blue movie?

But the most interesting question is: Why have these backstage White House stories come out at the same time, along with an onstage White House story in which the actor James Whitmore impersonates Harry Truman for Washington theater audiences? Is all this sudden craving for earthy humanity among our leaders simply a coincidence?

Or does this coincidence indicate that we have had enough of what we regard as tape-recorded presidents, presidents who depersonalize themselves as "the presidency, presidents whose arranged sobriety seems to bear the stamp of the seal -- president-in-the-abstract?"

It is as if there is a hunger for minutiae, for the intimate details that may trivialize a president or make him appear fallible but finally establish him as a fellow man.

"The real Gerald Ford, for better or worse, will always be visible," Hersey concludes. And in one sense this visibility -- indeed his tangibility -- is what his day-by-day account is all about.

Both the Hersey and the Bradlee logs are, in effect, exercises in verification. Here, Hersey says, is Gerald Ford on a real golf course, swinging a real golf club at a real ball. Here is Gerald Ford's real brown suitcase, stuffed with real work. Lift it. Touch it. These things are real. Therefore, Gerald Ford must be real, too.

THE PRESIDENT seems to guess what Hersey's (and the public's) need is, and in an extraordinary scene he invites him into his bedroom to meet Betty Ford, the verifiable wife, propped up on a "small cylindrical pillow," resting her well-publicized neck.

The Churchills, the De Gaulles -- the leaders larger-than-life are gone. We believed in them because we believed in something the 19th-century called Great. Now we have a 20th-century craving for something called Real.

Our credibility gap starts further back. We can't believe a leader is this or that or the other until we believe that, behind the television image, behind the ghost-written speeches, he actually is.

Here is a new mood, then, a new requirement. 1976 candidates take note. What the Hersey-Bradlee essays at intimacy finally suggest is that we, like the Chinese, are lining the riverbank, afflicted by doubts of our leaders' existence -- waiting for the Chairman to swim.

He may or may not be Great. But he had better splash.

World Economic Equality Can End Refugee Crises

By ROBERT JORDAN ROSS

In recent years a number of separate questions have risen in regard to moving populations around — or holding them in place — in which there have been not only heated political arguments, but also serious moral and religious questions raised.

The emigration of Russian Jews to Israel, the expulsion of nonblacks from Uganda, the barricading of Protestant and Catholic districts in Belfast, the increasing problem of dealing with illegal immigrants to the United States, the white Australia policy, the creation of Bantustans in South Africa, the reservation of 40,000,000 acres in Alaska for Eskimo corporations and the simultaneous questioning of the continuation of Indian reservations in the lower 48: All have been symptomatic of efforts, often racist, to consolidate power and to end the dynamic flow and exchange of populations that have always been a part of world history.

Now the mass exodus of over 100,000 Vietnamese to this country has generated new thinking on the subject. But whatever decisions we make are likely to be inconclusive, and we probably will not examine all the factors that tend to be part of these questions. For example, the protests of Russian and South Vietnamese governments that emigration should not be free are not simply the acts of authoritarian governments.

WE, IN THIS country, have had the luxury for centuries of being able to import people in whom some other country had made immense capital investments. We still take thousands of physicians and other professionals who have been trained elsewhere, often using the limited resources of poor nations.

What if the tables were turned?

It has been estimated that the cost of raising an American to the age of 21 is, for family, government and so forth, $250,000. Now perhaps a well-trained engineer or physician takes $400,000. If we had a net drain of just 10,000 of these people annually, this would, in effect, mean a capital loss of four billion dollars a year.

Some of these questions also raise uncomfortable problems about family planning. For years we have espoused Zero Population Growth, contraceptive use, and voluntary family limitation. How can we square these policies — especially to the families who have wanted more children but have restricted themselves — with expanded immigration policies and legal chicanery to cut the power of the Immigration and Naturalization Service so as to allow cheap labor to easily enter the country illegally for the benefit of business?

THE UNITED Nations Declaration of Human Rights calls for free movement of populations between nations. This was deemed a good thing, primarily to allow refugees in time of war to escape to more friendly territory (e.g., between Pakistan and India). But a curious result of this movement today is to reverse a trend of the past few centuries, wherein many people lived side by side in the same nation.

In Hungary for instance, there were Magyars, Gypsies, Germans, Transylvanians,

...The so-called revolutionary, or third-world, nations are often the first to be truly reactionary...to react with fear and hostility to people who seem different...

Romanians, Slovenians, often with radically different life styles and religions.

Today fear and power drives are moving many nations to be racially, religiously, culturally or politically uniform. Is this progressive or reactionary?

At first glance we may feel it to be reactionary. Yet history tends to show that expanding imperialistic nations, such as Czarist Russia, Rome, the 19th-century United States, Imperial Britain and France, are the most willing to accept alien minorities and to allow them to remain unassimilated. The so-called revolutionary, or third-world, nations are often the first to be truly reactionary; that is, to react with fear and hostility to people who seem different.

This reaction then turns to demands that these people be forcibly assimilated, by having their culture destroyed (as in the approach of the USSR towards the Crimean Tatars, Lithuanians), or that they be encapsulated and possibly exterminated (Ulster and Ireland, originally, and now the Catholic minority within Ulster).

WE HAVE some glimmers of understanding as to why people move from one land to another. And we have some beginnings of wisdom as to how we may help them meet their social, economic and other needs where they presently are.

If we can begin to achieve some sort of worldwide economic equality and freedom from fear of starvation, then perhaps we will be able to open the borders not only of nations, but also of ghettos and slums, reservations and walled quarters, allowing the relaxed social intercourse that can enrich us all.

Education Means Lifetime of Study

LELAND B. NEWCOMER

We are told that it took a period of time from the birth of Christ until the year 1750 for the combined knowledge and information of the world to double.

From 1750 to 1900, it doubled again. Once more between 1900 and 1950, and again from 1950 to 1960.

I'm not a mathematician, but if we were to extrapolate this same accelerated rate it would appear that our combined knowledge and information must now be doubling every few months.

Think of the problem this poses for education and schooling.

I was considered to be a very effective teacher when I was beginning my career in the mid-1940s. When asked the essential purpose of school, I confidently replied, "To inculcate in young minds knowledge and information of the past so they can make wise decisions in the future."

I ENJOYED the reactions to my answer. People turned to one another and said, "My, isn't he a bright young teacher?"

If I were to answer the same question in the same way today, I'd have to be nuts.

The mushrooming effects of research, the knowledge and information explosions, have created a genuine dilemma for educators — and for our institutions.

Yesterday's notion that the combined knowledge of the world could be fashioned into a curriculum from kindergarten to Ph.D. is no longer a workable one. Now the questions are: What to teach? and What should students be required to learn?

Experts predict that by 1990, some 70 percent of today's high school graduates will be working in jobs not even identified today. Who knows what skills and abilities those jobs may require?

Traditionally, colleges based their curriculum on the idea that each major discipline would arrange all its information and knowledge into courses. Courses were organized under departments and divisions with the capability to cover all these areas. Then a catalog was published, listing all the courses.

AS A MATTER of fact, your son or daughter may be attending a school where they still believe this method to be viable. If so, your kid is being cheated.

No college, even if it had 75,000 students, could find and hire professors to make the system work. No student could live long enough to take all the courses.

The old method, useful in its time can no longer work. The new method must be to teach students how to learn, so that learning becomes a lifetime endeavor.

The new method calls for a new professor, one who, while still a specialist in his field, is enough of a generalist to serve as mentor, monitor, evaluator and counselor to help students learn on their own. He must use (and teach his students to use) the vastly increased reservoir of teaching and instructional aids found in our technology, libraries and learning resource centers.

AH, YOU SAY. There is a trauma here. Right! Professors must change their roles, discard the old modus operandi, assume a new responsibility.

And students, too, must face the challenge. They must assume greater responsibility for their own learning and realize they must be continual learners throughout their lives.

No doubt this will change the look of many colleges and universities. Some — the dinosaurs — will not change. The others will have a part in the most exciting challenge ever faced by education.

'Jesus Would Be a Jock'

Winning: Opium of America

I have nothing against Norman Vincent Peale, really. He has found a need, and he has filled it. He has found a religion, or something, which appears to fit exactly the needs of millions of Americans. If for no other reason, that makes Dr. Peale an interesting figure.

Dr. Peale is the pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church in New York. He is 76 and the author of 15 books of which "The Power of Positive Thinking," published in 1952, is the best known.

He is a muscular Christian in the tradition of Theodore Roosevelt. He quite literally thinks it is a heresy to lose, at games or anything else in life.

YOU JUST think things are okay, and things are okay. Simple as that. As American as baseball. He boasts that his sermons in church are not much different from his Rotary Club talks. He is right.

The other day the good doctor

was talking to a reporter from the sports section of a California newspaper. Here we got American-style religion at its deepest or its shallowest.

If Jesus were alive today, Dr. Peale said, he would be a jock, with especial love for baseball and football. "Although he was kind, loving and gentle, Jesus was a strong person," Dr. Peale told the reporter. "He was virile, rugged and full of life... He'd be at the Super Bowl game. He wouldn't want to miss a World Series game. As young people say today, He'd be with it. He was a with-it person."

IN BRIEF, you might say, if Jesus Christ were alive today he would be very much like Dr. Norman Vincent Peale of the Marble Collegiate Church.

It is not uncommon of evangelists, from Billy Sunday to Billy Graham, to see the founder of Christianity as the precursor of themselves, and as the first to formulate, in a primitive sort of way, the message which the evangelist happens to be preaching.

As I say, I've nothing against the good doctor Peale. I met him once and he was a hale and hearty fellow, with nothing unexpected about him. He is a jock, and he is proud of it. He is the most popular preacher in America. Baseball and football are the most popular sports in America. There may be a connection there.

WHAT IRKS me mildly about Dr. Peale on sports is not his irreverence, which is considerable, but his felt need to apotheosize sports. Sports at a school level, and with no money involved, are a wonderful and improving thing, both physically and psychically. At this level, they are strengthening and life-enhancing.

But professional sports, to both player and spectator, and especially to spectator, are not what you might call an asset to a society. For the United States, they are much more a weakness than they are a strength. They are the greatest indulgence in a society that is moribund with indulgence.

Pro football is largely an excuse for gambling, and gambling on a huge scale. There is nothing wrong with gambling, but there is nothing terribly right about it either. Indulgence in gambling is not about to make a society, or an individual, hale and hearty.

THE WORST thing about baseball and football, and Dr. Peale, is the unhealthy preoccupation with winning. You might think we are a nation of losers, so strong and so obsessive is our concern with winners.

You never hear much in these parts about the man who made the shortest broad jump in history, or who ran the slowest mile. These too are achievements, but Americans will never recognize them as such.

One of the few losers who made it, historically, is Amelia Earhart, who got lost in every sense of the word. But she is a woman, and that sort of makes it okay. As St. Vince Lombardi said, winning is the only thing.

New Questions on Old Murders

Editor's Note: Orange Coast College students Wednesday sponsored Mark Lane, author, attorney and head of the Citizens Committee of Inquiry and the Electoral Process. The talk was the first in what they hope will be a series of such community forum programs.

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Old questions about the two Kennedy assassinations five years apart returned to haunt my inquisitive newsman's mind at a lecture by flamboyant lawyer, author and JFK-murder investigator Mark Lane.

He makes a strong case for the theory held by many Americans that Lee Harvey Oswald had accomplices.

Lane implies it was an elaborate plot, with its cloak-and-dagger activities originating God only knows where.

He was Oswald's defense attorney before a bar owner named Jack Ruby judged the defendant guilty, sentenced him to death and executed him before the eyes of police and millions of stunned TV viewers.

"Rush to Judgment" is the book Lane wrote based on hundreds of hours of research. It was followed by "Executive Action," a fictionalized version of home-grown American political assassination.

"THE WARREN Commission failed to question more than 90 percent of the witnesses," Lane says of the entire 1963 affair in Dallas. "So how did they publish 26 volumes?"

Evidence used, on the other hand, includes items as ludicrous as a 1938 dental chart on the teeth of Jack Ruby's mother. Lane suggests that would be questionable evidence, even if Oswald had been bitten to death instead of shot.

And almost every witness—individuals who were close to the JFK case and whose testimony perhaps could have included one more tiny piece in the jigsaw puzzle—is dead now, he noted.

Many had direct links to it or were associated with the principal characters themselves, and some supposedly had undertaken their own investigations.

Concerning the suggestion the U.S. government at some high level knows far more than it is willing to reveal, Lane's books and talks provide much more than merely sufficient evidence to support a reopening of the investigation.

HE ALLEGES the Warren Commission called witnesses and compiled evidence that would dovetail to fit a preconceived verdict suitable for history to record: in other words, a monumental coverup.

Lane talked long into the night—maybe too long—and the OCC Associated Student Body, which paid him $1,250 for the lecture, at least got its money's worth of words.

But I left with troubled thoughts on all those uncalled witnesses and the many connected to the assassination in some way who are dead now, under strange circumstances.

Computerized insurance survival studies have shown the odds against it being coincidental are astronomical.

Coincidences over the years, however, have continuously refreshed my memory of the impact of those three days in Dallas and five years later on a warm June night, the Robert F. Kennedy episode in Los Angeles.

I broke the news that JFK was dead to one of his PT-109 crew members after racing to Huntington Beach to interview him for a reaction story.

I met a girl who was only a few feet from RFK in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel the night he was killed, and she recalls the horror vividly.

I used to sit in the same spot in the police department pressroom where reporter Bill Hunter was shot to death, shortly after he returned from covering the Dallas event.

HUNTER SPENT the three days there representing the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram and had reportedly helped uncover something that probably would have drastically altered the investigative findings and the history books.

One of his former Dallas colleagues wandered into the I, P-T newsroom one night and told this story. Hunter never did tell it, at least not to any other staff members.

Hunter and a Dallas newsman who knew Jack Ruby learned via police radio that Ruby had slain Oswald and allegedly went to the suspect's home immediately, where police naturally found the newsmen waiting.

They were questioned about their presence, then ordered away.

No one knows whatever it was they assertedly discovered that purportedly would or could have altered the entire outcome and historical records of the JFK assassination.

Not long afterward, the Dallas reporter was found dead in his apartment of a viciously efficient judo chop. And Hunter was slain at his desk in the I, P-T pressroom.

THE OFFICIAL finding is that two policemen had stopped to chat with him and were horse-playing, practicing quick draw games, when one dropped his weapon and it fired when it hit the floor.

A .38-cal. police Special is not supposed to discharge if accidentally dropped.

Clyde, the third-floor janitor who was never called to testify at the coroner's inquest, tells an odd story.

He claims he was stepping from an office about 20 feet from the pressroom when he distinctly heard Hunter cry: "Oh my God—no—"

And then a gun went off.

Perhaps it was one of those eerie quirks of memory, when events in a moment of shock reverse themselves in time. But in any case, Clyde was not called to the stand.

The same questions are raised on what happened to witness statements and potential testimony in a specific incident following the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy at the Ambassador.

MY FRIEND, who is very observant and who was there, gave Sirhan a cigarette when he asked if he could bum one from her. Later, she thought the shots were celebratory firecrackers, until the screaming started.

MARK LANE

She maintains Sirhan was definitely with at least three other persons, two males and the much-discussed Girl-In-The-Polka-Dot-Dress. Investigators eventually were to tacitly imply there was no such person.

Naturally, the FBI questioned my friend about what and who she saw that night, what she heard — anything that might aid the investigation of the assassination of a second politically ambitious Kennedy brother.

They showed her a specific series of police file mug shots, in fact, she said; and she insists she definitely picked out the two men who were with Sirhan.

The FBI told her not to discuss it with anyone and that is the last she ever heard.

But Sirhan, like Oswald, was alone. Those are the official findings.

ORANGE COUNTY

Three Countians Win Citations

Three Orange Coast area residents — all involved in the legal profession in their civilian lives — have been commended by the Marine Corps judge advocate general for their legal work in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Commendations from Brig. Gen. John R. DeBarr were given to:

Col. Clayton H. Parker of 34251 Camino El Molino, Capistrano Beach; Lt. Col. William M. Monroe of 416 Acacia St., Corona del Mar; and Capt. Thomas A. Gray of 1119 Lake St., Huntington Beach.

In civilian life Parker is chief assistant county counsel for Orange County, Monroe is a partner in the Santa Ana law firm of McDermid and Monroe and Gray is a deputy district attorney for Los Angeles County.

As members of the Marine Reserve's Volunteer Training Unit (Law) 12-32, headquartered at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, the reserve officers were responsible for providing legal assistance to more than 850 Marines and dependents during the 1974, thus reducing the caseload of regularly assigned legal assistance personnel at the base.

The judge advocate general, in his commendation, described their unit as "one of the finest and most productive law units within the Marine Corps Reserve."

SANTA ANA — A five-year, $4.6 million plan to buy land and build 175 miles of arterial bicycle trails in Orange County will be considered Tuesday by the county Board of Supervisors.

A Bicentennial Book for Newport

The Newport Beach Bicentennial Committee will produce early this summer a book commemorating both the heritage and the horizons of Newport Beach, it was announced by Les Steffensen, committee chairman.

"The book will be a pictorial essay of the people, places, and events that have shaped the city," he said. "A guide to local landmarks, a calendar of events in celebration of the Bicentennial, and previously unpublished photographs will be highlighted and contribute to the lasting value of the book to our citizens."

Orange County editor-author Michael McFadden will edit the book, being produced by the committee in cooperation with Hardy House Publications, honored for its recent publication, "Tustin Tintypes."

The Bicentennial Committee is offering sponsorships of the book to local organizations, companies, or individuals. There will be no advertising, but sponsors contributing $200 or more each will be credited in the book and receive 100 copies.

The general public will be able to purchase the book for $2.95 a copy and a limited number of first-edition, hard-bound copies will be available for $10 each.

Proceeds from the sale of the book will be used for Bicentennial projects. Anyone wishing to become a sponsor or contribute information or historical photographs may do so by contacting Bicentennial Committee member Marla Morgan, 644-3213.

The Arterial Bikeway Financing and Implementation Plan drafted by the county Environmental Management Agency (EMA) has already won the endorsement of the county Harbors, Beaches and Parks Commission and the county's Recreation Advisory Team.

According to a cover memorandum from EMA Director H. G. "George" Osborne, the program is designed to complete a 304-mile "backbone" network of trails throughout the county.

He reiterated statements made last year that current county bikeway funding programs have resulted in a trail system that is "fragmented, incongruent and of limited utility" countywide.

The program Osborne is asking for would permit phased purchase of land and construction of trails linking together the roughly 125 miles of major bike trails that already exist.

DURING the next fiscal year, the EMA chief said the program calls for an outlay of at least $1.9 million to acquire rights of way and build about 56 miles of trail and a bridge bicycle path across the Santa Ana River mouth between Huntington Beach and Newport Beach.

Of the 23 projects proposed for next year, 15 would be along the Orange Coast between Seal Beach and Capistrano Beach.

A Pacific Coast Highway link between Doheny Park Road and Camino Capistrano; 2.5 miles at a cost of $68,000.

A 1.1-mile link along Trabuco Road between El Toro Road and Los Alisos Boulevard. No costs estimated because the road has not been built.

A TRAIL on Marguerite Parkway between La Paz Road and Avery Parkway; 3.9 miles at a cost of $53,000.

An Aliso Creek trail link between Moulton Parkway and Laguna Niguel Regional Park; 2.5 miles with an acquisition cost of $25,000.

A half-mile link along San Diego Creek from MacArthur Boulevard to Jamboree Road at a cost of $11,000.

A Back Bay Drive Trail link 2.3 miles from Eastbluff Drive to San Joaquin Hills Road at a cost of $37,000.

A link across Newport Dunes from Back Bay Drive to Pacific Coast Highway; .77 miles at a cost of $13,000.

$1,500 toward construction of a 6.62-mile trail along Laguna Canyon Road from Old Laguna Canyon Road to Canyon Acres Road.

A trail along Aliso Creek from El Toro Road to Paseo de Valencia; 3.69 miles at a cost of $10,000 for initial right of way acquisition.

$1,000 toward construction of a 3.5-mile bikeway along Coast Highway from Cameo Shores to Cliff Drive.

A trail along Avery

Parkway from from Anderson Street to Warner Avenue; 1.3 miles at a cost of $25,000.

A trail along Bolsa Chica State Beach from Warner Avenue to Beach Boulevard; five miles with an undetermined cost.

The Santa Ana river bridge trail at a cost of $100,000.

14 Held On Drug Charges

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fourteen persons have been indicted in connection with what investigators described as a multimillion-dollar heroin ring stretching from Mexico to Michigan.

Seven of the persons named in a federal grand jury indictment Friday were from California:

Marisa Perry and Hilario Montelongo of San Diego; Kenneth Mills, Theodore Ware and Michael Erwin of Los Angeles; Brian Winters of Sherman Oaks, and Arnulfo Esquerre-Estrella of La Puente.

THREE of those indicted were from Detroit: Lee Jones, Bob Hall and Roosevelt Edwards.

Also named in the indictments were Wardell Baggett of Las Vegas, Nev., Stephen Bradley of Salt Lake City, Lettetus Perry, hometown unknown, and Raul Leon-Aispuro of Tijuana, Mexico.

Leon-Aispuro is believed to be the ringleader and wholesaler of Mexican brown heroin for the group, authorities said. He and Baggett have been imprisoned in Mexico and most of the others are now in Southern California jails.

ANOTHER four persons have pleaded guilty to charges stemming from an investigation of the ring. They are now awaiting sentencing.

Four of the persons indicted are still at large. Federal attorney Steve Peterson said narcotics agents learned of the ring after seizing small amounts of heroin and cocaine last September.

Ed Daly of World Airways, who airlifted orphans and other refugees out of South Vietnam in the waning days of the war, was honored Friday. The National Fathers Day Committee made him Aviation Father of the Year.

Bug Bite Kills Man

HORNITOS (AP) — The bite of the "kissing bug" has killed a Mariposa County man who successfully lived through four similar attacks last year, authorities said.

L. E. "Dink" Brodrick, 43, died Friday at his home near here after suffering a severe allergic reaction to the bite of the small bloodsucking insect, an official said.

Dr. Phillip Mansur, a Merced pathologist, said Brodrick suffocated when his larynx swelled in reaction to the bite, cutting off his air supply.

Brodrick knew he was sensitive to the insect's bite and had a supply of the drug Epinephrine available, but authorities said he was overcome so quickly he had no time to use it. The drug saved his life four times in 1974, a family member said.

The insect's official name is Triatoma Protracta, although it is known more commonly by such bizarre names as "China bedbug," and "Wallop Tiger."

Rate Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The average customer's electric bill would go up 12 cents a month if Pacific Gas & Electric Co. is granted a $12 million electricity rate increase.

The utility asked the California Public Utilities Commission Friday to make the increase effective Aug. 1.

Mental Patient Sought

RIDGECREST (AP) — Inyo County sheriff's deputies said Saturday they haven't spotted any sign of a former mental patient sought in the mountains surrounding an 1870s mining town.

The man, Joel Glen Schnaidt, 27, was believed to be hiding in the steep mountain country above Panamint City, where a 30-year-old man bled to death after he was shot in the groin Thursday night.

Schnaidt, who deputies said "knows every rock of this country," is believed to be armed and have food and water. Deputies said he could hold out for some time.

He lived with about a dozen other young drifters in Panamint City, an old ghost town southwest of Death Valley surrounded by peaks of up to 11,000 feet, authorities said.

The remote settlement is four miles from the nearest road. Deputies, hindered by the rugged terrain set up a command post at the end of the road and entered the area on foot and by helicopter.

DEPUTIES said Schnaidt fled to the hills Thursday night after telling persons in the town he was "going to burn down Panamint

City. Schnaidt isolated himself in a cabin away from others in the settlement and at one time lived in a cave near Ridgecrest, authorities said.

THE OTHER Panamint City residents were described as non-violent and friendly men and women in their 20s who spent their time reading, meditating and relaxing. One area resident said they would periodically come to Trona, 30 miles south, to buy food and earn some money.

The murder victim, identified as Jacob Kennerly, had lived in Panamint City for some time.

Today, 1,721 inhabit the big facility at 2501 Harbor Blvd., Costa Mesa, counting the newest arrival.

Many others are now served through county regional centers supervised in placement programs by the state's Community Services Section, a branch of the Department of Social Services.

Pat Wallace, administrative assistant to Fairview Medical Director Dr. Anthony N. Toto, reviewed the records since 1959 Wednesday.

Since it opened, 2,203 patients — later re-titled clients — have been discharged, either into other localized programs for the retarded or transferred to other hospitals.

Some among the more than 2,000 clients housed there at one stage several years ago have taken up lives outside in the community. One even bought a laundromat.

Currently, the hospital has 120 outside, 103 on home leave which means they probably won't be back; eight awaiting family care placement through the Orange County Regional Center and nine on 60-day home visits.

Clients currently at Fairview range from two months to 63 years old and are capable of limited achievements in many cases, according to Mrs. Wallace.

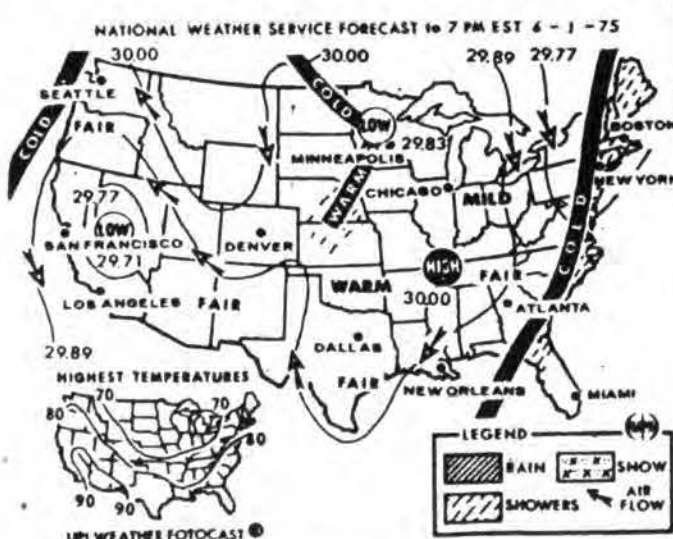

Through the years, 1,019 admittees have died, 99 percent of them due to medical problems related to their retardation, or in the case of many, simply the infirmities of old age.

An average of five patients succumb per month, with 56 over a recent one-year period. Fourteen were transferred to other state hospitals such as Camarillo, while 170 were discharged to community care programs.

Client population has hardly varied from the area of 1,720 during the past three years, Mrs. Wallace said, but there is still a waiting list when someone leaves.

She said all 10 separate treatment programs designed to handle the range of problems of the mentally retarded and physically handicapped are full to capacity.

'75 Hurricane Season Begins

Thunderstorms were scattered through the Southeast and some rain fell through the central Plains Saturday but most of the nation had relatively calm weather.

A tornado watch was posted for parts of Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana.

The thunderstorm area was bounded by Florida, the central Gulf Coast, Indiana, western Kentucky and the Carolinas.

Heavy rains caused flooding in the Detroit area Friday night and a flash flood watch was continued through Saturday for the western half of North Carolina.

Today marks the start of the 1975 hurricane season, and some forecasters say shifting weather patterns may bring a return to the hurricane occurrences of the 1950s when the storms bypassed their normal southern route and headed straight up the east coast.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 51 at Butte, Mont., to 93 at Imperial.

California

LOS ANGELES — At least a few Southern Californians determinedly are going to the beach this weekend — but their sunbath had to struggle through high marine overcast Saturday.

The overcast extended several miles off the coast but even inland temperatures eased just to the 70s or so except for the low desert where 90s and even 100 degrees heat struck.

The forecast called for continued lack of rain but with a mixture of coastal marine air, somewhat dull inland sunshine and winds in the desert and coastal canyons up to 30 miles an hour.

Learning To Build Mountain

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Nails in the wooden understructure of the footbridge over the creek that has yet to flow are set crooked and sometimes bent.

Saw cuts in the timbers are a little bit ragged and uneven.

State Hospital in Costa Mesa.

"The thing is, they are really doing the work themselves," says Recreation Therapist Jackie Shannon, a red-haired widow who originated the idea of making a mountain campground.

She figures bent nails and crooked saw cuts will just give it a more rustic frontier touch.

Mentally retarded boys and older men in Anthony Sirianni's Nature Skills class spend time each day laboring on the wilderness campground, earning its future enjoyment.

"He really knows how to work with these kids," says Mrs. Shannon, who recently took a week of her vacation to devote time solely to the project others named for her.

Sirianni takes a brief break while supervising his work crew, a handicapped group aged about 14 to 60, but still devoted to their assigned tasks at building a mountain where God didn't see fit to put one.

He shows two young boys his wrist compass and they accurately read its north-south alignment.

"We'll put the big trees from the north country at that end of the mountain and the tropical plants, things from the south, at the other end," he promises them.

A landscaping specialist, Sirianni designed a pump-fed creek system which will flow through the mountain and campground over a bed of rock, adding a natural touch.

Real wildlife—three long-eared jack rabbits bounding across a nearby field containing a colony of ground squirrels—gave the setting a genuine countrified air Thursday.

Stronger, younger men in the Nature Skills class were digging holes for yucca trees or other donated landscaping material and a waterfall pool Wednesday while older clients stripped spiky leaves from the yucca for replanting.

Class was over at 3 p.m., but as the group laid down its tools and slowly headed back to the wards, one teenaged boy straggled behind for one last look at their handiwork.

FCC Furor Fails To Still County's 'Contemporary Christian' Sound

Maranatha Village disc jockey Rex Parker spins hits from studio built right into store that sponsors him on radio

By TOM McCANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If it's a case of Christians versus the lions of commerce, there's some reason to believe the Christians are winning, at least in Orange County.

A national furor over religious radio and television broadcasts came to a boil this past week with word from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) that it had received more than 50,000 citizen protests against a petition filed by a pair of California radio promoters.

Jeremy D. Lansman and Lorenzo W. Milam, both of Los Gatos, originated the petition aimed at curbing what they called "a remarkable cancer-like growth" of fundamentalist religions broadcasting on ultra-high-frequency (UHF) television channels (14 through 85) and FM radio stations.

Officials of FCC say few issues have ever provoked a greater volume of responses, most of it unfavorable.

Most of the letters protesting the petition seem to be coming from citizens who fear that Lansman and Milam are trying to ban all religious programs on radio and television.

THEY TELL reporters that they aren't, but their petition complains about churches, denominations and nonprofit corporations or foundations that "control endless monies from 'free will' contributions, thrive on mindless, banal programming aimed at some spiritless, oleaginous God and show the same spirit as McDonald's Hamburgers in efforts to dominate American radio and television."

The thrust of their drive is that religious programming should be forced to pay its own way on commercial outlets and that churches and other nonprofit organizations should not be granted licenses from the FCC for broadcasting on denominationally controlled stations.

Two successful Orange County "religious" broadcasting operations — one commercial and one nonprofit — don't agree.

The commercial operation is KYMS, an FM station that has had more ups and downs in Orange County than, perhaps, any other company ever to erect a transmitting tower here. The other is channel 40 on TV.

DURING its most recent history KYMS has failed to find an audience or commercial success in either a "hard rock" or "soft rock" format.

But its segue from the latter into the new religious format has dramatically turned the station around.

The amount of time sold by the radio station has increased 500 percent in the 60 days that it has been putting out what is called "contemporary Christian music" by Arnie McClatchey, a staffer at KEZY who has just lately been hired as programming consultant to the FM outlet.

He is getting help on what to pump through the 106 spot on the dial from Jim Willems who, with his wife, Betty, owns Maranatha Village.

Willems has demonstrated his uncanny knack for discerning the needs of a young clientele growing daily with explosive speed.

His village, a place he describes as a "kind of Christian Knott's Berry Farm," is near the intersection of Sunflower and Greenville avenues in a South Santa Ana location that is thought by some Orange Coast clients as more North Costa Mesa.

IT'S ON LAND he bought from Calvary Chapel, the phenomenally successful one-of-a-kind church that outgrew a circus-sized tent. It is now packing in up to 10,000 churchgoers in its three services each Sunday morning, and 3,000 to 4,000 every Saturday night for concerts by groups featured on Maranatha Records and other "religious" albums.

It's that same kind of sound that Willems puts on the air from the studio he has built right into his store at Maranatha Village.

New Music Makes Its Own Market

Though purveyors of the "contemporary Christian" sound both on records and on the air, shy away from measuring the music's popularity in terms of record sales and dollar volumes, the facts prove the new music is paying its way.

Jim Willems, owner of Maranatha Village, credits record and tape sales with acting as a catalyst for other transactions in his retail operation. "If a record album goes for about $5 retail," he says, "and most books that we sell also are about $5 each, then you can figure that we sold 200,000 of those $5 units last year."

But, he adds, he likes to think of those units in another way. "Each unit represents five hours of ministry to the life involved — more than a million hours of Christian ministry we put into the community last year."

The cold statistics also make Maranatha the No. 1 distributor of "religious" tapes and records in the United States, a field that is becoming so "hot" that the giant ABC corporation has just bought Word Records in Texas, largest manufacturer of that kind of musical recordings in the world.

"And Word has just started putting out 45s — singles — for the first time," Willems says with a wide grin. "That really proves there's a market — a need — for 'contemporary Christian,' a sound that is going to reach people like no other religious music ever did before. It's a modern miracle."

Part of the "miracle" is occurring right next door to Calvary Chapel where Maranatha Records has geared up to match the commercial recording world's 32-track, sophisticatedly mixed stereophonic product.

And at least one of the new records (not from Maranatha) offers a stereo version of some popular Bill Gaither music with all the instruments on one track and the vocals on the other. You can turn down the vocals and sing along with the instruments.

'Proven Easy Money Method' Ordered to Pay

DEAR PAT: Last May, I sent $10 in response to an ad I saw in McCall's magazine for Ernie Tucker's Unique Ideas, a so-called "Proven Easy Money Method." When I received the brochure explaining a mail order plan, I realized I couldn't afford it. I requested my $10 refund as promised in the original ad. After two months, I received a letter requesting a copy of my canceled check. I sent it, but no refund has been received.

T. Z., Fountain Valley
The U.S. Postal Service found in March that Unique Ideas Inc. and its president, Ernie Tucker, had falsely represented this promotional scheme through the mails. A Supreme Court judgment requires Tucker to refund all money collected in New York. A judicial officer of the Postal Service issued an order authorizing the return of all mail to Tucker regarding his Easy Money Method. A preliminary injunction granted by the court, however, effectively limited the Postal Service to merely holding the mail orders. Thus Postal Service has no authority to request refunds from Unique Ideas on behalf of consumers, but it will forward requests to Tucker. Complaints may be directed to Thomas Ziebarth, Consumer Protection Office, U.S. Postal Service, Washington DC 20260. A recent AYS contact with Unique Ideas brought the promise of a refund. Instead, the reader received materials he had ordered months ago.

Recreation for Elderly in Costa Mesa

DEAR PAT: Is there anywhere that two elderly people can find a little recreation, such as bridge or bingo?

H. G. & J. G., Costa Mesa
There certainly is. Project TLC provides a free nutritious luncheon and afternoon recreation program weekdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Mesa Bible Chapel, 1734 Orange Ave., Costa Mesa. Site director Teri Conde invites you to join the 75 to 135 senior citizens who participate in the varied program of crafts, exercises, singalongs, games and lectures from experts in fields both entertaining and informative for persons in your age group. Another program for the elderly is conducted each weekday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. by the Costa Mesa Senior Citizens Club at the Community Recreation Center (west gate of Orange County Fair Grounds). Activities include cards and Bingo, crafts, square dancing, shuffleboard, golf and low-cost trip to popular Southern California attractions and points of interest. Through contact with either of these groups, further recreational opportunities in the South Coast area will be pointed out by other active seniors.

This Bug Repellent Is Electronic

DEAR PAT: I'm looking for a battery-powered bug repeller. It's about the size of a cigarette pack with an off-on switch. This device emits a high frequency signal or something that keeps bugs away from the person carrying it. My brother saw this item, but he can't provide any purchase source or further information about it.

N. C., Costa Mesa
At first we thought your brother was just trying to drive you buggy, but then we located such a device. It's available for $16 (down from the $20 price tag last year) at Kerr Sport Shop, Inc., in Beverly Hills, 9584 Wilshire Blvd., phone (213) 272-4304. They may be available at a store closer. If someone who knows will put a bug in our ear, we'll pass it on.

Antique Toilet Tanks Are in Demand

DEAR PAT: A friend of ours bought an old-fashioned toilet tank several years ago. It was a reproduction of the wall hung tank models that flush with a pull chain. It wholesaled them for around $200, and was available at a firm in Santa Monica. Our friend cannot remember the name of this business, only that it was located on Main St. We would like to purchase one of these old-time tanks to use in remodeling. Can you help us locate one?

S. B., Newport Beach
How about the "Real McCoy" instead? An unsuccessful search for the Santa Monica firm you mentioned led to contact with Bill Thomas, of Thomas Building Materials in Pomona. He has two authentic wood and copper tanks for sale at a very reasonable price. Thomas mentioned that all of a sudden there's been a run on these old tanks. Apparently, Palm Springs residents have taken a fancy to antique bathroom fixtures, and they are becoming quite scarce. You have been put in contact with this Pomona firm, and if any AYS readers are familiar with the Santa Monica business that neither of us could find, you'll be informed of its location.

Beware of Alleged Soil Activators

DEAR PAT: As a novice home gardener, I'd like to know if some of the soil activators or conditioners on the market are all they claim to be. These products supposedly either increase the activity and numbers of the soil micro-organisms to the soil, according to advertising I've read. Increased yields, changes in top soil and better absorption of the sun's energy are some of the claimed results.

K. V., Costa Mesa
You may be interested in reading "Soil Activators and Conditioners - An Unlikely Panacea," by E. P. Dunigan and J. F. Parr in the April-May edition of "Crops and Soils Magazine." The authors discussed a project of coordinated study by soil scientists from USDA and State Agriculture Experiment Stations in eight states that examined two soil activator-conditioner products. Following an analysis of test results, the article concluded that "Any product which promises to perform magical processes in the soil or to have mysterious beneficial effects on plants and micro-organisms at very low rates of application should always be viewed with skepticism. Such products are a poor investment and of little or no economic value to farmers. They cannot substitute for good farming methods and soil management practices."

No-refund Policy Means Just That

DEAR PAT: I purchased a ski bag March 1 from Heugahauss in Costa Mesa. At the time of the sale I asked the sales lady if it would fit all sizes of skis and she assured me it would. I paid cash for the purchase. I returned within 20 minutes to inform her that it would not fit my skis and that I would like a cash refund. All she would offer was a credit slip for the amount. After contacting the manager, he advised me that no cash refunds were made, and that there was a sign behind the sales counter that advised all customers of this fact. I did not see the sign at the time of purchase, and it was not pointed out to me. I feel that any responsibility on my part is preempted by the fact that I was told the item in question would be suitable for my use.

J. G., Corona del Mar
Charles Breakfield, general manager of Heugahauss, said that offering credit or exchange rather than a cash refund is "standard business practice." He added that the ski bag in question was custom-made and although it did fit most ski lengths, you should have requested that it be measured before purchase. Breakfield is willing to issue a $30 credit to you, or exchange the bag you purchased for another he is holding for you. Consumers should be aware that when a "no cash refund" statement is either posted on the business premises or printed on the sales slip, the merchant is well within his legal rights to refuse such a refund should the purchased item be returned.

You Can Help

Good Talkers

The Voluntary Action Center of Newport Beach needs a telephone receptionist. Hours needed are from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. or 1 to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The center also needs volunteers to man the placement desk. Anyone interested should contact the center at 675-9210. It is located at 1714 W. Balboa Blvd.

Another telephone opportunity is available at the Huntington Beach office. Several men and women are needed to help for a week of telephone soliciting early this month. This will culminate in a telethon for a national health agency on June 14 and 15, when many more volunteers will be needed to answer the telephones and tabulate pledges. For information, call Judy Lower at the Voluntary Action Center, 520 Pecan, Huntington Beach, at 960-3312.

VA Benefits

If you're a veteran, you may be interested in changes in Veterans Administration benefits. As a result of legislation passed in 1974, educational benefits have been expanded.

The VA has a booklet that explains these and other changes, including those in the area of home buying. A copy of Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents may be obtained for 75 cents by writing, Consumer Information, Dept. 23, Pueblo, CO 81009.

The booklet includes the information that: — A new program allows an eligible veteran to borrow up to $600 per academic year to take a course leading to a college degree, or to a professional or vocational objective that requires at least six months to complete. This interest-bearing loan program is based on financial need and is available only to those who cannot get a student loan to meet their full needs under Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

— The actual rates paid to veterans in school, including tuition and monthly allowance, have been increased, as have the amounts for tutoring assistance.

— The time limit for using GI educational benefits also has been increased — it used to be eight years, but now veterans released from active duty after July 31, 1955 have eligibility for 10 years after release, or until May 31, 1976, whichever is later.

— Changes have also been made in the area of home buying. Entitlement (the amount of loan the VA will guarantee) has been increased. Also, there are provisions for restoring your home loan rights — which means even though you've bought one home with a GI loan, you may be able to regain your entitlement to make a second purchase.

— For the first time you can use your GI rights to buy a lot to put a mobile home on.

— For veterans who have used their entitlement before Dec. 31, 1974, an additional entitlement is available for home loan purposes.

To Your Health

A-a-choo!

"Hay fever" is not caused by hay nor does it produce fever. But, no matter what it is called, this spring and summer approximately 10 million Americans will huff and puff, wheeze, sneeze and cough while they dab at watery and itchy eyes.

Ragweed is the big culprit in the Midwest and eastern United States, but in California other plants, especially grass pollens, are the cause of these uncomfortable symptoms.

Hay fever is one of the most common types of allergy. What causes it? A combination of exposure to the pollen and a tendency to develop allergy is required. Susceptible people manufacture antibodies to the pollen allergens. When these antibodies combine with the allergens on the surface of cells, histamine and other powerful chemicals are released. These chemicals produce the symptoms.

The best protection against hay fever is to stay away from the offending substance. Your doctor can advise you regarding hay fever substances in your area.

Why the Can Or Box Isn't Always Full Or Heavy

By LUCIA MOUTAT
Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Do you ever find the amount of food inside a package or can doesn't measure up to the promise on the label? It happens.

Sometimes it is deliberate but often it is not.

Anyone who has opened a dry pudding mix to find the box partly full of air, or a canned vegetable to find half of the net weight pledged on the label made up of liquid may think that somehow, somewhere, he has been "had."

However, government experts who watch over this area insist that actual shortweighting and deliberate fraud are much less than they used to be.

A Food and Drug Administration (FDA) study of 1973, for instance, found the average dry food package not under but 4 percent over its declared net weight — in line with the old "baker's dozen" concept of better more than less.

MORE OFTEN, federal officials insist, the consumer just does not understand that some slack fill or air space is natural after a product "settles down" or the moisture in it evaporates. Courts have been reluctant to prosecute slack-fill charges so long as the net weight itself is accurate.

Another contributor to general consumer confusion on this subject is the fact that, as yet, net weight in cans legally includes the packing liquid as well as the solid product you bought.

Also, federal regulatory experts note that some consumers may not realize that an exact weigh-in for each package at the label poundage never was promised. Government regulation aims at the average in a lot, and officials of the agencies charged with monitoring the 1966 Fair Packaging and Labeling Act are trying to pin down a definition of what constitutes a "reasonable variation" from the norm.

"We're seeking a balance that would allow some tolerance," explains Earl Johnson of the Federal Trade Commission's (FTC) special statutes division.

"With the machine age

it's difficult to make every package perfect — most companies pack to an average concept and overfill to make sure. . . . There's a real question as to whether the consumer would want to pay the expense of hand-count precision."

One marketing decision opted for by some firms confronted by rising costs is to reduce the quantity or mix the quality in the same size box rather than charge the consumer more.

THE FTC studied this problem last fall and concluded that there is enough added consumer protection, in the weight information on the label, increased unit pricing, and the like, to put down any charge of consumer deception in this practice.

However, U.S. Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal (D) of New York, who also has studied the problem, has argued the opposite and has introduced legislation that would require any reduction in content or shift in quality within a particular package to be accompanied for a certain period by a notice of that change on the label and in ads.

With meat and canned goods the consumer faces something of a special problem in that the liquid counts in the net weight.

By law a certain percentage of liquids and water may be added to meat, for instance, during the post-slaughter chilling process.

"That liquid is a source of contention with consumers," concedes John McKelvey of the Agriculture Department's systems development staff. "They want each product to weigh what it's marked, and the liquid is thrown away or evaporates. But our view is that as long as it's within the legal limits."

A CHANGE is brewing in the canned goods area, however, prodded by consumer Union (CU) in a petition two years ago and other consumer advocates since. The FDA is about to propose drained rather than net labeling standards. Consumers have argued it would give them a much stronger comparative shopping tool.

The canning industry is not pleased by the prospect of stripping the weight down to the solids.

"We think the benefits won't justify the costs," says Roger Coleman of the National Canners Association, describing the dollar figure only as "fairly substantial."

Predicting that a "horsepower race" among canners could evolve in which each was trying to outdo the other in drained weight, Mr. Coleman says the process of changeover would be complicated —

"much more than putting a declaration on a label" — and could prove unsafe. He explains that the fuller the can, often the greater the difficulty of heat penetration when cans are "cooked" together in what amounts to a giant pressure cooker.

In the meantime, if you come across problems in shortweighting of the food you buy, experts suggest you contact the manager of the store where you made the purchase or local or state weights and measures officials.

They Drill Wells To Beat Gas Bills

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dozens of rural residents in Missouri and Kansas, besieged by skyrocketing propane costs and doomsday talk of an energy crisis, are returning to the ways of the people who first settled this land.

They are becoming self-reliant.

At a cost ranging from $3,000 to $7,000, some families — if they are lucky — can drill a gas well, get it piped into their home and enjoy a clean, free, private source of energy for perhaps half a century. There is little or no maintenance expense and practically no government bureaucracy to contend with.

But gamblers have taken lesser risks.

Paint Spray Gun Warnings Issued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A type of spray paint gun on the market for only a few years is being linked to serious injuries, some of which have even resulted in amputation of fingers.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission says the problem results because the paint is ejected at high speed with such needle sharpness that it can penetrate the skin and cause tissue injury. Even something that appears as harmless as a pin prick can spread paint under the skin, causing infection.

The gun involved is referred to as an airless type. It depends on the pushing of a piston-type device to pressure the paint out of the machine, instead of on an air compressor.

The commission said it conducted six in-depth investigations of injuries associated with the devices. In four cases, three of which involved professional painters, the victims suffered finger amputation.

The commission said consumers should not rent such guns without written operating instructions.

Teaching: Noblest Job?

If I could do it all over, I'd be a school teacher. If I could suddenly get a teaching job tomorrow, I'd grab it. I'd love it.

I've always envied teachers. I think that's because I believe teaching is a noble profession, perhaps the noblest of all professions, and those who dedicate their lives to it are noble people. Corny? Maybe. But it's true.

I didn't have to spend a week as a world and American history teacher at a junior high school to realize teaching was in a special category. I've known it for years. My week in the profession only added to my belief.

I really was the teacher too. I prepared the lessons at night and I ran the four classes. The permanent teacher took the roll, then either sat in the back of the room and did paper work or left the room. I wasn't bashful either. I was so involved in my job I even gave three eighth graders 100 "I will not talk in class unless called on to speak" sentences to write because they were too gabby.

I really didn't know what punishment was proper so reached deep into the past, remembering the 100 sentences I had to write.

I STARTED OUT trying to be a "Mr. Novak" and wound up as a "Mr. Chips." I'm not inferring I was beloved but I did age. Rapidly. Yet I was the boss. I didn't want to be remembered as a "nice guy but wishy-washy." I wanted to be a substitute who earned his money that week. The whole situation was a little ridiculous because I never even went to college. I started newspapering right after I got out of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Yet if I were in the profession today, I'd probably be up before the school board charged with being a tyrant by some very angry mother of a student. Tyrant? Hardly. I'd plead innocent.

But, you know, I don't like the turn our schools have taken these past several years. It was less than a decade ago when the administration and faculty ran a school, responsible to the school board. There were dress and grooming codes, conduct codes. Boys looked like boys. Girls were feminine. Kids knew what "Thank you" and "May I?" meant without having to check dictionaries.

Today, too many schools are run by the students. Say the wrong word to a kid today and you've got the American Civil Liberties Union on your back. Parents used to support a principal.

Yet I don't blame the kids for the rotten system we have in educational circles today. I blame you. I blame me. I blame parents. I blame PTAs that do little more than read the minutes of the last meeting, then have coffee and cake.

Why do we treat teachers like second-class citizens? We expect them to have the best education possible before they enter the profession, then send them back to summer school year after year.

We force them to work as service station attendants, shoe clerks, janitors and typists to make financial ends meet.

WE PAY AN entertainer a quarter of a million dollars for a week's performance in Las Vegas but we thumb our noses at our teachers when they plead for a $10 a week raise and tell them to go out on strike.

It's not right. One morning while reading water meters I had a woman call out from a kitchen window, "Don't worry, he won't bite." She was referring to her dog racing toward me. She may have known it. I may have known it. But did the dog? (He put me over a six-foot fence.)

Parents, you may know your kids are smarter than their teachers. Your kids may know it. But I'm sure the teachers don't have this information. Support these men and women right down the line.

I loved my week as a junior high teacher. I loved my week as a Head Start teacher's aide. I loved coaching grade school basketball boys two years in a row. (We won 41 consecutive games. How about that?) I loved working with kids in traffic safety, helping juniors and seniors get a teen club started.

I wish I had gone to college and become a teacher. I sure do.

Next week: Head Start teacher's aide. # TV Set Can Hurt You — If It Falls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new government study indicates most injuries involving television sets are not caused by explosions or fires — but by various collisions between people and the sets.

While explosions and fires do occur, and while these cases result in by far more serious injuries, the most common type of problems being treated in emergency rooms around the country involves falling into or being hit by a falling television set.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission did an in-depth study of 35 emergency room cases where television sets were listed as the culprits.

Artistic Dodge

Norton Simon, former Orange County industrialist and patron of the arts, admires Raphael's "Madonna and Child," for which he paid $3 million in 1972. Simon and many world art experts believe that fine art, not gold, silver or Swiss bank accounts, make the best depository for those seeking a hedge against inflation. There's a billion-dollar annual turnover in art ownership.

Overseas for Summer Jobs Not All Glamor

By RANDY MINK
News Service

Imagine waiting on tables at a Swiss lake resort amid the grandeur of snow-covered Alps; pitching hay on an idyllic little farm in Norway; or tidying up rooms in a Welsh country inn.

Dreaming of overseas adventure, many American students every year toy with the idea of landing a summer job in Europe. They respond to ads and poster coupons, with an eye toward making a decent wage and seeing the world at the same time.

This year, especially, student job seekers are being attracted to foreign lands because of high unemployment in the United States. Job-program sponsors report mail inquiries have been pouring in steadily since January.

DESPITE the flowery images and sugar-coated prose in some job catalogs, which fuel student fantasies about living in the Old World, summer jobs abroad are rarely glamorous. In reality, the work is menial, the hours are long, and the pay is low.

Students also must consider both air fare to Europe and the fees a job-placement agency charges for finding a job and obtaining a work permit. To cover these travel and placement expenses, a student has to toil at least two months just to break even on the venture.

But the experience of working in Europe and really getting to know a particular culture is indeed educational and often more worthwhile than independent vagabonding or sweeping through 11 countries on a study tour. Students who work in Europe are forced to adapt to local ways (and possibly a strange language) without a traveling companion to lean on.

Many students who arrive in Europe with some language ability soon find their school German or French is not good enough. They have trouble understanding dialects, and the people talk "too fast." But struggling to communicate and develop fluency is what serious students expect — and want. Some colleges award academic credit for work-abroad stints.

"I was scared at first because I couldn't understand the Swiss dialect of German," she said. "Gradually, I got to know people and was sorry to leave Zurich. But the work itself I don't miss at all."

ONE OF THE most popular arrangements in a French- or German-speaking country is the family-help (or "au pair") job. Only women are eligible for these positions, which involve light housework and taking care of children in a European home. An "au pair" girl gets her own room, all meals, ample free time, and a little spending money ($50 to $100 a month).

While the "au pair" girl may be expected to give the children English lessons, a sound knowledge of French or German is not as important as in a more demanding hotel or restaurant job, which might pay $200 to $300 a month with free room and board.

Most job-program organizers recommend working in Great Britain unless the student has a special desire to tackle the language difficulties in other countries.

'Don't Drink the Water?'

Cautious American tourists have followed the "don't drink the water" practice in many lands for many years. Is the same advice beginning to hold true for communities in the United States?

Pesticides, fertilizers and industrial wastes are finding their way into the nation's drinking water, warns the June issue of Reader's Digest. Since our public water supply system in the U.S. was considered the best in the world.

"Today the taste, odor and bacteria count of what comes out of the tap may literally make you sick," writes author Roul Tunley.

During the 1960s there were 128 reported outbreaks of contaminated drinking water which resulted in 20 deaths and 46,374 cases of illness.

Now there is speculation that the rise in cancer deaths may be due in part to commercial waste products draining into our reservoirs.

Complacency and industrial growth are two reasons why our drinking water is no longer as safe.

Feeding World: Growing Possibility

By JO OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

There are a lot of problems in the world today, such as economic slumps, unemployment and high prices, but the major difficulty is over population, according to Dr. Howard Schneiderman.

The UCI dean told Town and Gown members during the Irvine group's 10th anniversary luncheon that "the one major problem is that the world is getting crowded."

The global birth rate is such, he said, that every three weeks in China, the equivalent of another Orange County is born.

Dr. Schneiderman, dean of UCI's School of Biological Sciences, director of its Center for Pathobiology, and new member of the prestigious National Academy of Science, predicted that the world population will reach 6.5 billion by the year 2000.

"But it's my belief," he added,

"that society will find a number of culturally acceptable ways to regulate humanity."

The question remains, however, of how the world will manage to raise enough food between now and the year 2000 to avoid mass starvation.

NEW METHODS

Dr. Schneiderman, whose talk was titled Frontiers in Biology, said new methods of growing food and propagating plants have been discovered which will help bridge the gap.

These include the development of plants which can fertilize themselves, the production of new plant varieties through cell culture and a process called cloning.

For the first, "some came from the fact that 'blue algae can take the nitrates from the air and convert them for their own use,'" Dr. Schneiderman said.

Nitrogen, in the form of nitrates for fertilizer, is a big expense in the production of food, so plants which can fertilize themselves through this kind of conversion could save the cost of 200 million tons of fertilizer by the year 2000, the biologist explained.

Within a decade, he predicted, the grafting of plant tissue which can make this conversion will be a reality.

The second possibility, developing new plant varieties, is ordinarily a 20-year process, but scientists have discovered how to do it 1,000 times faster.

CELLS FUSED

Plant cells are treated with hormones, Dr. Schneiderman explained, and two different kinds of cells are fused by the removal of their walls.

This process would allow the crossing of rice and corn, for example, to produce supercrops.

The scholar told a story about one experiment where cabbage and radishes were to be crossed for a new vegetable called cabbage. This was to produce a plant with the roots of the radish and the leaves of the cabbage, but it was mistaken and produced the roots of the cabbage and the leaves of the radish.

Such cell culturing also would permit the development of mutant plants which could grow in soil with a high salt content, areas with heavy smog, or would have better quality protein.

Cloning, perhaps the least practical of the three processes, makes a whole new plant out of a parent plant.

This is possible, Dr. Schneiderman said, because each cell in a living organism has a full set of genetic codes.

The parent plant can serve as a "mother environment" for a whole different kind of plant without passing on its own characteristics.

"But there is one defect here," Dr. Schneiderman cautioned. "For each person on earth there are 300 million insects. They will wish to sharecrop with us as long as we have outdoor agriculture."

Present insecticides are not totally effective because they will kill people and animals along with the insects, he explained.

But, new products are being developed which do not attack animals. These utilize insect hormones which work on specific parts of the insects.

"We survive now because of other insects," Dr. Schneiderman said.

Biologists also are working on the problem of regeneration, he added. It is his hope that biologists will have unlocked the secret by the end of the century so that man will be able to regenerate some parts of his body like the lizard can grow a new tail.

Caller's Making Costly Mistakes

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My roommate and I have received five obscene phone calls this past week. We're scared to death the person calling knows who we are and where we live.

Please tell us what to say. We've tried being nice, reading the riot act, threatening to notify the police. Nothing works. We need advice. — SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

DEAR S.N.: The person who makes obscene phone calls is a sickie who gets his jollies from evoking responses of fear, anxiety or disgust. In short, he enjoys upsetting people.

The moment you realize it's that kind of a call, hang up without saying one word. If he calls a second time, hang up again. A third and fourth — do the same.

Always answer — don't just let the phone ring. Say "Hello," and wait to make sure you know for certain it's the nut. Then hang up. Those creeps usually call from a phone booth. When you answer and hang up, they lose their dimes. Your silence, coupled with the loss of dimes, will almost always discourage the caller before long.

If any threats are made, notify the police at once. If calls persist, call the phone company. In some circumstances the calls can be traced.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the mother of a sick child who is under five years of age. The first symptom of his illness is a high fever. He has been hospitalized for convulsions three times.

The problem is the doctor. Because I am high-strung and nervous I become very unsure of myself whenever I think my son is getting sick, so I phone the doctor. He has very little patience. The last time I called he said, "I'm putting this bluntly. Please don't phone every time you think your child is getting sick."

Ann, I hate to be a pest but I get panicky. I realize most doctors are overworked, but we trust them with the lives of our children. I don't want to be afraid to phone the doctor. My child might become dangerously ill before I call him. Then it may be too late. Please tell me what to do. — FRIGHTEENED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I might be able to help if I knew how often you have called the doctor in the last month — or week. Four times? Twenty-five times? And what time do you make these calls? Noon? Three in the morning? Also, what did he suggest you do for the child?

Since fever seems to be the symptom, why don't you have an understanding that you won't call unless the child has a temperature of 101 degrees or more? This seems reasonable to me. If it doesn't seem reasonable to HIM — get another doctor.

Going to a wedding? Giving one? Or standing up in one? Even if you're already married Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will answer questions about today's weddings. For a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (10 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Lusty Europe Tours Noted

LONDON (UPI) — Not every tourist arrives in Europe wanting to visit libraries, museums and public monuments.

Some of them appreciate the several years Allan Mankoff spent traveling 100,000 miles in 17 countries and interviewing 7,500 people in order to provide an alternative.

He calls it "Mankoff's Lusty Europe," and at last report so many copies had been sold that he was asked to add London to the 30 other cities whose less-publicized attractions are detailed down to phone numbers, addresses and helpful hints.

MANKOFF paused the other day in the British capital to grab a quick breakfast. "I have," he said philosophically, "been jailed in Prague, beaten in London's Soho and thrown into a canal in Amsterdam."

None of this, however, has diminished the energy, wit and resource that have filled 580 very readable pages with a lot of the things you might have wanted to know about Paris, Amsterdam, Rome, Madrid, Hamburg and so on, but couldn't find in the usual travel guide.

Where else, for example, would you discover that there is a Parisian society called the "Absolutists," who believe you will live forever if you find the right companion?

UNDER the direction of their high priest they spend their time switching from mate to mate with but one aim — so they say — eternal salvation.

Mankoff checked out the absolutists along with visits to 3,128 other establishments, ranging from discotheques to saunas, with an astonishing diversity of somewhat more bizarre places in between.

And when he had it all done and between covers he considered he had achieved an ambition that seized him as a youth in Freehold, N. J. — to travel and write about it.

"I used to collect road maps as a child," he said. Mankoff is small, fortyish, with a smooth face and a mop of black and gray hair. For a man who has seen what his book indicates he has seen he is surprisingly shy. But then, he said, he has been everywhere as a reporter, not a participant.

"I'd be dead by now if I hadn't," he said.

POPE BLESSES CROWD OF PILGRIMS IN MODERN HALL

Holy Year Picks Up

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — On Easter Sunday, walking beneath the blossoming trees along the banks of the Tiber, a Roman Catholic priest watched tens of thousands of pilgrims trek toward Vatican hill and breathed a sigh of relief.

"Thank God, they've finally come." With the 1975 holy year proclaimed by Pope Paul VI now more than a season old, Vatican officials are breathing easier. What began last Christmas with general apathy has turned into a major tourist invasion.

THE VATICAN estimates that as many as one million pilgrims came to Rome during the first quarter of holy year and nearly half that many again arrived during April. Official figures show that 600,000 checked in with various national committees or the holy year office, more than three times the number in the 1950 holy year jubilee, and the Vatican estimates another 400,000 probably have come.

But hotels and regular tourist agencies dispute the figure and argue that the only people making money out of the holy year are the Roman Catholic church and thieves.

The Italian press has been full of debate about the success or failure of holy year, along with polemics over the treatment of pilgrims. Bishop press and expand on the Vatican view that everything was going great.

He said anyone complaining about holy year not being a success, even from the tourist trade point of view, only had himself to blame.

The Vatican said holy year visitors were not "rich tourists . . . (but) pilgrims belonging to categories more modest, including many workers and students."

Perhaps more importantly, many religious institutes try to help protect holy years visitors from their hosts, the Romans.

The "service center for English-speaking pilgrims" has fielded scores of complaints from American, British, Canadian and Australian pilgrims who have been victimized by thieves.

Antonio Mazza, secretary general of the Holy Year Central Committee, called a news conference to condemn the "gross lies" of the

Maitai Mighty But Costly

By STAN DELAPLANE

As night falls on Waikiki and luau torches lay golden pathways on the water, we give the fragrant maitai a vote of confidence.

The base of the mighty maitai is four jiggers of rum in a big old-fashioned glass. When it comes to the table, it's frosty with ice.

You take a machete and hack through a jungle of mint. A lavender vanda orchid floats on the surface. A spear of pineapple skewered to a scarlet cherry rises from the rummy depths.

The maitai—it means "good" in Tahitian—was invented by Trader Vic Bergeron. He put together a lot of other tropical drinks such as a "Missionary's Downfall."

The maitai sold better than all the rest. And any tourist, smelling the rum-and-fruity drink, can close his eyes and see again the Waikiki surf. Hear the trade winds blowing through the coco palms.

Sad to say, the maitai goes for $3 a pop at the top bracket hotels. Three puts such a dent in a $10 bill that you might as well give the last dollar to the waitress.

I was giving the maitai some action at the open bar of the Ilikai, the Aladdin's palace Chinn Ho built. The waitress said she had had two walkouts that night.

She said: "You get the feeling who's going to be a walkout. You see a bunch of kids drinking Heineken's beer at $2 instead of island Primo, you keep your eyes on them."

The first couple they caught at the door. The waitress—an island born Japanese—ran after them.

"Excuse me, sir. You forgot to pay the bill."

The second one: "He signed his name and a room number at the Ilikai. I had a hunch and called the front desk. No such person registered here."

"So the front desk started calling around. Bingo! He was registered at the Hilton Hawaiian Village."

The Ilikai sent a bellman around to collect—$14, mostly maitais.

"I keep coming back to these sunshine-and-sugar cane islands. The Hawaii Visitors' Bureau man told me: 'We get more travel writers than any other place in the world.'"

"No alien land in all the world has any deep, strong charm for me but that one: No other land could so longingly and beseechingly haunt me sleeping and waking, through half a lifetime, as that one has done. Other things leave me, but it abides; other things change, but it remains the same."

(I wish I'd said that. But Mark Twain said it first.)

"For me its balmy airs are always blowing; its surf beat is in my ear; I can see its garlanded crags, its leaping cascades; its plummy palm trees drowsing by the shore; its remote summits like islands above the cloud rack; I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitude; I can hear the splash of its brooks; in my nostrils still lives the breath of flowers that perished 20 years ago."

with Tom McCann

Look Into Future

Horse Heaven On Our Coast?

It's evening — one of those soft, cool, quiet fall evenings with the long shadows and tranquility of muffled urban sounds that come to the Orange Coast's green spots.

There is a fragrant odor of alfalfa hay on the breeze; the occasional "thwock-thwock" of a horse's hoof striking the arena tell even a casual observer that a major horse show is in town.

The acres of gleaming trailers and pickup trucks standing alongside the arena tell even a casual observer that a major horse show is in town.

And, off in the distance, silhouetted by the setting sun, a cluster of happy riders comes home in the gloaming from their late-afternoon trek along the trails that fan out from the 40-acre equestrian center at the Orange County Fairgrounds, the envy of horse people from throughout the Southwest.

THAT FANTASY could come true. And it doesn't have to take too many years arriving, either.

The dream is of horse facilities capable of staging shows of the caliber now going to Del Mar, the Los Angeles Forum, San Francisco's Cow Palace and Santa Barbara's Earl Warren Showgrounds.

Some pretty hard-headed businessmen and political types are actually getting ready to make the dream more of a possibility.

Not the least of this group will be the members of the fair board. And the move they're about to make is to go before the California Horse Racing Board on June 12 to ask for 1976 dates for thoroughbred racing in Orange County.

The plan envisions the assignment of as-yet-unallocated "fast racing" dates to the Orange County Fair.

THE RACES would be staged at the Los Alamitos Race Course and the revenue would help pay for redevelopment of the fairgrounds in Costa Mesa. One consultant told the fair board it could hope to realize $140,000 to $270,000 per year for its sponsorship of the races at the Los Alamitos plant.

Thomas E. Bair, chief of the California Department of Agriculture's Division of Fairs and Expositions, told me in a Horsin' Around interview earlier this year that he would support Orange County's pitch for the dates. He's a powerful ally to have in the crunch to come.

The state's vested horse racing interests — track owners and others already heavily involved in this multi-million-dollar business — will not, obviously, sit on their hands while Orange County makes its bid.

There are supposedly hundreds, maybe even thousands, of horse-oriented families in Orange County that would benefit from the redevelopment of the fairgrounds and the construction of the first-rate equestrian facilities that could be located there.

SO THE TIME has come for those members of the horse community to put their action where their lip service has been for years.

It's time to saddle up if you plan to do anything about:

1. Seeing thoroughbred horse racing in Orange County.

2. Showing your concern about the lack of adequate public horse training and showing facilities hereabouts.

3. Supporting efforts to retain the Orange County Fairgrounds as a priceless piece of "green" real estate for the use of the public.

The public hearings on race dates probably will come after the June 12 meeting in Inglewood.

BUT NOW IS THE time to write letters to the racing board, or to contact the Orange County Fair manager, Jim Porterfield, or the fair's board members to let them know you're in the starting gate with them.

Address correspondence to the racing board to: Mr. Charles L. Harmon, Secretary, California Horse Racing Board, 205 S. Broadway, Los Angeles CA 90012.

Plan on going to the June 12 meeting if you like, but chances are that a decision on racing dates for Orange County won't be made until later — and maybe much later. It could be an "endurance race."

Brubeck Still Jazzed

By TOM HILLSTROM

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's an unlikely group, the middle-aged man, his hair slightly graying, mingling with the five young long-haired musicians.

The music is equally unlikely, a synthesis of sounds spanning 50-plus years and touching upon rock, blues and classical, bebop and jazz.

There is a sense of history to the gathering, the thought that the happening on stage is one of those rare occurrences in which historians seek to document the transition between eras.

Jazz pianist Dave Brubeck smiles at such analysis. To him, it's a very simple thing.

THE MUSIC he and others of his age learned and nurtured into their own style, he believes, is a natural antecedent to the high-decibel sounds heard on pop radio stations today. And to categorize music by birthdates is to border on fallacy.

To prove his point, the star jazz pianist and two (sometimes three) of his sons are traveling the country presenting what they call "Two Generations of Brubeck" and have issued an album by the same name. Other outstanding young musicians join them from time to time. And to jazz buffs, the result is an extraordinary comment on the times.

Brubeck, trim and modishly dressed, arrived this week for a three-week engagement at Rockefeller Center's Rainbow Grill. The group had just completed a highly successful run in Colorado and plans as its next stop a Caribbean jazz cruise.

Brubeck, now 54, was the first jazz artist to perform at a White House state function, and the first jazz performer to sell more than a million records as a single ("Take Five").

BUT PERHAPS most important, it was probably Dave Brubeck, more than any other performer, who introduced a generation of whites to the black-music medium of jazz.

The Dave Brubeck Quartet, with Paul Desmond on sax and Joe Morello on drums, toured as many as 250 college campuses a year in the 1950s and early '60s. They played at high schools too and helped introduce to suburbia the sounds the ghetto knew well.

It was not that Brubeck, who is white, was an imitator. He had taken his own classical background and merged it with jazz. "Take Five," "Blue Rondo" and other Brubeck hits of the past are included in the group's repertoire—but a new twist has been added. With the pianist's 27-year-old son Darius on the electronic piano and 18-year-old Dan Brubeck on drums, together with the other young musicians, the music takes on the unmistakable seasoning of contemporary rock.

Mom Phoners—Beware!

By ERMA BOMBECK

To bug or not to bug Mom on her job. That is one of the burning questions that faces youngsters home for the summer with mothers who work outside the home.

Naturally, there are no blanket rules as emergencies do arise and Mom would insist on being called. But there are a few guidelines to follow. First, you must ask yourself: (1) Will Mom drop dead when she hears this? (2) Can she find a plumber after five? (3) Will she carry out her threat to move to another city and change her name?

IF YOU answered yes, no, yes, you might try putting the incident in a proper perspective.

For example, if there is blood to report consider these questions. Is it yours? Your brother's? Is there a lot? A little? On the sofa that is not Scotchguarded? From a loose baby tooth? Or the $800 one that they are still making payments on? Will the bleeding stop? Was it an accident? Can you shut up about it and pass it off as an insect bite?

ANOTHER example: When every kid in the neighborhood decides your house would be a neat place to play because there is no adult at home, ask yourself, Do I want to spend my entire puberty locked in my room with no food and no television? Do I need the friendship of a boy who throws ice cubes at the bird? Will Mom notice we made confetti in her blender?

Other situations you can be definite about: When a group of children decide to wash the cat and put him in the dryer and want to know what setting to use, CALL.

When you and your brother are hitting and slapping over the last soft drink and you want a high level decision on who gets it, DON'T CALL. When a couple of men in a pickup truck tell you your Mom is having your TV set slipcovered, your silverware stored, her jewelry cleaned and your 10-speed bicycle oiled, CALL.

WHEN YOU want to leave a note and tell Mom you'll be late for dinner because you are hitchhiking to a stone quarry to go swimming, CALL.

When you forgot to defrost the hamburger so you put it under your Mom's hair dryer and the dog is licking meat off the walls, CALL.

When your sister chases you into the house with the garden hose and the furniture is turning a funny-looking white, RUN.

When you are bored and have nothing to do and just want to "talk," CALL YOUR FATHER.

Singer Back Despite Loss

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Nancy Nevins was little more than a teen-ager but already gaining fame as lead singer of Sweetwater, a pop group with three albums to its credit, when a freeway crash cut her down.

Nancy, a personable, befreckled youngster, awoke in a hospital with no voice and a contraption in her throat. That was five years ago.

"I didn't have any major injuries," Nancy recalls today. "But I suffered a seizure in the ambulance."

"They put a special breathing apparatus in my throat for a week while I was in a coma. The machine damaged my vocal cords."

NANCY underwent seven throat operations during her three-month stay in the hospital. At the end of that time, specialists gently told her she would never sing again.

"I lost my power of speech almost completely," Nancy said. "I talked like this."

She demonstrated with harsh, barely audible whispers.

"When I finally got home the neighborhood kids laughed and tried to imitate me," Nancy recalled. "But I still had hopes of returning to singing. I knew it wouldn't be easy. There was nothing else for me to do."

"I didn't want to become a secretary or a receptionist. Music is all I knew."

"FOOD stamps, unemployment, odd jobs and welfare kept me going. I lived at home with my mother who wanted me to accept an art scholarship that I'd won before the accident."

"Mother encouraged me to think about getting married and forget about singing."

"But I was determined. It took me four years of practice, developing a new voice hour after hour using tape recorders every day."

"I underwent speech therapy four hours a day. In the beginning I could only make four-note animal sounds. It was terrible."

"In addition to working on my voice, I began writing songs for myself as a soloist. I knew I'd never be heard singing with a group."

TWO YEARS ago Nancy tried out her voice at a recording company's showcase. Response was good.

Last summer she made an appearance at the Redlands University Bowl concert. Some 4,000 persons gave her a standing ovation.

"I knew then I would be able to make it all the way back," Nancy said in a distinctive, softly husky voice. "Now I have a two-octave range."

She met Tom Catalano, who sold more than 65 million records in six years with Neil Diamond and Helen Reddy. Catalano signed her to his Tom Cat records and included nine of her compositions in an album titled "Nancy Nevins."

"IT IS off to a great start," Nancy said, smiling brightly.

"I listen to my old albums once in a while. My other voice was clear and strong and good. My new voice doesn't sound at all like the old one. But I like it better."

Nancy has more than a new voice. She has developed a new philosophy about her growing acceptance as a performer the second time around.

Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones plan a tour this year of the U.S. and Canada

Jagger '75: Is He Mellow?

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP News Features Writer

For the upcoming three-month summer tour by the Rolling Stones—42 concerts in the United States and Canada and 16 in Mexico and South America—lead singer Mick Jagger got an idea for a roof for the outdoor concerts.

"I found this beautiful book of tensile structures. So I designed one. They said it would cost $300,000."

"YOU HAVE to start compromising. You have to. There'll be a roof, but it won't be the one I imagined."

Ask Jagger whether he's interested in the money side of the music business and he explains, "I'm interested in earning money. I don't want to work for 20 years and have nothing."

"I'm interested in touring."

Apart from performing, I'm interested in the way the tour is promoted, the stage, the transportation, personnel—all those things. I like to go through these details. Money comes into that. Every time I want a stage that measures X by Y they say it'll cost $150,000 to build and $20,000 a night to move. You have to get involved in money."

An album! "Made in the Shade," on Rolling Stones Records, distributed by Atlantic, is coming out at the start of the tour. It's 10 hits by the group from L.P.s of the last four years. "Brown Sugar," an album of new music, will come out in September.

The Rolling Stones toured the United States last in 1972. In Europe the last tour was in 1973. There have been rumors that the 1975 tour will be the last but Jagger says, "The 1972 tour was supposed to be the last one; I read a lot about that. I don't plan this one to be."

WHEN HE isn't touring or recording, Jagger says, "I'm always thinking about working for a start. I don't ever really go and not think about it. I always carry a guitar and tape recorder and book. I write words down. I'm always listening to things we've done—records that are in the middle of being done."

He and his wife Bianca are sometimes photographed, beautifully dressed, at festive occasions. "Social life is not for me a full-time activity," Jagger says. "I like to see all kinds of people. When I go to the gutter, I don't get photographed."

"I don't like being called a jet setter. It's boring. Which doesn't mean I don't like to see the motor racing in Monte Carlo. I like motor racing. Then I get called a jet setter. I go to a party in Paris and that photograph goes round and round. It looks like the only place I was ever at."

Whether the Stones have mellowed over the years, since their formation in 1962, Jagger says is in the mind of the person writing a story about them on any particular day. "It's a group of five people. How can they be the same? Sometimes we feel very mellow. The sun is shining. The next day, everything goes wrong and we want to shoot holes through the hotel wall."

Simple Answers Won't Cure Pollution

By STEVEN MARCUS
For Christian Science
Monitor News Service

When pollution made its grand entry into the public consciousness a few years ago, it was generally dismissed as a superficial and easily correctable problem within an otherwise wholesome technological system.

The environment was being increasingly degraded and poisoned, but our political and industrial leaders nevertheless assured us that the technology causing the problems would also take care of them.

Suitable "fixes," tacked on after-the-fact to inherently polluting products and processes, would somehow "clean up" the pollution and make it go away.

Now it is becoming more apparent that Band-Aid cosmetic "solutions" are inadequate. The governmental/big business response, however, is not to change the approach, but to compromise the goals.

The administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recently announced that enforcement of the air pollution standards for automobiles will be further postponed. His reason was that the car's miracle cure -- the catalytic converter -- could well create more problems than it solves.

IT PARTIALLY reduces the emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons, but it simultaneously increases the emission of sulfates, posing a possible hazard to public health. So he decided that the situation would have to be studied further and that the current federal policy on auto air pollution may be revised.

Meanwhile, the public will continue to be exposed to pollutant emissions whose health hazards are already known.

The sulfate issue is merely a red herring designed to alarm the public and keep it grateful for whatever marginal improvements the automakers may provide (and charge it for). The real reason for backtracking is not that the public health is threatened, but that the limits of the tack-on device have been approached and they fall short of the standards.

The sulfate produced by the converter is derived from the sulfur in gasoline, which comprises about 1 percent of the sulfur emitted in the atmosphere.

In the absence of controls, on the other hand, auto sources contribute about 90 percent of the carbon monoxide and about 60 percent of the hydrocarbons.

Without the converter, the sulfur is emitted as sulfur dioxide (a well-known pollutant), which is generally converted to sulfate in the atmosphere anyway. In fact, the conversion of sulfur dioxide into sulfuric acid mist (hydrogen sulfate) is considered by most scientists to be the mechanism by which the sulfur dioxide is removed from the air.

Thus, whether the converter is in or whether it is out, the effects on the atmosphere and human lungs, from the sulfur compounds in question, are approximately the same.

The problem with converter-produced sulfates, as far as the auto industry and its "regulators" are concerned, is that they have adverse effects on the converter itself. Automotive emissions of lead, in addition to poisoning people, also poison the converter's catalyst and thus reduce its efficiency.

Sulfates have similar properties.

By dramatizing the alleged sulfate threat and the consequent policy review on catalytic converters, the federal government shows not so much a concern with public health, but a willingness to tailor its policies, at the expense of public health, to industry's short-term engineering convenience.

IT SEEMS that the EPA's intention is either to scrap the converter altogether, or, more likely, to limit its efficiency and therefore compromise the federal standards which are already too permissive.

A recent report from the National Academy of Sciences estimates that 4,000 deaths and 4 million man-days of lost work occur each year because of auto air pollution, and it thus recommends that federal standards not be relaxed.

A report sponsored by the National Science Foundation, on the other hand, having recognized the limitations of the catalytic converter and of the internal combustion engine it is supposed to sweeten, suggests the standards be postponed to give automakers time to develop alternative technologies.

It is certainly true that current approaches are marginal. They should not be discarded altogether, because they do reduce air pollution somewhat, and they should not be institutionalized because much better solutions are possible. The catalytic converter, and the standards it is supposed to implement, should be retained until more enlightened policies are adopted.

Enlightened policies on transportation should confront the problems at their sources.

Our current technologies are harmful and inefficient, not because science is bad, but because it has generally been applied in short-sighted ways. It is not inevitable that people must "adapt" themselves to such a system. Under enlightened political and economic policies, the same resources that have been misused in the past could be imaginatively reapplied, and a truly modern system would result.

Steven Marcus is an engineer concerned with pollution control and other environmental problems.

Tasting tuna is only part of new job for federal inspectors. At least one on each team has to have a nose for nice (smelling) fish.

'Charlie Tuna' Faces New Test

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Tuna canners are voluntarily subjecting their products to federal inspection to reassure consumers about industry quality control.

The result is the PUFFI mark, a seal on cans now reaching market shelves which reads, "Packed Under Federal Inspection."

Periodic inspections of tuna canneries were made in the past by the Food and Drug Administration, but the two-month PUFFI program involves constant monitoring.

"This is a perfect example of government and industry working together for the consumers' interests," said

Thomas J. Billy, who manages the program for the National Marine Fisheries Service.

He said high standards for quality and sanitation are required for use of the seal. Inspectors check weight, presence of toxins, composition of packing material, foreign matter and other factors — even odor.

Each fish entering a cannery is inspected, and one inspector's job, at the "organoleptic evaluation station," is to smell each fish being butchered to determine if it has an off odor.

"The PUFFI seal program is purely voluntary," Billy said. "It means that cans carrying the seal are safe and wholesome."

Cuellar's One-hitter Baffles Angels, 1-0

Mike Cuellar, backed by Brooks Robinson's leadoff home run in the eighth inning, pitched a sparkling one-hitter to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 1-0 victory over the California Angels Saturday night at Anaheim Stadium.

It was the second straight shutout for the Orioles over the Angels and extended California's scoreless string to 24 innings.

Today, the Angels' Nolan Ryan will face Baltimore's Ross Grimsley. Ryan is 8-3 and Grimsley has a 1-6 mark.

Until Robinson's dramatic hit over the left field wall, Angels right-hander Bill Singer (4-7) had limited the Orioles to only two hits. Cuellar, 3-4, pitched to only three men over the limit. He gave up a single to Bruce Bochte in the third and a walk to Winston Llenas in the eighth. Bill Sudakis reached base in the ninth on an error.

Llenas got as far as second base after a sacrifice but died there as the Baltimore leftthander got the last two outs of the inning. Sudakis, the leadoff hitter in the ninth, was sacrificed to second, but Cuellar once again pitched out of trouble.

Ken Singleton was to open the game for Baltimore and was sacrificed to second by Paul Blair but was stranded as Singer retired the next two batters.

The Orioles did not have another baserunner until Al Bumbry got their first hit with a one-out single in the fourth. After Don Baylor fled out, Bumbry was caught stealing.

Bobby Grich led off the fifth with Baltimore's second hit off Singer but advanced no further than second.

Bochte's hit was a drive through the box hat caught the spinning Cuellar on the left shoulder and rolled to shortstop Doug Decinces who threw too late to first. After a brief examination at the mound, Cuellar remained in the game.

"I thought my shoulder might have been dislocated," Cuellar said after being struck on the right shoulder blade by Bochte's drive.

It was the only time Cuellar hurt the Baltimore left-hander — literally and figuratively.

Robinson, who has hit only 24 homers in the last three seasons, has been struggling at the plate. He entered the game with a .200 average and during one dry spell went a dismal 5-for-55.

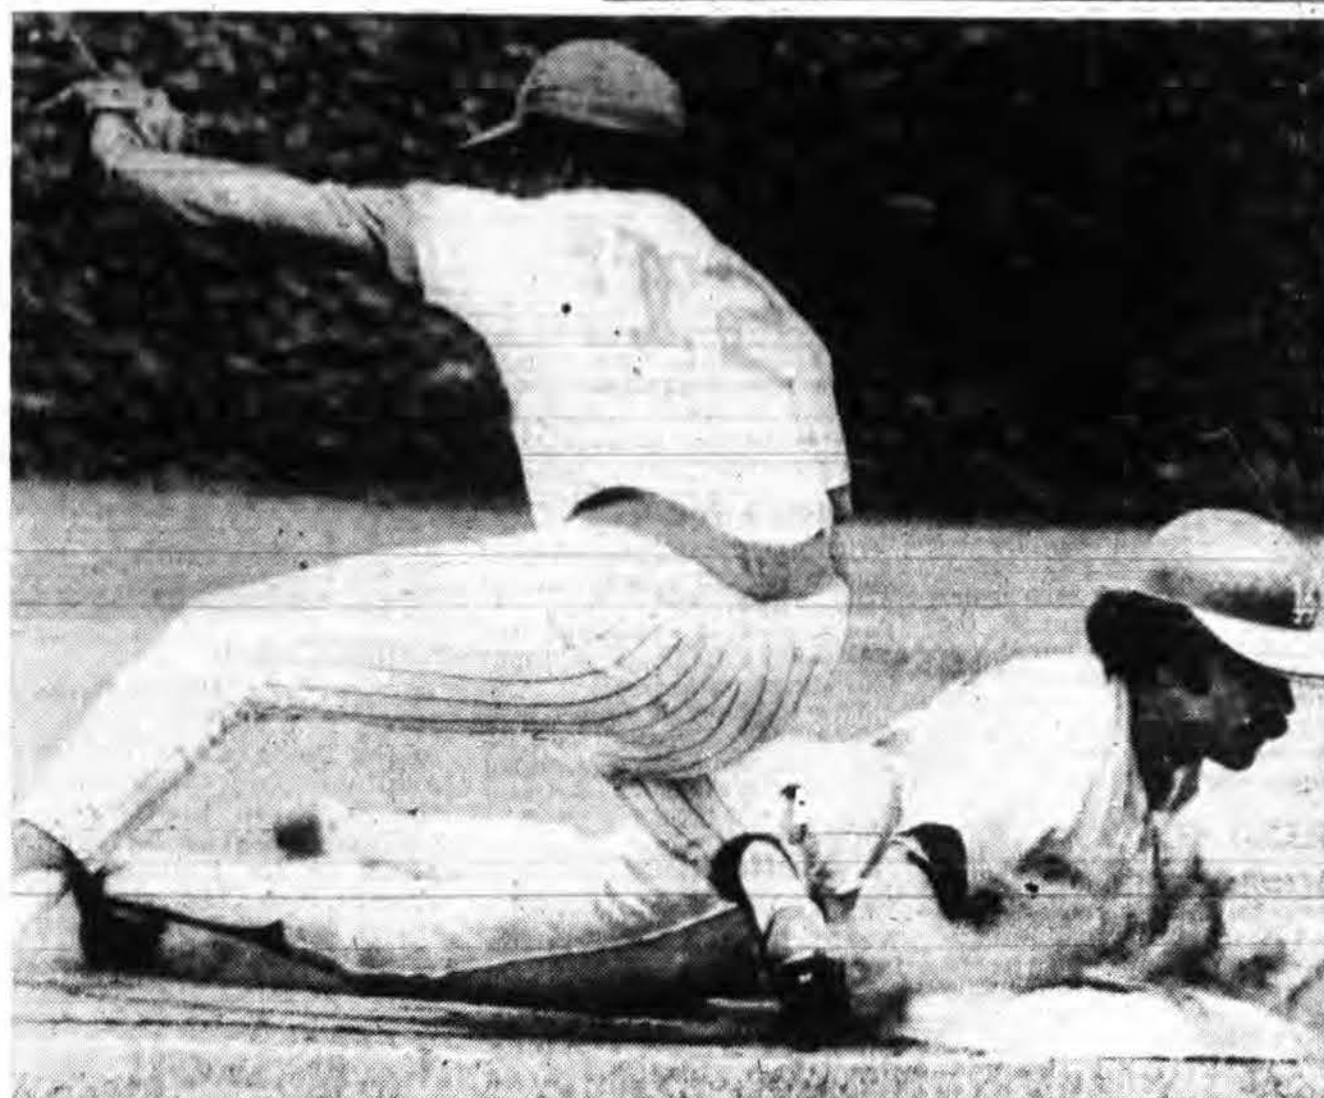

"The older you get the more often they try to sneak the fast ball by you," he said.

Robinson picked on a Singer fastball and shot it out of the park in the eighth for the game's lone run.

Mexicans Favor Another Olympics

MEXICO CITY — Tidbits from the land of Montezuma:

It seems the general public is greatly in favor of Mexico City putting on the 1976 Olympic Games, should Montreal falter and have to give them up.

However, at least one newspaper columnist has gone on record as opposing the idea, calling the Olympics a dolar de cabeza (pain in the neck) and saying Mexico did its part once by staging the 1968 Olympics and that once is indeed enough.

I have talked with a dozen or

more people and they all welcome the prospects of another Olympics here. They are also looking forward to the Pan American Games which will be held here in October.

"I should have known Sunday would be a different kind of day when I had two hamburgers for breakfast. Passed the day journeying to the Palace of Hernan Cortes in Cuernavaca and to the Guerrero mountain village of Tasco. Had an interview with 1968 Olympic swim gold medalist Felipe Munoz, which will be written up in a future column.

Along the way kids were selling live iguana lizards but after eating the hamburgers, I had no appetite for iguana. They were the family size, probably in the neighborhood of seven pounds each.

Got caught in a downpour on the way back to Mexico City and then the car I was in had a flat tire. Some fun.

Juan Pedraza, the 1968 Olympic silver medalist in the 20 kilometer walk, hasn't exactly got it made because of his sports exploits for Mexico, but he was promoted to sergeant in the Mexican army.

The show Holiday on Ice is here and Saturday afternoon's performance filled Arena Mexico, where 1968 Olympic boxing competition was held. I'd guess it drew about 11,500.

Seats to the ice extravaganza cost 8 pesos (64 cents) each for the gallery and 20 pesos ($1.60) each for balcony.

Prices here have steadily ascended but you can still find bargains. A nice hotel in downtown Mexico City can be had for $6 per day (single). Had a meal of avocado cocktail, roast chicken (I hope it wasn't iguana), vegetable soup, hot tea, hot bread and dessert for $2.80. Movie admission is as low as 4 pesos (32 cents) for adults.

It's nice to keep up with major league baseball while this far from home. The Mexican paper I read (Novedades) prints scores and standings daily.

The 1968 Olympic Village apartments are now all sold and the area is a bustling community of amazing contrast: That of the tall, modern buildings and in the same large compound the two pyramids of Teotihuacan Cuicuilco which were unearthed during Olympic Village excavation.

Irwin Bags 3-Stroke Golf Lead

ATLANTA (AP) — Hale Irwin, who had settled for a tie for the top the first two days, was singularly unimpressed with his three-stroke lead after Saturday's third round in the $225,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"It doesn't mean a thing," Irwin said after a gritty, hard-fought four-under-par 68 had given him firm control going into today's last round in the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

"Anyone can still come out of the pack and win it," said Irwin, the current U.S. Open king who has been frustrated in a half dozen title challenges this season. "No lead is safe. Look at the scores this week, some 64s, 65s, 66s. A guy can come from way back with a round like that and win it. It can happen."

"I've got to go out in the last round and play aggressive, birdie golf with that in mind."

Dodgers Get Split With Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — The records will show Andy Messersmith saved one game Saturday and lost another because he served two home run balls to Jose Cardenal. But Messersmith isn't sure of that.

"Give Cubs credit. He hit a good pitch for the first home run, but the second one wasn't a home run," Messersmith said. "A fan reached down and grabbed the ball. The umpire missed it. It should have been a ground-rule double.

"I'm not saying he wouldn't have scored anyway, but it wasn't a home run." The records will show Cardenal hit home runs in the fourth and sixth innings to give Rick Reuschel and the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over Messersmith and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

It wasn't a total loss for them, though. Messersmith worked two scoreless innings of relief prior to the regular game to preserve a 3-1 Dodgers victory, the completion of Friday's game which was suspended because of darkness.

There was a delay of nearly an hour for Messersmith between his last pitch of the suspended game and his first one in the regularly scheduled one.

"He had nothing to do with it," he said after his loss. "I pitched well. I'm happy with the way I pitched. Anytime you hold a team to two runs in this ball park, you're doing a good job. Give Reuschel credit. He pitched a heck of a game."

Cardenal, the Cubs' clubhouse comic, said he is trying "to make the cover of The Sporting News."

The Sporting News ran a cover picture and a story on Bill Madlock, Rick Monday and Jerry Morales, the Cubs' so-called M-Squad.

NCAA Track Meet

Irvine's Smith, Sabatino Win

SACRAMENTO — Steve Scott captured the mile and Mike Sabatino won the pole vault to lead some sparkling performances by UC Irvine athletes in Saturday's NCAA Division II track and field meet at Sacramento State.

Scott had a time of 4:09.7 in easily finishing ahead of second place runner Phil Jensen of Lincoln (4:11.4). Scott is a freshman from Upland.

Sabatino vaulted 16-4 while teammate Robert Goto was fifth with a best of 15-6.

Other top performances by UCI athletes came from intermediate hurdler Bill Cheadle and three-miler Bob Tillman.

Cheadle (51.3) had the same time in the 440 intermediate as the winner — Randy Williams of Kentucky State.

Tillman had a clocking of 14:27.7 in placing fourth in the three-mile run.

UCI's 440 relay team placed sixth in 41.8 and its mile relay foursome was fifth in 3:14.3.

The mile relay quartet, with their splits, included Terry Fink (49.5), James Shirley (48.5), Richard Grout (47.6) and Cheadle (48.5). Shirley, David Williams, Cheadle and Russell Royston ran on the 440 relay foursome.

Shirley did not expect to compete Saturday, since he had suffered five puncture wounds in a knee when spiked in the mile relay semifinals Friday, but he came back and helped the Anteaters to a record in the four-lap event.

UCI coach Len Miller praised his team for its efforts, then predicted the Anteaters would win next year's meet.

"We'll score 100 points next year and we'll win it. Everybody else can figure out who's coming in second," said Miller.

Nastase Walks Off; Evert Wins

ROME (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert crushed Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, 6-1, 6-0 Saturday to retain her women's singles title in the Italian Open tennis championship.

Nastase, who had just been given a gold medal by the Italian tennis federation for playing 10 consecutive editions of the Rome Open, said he was too nervous and could not breathe well. He blamed the jitters on a 40-minute wait for Ramirez, who was tied up in Rome traffic.

Valdes Retains Boxing Crown

CALI, Colombia — Rodrigo Valdes successfully defended the World Boxing Council version of the middleweight championship Saturday, as he stopped Argentinian challenger Ramon Mendez in the eighth round.

Valdes floored the game Mendez seven times — twice in the second round, once in the fifth, once in the seventh and twice in the eighth — before the one-sided bout was halted.

And the game but wobbly Mendez was still boring in for more punishment when the end came. By the second round he was reeling, being tagged repeatedly on the head. But Mendez weathered the early storm, began a counter-attack in the sixth round and, by the start of the seventh, it appeared Valdes might be in danger of punching himself out.

Sharkey Fight Recalled

Schmeling Won Title Bout on a Foul

Editor's note: The modern era sports vista is providing entertainment, quality and occasional controversy on a scale never before attained in the world of athletics. Yet sports of days gone by also had great moments and star performers. Today our look at these days focuses on ex-heavyweight boxing champion Jack Sharkey.

SPRING, N.H. (UPI) — It was a wild night at Yankee Stadium with 79,222 fight fans on their feet. And there, toe-to-toe, stood 6-foot-1, 195-pound Max Schmeling and 6-foot, 196-pound Jack Sharkey.

They were in the final elimination tournament. At stake was the world heavyweight championship. And suddenly it was over. The winner: Schmeling on a foul.

It took two years before Sharkey got a rematch. And after 15 grueling rounds in Garden Bowl, Sharkey won the decision and that world title.

He kept the title for one year, losing it when knocked out in the sixth round by Primo Carnera in 1933. Sharkey made a comeback more houses are built in southern New Hampshire. "Ordinarily I'd be out hunting today," he said. "But it's hard finding someone to go along — most people have jobs they have to go to."

He still goes on the road every winter, speaking at sports dinners or giving youngsters demonstrations "in the art of self defense."

He recently made a commercial on the generation gap and plans another commercial in Montreal.

"We're trying to keep boxing alive here in New England, but the kids today are not taking to the sport. There aren't any more hungry fighters," Sharkey said.

"I don't know, I think perhaps it's easier to get money by robbing some poor old lady of her handbag. I guess there's too much work and a lot of sacrifice involved in boxing," he says.

Sharkey turned 72 last Oct. 26, a bit lonely since his wife Dorothy died in December, 1973, but still insisting he didn't foul Schmeling. He has three children, 14 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Someone is up at Grandfather's house almost every weekend.

Sharkey's time is his own and he fills a lot of it with fishing and hunting, although he has to go farther afield as

DEAN LEWIS

TOYOTA VOLVO

Want a darkhorse candidate for victory in the Tuborg 400 at Riverside International Raceway next weekend?

If so, put the name of George Follmer down as a possible victor.

Follmer, the Huntington Harbour resident who had nothing but bad luck at Indianapolis in May, will be driving a new car in the NASCAR Grand National race at Riverside.

"I have more mileage on the Riverside course than any active or inactive driver in the world," Follmer says.

"I started running there in 1960 and have driven more miles in races and testing than any driver around."

He isn't bragging but stating fact about his familiarity with the Riverside road course.

What about his days at Indy this year?

"The first week we blew an engine when they left a plug in and melted some of the parts."

"Then when we got running again, we couldn't get it up to racing speed. The car never did go over 178 miles per hour and as you know, that wasn't near fast enough."

"I came home the second weekend of qualifying and told them to get somebody else to try it. Apparently they couldn't get it up to speed, either."

Then he turned to more pleasant things and began talking about Riverside and the NASCAR stock car circuit.

"I'm driving for Stock Car Products of Santa Fe Springs and Tom Hamilton."

"We have a new 1975 Chevelle Malibu and I feel it will be competitive with the best in the field."

"Right now we have been putting it together and I just returned from getting the paint."

"If the car runs as well as it looks, it will be pretty fast."

How about the competition in the stock car race with drivers such as Richard Petty, Bobby Allison and all the others who drive the circuit every week?

"I've run with them before and beaten them," Follmer says. "I think we can build as good a car as the can and I feel we know a little more about Riverside than a lot of them."

Daytona in Plans

What does the future hold for him?

"We plan on taking it to Daytona for the Firecracker 400 and we'll see how competitive it is at that point. If we are with the rest of them, we'll stay down there and run in the south."

Follmer and the car will skip Michigan on the NASCAR circuit.

"We haven't been able to get all the people we need yet but I think things will be sorted out by Daytona."

Follmer has run in some sportsman car events on the west coast but says he will skip the company 100-mile at Riverside.

"The car was sold and we'll concentrate our efforts on the 400-mile race," he says.

Edison, Diablos Ousted From Softball Playoffs

Mission Viejo and Edison high schools deserved better fates than they got Saturday in girls' CIF playoff softball action.

Mission Viejo's Diablos dropped a hard-fought 1-0 eight-inning 3-A game to host Valley Christian while invading Edison fell to Paramount, 6-5, in 4-A play.

Both were tough losses to take, but the Edison setback was really a heart-breaker.

The Chargers, down 4-0 after one inning of play, battled back to take a 5-4 lead in the sixth when they scored three times.

But Paramount scored twice in the final inning on three walks and a two-run double with no outs to win the game.

Kathy David and Kathy Mitchell starred for the Chargers.

David doubled for one run, had a single and scored two runs.

Mitchell had a run-scoring double.

All of Paramount's four runs in the first inning were unearned. The winners were limited to just three hits, getting two singles in the first and the game-winning double in the seventh. But 10 walks aided Paramount's cause.

In the Mission Viejo game at Valley Christian, the winners scored the only run of the game with the help of three late throws.

An error allowed the first Paramount runner to get on base and she went all the way to third on the bunt single, sliding in just ahead of the throw.

Then, when a throw was late arriving at second base to get the second runner, the Paramount player at third broke for the plate, arriving just ahead of the throw for the winning tally.

Susie Davis pitched very well for the Diablos, allowing just two hits. Sue Sprout and Terri Gilreath had Mission Viejo's only two hits.

Gerken in Finals Of CIF Tourney

By DAVE ROMANO

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dan Gerken of Corona del Mar High came from behind to post a 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 win over University's Brad Faltermeier Saturday afternoon in the feature match at the CIF sectional individual tennis prelims at UC Irvine.

In doubles action, the team of Jim Curley and Jordan Otterbein of Corona del Mar and the duo of Marc Roy and Scott Thomas of Newport Harbor advanced to the finals with victories.

Gerken along with the two doubles teams will represent the Orange Coast area next Saturday in the finals at the Balboa Bay Racquet Club.

Gerken got to his semifinals match with Faltermeier with easy wins over Jim Ponce of Gladstone and Steve Jones of Huntington Beach. The CDM ace, however, wasn't on his game against Faltermeier and lost the first contest to University's top player.

Faltermeier, however, failed to take advantage of Gerken's loose play, losing the second game of the set, 6-3. The final game was tied 6-6 and Gerken won on the tie-breaker.

Otterbein and Curley had to battle to gain a berth in the finals with a 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 win over Edison's team of Glenn Ruud and Kurt Lynott.

Interest Rate Dip Seen at Seminar

Conventional interest rates will drop to eight or 8 1/4 percent by the third quarter, according to a forecast by Jon Slaughter, president of Walker & Lee Mortgage Company, at the "Insight '75" seminar, May 20, at the Airport Hotel in Irvine.

Slaughter drew dissenting votes from three other financial experts who all declared that "current interest rates are unreasonably low" at the one-day conference staged for 250 members of the building industry by the Anaheim-based diversified real estate services firm.

Well known for his on-target financial forecasts, Slaughter moderated the panel on financing composed of Robert Ostengard, Western region manager for Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., speaking on Freddie Mac financing; James L. McKnight, senior loan representative for Federal National Mortgage Association, talking about Fannie Mae; and Arthur J. Contreras, vice president of Great Western Savings & Loan Assn., presenting the case for variable interest rates.

"INFLATION WILL slow to the 4 to 6 percent range by year-end," Slaughter said. "Interest rates will reach the down-side of about 8 to 8 1/4 percent for conventional home loans by mid-third quarter. The prime rate should reach 7 percent shortly, and may even go lower. The stock market should top 1000 by year-end with the economy turning up by the fourth quarter.

"Building starts will near two million on a yearly basis by 1975 year-end. If the industry were capable of producing the volume, it's not inconceivable for us to reach three million in 1976, after all that will be the bicentennial year," he queried.

Looking at an average need of 2.3 million housing starts per year for the next ten years, Slaughter made a long-range prediction based on the four-year cyclic trends that have been a part of our economic outlook since World War II.

"WITH THE HEAVY federal deficits of 1975 and 1976, inflation in 1977 and 1978 is not going to stop at 12 percent — it will go higher," he said. "To curb inflation, the Federal Reserve will clamp the lid on credit, and with business in a capital-short position anyway, interest rates are not going to stop at 12 percent by 1978 — they are going to go out of sight.

"Maybe the cyclic trend will not repeat itself for the seventh time, since World War II. Perhaps Washington politicking will change and a means to short circuiting the next cycle will be found. But don't count on it," warned Slaughter.

Disagreeing with Slaughter's forecast on interest rates, Ostengard stated: "Unprecedented commitments of over $180 million were made in the month of April alone. The cost of financing these money commitments is reflected by the 9 1/2 percent national FIDA rate. With these money costs, it will be impossible for interest rates to drop any lower. Even mortgage-back security rates at 8 1/4 percent are being taken up sluggishly."

AGREEING WITH Ostengard, McKnight added, "Right now interest rates are unreasonably low — they will have to reach a more realistic level in the not too distant future in the light of current demands."

Home Seekers Compromise

Impossible Dream Eyed

Today's homeshoppers are searching for the impossible dream, still wanting what they can no longer afford, declared Steve Auld, Walker & Lee, Inc.'s director of Marketing Services, at the Insight '75 seminar, May 20, at the Airport Hotel in Irvine.

Auld shared a "Design for Sales" session with Leanne Brown, Walker & Lee research associate, at the one-day conference staged for 250 members of the building industry by the Anaheim-based diversified real estate services firm.

"People say they want half-acre lots, and have to settle for 6,000 square feet," Auld continued. "They say they want luxury, but often they must settle for utility. Compromise is a way of life, but the kind of compromise we build into our product can make a vast difference in how close we come to satisfying our buyers' impossible dream.

"THE CHALLENGE to our designers is a house that feels more luxurious than it costs — that lives more comfortably than the same space used too. We're looking for flexibility, usability, and practicality — and still trying to give the buyer something he cannot get anywhere else, something that turns him on."

Auld presented vignettes of nearly three dozen original floor plan ideas, designed to make maximum use of minimum space.

The most radical design idea was a home with a large "family living" room, a formal dining room, and a cozy fireplace "adult conversation" — but without the traditional living room. ("Who needs it?" Auld said.)

Bedroom design ideas included: a master suite "morning kitchen" that becomes a wet bar at night; a flexible alcove off the master bedroom that can change progressively from a den, to a retreat, to a nursery; "dormitory" bedrooms with a central children's play-study room.

AMONG THE kitchen ideas were walk-in wet bars planned to serve also as informal eating counters; an indoor-outdoor "party table"; a buffet-bar-table that seats eight while doubling as a planning desk as well as a serving counter for patio, family room, and dining room.

Century In Irvine

Century 21 Real Estate has moved into a new 10,000 square foot international headquarters.

The new corporate facilities, which command the ground floor of the four story 40,000 square foot Douglas Crow building, are located at 18872 MacArthur Boulevard in Irvine.

The corporate headquarters move was generated by the rapid growth of the real estate franchise which rocketed from 17 offices in February 1972 to a massive network today of more than 1200 offices from coast to coast and Canada.

Architect for the building is Douglas Crow. The builder was Moreley Construction.

Mission Condos Selling

Steady sales have been reported for the new Mission Village condominium homes in San Juan Capistrano. The villas have been selling at the rate of one per week throughout the past three months, traditionally a slow time for real estate transactions, according to Merrill Pugmire, marketing director for Westport Home Builders, Inc., the developer.

Priced from $29,500 with VA and FHA financing available at 8 1/4 percent interest, the villas of Mission Village are ready for immediate occupancy.

Four different floor plans have two and three bedrooms in one and two story designs. Each has a private patio and enclosed garage. Interiors are complete with wall-to-wall carpeting in all major areas balanced by vinyl asbestos in the secondary area. Windows and sliding glass doors are fully.

A FIREPLACE with a gas log lighter is located in the spacious living room. Well-planned kitchens have Rumica ceramic tile countertops, luminous ceilings and ash cabinets surrounding the built-in appliances which include a range with hood, self-cleaning oven, dishwasher and disposer in the double compartment sink.

Deluxe baths have cultured marble pullman tops, plate glass mirrors, a fiberglass tub and shower with decorator-selected lighting fixtures and top-of-the-line hardware accessories. Each villa has 1 1/2 or two baths.

CONTEMPORARY Spanish styling with Mission tile roofs and textured stucco exterior blend with the landscaping surrounding each home. The maintenance-free community has complete recreation facilities for the residents. Three heated swimming pools, cabanas and poolside seating are conveniently located for relaxing leisure.

To see the popular villas of Mission Village, exit the San Diego Freeway at Junipero Serra off-ramp and travel one block right to Camino Capistrano. Follow Camino Capistrano south eight-tenths of a mile to La Zanja and turn right.

Real Estate Questions/Comment

By Realtor Randall McCordle, Ph.D.

What is a good real estate investment at this time? How do I analyze a property? Is there a formula to follow? Where do I begin? I will not have a lot of money, but want to get started. I have a duplex I could sell if I need more money to get a good deal or would that be wise?

C.R., Newport Beach
Many would-be investors look around until they find something that "looks good" to them, then start making offers, believing that if they can get the property for less than the price quoted they have made a good deal. This, of course, is not the approach to use in selecting an investment; that is, an investment that is personalized to do the best job for you.

First, you must determine what your goals and objectives are. Second, check all your assets; determine the total amount of cash, trust deeds, other real or personal property that you can use to acquire an investment.

A word of caution here, too many are using most of their cash resources to acquire the property, and because of this are losing their staying power. When used properly, leverage is great. Too much leverage, however, can turn your investment into a tiger that will eat you alive.

Real estate investing demands that you have adequate amounts of cash or sufficient resources to meet unexpected cash requirements. I have seen too many investors sell because they did not have the staying power. If they could have remained in title for a slightly longer period, their yield could have been much greater. . . and I must admit that I have been in that position myself and it hurts.

There are ways of avoiding this; one of which is to hang on to your cash by using trust deeds or other property you own as the down payment. A recent example is of an investor who came to us with $20,000 and was concerned that with this amount of money he would not be able to buy the type of property he desired and needed for a tax shelter.

After a counseling session, we decided to create a $22,000 second trust deed against his home and a $13,500 first trust deed on some property he owned in Arizona. We then exchanged this $35,500 in trust deeds plus a free and clear lot he owned in Big Bear for the equity in a 22-unit apartment building.

Those units are now saving income tax dollars (as well as building as estate for out investor. He's happy because he has cash for some improvements he feels are necessary plus a healthy reserve for contingencies. Being able to make an investment gave him that all important feeling of accomplishment and having the cash on hand gave him and his wife peace of mind.

Before you begin to analyze any property, discover your own personal motivations, capabilities, and limitations. A rule that we follow is the property and the purchaser must relate well to one another on all important factors — or we back off; don't force a transaction.

A real estate investment can do several things. It can provide a shelter against income taxes, create an estate by building an annuity income, be a hedge against our inflationary economy, or be a development opportunity. You must decide what is most important to you as no one property covers all the bases.

Analyzing the property can be tricky, but is not difficult. The important factors you will want to concern yourself with are:

Income, actual and scheduled.
Expense, forget formulas and rules of thumb; they're just not reliable.

Net Income, one of the best yard sticks is what is left over after all the bills are paid.

Improvements, age, size, design, quality, and romance.

Location, location — location — location.

Financing, what it is today and what it may be when you consider selling.

Leverage, a healthy ratio that wears well on you.

About the Tax Credit...

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home buyers, particularly those who buy after selling their old residence, might find their tax credit for buying a new home less than expected if they aren't wary of the fine print in the tax laws.

The tax cut law signed by President Ford in March provided for a tax credit of five percent of the value of the new house up to a maximum of $2,000. More than 400,000 families are expected to take advantage of the opportunity.

The credit applies to houses started before March 26 and acquired and occupied as a buyer's principal residence between March 12 and Dec. 31, 1976. A binding contract to buy must have been signed by Jan. 1.

BUT THERE were other, more complicated wrinkles in the law, prompting the Internal Revenue Service to publish Thursday a series of questions and answers designed to clear up any confusion.

Take the 55 percent of new-home buyers who have sold their old home at the same time they buy a new one. Buyers whose old home has increased in value — as most have — must reduce by the appreciation value the purchase price of the new house.

To use the IRS examples, suppose you are an apartment dweller who buys a $50,000 house. Five percent of that is $2,500. So when you fill out your taxes next year, you're entitled to subtract $2,000 from your normal tax bill.

BUT NOW suppose you were living in a house which had cost $25,000. You sold it for $40,000 before buying a new $50,000 house. Your tax credit is only five percent of $35,000, or $1,750.

That $35,000 is the cost of the new house minus the $15,000 gain on your old house. The reduction reflects the fact that the government can tax capital gain, but in most cases the tax is deferred.

It can be deferred if you buy a new, more expensive house 18 months before or after the sale.

Trade Offered At 'Shores'

Sullivan Speaks To Bankers

Members of the Orange County Mortgage Bankers Association will hear a talk on "The Changing Role of the Commercial and Industrial Banker" at a dinner meeting Thursday, June 3, in the Revere House, Tustin. A social hour at 5:30 p.m. will precede the 6:30 p.m. dinner.

Addressing the group will be John P. Sullivan, founder and president since 1959 of Keystone Mortgage Company, Los Angeles. Sullivan has been engaged in organizational and administrative work in industrial mortgage loans on a regional and national basis. He also is active in real estate development, both in the shopping center field as well as industrial parks, and has served as advisor to several large investment groups.

New Opening Slated For Castille Homes

Unit 11 of Castille Homes will open this weekend with 53 homes going on sale in Mission Viejo, the 11,000-acre planned community in southeastern Orange County.

"For the first time in four weeks, these popular single-family homes will once again be available to homeshoppers," said Al Odenath, project sales manager. "Since the last week in April, these homes have been sold out."

"This also will be the last unit of Castille Homes which will be near the future planned Lake Mission Viejo," Odenath added.

EXPECTED TO be priced from approximately $42,500, Castille Homes feature five floor plans. The four one-story and one two-story models offer three and four bedrooms and two or three baths.

rooms with dramatic sloped ceilings, formal dining rooms, bedrooms which easily convert to a den or library, and an optional unfinished bonus area in the two-story home that can be completed to complement the homebuyer's lifestyle.

AS PART OF the basic purchase price are wood shingle roofs, wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighters, exterior patio serving bars, continuous self-cleaning oven, range, and carpeting in the living room, dining room, family room, hall, stairs, and master bedroom area.

Moving Up In Real Estate

ROBERT C. WARREN, 46, has been appointed director of commercial property management for the Irvine Company, it was announced by Albert J. Auer, vice president of the firm's commercial division.

WARREN

A career executive in the field of commercial and shopping center management, Warren will be responsible for all activities involving the administration and maintenance of the Irvine Company's commercial properties, including the firm's Newport Center and Fashion Island in Newport Beach, the future Irvine Center in Irvine, 10 neighborhood shopping centers in the cities of Newport Beach and Irvine, high and low-rise office buildings and recreational properties.

"For the past five years," Auer noted, "Warren has been general manager of the Galleria in Houston, Texas. The Galleria is similar to Newport Center in concept — a multi-use regional complex with major shopping facilities, high-rise office buildings, restaurants and a major hotel. It is that kind of successful management experience that highly qualified Warren for this position."

RICHARD D. HANSEN, Realtor of Key Realtors in Costa Mesa, has been awarded a Graduate, Realtors Institute educational certificate, it was announced by Harold R. Pinchin, president of the Newport Harbor-Costa Mesa Board of Realtors.

The nationally recognized designation (GRI) was awarded by the Realtors Institute Division of the California Association of Realtors. Pinchin stated, and earning it requires completion of 18 units of specialized real estate educational courses offered by the state association on such subjects as real estate sales, investment, administration, appraisal, law and management.

Candidates also must have completed at least three years as a member of the local board of Realtors before being eligible for the certificate. Hansen holds life membership in the local group's Million $ Club.

GLENN L. CARPENTER has been promoted to senior vice president-chief financial officer of Newport Beach-based Grant Corporation, it was announced by Richard L. Owen, president of the homebuilding firm.

Formerly treasurer of the firm, Carpenter will be responsible for all the financing and accounting of the corporation in his new position.

Before joining Grant, Carpenter was controller and assistant secretary-treasurer of Republic Homes Corporation and manager of corporate accounting for Computer Sciences Corporation.

A graduate of California State University at Long Beach with a degree in accounting, Carpenter is a member of the National Association of Accountants, Business Education Association and the Homebuilders Council.

FRANK W. CARR of Irvine has been named executive vice president and chief operating officer of Kendall Development Company, Inc. of Newport Beach, according to an announcement by Edward J. Zoller Jr., president of W.R. Grace Properties, Inc., headquartered in Philadelphia.

Carr also was appointed vice president of Graco Properties, Kendall's parent company. He assumes overall responsibility for Kendall residential developments in San Francisco, San Diego, Orange County and Phoenix. Ongoing projects by Kendall Development include the construction of more than 500 homes this year.

Before joining Kendall in 1973, Carr was Southern California manager of operations for S.D.C., a subsidiary of Santa Anita Consolidated. Previously, he had been general manager of the W.J. Burke Construction Co. of Anaheim and vice president of Fellows & Associates of Los Angeles, an institutional developer.

The appointment of STEPHEN J. SCARBOROUGH of Mission Viejo as senior associate of Market Profiles, a Santa Ana-based national market research firm, has been announced by President W.E. Mitchell.

Scarborough has been active in the real estate industry, conducting feasibility studies, market research, project planning and evaluation, inventory monitoring and other phases of marketing strategy, since 1971.

His most recent position was director of project planning for the Grant Corporation, a major land developer with offices in Newport Beach. Previously he was an associate of Market Profiles and vice president in charge of market research for Tanco Development Corporation, Santa Ana.

MARK HASKER BYER, an independent real estate appraiser based in Irvine, has been awarded the highest professional designation of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

Byer received the MAI (Member, Appraisal Institute) following the completion of an extensive course of study.

Prior to opening his own office, Byer served as Appraisal Manager for Southern California First National Bank. In addition, he was an appraiser for the Southern California Edison Company and the American Savings and Loan.

Byer, a resident of Newport Beach, is a graduate of California Polytechnic University, Kellogg Campus, with a BS degree in real estate.

Mission Viejo Tract

Buyers Get in Line For Espana Homes

Thirty minutes after Unit 28 of Madrid de Espana Homes opened in Mission Viejo, 43 of the 59 homes had been sold for a total of approximately $2,730,000, reports Grant Sullivan, general sales manager for Mission Viejo Co., developer of the 11,000-acre planned community in southeastern Orange County.

"And that adds up to a fantastic public acceptance of our new Madrid de Espana series, which made its debut last month," Sullivan said.

The new series features "enlarged and glamorized" versions of the popular Madrid Homes, which have registered over 1,300 sales since they opened in 1971.

AS HAPPENS whenever many buyers show up for a unit opening, the company held a drawing with the people being able to make their lot selections in the order in which their names are called.

First names drawn were Alfred and Kathy Clayes, who owned a large home in the Big Canyon section of Newport Beach. They decided they wanted to get away from the cool coast to some place a little warmer. They also wanted a smaller home, but one which would still be big enough for their growing family and would "have everything."

Open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., the model complex may be reached by taking the La Paz Road off ramp from the Santa Ana-San Diego Freeway, turning left on La Paz to Marguerite Parkway, left again on Marguerite, and following the signs to the homes.

Rec Room Open

The main recreation facilities complex is now complete at Jasmine Creek, the M.J. Brock and Sons, Inc. private luxury home development in Corona del Mar.

Jasmine Creek offers a diverse range of recreation accommodations, including a large swimming pool, jacuzzi and four carefully maintained tennis courts.

Two of the four courts are lit for night play, and a pro is available to homeowners for private lessons.

Seminars Set Over New Law

The real estate industry is due for a rude awakening, according to some experts, when the new federal law entitled "Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974" goes into effect June 20.

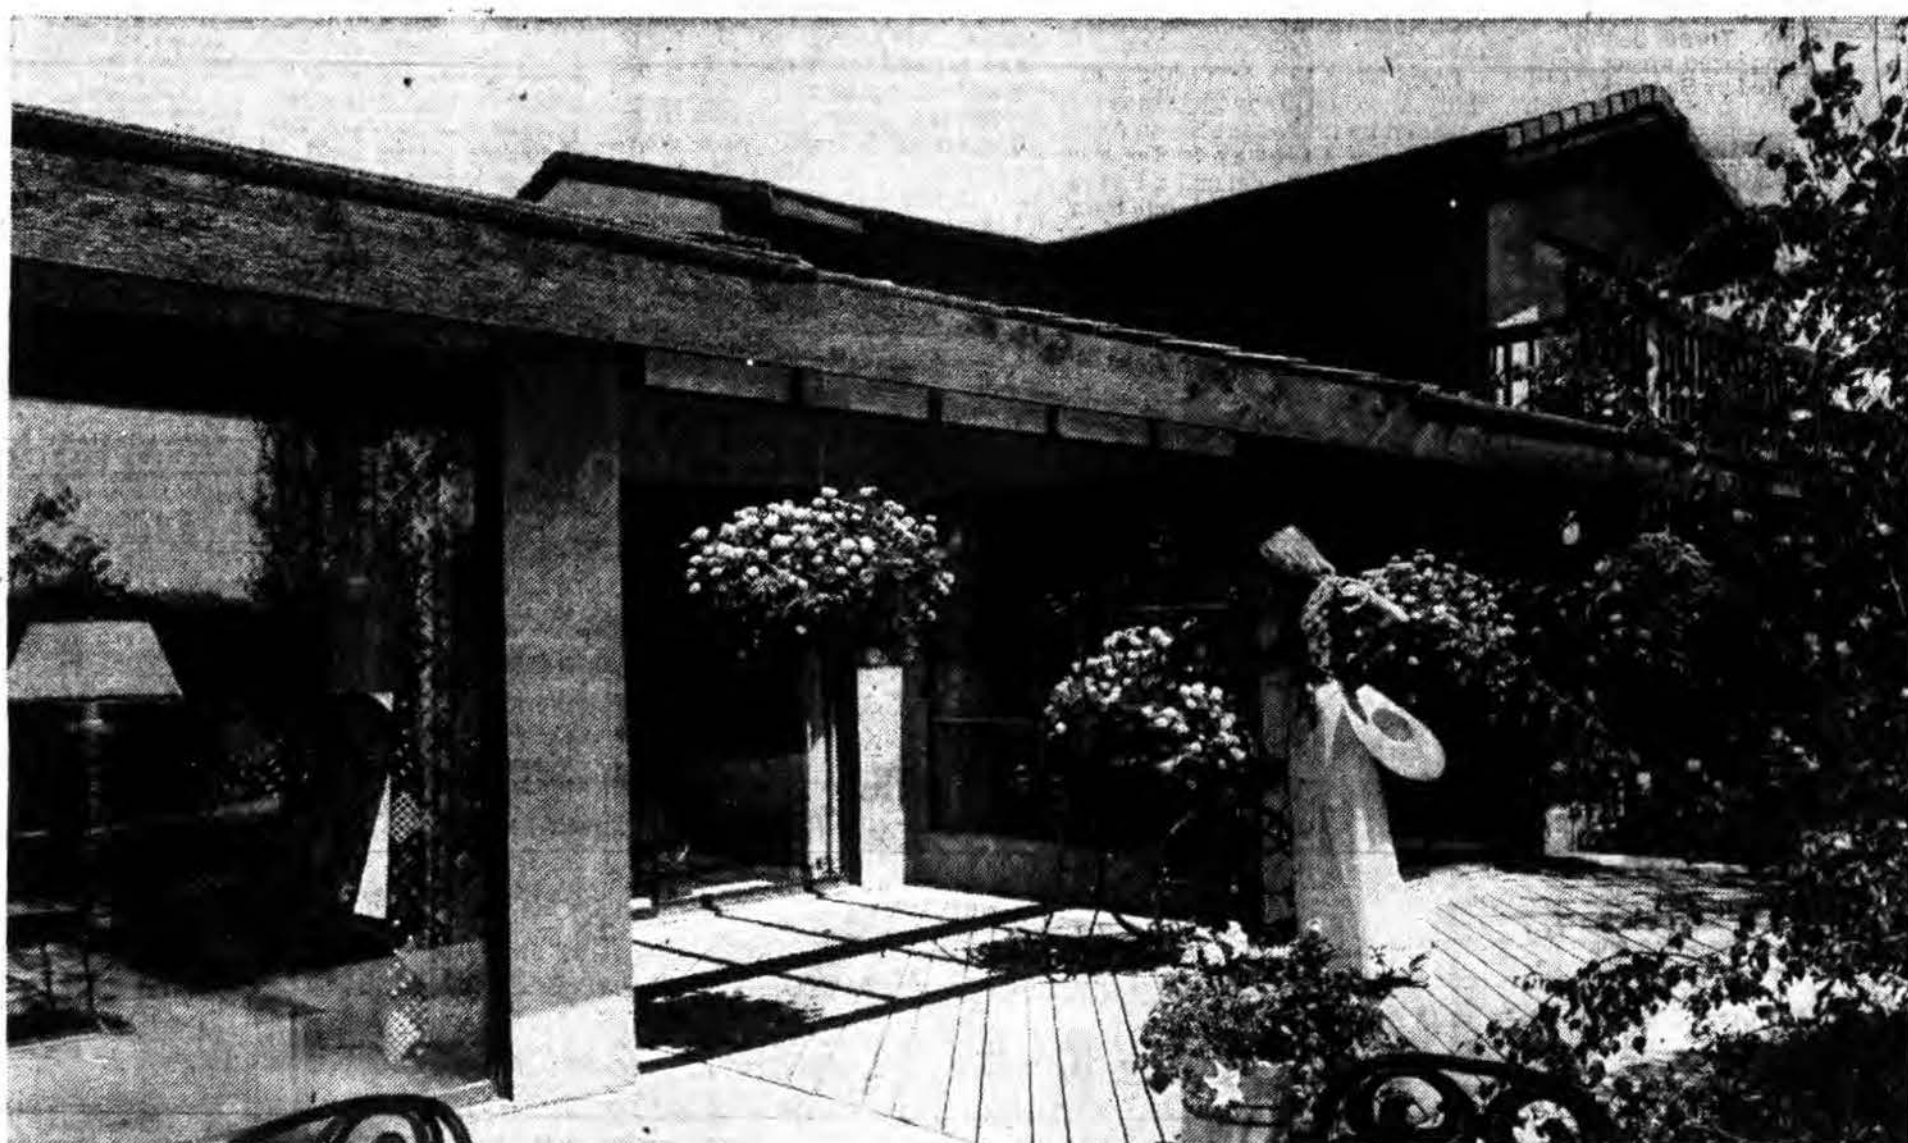

Congress passed the law last year, according to the legislation's proponents, to provide for full disclosure in real estate transactions. The basic intention includes that all aspects of the sale must be made available to both parties in advance of the sale's consummation.

This includes such factors as disclosure, in advance, of what all closing costs will be; a "right of rescission" by which the buyer can cancel the purchase of the property under certain conditions; and, according to some escrow officers, the law demands disclosure to the buyer of the price the seller paid for the property if bought within two years.

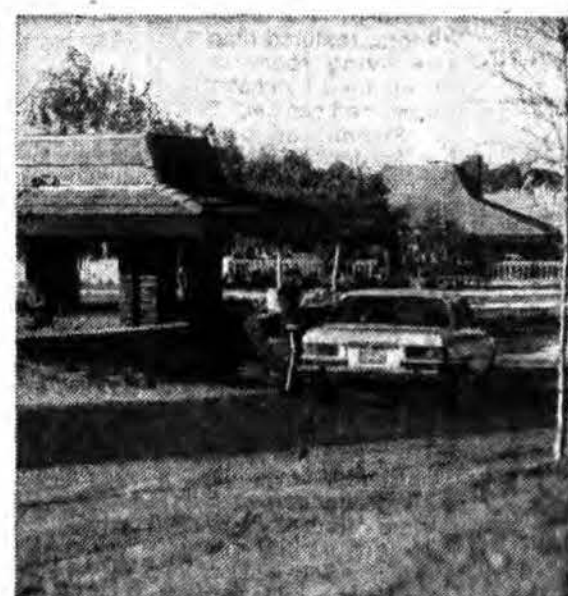

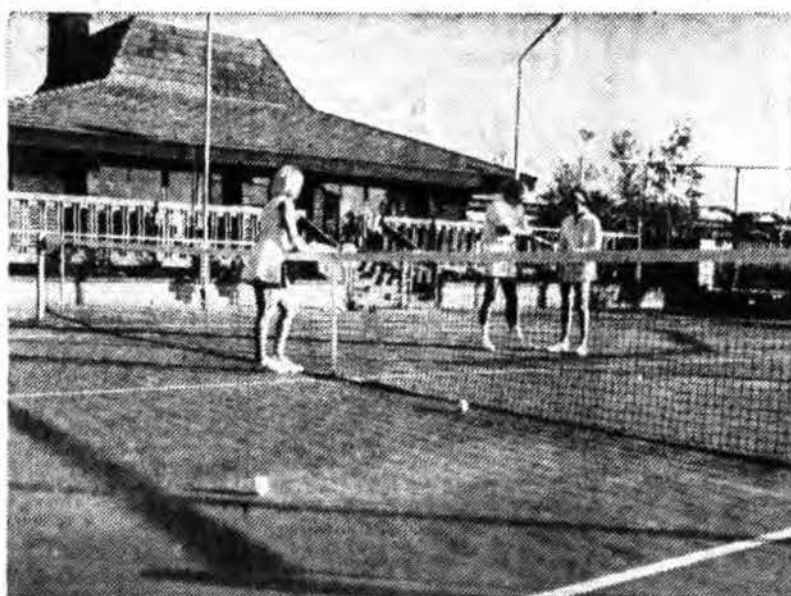

The law applies to all transactions in which a Federally-insured loan is in any way involved. Thus banks, savings and loan associations and all other lending institutions whose accounts are Federally-insured come under the law's provisions.

To ease what one industry executive calls the shock of the new law, all-day seminars sponsored by the California Mortgage Bankers Association will be held in California's two largest cities to brief real estate industry employees with the law's requirements. The first seminar will be held June 10 at the Los Angeles Marriott Hotel, Century and Airport boulevards, Los Angeles.

The second will be held June 11 at the San Francisco Hilton Hotel, Mason and O'Farrell streets, San Francisco. Both will begin at 9 a.m. and run all day. Registration fees of $35 plus reservations may be arranged at the CMBA office at 3440 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 90010. Non-members are welcome.

Cheap Heat

Solar heating for homes can be financed under home improvement loans by Home Federal Savings of San Diego, the first institution to offer such a loan. Shown with rooftop panels that heat system fluids to 190 degrees is the process inventor, Robert Gallagher, vice president of Energy System, Inc., of El Cajon.

Experts Debate First Aid For Ailing Social Security

NEW YORK (AP) — Five years ago the maximum Social Security tax was $374 a worker a year. Today it is $824. If nothing is changed and government projections prove correct, the tax paid by middle to upper income workers will rise to $895 in 1976, $982 in 1977 and $1,125 in 1978. But even those increases will leave the system with mounting annual deficits as maximum monthly benefits to new retirees advance to $342 this year, $362 in 1976, $380 in 1977 and $397 in 1978. As a result, experts are debating how to change the nation's Social Security system, which is taking in $67 billion in fiscal 1975 and paying out $69.5 billion. Proposals include raising the tax rate, increasing the wage base on which the taxes are paid, cutting back benefits and taking revenues from the federal income tax. THE ONE THING on which just about everybody agrees is that Social Security is not financially healthy. The $2.5-billion deficit this year — caused by recession and unemployment — is not the first, but it is the most severe. There was a deficit of $1 billion in 1960 and $300 million in 1966. More significantly, the long range estimates of government officials show that the deficit will grow each year because of inflation, lower birth rates and problems in the present law. If these three factors continue, the deficit will reach $20 billion annually by 1990. "I think there is some concern, but it should be in the context of whether we are making good forecasts," says Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell. "Congress has ample time to make choices — but they aren't necessarily easy choices." Interest payments on a $47.8-billion trust fund will probably cover this year's $2.5-billion deficit. But experts urge some change in the system soon to keep Social Security from going broke and to reassure Americans that their retirement incomes are safe. Here are the alternatives generally discussed and the impact they would have: BENEFITS: Until 1972 Congress increased taxes and benefits it deemed necessary. But that would eat into the sales of private pension and annuity plans that now supplement Social Security checks. The decreased use of private retirement plans, economists say, would in turn hurt business, which relies on such plans for capital. GENERAL REVENUES: Troubled by these consequences of raising the wage base, the Social Security Advisory Council proposed instead that the system's deficit be overcome by funding some of the Medicare benefits with general revenues raised by the income tax. The proposal immediately kicked up a storm. President Ford opposed it and Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Casper Weinberger claimed it was "inappropriate for a program whose strength has depended so heavily on support by working people and their employers." Since Social Security's founding in 1935, Congress has consistently opposed using the income tax to finance Social Security. Opponents of this plan argue that to do so would destroy the system's independence and an American belief that benefits are earned, as in private pensions. In recent years, however, tax experts have argued whether Social Security is really an earned pension or a subsidy. The best answer appears to be that it is both. PRIVATE PLANS: Whether the taxpayer, given the choice, could earn greater benefits in private pension plans or retirement bonds than under Social Security is a topic of hot debate. Some economists say that because Social Security taxes don't draw interest, private plans are certainly better. Others contend that under Social Security the nation's economic growth replaces the need for interest. Social Security officials say their system is best because there are no selling costs, because Congress updates the benefits and because Medicare benefits for survivors and disability insurance come along with old age pensions. Still, a study for Barron's, the weekly financial newspaper, concludes that at least for higher-paid, younger workers, Social Security is a bad deal. Based on government assumptions, the newspaper said, a well-paid 18-year-old could expect to receive $4,950 a year in Social Security benefits upon retirement, under the present formula system, but $7,432 a year

Garbage to Be Mined

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two Western companies have formed a venture to mine garbage landfills for fuel gas. The first project is on the 172-acre Palos Verdes landfill in Los Angeles County. There, Reserve Oil & Gas Co. of Los Angeles and a subsidiary of NRG, Inc., a Phoenix financial firm, have sunk five production wells and a pipeline network to gather methane, or marsh gas, formed by the layers of buried garbage, process it and sell it to Southern California Natural Gas Co. to be mixed with natural gas. Robert H. Collins, president of the Joint Venture, NRG Nufuel Co., said a new collecting and purification process will be used. He said the Palos Verdes operation is viewed by the two companies as forerunner of a number of similar projects across the country. HE SAID the Joint Venture company already has obtained gas rights to important landfill tracts in Arizona, Kansas, Illinois and Maryland, and has tentative arrangements to sell gas from these tracts to utility companies in the future. Collins said extracting methane, the principal ingredient of natural gas (it ranges from 75 to 85 percent of the gas by volume) from garbage landfills does not involve anything offensive to the surroundings. "An 18-hole golf course is being built on top of the

'WHITE-COLLAR CRIME'

"Almost all of the computer crimes I have recorded have been discovered accidentally. I wonder what the smart guys are doing."

The words are those of computer-abuse expert Donn Parker, who appears in an NBC News special report, Sunday at 10PM. NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman is the anchorman and Eliot Frankel is producer of the special, which will examine the phenomenon of white-collar crime—people who are caught stealing, sometimes large sums of money, but serve little or no time in prison. It is estimated that these thefts cost the American consumer $40 billion a year. Parker, who is associated with the Stanford Research Institute and has published a comprehensive study on computer abuse, adds: "Eighty-five percent of computer crime goes unreported and undetected."

Among those interviewed are individuals who have committed massive frauds and representatives of security firms who specialize in apprehending them. The special will show, in Frankel's words: "... How prevalent and widespread white collar crime is. Part of this increase can be attributed to the ongoing recession. This type of crime is not a victimless crime because everyone pays by way of higher prices for goods and services."

Frankel and his staff have uncovered some dramatic figures concerning the apprehension and conviction of white-collar criminals. "The best estimate we have is that maybe five percent of white-collar criminals are caught, and of this number only one percent actually go to jail," Frankel says. "Many people get off because they make restitution, or the company, fearing bad publicity, refuses to press charges. In many cases they are just quietly fired."

Other areas the program will investigate are employee theft, insurance fraud, kickbacks and bribes in business, computer frauds, investment frauds, industrial espionage and how fraudulent operators prey on the young.

What is being done on the community level concerning white-collar crime, including programs that instruct the public on how to spot consumer frauds, also will be studied, and the growth of companies that specialize in giving job applicants polygraph and psychological tests to determine their trustworthiness will be examined.

NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman will be the anchorman for an NBC News special report on white-collar crime and how it affects the American consumer.

'Inherited Talent!'

When Pat Finley, who plays Ellen Hartley on The Bob Newhart Show (CBS, Saturdays, 9:30PM) mentions that her father Robert C. Finley is a presiding State Supreme Court Judge in Washington, people invariably ask her what he thinks of his show business daughter, as though being an entertainer had an air of illegitimacy about it. Those same folks are usually surprised to hear that he not only loves it, but used to be in show business himself. "First of all," Miss Finley says, "most lawyers are hams anyway and besides, my dad used to be a band leader." Miss Finley, who has sung, danced and acted on three continents, believes she probably inherited her musical talents from her father. She explains that her dad had one of those bands in the Thirties that was always in search of work. Although her father finally gave up the band business to pursue a highly successful law career, Miss Finley says that music was something she grew up with. At the age of four, she decided to become an entertainer and since her mother has always been interested in children's theatre, Miss Finley picked up her initial stage experience in children's theatre productions. Her experience as a professional ranges over a year long tour in "Bye, Bye Birdie" in Australia, the Broadway company of "Hello, Dolly" as well as the television series From A Bird's Eye View, filmed in England, and the musical-variety series The Funny Side.

'Sportscaster of the Year'

ABC Sportscaster Keith Jackson was named Sportscaster of the Year for the third consecutive year by the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association in ceremonies held recently at Salisbury, North Carolina. The Sportscaster of the Year Award is voted each year by the 7,700 sports broadcasters and writers of the Association. Keith Jackson is the recipient of numerous other awards for sports broadcasting, among them the Headliners Award, the Sylvania Award, and the George Foster Peabody Award. He made the first radio broadcast of a sports event from the Soviet Union to the United States in 1958. The versatile Jackson's assignments for ABC Sports have ranged from Olympic coverage to hosting the popular series, "The Superstars," to football. He is the play-by-play announcer for ABC Sports' NCAA Football telecasts, is a frequent contributor to "ABC's Wide World of Sports" and "ABC's Championship Auto Racing," and has served as the sportscaster for NBA basketball telecasts and ABC's "Professional Bowlers Tour." Keith Jackson is the second ABC Sportscaster to be honored as a three-time Sportscaster of the Year, joining Chris Schenkel in that distinction. Finalists in this year's voting included Curt Gowdy, series host and co-producer of ABC Sports' "The American Sportsman," and Vin Scully.

'NATURE'S CHARTER TOURS'

"Nature's Charter Tours," on NBC's World of Disney (Sunday at 7:30PM) offers a fascinating and unusual look at the often mysterious and unexplainable migratory habits of many of earth's most common creatures—and some not so common—in this combination live-action-animation hour, hosted by J. Audubon Woodlore.

Included are sequences depicting the lemmings' determined overland march which ends as they throw themselves into the sea; caribou braving roving wolf packs to get to their migratory destination; seals by the thousands playing, picking mates and fighting on the Pribilof Islands, and grunion laying their eggs on West Coast beaches at night as humans run wildly about trying to catch them. Other footage covers the fascinating metamorphosis of the Monarch butterfly as well as its migratory habits and those of such creatures as geese, ducks, gannets, cougars, polar bears, salmon, whales, elephants, seals, Arctic terns and locusts.

Major animation sequences include a tongue-in-cheek treatise on bird migration, the metamorphosis of the Monarch butterfly (also illustrated in live-action film), an undercover foray to the Pribilof Islands to illustrate the migration of the seals and an adventure with a friendly elephant.

Excerpts from seven films in the Oscar-winning True-Life Adventure series are included—"Seal Island," "Water Birds,"

"White Wilderness," "Vanishing Prairie," "Beaver Valley," "African Lion" and "Secrets of Life."

STAGE OF DEVELOPMENT

The monarch butterfly,

a regal and beautiful insect, flutters over gardens in the summer. Hovering above a flower, it reveals the rich coloring of its outspread wings—orange with velvety black veins and black borders dotted with white.

The butterfly does not eat milkweed leaves as the caterpillar did, for it cannot chew with its jaws. Instead, it drinks nectar from flowers, using its proboscis, or drinking tube. This is coiled up like a watchspring underneath the jaws until it is needed for inserting into the throat of a flower. The butterfly uses its antennae, or feelers, for smelling, for testing its surroundings, and possibly for communication.

Because it is so closely associated with milkweed plants, the monarch is often called the "milkweed butterfly." It belongs to an order of insects known as Lepidoptera, the Greek word for insects with scaly wings. Portions of the butterfly's body and the wings are covered with millions of minute, brightly colored scales that overlap one another.

'KNUCKLE'

"Knuckle," a mystery drama by young British playwright David Hare starring Eileen Brennan, Jack Cassidy, Michael Christofer and Gretchen Corbett, air on Hollywood Television Theatre, Wednesday at 9PM on KCET, Channel 28. The drama was adapted for television by David Scott Milton, and was produced and directed by Norman Lloyd, executive producer for the award-winning Hollywood Television Theatre series.

"Knuckle," transposed from London to Los Angeles, is about the disappearance of a young girl on a lonely beach near Los Angeles and the connection—if any—between her disappearance and a shady land deal engineered by her wealthy father. The play is performed on several levels. One is the manner in which people appear to the world as opposed to what they really are. Another underlines the similarities between an empty nihilism and a surface acceptance of established values. A third is the corruption that is almost a concomitant to the acquisition of power and money.

Curly, portrayed by Michael Christofer, returns home after years abroad to unravel the mystery of why his sister disappeared—whether she was murdered, committed suicide, or merely ran away. Gretchen Corbett is cast as Jenny, Curly's only ally in the investigation. She is all too familiar with the Los Angeles scene, where she sees money as the only imperative, and the "casual cruelty" of the big-money world as that which can break anyone who doesn't go by the rules.

Jack Cassidy is Patrick Delafield, Curly's father and a cultivated banker who is mysteriously unmoved over the disappearance of his daughter. He claims he hasn't seen her for six months, and, indeed, seems to want to think she was murdered by a psychopath. Eileen Brennan is Delafield's placid, unquestioning housekeeper-mistress who sees and hears no evil and is determined to have it stay that way.

Curly tracks down all possible leads and discovers that his father's money was behind an unsavory scheme to acquire an old woman's extremely valuable property. Unfortunately, what Curly's father sees as a simple business transaction leads to the woman's commitment in a mental institution, the suicide of her son, and some five million dollars for Delafield.

'SPECIES COMEDIA AMERICANUS'

Where have all the comedians gone? It is a strange fact of life that at a time when the world seems to be going down the drain in a gurgling flood of over-priced Arabian oil, $5,000.00 Chevis and 90-cent hamburgers with the thickness, if not the aroma, of a tired rose petal, the nation's leading comedians have slowly disappeared from view. George Burns, Bob Hope, Red Skelton, Milton Berle, Danny Kaye, Phil Silvers, Danny Thomas, Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Red Buttons, Don Rickles, Jerry Lewis—these former giants of the tube are now seen with all the frequency of a snow storm in the Mojave Desert. There are, in fact, only four A-1, Vegas-rated comedians left on television today. Of these, Johnny Carson is seen regularly only by the Great American Insomniac, Carol Burnett heads up a weekly 10PM variety show and Redd Foxx, almost wholly unknown to the vast majority of the American people until Sanford and Son came along, has his own weekly series.

The fourth is Bob Newhart, an anomaly among comedians and particularly among television comedians, both in his personal and professional lives. A quiet, low-key, unassuming man now in his early forties, he is the very antithesis of what we have come to accept as the species comedia Americanus. An accountant with a sense of humor ranks in abundance just behind left-handed third basemen and astronauts with acrophobia. To bet on one's becoming a major comedy star is akin to betting on the Titanic over the iceberg. But in the singular case of Bob Newhart, the iceberg loses.

For the past three seasons Newhart has been quietly starring in, logically enough, The Bob Newhart Show (9:30PM Saturdays), the second three-camera situation comedy to come out of the now burgeoning MTM Enterprises. It is seldom out of the top ten, almost never out of the top 20, and is firmly established in CBS-TV's solid Saturday night lineup of All in the Family, The Jeffersons, Mary Tyler Moore, Newhart and Carol Burnett. Yet unlike almost every other comedian to have done a TV series, Newhart does not play either himself or a fictional comedian. Not even, for that matter, a comic character. He plays a psychologist. Which, as a matter of fact, and in a very real sense, he is. Yet he gets his laughs. He can get them simply with a look. The late Jack Benny's "look" was world famous. He had only to stare at the audience and the audience appreciatively fell apart. But the Newhart look arises out of a situation based on the character of Dr. Robert Hartley. Newhart is essentially an actor, rated by his peers as perhaps the finest comedy actor in the business today.

Offstage Newhart is as unlike the "normal" comedian as he is on. He is "normal" in reverse. He is never "on." There is no entourage, no show-business atmosphere of frantic one-liners, no constant search for the conversational topper. He has been married to his first and only wife, the former Virginia Quinn, for 12 years and is so devoted to her that, according to his TV co-star, Suzanne Pleshette, "kissing him in a scene is like kissing a pair of concrete lips." But it is the same Miss Pleshette who refers to Newhart as "one of the most thoughtful, considerate, intelligent, articulate men I have ever known."

Newhart lives for one thing: his family. Early in the show's first season a holiday cut the normal five-day rehearsal week to four days and Bob made the discovery that the loss of one day didn't seem to affect either him or any of the show's other regulars, including Suzanne, Bill Daily, Peter Bonerz and Marcia Wallace. From that time on the show has adhered to a four-day schedule, giving Bob one more full day to spend with his wife and their three young children. When he is home, he plays both golf and tennis. When he goes to Las Vegas, Reno or Lake Tahoe to fulfill club dates, Ginnie goes with him—and so do Robert, 12, Timmy, 7, and Jennifer, 3, whenever it is possible for them. (Robert this year is away at a boarding school in Cardigan, N.H. Bob, who has long been fighting a fear of flying, has already flown to New Hampshire twice to visit with him.)

Considering his background as a Chicago insurance man who first asserted himself as a major comedy talent with the hilarious low-key comedy album, "The Button-Down Mind of Bob Newhart," in 1960, it might seem out of character for his closest friend to be Don Rickles. Bob, however, sees nothing strange in this at all. He likes Rickles. That's enough for him. Their friendship is perhaps best expressed by the personalized license plate on Bob's car. Rickles, who doesn't smoke, once refused to let Newhart ride with him because he doesn't like the smell of cigarette smoke. He issued an edict, in fact, that Newhart could never again ride in Rickles' car. Shortly thereafter Bob bought a new car for himself. The license plate is simple and to the point. It reads: "NO DON."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR WILLIAM E. SIMON, Secretary of the Treasury
Why are you so optimistic that the recession will end this year?—Elmer Whittaker, Taunton, Mass.

● Because we're already seeing the first patches of blue among the gray clouds. Prices are softening; wholesale costs have fallen for three months in a row. With inflation receding and wages rising, consumers are getting more purchasing power. Interest rates are dropping, which encourages the housing industry. Government policy is aiding all these favorable things. We have pushed for tax refunds, expanded unemployment aid, and the Federal Reserve has loosened its monetary policy. We think the recession will "bottom out" in the summer, with positive growth through 1976.

FOR SHIRLEY MACLAINE, author of "You Can Get There From Here"

You seem to be busy all the time. Do you ever relax, and if so, how?—A.S., Albany, N.Y.

● I drive to the airport and get on the first plane. It doesn't matter where it's going, I get on it. I'm a travel freak, and think I got into movies and started writing books just so I could have an airline credit card (it's much easier to go places with one of them).

FOR ROD STEWART, British rock star

I read a magazine article in which you said, "With my women, it's me that does all the bossing around and punishing." What did you mean?—P.L., Altoona, Pa.

● I'm a bit like your Supreme Court. I believe the punishment should fit the crime, but I don't believe in the death penalty. I'd never finish with a girl if she did something I didn't like, but I'd drop her in a second if she bored me. I'm not for sadomasochism—I just like to be the boss in a relationship.

FOR EDGAR BERGEN

What got you interested in ventriloquism?—G.S., Van Nuys, Calif.

● A 25¢ book on magic and ventriloquism. I practiced every moment and tried out imitations on my 7th-grade classmates. One evening Mom thought she heard an old man at the door. She opened it and found no one there. That was my first successful try at voice-throwing. My dummy, Charlie McCarthy, has appeared before English and Swedish royalty and two American Presidents, and was even awarded an honorary degree.

FOR HUGH O'BRIAN

What did you do with your first big paycheck?—S.A., Pomona, Calif.

● The year was 1964, and my check was for $250—for the movie "Young Lovers," which Ida Lupino directed. First, I paid off a month's rent for my room (at $10 a week). Then I sent Ida a bouquet of flowers and got my agent a sweater. I indulged myself with a set of tires for my old jalopy, took my date and her mother to Chasen's for dinner, and put what was left ($50) into the church kitty.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON, football star

In his book, "Like It Is," Howard Cosell says you decided to quit pro football and asked for a job on "Monday Night Football." True?—William Connolly, Bridgeport, Conn.

● Yes. At the time it happened I had a lot of things to consider. All that World Football League money was being talked about. I had finished my fifth year. I had to do what I thought was best for my family. Fortunately, the team owner and I were able to settle our differences because I wanted to keep playing.

FOR SYLVIA PORTER

Do you believe that Watergate and the Nixon Administration's concentration on foreign affairs in any way led to the deterioration of America's domestic economy?—Mary Keas, Alexandria, Va.

● Yes! YES! Y E S!

FOR LORNA LUFT, Judy Garland's daughter

Does it upset you to hear your mother's records or see her movies?—N.C., Mansfield, Ohio

● No. And I enjoy talking about her. Mom always said, "When I go, I want you to talk about me, laugh about me and remember me, because that's how you'll keep me alive." I saw "A Star Is Born" for the first time recently with one of Mom's friends who said: "We're lucky to still hear her and see her movies." Most children aren't lucky enough to have such a legacy.

FOR VIKKI CARR

As a Chicano, did you experience any prejudice as a child?—B.B., Montgomery, Ala.

● Yes, but it was largely of my own making. We spoke Spanish exclusively at home, so I wasn't too familiar with English and had difficulty understanding my teachers. They'd punish me, and that's how I got the idea it was bad to be a Mexican. Children made some cruel remarks, but as I grew up I realized kids can be unkind—to all kids, not just Chicanos.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is it true that Diana Ross is temperamental?—R.B., Waco, Texas

● We've heard those rumors, too, but really can't confirm or deny them, except to recall that when she starred at N.Y.'s Waldorf-Astoria sometime ago, she insisted the room temperature be lowered. She uses so much lighting in her act that she gets hot and sticky and tries to compensate with a cool room. Also, she doesn't want her rehearsals turned into "performances," and tries to discourage spectators. She headlined at the opening of N.Y.'s new Westchester Premier Theatre, and offset the rather cool temperature by turning on her personal warmth—and she's got plenty of that. She has the audience raise clasped hands and sway while they sing with her. Diana, having two small daughters, always talks to children in the audience. Incidentally, she's an accomplished sportswoman and a superb chess player.

Poll-Winner Alan Alda

Talks About His World, the "Occult"—

And His Painful Childhood

Alan Alda of "M*A*S*H" was a repeat winner in the male TV-actor category of our 1975 Celebrity Survey—by a broad margin. Other winners on Page 9.

By Helen Dorsey

The Alan Alda we talked to is just the tip of an iceberg. What you see is only a fraction of his many interests and talents. The son of actor Robert Alda, Alan is a private person who chooses to live a continent away from his work, in a small New Jersey town, with his wife Arlene, a former concert clarinetist, and their three teen daughters, Eve, 16; Elizabeth, 14; and Beatrice, 13.

Alda's thinking links together astrology, science, physics and theology. He became "liberated" during a year in Paris, after a strict Catholic education at Fordham, where he studied logic, philosophy and metaphysics.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Do you speak French?

ALDA: I speak French with Italian endings, but I can get by. I bummed around Europe a lot. That was the best time of my education. I remember pushing my car—an old Skoda [a Czechoslovakian car]—into Rome with a loaf of bread on the front seat. That was all I had, the car and the bread. They had stolen my suitcase! I was sleeping in the car. It was really nice!

FW: How did you recover from that escapade?

ALDA: I don't know. There was probably money waiting for me somewhere. My father was living in Europe then. It was just a case of mismanagement. I had something like $25 to $30 a week to live on, which was adequate at that time. If you didn't eat too much! I spent a lot of money on books. I was crazy about books. I went to Paris with a trunkful of books and came back with another trunkful. I used to like to hold them. I didn't always read them. I just liked to possess them. I read more now. What was nice about that trip was that I could read whatever interested me.

FW: I understand you're a wine drinker but don't drink at work.

ALDA: I was a fat kid, so I have to watch it.

FW: Was that from being inactive when you had polio as a child?

ALDA: No, as a matter of fact, I was very active after I had polio. I used to swim like eight hours a day because it was recommended by the doctor.

FW: Were you affected by the polio?

ALDA: No, as a matter of fact, the physical-therapy treatments and having to withstand some of the pain of the

"What interests me is scientific work that's done on the borderline between the known and the unknown. All that stuff is pushing its way into what's measurable. Now it's just a question of when it will get there."

Alda stars in CBS-TV's "M*A*S*H" and is the creator of "We'll Get By."

Kenny treatments made me stronger. They are very painful, extremely painful, because every hour you get hot, scalding blankets wrapped around your muscles. I used to scream a lot. It was hard on my parents to hear me scream. They were the ones who put the blankets on me. But I think that was useful, to get through something like that. Now I think I have more stamina than I would otherwise. I have a lot of physical stamina.

FW: Didn't you stop pursuing a medical career when you failed a chemistry exam at Fordham?

ALDA: That's right. I slept right through it! But now I'm very interested in that stuff. Science is all I really read. I don't read fiction.

FW: What turned you on to that?

ALDA: An interest in the occult. I think to the extent that the so-called "occult" exists, it's part of nature. What interests me is scientific work that's done on the borderline between the known and the unknown. All that stuff is pushing its way into what's measurable. Now it's just a question of when it will get there.

FW: For example?

ALDA: I've given lectures on the subject. I find that people who are in the more speculative branches of science, like physics, can tolerate uncertainty because it's part of their work. On the other hand, I once talked to a neurologist who just could not tolerate the fact that I was talking about something he could not measure. As far as he was concerned, there was no psychic activity beyond what he could measure on his machine. But what he failed to realize was that, before he had that machine, if you had told a doctor there was such a thing as a brain wave, he would have laughed at you.

FW: What do you say in your lectures?

ALDA: I'll give you an example. There's a man who works for RCA whose job it is to predict disturbances in radio transmissions on the earth depending on the aspects of various planets. When certain planets get into a squared position, he knows it will be difficult to monitor a radio transmission and that this interrupts the service of cablegrams or radiograms. Now it seems to me that if radio transmissions are affected, then the more subtle mechanism of the brain might be affected in a similar way and might account for certain cyclical events like stock market depression, wars, even just general crankiness. And that's astrology.

FW: Do you use the occult in your own life?

ALDA: Well, you have to work with a sense of reality even when you're dealing in this kind of twilight zone. The fact that you're moving into the unknown doesn't mean that you have to accept everything. You have to sort out reality. Otherwise it could be very dangerous!

FW: Would you say this interest started with your study of philosophy in Paris?

ALDA: No. I think it has more to do with the fact that I was brought up a Catholic. Catholics have a very strong spiritual bias. I still believe in a lot of things. Believing is very important. I have faith in my own ability to accomplish things. I have faith in evolution, faith in mankind, I have faith. . . .

FW: In God?

ALDA: I think God is so unfathomably all-inclusive that everything that exists is an expression of God. But I never try to convince anyone. I think the data are either convincing or not. There are well-established scientists who have said that no amount of data will convince them because it's just not possible. Those people have withered in some way intellectually. There's no point in spending any time trying to convince them. Occult means that which is hidden. But if it's not part of science, not part of the study of nature, then it doesn't interest me. The only reason people can distinguish physics from metaphysics at the moment is because we don't have the instrumentation to measure metaphysics! As soon as we do, then it's called physics again.

FW: Isn't your TV show, "We'll Get By," set in a place like the one in which you live in New Jersey?

ALDA: Because that's what I know. I wanted to make this family real, not like the typical TV family. The father works in New York and doesn't make much money and commutes by bus. The bus smells and is full of carbon monoxide. When you walk into their kitchen, it's obviously not a brand-new kitchen. These people are scraping to make it both emotionally and financially. The kids don't have cute problems any more than their parents do. I'm trying to deal with what people really go through.

FW: How do you get any fun out of that?

ALDA: To me, people dealing passionately with the real details of life become funny the more passionate they become! It's not really funny if people don't behave humanly and realistically.

FW: Is that why you prefer living in New Jersey to California?

ALDA: Sure! In L.A., you have to make an appointment to see people! Distances are so vast. In New Jersey, we're only 20 minutes by car from New York. There's no travel. Our closest friends are members of the community. That's really nice. That's why I love to live in a small town. I want to be part of a community. It's a more normal life for kids too. Having a parent constantly exposed on TV is tough on my kids. I went through the same thing with my father when I was young. I've tried to prepare my daughters to cope with this, but occasionally a teacher or someone will hurt them by referring to their parents' abilities instead of their own abilities.

FW: With your many interests, how do you manage to apportion yourself?

ALDA: Somehow I feel I'm pretty well organized. I just do a day's work in a day. And I find I still have time to be with my family too.

Natural food fiber: How important is it to your health?

Recent observations suggest fiber in the diet may be of greater value than previously thought.

NEW INTEREST IN FIBER.

Why all the sudden interest in natural food fiber? Why are there major articles on it in many newspapers and magazines? The answer comes from recent observations concerning dietary fiber and how it may affect health. Basically, they're saying something we've been saying for years: natural food fiber helps the digestive system regulate itself.

IMPORTANCE IN THE DIET.

Right now, there's a lot of research on dietary fiber. But no one can positively identify all of the benefits of fiber until more clinical evidence is obtained. The only thing everyone agrees on is that fiber is of great importance in keeping your digestive system working smoothly.

SOURCES OF FIBER.

With recent changes in eating habits, evidence suggests that many Americans aren't getting the food fiber they need. This, in spite of the fact that fiber-rich foods, such as wheat, specifically the bran portion, are easily obtainable.

VITAMINS BLESSED WITH TASTE.

Kellogg's All-Bran and Kellogg's Bran Buds are two cereals rich in bran, so when you eat either, you're getting the benefits of natural food fiber, plus important vitamins and minerals. All-Bran and Bran Buds also have a delicious wheat taste that has been enjoyed for years by people of all ages. It stays crunchy in milk, and is a sensible, good-tasting way to start breakfast.

RELATION TO HEALTH.

If you're concerned, think about including these two bran cereals as part of your diet.

Kellogg's

ALL-BRAN®/BRAN BUDS®
THE NUMBER ONE NATURAL FOOD FIBER CEREALS.

THE WHEAT BRAN.

Bran, the outermost layer of the wheat kernel, is one of the richest sources of natural food fiber. Bran contains a major share of many of wheat's nutrients, including vitamins and minerals. And it's low in fat.

All-Bran, in shredded form, and Bran Buds, in bud form, with a slightly different taste. Two excellent sources of natural food fiber.

Smart Cooking For Special Dieters

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen serves a tasty fish dinner that has been trimmed of both calories and salt. "Many folks find that in order to lose weight and keep it off, it helps to count calories and cut down on salt," says Marilyn.

A Delicious, Salt-Free Fish Fillet

When you put Lemony Pepper Fish Fillets on a plate with Zucchini With Onions and Herb Tomato Halves, it looks too good to be called a "special diet!"

- 1½ lbs. fresh or frozen fillet of sole or flounder*
- 2 teaspoons unsalted butter or margarine, melted
- ½ cup shredded carrot
- ½ cup diced fresh mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper
- Lemon juice

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Brush fish with butter. Combine remaining ingredients; spoon down center of each fish fillet. Roll and place, seam side down, in a lightly greased 10x6x2-inch baking pan.

YOUR EYES CAN HEAL THEMSELVES

once you learn to relax them back towards normal, this eye specialist's ingenious way...

If You Suffer From A Single One Of These Torturous Symptoms Of Weak Eyes—Bad Eyes—Failing Eyes—THEN THESE FACTS BELOW MAY BE THE MOST IMPORTANT YOU HAVE EVER READ IN YOUR LIFE!

Because they reveal, for perhaps the first time in your life, how the muscles surrounding your eyes may have tricked you into the following agonizing symptoms: Near-sightedness ... Far-sightedness ... Astigmatism ... The inability to read without glasses ... Crossed eyes ...

Easily fatigued eyes, and the headaches, tension, anxiety, insomnia, and bone-weariness they so often cause ...

And any other condition of the eye that causes you to be a prisoner of glasses, where you are forced to watch your eyes weaken year after year; and go back to that doctor, year after year, for new glasses that are always thicker and thicker, stronger and stronger, uglier and uglier than the year before!

And Every One Of These Symptoms May Actually Be Controlled ... And Then Diminished ... And Then Eliminated—OFTEN BY AS LITTLE AS THIS ONE SIMPLE INSIGHT INTO THEIR HIDDEN CAUSE!

And that insight is this:

If you suffer from any of the symptoms listed above, then you must understand at once that your eyes are not ill ... they have not deteriorated ... they have not lost their true power to see in any way!

What has happened to them instead is simply this:

What has gone wrong with your eyes is not their lenses themselves, but the muscles surrounding them, that focus those eyes by lengthening or flattening them!

If these muscles are used properly, then your eyes are focused correctly, and you see sharply and clearly. But if you mis-use these muscles—if, for example, you clamp them around your eyes too tightly—then you will unconsciously and habitually throw those eyes out of focus, and you will develop one of the agonizing symptoms listed above!

(It's exactly as if you were playing golf or tennis, and you habitually tried to hit the ball too hard. Your muscles tighten to the point of "freezing" ... you lose your natural coordination ... every move you make is "blurred" in one way or another ... and after awhile your entire body aches with fatigue!)

So "Weak" Eyes Are Caused By Tense Muscles! And To Make These Eyes Strong Again, You Have To Learn How To LOOSEN These "Rigid" Muscles, AND LET YOUR EYES "FLOW BACK" INTO CORRECT FOCUS AGAIN!

Let us repeat this vital fact: To correct any or all of these symptoms, you do not exercise your eyes! You do not strengthen your eyes! You do not place more strain or pain or burden on those already-overburdened eyes at all!

What you do instead is this:

You simply learn how to RELAX those tightly-clamped muscles, in the ingenious fashion taught to you by this internationally-famous eye-specialist and physician!

In other words, you stop fighting these agonizing symptoms (which only intensifies them in an ever-increasing spiral of poorer and poorer vision), and—instead—give them the soothing treatment that lets them "loosen up" and start healing themselves!

And—once you have coaxed relaxation back into those overstrained eyes, just as the normal eye is always relaxed when it sees without effort—then you can gently and effortlessly RE-TRAIN them to lengthen and shorten the eyeball as they really should!

And then, finally, once your eyes have been trained to stop overstraining ... to focus normally again, without conscious effort ... to loosen up enough to automatically shift focus 70 times a second, exactly as the normal tension-free eye does—then those eyes will,

HOW DR. WILLIAM M. BATES ARRIVED AT HIS REVOLUTIONARY DISCOVERY...

"Why", asked this renowned eye specialist, several years ago, "If glasses are the correct procedure for sub-normal eyes, must these glasses be strengthened because the eyes under their influence have weakened?"

Anyone who has worn glasses knows this to be the usual case. But, logically, if a medicine is good, the doses should be weakened because the patient has grown stronger!

Therefore, Dr. Bates drew his revolutionary conclusion: That the outer muscles of the eye, and not the lens, when they are mis-used, cause blurred sight! And that we make our own eye troubles, by tightening the wrong group of muscles on the outside of the eye-ball!

All the rest you see on this page follows inevitably from this simple fact! And it has never been refuted, though for purely commercial reasons it is not generally accepted in this country!

from that moment on, give you sharper sight, clearer sight, more perfect sight, every single day that you continue to use them!

Think Of Eyes Growing Sharper And Sharper Each Day, Instead Of Fuzzier And Fuzzier! Think Of Glasses Being Put Away, For Longer And Longer Periods, TILL FINALLY YOUR FRIENDS AND FAMILY GASP IN DELIGHT AS YOU NO LONGER NEED THEM AT ALL!

Again, the key is Scientific Relaxation! Freeing the eye to do again what it once did automatically and unconsciously! Allowing the clear, brilliant sight which still remains within the eye to spring back to life, once the "muscle-chains" that are clamping it down are released!

And the results are often astounding! Let us give you just a few—directly from the pages of this great book:

"Simple as this (relaxation) drill seems, it tricks the sub-normal eye into doing all the natural things that the normal eye does unconsciously ... As your vision improves daily you will get the effect that all the world has had its face washed."

"Suddenly the muscles let go, shaping the eyeball normally for a moment or two, so the entire panorama stands out perfectly just as with normal vision. The vision is so vivid and comes so suddenly that it literally takes the breath away, and they gasp or cry out. These flashes are sure proof that the vision is within the eye, as soon as the eye can be relaxed to permit vision to take place. Vision is like a faucet: tension turns it off, relaxation turns it on."

"I once worked with a cataract case, whose vision we had improved with our method to such an extent that I called in a doctor, who worked sympathetically with us, to examine his eyes with a power ophthalmoscope. One eye the doctor found to be entirely cleared of cataract."

In Fact, Case History After Case History Proves That Cure May Be So Dramatically Fast That Even Your Ophthalmologist May Beg You For The Secret!

Once again, it doesn't matter which of the agonizing symptoms listed above you are suffering from right now ... how "deeply entrenched" they are ... how long you have been plagued by them ... how "weak" or "failing" or "out-of-control" your eyes may feel today! Here is specific, step-by-immediate-step advice that will

If You, Or A Loved One, Suffer From Serious Eye Damage (Such As The Following) READ THESE FACTS AT ONCE:

The most amazing thing about the Bates Method of relaxed vision, described on this page, is the fact that formerly "hopeless" conditions of the eye—such as atrophy, glaucoma, cataract, sympathetic ophthalmia and even detachment and hemorrhage—may often be improved by its methods, if there is any vision left at all with which to work!

Read the full details on page 94. Try it yourself, without risking a penny, today!

(again to quote directly from the book itself) "be free from pain and discomfort, able to do normal seeing in God's sunlight!"

For example:

Why, with this method, no strain at all is necessary; any strain at all interferes! And therefore you must PLAY at your simple relaxation drills! Do them easily! Don't make work of them—since they are NOT exercises; but looseners!

Why this method is completely harmless, since it is relaxation, and not exercise. And relaxation is never harmful!

Why this method removes both physical and mental strain! And why, as you relax, this proper way, the act of relaxation actually speeds circulation through your eyeball, to carry away impurities and bring fresh stimulation to the retina!

Why even blindness, dimming eyes have greater vision after only one of these simple treatments!

Why this treatment's beautifying effect on the eyes is "miraculous"! Why eyes treated this way have a sparkle and high luster that no beauty drops ever give! Are never watery, gritty, itching or bloodshot! Why they are suddenly turned into wide and "shining-youthful" eyes!

Why this method automatically, as a blessed side-effect promotes restful sleep, and combats even long-standing insomnia!

Why most myopic (near-sighted) eyes can be brought to "complete normalcy" by this method!

Why "old-age sight"—the inability to read without glasses—can now be forestalled and prevented in all types of eyes!

How both motion pictures and television can now be both effortless and good for the eyes—and actually used as sharp-vision builders for sub-normal eyes!

And—perhaps most startling of all—why even failing memories can often be restored by improving the vision this way!

Announcing Our 1975 Celebrity Poll Winners!

The readers of FAMILY WEEKLY have cast their ballots—by the tens of thousands—and here are the actors and actresses you have chosen as your favorites:

THE TOP WINNERS: TV—Valerie Harper and our cover subject, Alan Alda, her co-winner, who is profiled on Page 4. Movies—Robert Redford and Barbra Streisand.

Valerie Harper

Robert Redford

Barbra Streisand

SECOND BANANAS (TV only): Runaway winners Michael Learned and Jimmy Walker.

Michael Learned

Jimmy Walker

With three-time-winner John Wayne retired from the race, the way was cleared for Robert Redford to assume the mantle of America's most popular movie idol. His female counterpart was Barbra Streisand, our most popular actress for the second straight year. Streisand, Alan Alda and Michael Learned all repeated last year's victories.

About the only major surprise was the soaring success of young Jimmy Walker, the irrepressible "J. J." on CBS-TV's "Good Times." Valerie Harper, who lost out last year to Michael Learned in the supporting-actress category, grabbed the Number One spot this year—in the leading-lady category.

Here's how the voting went:

MOVIE ACTOR: Robert Redford had no real trouble landing this title, with a comfortable lead over runner-up Clint Eastwood and third-place Paul Newman.

MOVIE ACTRESS: Barbra Streisand easily outdistanced Julie Andrews and Doris Day, who placed second and third respectively.

TV ACTOR: Our poll said this was the year of "M*A*S*H." Besides Alan Alda, "M*A*S*H" supporting actors placed high in the ratings. Alda's closest competition came from Michael Landon of "Little House on the Prairie." In third place was David Hartman of "Lucas Tanner," who nudged out Telly Savalas ("Kojak") by one-tenth of a percentage point.

TV ACTRESS: Valerie Harper held out in a fairly close race with Jean Stapleton of "All in the Family." Angie Dickinson of "Police Woman" came in a very respectable third. Mary Tyler Moore, whose show gave Valerie her "break," placed fourth.

TV SUPPORTING ACTOR: Ralph Waite, last year's winner, plummeted, and in his place rose Jimmy Walker, with a huge percentage of votes. Gary Burghoff (Radar on "M*A*S*H") placed a distant second, followed closely by McLean Stevenson, also of "M*A*S*H."

TV SUPPORTING ACTRESS: Michael Learned enjoyed a commanding lead over Julie Kavner (Rhoda's sister) and third-place Sally Struthers of "All in the Family." Half a percentage point behind Sally was Gail Fisher of "Mannix."

By Sportscaster Jane Chastain
As told to Francene Sabin

Jane Chastain, the leading lady of television sports broadcasting, has covered athletics for 12 years. Now, in an exclusive interview for FAMILY WEEKLY, the CBS-TV sportscaster talks about the six athletes she admires the most.

"There Are a Lot of Great Athletes..."

We could all use less friction.

Friction? Who needs it?
Friction leads to wear and tear.
STP Oil Treatment does something about friction by helping to protect your engine from it. Just add a can to the crankcase when the oil is changed, and the first time it's down.

That'll help the oil lubri-

cate better than it would without STP. And a well lubri-cated motor is the best way to help reduce oil consumption, bearing wear and prolong engine life.

Try a can of STP Oil Treatment. See what driving's like when everything's running smoothly.

KYLE ROTE, JR., has to lead my list of athletes because, almost single-handedly, he has brought soccer to the attention of America. He's a superb athlete, and nobody can doubt his enormous talents after watching him win the "Superstars" contest last year. But to refuse a very lucrative contract to play professional football because he believes in soccer, which doesn't pay much, proves something about the man. Kyle makes those sometimes worn-out clichés true—he's a man of principle.

To reporters, Kyle is open, honest, accessible
—a real ambassador for his sport. Someday, when soccer is a big-time American sport, as I think it will be, people will realize what an important part Kyle played in its development.

Tennis star CHRIS EVERT, winner of the 1974 Wimbledon, is a perfect combination of skill and sheer poise, for which I have enormous admiration. She's had to mature very fast and under the tremendous pressures of competition and the media, but Chris has succeeded.

Chris has a healthy set of values, she is totally dedicated to her sport, and winning huge amounts of money hasn't changed her one bit.

Some reporters describe Chrissy as dull or plastic, because they don't understand her cool, businesslike, patient style of tennis. Chris has trained herself to concentrate so intently during a match that people think she's emotionless.
That's not true. Chris isn't nearly as cool inside as she seems, but she knows that, for her, patient tennis is winning tennis.

Chris has shown the same maturity regarding her much-publicized engagement to Jimmy Connors. She's a very private person who has done a very dignified, grown-up thing in keeping her personal life to herself.

I have a lot of favorites in golf, because there are so many really fine golfers, male and female, and so many of them are wonderful people.

But the standout is LEE TREVINO. Lee has the rare and delightful ability to keep his sense of humor, even while he's doing something that is important to him. Golf is a game of concentration, seriousness, yet

he's one of the few players who can joke and smile going down the fairway, then turn around, study his shots, and make birdies. He's a joy to work with because he'll come out with the unexpected or try to make a reporter smile.
That's something we all could do more.

One trait that Lee shares with the other premier gentleman of golf, Arnold Palmer, is kindness. Neither one is ever too busy to shake

But These Six Are My Favorite People"

hands, sign autographs or be gracious to a fan.

I've covered many major-league baseball teams, and I've come to know and like a number of the players. Still, there's no doubt in my mind that the star for whom I have the highest regard is JOHNNY BENCH. He's had every success possible in baseball from the time he was a rookie, yet there's no way that it has spoiled him. Johnny will always be the same: steady, consistent and down-home nice.

Johnny does so much for other people; if a child is ill or somebody needs help, he's there with no fuss or fanfare. And Johnny's dependability in clutch situations, as a hitter or catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, has to be the result of his personality. All sports are at least 90 percent mental, and the guy who has a good, steady attitude—and Johnny certainly has—is going to be a great competitor.

Until he got married, Johnny was labeled with some of the wild-bachelor stories that are pinned on all unmarried athletes. But he's been less affected by all that nonsense than any other superstar. He tolerates the stories, but doesn't fan the flames by trying to live up to them.

My football hero is ROGER STAUBACH, a man who never gave up. He did what had been thought impossible: going off to his military career, then coming back to the gridiron and being just as great as before. He was a man everybody had written off, but he never lost faith in himself.

When Roger rejoined the Dallas Cowboys,

Craig Morton was the starting quarterback. Another man might have given up, but not Roger. He held on to what he knew about himself. When he was sent in, he'd do his job and, gradually, everybody else realized that he was still the star.

I've been working on broadcasts of National Basketball Association games for one year, and the player who impresses me most is SIDNEY

WICKS of the Portland Trail Blazers. Sidney has a truly fine sense of proportion. He goes in and plays brilliant, tough basketball, then comes off the floor and relaxes immediately. There's no ego nonsense about him.

Very often, when a new, highly paid star joins a team, the other players don't take it too well. Yet when Bill Walton joined Portland, Sidney was ready to take a lesser role.

Interviewing him after a game was fun. I had been very uncomfortable, because the interview was to take place in the players' dressing room.

The cameras were there, and I had a chair placed off in a corner. (I try to get basketball players to sit down, because I'm 5-2 and I hate talking to navels.) I stood there, facing a wall and waiting, as the players came in. Then I heard a voice saying, "Do we start undressing now?" and I almost collapsed. Of course it was Sidney, just trying to relax me with humor, and he succeeded. That's the kind of guy he is.

All athletes should be as wonderful as my six favorites. It would make the world of sportscasting even greater than it is.

You've Never Felt Anything Like It Before!

You grab the metal bar with both hands and start the bottles twirling. All of a sudden you feel all of your muscles getting tighter. You start breathing harder and your heart beats faster. The bottles go faster. The muscles in your neck get so tight you think you might strain something. But you don't.

You're getting the strongest most effective exercise ever devised by man. You've done more exercise in 5 minutes than anybody else could ever do in 20 minutes.

The next day you do it again. Then the next day and the next and the next. Then one day all of a sudden it becomes easy. So you add water to the bottles for extra weight. The force of the twirling bottles full of water feels like it's going to pick you right off the ground. But it still gets easier. It's fun, so you try to make it harder. You try doing it in different positions, then while jumping up and down, then while running in place.

Then you realize something. Not only is the fat coming off, but you can do things you could never do before. Things that other people can't do. You run up a flight of steps without getting out of breath. You come off the golf course after 18 holes and your friends wonder why they are wringing wet with sweat but you're not. Things that used to be heavy aren't so heavy anymore.

Your head starts getting bigger now. You feel a little smug when you walk down a street full of people. At parties people kid you about being the skinny one, but you know they're not kidding. Did you ever notice how good looking people seem to always have good jobs?

You're "home free" now. The flabs all gone. All of your muscles are hard and firm. You look like a million dollars and you feel like it too. All of the nervous tensions you thought were a necessary part of life are nothing now.

The Gyro-Gym is not an effortless exercise machine. Fun yes, effortless no. You don't plug it into an electric socket or wear it to bed at night. It takes work and it works . . . FAST. It's the perfect exercise machine for men and women who are bound and determined to be physically better than anybody else.

The Gyro-Gym is the result of ten years of hard work and testing by one man. Lou Monti of Niagara Falls, N. Y. got the idea for the Gyro-Gym after he retired ten years ago. Lou was always a physical fitness nut, but he wanted something that he could use for exercise at home without going outside or taking up a lot of space.

The idea came from out of nowhere. He started building his machines out of spare parts in his basement. His idea turned out even better than he thought. Almost immediately the Gyro-Gym was endorsed by doctors and physio-therapists around the state of New York. One doctor even exclaimed that the Gyro-Gym was probably the greatest "bust developing" machine ever invented since much of the machines benefits are concentrated in the chest area.

Lou Monti, the inventor of the Gyro-Gym, is now 65 years old. Last year he pedaled a bicycle all the way from Niagara Falls, N. Y. to Dayton, Ohio. He claims there is no need for anybody to get old. Maybe not. Anyway, Lou sure is doing a good job of holding out.

Ask any doctor and he will probably tell you that the only way to firm up and get in shape is to work at it. The Gyro-Gym is the perfect way to do it. And we'll give you 14 days to prove it.

After you receive your Gyro-Gym and exercise course, try it for 14 days. If after those 14 days, you don't think the Gyro-Gym is the greatest exercise machine ever invented or that you have made a great stride towards perfect health and a perfect body, just return it to us. We'll refund the total price, no questions asked.

How The Gyro-Gym Works

The Gyro-Gym works by the process of "variable-resistance". In other words the weight of the bottles is increased the faster they twirl (centrifugal force).

Not only this, but the resistance of the weight against the body muscles continually changes in a 360 degree circle. Not just up and down or back and forth as in other exercisers.

And, as if that isn't enough, there is a hidden spring in the cross-bar of the Gyro-Gym. When this spring is compressed by trying to bring both hands together while still twirling the bottles, all of these beneficial forces are transferred to all of the muscles of the upper torso. This results in a general slimming of the waistline area, toning of the arm, shoulder, neck, and face muscles, and building and expanding the chest area.

By bending forward at the waist and lowering the Gyro-Gym, the benefits are transferred to the back, hips, buttocks, and legs. This results in a reducing of the hips, and a firming of the buttocks and leg muscles.

But many users of the Gyro-Gym claim the greatest function of all is that it seems to have an almost hypnotic effect on the person using it. Although it gives them a really tough workout, they just can't seem to put it down until their 5 minutes or more are up.

What People Are Saying About The Gyro-Gym

"I have lost over 30 pounds by combining diet with a program of regular use of the Gyro-Gym. I have absolutely no flab and feel wonderful."

Barbara H.

"I wouldn't know where to start to tell you about your great Gyro-Gym and the things it really can do for you. The Gyro-Gym with a little effort can change your whole life. It gives you self confidence and improves your appearance."

Richard B.

"To my mind it (the Gyro-Gym) has considerable merit even for patients confined to wheel chairs."

J. V. F. M.D.

"It can be used by the aged as well as the young, and it has equal application for men and women. Most importantly, the Gyro-Gym works. Whether as a weight reducer, strength builder, or an aid for improving circulation. It's completely safe and extremely enjoyable to use. The Gyro-Gym is the most valuable device of its type that I know of. I wholeheartedly recommend it to anyone interested in improving their physical condition."

Sincerely,
Dr. J. P. L.

"I have observed my wife and several of her friends use your fantastic Gyro-Gym. Since they have attained a trim and firm condition, I am now using and enjoying its benefits myself. I am delighted at the ease with which I achieved great results."

Yours truly,
L. J. P.

"I have lost inches around my waist and hips, and improved my general muscle tone and well being. Many thanks for making such an enjoyable exerciser available to me."

M. J. P.

Salvation outside the Church?

There's an old axiom: "Outside the Church, no salvation!" It raises problems and tempers. It takes on all shades of meaning. It sounds like "join up or else!"

The assembled bishops in the Second Vatican Council took a fresh look at the old axiom when they came to make their self-portrait of the Catholic Church in the document: "On the Church." Who belongs to the Church of Christ? Who is outside? These and other questions were asked and answered from the Catholic viewpoint. Also treated were such matters as: In what sense is the Church holy? What is the place of the pope, bishops and laity in the Church? Where do priests, brothers and nuns fit in? What of devotion to the Blessed Virgin and the other saints?

The official text of this document on the Church is now available from many sources. But it makes heavy reading for many people. Hence, we have prepared a simplified version. It is yours for the asking. Send for our free pamphlet, Christ and His Church. No one will call on you.

What in the World!

PETE REISER

"As if possessed by a demon"

QUOTE: "If there was a hero, soon to become the anti-hero, a man who epitomized the frustration and impotence of all of us, it was Pete Reiser, the wunderkind outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers. In 1942 he was destined to become perhaps the greatest baseball player in the history of the game. He could do it all—run, field, throw, but especially hit—with an authority that caught your breath short. Then in the pennant drive of 1942, with Reiser nearing .400 and getting stronger, it happened: Chasing a long fly he crashed into the outfield wall and crumbled. No Reiser, no pennant. And it was to happen again and again. After the war years in 1946, although he was still fast and stole home enough times to set a record, he was done... and his legacy was proof that you had to be wary, that to give everything fully and recklessly was to court disaster. The wall out there, the wall against which he repeatedly broke his talent as if possessed by an evil demon, was our wall too. It was Out There that we were raised to fear. He challenged it and lost, continued to lose until he was, or seemed, addled. The wall won and we could never again watch an outfielder tear hell-bent after a fly ball without feeling a bolt of panic, even terror." From "The Future of Being Human," by Paul Olsen (M. E. Evans, $6.95). UNQUOTE.

GEORGE WALLACE, JR.
"Toughest job in Montgomery"

The Governor's son told FAMILY WEEKLY about the advantages and disadvantages of being a politician's son: "In spite of all the tragedy in our family and the inherent turmoil of a political life, I don't resent any of it. In fact, it seems to have brought our family closer together. My father's status has afforded me the opportunity to meet great numbers of people, but I have no intention of pursuing a political career. Being George Wallace, Jr., is the most difficult job in Montgomery because everyone is always telling me that I should follow in my father's footsteps; but my interest and my talent lie in music. For my dad, that fact hasn't been easy to accept. He's such a patriot, and he's not musically inclined, so my aims are foreign to his nature. But he would never force me to do anything; he appreciates my ambition, as I do his. At the moment my music will have to take a back seat to politics—with '76 looming ahead, all the interest revolves around my father's politics, so I'll devote myself to his pursuits a while longer." George, Jr., has collaborated on a book about his family life entitled, "The Wallaces of Alabama" (Follett, $10).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY By Richard Armour

ON CALL

I'm called, and often, by my wife, Whose cry sounds something like a fife. "Come in!" she cries, or else "Come out!" "Come here!" she even more may shout. My hearing has begun to wane, Yet her I hear as plain as plain. I've heard that cry so many years It's found the wavelength of my ears. It travels far, that wifely call,

And penetrates the thickest wall. I do not really mean to cheer it; Quite oft I wish I couldn't hear it, But "Coming, dear!" I answer back. I'm like a freight train on a track Or like a Yo-Yo on a string. I know my place. "Yes, dear," I sing.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

One morning at the breakfast table with our four-year-old son, I decided it was time to tell him that in four or five months we would have a new baby brother or sister. After giving it some thought, he asked, "Did you read about it in the newspaper?"

Introducing More and More

Here it is. More.

And what's more, More is available in your choice of regular filter or menthol.

But either way, it's More.

Long, lean and burnished brown, More looks like more, it tastes like more, yet it's surprisingly mild.

More smokes slower too, yet draws easy for more enjoyment. (Which gives you more time for those relaxing moments.)

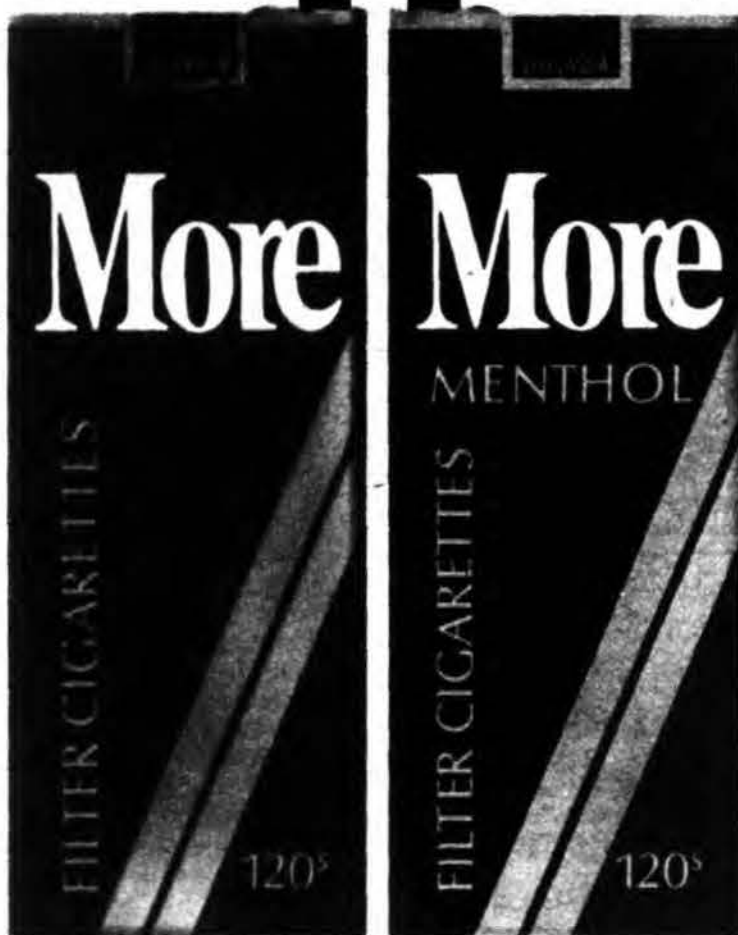

And More gives you over 50% more puffs than a 100mm cigarette. But More doesn't cost more.

If you swing towards menthol More, you'll find that More Menthol gives you more coolness, more tobacco enjoyment.
