LIGHTNING BOLT KILLS SADDLEBACK JC PITCHER

Colonia Director in Critical Shape

Lightning Kills Pitcher From Saddleback JC

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Police Hit Mesa Home, Seize Pot, 7 Suspects

Seven persons, including three juvenile girls, were arrested and 65 pounds of marijuana seized following a raid at a Costa Mesa home by narcotics officers from the Laguna Beach, San Clemente and Costa Mesa police departments Friday.

The bust ended two weeks of investigation by the Laguna Beach narcotics squad and cracked what Sgt. Neil Purcell alleged was a major supply operation for the Laguna Beach area.

A foot locker-sized box containing 30 kilos of cellophane-wrapped marijuana bricks was held today as evidence. Police value this haul at $16,000.

Arrested were Joseph Steveling, 30, of 2260 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach, held on $75,000 bail; Joseph O. Helmer, 42, of Valdez, Alaska, held on $10,000 bail; John Miller Kauffman, 18, of Palo Alto, Calif., held on $10,000 bail; Barbara Anne Black, 19, of 440 Lenwood, Costa Mesa, held on $10,000 bail.

Writings Link Man to Possible Killings of 26

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A hundred pages of handwritten notes telling of hangings, ritualistic murders and sex acts may link a jailed man to the deaths of up to 26 women, State Attorney Robert Stone says.

If the manuscripts can be believed, he said, "I don't think the country has ever seen anything of this magnitude."

The man — serving a six-month sentence in Fort Pierce on an assault conviction — has not been charged in any of the crimes.

But he has been questioned in the deaths of two Fort Lauderdale area teenage girls whose skeletons were found on a remote beach April 1.

The manuscripts and other items, some of which were identified as belonging to murder victims and missing persons, were seized last month at the home of the suspect's mother, Stone said.

The notes were written in first-person story form. Also found were photos, drawings, gold-filled teeth, a purse and trinkets, authorities said.

First U.S. Space Station Blasted Into Earth Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed away from earth today to serve as a giant "cabin in the sky" for nine astronauts in the next eight months.

A minute into the flight, Mission Control Center reported good thrust in all five first-stage engines and said it was "looking good."

The first stage shut down and the second-stage separated and ignited right on schedule, 2½ minutes into the flight.

Black Leader Freed

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph Abernathy, a leader in the protest against an Atlanta department store, was released on $1,000 bond Sunday after his arrest at the home of the store's board chairman. Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, took over leadership of striking workers at Rich's Department Store after the Rev. Hosea Williams was jailed.

another rocket into space Tuesday morning to hook up with the station, which is as large as a three-bedroom house, for a record 28 days in orbit.

Skylab 1 astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz watched from three miles away as a 33-story-tall Saturn 5 rocket thundered skyward at 10:30 a.m. PDT, right on schedule, propelling the 85-ton laboratory toward orbit.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad 2,700-feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off at 10 a.m. Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,300 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

Bleeding Woman In Vehicle

Adelaide Luna, director of Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez Community Center, remains in critical condition today after she was shot several times in an unexplained incident Saturday.

Mrs. Luna, 44, of 10371 Calle Independencia, is in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital after undergoing surgery for bullet wounds in her head, arm and back.

Mrs. Luna was found in a car stopped for a traffic violation by Officer Ron Gillman. The driver of the car, Richard Arechabaca Morones, 46, of 4906 W. 7th St., Santa Ana, was taken into custody on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Investigators said today they have not established what started the incident, but they will be filing charges against Morones this afternoon.

According to police reports, Gillman allegedly saw Morones make an illegal U-turn near the intersection of Euclid Street and Warner Avenue at about 12:30 a.m.

The officer reported that when he walked up to the side of the car, he saw Mrs. Luna who was bleeding profusely.

She was taken immediately to the nearby hospital and Morones was taken into custody. He allegedly told officers he was taking her to the hospital.

Investigators said she had been shot with a .22-caliber revolver which they found when they took Morones into custody.

Gold Shoots Up —Stocks Plunge

LONDON (UPI) — Gold leaped to the highest price in history on European free markets today, easily passing the $100-an-ounce "barrier."

A major British dealer linked the gold stampede to a lack of confidence brought on by the Watergate affair but others disagreed.

The gold rush which saw a price of $106.70 on the French commercial market sent the dollar skidding on European money markets as speculators and multinational companies unloaded U.S. currency for the precious yellow metal.

Group Seeks New Inquiry In Shooting

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Orange County Grand Jury will be asked to re-open its investigation into the police shooting death of a young Mexican-American April 13 in Fountain Valley.

The request comes from Orange County's Human Relations Commission which met Saturday in Santa Ana to discuss the shooting.

"Several community representatives have indicated to us that there is additional information which has not been presented to the Grand Jury, including the possibility of one or more eyewitnesses," said Jack Turk of Huntington Beach, chairman of the commission.

On the morning of April 13, Westminster Police Officer Timothy Miller shot Miguel Angel Ronquillo, 20, in the back.

Miller was helping Fountain Valley police search for Ronquillo and three other Santa Ana youths who had been stopped earlier, but who had fled from two Fountain Valley officers.

Miller told investigators he had his gun drawn and the youth backed into him causing the pistol to fire accidentally. Miller was accompanied by Fountain Valley Officer Robert Mosely, who reportedly also had his pistol unholstered.

Morry Lindros, director of the Human Relations Commission, told commissioners Saturday that there were discrepancies between the testimony of the two officers, though he did not elaborate.

Lindros also pointed to the lack of community input into the first Grand Jury hearing.

The Grand Jury on April 30 declared Officer Miller innocent of any wrongdoing in the death of Ronquillo. The District Attorney's office, which investigated the matter for the Grand Jury, had recommended such a verdict.

Lindros told the commission that the District Attorney's office gave him full cooperation in looking into the details of the first investigation.

Commission Chairman Turk also said the suspension of Officer Miller, or his reassignment, would also be recommended pending any further investigation of the shooting.

The Human Relations Commission was asked to act on the shooting by Mexican-Americans from Santa Ana who were friends and relatives of the dead youth. They handed the commission a petition signed by 315 people, asking for another Grand Jury investigation.

More on Watergate?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Hank Greenspan, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun, said Saturday an unsuccessful attempt was made last year to jimmy his safe, which held material pertaining to Sen. Edmund Muskie. "Whether it was related to the Watergate thing, we have no way of knowing," Greenspan said after his return from a two-week trip to the British West Indies.

In New York, the stock market took a sharp tumble in moderately active trading and the Dow Jones averages for 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 14.07 points in the first hour and a half of trading.

U.S. tourists joined the stampede to buy gold.

"People with surplus dollars are getting out of the currency into gold," said Dennis Selby, chief bullion dealer for the London gold brokerage firm of Johnson Matthey, Ltd. "Watergate has left the political situation shaky in the States and

By late afternoon the price of gold shot this has put pressure on the dollar." up to $106.17 on the French commercial market — up more than $7 from Friday's close of $98.83.

"I think the reason for the rise in the price of gold is because of reports in the press that there is an impending financial crisis," Emanuel Brunoff, a French gold broker, said.

Asked if he believed the rise in the price of gold could be related to the Watergate scandal in the United States, Brunoff said: "In my opinion, I don't think it could be connected."

The metal's price was fixed at $102.25 an ounce on the big London free market in the second of the twice-daily price fixings. This was $2.50 higher than the morning price, $5.60 higher than Friday's closing price and more than double the official U.S. gold price.

Another gold source said: "Many foreign buyers are afraid of a new monetary crisis. For this reason they are going in great numbers to buy as much gold as they can afford."

Other European brokers and currency dealers also linked the gold rush and renewed pressure on the dollar to the resurgent furor over alleged White House involvement in the bugging of the Democratic Party Washington headquarters.

Former Mayor's Son Assaulted By Home Intruder

Walter Evans Sr., a retired San Clemente contractor and son of a former mayor, was assaulted by an intruder over the weekend, but escaped with minor injuries, police said today.

Evans was struck in the stomach and face by a young man who entered the family home at 131 Avenida Mateo early Sunday morning.

Police said the incident occurred at about 2:40 a.m. when Evans' granddaughter, Angela Renee, 14, was awakened by a man who had grabbed her ankle as she slept in the den.

The intruder assertedly asked, "Where's Jim?" after awakening the girl. The granddaughter screamed and the intruder began to run from the house.

Evans, 68, tried to intercede, but was struck.

Yorty, Bradley Clash Over Oil

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Sam Yorty and City Councilman Tom Bradley challenged each other on coastline oil drilling and development in the Santa Monica Mountains in their Sunday televised debate.

The mayoral candidates avoided the personal attacks which occurred during their encounters the previous week.

Yorty criticized Bradley for opposing coastline oil drilling during an energy crisis.

Gunman Holds 2 Hostages Atop Fuel Tank 'Bomb'

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

John Murphy, a supervisor for Lockheed, said Abernathy drove to the Lockheed tank farm facility about 4 a.m. and captured the two men. A spokesman for the Multnomah County sheriff's office said shots were fired then, but no one was hurt.

Efforts were made to drain the tank through underground hoses but they were not successful.

Dalling told Murphy: "He ain't listening to nothing."

Abernathy's ex-wife, Nancy, and his children live in Bellingham, Wash., 250 miles north of Portland.

Efforts were being made to bring her to Portland.

A woman friend of Abernathy's also was being taken to the scene to see if she could talk him into surrendering.

The sheriff's office said Abernathy spent four months as a patient of the Veterans' Administration Hospital crisis clinic in Portland several months ago during divorce proceedings.

The fuel tank where Abernathy was holding hostages is some distance from the airport terminal and is surrounded by open fields. The main street running nearby, Marine Drive, was closed to traffic.

Townhouse Fire Blamed on Kids With Incense

Childish curiosity about incense today was blamed for a Sunday fire which caused an estimated $17,500 in damage to a Walnut Square townhouse in Irvine.

Orange County fire investigators said the fire was at the home of Mrs. Judy Wagner, 14564 Oval Road, Irvine. The blaze destroyed a downstairs bedroom and resulted in extensive smoke and water damage to the home. No one was injured.

Fire Prevention Capt. Carl Wolf said firemen controlled the blaze within 20 minutes of the 9:56 a.m. call. Units from three Irvine stations and the Red Hill station of the county Fire Department responded. Wolf said there was no structural damage to the condominium structure valued at more than $100,000.

Wolf said Mrs. Wagner's children admitted to having played with the incense in the downstairs bedroom. The blaze "cooked" for nearly five hours before it was discovered by family members, he said.

Newport Officer Discovers Body

A Newport Beach policeman checking a report of a suspicious person in a car parked at the Fashion Island shopping center Saturday discovered the body of a Santa Ana woman who had apparently taken her life.

Patrolman Ron Rodgers noted 14 prescription drug vials were found with Margaret E. Jones, 45, who lay on the back seat with the car radio still playing.

A note explaining despondency over ill health was turned over to Orange County coroner's deputies by investigating police officers.

4 Possible Prosecutors Identified

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliot L. Richardson today identified the "list" for selection as special government Watergate prosecutor as Warren M. Christopher of Los Angeles, Judge William H. Erickson of Denver, former Judge David W. Peck of New York and Judge Harold R. Tyler, Jr., of New York.

Richardson gave the names to reporters during a break in Senate hearings on his nomination for attorney general.

He said earlier the White House passed him "two or three names" of possible choices but they were not among the last four.

Christopher, 47, a Democrat, is a former deputy attorney general, serving as the No. 2 man in the Justice Department from 1967 until 1969.

Erickson, 49, is a justice of the Colorado State Supreme Court.

Peck, 71, is a former New York State Appeals Division justice and is senior partner in a leading New York law firm.

Taylor, who observed his 50th birthday today, has been a member of the U.S. District Court in New York since 1962.

Richardson indicated he might name the special prosecutor by Tuesday. He has told senators he will give them virtual veto power over his selection.

On the third day of Senate hearings on his nomination to be attorney general, Richardson was asked by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.), whether he consulted with President Nixon or the White House in his search for a special prosecutor.

"No," Richardson said.

Then he added: "They passed me two or three names which they asked me to consider."

Richardson was not asked nor did he say who passed him the names or how it was done.

Richardson was nominated attorney general two weeks ago by Nixon and given "full authority" over the investigation of the Watergate scandal. In response to congressional demand, Richardson said he would name a special prosecutor and give him "complete authority" over all Watergate matters.

"No names suggested by the White House lasted as long as the final 10 or 12 names — not because they came from the White House but because I didn't feel they met my criteria," Richardson said.

Probe Continues Into Mysterious Death of Mexican

Coroner's investigators today are continuing the chemical analysis to determine the cause of death of a young man whose body was apparently dumped in a field in San Juan Capistrano last week.

And the probers admitted today the likelihood that the male Mexican in his mid 20s may have been an illegal immigrant who died from exhaust fumes in the trunk of a smuggler's car.

Traces of carbon monoxide have been noted in the remains, coroner's spokesmen said.

But a death certificate has yet to be completed and until the lengthy toxicological examinations are complete, an official cause will not be released.

So far, investigation has failed to yield an identity to the body.

School Budget Jumps

CUSD Officials Present Deficit Program

A proposed budget showing $13.5 million in anticipated expenditures and only $10.8 million in anticipated revenue will come before Capistrano Unified School District trustees tonight.

The administration's proposals for the fast-growing district represent an increase of more than $2 million over the current budget.

Assistant superintendent for business Sam Chicas said that he has prepared the document according to guidelines set by the board recently and he has figured in a proposed five-percent, across-the-board increase for district employees.

He characterized the increase as a cost-of-living raise.

And it is that expenditure which has sparked the increase in expenses.

Chicas said the most severe factor in the budget is the lack of reserves.

"We all know that a district can not run without reserves, and that will be the prime area of concern," he said.

The only way for trustees to come up with reserves will be for them to find the funds somewhere in the budget.

"The board asked us to give them an optimum document," Chicas said.

That being the case, it will be the trustees who will do the cutting in subsequent study sessions.

From this phase of preliminary budgeting, the board will gradually work up to a tentative budget early next month.

Further refinement will be required before trustees settle on a final document which is approved in the first meeting of August.

The budget is one of two major items facing the board at the session at 7:30 p.m. in Serra School auditorium.

Another issue deals with the fuel crisis and its effect on the district diesel and gasoline purchases.

Chicas will recommend the advertising for bids for the furnishing of fuel because the current contract with a supplier expires May 31.

"We have been assured of enough fuel to last the school year," Chicas said.

And he added that sufficient fuel might be available next school year, but the cost — because of the fuel crisis — will be higher.

Chicas added in a memo to trustees that if the problem worsens that modifications might have to come about in the district's use of fuel.

He said that an increase in the walking range of pupils, emphasis on conservation of fuel and other measures might be needed to cope with the dwindling supply of fuel.

High Court Rules Women Get Dependents' Benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court ruled 8 to 1 today that women members of the armed forces are entitled to dependents' benefits on the same basis as men.

The opinion brought the women's rights movement nearer than ever before to winning a high court ruling that sex is in the same "suspect" classification as race and alienage. The vote was 4 to 4 on this broad issue.

Governments have a harder time justifying laws which deny benefits to persons in "suspect" classifications.

because other justices voted in her favor on the basis of past decisions.

She sued to obtain benefits for her student husband, Joseph Frontiero, then attending Huntington College in Montgomery, Ala.

A man in the armed services has been getting housing and medical allowances automatically for his wife, whether he actually supports her or not, while the 6,000 married women must prove they contribute more than half their husbands' support.

The Administration argued that the difference in treatment between the sexes was justified by the need for efficiency in administration.

A special three-judge federal court upheld the statute.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. announced the court's judgment in an opinion which said America "has had a long and unfortunate history of sex discrimination."

"Our statute books gradually became laden with gross, stereotypical distinctions between the sexes and, indeed, throughout much of the 19th Century the position of women in our society was, in many respects, comparable to that of blacks under the pre-Civil War slave codes," Brennan said.

The opinion mentioned the Equal Rights Amendment, up for ratification by state legislatures, as evidence Congress itself concluded that classifications based upon sex are "inherently invidious."

Under the stricter standard of review required by the "suspect classification" test, Brennan found unconstitutional the law attacked by Lt. Frontiero. He was joined by Justices William O. Douglas, Byron R. White and Thurgood Marshall.

Those voting for Lt. Frontiero but on narrower constitutional grounds were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and Harry A. Blackmun.

Twenty-nine states have ratified the amendment, one or both houses of the legislatures in 14 states have turned it down, and one state — Nebraska — adopted it and then reversed itself. Approval of 38 states is needed to give the amendment the force of law.

Muckamuck Called Bad Porno Writer

PARIS (AP) — Oh, the shame of being called a mediocre pornographer after pledging as minister of culture to be a guardian of morality in literature.

Maurice Druon, appointed to the culture-watching job about two months ago, was called a failed pornographer in the satirical newspaper "Le Canard Enchaîné."

The newspaper printed extracts of a 1951 novel by Druon — "Rendez-vous aux Enfers," or "Rendezvous in Hell."

One extract was: "He spent a quarter of an hour undressing himself with perverse slowness, stopping to trace along the back of the old woman with a trained hand, dealing out his caresses, stopping them with sly and evil subtlety, then letting himself be caressed only to break away, to the point where Lydia was reduced to a state of total frenzy."

Other extracts were more explicit. Druon drew attention to himself in a recent interview when he said his ministry would show no sympathy for "apologies for the degradation of the human person" — in other words, pornography.

He is silent regarding his own past writings.

18 Pups Enough For St. Bernard

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lady Samantha's owners don't know if it's a record, but they want to make sure she doesn't top her performance of giving birth to 18 puppies in a 20-hour period. All but two survived.

"That was just too many," owner Donald Huscher said Saturday of the 180-pound St. Bernard's activity. "She's tired, and she comes first. We'll probably fix her."

In the meantime, it seems doubtful that Sam will be meeting with Luke der Luderhund — Luke for short — the 200-pound proud pedigreed father.

Huscher, a self-employed paperhanger, said in about six weeks he and his wife Christine will sell the puppies and give a few to friends.

Rattlesnake Big Hit at Services

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — "We have a rattlesnake in that box. Amen," declared the visiting minister from Tennessee before he took the rattler in his hands and prayed at the Chapel of Jesus church.

When the box containing the rattlesnake was opened during the service in the little frame church, children sitting in the front pews scurried to the back.

Danny Smith of Morristown, Tenn., picked up the snake, held it by its middle and handed it to the Rev. Liston Pack of Newport, Tenn.

Pack told the congregation, "If a man became anointed with the spirit of God," he could pick up the snake without fear or danger.

While Pack displayed the snake, Smith rose and walked around the chapel, his head swaying.

He/She Crowned As Gay Royalty

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Lady Baronessa, a Chicago female impersonator who is hoping to eventually undergo sex change surgery, has assumed the crown of Miss Gay America with a pledge to work toward uniting gay people and "straights."

The 24-year-old Puerto Rico native, born Carmelo Santiago, succeeded Norma Kristie of Hot Springs, Ark., following three nights of competition involving 27 contestants from across the nation.

It was the second Miss Gay pageant sponsored by the Watch Your Hat and Coat, a Nashville club catering to the gay crowd.

JEAN ELIZABETH HUTCHESON SHOWS OFF NUDE SCULPTURES
Houston School Art Show Banned Her Work as 'Too Sexy'

Sexy Artwork? Student's Sculptures X'd Out

HOUSTON (UPI) — Jean Elizabeth Hutcherson is a 17-year-old high school senior who is a little confused today.

"The teachers told me my work is on a college level and is not acceptable on a high school level, whatever that means," she said.

Jean did a pair of sculptures for a high school art show. One of the glazed statues depicts a nude embrace between a male and a female. The other showed a nude man, woman and child.

Jean worked for 70 hours — on school nights and weekends — to finish the works. She admits to being influenced by Michelangelo.

She said she took preliminary drawings of the sculptures to art teachers three months ago and they approved them.

"One art teacher said the reproductive organs of the males were too detailed," said Jean's mother, Hedy. "Another said the statues were too sexy."

Jean took her statues to the art show Saturday but was stopped from putting them on display by school officials.

"They are not appropriate because they are a bit advanced for this type of show," assistant principal Charles Vann said. "But they are very fine pieces of art work."

Jean's father was outraged. He parked his car across the street from the art festival and displayed the statues all day on the car hood for everyone to see.

FDA Probe Of Cereal Space Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced today that it plans to investigate why there is so much empty space at the top of your cereal box.

The agency said that an 11-state survey two years ago showed that slack fill or empty space occupied 47 percent of dry dessert mix packages.

Mint candies, vermicelli products and spaghetti products had 29 percent slack fill; filled or iced cookies, 26 percent; cake and cookie mixes, 18 percent; corn breakfast foods, 12 percent, and oat breakfast foods, seven percent.

"It is impossible to tell from this early information how much of the slack fill is useful and necessary and how much, if any, is nonfunctional," said acting commissioner Sherwin Gardner.

A study scheduled to begin in July will attempt to determine how much settling is unavoidable and how much protective packaging is needed, he said.

The survey indicated that some samples may have contained less food than the label indicated, Gardner said.

States chosen for the survey are Alabama, Florida, Idaho, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, Wisconsin and Washington.

'32 Duesenberg Fetches $87,500 At Auto Auction

A Florida man topped all bidders at Saturday's glamour car auction in Buena Park when he agreed to pay $87,500 for a 1932 Duesenberg Model J Dual Cowl Phaeton.

Ray Luggart, a contractor, won over two other classic car bidders to take the vehicle that one sale official said brought the fourth highest price ever paid at a car auction.

The Duesenberg Phaeton is just one of 250 cars — which may have a total value of $3 million, according to their owners — that are up for bid at the auction that began Saturday and continues today beginning at 10 a.m.

The event is being held at the Movie World Cars of the Stars and Planes of Fame in Buena Park.

Pot Priorities

State Sets Fight On Berkeley Law

BERKELEY (UPI) — The State of California will go to court this week seeking to strike down a pro-marijuana vote by the electorate of the city of Berkeley that has led to pot smoking by spectators at a city council meeting, with no arrests.

LAST MONTH the voters practically abolished arrests for use or possession of marijuana.

State Attorney General Evelle Younger responded by getting a court order maintaining the laws against the use of marijuana.

The situation was similar to that of Ann Arbor, Mich., home of 34,000 University of Michigan students, where the city council last year adopted an ordinance with much the same purpose.

Marijuana use is still illegal there, but the penalty hardly makes an arrest worthwhile. Offenders can be given a maximum fine of $5 to be mailed in like a parking ticket.

THAT LEFT the Michigan state police, however, with the power to make arrests under state law which carries $100 fines and 90-day jail sentences.

In Berkeley, site of the University of California, the electorate voted 60.8 percent in favor of an initiative requiring approval by the city council before an arrest can be made for marijuana use, possession or cultivation.

Such a cumbersome procedure makes arrests unlikely.

The required approval would have to be voted at Berkeley council meetings often attended by as many as 200 raucous youths — all smoking pot.

POLICE HAVE refrained from busting the council meetings.

On May 2 the council voted to direct the police to abide by the newly adopted initiative, and the next day the attorney general went to court.

"The Berkeley Marijuana Initiative is not a 'municipal affair' but a subject matter of field of legislation which has been fully occupied by the State and there is no room for supplemental or complementary legislation," Younger's brief said.

Besides, he said Berkeley police have "a mandatory duty" to make arrests under marijuana warrants issued under stiff state laws.

SUPERIOR JUDGE Lionel J. Wilson issued a temporary order against enforcement of the initiative and set May 17 for further hearing.

The city council, advised by the city attorney that the initiative is invalid, hired a private attorney to argue in court for the initiative.

Berkeley Police Chief Bruce Baker long has made marijuana arrests "low priority."

Mostly, pot arrests were made when officers thought they could not avoid them, such as when somebody filed a complaint, or in connection with an arrest for another offense.

WITH PASSAGE of the initiative, police officer Richard Berger said, "We will continue to make arrests if officers trip over the stuff, or if it is dragged across their path."

Long Beach Woman, 41, Bludgeoned

LONG BEACH (AP) — A 41-year-old woman was beaten to death with a large glass ash tray by an intruder as her five-year-old daughter watched in horror, police said.

Investigators said Michiko Zermeno died of massive bludgeoning sometime Thursday, but her body was not discovered until Friday because the little girl, Allison, was frightened and hid inside the house until a neighbor came to inquire. Allison was also beaten, though not seriously, police said. She was treated for shock and scalp wounds and is reported in fair condition.

Tycoon Miffed Banner Threatens Donation

PASADENA (UPI) — Oil tycoon Ross McCollum says he still plans to donate $1 million to Cal Tech, and only meant to "shake up" the campus by threatening to withdraw the gift because of an "impeach Nixon" banner atop a dormitory.

McCOLLUM, PRESIDENT of National Oil Co. and longtime trustee of the California Institute of Technology, said he was sitting down to morning coffee a week ago when he saw the "impeach Nixon" banner printed in a Pasadena newspaper.

"That picture is going to cost them $1 million," the oilman and ardent supporter of President Nixon said at the time.

Contacted Friday, McCollum said he wasn't sorry for his spontaneous reaction but had cooled down since then and would still contribute the $1 million gift to the famed engineering school.

"CAL TECH'S A good outfit, the best really," said McCollum, "and I never really considered not giving them a dime. But the students who pulled this kind of monkey business just dragged the school's name down the gutter."

times a day by swift and treacherous currents heading in and out the Golden Gate 2½ miles distant.

Five of them were shot to death and 12 were recaptured before they left the island. Most who apparently got off the island-prison drowned, but in December 1962, John Paul Scott, 35, got to shore, the first escapee known to make it.

One of the more spectacular uprisings occurred in May 1946, when the three-day Battle of Alcatraz cost five lives and 15 wounded. Three convicts died in the battle and three later were executed.

MUCH LESS violent but highly publicized was the takeover of Alcatraz in 1969 by a band of 78 Indians who claimed the island belonged to them under an old Sioux treaty. The last of the Indians were removed in June 1971.

United Front Vital

With state legal action that could decide the fate of the proposed UC Irvine teaching hospital imminent, the Orange County Board of Supervisors has postponed action in support of the project.

UCI Chancellor Daniel Aldrich was scheduled to appear before the board this week to ask the supervisors to adopt a resolution, supporting the hospital and the university's proposal to divert $7 million of its bond money to upgrade the badly deficient Orange County Medical Center. But the presentation was postponed to give the county and the university time to refine details of the agreement.

With the postponement, Supervisor Ralph Clark moved in with a "counter proposal" suggesting that the university buy the Medical Center and upgrade it as a teaching facility.

This conflicts directly with recommendation of a $100,000 county health care study prepared for the supervisors almost a year ago, which considered, among other alternatives, selling OCMC to the university, but dismissed this as uneconomic for the taxpayer.

The study recommended that the county upgrade the Medical Center and continue to operate it. Questioned as to the apparent conflict, Supervisor Clark's executive assistant said he had not even read the study.

Clark's maneuver, coming as it does in the face of the facts of the county's own study, has no validity. It is nothing more than a political move apparently designed to stall supervisors' consideration of the problem which has been before them now for several months.

Clark's "proposal" shot through with misleading statistics and actually false information, conveniently overlooks the fact that it would cost the university — and the taxpayers — more to produce a good teaching hospital under his proposal than to start from scratch.

Clark's "proposal" serves no real purpose other than possibly to buy maneuvering time for those like Assemblyman Kenneth Cory and private doctors involved in proprietary hospital ownerships who would prefer to fight their battles in Sacramento.

When voters approved a $155.9 million bond issue for statewide UC health science services last fall, it was with the tacit understanding that $37 million of the bond money would be earmarked for UCI, to enable the medical school to double its doctor training capacity. The original plan was to use $12 million for a medical science classroom building and $25 million for a 250-bed on-campus teaching hospital.

At the same time, the university planned to utilize some 300 teaching beds at OCMC where, it was hoped, the county would make a long-overdue investment to upgrade the facility as recommended.

The plan sounded valid enough, but roadblocks soon appeared. Some county officials thought they saw an opportunity to hijack the bond money for a complete refurbishing of OCMC. Some private doctors and owners and investors in private hospitals were concerned about losing patients or prerogatives to a UCI hospital and an upgraded OCMC.

By the time the Joint Legislative Committee on Teaching Hospital Siting opened its hearing in Orange County, many doubts had been raised, and not much support mustered for the UCI hospital.

Now the university has offered a plan that would reduce the campus hospital to 200 beds and release $7 million of the bond money for improving OCMC by reducing its 515 beds to a good 315-bed central county facility. This combined move would eliminate the argument that a new UCI hospital would contribute to over-bedding.

The new proposal has wide county support, including official resolutions from 12 city councils and from numerous citizen organizations. To this should be added the voice of the supervisors. Time is of the essence.

If the county presents a united front with the university, there is a good chance the university's valuable medical school will remain in Orange County. In order to remain, it must have an on-campus teaching hospital in addition to teaching beds at the Medical Center.

If this is denied, or if the funds finally made available are inadequate for a first-class installation, the University regents and the legislature could find ample justification for moving the medical school to another, more receptive area.

It shore is good to be in the mainstream of America.

Parole Policies Getting Tougher

After several years of messing around on the fringes of sociology, the state Adult Authority is becoming tougher and more conservative about paroling prisoners.

Joseph Spangler, the Authority's executive director, puts it this way:

"We are taking a closer, more careful look at those prison inmates who are legally eligible for parole. If it's a case of reservation — not being certain or convinced — then the decision goes to the safety of the citizen on the street, and not so much to the prisoner, as has been the case in the past."

Spangler confirms that the board is tightening conditions of parole that had been broadened in recent years.

"Some who might have been paroled a few years ago, the board — based on experience and looking at such cases — now find just not safe to let out."

IN THE PAST, he admits, the parole board adopted a less severe posture based on pressures from the Dept. of Corrections and others to experiment with new programs. Some of those programs have not worked. They are being dropped.

Several legislators — namely Senator Bill Richardson (R-Arcadia) and Assemblyman John Briggs (R-Fullerton) have also persistently pressed for tighter parole procedures.

ARE THERE some legislators not so concerned about public safety? Even to the point of taking chances when releasing prisoners?

Spangler replies that there are some who do not believe anyone belongs in prison. Some legislators who feel that being locked in prison is damaging and not helpful; that prisons do not rehabilitate.

The first purpose of prison, of course, is to protect the public. Rehabilitation comes second to that.

"The Dept. of Corrections has some of the finest rehabilitation programs in the world," asserts Spangler. "But the inmate has to take advantage of them. Some do, some don't."

THE PAROLE board is also requiring more precise and stringent reports on those prisoners already on parole: requiring more complete reporting of the parolee's behavior than in the past.

"We had eliminated 'association' as a condition of parole. So, when a parolee associated with another individual for illicit or illegal purposes, that was not a reportable item. Now it is."

One problem the parole board faces is that state prisons now contain a tougher population.

"Ten years ago," recounts Spangler, "16 percent of the prison population was for armed robbery. Now that's between 35-40 percent."

"You add to that the homicides and the assaults with a deadly weapon and rape by force and violence and burglary in the first degree — and that gets you up to 60-70 percent of the total prison population."

"Many of them are repeat, multiple, offenders. The board is having difficulty finding prisoners it can release — because its principle concern is public protection."

AS A RESULT of the Authority's tougher stance, there are between 1,000 and 1,200 more prison inmates than the Dept. of Corrections had anticipated. Recently, a budget augmentation of $6.5 million was requested.

Several prisons that were being closed or phased back will probably be revitalized. The Conservation Center in Susanville will be used as a special vocational training institution. San Quentin's south block will be reopened and the planned 1975 closure of that facility probably delayed.

So much for one experiment in sociology. Now back to the proper business of penology: to protect the public, to punish the criminal, and to rehabilitate the convict.

Practice Hits Poor, Elderly Excessive Drug Charges

non-brand names? Answers the Nelson study:

"THE PURCHASE of prescription drugs by 200 million people in the United States is controlled by 200,000 physicians . . . $5,000 is being spent each year on each practicing doctor to persuade him to prescribe brand-name products."

"Since in most states no other brand of drug can be legally substituted for another, if the doctor prescribes a brand-name drug, competition has been eliminated." In other words, the drug-gists have no choice.

Sometimes, Nelson found, Americans pay almost three times more for their drugs than foreigners pay for the same drug produced by the same companies. Prices are based, according to the study, on what the "traffic will bear."

Nelson's 40-drug study shows that Bristol-Myers, for example, charges U.S. wholesalers $35.16 for the same antibiotics that the company sold for only $17 for overseas use. And a 500-pill lot of Travenol's Synthroid costs $6.28 in the U.S., only $2.44 overseas.

EVEN MORE outrageous is the way the companies jack up the prices of brand-name drugs. For the drug Peritrate, produced by Warner-Chilcott, aging heart patients must pay $62 for 1,000 tablets at many drug stores. The non-brand equivalent sells at the same drug stores for only $2.91.

Ciba's Serpasil, widely used to reduce hypertension in the aged, sells at $65.83-per-thousand at the drug stores. Its non-brand competitor, reserpine, costs $2.25. As evidence that Ciba could make a profit at the lower price, Nelson reports the company once offered the same drug to the Defense Department in mass quantities for a mere 60 cents per thousand.

Museum Dealings Debase the Arts

SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Why would the Museum of Modern Art in New York want to buy an ancient Etruscan vase for $1 million, when it knows perfectly well that most ancient art offered for sale here is either smuggled or stolen?

Why do any of these shenanigans have to do with the spirit and expression of art and the men who created these lovely objects — all the dirty deals and evasions and half-truths. And surreptitious financing through dubious intermediaries?

Nothing at all to do with art. Nothing to do, even, with public appreciation: a skillful copy of the Etruscan vase would give the average museum-goer just as much pleasure (or boredom) as the real thing. Only an expert could tell the difference, anyway.

But it has everything to do with greed and vanity and publicity and the whole foolish and pretentious "culture establishment," which batters off the artists and turns the esthetic pursuit into something as sordid as a pawnshop.

EACH MUSEUM wants the finest collection it can get, and will try to get it by any means that permit the directors and curators to close their eyes to the scarious facts of illegality, piracy, or customs evasion. It is a high-level game, played for prestige in a closed circle of collectors and museums, and art itself runs a poor last.

Such goings-on debase, rather than elevate, the pursuit of art; they turn art into a mode of merchandising, a capital asset, a form of equity that hedges against inflationary tendencies. And the poor devil who painted it, or sculpted it, or potted it, most likely went to his grave for want of a dish of bean soup and a slice of fresh bread.

This is not "bringing culture to the people"; this is not "evaluating public taste." It is dragging art down to the level of the pander and the pawnbroker, the fat and greasy middlemen who might as well be dealing in lard futures as in Goyas or Titians.

SUCH EXHIBITS do not persuade the public that art is a lofty and necessary calling in a civilization — but only that artists are fools to work so hard for so little, while the noncreative vultures gather up the loot. It reinforces our native conviction that art is a toy for the rich, and it is far better to get rich and collect it than stay poor and make it.

The whole system of collecting and storing and exhibiting art needs a drastic, and wholesome, overhaul. Its entire approach smells of gross possessiveness rather than of reverential appreciation; it violates the very "cultural" quality it pretends to honor; and by its squalid competitiveness to get its grubby hands on more and more, it merely testifies to its own spiritual unworthiness.

Occasional Beheading Helps Strengthen the Throne

WASHINGTON — The Second A.J. Liebling Counter-Convention began here in a happy bath of booze, amity and self-satisfied anti-Nixon one-liners.

The slogan is four more years with two off for good behavior," one reporter said to another, who replied that she had heard "Truman Capote is writing a new book about Watergate. He's calling it 'In Cold Cash.'"

Dick Tuck, the Democrats' merry prankster whom the Republicans erroneously but flatteringly blame for introducing dirty tricks into national politics, announced that "Charlie Manson has issued a statement asking that we don't pre-judge the President," while someone else predicted that the Nixon Memorial Library would be moved to Fort Leavenworth. In the game of Can You Top This? another put in that Mitchell is so important they're only going to let him make license plates with low numbers," to which Tuck rejoined that the New White House password is

"Pardon . . . me," and everybody laughingly agreed that "Nixon's The One."

Liebling II is sponsored by (MORE) the journalism review based in New York which tries to keep us in the commercial media reasonably honest and accurate. On other days the younger, farther left and less compromising, participants would have been counter-conventioning against the American Society of Newspaper Editors concurrently meeting uptown at another hotel. But not in this year of Watergate. The younger ones were so well pleased by the performance of their rich elders that they invited to appear on their program editors from the Boston Globe, the Chicago Sun-Times, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the New York Times, and above all, the Washington Post.

THE FIRST CREDIT for breaking the biggest newspaper story any of us are likely to see goes to Post reporters Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward with their immediate editor, Barry Sussman; the second credit goes to the paper's maximum editor Ben Bradlee and publisher Kay Graham, who stuck by the story through the months when all they were getting was abuse from Ron Ziegler and silence from most of their brother media executives.

But at the (MORE) party all of us Post Toasties were swelling up in the cream of their accomplishment. Even we cornflakes who had nothing to do with it know that inside our cereal box is the Breakfast of Champions. Why even the copy boys over at the office are walking around with a little extra swagger. The place looks more like a television studio than an inky newsroom.

Just to work for the Washington Post is to get interviewed by an electronic correspondent from Japan or Germany or Iowa. The office joke is that Bernstein and Woodward have two sets of desks, one where they interview various Federally employed crooks, and one where they get interviewed on how they do it. It is a unique and high moment in American journalism, and anyone lucky enough to have any connection with it can't help but love it, and snap, crackle, pop with pride.

THE BRITTLE HOSTESSES from New York, the out-of-town free lancers, the hopeful young ones looking for a job, the reporters, the wits, the journalistic groupies, and substantial editors, all who'd come to drink at Liebling II were trying to guess what's next. The town is alive with one rumor, that they're even calling up from the Senate trying to confirm the talk that The Post is getting ready to bust the ultimate and last story, the big mega bombola that would pin everything personally and incontrovertibly to Nixon.

Whether or not that story is ever to be, some future events are more discernible. One is that television news, which has played such a small part in Watergate till now, is warming up its cameras for the Ervin hearings. This will put the story of White House crime in every living room in America, provided the networks don't back off and harken to the cries that the media must now join in the cover-up it exposed to save the Presidency.

The fear is growing among Washington's monarchists that if the entire public ever finds out all the facts the demand for impeachment and decapitation of the royal head may prove irresistible. History, however, teaches that an occasional beheading not only strengthens the throne but instructs future occupants in manners and humility. Conceded it didn't work so well with the French Bourbons, but you can argue that if Charles I hadn't had a good chopping Elizabeth II would not now be reigning.

Whatever the outcome, the Presidency is in no danger, and least of all from the citizenry knowing what the President may have done. In fact, administering the coup de grace to the wounded, baleful bull in the White House may further orderly government. One of the reporters at the party said he'd just come from covering a Baltimore bank robbery trial where the defense lawyer sought to discredit the testimony of an FBI witness by asking the jury, "After what we've learned about the FBI role in Watergate, can you possibly believe this man?"

Confusion over who must file environmental impact reports on new construction projects and where they're to be filed ended last February when the Reagan administration issued guidelines for the reports.

But a new round of hassles may begin shortly.

The lawyers responsible for last fall's "Friends of Mammoth" decision by the

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FOCUS

California Supreme Court say they're convinced the guidelines released by State Resources Secretary Norman B. Livermore are illegal.

IT WAS THE Friends of Mammoth decision which extended the requirement for impact reports to private developments as well as publicly-financed ones.

The environmental attorneys aren't quarreling with the exemptions — Livermore's guidelines allow — for motels and apartments with less than four units, all single-family residences when built as lone units and stores and restaurants designed to accommodate less than 20 persons.

What they're arguing with is the "sweetheart reports" they claim the new guidelines allow.

UNDER PROCEDURES which took effect April 5, cities and counties review environmental reports prepared by developers.

"That's invalid under the 1970 Environmental Quality Act," attorney Carlyle Hall of the West Los Angeles-based Center for Law in the Public Interest claimed in an interview. "Livermore is completely off base."

Hall, who argued much of the Friends of Mammoth case before the state Supreme Court, said the law actually requires local governments to prepare the reports themselves, not just review them.

JOHN C. McCarthy, the Pomona lawyer who represented the conservation Friends of Mammoth organization in its Mono County case, agrees. He contends reports prepared by developers on their projects "are not fully informative of the effect the development will have on the community."

As a result, Hall said, "We're considering right now whether we'll bring suit against these guidelines." He indicated any action probably would be filed before June.

If that lawsuit were successful, it would cause fundamental change in the way the impact studies are prepared and handled.

Currently, most reports are made up by outside consulting firms under contract to developers.

MANY SOUTHERN California cities and counties have created special departments solely to evaluate these reports, but the local governments have no voice in deciding who will actually prepare them.

"The law says a developer can submit a draft environmental impact report to a local government," Hall said. "But it doesn't relieve the agency of the need to do its own afterward."

If the planned suit by the ecologists succeed, many more local governments will have to set up impact-report offices.

But that doesn't mean they'll actually have to make the reports.

Grand Canyon Getting Deeper

Three out of every four men who buy boats buy more boats... That word "insolent" used to mean nothing more than "unusual"... Costs a little less than a penny to make a dollar bill... Report is that Grand Canyon gets an inch deeper each year... More things have been bought with shells than with any other money.

Supermarket managers in West Germany's Stuttgart charge a shoplifter the equivalent of about $6 before they turn said thief over to the lawmen. Money goes to pay the salaries of the store detectives. On the most practical theory that such costs ought not be passed along to the customers, interesting notion.

Did I mention a turtle lays eggs at the rate of about five a minute?

LOVE AND WAR — Among 30-year-old men, it's the never-married bachelor who is most difficult to get into matrimonial harness. Or so says our Love and War man. He quotes statistician Edward A. Lowe as reporting the widower of that age is twice as easy to lead to the altar while the divorced fellow is four times as likely to go down the aisle.

Q. "Do chickens take naps?"
A. No. They rack up all the sleep they need in one long stretch every night. Cats take naps. Dogs, too. Likewise, cows, horses, sheep. Not chickens.

Q. "People of what country use the most drugs? I mean per capita?"
A. Denmark.

Q. "What countries have hot lines with the U.S. now?"
A. The Soviet Union, Great Britain, West Germany, France and Japan.

THE TRAINMEN — Anybody who owned a cart with flanged wheels could use the railroad lines in this country. Such was the case for about 20 years after the first of said tracks were laid out. As a consequence, some of those early trains crawled for hours behind slow teams. Got worse and worse, the feuding between the wagon haulers and the trainmen. The cow catcher on the front of the steam engine originated as a weapon. So snipers found work. Most dangerous job of all for awhile there was locomotive engineer.

WE'RE SURE PROUD OF OUR LITTLE CAR.

In Vega's first year, 1971, it was the Motor Trend Car of the Year. A singular honor, and the first of many.

Later that year, in the Car & Driver Readers' Choice poll, Vega was named "best economy sedan." It was the first time in the eight years of the poll that an American car had won in that category.

Last year Vega again emerged as the Car & Driver readers' favorite in the economy sedan category.

And in a nationwide survey of auto servicemen conducted by Motor Service and Service Station Management magazines Vega was considered to be the easiest subcompact to service.

Now, in 1973, two more big ones for our little one: Motor Trend named our Vega GT the Economy Car of the Year.

And Car & Driver readers, for the third year in a row, voted Vega, the "best economy sedan."

We appreciate all the honors, but we're really much more interested in your stamp of approval.

Please, stop by your local Chevy dealer's for a test drive.

MWD Disputes Water Cost Claim

LOS ANGELES — The Metropolitan Water District has challenged the accuracy of a "highly-publicized" survey indicating that the use of Colorado River water costs the average Orange County household an extra $227 a year.

Frank M. Clinton, MWD general manager, said the figure was at least four times too high.

THE $227-A-YEAR penalty cost estimate was the result of a survey made last year by the Orange County Water District. It was based on the assumption that a family of five uses two-thirds of an acre foot of water annually. (An acre foot is 325,000 gallons). The survey estimated that county homeowners spent $12.3 million a year for water softeners and additional cleaning products because imported Colorado River water is harder than water from other sources.

Clinton said that this ignored the alternative of building a central water softening plant at an annual cost for the entire county of only $1 million.

HE ALSO TOOK sharp issue with the survey's conclusion that Colorado River water shortens the life of piping and plumbing fixtures in homes and increases repair and replacement costs.

Clinton said the MWD had made its own study of piping and plumbing fixtures at Gene Village, the district's field headquarters on the Colorado River. He said the study was in complete disagreement with the material in the county water district report.

THE MWD STUDY showed that the average life of household galvanized iron piping using Colorado River water was 25 years

Lebanon Reported Quiet on Sunday

BEIRUT (UPI) — Members of Parliament today shunned a special session called to extend a state of emergency that was proclaimed at the height of clashes between government troops and Palestinian guerrillas. Beirut Radio said their absence meant an extension anyway, despite a halt in fighting.

There have been no reports of clashes in Lebanon since Saturday night and the armed forces have reported the country quiet since then. It was the first sustained peace since the fighting broke out May 2.

More than 300 persons, including soldiers, guerrillas and civilians were reported killed in the 11 days of fighting.

Where Does U.S. Waste Defense Funds?

"At all times we must be conscious of the money that we are spending and get the absolute maximum value for every dollar we spend," Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements has said. How well the Defense Department is doing that job is explored in this first of a five-part series from The AP Special Assignment Team.

By JEAN HELLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has asked Congress for nearly $35 billion to buy and build things next year. If next year is like last year and most years before that, almost a billion of those dollars will be wasted:

On weapons that won't work. On planes that won't fly. On ships that never sail.

Quite likely, those fiscal fiascos will be accompanied by cost overruns, production underruns and delivery delays that pour several billions more of the taxpayers' dollars down the defense drain.

IT'S BEEN like that for a long time, almost since man abandoned his horse and musket for airplanes and missiles, and weapons systems began their dizzying climb in complexity and cost. And sometimes outright waste.

For instance, the value of weapons programs simply abandoned, without any usable hardware at all to show for the time and effort, totaled $7 billion.

At current budget levels, that's enough money to run the city of Atlanta for 19 years, eight months, 24 days. Or Denver for 56 years, three months, seven days.

Government accountants recently completed an audit of 45 major weapons systems under development and found cost overruns of $31.5 billion — 39 percent — over original estimates. When overruns on spare parts and support equipment for those systems are included, the figure is closer to $35 billion.

Some contractors have been so eager for business that they deliberately bid low on projects just to win the contracts.

AND THAT'S enough to run the city of Indianapolis for 430 years, six months.

Some defense experts warily suggest there may be a light at the end of the tunnel.

Others say they've heard that line before.

"Our biggest problem is that we play games," says Gordon Rule, one of the Navy's top civilian procurement specialists and a frequent critic of procurement practices.

"The contractors play games with the Defense Department. The Defense Department plays games with Congress. I have grave doubts that anybody can stop it."

IN THE LAST few years, in an attempt to stop the games or at least to make them less horrible, the Defense Department has undertaken a major overhaul of procurement procedures. Nobody, not even the authors of the changes, is prepared to say at this point that things are all fixed up, but they say see improvement.

"I think some of the things we do now are better, but I would hasten to add that I'm sure they're not all they ought to be," said David Packard, deputy defense secretary during President Nixon's first term.

An Associated Press study of the nation's defense contracting practices — what Gordon Rule calls games — has found:

—Some procurement scandals of recent years resulted from what is now generally conceded to be a faulty buying concept initiated during the Kennedy administration. The concept, called total package procurement, was aimed at saving money. But it forced contractors to mass produce items at the same time the items were being developed. The result was assembly-line foupals the likes of which American industry seldom sees.

—The number of new defense and space projects has fallen off drastically in the past few years, slashing the business base of the nation's giant defense-aerospace industry. Some contractors have been so eager for business that they deliberately bid low on projects just to win the contracts. They knew from precedent that when their low bids got them into financial trouble, the Defense Department would bail them out.

—The Defense Department has begun a new policy called fly-before-you-buy, aimed at cutting costs and improving the end product. The Pentagon thinks it will work. Congress thinks it will work. The contractors think it will work. But nobody uses it.

In all, there have at least 39 major procurement projects killed in the last 10 years.

Many officials of the largest defense-aerospace industrial empires say they feel their industry is due for a shakeout. They say there is not enough business to sustain the dozen or so largest defense-aerospace companies and that through merger or bankruptcy or a combination thereof, some are going to have to go.

THE BASIC problem in the defense procurement process is that it doesn't operate very efficiently doing what sounds like a relatively simple job: identifying and defining a defense need and a weapons system to cover that need; amassing the technology the system requires; developing that system and then producing it.

Somewhere between the idea and the reality, somebody's been messing up.

Most visible among the messes are those $7 billion worth of programs the Defense Department has abandoned in the past decade. They included projects where the military finally concluded it couldn't get what it wanted, or couldn't make what it wanted work right, or couldn't afford the thing after it was developed.

"The most certain way to waste resources is to spend hundreds of millions of dollars on a development and then conclude that we will not need what we are developing," Packard said last year just before leaving office.

"IF A DECISION is made to develop either something that should not be developed or to develop something that cannot be developed, the program has a built-in disaster."

There was, for example, the Army's "weapon of the future," the Main Battle Tank, conceived in 1964 to be on one hand, simple and reliable, while, on the other hand, doing everything, everywhere, better than anything else of its kind. After spending $234.8 million, the army abandoned the General Motors-built MBT last year because it had become too expensive and too complex.

In 1966, the Army and Lockheed Corp. began developing the Cheyenne helicopter, designed to be an antitank weapon which could double as a means of providing close air support of ground combat troops. After six years and $400 million, that project was abandoned because the Cheyenne, packed with electronic gadgetry, antitank missiles, machine guns and armor, was too complex, too expensive and didn't work very well.

IN 1958, the Air Force proposed the B70 Bomber, intended to replace the B52. Congress wanted the plane and, in 1961, tried to speed up its development by North American Rockwell. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, feeling the plane wasn't immediately needed, tried to slow development. The compromise was to build two prototypes.

OCC Leader

William P. Lewis, Huntington Beach, pictured above, has been elected Orange Coast College student body president for 1973-74. He's a political science major. Dennis Sheehan, Huntington Beach, was elected student controller and Scott Beinfeld, Costa Mesa, was voted student advocate.

Hair Style Show Set By Campus

A hair styling show and competition by cosmetology students from 10 Southern California community colleges will be held May 19 at Golden West College. Nearly 50 students are expected for the show, sponsored by the California Associated Cosmetology Teachers, southern section. Representing Golden West will be Mmes. Sandy Bodager, Seal Beach; Peggie McCormick, Costa Mesa; Phyllis Mino, Huntington Beach; Midge Kincaide, Tustin, and alternates Ellen Moss and Linda Price, Huntington Beach. Stylists will be judged in four categories — quick service styles, day, evening and artistic styles. The first "comb out" will begin at 1 p.m. in the college center.

Boy Scouts Complete Long Jaunt

Nine Huntington Beach Boy Scouts and their adult leader recently hiked across the Grand Canyon, becoming the first party to complete the jaunt this year. The group, members of Troop 558, sponsored by the College View PTO, had to trek through five feet of snow during the five-day, 50-mile hike from the South Rim to the North Rim and back. The hikers included Assistant Scoutmaster Gene Hartnell and scouts Mike Coley, Morris Coley, Mark Davis, Rod Davis, John Gresham, Brian Hall, Randy Holmbeck, Bill Paul and Bob Zoellner.

Worker Hailed By Seal Beach

Owen Wilcox, a foreman in charge of vehicle and equipment maintenance for the Seal Beach department of public works, has been named city employee of the year by the City Council. Wilcox, 56, began working for the city as a mechanic in 1964. He and his family live in Buena Park.

2 Talent Agencies In Suits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A temporary restraining order has been issued against two talent agencies which allegedly made false and misleading promises to would-be models. Superior Court Judge Campbell M. Lucas set a hearing for May 18. The suits, against Michael Lee Degnan and his Wesley Dana Agency and Trident Enterprises, Inc. are the first to be prosecuted jointly by the state and city agencies under a new state law. The order prohibits the agencies from claiming that they are looking for models unless they have specific job opportunities or interviews available and orders them not to charge fees as a prerequisite for services.

Realty Rap

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The owner of a financial counseling firm has been charged by the California Department of Real Estate with selling real estate securities without the required permit. The claim is in an administrative cease-and-desist order issued against Arthur J. Groesbeck III, head of A.J. Groesbeck Financial Advisors Inc. and A.J. Groesbeck Associates Inc., which has sold partnerships in millions of dollars worth of apartment buildings. Griffin Properties Corp., another firm under Groesbeck's control, also was named.

Credit Ruling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Federal laws don't prohibit a bank from applying funds in a person's checking account toward payment of credit card debts, a U.S. District Court judge ruled here. Judge Stanley A. Weigel acted in the case of a Ukiah couple whose checking account of $163 was applied by Wells Fargo Bank toward their deficient Master Charge account without the couple's permission. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Jojola sued the bank in federal court after several checks they wrote after the bank transfer bounced because of insufficient funds.

Illegitimacy

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The legal concept of illegitimacy would be wiped out in California under a bill introduced by state Sen. Anthony Beilenson. Numerous sections of the civil code and sections of other state codes would be purged of references to "illegitimate" children under the Beverly Hills Democrat's bill. "Unfortunately, the concept of illegitimacy will probably be with us for some time, even if we pass the kind of remedial legislation which I am authoring," Beilenson said. "But it is important that we continue to rip away cruel and irrational legal distinctions which somehow suggest that in the eyes of the law one child is not the equal of another," he added.

Home Fires

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Mobilehome owners would be allowed to keep the home fires burning under legislation passed on a 70-0 vote of the Assembly. The bill by Assemblyman Eugene Chappie, a Republican from the mountain community of Cool, would make it legal to install and use fireplaces in mobile homes. The vote sent the measure to the Senate.

Ellen Sung of Huntington Beach won top honors in Bank of America's 1973 Achievement Awards, competing in science and mathematics. In all, four Huntington Beach and Fountain Valley girls placed in the competition, which drew 37 finalists from throughout Southern California. Miss Sung, 6101 Palisades Drive, won $1,000 for placing first in her category. She is a student at Marina High School. Christianne L. Geiger of Huntington Beach High School placed second in fine arts, winning $750. She lives at 8162 Burnham Circle, Huntington Beach. Karen L. Kagan, 9371 Cliffwood Drive, Huntington Beach, won fourth place and $250 for her achievement in vocational arts. She is a student at Edison High School.

Angry? Don't Drive

CHICAGO (AP) — A young man angry at the adult world is a good bet to indulge in dangerous driving, according to a University of Michigan researcher. "An aggressive style of living will be reflected in an aggressive style of driving," Dr. Donald C. Pelz said. "For the young male in particular, anger toward the people around him and toward the adult world into which he is striving to move, but which treats him as a child, is likely to find vent in dangerous driving."

PELZ, A social psychologist, reported on a study near Detroit of 1,700 men aged 16 to 24 and smaller samples of young women and older men and women. He and a colleague, Dr. Stanley W. Schuman, an epidemiologist, interviewed the subjects about driving behavior and personality traits. Pelz, program director at Michigan's survey research center, presented their findings at the University of Illinois school of public health. PELZ CONCLUDED also that hostility in young male drivers "tended to interact or multiply with their attitude toward the educational system." "Those who were angry and who had rejected the school system run by one set of adults, were likely to reject the highway system run by another set of adults," he reported. HEAVY DRINKING was found to accompany reckless driving but this was found primarily in those young drivers "who were strongly alienated or hostile."

Gasoline Shortage Top Fear

MENLO PARK (AP)—California faces the prospect of an energy shortage during the remainder of this decade, but it probably will be less severe than in the rest of the nation, a scientific report released here says.

"California faces its biggest fuel shortage in gasoline with additional shortages in low-sulfur fuel and electricity," said a report prepared by the Stanford Research Institute. To avoid shortages, the institute said the state should encourage rapid development of energy sources rather than impose arbitrary limits of growth on use of energy.

The report was the result of a five-month $75,000 study sponsored by five California power companies.

● Fish Permit

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Commercial herring fishermen in Tomales and San Francisco bays would need licenses which the California Department of Fish and Game could revoke, if it decides there are too few herring, under a bill introduced in the Assembly.

Assemblyman Bob Wood (R-Greenfield), said his measure would give the department, which backs the bill, the needed authority to police herring fishermen in the small fish's favorite West Coast spawning grounds.

Emergency legislation passed this year gave the department authority for 90 days to curb commercial herring fishing in the two bays if the species became endangered by too large catches.

● BART Grows

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) The Bay Area Rapid Transit District can extend passenger service to Concord May 21, the state Public Utilities Commission has ruled.

But the Concord operation must not merge into the present line between Fremont and Richmond, the PUC ordered.

Contra Costa County commuters using the new line thus will have to transfer at MacArthur station in Oakland if they wish to continue on the section opened last September.

● New Guideline

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Bay Area Pollution Control Board will have to rule on the acceptability of new, large, traffic-causing developments under new Environmental Protection Agency guidelines, a board official says.

Milton Feldstein, the district's deputy executive board officer, said the EPA is under court order to see that the new regulations, drawn by EPA last month, are carried out.

Under 1970 clean Air Act provisions, the board will have to discern whether auto traffic stemming from highway, shopping center, airport, residential project and sport center development causes air quality standards to be exceeded.

● Ban Opposed

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A ban against anchovy fishing in Northern California's Humboldt Bay between July 1 and Nov. 1 would be dropped under a bill introduced by a San Diego Democrat.

Assemblyman Peter Chacon said the measure, prompted by tuna fishermen in his district saying the ban forces them to travel long distances to get the anchovy they use as bait to catch tuna.

Chacon said he expects environmentalists to oppose the bill on the grounds the anchovy supply will be depleted and salmon will be caught up in nets along with the anchovies.

Pill Deaths Amphetamine Lethal

WASHINGTON (AP)—At least 18 persons have died and two persons have been blinded in the United States and Canada by a clandestinely manufactured amphetamine, the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs reports.

The drug, methoxyamphetamine, which first appeared in Canada in April, is sold as an amber or an off-white powder packaged in aluminum foil packets or gelatin capsules.

THE DRUG HAS been reported in Canada's major cities as well as in Georgia, Missouri, Kansas and North Carolina where it has been sold as MDA-methylenedioxymphetamine.

John E. Engersoll, BNDD director, said little is known about the effects of the drug on humans. However, it is believed to cause hallucinations and stimulation similar to amphetamines or its derivatives such as MDA or STP.

'Insult to City'

Spokane Singing Blues Over Song

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—It's one of those twangy country-Western tunes that you just can't help tapping your toes to.

But the Spokane City Council quickly soured on the "Spokane Motel Blues."

COUNCILMEN say the song — by Tom T. Hall — is an insult to the image-conscious city.

Expo '74 is just around the corner and Spokane has "spent literally millions of dollars here in a long-range program designed to attract visitors to the city," said councilman J. M. O'Brien.

And O'Brien says lyrics like, "The dogs are running down in Memphis. Them nags are running in L.A. I'm stuck in Spokane in a motel room. And there ain't no way to get away," aren't helping.

Their awards were among checks totaling $21,000 that were presented to Southern California students in Los Angeles last week, Bank of America officials said.

Girl Scout Workshop Scheduled

Six Orange Coast Girl Scout representatives will participate in a regional workshop on Mexican American - Spanish speaking girl scouting May 18 - 20 at Goleta.

School Vacation Foulup Unfouled

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A move to avoid a foulup of summer vacation at the end of the current school year has won 29-1 approval in the California Senate.

The measure, which went to Gov. Ronald Reagan's desk, allows local school districts to collect state aid for 175 days, even though the Jan. 25 day of mourning in the death of former President Lyndon B. Johnson cut the school year to 174 days.

Without the bill, school districts would have to tack on

She was one of two sixth-graders from the school who brought a petition urging approval of the design. The school principal and 35 neighborhood residents also showed up to give their endorsement.

● Rights Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A civil rights suit has been filed in U.S. District Court alleging that Hayward State discriminates against persons of Mexican descent.

Eleven persons and an organization brought the class action, specifying they want to be identified as "Chicanos" and claimed that Hayward State has for five years engaged in "willful, systematic discrimination against Chicano student applicants, students, employee applicants and employees."

It asked the court to order the defendants, State University and Colleges Chancellor Glenn Dumke, state college trustees and Hayward State President Ellis McCune to cease all racial and ethnic discrimination and abolish effects of past discrimination.

● Prof Upheld

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reinstatement plus $12,400 as a cash settlement has been agreed upon in the case of a history professor denied reappointment three years ago at Cal State Northridge.

Prof. Carl Winston Chrislock asserted he was not reappointed because of political activities, membership in a faculty union and disagreement with the history department chairman.

The college stated Chrislock was a poor teacher and had not finished work on his Ph.D., a usual requirement.

The settlement was announced by the university and the union, United Professors of California.

● Surplus Eyed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State Controller Houston I. Flournoy says California could save up to $300 million over the next two decades by using some of the state budget surplus for school construction.

The savings would come in interest the state will have to pay on bonds scheduled to be sold to finance school construction projects, the Republican official said.

He made the comments at a news conference called to tell reporters the state budget surplus is estimated at $750 million to $800 million, although that figure is tentative and may change in the next two months.

Rapid Transit Fund Use Draws Attack

Capitol News Service
SACRAMENTO — Officials of the Southern California Rapid Transit District are getting tired of the "whipping boy" role given them by central casting in the Legislature.

And leading man in this continuing melodrama seems to be Sen. Larry Walsh (D-Huntington Park) whose Select Committee on Public Transportation Problems in Los Angeles County traveled to the smoggy city last week for testimony from SCRTD officials on bad reviews from the state's auditor general.

IT WAS TO be the first of two such meetings, but the likelihood of a second conference is slim now that Walsh has introduced legislation to create a tri-county regional transportation district.

"We saw that there's not going to be any rapid transit district down there and that the whole SCRTD operation was an exercise in futility," says committee spokesman Bill Bronte.

An incensed Walsh threw up his hands in disgust when told by district general manager Jack Gilstrap that gas tax revenues — authorized by the Legislature last year for rapid transit development — would probably go into expansion of bus service.

GILSTRAP IS "working outside the limitations of the law," Walsh charged. He was not mollified when Gilstrap added that the district would like to transfer development costs of a new system to the Legislature.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The SCRTD, the Joint Legislative Audit Committee notes, has an "operating deficit accumulating at the rate of $2 million per month and has expended during its period of operation a total of $400 million."

Evan Bronte, a specialist in transportation economy, had a left-handed compliment for Gilstrap.

"I have to give him credit. Even though the district is held together with chewing gum and baling wire, I don't see how they can continue much longer without going bankrupt."

Frankly, neither does Gilstrap.

"DESPITE THE fact that we are constantly vigilant for economies and efficiencies," he told the committee, "we see nothing on the horizon that will lessen the need for public fund support."

"Urban public transportation has rapidly become a publicly-owned true public service across the nation. The user cannot bear the full cost of this service just as those who call for fire protection or police services cannot bear the full cost."

SCRTD officials also complained of restrictions prohibiting the district from chartered or sightseeing operations and the carrying of mail parcels or freight.

SAID GILSTRAP, "We cannot lawfully compete either with such profitable operations as the expedited service from various areas to our major airports. In short, our legislative act only permits us to operate urban type transit service from which no major transit operator is able to make a profit or even hope to break even."

Thomas Neusom, SCRTD vice president, found some solace in the auditor general's report which, he said, "demonstrates conclusively that we are carrying out the intent of the Legislature within the financial constraints under which we are required to operate."

Sen. James R. Mills (D-San Diego), who authored last year's bill to boost the transit system, was present as a guest of the committee. Although apparently surprised that SCRTD found a loophole to use the money to stay out of the red, Mills said he was not "especially opposed" to letting the agency run its maligned bus fleet.

WALSH'S SOLUTION is to divide the Los Angeles, Ventura and Orange County areas into nine wards run by a popularly-elected commission. The new district would assume the responsibility for development of a rapid transit system and all plans, studies and engineering data would be taken from SCRTD and transferred to the commission.

That commission would set a deadline for completion of planning and commencement of construction on the new system. In addition, that agency would be responsible for receipt and allocation of federal and state funds earmarked for rapid transit.

"I am convinced a vital first step which must be taken is the abolition of SCRTD," Walsh said.

A spokesman later noted that the legislation would not in fact wipe out SCRTD, but would restrict it to operation of a bus system only.

THERE IS bi-partisan support for the measure, the 27 co-authors breaking down to 15 Democrats and 12 Republicans. The concept has been under study since last December, Walsh's office reported.

It is expected to be assigned to the Senate Public Utilities and Corporations Committee, following a meeting of the rules committee.

In the meantime, proposal introduced in March to put SCRTD under the control of the board of supervisors is destined to die a slow, unnoticed death "under submission" in committee.

Happy Families Fill Her File

By JO OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Rita Thompson, a credentialled family counselor, has designed a test no one can fail.

Her Family Index, a 35-question copyrighted multiple choice "exam" is designed to help families in trouble find the sources of their conflicts and specific ways to resolve them.

No one can fail because there are no right or wrong answers. Every answer is different for different people taking the test.

Typical questions ask how a person pictures his family's reaction to different situations such as fighting or having fun together.

From an analysis of the answers, Mrs. Thompson offers help to individuals or the whole family if they wish it. Couples also may take the test and receive counseling.

Mrs. Thompson, a Newport Beach resident and graduate of the State University of New York, formulated the index as a tool to help families recognize stress points.

The questions came from her work as a counselor at El Modena High School and from talking to many couples, both happy and unhappy.

"Just talking with parents in the course of my job gave me lots of ideas," she said.

Mrs. Thompson also became interested in why different kinds of counseling didn't work. "When you're asking why, you're looking for ideas," she emphasized.

The holder of three counseling certificates, Mrs. Thompson believes counseling often misses the source of stress which may be within the living environment, a relative or friend. Her index aims at "something broader than generally is used."

Her specialty at El Modena High School, where she has worked for six years, is helping students get financial aid for "any kind of education beyond high school."

FROM EAST

It was an opportunity to work with outstanding people in the counseling field that brought her to California from her home state of New York, where she herself had a very happy childhood and home life.

"I was interested in families and their problems as a child," she said. "I was very happy and was very much involved in the school and community. I knew everyone. My parents were not overly rich — both worked — but we always enjoyed life."

Before entering college, she already was acting as a counselor by being a good listener.

Though her marriage was annulled, and she now is single, Mrs. Thompson is concerned with providing a high quality family life for her two daughters, Mary, 13, and Margaret, 12.

"We do a lot together," she explained. "We bicycle, walk on the trails around here, and there are so many activities around Southern California."

PLAY GAMES

They enjoy music together, forming a combo with piano, organ and guitar, and play games such as "Infuriation" together.

Mrs. Thompson also has invented two games for which she has submitted patent applications, and she enjoys baking and cooking. The family likes to sail but their boat is still in New York.

"The idea of doing something together means a lot," she emphasized, "even in man-woman relationships."

There is no such thing as a perfect marriage or family, she believes, so she won't be tied to labels.

"Each relationship is different. The secret is in learning to answer the need of another person, learning how and when and then doing it."

"One of the areas where humans make mistakes is in selecting a marriage partner. People who haven't had a good man-woman relationship have missed something very beautiful."

The same beauty is possible in a child-parent relationship, she believes. If there is stress, the key is to get immediate relief by setting up positive steps for solving the problem.

The index is her way of helping people enjoy life by "learning better ways of relating and understanding each other."

Living near the Back Bay is advantageous for Rita Thompson and her daughters Margaret (left) and Mary because they like to explore together. Their dog, John-John, often accompanies them.

Marriage Threatened

Big Problem Bared

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've written this letter 10 times, but this one is going into the mailbox. I'm terrified.

My husband has a Doberman Pinscher. The dog is nine months old and true to the breed — unpredictable and vicious. Last week that awful hound scared me out of my wits. Tony and I had an argument. It ended up with him slapping my face. The dog was right there — lunging at me. Luckily, I was able to escape to the bathroom and shut the door.

The next day Tony bragged to his friends, actually laughed about how he now has "protection." He is a heavy drinker — in fact, this is what most of our fights are about.

Last night Tony and I were fooling around and wrestling — all in fun. The Doberman came after me again. When her "master" commanded her to lie down she obeyed. I keep having nightmares that one of these days when Tony is drunk, or mad at me for some fool thing, he'll order the dog to tear me to pieces.

Do I have the right to demand that he get rid of that animal? He says he'll never do it. — SCARED STIFF

DEAR S.S.: Insist on a compromise. Tell Tony that unless he agrees to keep a muzzle on the beast when she is in your presence you will see a lawyer about separate maintenance. If he refuses, I hope you will go ahead and do it. That's no way to live.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a reply to the couple in Florida who think sex is responsible for all the evils of the world.

Dear J. and J.: Has it ever occurred to you that sex, like fire, needs to be harnessed if it is going to be used effectively for the purpose for which it was designed?

Fire and sex are two of the most powerful and indispensable forces on earth. Surely we would not condemn fire because some people get burned by it.

It is a pity that you cannot look upon sex as it was meant to be — a holy and complete union with your spouse. You have my heartfelt sympathy. — HAPPILY MARRIED AND CLOSE TO GOD IN LORAIN, OHIO

DEAR HAPPY AND CLOSE IN OHIO: Your letter contains sound logic and an excellent analogy. My thanks to you for writing and my warm regards to the people in Sweet Lorain.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 27, have never been married, but have been through a lot. A year ago I met Jack, age 35, divorced and the father of five children. The last two years of their marriage Jack's wife was sleeping with her boss. When she asked for a divorce, Jack assumed the boss was going to leave his family and marry her, so he agreed. He felt he had no choice.

I was sure that when Jack was free he would marry me, but I was wrong. Four months after the divorce Jack's wife called him to say things didn't work out and she wants him to come home.

So now he tells me they are going to be remarried because he misses his kids and he wants to be back in the good graces of his church. What kind of church will let a rat like that back in? What do I do next? — DAMNED PHOOL IN PENSACOLA

DEAR D.P.: Probably Catholic — which does not recognize divorce. In the eyes of the church Jack and his wife were never anything but married. As for what do you do next: For openers, take a pledge not to get mixed up with any more married men.

Is pot a drug? Can LSD and pills open new worlds for you? Stop guessing. Get the facts in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (16 cents postage) to Ann Landers, Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

EX-SADDLEBACK COLLEGE PITCHER JOHN WADE LIES HELPLESS ON THE FIELD...

Astonishing Victory

Riggs' Psych Job Helped Top Court

RAMONA, Calif. (AP) — It was a masterpiece of psyching an opponent into a state of complete shambles, and Newport Beach's Bobby Riggs, the hustler, could not conceal his pride.

"It was the greatest Mother's Day hustle of all time," exulted the little, 55-year-old manipulator, one of the last of a dying breed of sportsmen for whom the world is just one giant gaming table.

Riggs had just scored an astonishing 6-2, 6-1 victory over Margaret Court, the world's greatest woman player, in the so-called tennis Battle of the Sexes — one of the most bizarre of sports enterprises.

"Margaret Court is bigger, better, stronger and faster than I am," he said, gulping lemonade from an empty tennis ball can in a corner of the press room at the San Diego Country Estates.

"She is 25 years younger. She is the best woman player in the world, maybe the best who ever lived. Then why didn't she beat me?"

Riggs, his dyed hair disheveled and his horn-rim glasses hanging over his nose, paused to let his wisdom soak in.

"I'll tell you," he added. "It wasn't what somebody did yesterday. It wasn't what that person's potential may be tomorrow. It was how you do today — the biggest tennis match is all history, the whole world looking on."

"This is the spot for a clutch player, the money player. That's me. I'm no superman. I'm just a sloppy, municipal park player. But I'm the man for an occasion like this."

Bobby acknowledged that he'd been a hustler ever since he was a tyke in short pants turned into a fanatical win-or-else competitor by four older brothers.

"You might say I'm computerized," he said. "My brothers got me interested in games when I was three years old. It started with tops, then marbles, on to softball, baseball and finally tennis."

"If I won, I got to go to the movies. If I lost, I got a belt in the seat of the pants."

The preacher's son, who issued the $10,000 winner-take-all challenge, said that Mrs. Court, holder of 30 national singles titles and leading money winner on the Virginia Slims tour, was a victim of nerves.

"She was tight. She choked up. She played at least 25 percent below her regular form," he insisted. "It's easy to understand. She was carrying the banner for the whole women's lib movement. 'Please don't let that old guy beat you—you've got to teach him a lesson,' they said. Naturally, she panicked."

"I played only about 40 percent of my capacity," he added. "I didn't hit a stroke. I just kept pushing the ball back over the net — high shots, change of pace, shots not hard enough to break an egg — and waited for her to make a mistake."

"She got rattled a couple of times when I passed her as she came to the net. She served three double-faults. She started missing easy overheads. She is a better player. Her game just went to pieces."

Bobby intimated that he may have had something to do with Margaret's early collapse.

"I had been told she could get the center court jitters," he said, "so I kept impressing on her what an important match this was — much bigger than any Wimbledon. Then there was the question of the balls."

"I pretended I wanted the lighter balls. She hadn't thought about it but her advisors told her if I wanted the lighter balls she should insist on the heavy-duty balls. So we flipped. She won and took the heavy-duty balls."

"She would have had a much better chance with the lighter balls. She could have whipped them past me."

Smith Claims Better Status For U.S. Stars

DALLAS (AP) — The World Championship of Tennis finals proved three things Sunday: Stan Smith is the No. 1 player, Australian dominance in the sport may be taking a nosedive, and Arthur Ashe has to be the unluckiest person ever to lose $30,000.

Smith claimed the $50,000 first prize 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 from good friend Ashe, who had to settle for $20,000 and cheers from 8,500 fans in Moody Coliseum, who thought he was robbed in the 10th game of the deciding fourth set.

Ashe double faulted to make the crucial game deuce after a controversy on his first serve. Smith made it his ad on a ball many thought had bounced twice. Then Ashe clubbed a forehand too long on the match winner.

Slow motion replays of the double-bounce controversy showed the ball up when Smith returned the winner.

"I was glad to find out I did hit the ball on the first bounce," Smith said. "It would have been worse to win the match on an incorrect call than to lose the match for $50,000."

Ashe only half-heartedly played the point because "I didn't think he hit the ball on the first bounce. I just hit up a lob and asked the umpire Mike Blanchard if it was good. The television replay showed it was."

On the fault call, Smith said "I thought the first serve was out. One linesman said he didn't see it and asked help from the other linesman, who called it out."

Once the controversies were ironed out Smith, who played collegiately at Southern California and has now won $154,100 in his first year on the WCT tour, said "I feel comfortable in saying I might be the No. 1 player in the world now."

Australians Ken Rosewall, who won the first two WCT tournaments, and Rod Laver, twice the runnerup, were both ousted in the semifinals.

"Ken and Rod are getting along in age," said the 26-year-old Smith, who won Wimbledon in 1972.

"In a way, this may herald the end of the Australian dominance," Smith said. "There are so many good young players in the United States. Within 10 years, I'd say the U.S. may have 20 of the top 30 players."

The 23-year-old Ashe, a former UCLA star, agreed, saying, "We've got more people than Australia playing tennis who have more free time."

Smith's victory accomplished four goals he had set for himself. He said: "I wanted to be on a Davis Cup team that beat Australia; I wanted to be the No. 1 player in the U.S.; I wanted to win Wimbledon; and I wanted to become the best player in the world."

Lightning Bolt Kills Saddleback Pitcher

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. — A bolt of lightning, described as a column of fire two feet wide, hit and killed Saddleback College pitcher John Wade Sunday as he was winding up for a pitch during a semi-pro baseball game.

The bolt killed Wade, 19, instantly then forked out, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off his feet.

At least seven persons were injured. Two of them were reported in critical condition at Lake Havasu Community Hospital.

Lightning struck in the top half of the sixth inning as Wade, of the newly formed Lake Havasu City semipro team, was about to deliver a pitch to a batter from the Blythe, Calif., team.

The bolt made a loud clap and struck Wade on the head and burned off his hair, clothes and left shoe while it tore through his body.

"It's a shock to me, I just can't believe it," Saddleback College coach Doug Fritz told the Daily Pilot. "He was really an outstanding young gentleman and one of our top pitchers. He told me he was going to be back next season."

Mission Viejo High coach Harry Hilke echoed Fritz's thoughts. "If you said he was hit in an auto accident maybe I'd react a little differently. But lightning, it just doesn't seem possible," says Hilke.

Wade played baseball and football for Hilke in a three-year span. He was 9-0 as a freshman pitcher and was a star defensive end on an undefeated freshman football team.

Wade spent his senior season at Lake Havasu City High where he earned all-conference and all-state honors.

His parents moved to the Mission Viejo area during the summer of this year. Then just recently moved back to Lake Havasu.

Wade's sister witnessed the tragedy from the bleachers and raced to the mound where her brother lay, screaming, "My God, my God, my brother." She attempted to give him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation but he was already dead.

Wade's father was the base umpire and was standing near first base when the lightning struck. He was knocked to the ground but was not injured.

"It was like in one of those science fiction films where someone from outer space would shoot a ray of light at someone and he would disintegrate," said Glen Baker, a volunteer fireman who was watching the game.

"A cylinder of light came down and engulfed the pitcher," he said. "It looked like his whole body was just one big flash."

"It just vaporized the kid's clothing and what was left was in shreds," said an ambulance operator.

Then, according to witnesses, the lightning leapt from the mound like a star shell, first into the infield and then into the outfield, knocking everyone off their feet, and sending clouds of dust 100 feet into the air.

One of the injured, Vern L. Howk, 28, who was playing rightfield, spoke from a hospital bed, still in shock.

"I saw John wind up, then I heard a big boom and I was on the ground and I could barely see people coming out of the stands," Howk said. "Then I saw people crawling on their hands and knees toward the pitcher."

Witnesses said there had been a light rain falling at the time and previous lightning had been seen but was more than 15 miles away.

The other injured Lake Havasu players were third baseman Roger Lambert, 37; catcher Fred Grover Jr., 19; James Mitchell, 30, and John J. Chagdes, 39, an umpire.

Hospital officials said no one on the Blythe team was injured.

We Could Win It—Pinson

May Baffles White Sox on Six Hits, 3-0

Vada Pinson has been around the major leagues for 15 years — enough to qualify him as an expert on the subject of baseball.

Pinson lashed three straight singles Sunday as the California Angels blanked the Chicago White Sox 3-0 at Anaheim Stadium and was then asked to analyze the Angels.

"We are among the best," he replied. "We can stack up favorably with any team in the league and with our pitching staff and mental outlook we could win it." The pitching to which Pinson referred was on prominent display because of a gentleman named Rudy May.

May choked the Sox on six hits — three of them by Dick Allen — and posted his fourth shutout in five starts to give the Californians a split in their four-game series with Chicago and move them to within four games of the leaders.

"I've played on a loser all my life and it's no fun," May said after the zero job which increased his record to 4-2 and decreased his earned run average to 1.60. "In past years, the Angels have had a bad attitude and bad attendance. We're changing all that this year. Let's face it, we've got to do something to perk up the fans in Orange County and the best way to do it is to win."

May was asked about the possibility of winning 20 games. "I think I can," he replied. "In fact, I'm counting on it."

The Angels, now on a mini-win streak of two games, will be in Kansas City this evening to face the Royals in the first of a brief two-game series before they return to Anaheim Wednesday.

Bill Singer, 5-1, will duel the Royals' Dick Drago, 3-2, tonight.

California gave May the only run he really needed in the first inning when Pinson opened with a single off loser Rich Gossage, 0-2, and Sandy Alomar walked. Both men advanced on a wild pitch and Pinson scored on Bobby Valentine's sacrifice fly.

Jim Spencer's first homer in more than a year made it 2-0 in the fifth and the Angels added another run in the same round on a single by Rudy Meoli, a sacrifice and Pinson's run-scoring single.

"I think we have the ability to win this thing," said Pinson. "We've shown all year that we have the ability to come back and there is a good mental attitude on the club. We feel we're never out of a game until it's over."

Dodgers Take a Rest After Shelling Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants may well feel they can do without the virtue of giving.

The Giants distributed 31,626 caps to fans in Candlestick Park on Sunday — and then absorbed a 15-3 rout at the hands of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who pounded out two home runs, two doubles and four singles for nine runs in the fourth inning, a National League one-inning high this season.

It was the 12th win in the last 16 games for the Dodgers, who moved to within 4½ games of the NL West-leading Giants. The Dodgers meted out cavalier treatment to all four San Francisco pitchers, including Dave Kingman, who pitched the last two innings, striking out two batters, walking two, throwing two wild pitches and giving up a two-run single to Ron Cey.

The Dodgers were idle today but San Francisco traveled to San Diego to open a series with the Padres tonight.

Cey, who drove in 226 runs over two seasons with Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League, drove in five runs on four singles Sunday, despite coming into the game hitting .230.

"This was long overdue," Cey said. "I've driven in six or seven runs in a minor league game, but I wouldn't call that extraordinary."

The Dodgers also got four runs from Joe Ferguson, who now has a total of 27 to tie Johnny Bench and Bob Watson for the league lead; three runs from Davey Lopes, who hit a home run and a single in the fourth, and four runs from captain Willie Davis, who rapped out two doubles and two singles.

Willie Crawford and Steve Yeager — who was behind the plate for the Dodgers, while Ferguson played in the outfield — each had three hits. Ferguson said of the switch, "Playing out there gives me a rest, but I find the inactivity boring."

Ferguson, who was raised in the San Francisco Bay area, said his opposite-field home run off reliever Don Carrithers, was a special Mother's Day gift for his mother and "40 to 50 other relatives" attending the game.

Dodge's Sport Rallye Not Just Transportation Car

By CARL CARSTENSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

For people who take delight in shifting, cornering and handling a car, Dodge has introduced a new Sport Rallye coupe for the mid-1973 model year.

"In an industry-wide shift of many buyers away from the muscle or specialty compact car, there has been a trend toward the smaller, less powerful car which is both economical and fun to drive," said Robert Loomis, Dodge general sales manager. "And we think the Dart Rallye is just such a car."

LOOMIS SAID the trend by car builders and designers over the years has been to respond to buyer demands for comfort, safety, appearance, convenience, ease of operation and silence.

Today's cars are all of these desirable things — so much so, that there isn't much for the operator to do after turning on the ignition but steer and stay alert.

"For people who regard their car only as transportation, that's fine," Loomis said.

"But there always has been and still is a large number of so-called aficionados, whose greatest enjoyment from their car is in the very pleasure of driving," Loomis said. The name rallye identifies with this type of driving and thus the reason for the new Dart Rallye.

IT'S A FIVE-passenger coupe with small block 318 c.i. V-8 engine and a four-speed, close-ratio manual transmission with disc brakes included as standard equipment.

The Rallye package includes power steering, b e e f e d - u p suspension and deluxe vinyl inside.

This addition to the Dodge Dart line seems to offer an appealing alternate to competitive four- and six-cylinder cars both in budget and reduced operating costs.

★ Within the next two years, at least six rotary engine powered vehicles may be available in the U.S.

FROM ITS NEAR-curiosity stage just a few years ago, the Wankel engine seems to be becoming a household question. At this time only the Japanese import Mazda has a production model of the rotary in operation in the U.S.

Now, after much speculation, General Motors has announced that the engine will be available in the 1975 Chevrolet Vega.

A recent bank news bulletin indicated three more import cars also will offer the Wankel engine soon. Mercedes-Benz reportedly will achieve capability for mass production of Wankel engines within 24 months. The first application is expected to replace the 4-cylinder gasoline engines in the Mercedes-Benz 200 and 220 series cars.

★ THE DATSUN reportedly will offer its own Wankel powered cars in 1974. Another possibility is the French-built Citroën.

The financial news bulletin also said that while some industry executives still think the Wankel engine will prove to be something of a "flash in the pan," many parts and components makers are rushing to develop new products to replace those they now make.

Recent news items have indicated questionable characteristics of the rotary which add up to high maintenance costs and expensive repairs but it's far too early to tally the votes so this timely competitor of the standard combustion engine bears close watching during the next two years.

★ LARS J. LARSON parts manager at Johnson & Son Lincoln Mercury has been judged outstanding in customer service and sales and management ability and will receive Ford Motor Company's Silver Medallion Award.

The award is part of a program to honor dealership parts and service managers across the country.

Your Money's Worth

How to Handle Puts and Calls

By SYLVIA PORTER

Friday's column began this introduction into the "new world" of trading in puts and calls. Today's continues.

You have just paid $500 for an option to buy 100 shares of Ajax Mousetrap Co. stock at $50 a share any time in the next six months. You have bought this "call" on Ajax Mousetrap because you think the stock will jump to $100 a share within the six-month, 10-day period and you will make a lot of money on a minor stake.

Here are some of the things that then can happen to your call on Ajax Mousetrap stock.

(1) Ajax Mousetrap takes off as you anticipated and it hits $90 within the option period. Now you exercise your option, buy the 100 shares at $50, turn around and sell the shares you acquired at $90 on the open market for $90.

You have received $9,000 from the sale of the shares. From this subtract the $5,000 you paid for them, the $500 premium for the option and about $130 in brokerage commissions. You wind up with a profit of $3,370. (On a stake of $500.)

(2) NOW LOOK at another scenario. You buy the option and three months later, Ajax Mousetrap nosedives to $40 and stops there. What do you do? Nothing. You simply let the option expire and you are out $500. Your loss is limited to the cost of your option. And you thank your lucky stars that you didn't buy 100 shares of Ajax Mousetrap for $5,000 and watch your investment shrink to $3,000.

(3) Or say the price of Ajax Mousetrap moves up to $54. You decide to exercise your option because, even if you haven't made a profit, you can cut down on your option cost.

Here's the mathematics. You exercise your option to buy at $50, then sell the stock for $54. You have received $5,400, against which your expenses are $5,000 to buy the stock, $500 for the premium for the option, $130 in broker's commissions. In this example, you come out with a loss of $230, which is better than letting your option expire and being out $500.

PUTS WORK the same way but in reverse. There are also some very fancy devices, such as "straddles," which are a combination of a put and call option, "strips," which are two puts and one call, and "straps," which are one put and two calls. But don't get involved in them unless you're a truly sophisticated investor.

In another situation you might have a short position in a stock you can protect by buying a call option, or you might protect a profit in a long position by the purchase of a put option and there are a number of other strategies.

Puts and calls are available from some 20 dealers who make up the membership of the Put and Call Brokers and Dealers Association. Many of these dealers advertise in the financial sections of newspapers giving a sampling of some of the puts and calls available.

OR MORE LIKELY, you will deal with your own broker. Over 70 member firms of the New York Stock Exchange have put and call departments. No matter what sort of firm you deal with, usually a NYSE member firm must endorse all option contracts.

Option premiums are negotiable and depend on the volatility of the stock and length of the option contract.

The longer the contract, the higher the premium, and the more volatile the stock, the costlier the premium. Other factors helping to determine the premium price you are the number of option writers who are interested in offering the stock and the quality and number of shares outstanding.

ON APRIL 26, in Chicago, the first organized option market opened — the Chicago Board Options Exchange. It is the first continuous exchange market for put and call options in this country.

The purpose of the new market is to make options more popular by establishing a central point where many options can be traded and where option prices can be disseminated daily. Its most unusual feature is that it provides a resale market for those who have already bought options.

For instance, if you had bought that six-month option for 100 shares of Ajax before the CBOE, you had only two choices: exercise your option or let it lapse.

Irvine Co. Asparagus Crop Up

A potential 10 percent increase over last year in Orange County asparagus production is anticipated, weather permitting, reported Jim Manassero, row crop manager for the Irvine Company's Agricultural Division.

Nationally, this year's asparagus crop looks good, too, which should help maintain prices about 1972 levels, he said.

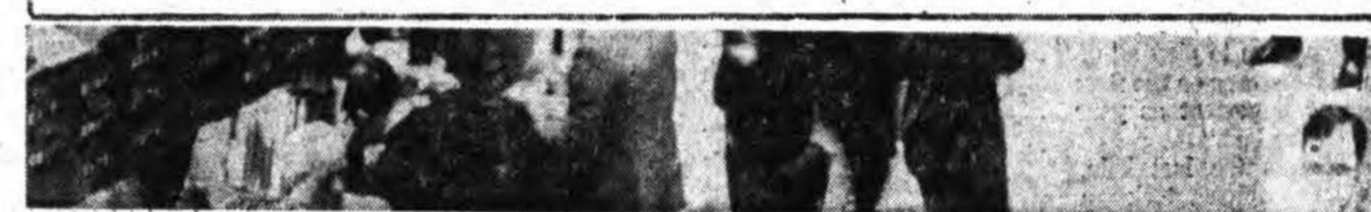

Manassero said that the 1,250-acre crop currently being harvested should produce about 3,000 crates daily during the peak season. The crop is being packed at the Irvine Company packing house.

About 60 percent of the crop is distributed in the Orange County-Los Angeles area and is handled by almost all major food markets. The remainder of the crop is distributed to the East Coast, Canada, Italy, England, Denmark, Sweden and France.

Today's Action in Today's Newspaper

Fifteen out of every 100 Americans today own stock. We couldn't prove it, of course, but it seems likely that the percentage is even greater here in the Orange Coast area . . . and it's growing every day.

That's why the DAILY PILOT was proud, years ago, to be the first newspaper in Orange County to bring its readers "today's final stocks today" via super high speed wire services. We're still doing it in every home-delivered edition and the service gets better all the time.

Wall Street's computers "talk to" computers in the DAILY PILOT plant every trading day at the rate of more than 1,000 words per minute. It takes only 12 minutes to move the entire New York and American Stock Exchange reports from the canyons of Wall Street to the typesetting machines of the DAILY PILOT right here on the Orange Coast.

And when technology finds a way to beat that speed record, the DAILY PILOT, no doubt, will be among the first to use it to bring readers "today's action today." When it comes to financial news, the one that means business is the

'Barrel Full of Pennies'

Light Comedy in Clemente

By TOM TITUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The plays of John Patrick, with the notable exception of "Teahouse of the August Moon," may be generally characterized as lightweight, lighthearted and usually quite light in their comic impact. "A Barrel Full of Pennies," the latest Patrick offering making its local debut at the San Clemente Community Theater, falls pretty neatly into this category. It abounds in the playwright's penchant for eccentricity, with a central plot line borrowed almost bag and baggage from "You Can't Take It With You," the Kaufman-Hart classic of the 1930's. Neither the play itself, nor the San Clemente production under the direction of Joanne Applegett, produces much of a reading on the laugh meter.

Patrick's prose is not pungently enough written to qualify as satire, and as pure comedy it misses the mark even further.

THE STORY centers on a Brooklyn cab driver, without much upstairs but a lot of heart, who can't resist bringing home strays — dogs, ducks, birds or people. This atmosphere is anathema to his marriageable daughter who's ashamed to bring her office flame home to meet the family. (Unlike "You Can't Take It With You," she never does.) The saving grace of both the play and the production is an itinerant young folksinger whose character is even farther out than the family's — yet is the most imaginatively written of the lot. Mark Razor gives an excellent performance in this role, playing the facsimile of a grownup Charlie Brown with hilarious aplomb and the vocal prowess of Dexter Franklin from radio's old "Corliss Archer" show.

Paul Steele plays the benevolent cabbie with a stogy comic style and a credible Armenian accent. Doris Donka fashions an even more credible Jewish accent as she moves quite naturally through the role of the mother.

THE IMPATIENT ingenue is portrayed halfheartedly by Ardis Faith who encounters problems in maintaining her character between lines and in delivering her dialogue without distracting pauses. Sharon Todd has little to do but react with distaste in her role of the taciturn aunt, but she does this quite believably.

The remaining character is something else again — an aging catatonic clobbered by Papa's cab 30 years ago who's been in a stupor coma ever since. Mark Manning does a fine job in this role, though the aging of a young man rather than seeking out an older actor is somewhat questionable.

"A Barrel Full of Pennies" continues for two more weekends, Thursdays through Saturdays, at the Cabrillo Playhouse, 202 Avenida Cabrillo, San Clemente.

'Gigi' Makes Stage Debut

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first Lerner and Loewe musical in 13 years — a theatrical version of the movie "Gigi" — premieres Tuesday after nearly a year of work on new numbers by the team that split up after "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot."

Composer Frederick Loewe, 72, who retired to Palm Springs in 1960 after a major heart attack, agreed to do the stage play after being lured back to work in June of 1971 by a movie script written by lyricist Alan Jay Lerner, 54.

The film, "The Little Prince," won't be released until next year, but "Gigi" is expected to reach Broadway in November following tryouts in five cities across the nation.

"I came back because of a script by Alan called 'The Little Prince' which Paramount sent to me," Loewe said at a news conference prior to the opening. "I could not possibly resist it. There are limits to any resistance."

"When Edwin Lester (impresario of the San Francisco and Los Angeles Civic Light Opera companies) heard we were collaborating again, he called and said, 'What about Gigi?' He had been calling me for years, suggesting that we do a satire version. I told him to talk to Alan and we finally did Gigi. I hope it's very good."

Lerner and Loewe have written five new songs for the musical, most of them for the girl in the title role, although one is a major production number with 10 pages of lyrics and 72 pages of orchestration that Loewe calls "a whole comic opera."

"I just got carried away," added Lerner, who stayed busy after the breakup with Loewe with the musicals "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever" and "Coco" and film versions of "Clear Day" and the Lerner-Loewe stage musical, "Paint Your Wagon."

South Coast Police Crack 'Marijuana Ring'

Seven persons, including three juvenile girls, were arrested and 65 pounds of marijuana seized following a raid at a Costa Mesa home by narcotics officers from the Laguna Beach, San Clemente and Costa Mesa police departments Friday.

The bust ended two weeks of investigation by the Laguna Beach narcotics squad and cracked what Sgt. Neil Purcell alleged was a major supply operation for the Laguna Beach area.

A foot locker-sized box containing 30 kilos of cellophane-wrapped marijuana bricks was held today as evidence. Police value this haul at $16,000.

Arrested were Joseph Steveling, 30, of 2260 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach, held on $75,000 bail; Joseph O. Helmer, 42, of Valdez, Alaska, held on $10,000 bail; John Miller Kauffman, 18, of Palo Alto, Calif., held on $10,000 bail; Barbara Anne Black, 19, of 440 Lenwood, Costa Mesa, held on $10,000 bail.

Purcell said all were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale. He claimed Steveling was the ringleader, and alleged that the 30-year-old Lagunan was responsible for sale of 150 to 200 pounds of marijuana weekly.

A 15-year-old Laguna Niguel girl, a 17-year-old Newport Beach girl and a 17-year-old Whittier runaway were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale.

Steveling, found hiding in a closet at the Costa Mesa residence at 299 Mesa Drive, was removed at gunpoint by narcotics officers. A large-bore automatic pistol was found in the closet afterward, Sgt. Purcell said.

Sgt. Purcell said Laguna Beach officers first began investigating Steveling two weeks ago and alleged that "several buys were made by narcotics agents working through the 17-year-old Whittier girl who was living with Steveling, Purcell said.

He said Steveling had been under surveillance by officers for about 10 days prior to the raid.

Seven narcotics officers including two from San Clemente and one from Costa Mesa were involved in the action Friday.

Purcell said two detectives observed the Laguna Niguel and Newport Beach girls go into the house and then quickly reappear with a brown shopping bag. Officers alleged the bag contained five kilos of the neatly wrapped pot.

More officers were called and entry gained into the house.

"People were running all over the house like crazy," Purcell said. He said that 30 kilos of marijuana were "out in plain sight." He valued the seized property at about $15,000 on the street.

Purcell said Steveling would go to the desert areas of San Diego County and return to the Laguna Beach area by a network of backroads, never passing alien Mexican checkpoints.

He said that the base of operations was moved to the rented Costa Mesa residence, next to the Santa Ana Country Club, several weeks ago and that the home was used for the distribution of marijuana.

Gold Price Hits $106 In Europe

LONDON (UPI) — Gold leaped to the highest price in history on European free markets today, easily passing the $100-an-ounce "barrier."

A major British dealer linked the gold stampede to a lack of confidence brought on by the Watergate affair but others disagreed.

The gold rush which saw a price of $106.70 on the French commercial market sent the dollar skidding on European money markets as speculators and multinational companies unloaded U.S. currency for the precious yellow metal.

In New York, the stock market took a sharp tumble in moderately active trading and the Dow Jones averages for 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 14.07 points in the first hour and a half of trading.

U.S. tourists joined the stampede to buy gold.

"People with surplus dollars are getting out of the currency into gold," said Dennis Selby, chief bullion dealer for the London gold brokerage firm of Johnson Matthey, Ltd. "Watergate has left the political situation shaky in the States and

Shooting by Officer Questioned

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Orange County Grand Jury will be asked to reopen its investigation into the police shooting death of a young Mexican-American April 13 in Fountain Valley.

The request comes from Orange County's Human Relations Commission which met Saturday in Santa Ana to discuss the shooting.

"Several community representatives have indicated to us that there is additional information which has not been presented to the Grand Jury, including the possibility of one or more eyewitnesses," said Jack Turk of Huntington Beach, chairman of the commission.

On the morning of April 13, Westminster Police Officer Timothy Miller shot Miguel Angel Ronquillo, 20, in

Saddleback Boy Dies at Havasu

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Man Holds Two Hostage Atop Tank of Jet Fuel

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd (See HOSTAGES, Page 2)

Coastal Panel Orders Clemente Firm to Halt

Developers of a 45-unit condominium in San Clemente are violating the coastal protection law of Proposition 20 and must stop construction, the South Coast Regional Coastal Commission said this morning.

The Aquarius Development Company must come before the commission and be granted an exemption from the law before construction can continue at 406 Pasadena Court, the agency said.

Developers began trench and foundation work two weeks ago without having been granted an exemption permit, said executive Director Melvin Carpenter.

The company did file for an exemption request, but has not yet come before the coastal agency for a hearing.

"Just because someone files for exemption does not give him permission to go ahead and build," said Commissioner Judy Rosener. "We should make that clear."

Former Mayor's Father Assaulted

Walter Evans Sr., a retired San Clemente contractor and father of a former mayor, was assaulted by an intruder over the weekend, but escaped with minor injuries, police said today.

Evans was struck in the stomach and face by a young man who entered the family home at 131 Avenida Mateo early Sunday morning.

Police said the incident occurred at about 2:40 a.m. when Evans' granddaughter, Angela Renee, 14, was awakened by a man who had grabbed her ankle as she slept in the den.

The intruder assertedly asked, "Where's Jim?" after awakening the girl. The granddaughter screamed and the intruder began to run from the house.

Evans, 68, tried to intercede, but was struck.

The sun is still on vacation along the Orange Coast, and weather experts don't expect to see it before Wednesday. Low clouds and fog in the morning hours, partly cloudy in the afternoon. Highs in the 60s.

INSIDE TODAY

Former Saddleback College pitcher John Wade was on the mound at Lake Havasu Sunday when he was killed by a bolt of lightning which burned off his hair, clothes and left shoe. His parents witnessed the grisly event from the grandstands. See story on Page 16.

Watergate Case List Narrowing For Prosecutor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliot L. Richardson today identified the "list" for selection as special government Watergate prosecutor as Warren M. Christopher of Los Angeles, Judge William H. Erickson of Denver, former Judge David W. Peck of New York and Judge Harold R. Tyler, Jr., of New York.

Richardson gave the names to reporters during a break in Senate hearings on his nomination for attorney general.

He said earlier the White House passed him "two or three names" of possible choices but they were not among the last four.

press that there is an impending financial crisis," Emanuel Brunoff, a French gold broker, said.

Asked if he believed the rise in the price of gold could be related to the Watergate scandal in the United States, Brunoff said: "In my opinion, I don't think it could be connected."

The metal's price was fixed at $102.25 an ounce on the big London free market in the second of the twice-daily price fixings. This was $2.50 higher than the morning price, $5.00 higher than Friday's closing price and more than double the official U.S. gold price.

Another gold source said: "Many foreign buyers are afraid of a new monetary crisis. For this reason they are going in great numbers to buy as much gold as they can afford."

Other European brokers and currency dealers also linked the gold rush and renewed pressure on the dollar to the resultant furor over alleged White House involvement in the bugging of the Democratic Party Washington headquarters.

Christopher, 47, a Democrat, is a former deputy attorney general, serving as the No. 2 man in the Justice Department from 1967 until 1969.

Erickson, 49, is a justice of the Colorado State Supreme Court.

Peck, 71, is a former New York State Appeals Division justice and is senior partner in a leading New York law firm.

Taylor, who observed his 50th birthday today, has been a member of the U.S. District Court in New York since 1962.

Richardson indicated he might name the special prosecutor by Tuesday. He has told senators he will give them virtual veto power over his selection.

On the third day of Senate hearings on his nomination to be attorney general, Richardson was asked by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.), whether he consulted with President Nixon or the White House in his search for a special prosecutor.

"No," Richardson said.

Then he added: "They passed me two or three names which they asked me to consider."

Richardson told reporters later that Gen. Alexander M. Haig, named by President Nixon last week to help reorganize the White House staff, and another White House assistant he believed to be newly named counsel Leonard Garment made the recommendations.

"They were just names dropped in the hopper," Richardson commented.

Richardson was nominated attorney general two weeks ago by Nixon and given "full authority" over the investigation of the Watergate scandal. In response to congressional demand, Richardson said he would name a special prosecutor and give him "complete authority" over all Watergate matters.

"No names suggested by the White House lasted as long as the final 10 or 12 names — not because they came from the White House but because I didn't feel they met my criteria," Richardson said.

Richardson told Tunney in response to another question that he had had no instructions from Nixon or the White House on the scope of the duties of a Watergate prosecutor.

Steel Company Boosts Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., the nation's second largest steel company, followed the lead of major steelmakers today and boosted the prices of sheet and strip products.

Thursday, U.S. Steel, the biggest steelmaker, announced it was raising prices on high volume sheet steel an average of 4.8 percent, effective June 15. Other steelmakers, including Jones & Laughlin, Wheeling-Pittsburgh, Kaiser and Armco, announced similar hikes the following day.

The proposed increases have encountered opposition from the Cost of Living Council, however, which says it plans to review U.S. Steel's justification for the boost.

Police Halt Car, Find Woman Shot

Adelaide Luna, director of Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez Community Center, remains in critical condition today after she was shot several times in an unexplained incident Saturday.

Mrs. Luna, 44, of 10371 Calle Independencia, is in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital after undergoing surgery for bullet wounds in her head, arm and back.

Mrs. Luna was found in a car stopped for a traffic violation by Officer Ron Gillman. The driver of the car, Richard Arechabaca Morones, 46, of 4906 W. 7th St., Santa Ana, was taken into custody on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Investigators said today they have not established what started the incident, but they will be filing charges against Morones this afternoon.

According to police reports, Gillman allegedly saw Morones make an illegal U-turn near the intersection of Euclid Street and Warner Avenue at about 12:30 a.m.

The officer reported that when he walked up to the side of the car, he saw Mrs. Luna who was bleeding profusely. She was taken immediately to the nearby hospital and Morones was taken into custody. He allegedly told officers he was taking her to the hospital.

Investigators said she had been shot with a .22-caliber revolver which they found when they took Morones into custody.

was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

John Murphy, a supervisor for Lockheed, said Abernathy drove to the Lockheed tank farm facility about 4 a.m. and captured the two men. A spokesman for the Multnomah County sheriff's office said shots were fired then, but no one was hurt.

Efforts were made to drain the tank through underground hoses but they were not successful.

Dalling told Murphy: "He ain't listening to nothing."

Abernathy's ex-wife, Nancy, and his children live in Bellingham, Wash., 250 miles north of Portland.

Efforts were being made to bring her to Portland.

A woman friend of Abernathy's also was being taken to the scene to see if she could talk him into surrendering.

The sheriff's office said Abernathy spent four months as a patient of the Veterans' Administration Hospital crisis clinic in Portland several months ago during divorce proceedings.

The fuel tank where Abernathy was holding hostages is some distance from the airport terminal and is surrounded by open fields. The main street running nearby, Marine Drive, was closed to traffic.

UC Irvine Gym Hosts Volleyball Playoffs Tonight

UC Irvine tonight will host the regional finals of the Southern California Collegiate volleyball association at 8 o'clock in Crawford Hall.

Dr. Robert Newcomb, lecturer in social science and coach of the Anteaters volleyball team, said Crawford Hall affords the Long Beach State and San Diego State teams the neutral court they need.

Play tonight will determine which of the two top teams will go directly into finals set for later this month in San Diego.

The two schools finished in a deadlock in circuit standings with 9 and 2 records, forcing the playoffs.

The last time the two teams played, 5,000 attended. Crawford Hall seats only 2,000 and tickets will be 50 cents each, Newcomb said.

Loser of tonight's volleyball regional final must play again this weekend to qualify for the nationals. Tonight's winner stands "a good chance" of being national champions, Newcomb speculated.

Skylab Gets Close Eye In Beach

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The United States fired a shot today which you might say was "heard around the world."

Vibrations from the Skylab launching were certainly felt in Huntington Beach where most of it was designed and built at McDonnell Douglas Astronautics.

Top engineers gathered in a special control room this morning to watch the launching. They'll use that control room throughout Skylab's 140 days of manned orbit to back up the Houston Space Center in case any problems arise.

Engineers in Huntington Beach will be called on to answer any questions which may come up during the flight.

Local reaction to this morning's successful shot was, as expected, one of joy and relief, though McDonnell Douglas officials did not have much to say about it.

Hugh R. Rowe, executive assistant to the chairman and president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, summed up the company's official view:

"We're proud to be a part of Skylab's first team. We are anticipating with great interest the benefits to humanity directly attributable to Skylab I, America's first orbiting space station."

The space workshop, which will be home for three separate three-man crews of astronauts, was officially finished in Huntington Beach Sept. 8, when it was turned over to NASA officials.

McDonnell Douglas had a $390 million contract to build the Skylab, a partially complete backup unit and certain ground support systems.

At the peak of activity, in May of 1972, there were 2,600 workers at the Huntington Beach plant concentrating on Skylab I. Skylab workers accounted for more than half the plant's work force.

While the end of Skylab means the beginning of a new step in space exploration, it also means more to hundreds of local Skylab workers.

The sad part of their project is that many, if not most, of them are now out of work. They must seek new jobs, a somewhat difficult task in the field of aerospace.

In mid-April, McDonnell Douglas announced it would lay off 2,000 Skylab workers over a period of nine months. Those layoffs would affect Huntington Beach, Santa Monica and the Cape Kennedy facility.

Luggage Falls From Airplane

An Orange County Airport runway was inadvertently "bombed" by a Golden West Airlines commuter plane this morning.

The DeHavilland Twin Otter bound for Los Angeles dropped three pieces of baggage from an improperly closed compartment on takeoff, an airline spokesman said today.

The garment bag, briefcase and suitcase were retrieved after the pilot turned back and landed the plane.

There was no damage to the contents although the briefcase opened upon impact, scattering papers on the runway, according to the spokesman.

HERE'S HOW AMERICA'S FIRST SPACE STATION WILL START
Three Men to Follow Unearthly 'Home' into Historic Orbit Tuesday

First U.S. Space Station Blasted Into Earth Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed away from earth today to serve as a giant "cabin in the sky" for nine astronauts in the next eight months.

A minute into the flight, Mission Control Center reported good thrust in all five first-stage engines and said it was "looking good."

The first stage shut down and the second-stage separated and ignited right on schedule, 2½ minutes into the flight.

The first three-man crew is set to ride another rocket into space Tuesday morning to hook up with the station, which is as large as a three-bedroom house, for a record 28 days in orbit.

SkyLab 1 astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz watched from three miles away as a 33-story-tall Saturn 5 rocket thundered skyward at 10:30 a.m. PDT, right on schedule, propelling the 85-ton laboratory toward orbit.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad 8,700 feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off at 10 a.m. Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,200 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

The Grand Jury on April 30 declared Officer Miller innocent of any wrongdoing in the death of Ronquillo. The District Attorney's office, which investigated the matter for the Grand Jury, had recommended such a verdict.

Child Care Defended

Cranston Speaks in Mesa, Vows Fight Over Cuts

Sen. Alan Cranston told a Costa Mesa audience this weekend that he is prepared to fight Nixon Administration proposals to reduce federal child care funds.

Legion of Crabs Invading Beach In San Clemente

Literally thousands of small, red crabs washed ashore at San Clemente over the weekend and lifeguards said that the creatures at one point literally covered the strand.

Lifeguard Lt. Hank Barnes said the animals, about two inches long, resemble miniature lobsters.

"Most of them were alive. On Saturday they were scattered from one end of the beach to the other," he said.

Lifeguards scooped up a small number of the creatures and placed them in a salt-water aquarium at lifeguard headquarters, he added.

The brightly colored organisms have been noted through the earlier months of this year and fishermen on sport boats have noted that often their fish are found full of the animals.

Border Officers Nab 229 Aliens Over Weekend

Border patrolmen at the San Onofre checkpoint reported another weekend of major migrations by illegal aliens. A total of 229 immigrants were detained at the station over the past few days.

Besides the large numbers of illegal migrants, officers Saturday arrested two young men alleged to be smuggling marijuana.

The pair, Marshal Robert Wilkerson, 23, of San Diego and Jeffrey Lauren Evans, 23, of Aspen, Colo., allegedly were carrying 28 pounds of the weed in the trunk of their car.

The discovery was made by officers during a routine immigration check, officials said.

The two men face charges of smuggling and were turned over to U.S. Customs agents.

Entertainer Loses Guitar in Newport

North Hollywood entertainer Gilbert C. Hintz complained to Newport Beach police Sunday that someone raided a storeroom at the Newport Harbor Yacht Club and got away with his $400 guitar.

The valuable Martin six-string guitar was selected from among a variety of other instruments at the clubhouse, at 720 W. Bay Ave., Balboa. Investigators said the bayfront club's 70-year-old switchboard operator reported seeing a long-haired young male stranger skulking suspiciously around on Saturday.

Sports in Brief

Chile Is Next For U.S. Team

MEXICO CITY — The U.S. Davis Cup tennis team will return home from its 4-1 victory over Mexico in the North American Zone final optimistic about its chances to beat Chile — and happy about the prospect of playing on its own courts for the first time in 2½ years.

Erik Van Dillen, 22, of San Mateo who with Tom Gorman won the doubles match of the series Saturday against Raul Ramirez and Vicente Zarazua, said he thought the team's possibilities of defeating the South American Zone finalist were "very good."

"We beat them 5-0 last year in their country," Van Dillen said of the 1972 series against Chile.

The United States won the two singles matches Sunday. Solomon beat Ramirez 8-6, 7-5, and Dick Stockton, 22, downed Luis Baraldi 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, 9-6.

MacCall Named

NEW YORK — Laguna Beach's George MacCall, a former nonplaying captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team, has been named commissioner of the new World Professional Tennis League, it was reported Sunday night by the National Broadcasting Co. network radio show "Monitor."

The pro tennis league, with more than a dozen cities competing, is scheduled to begin operation late this year.

Only the Boston and New York franchises have not definitely been settled for the tennis league.

King Tops

TOKYO — Top-seeded Billie Jean King of Long Beach displayed strong net play in the third set Sunday to score a 4-6, 5-7, 6-3 victory over Nancy Gunter and capture the top prize of $8,400 in the Toray-Silcock Women's Professional tennis tournament.

Rosemary Casals defeated Francoise Durr of France 6-3, 6-1 for third place in the 16-player tournament.

Karen Signs

VANCOUVER, B.C. — Karen Magnusson of North Vancouver, winner of the 1973 World Figure Skating championships, has signed a three-year contract with Ice Capades.

George Eby of Los Angeles, president of Ice Capades, said the contract "will earn Karen the highest amount ever paid to a performer, or an act, in the 33-year history of Ice Capades."

He said the 21-year-old champion will perform in the two companies of Ice Capades, playing 13 Canadian cities and a number of U.S. cities.

Hank Belts 2

ATLANTA — Hammerin' Hank Aaron's early season home run spurge has been a surprise for the Atlanta Braves slugger who continues his relentless charge toward Babe Ruth's all-time record.

"I didn't think I'd have that many by now," Aaron said Sunday after belting his ninth and tenth homers of the year as the Braves split a doubleheader with the San Diego Padres.

The pair, one in each game, lifted Aaron's career total to 683, just 31 away from Ruth's revered standard of 714.

Elims Set For Tonight

The 13th annual West Coast Match Game Bowling Eliminations gets under way tonight at Kona Lanes in Costa Mesa as 120 begin competition in the race for the title.

It begins at 9 o'clock and continues every Monday evening until the finals Aug. 17. The eventual winner goes on to the state roll-off over the Labor Day weekend.

The Elims is rolled in four-game segments with the field cut in half after seven weeks.

Pico Rivera's George Shore is back to defend his title as former winners Gary Madison of San Bernardino (1971), Lamar Keck of Canoga Park (1968-69) and Bob Ramirez of Anaheim (1961, '64).

Monday's Closing Prices—Complete New York Stock Exchange List

Investors Wary: Stocks Plummet

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market plunged sharply Monday in subdued trading as investors reacted to the never-ending Watergate headlines, the weakness of the dollar abroad, and the Federal Reserve's hike in the discount rate.

It was the fourth consecutive trading session in which the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had fallen.

"There's just a general unhappiness showing itself in the market today," said Monte Gordon of Dryfus Corp.

The price of gold soared to record highs today amid speculation in the gold-mining stocks.

'Barrel Full of Pennies'

Light Comedy in Clemente

By TOM TITUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The plays of John Patrick, with the notable exception of "Teahouse of the August Moon," may be generally characterized as lightweight, lighthearted and usually quite light in their comic impact. "A Barrel Full of Pennies," the latest Patrick offering making its local debut at the San Clemente Community Theater, falls pretty neatly into this category. It abounds in the playwright's penchant for eccentricity, with a central plot line borrowed almost bag and baggage from "You Can't Take It With You," the Kaufman-Hart classic of the 1930's. Neither the play itself, nor the San Clemente production under the direction of Joanne Applegett, produces much of a reading on the laugh meter.

Patrick's prose is not pungently enough written to qualify as satire, and as pure comedy it misses the mark even further.

THE STORY centers on a Brooklyn cab driver, without much upstairs but a lot of heart, who can't resist bringing home strays — dogs, ducks, birds or people. This atmosphere is anathema to his marriageable daughter who's ashamed to bring her office flame home to meet the family. (Unlike "You Can't Take It With You," she never does.) The saving grace of both the play and the production is an itinerant young folksinger whose character is even farther out than the family's — yet is the most imaginatively written of the lot. Mark Razor gives an excellent performance in this role, playing the facsimile of a grownup Charlie Brown with hilarious aplomb and the vocal prowess of Dexter Franklin from radio's old "Corliss Archer" show.

Paul Steele plays the benevolent cabbie with a stacy comic style and a credible Armenian accent. Doris Donka fashions an even more credible Jewish accent as she moves quite naturally through the role of the mother.

THE IMPATIENT ingenue is portrayed halfheartedly by Ardis Faith who encounters problems in maintaining her character between lines and in delivering her dialogue without distracting pauses. Sharon Todd has little to do but react with distaste in her role of the taciturn aunt, but she does this quite believably.

The remaining character is something else again — an aging crotchety cabbie who's been in a standup coma ever since. Mark Manning does a fine job in this role, though the aging of a young man rather than seeking out an older actor is somewhat questionable.

"A Barrel Full of Pennies" continues for two more weekends, Thursdays through Saturdays, at the Cabrillo Playhouse, 202 Avenida Cabrillo, San Clemente.

'Gigi' Makes Stage Debut

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first Lerner and Loewe musical in 13 years — a theatrical version of the movie "Gigi" — premieres Tuesday after nearly a year of work on new numbers by the team that split up after "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot."

Composer Frederick Loewe, 72, who retired to Palm Springs in 1960 after a major heart attack, agreed to do the stage play after being lured back to work in June of 1971 by a movie script written by lyricist Alan Jay Lerner, 54.

The film, "The Little Prince," won't be released until next year, but "Gigi" is expected to reach Broadway in November following tryouts in five cities across the nation.

"I came back because of a script by Alan called 'The Little Prince' which Paramount sent to me," Loewe said at a news conference prior to the opening. "I could not possibly resist it. There are limits to any resistance."

"When Edwin Lester (impresario of the San Francisco and Los Angeles Civic Light Opera companies) heard we were collaborating again, he called and said, 'What about Gigi?' He had been calling me for years, suggesting that we do a stage version. I told him to talk to Alan and we finally did Gigi. I hope it's very good."

Lerner and Loewe have written five new songs for the musical, most of them for the girl in the title role, although one is a major production number with 10 pages of lyrics and 72 pages of orchestration that Loewe calls "a whole comic opera."

"I just got carried away," added Lerner, who stayed busy after the breakup with Loewe with the musicals "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever" and "Coco" and film versions of "Clear Day" and the Lerner-Loewe stage musical, "Paint Your Wagon."

South Coast Police Crack 'Marijuana Ring'

Seven persons, including three juvenile girls, were arrested and 65 pounds of marijuana seized following a raid at a Costa Mesa home by narcotics officers from the Laguna Beach, San Clemente and Costa Mesa police departments Friday.

The bust ended two weeks of investigation by the Laguna Beach narcotics squad and cracked what Sgt. Neil Purcell alleged was a major supply operation for the Laguna Beach area. A foot locker-sized box containing 30 kilos of cellophane-wrapped marijuana bricks was held today as evidence. Police value this haul at $16,000.

Arrested were Joseph Steveling, 30, of 2260 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach, held on $75,000 bail; Joseph O. Helmer, 42, of Valdez, Alaska, held on $10,000 bail; John Miller Kauffman, 18, of Palo Alto, Calif., held on $10,000 bail; Barbara Anne Black, 19, of 440 Lenwood, Costa Mesa, held on $10,000 bail.

Purcell said all were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale. He claimed Steveling was the ringleader, and alleged that the 30-year-old Lagunan was responsible for sale of 150 to 200 pounds of marijuana weekly.

A 15-year-old Laguna Niguel girl, a 17-year-old Newport Beach girl and a 17-year-old Whittier runaway were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale.

Steveling, found hiding in a closet at the Costa Mesa residence at 299 Mesa Drive, was removed at gunpoint by narcotics officers. A large-bore automatic pistol was found in the closet afterward, Sgt. Purcell said.

Sgt. Purcell said Laguna Beach officers first began investigating Steveling two weeks ago and alleged that several buys were made by narcotics agents working through the 17-year-old Whittier girl who was living with Steveling, Purcell said.

He said Steveling had been under surveillance by officers for about 10 days prior to the raid.

Seven narcotics officers including two from San Clemente and one from Costa Mesa were involved in the action Friday.

Purcell said two detectives observed the Laguna Niguel and Newport Beach girls go into the house and then quickly reappear with a brown shopping bag. Officers alleged the bag contained five kilos of the neatly wrapped pot.

More officers were called and entry gained into the house.

"People were running all over the house like crazy," Purcell said. He said that 30 kilos of marijuana were "out in plain sight." He valued the seized property at about $15,000 on the street.

Purcell said Steveling would go to the desert areas of San Diego County and return to the Laguna Beach area by a network of backroads, never passing alien Mexican checkpoints.

He said that the base of operations was moved to the rented Costa Mesa residence, next to the Santa Ana Country Club, several weeks ago and that the home was used for the distribution of marijuana.

Gold Price Hits $106 In Europe

LONDON (UPI) — Gold leaped to the highest price in history on European free markets today, easily passing the $100-an-ounce "barrier."

A major British dealer linked the gold stampede to a lack of confidence brought on by the Watergate affair but others disagreed.

The gold rush which saw a price of $106.70 on the French commercial market sent the dollar skidding on European money markets as speculators and multinational companies unloaded U.S. currency for the precious yellow metal.

In New York, the stock market took a sharp tumble in moderately active trading and the Dow Jones averages for 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 14.07 points in the first hour and a half of trading.

U.S. tourists joined the stampede to buy gold.

"People with surplus dollars are getting out of the currency into gold," said Dennis Selby, chief bullion dealer for the London gold brokerage firm of Johnson Matthey, Ltd. "Watergate has left the political situation shaky in the States and by late afternoon the price of gold shot this has put pressure on the dollar."

Up to $106.17 on the French commercial market — up more than $7 from Friday's close of $98.83.

"I think the reason for the rise in the price of gold is because of reports in the press that there is an impending financial crisis," Emanuel Bruno, a French gold broker, said.

Asked if he believed the rise in the price of gold could be related to the

Laguna Burglars Hit Three Homes

Three Laguna Beach residences were hit by burglars as a total of nearly $2,000 in cash and jewelry was taken in crimes reported Friday to police.

Joyce Wilcox Phelps of 330 Cliff Drive told officers $800 worth of jewelry, silverware and a cosmetic case was taken following a break in at the residence.

Edward Hiralez of 374 Ledroit Street, told officers $840 in property including cash and a camera was taken from his home. Entry was gained by an unknown means, officers said.

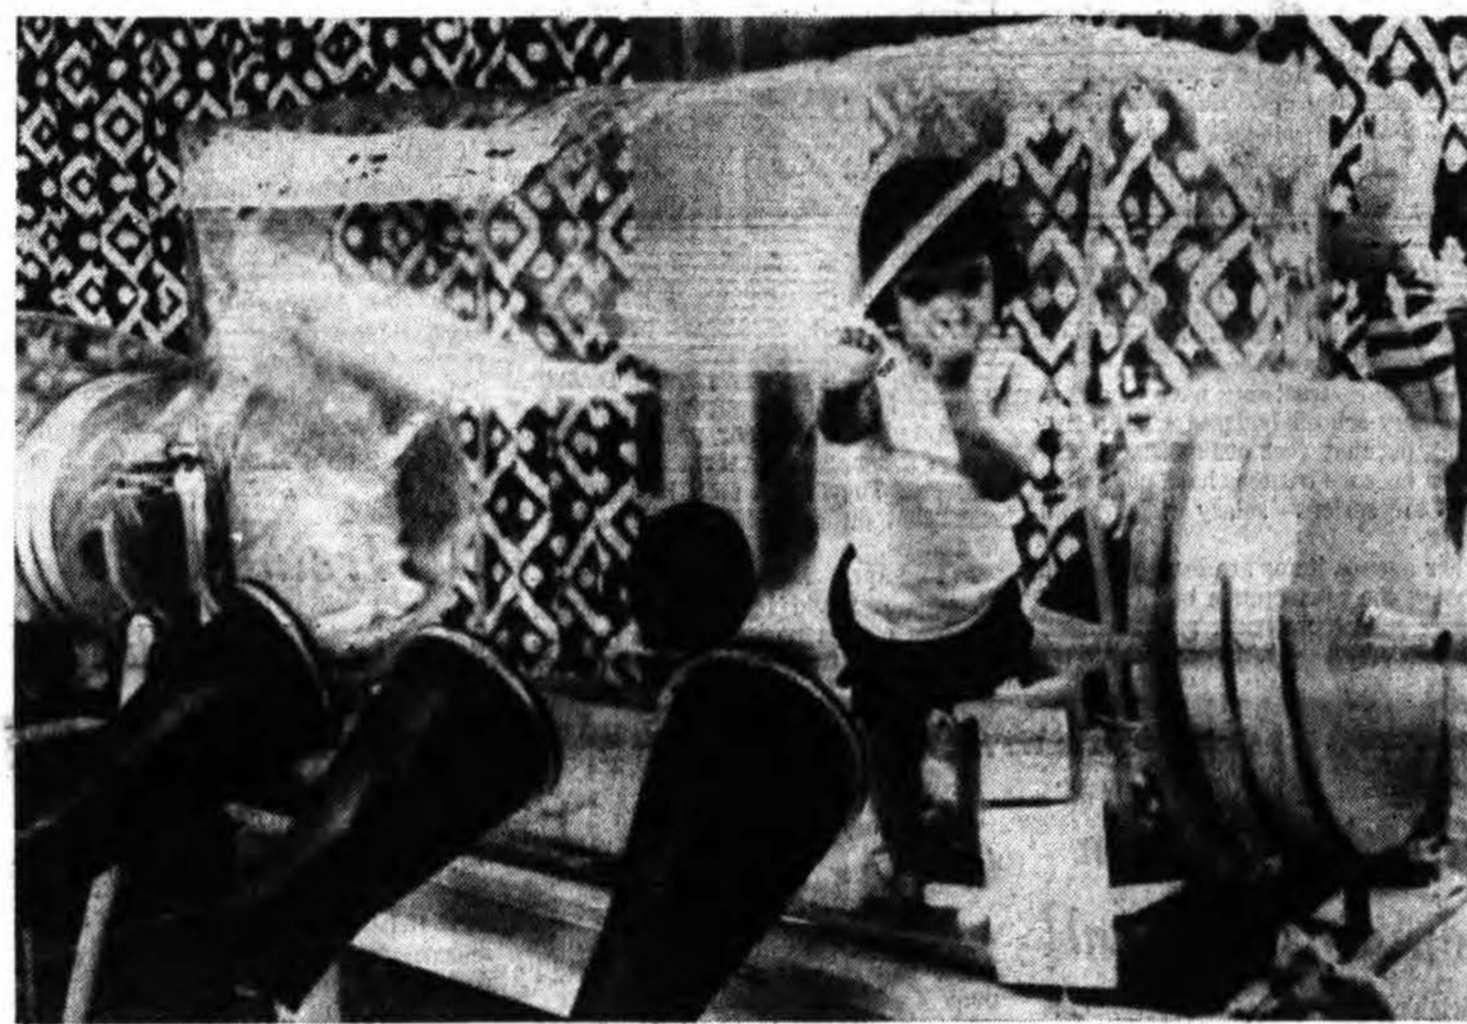

Mark Guardiola of 395 Dartmoor Street, reported the theft of $330 in jewelry from his residence. Officers said no sign of forced entry was evident.

Greenbelt Fight Heats Up

Leaders Hope Laguna Officials Will Back Effort

By JAN WORTH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Laguna Beach Greenbelt leaders today are hopeful that the city will join them in an effort to obtain a temporary restraining order against grading on a tract by the Rossmoor Corporation.

The subdivision in question lies behind the Sycamore Hills area between El Toro Road and Laguna Canyon Road. It was approved last summer for single-family homes and multiple-family units.

Neil Rehkop, attorney for the Greenbelt group, said all procedures to appeal county approval of the grading permit had been tried unsuccessfully.

If a restraining order is obtained, next step will be to obtain an order that Rossmoor prove in court why they should not be stopped from grading the 178-acre tract.

Louis Helmreich, counsel for Rossmoor, said today he had not heard directly from the Greenbelt group and could not yet comment on the possibility of legal action.

The Greenbelt group has objected to the proposal because it felt the grading plan to move more than one million cubic yards of earth would upset flood control in Laguna Beach.

The tract is part of the Laguna watershed.

Rehkop said he is "wholeheartedly persuaded" that the Greenbelt can prevail through the restraining order and order to show cause phases of the legal action if the city of Laguna Beach joins as a party plaintiff.

As for liability to the city, Rehkop said there would be none if the restraining order was denied because Rossmoor would not be delayed.

Granting the restraining order would be a statement by the court that the plaintiff's interests should be protected, Rehkop said, and thus would reduce

Four Possible Prosecutors Identified

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliot L. Richardson today identified the "list" for selection as special government Watergate prosecutor as Warren M. Christopher of Los Angeles, Judge William H. Erickson of Denver, former Judge David W. Peck of New York and Judge Harold R. Tyler, Jr., of New York.

Richardson gave the names to reporters during a break in Senate hearings on his nomination for attorney general.

He said earlier the White House passed him "two or three names" of possible choices but they were not among the last four.

Christopher, 47, a Democrat, is a former deputy attorney general, serving as the No. 2 man in the Justice Department from 1967 until 1969.

Erickson, 49, is a justice of the Colorado State Supreme Court.

Peck, 71, is a former New York State Appeals Division justice and is senior partner in a leading New York law firm.

Saddleback Boy Dies at Havasu

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Man Holds Two Hostage Atop Tank of Jet Fuel

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to (See HOSTAGES, Page 2)

Fans Go Berserk When Rock Fest Music Halted

SAN JOSE (AP) — A rock festival here that drew up to 10,000 spectators ended with an estimated 300 youths throwing bottles and swinging clubs because they didn't want the music to stop, authorities said.

When sheriff's deputies arrived at the private park site to break up a knife fight Sunday, there were only about 1,000 persons still at the festival.

When officers ordered the music to end, angry participants grabbed bottles and broke up soft drink stands to use the wood for clubs.

One youth was hospitalized with a knife wound and three persons were arrested for drunkenness, officials said.

One sheriff's deputy was stabbed in the back with a broken bottle but a bullet-proof vest kept him from a stab wound.

The incident arose because more persons came to the concert than the three-square block area could hold, Sheriff's Lt. Darrold Thomas said.

Legion of Crabs Invading Beach In San Clemente

Literally thousands of small, red crabs washed ashore at San Clemente over the weekend and lifeguards said that the creatures at one point literally covered the strand.

Lifeguard Lt. Hank Barnes said the animals, about two inches long, resemble miniature lobsters.

"Most of them were alive. On Saturday they were scattered from one end of the beach to the other," he said.

Lifeguards scooped up a small number of the creatures and placed them in a salt-water aquarium at lifeguard headquarters, he added.

The brightly colored organisms have been noted through the earlier months of this year and fishermen on sport boats have noted that often their fish are found full of the animals.

Senator Charges More CIA Links

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said today three highly placed White House staff members tried seriously last year to involve the CIA in covert matters other than the burglary of the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

District Court in New York since 1962.

Richardson indicated he might name the special prosecutor by Tuesday. He has told senators he will give them virtual veto power over his selection.

On the third day of Senate hearings on his nomination to be attorney general, Richardson was asked by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.), whether he consulted with President Nixon or the White House in his search for a special prosecutor.

"No," Richardson said. Then he added: "They passed me two or three names which they asked me to consider."

Richardson told reporters later that Gen. Alexander M. Haig, named by President Nixon last week to help reorganize the White House staff, and another White House assistant he believed to be newly named counsel Leonard Garment made the recommendations.

"They were just names dropped in the hopper," Richardson commented.

Richardson was nominated attorney general two weeks ago by Nixon and given "full authority" over the investigation of the Watergate scandal. In response to congressional demand, Richardson said he would name a special prosecutor and give him "complete authority" over all Watergate matters.

"No names suggested by the White House lasted as long as the final 10 or 12 names — not because they came from the White House but because I didn't feel they met my criteria," Richardson said.

Richardson told Tunney in response to another question that he had had no instructions from Nixon or the White House on the scope of the duties of a Watergate prosecutor.

Advisory Council Topic of Special Area Meetings

Four meetings have been scheduled in the Saddleback Valley to offer residents a chance to react to proposals that a municipal advisory council (MAC) be organized for the area.

The MAC, a relatively new innovation in California, would provide official elected spokesmen from the Valley area to advise the county, ideally providing more effective representation of local needs in non-city areas than now exists.

The proposals prepared by the Saddleback Area Coordinating Council, were aired for the first time six weeks ago. SACC officials will meet with members of the Washington Club in Leisure World at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Clubhouse Two.

Mission Viejo Homeowners Association members will analyze the subject at 7:30 p.m. May 22 in Mission Viejo High School.

Lake Forest Homeowners will discuss the MAC, at 7:30 p.m. May 23 at a yet to be announced location.

Residents of Laguna Niguel will have opportunity to discuss the MAC at 7:30 p.m. May 29 at Crown Valley Elementary School.

Nance North, a member of the committee that produced the report, said four meetings have already been held to hash over the proposals, reaching only 250 citizens out of a total of 70,000 in the 100-square mile area.

"We'll schedule more meetings on request," she said. "We're anxious to find out just what residents really want."

Reporting on secret testimony from four officials of the Central Intelligence Agency, Symington said he was surprised to learn that former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman was "heavily involved."

Symington, acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the other White House aides reported to be involved were John D. Ehrlichman, former chief domestic adviser to President Nixon, and former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

He would not reveal details of the testimony but said new revelations had come from the CIA's deputy director, Army Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters.

Gen. Walters did not join the CIA until December and Symington said the general testified to episodes involving the three White House aides that have occurred since that time.

"What I learned today that I didn't know before was how deeply involved Haldeman was as well as Ehrlichman and Dean," Symington said.

"Whatever the CIA was ordered to do," he said, "was at the direction of the top staff people of the White House. They would have liked to see the CIA involved."

Symington confirmed "there were other matters besides the Ellsberg case in which the White House staff tried to involve the CIA."

He refused under repeated questioning to give details.

In another Watergate development U.S. Judge John Sirica today ordered the clerk of his court to take possession of classified documents that had been placed in a safe deposit box by Dean, the man fired as White House counsel by President Nixon in the Watergate affair. Following a brief hearing, Sirica ordered that certified copies of the documents be made available to government prosecutors in the Watergate case and to the Senate special committee.

By making the Papers available to the prosecutors, who are under the executive branch, they'll also be available to the White House which has asked for their return. The White House requested the originals; it will get only copies.

Contents of the documents were not disclosed at the hearing, but Dean told Sirica they were of a security classification entitled "top secret handled via commit channels."

Dean said that classification is stricter than top secret.

Dean was not available for comment after the hearing.

But he told the court "those who did the classifying felt something in there could affect the national security."

Arch Beach Area Gets Repaving

Streets torn up during installation of sewers in the Arch Beach Heights district of Laguna Beach are being repaved this week.

Work was under way today on resurfacing of streets running in north-south directions. Streets running in east-west directions will be completed later in the week.

In addition, Summit Drive will be repaved from Arch Beach Heights to Pearl Street.

GREENBELT...

liability of the plaintiff.

Officials of Laguna Beach have not said if they will join the legal action but city planning Director Wayne Moody has protested the Rossmoor tract several times in county planning commission meetings.

Reports from the county staff affirmed Greenbelt objections. Citing the flood control dangers to Laguna Beach as "extremely susceptible," the last staff report on the project said any project increasing water runoff into the watershed is "highly undesirable."

However, the Rossmoor Planned Community, including the tract in question, was approved in principle in the 1960s.

Though county planning commissioners expressed their dissatisfaction with the grading plan when they approved it last month, they said they felt that to improve the situation a new tract map would have to be drawn up.

Since the map had been approved by a previous commission, the decision to design a new tract map would be a voluntary one by Rossmoor, and could not be required by the county.

Rossmoor representatives have accused the county planning staff of stalling for time in approving the plan, claiming the Laguna Hills developers have been "at the mercy of environmentalists on the planning staff."

The greenbelt group and the county planning staff also said the tract will "start the degradation of two scenic highways, Laguna Canyon Road and El Toro Road."

Cycle Stunter Dies

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Kim C. Clark, 20, died in Doctors Hospital about an hour after he crashed during a motorcycle race at Carlsbad Raceway. Clark, a student at San Diego Mesa College, was climbing a steep hill Sunday when he lost control of his cycle. He suffered head and neck injuries.

Steel Company Boosts Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., the nation's second largest steel company, followed the lead of major steelmakers today and boosted the prices of sheet and strip products.

Thursday, U.S. Steel, the biggest steelmaker, announced it was raising prices on high volume sheet steel an average of 4.8 percent, effective June 15. Other steelmakers, including Jones & Laughlin, Wheeling-Pittsburgh, Kaiser and Armco, announced similar hikes the following day.

The proposed increases have encountered opposition from the Cost of Living Council, however, which says it plans to review U.S. Steel's justification for the boost.

Laguna Unit To Pick New School Chief

Laguna Beach Unified School District trustees will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in regular session at the Education Center, 550 Blumont Street, Laguna Beach.

At the meeting, the board is expected to announce the selection of the new district superintendent. Discussions with candidates for the job have been going on for several months.

It is expected that the matter will be added to the published agenda as a supplemental item during the course of the session.

The board will also be presented with a request by Charles Hess, assistant superintendent for business, to be released from his post May 26 in order that he may assume duties with the Palm Springs Unified School District this month.

Dr. Hess was one of the three top administrators of the district fired by action of trustees Gerald Linke, Patricia Gillette and William Thomas.

Hess said trustees have had a preliminary schools budget for about five months, but that work at finalizing it was delayed because trustees have not gotten down to serious salary talks with teachers.

Other agenda items are largely routine including the presentation of reports on summer school proposals and the adult education curriculum.

Fountain Valley Shooting Victim Remains Critical

Adelaide Luna, director of Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez Community Center, remains in critical condition today after she was shot several times in an unexplained incident Saturday.

Mrs. Luna, 44, of 10371 Calle Independencia, is in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital after undergoing surgery for bullet wounds in her head, arm and back.

Mrs. Luna was found in a car stopped for a traffic violation by Officer Ron Gillman. The driver of the car, Richard Archabaca Morones, 46, of 4906 W. 7th St., Santa Ana, was taken into custody on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Investigators said today they have not established what started the incident, but they will be filing charges against Morones this afternoon.

According to police reports, Gillman allegedly saw Morones make an illegal U-turn near the intersection of Euclid Street and Warner Avenue at about 12:30 a.m.

The officer reported that when he walked up to the side of the car, he saw Mrs. Luna who was bleeding profusely.

She was taken immediately to the nearby hospital and Morones was taken into custody. He allegedly told officers he was taking her to the hospital.

Investigators said she had been shot with a .22-caliber revolver which they found when they took Morones into custody.

Border Officers Nab 229 Aliens Over Weekend

Border patrolmen at the San Onofre checkpoint reported another weekend of major migrations by illegal aliens. A total of 229 immigrants were detained at the station over the past few days.

Besides the large numbers of illegal migrants, officers Saturday arrested two young men alleged to be smuggling marijuana.

The pair, Marshal Robert Wilkerson, 23, of San Diego and Jeffrey Lauren Evans, 23, of Aspen, Colo., allegedly were carrying 28 pounds of the weed in the trunk of their car.

The discovery was made by officers during a routine immigration check, officials said.

The two men face charges of smuggling and were turned over to U.S. Customs agents.

Skylab Gets Close Eye In Beach

By TERRY COVILLE

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The United States fired a shot today which you might say was "heard around the world."

Vibrations from the Skylab launching were certainly felt in Huntington Beach where most of it was designed and built at McDonnell Douglas Astronautics.

Top engineers gathered in a special control room this morning to watch the launching. They'll use that control room throughout Skylab's 140 days of manned orbit to back up the Houston Space Center in case any problems arise.

Engineers in Huntington Beach will be called on to answer any questions which may come up during the flight.

Local reaction to this morning's successful shot was, as expected, one of joy and relief, though McDonnell Douglas officials did not have much to say about it.

Hugh R. Bowe, executive assistant to the chairman and president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, summed up the company's official view:

"We're proud to be a part of Skylab's first team. We are anticipating with great interest the benefits to humanity directly attributable to Skylab 1, America's first orbiting space station."

The space workshop, which will be home for three separate three-man crews of astronauts, was officially finished in Huntington Beach Sept. 8, when it was turned over to NASA officials.

McDonnell Douglas has a $390 million contract to build the Skylab, a partially complete backup unit and certain ground support systems.

At the peak of activity, in May of 1972, there were 2,600 workers at the Huntington Beach plant concentrating on Skylab 1. Skylab workers accounted for more than half the plant's work force.

While the end of Skylab means the beginning of a new step in space exploration, it also means more to hundreds of local Skylab workers.

The sad part of their project is that many, if not most, of them are now out of work. They must seek new jobs, a somewhat difficult task in the field of aerospace.

In mid-April, McDonnell Douglas announced it would lay off 2,000 Skylab workers over a period of nine months. Those layoffs would affect Huntington Beach, Santa Monica and the Cape Kennedy facility.

GOLD...

Watergate scandal in the United States, Brunoff said: "In my opinion, I don't think it could be connected."

The metal's price was fixed at $102.25 an ounce on the big London free market in the second of the twice-daily price fixings. This was $2.50 higher than the morning price, $5.60 higher than Friday's closing price and more than double the official U.S. gold price.

Another gold source said: "Many foreign buyers are afraid of a new monetary crisis. For this reason they are going in great numbers to buy as much gold as they can afford."

Other European brokers and currency dealers also linked the gold rush and renewed pressure on the dollar to the resultant furor over alleged White House involvement in the bugging of the Democratic Party Washington headquarters.

HERE'S HOW AMERICA'S FIRST SPACE STATION WILL START Three Men to Follow Unearthly 'Home' into Historic Orbit Tuesday

First U.S. Space Station Blasted Into Earth Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed away from earth today to serve as a giant "cabin in the sky" for nine astronauts in the next eight months.

A minute into the flight, Mission Control Center reported good thrust in all five first-stage engines and said it was "looking good."

The first stage shut down and the second-stage separated and ignited right on schedule, 2 1/2 minutes into the flight.

The first three-man crew is set to ride another rocket into space Tuesday morning to hook up with the station, which is as large as a three-bedroom house, for a record 28 days in orbit.

Skylab 1 astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz watched from three miles away as a 33-story-tall Saturn 5 rocket thundered skyward at 10:30 a.m. PDT, right on schedule, propelling the 85-ton laboratory toward orbit.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad 8,700 feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off at 10 a.m. Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,200 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

Gold Price Hits $106 In Europe

LONDON (UPI) — Gold leaped to the highest price in history on European free markets today, easily passing the $100-an-ounce "barrier."

A major British dealer linked the gold stampede to a lack of confidence brought on by the Watergate affair but others disagreed.

The gold rush which saw a price of $106.70 on the French commercial market sent the dollar skidding on European money markets as speculators and multinational companies unloaded U.S. currency for the precious yellow metal.

In New York, the stock market took a sharp tumble in moderately active trading and the Dow Jones averages for 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 14.07 points in the first hour and a half of trading.

U.S. tourists joined the stampede to buy gold.

"People with surplus dollars are getting out of the currency into gold," said Dennis Selby, chief bullion dealer for the London gold brokerage firm of Johnson Matthey, Ltd. "Watergate has left the political situation shaky in the States and by late afternoon the price of gold shot this has put pressure on the dollar."

up to $106.17 on the French commercial market — up more than $7 from Friday's close of $98.83.

"I think the reason for the rise in the price of gold is because of reports in the press that there is an impending financial crisis," Emanuel Brunoff, a French gold broker, said.

Asked if he believed the rise in the price of gold could be related to the Watergate scandal in the United States, Brunoff said: "In my opinion, I don't think it could be connected."

The metal's price was fixed at $102.25 an ounce on the big London free market in the second of the twice-daily price fixings. This was $2.50 higher than the morning price, $5.60 higher than Friday's closing price and more than double the official U.S. gold price.

Another gold source said: "Many foreign buyers are afraid of a new monetary (See GOLD, Page 2)

Children Blamed For $17,500 Fire At Irvine Home

Childish curiosity about incense today was blamed for a Sunday fire which caused an estimated $17,500 in damage to a Walnut Square townhouse in Irvine.

Orange County fire investigators said the fire was at the home of Mrs. Judy Wagner, 14564 Oval Road, Irvine. The blaze destroyed a downstairs bedroom and resulted in extensive smoke and water damage to the home. No one was injured.

Fire Prevention Capt. Carl Wolf said firemen controlled the blaze within 20 minutes of the 9:56 a.m. call. Units from three Irvine stations and the Red Hill station of the county Fire Department responded. Wolf said there was no structural damage to the condominium structure valued at more than $100,000.

Wolf said Mrs. Wagner's children admitted to having played with the incense in the downstairs bedroom. The blaze "cooked" for nearly five hours before it was discovered by family members, he said.

Skylab Heads for Orbit

Three Astronauts Join Up With Station Tuesday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed into orbit today but failure of two solar panels to extend threatened to jeopardize the mission.

From Wire Services
CAPE KENNEDY — America's Skylab space station rocketed successfully into orbit today while its first three astronauts waited on the ground for their chance to join it Tuesday.

The big spaceship, largest ever launched, soared into a near-perfect 271-mile-high orbit at 10:40 p.m. (PDT), 10 minutes after a flawless launch.

Moonwalk veteran Charles "Pete"

Conrad, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, the nation's first space physician, and aeronautical engineer Paul J. Weitz are set for launch at 10 a.m. Tuesday. They plan to spend a record 28 days in orbit.

The three astronauts watched as their space laboratory rocketed out of sight into a cloud cover.

The smooth flight into space marked a new era in the U.S. space program. Project Skylab is designed to push back the frontier of human endurance in earth orbit and cash in on the promise of spaceflight.

Once in orbit, Skylab quickly separated from its spent second stage rocket. Five minutes later, Skylab's protective cocoon-like nose cover separated in four pieces as planned.

Then Skylab, following orders from its onboard electronic brains, slowly swung its high-powered solar observatory into position. Mission control in Houston reported it securely latched in place.

The astronauts plan to use it to conduct the most extensive solar studies ever attempted.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,200 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad 8,700 feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

Once in orbit, the Skylab, which resembled a huge bullet as it sat on the launch pad covered by a metal shroud, began blossoming into a full-scale space station.

First, the four sections of the 28,000-pound shroud peeled away like clam shells and flew off into space.

Then, an on-board computer com-

Irvine Trustees To Rule on Cost Of School Land

Prices of school sites set aside in future Irvine housing subdivisions may be established by school officials at the time city agencies approve the subdivision.

Tonight, Irvine Unified School District trustees will consider a resolution requiring designation and pricing of school sites when "tracts are approved by the responsible planning agency."

Supt. A. Stanley Corey will introduce the board-requested resolution during the meeting set for 7:30 in Rancho San Joaquin Intermediate School, 4861 Michelson Ave., University Park.

Corey says the resolution is similar to one adopted by the San Joaquin Elementary District. On July 1, Irvine Unified takes over schools run by that district and inherits a school shortage problem throughout the district.

Boy in Dismay Topples Into Swim Pool, Dies

A little Costa Mesa boy's fear at an accident that injured his substitute daddy in a foster care home for the retarded sent him running to his death Saturday.

Coroner's deputies said Michael P. McAllister, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McAllister, toppled into a swimming pool at 10962 Rocky Road, in the Santa Ana area, and drowned.

Investigators said Frederick Williams, a school teacher who operates the sheltered environment home for handicapped children was repairing a garage door when the mishap occurred.

A large spring securing the door snapped and slammed Williams in the shoulder area, sending the McAllister boy fleeing from the frightening commotion.

He was found in the pool shortly afterward and taken to Tustin Community Hospital and pronounced dead. Williams was treated for a shoulder injury.

Rosary was scheduled for 7:30 tonight for the boy, and Requiem Mass set for Tuesday at 10 a.m., both in St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, Costa Mesa.

Burial will be in Ascension Cemetery, El Toro.

Survivors include the boy's parents, of the home at 204 Loyola Road, Costa Mesa; brothers, Matthew, Mark, Kevin and John; a sister, Denise, plus grandparents Mr. and Mrs. David McAllister and Mrs. Anna Brinkman.

Saddleback Boy Dies at Havasu

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Effect in County?

High Court Bars Cities From Curbing Jet Flights

By JOHN ZALLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In a decision that might affect operation of Orange County Airport, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5 to 4 today that local agencies cannot impose curfews on jet flights from private airports.

Robert Nutman, assistant Orange County counsel dealing with airport affairs, said the ruling probably would not affect short-term operation of the airport but might have long-term effects.

"We have a publicly owned and operated airport," Nutman commented. "Today's ruling concerned a privately owned airport, which is a very different case."

"But it is possible that airlines might attempt to use the ruling to remove the curfews they now have," he said.

Jet takeoffs are currently banned from Orange County Airport between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. Landings are banned after 11 p.m.

Officials from Airwest this morning declined to comment on the court decision. They also declined to say whether the airline wants to run flights during hours that are now restricted.

Officials from Air California, the other major carrier at Orange County, were not available for comment.

In a dispute between the city of Burbank and the private owners of Burbank Airport, the Supreme Court ruled that the city does not have the right to impose flight curfews because authority in that area is preempted by the federal government.

Man Holds Two Hostage Atop Tank of Jet Fuel

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

UC Irvine Gym Hosts Volleyball Playoffs Tonight

UC Irvine tonight will host the regional finals of the Southern California Collegiate volleyball association at 8 o'clock in Crawford Hall.

Dr. Robert Newcomb, lecturer in social science and coach of the Anteaters volleyball team, said Crawford Hall affords the Long Beach State and San Diego State teams the neutral court they need.

Play tonight will determine which of the two top teams will go directly into finals set for later this month in San Diego.

The two schools finished in a deadlock in circuit standings with 9 and 2 records, forcing the playoffs.

The last time the two teams played, 5,000 attended. Crawford Hall seats only 2,000 and tickets will be 50 cents each, Newcomb said.

Loser of tonight's volleyball regional final must play again this weekend to qualify for the nationals. Tonight's winner stands "a good chance" of being national champions, Newcomb speculated.

Little League Baseball: Entry Into Real World

By L. PETER KRIEG
of the D.P. Staff

ALMOST EIGHT YEARS AGO, my wife bore me a first child. A strong and healthy son.

KRIEG

He has survived his infancy and early childhood remarkably unscathed by youthful traumas. There've been no broken bones, no grave illnesses. He's never been lost in the woods or in a department store.

He did chip a baby tooth. And once he ran away from home for half an hour. But he has been sheltered from the realities of the world—up until few weeks ago.

He went out for Little League Baseball in Irvine. My wife and I had our misgivings, the typical ones about the pressures of organized activities on a child, whether we might find ourselves pushing too hard.

Of course there were also all those things we'd heard about the Little League program, itself, being more concerned with raffles and rules than the boys having a good time and maybe learning some fundamentals of a great sport.

BUT MOST OF THE DOUBTS were discounted. For five years I had coached in an intra-city tackle football program in Connecticut. And last year I became involved in an excellent Irvine flag football league.

My son went to those football tryouts last summer—and cried the whole night when he found out he was too young. It broke my heart and I knew they needed coaches. Les would be my water boy.

Now maybe baseball and football aren't comparable. But you'd think they should be.

In my six years as a coach in football, the parental involvement and the pressures were almost non-existent.

Sure, boys would run into their mothers' arms after scoring a 50-yard touchdown. But if a father ever gave a boy a bad time about dropping a pass, or complained he wasn't playing enough, he would be privately talked to at once. That almost always put an end to it.

THERE IS SORT OF an unexplained air around a football team bench. Maybe a football coach is more aloof. Maybe it's because football relies more on a team effort than the individual performances that are keys to baseball.

While far more parents attend youth football games than Little League games, and yell at least as loudly for a touchdown as a home run, they are far more respectable in their attitudes toward the sport—including, and perhaps especially, the officials.

I suppose Carol, my wife, and I should have been forewarned when, two weeks before Little League tryouts, the Irvine Little League sent around a flyer telling boys in the north end of town to ignore tryout information given them by the Tustin Little League.

But Les very badly wanted to play, and, like most fathers, that pleased me. TIME CAME FOR the first practice game. It was the top half of the first inning—Les was tucked safely in the middle of the bench—and a father who was calling balls and strikes said a pitch nicked the corner for a third strike.

The batter's shoulders slumped as he turned quietly to go sit down.

The silence was shattered as a rather hefty woman bellowed at the father-ump, "You blind s.o.b.!"

Now for the most part, the sniping at the umpires is confined to muted growls and gasps. And that's part of the game.

But too often feelings erupt like at one very recent game when one coach sat there calling the other coach denigrating names. The atmosphere was putrid. The boys on both teams played a terrible game. They didn't know what to make of it.

It doesn't have to be that way.

LITTLE LEAGUE BASEBALL can be a father watching his seven-year-old son at second base, standing there peered to death and in total awe and confusion. Mother hopes nobody hits a ball toward him.

Little League baseball can be an exciting opportunity to mold our youth. To let them learn discipline, let them learn that hard work and practice will make them do better, at anything. To let them learn to lose, but learn that winning is better—and a lot more fun.

Little League baseball will always be for fathers. But fathers must learn how to make Little League baseball a learning experience for their sons.

Writings Link Man to Possible Killings of 26

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A hundred pages of handwritten notes telling of hangings, ritualistic murders and sex acts may link a jailed man to the deaths of up to 26 women, State Attorney Robert Stone says.

If the manuscripts can be believed, he said, "I don't think the country has ever seen anything of this magnitude."

The man — serving a six-month sentence in Fort Pierce on an assault conviction — has not been charged in any of the crimes.

But he has been questioned in the deaths of two Fort Lauderdale area teenage girls whose skeletons were found on a remote beach April 1.

The manuscripts and other items, some of which were identified as belonging to murder victims and missing persons, were seized last month at the home of the suspect's mother, Stone said.

The notes were written in first-person story form. Also found were photos, drawings, gold-filled teeth, a purse and trinkets, authorities said.

Probe Continues Into Mysterious Death of Mexican

Coroner's investigators today are continuing the chemical analysis to determine the cause of death of a young man whose body was apparently dumped in a field in San Juan Capistrano last week.

And the probes admitted today the likelihood that the male Mexican in his mid 20s may have been an illegal immigrant who died from exhaust fumes in the trunk of a smuggler's car.

Traces of carbon monoxide have been noted in the remains, coroner's spokesmen said.

But a death certificate has yet to be completed and until the lengthy toxicological examinations are complete, an official cause will not be released.

So far, investigation has failed to yield an identity to the body.

Doggies Line Up For Vaccination Tuesday Night

Low-cost rabies vaccination clinics will be offered Tuesday at four Orange Coast area locations, according to the Orange County Health Department.

The clinics will be open from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. for vaccination of dogs at a cost of $2 each. The locations are:

Costa Mesa: Orange County Fairgrounds, Fair Drive at Fairview Road.

El Toro: Lake Forest Shopping Center, Ridge Route Drive.

Irvine: Walnut Village Shopping Center, Culver Drive at Walnut Avenue.

Westminster: Sigler Park, Golden West Street at Westminster Boulevard.

Dogs over four months old must be vaccinated against rabies and licensed.

Solon Says CIA Linked To Episodes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said today three highly placed White House staff members tried seriously last year to involve the CIA in covert matters other than the burglary of the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Reporting on secret testimony from four officials of the Central Intelligence Agency, Symington said he was surprised to learn that former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman was "heavily involved."

Symington, acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the other White House aides reported to be involved were John D. Ehrlichman, former chief domestic adviser to President Nixon, and former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

He would not reveal details of the testimony but said new revelations had come from the CIA's deputy director, Army Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters.

Gen. Walters did not join the CIA until December and Symington said the general testified to episodes involving the three White House aides that have occurred since that time.

"What I learned today that I didn't know before was how deeply involved Haldeman was as well as Ehrlichman and Dean," Symington said.

"Whatever the CIA was ordered to do," he said, "was at the direction of the top staff people of the White House. They would have liked to see the CIA involved."

Symington confirmed "there were other matters besides the Ellsberg case in which the White House staff tried to involve the CIA."

He refused under repeated questioning to give details.

In another Watergate development U.S. Judge John Sirica today ordered the clerk of his court to take possession of classified documents that had been placed in a safe deposit box by Dean, the man fired as White House counsel by President Nixon in the Watergate affair.

Following a brief hearing, Sirica ordered that certified copies of the documents be made available to government prosecutors in the Watergate case and to the Senate special committee.

On the third day of Senate hearings on his nomination to be attorney general, Richardson was asked by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.), whether he consulted with President Nixon or the White House in his search for a special prosecutor.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government auditors said Saturday "the Postal Service's mail processing problems are the direct result of its efforts to become self-supporting." There was no damage to the contents although the briefcase opened upon impact, scattering papers on the runway, according to the spokesman.

Huntington Crew Following Skylab

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The United States fired a shot today which you might say was "heard around the world."

Vibrations from the Skylab launching were certainly felt in Huntington Beach where most of it was designed and built at McDonnell Douglas Astronautics.

Top engineers gathered in a special control room this morning to watch the launching. They'll use that control room throughout Skylab's 140 days of manned orbit to back up the Houston Space Center in case any problems arise.

Engineers in Huntington Beach will be called on to answer any questions which may come up during the flight.

Local reaction to this morning's successful shot was, as expected, one of joy and relief, though McDonnell Douglas officials did not have much to say about it.

Hugh R. Rowe, executive assistant to the chairman and president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, summed up the company's official view:

"We're proud to be a part of Skylab's first team. We are anticipating with great interest the benefits to humanity directly attributable to Skylab I, America's first orbiting space station."

The space workshop, which will be home for three separate three-man crews of astronauts, was officially finished in Huntington Beach Sept. 8, when it was turned over to NASA officials.

McDonnell Douglas had a $390 million contract to build the Skylab, a partially complete backup unit and certain ground support systems.

At the peak of activity, in May of 1972, there were 2,600 workers at the Huntington Beach plant concentrating on Skylab I. Skylab workers accounted for more than half the plant's work force.

While the end of Skylab marks the beginning of a new step in space exploration, (See DOUGLAS, Page 2)

Death Probe to Reopen

County Grand Jury to Study Valley Shooting

The Orange County Grand Jury will be asked to reopen its investigation into the police shooting death of a young Mexican-American April 13 in Fountain Valley.

The request comes from Orange County's Human Relations Commission which met Saturday in Santa Ana to discuss the shooting.

"Several community representatives have indicated to us that there is additional information which has not been presented to the Grand Jury, including the possibility of one or more eyewitnesses," said Jack Turk of Huntington Beach, chairman of the commission.

On the morning of April 13, Westminster Police Officer Timothy Miller shot Miguel Angel Ronquillo, 20, in the back.

Miller was helping Fountain Valley police search for Ronquillo and three other Santa Ana youths who had been stopped earlier, but who had fled from two Fountain Valley officers.

Miller told investigators he had his gun drawn and the youth backed into him causing the pistol to fire accidentally. Miller was accompanied by Fountain Valley Officer Robert Mosely, who reportedly also had his pistol unholstered.

Morry Lindros, director of the Human Relations Commission, told commissioners Saturday that there were discrepancies between the testimony of the two officers, though he did not elaborate.

Lindros also pointed to the lack of community input into the first Grand Jury hearing.

Police Halt Car, Find Woman Shot

Adelaide Luna, director of Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez Community Center, remains in critical condition today after she was shot several times in an unexplained incident Saturday.

Mrs. Luna, 44, of 10371 Calle Independencia, is in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital after undergoing surgery for bullet wounds in her head, arm and back.

Mrs. Luna was found in a car stopped for a traffic violation by Officer Ron Gillman. The driver of the car, Richard Arechabala Morones, 46, of 4906 W. 7th St., Santa Ana, was taken into custody on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Investigators said today they have not established what started the incident, but they will be filing charges against Morones this afternoon.

According to police reports, Gillman allegedly saw Morones make an illegal U-turn near the intersection of Euclid Street and Warner Avenue at about 12:30 a.m.

The officer reported that when he walked up to the side of the car, he saw Mrs. Luna who was bleeding profusely.

She was taken immediately to the nearby hospital and Morones was taken into custody. He allegedly told officers he was taking her to the hospital.

Investigators said she had been shot with a 22-caliber revolver which they found when they took Morones into custody.

Hungry Hikers Fed

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — A woman complained to police Sunday that about 100 of 12,000 walkers in a hunger hike stole $100 worth of food off her catering wagon. Mrs. Lory Harrison, 23, of Oak Creek, said the hikers, who marched to raise money for 20 local, national and international projects, grabbed the food from the open displays.

Lightning Kills Pitcher From Saddleback JC

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Police Nab 7 In Marijuana Raid in Mesa

Seven persons, including three juvenile girls, were arrested and 65 pounds of marijuana seized following a raid at a Costa Mesa home by narcotics officers from the Laguna Beach, San Clemente and Costa Mesa police departments Friday.

The bust ended two weeks of investigation by the Laguna Beach narcotics squad and cracked what Sgt. Neil Purcell alleged was a major supply operation for the Laguna Beach area.

A foot locker-sized box containing 30 kilos of cellophane-wrapped marijuana bricks was held today as evidence. Police value this haul at $16,000.

Arrested were Joseph Steveling, 30, of 2260 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach, held on $75,000 bail; Joseph O. Helmer, 42, of Valdez, Alaska, held on $10,000 bail; John Miller Kauffman, 18, of Palo Alto, Calif., held on $10,000 bail; Barbara Anne Black, 19, of 440 Lenwood, Costa Mesa, held on $10,000 bail.

Purcell said all were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale. He claimed Steveling was the ringleader, and alleged that the 30-year-old Lagunan was responsible for sale of 150 to 200 pounds of marijuana weekly.

A 15-year-old Laguna Niguel girl, a 17-year-old Newport Beach girl and a 17-year-old Whittier runaway were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale.

Steveling, found hiding in a closet at the Costa Mesa residence at 299 Mesa Drive, was removed at gunpoint by narcotics officers. A large-bore automatic pistol was found in the closet afterward, Sgt. Purcell said.

Sgt. Purcell said Laguna Beach officers first began investigating Steveling two weeks ago and alleged that several buys were made by narcotics agents working through the 17-year-old Whittier girl who was living with Steveling, Purcell said.

He said Steveling had been under (See MARIJUANA, Page 2)

Solar Panel Failure May Terminate Skylab Project

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed into orbit today but failure of two solar panels to extend threatened to jeopardize the mission.

From Wire Services

CAPE KENNEDY — America's Skylab space station rocketed successfully into orbit today while its first three astronauts waited on the ground for their chance to join it Tuesday.

The big spaceship, largest ever launched, soared into a near-perfect 271-mile-high orbit at 10:40 a.m. (PDT), 10 minutes after a flawless launch.

Moonwalk veteran Charles "Pete" Conrad, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, the nation's first space physician, and aeronautical engineer Paul J. Weitz are set for launch at 10 a.m. Tuesday. They plan to spend a record 28 days in orbit.

The three astronauts watched as their space laboratory rocketed out of sight into a cloud cover.

The smooth flight into space marked a new era in the U.S. space program. Project Skylab is designed to push back the frontier of human endurance in earth orbit and cash in on the promise of spaceflight.

Once in orbit, Skylab quickly separated from its spent second stage rocket. Five minutes later, Skylab's protective cocoon-like nose cover separated in four pieces as planned.

Then Skylab, following orders from its onboard electronic brains, slowly swung its high-powered solar observatory into position. Mission control in Houston reported it securely latched in place.

The astronauts plan to use it to conduct the most extensive solar studies ever attempted.

Luggage Falls From Airplane

An Orange County Airport runway was inadvertently "bombed" by a Golden West Airlines commuter plane this morning.

The DeHavilland Twin Otter bound for Los Angeles dropped three pieces of baggage from an improperly closed compartment on takeoff, an airline spokesman said today.

The garment bag, briefcase and suitcase were retrieved after the pilot turned back and landed the plane.

There was no damage to the contents although the briefcase opened upon impact, scattering papers on the runway, according to the spokesman.

Nude Squad on Full Alert

Mesa Vice Officers Wait, Watch for Violations

Costa Mesa police department vice officers are poised for further raids on the Fire House night spot today if compliance with a new anti-nudity law is not met.

Sgt. John Regan, chief of the vice and narcotics detail, said his men would make periodic checks on the 17th Street soda pop parlor throughout the day.

If nudity persists, so will vice arrests under sections 61300-61305 of the Costa Mesa Ordinance Code. The sections prohibit nude entertainment in places where food and drink are sold.

Officers raided the Fire House twice on Friday and once on Saturday, arresting a total of six persons, several of them more than once. There were no arrests Sunday.

Regan said one of the raids Saturday had the effect of shutting down the Fire House. "We took everybody and there was no one left to keep it open," he explained.

After the employees bailed out and resumed operation of the Fire House, Regan said his men visited the place again and found all the dancers clothed.

"It was my impression that they didn't want to dance nude any more. There was one girl who was technically in violation because of the clothes she was wearing but she covered herself up. I got the feeling they didn't want any more of this type of arrest action," Regan said.

To make certain all Fire House employees understood the new ordinance and its application, Regan said he counseled them personally.

"They have all been advised of the section. They have no excuse to break the law again. If they break it, they know it will be them, not their employer, who must suffer the consequences."

Fire House management has pledged to continue the nude shows in the face of legal adversity. But, owner Ray Rohm could not be contacted on how long he intends to carry out that policy.

Regan said he personally believes it unfair that the management orders the dancers to violate the law. In his opinion, "It's just not right for the owners to ask their employees to commit a crime."

No arrests have been made by Costa Mesa police at Papa Joe's. Regan reported that the topless bar has ordered its entertainers covered and that periodic checks have disclosed it is complying fully with the ordinance.

BULLETIN

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An FBI marksman shot and killed an airport employee who had held a man hostage almost eight hours atop an aviation fuel tank today near Portland International Airport, authorities said. The hostage was reported safe.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

John Murph, a supervisor for Lockheed, said Abernathy drove to the Lockheed tank farm facility about 4 a.m. and captured the two men. A spokesman for the Multnomah County sheriff's office said shots were fired then, but no one was hurt.

Efforts were made to drain the tank through underground hoses but they were not successful.

Dalling told Murph: "He ain't listening to nothing."

Abernathy's ex-wife, Nancy, and his children live in Bellingham, Wash., 250 miles north of Portland.

Efforts were being made to bring her to Portland.

A woman friend of Abernathy's also was being taken to the scene to see if she could talk him into surrendering.

The sheriff's office said Abernathy spent four months as a patient of the Veterans' Administration Hospital crisis clinic in Portland several months ago during divorce proceedings.

The fuel tank where Abernathy was holding hostages is some distance from the airport terminal and is surrounded by open fields. The main street running nearby, Marine Drive, was closed to trafsurveillance by officers for about 10 days prior to the raid.

Seven narcotics officers including two from San Clemente and one from Costa Mesa were involved in the action Friday.

Purcell said two detectives observed the Laguna Niguel and Newport Beach girls go into the house and then quickly reappear with a brown shopping bag. Officers alleged the bag contained five kilos of the neatly wrapped pot.

More officers were called and entry gained into the house.

"People were running all over the house like crazy," Purcell said. He said that 30 kilos of marijuana were "out in plain sight." He valued the seized property at about $15,000 on the street.

Purcell said Steveling would go to the desert areas of San Diego County and return to the Laguna Beach area by a network of backroads, never passing alien Mexican checkpoints.

He said that the base of operations was moved to the rented Costa Mesa residence, next to the Santa Ana Country Club, several weeks ago and that the home was used for the distribution of marijuana.

Last Customer Holds Up Tavern In Huntington

Huntington Beach police are looking for the patron of a Huntington Beach bar who held up the saloon before leaving it early Sunday morning.

Colleen Lane, 24, and Joe Galsini, 64, manager and bartender of the Ninth Wave, 16903 Algonquin St. said the bandit was the last customer left in the bar when they began to close up at 1:50 a.m.

They told police that the 40 to 45-year-old man, wearing a dark wig spotted with grey, pulled a small caliber gun on them and ordered them to take the cash tray out of the bar cash register.

Escorting them into the bar's office, he also had Miss Lane open and empty the safe before binding their hands and feet with tape and forcing them to lie on the floor.

About five minutes after the bandit fled the two were freed by owner Allyn Miller who had come to collect the night's receipts.

Police reports show that $800 was taken in the robbery.

Cranston Speaks in Mesa, Vows Fight Over Cuts

Sen. Alan Cranston told a Costa Mesa audience this weekend that he is prepared to fight Nixon Administration proposals to reduce federal child care funds.

"Adequate day care centers are essential to help mothers get off welfare and into productive, paying jobs," the California Democrat said.

His remarks were prepared for a public forum sponsored Saturday by the Children's Services Council of Orange County on the Orange Coast College campus.

Day care centers, Cranston believes,

"also are needed so that mothers already working can continue work."

Cranston said that restricting eligibility of children for day care services would have "grave consequences, particularly here in California."

The proposed cutbacks would exclude more than 22,000 California children from day care programs but Cranston said he and 40 other senators are pledged to see they never occur.

The four cutbacks under consideration would affect programs involving preschool children, children of working mothers, children of migrant workers, and children of college-student parents.

Commission Chairman Turk also said the suspension of Officer Miller, or his reassignment, would also be recommended pending any further investigation of the shooting.

The Human Relations Commission was asked to act on the shooting by Mexican-Americans from Santa Ana who were friends and relatives of the dead youth. They handed the commission a petition signed by 315 people, asking for another Grand Jury investigation.

Press Aide Reiterates Nixon Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler reiterated today denials that President Nixon had any knowledge of the bugging of the Watergate or efforts to cover it up.

Ziegler, however, declined under repeated questions by reporters to issue a flat denial of a Newsweek magazine report that former White House counsel John W. Dean never made an investigation and report of the Watergate which Nixon attributed to him last August. (Related stories, Page 3).

Ziegler said the White House would stand on remarks Nixon made in a televised speech April 30 in which he said he had been misled by members of his staff until last March into thinking the Watergate was far less serious than he now considers it.

Ziegler declined to vouch similarly for a Nixon statement Aug. 29 that Dean conducted an investigation of the Watergate affair and issued a report exonerating all persons then employed by the Administration.

Ziegler noted that Nixon said April 30 his previous statements were based on information available at the time they were made and that some of that information now appeared to be incorrect.

HERE'S HOW AMERICA'S FIRST SPACE STATION WILL START
Three Men to Follow Unearthly 'Home' into Historic Orbit Tuesday

Airplane Prices Don't Take Off In Big Auction

The nostalgia craze that has many motorists out snooping around barns and old garages for cars of the pre and post-World War II years apparently fails to afflict flying enthusiasts.

Bidding for airplanes barely got off the ground at Buena Park's Movie World Cars of the Stars and Planes of Fame Sunday during the second session of a weekend auction of the prized antiques.

Despite the way they snapped up antique cars Saturday, bids were so low Sunday for four old fighters — ours and theirs — that dejected museum officials decided to hang onto them for another year.

Professional auctioneers led by Jack Brucker will try again to peddle a 1936 vintage Seversky 2PA Guardsman fighter; a 1945 Mitsubishi J2M3 reputed to be the last survivor among 3,000 Japanese kamikaze planes; a 1911 Curtiss pusher replica and a 1950 Conquest H3B liaison fighter.

The Kruse Boys, professional auctioneers from Auburn, Ind., had been optimistic about disposing of the four aircraft during the $3 million dealings over the weekend.

They expected offers of up to $50,000 for the air armada, but bids peaked out at a paltry mid-$20,000 average.

Billed as the First Annual California Coastal Auction, the event saw a car sold for the fourth highest figure of any ever disposed of on the public auction block.

A 1932 Duesenberg dual cowl Phaeton once owned by Canadian stripper Valli Broglie was taken for $87,500 by Ray Luggart, a Naples, Fla., building contractor.

Apollo program.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad 8,700 feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later, this year, each for 56-day visits.

Once in orbit, the Skylab, which resembled a huge bullet as it sat on the launch pad covered by a metal shroud, began blossoming into a full-scale space station.

First, the four sections of the 26,000-pound shroud peeled away like clam shells and flew off into space.

Then, an on-board computer commanded a set of arm-like metal rods to extend from the top of the vehicle, hoisting into place a box-shaped array of six telescopes, which the astronauts will use to observe the sun and other celestial phenomena.

The station is the size of a three-bedroom house and is the largest, most complex spaceship ever built.

ploration, it also means more to hundreds of local Skylab workers.

The sad part of their project is that many, if not most, of them are now out of work. They must seek new jobs, a somewhat difficult task in the field of aerospace.

In mid-April, McDonnell Douglas announced it would lay off 2,000 Skylab workers over a period of nine months. Those layoffs would affect Huntington Beach, Santa Monica and the Cape Kennedy facility.

Price of Gold Goes Out of Sight

Rush Sends Metal Past $100 Mark

LONDON (UPI) — Gold leaped to the highest price in history on European free markets today, easily passing the $100-an-ounce "barrier."

A major British dealer linked the gold stampede to a lack of confidence brought on by the Watergate affair but others disagreed.

The gold rush which saw a price of $106.70 on the French commercial market sent the dollar skidding on European money markets as speculators and multinational companies unloaded U.S. currency for the precious yellow metal.

In New York, the stock market took a sharp tumble in moderately active trading and the Dow Jones averages for 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 14.07 points in the first hour and a half of trading. The market eventually closed off 18.29 points.

U.S. tourists joined the stampede to buy gold.

"People with surplus dollars are getting out of the currency into gold," said Dennis Selby, chief bullion dealer for the London gold brokerage firm of Johnson Matthey, Ltd. "Watergate has left the political situation shaky in the States and this has put pressure on the dollar."

By late afternoon the price of gold shot up to $106.17 on the French commercial market — up more than $7 from Friday's close of $98.83.

"I think the reason for the rise in the price of gold is because of reports in the press that there is an impending financial crisis," Emanuel Brunoff, a French gold broker, said.

Asked if he believed the rise in the price of gold could be related to the Watergate scandal in the United States, Brunoff said: "In my opinion, I don't think it could be connected."

The metal's price was fixed at $102.25 an ounce on the big London free market in the second of the twice-daily price fixings. This was $2.50 higher than the morning price, $5.60 higher than Friday's closing price and more than double the official U.S. gold price.

Another gold source said: "Many foreign buyers are afraid of a new monetary crisis. For this reason they are going in great numbers to buy as much gold as they can afford."

Other European brokers and currency dealers also linked the gold rush and renewed pressure on the dollar to the resurgent furor over alleged White House involvement in the bugging of the Democratic Party Washington headquarters.

Watergate Case

List Narrowing For Prosecutor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliot L. Richardson today identified the "list" for selection as special government Watergate prosecutor as Warren M. Christopher of Los Angeles, Judge William H. Erickson of Denver, former Judge David W. Peck of New York and Judge Harold R. Tyler, Jr., of New York. Richardson gave the names to reporters during a break in Senate hearings on his nomination for attorney general.

He said earlier the White House passed him "two or three names" of possible choices but they were not among the last four.

Christopher, 47, a Democrat, is a former deputy attorney general, serving as the No. 2 man in the Justice Department from 1967 until 1969.

Erickson, 49, is a justice of the Colorado State Supreme Court.

Peck, 71, is a former New York State

Appeals Division justice and is senior partner in a leading New York law firm.

Taylor, who observed his 50th birthday today, has been a member of the U.S. District Court in New York since 1962.

Richardson indicated he might name the special prosecutor by Tuesday. He has told senators he will give them virtual veto power over his selection.

On the third day of Senate hearings on his nomination to be attorney general, Richardson was asked by Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.), whether he consulted with President Nixon or the White House in his search for a special prosecutor.

"No," Richardson said.

Then he added: "They passed me two or three names which they asked me to consider."

Richardson told reporters later that Gen. Alexander M. Haig, named by President Nixon last week to help reorganize the White House staff, and another White House assistant he believed to be newly named counsel Leonard Garment made the recommendations.

"They were just names dropped in the hopper," Richardson commented.

Richardson was nominated attorney general two weeks ago by Nixon and given "full authority" over the investigation of the Watergate scandal. In response to congressional demand, Richardson said he would name a special prosecutor and give him "complete authority" over all Watergate matters.

"No names suggested by the White House lasted as long as the final 10 or 12 names — not because they came from the White House but because I didn't feel they met my criteria," Richardson said.

Richardson told Nixon in response to another question that he had had no instructions from Nixon or the White House on the scope of the duties of a Watergate prosecutor.

Probe Continues Into Mysterious Death of Mexican

Coroner's investigators today are continuing the chemical analysis to determine the cause of death of a young man whose body was apparently dumped in a field in San Juan Capistrano last week.

And the probers admitted today the likelihood that the male Mexican in his mid 20s may have been an illegal immigrant who died from exhaust fumes in the trunk of a smuggler's car.

Traces of carbon monoxide have been noted in the remains, coroner's spokesmen said.

But a death certificate has yet to be completed and until the lengthy toxicological examinations are complete, an official cause will not be released.

So far, investigation has failed to yield an identity to the body.

18 Pups Enough For St. Bernard

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lady Samantha's owners don't know if it's a record, but they want to make sure she doesn't top her performance of giving birth to 18 puppies in a 20-hour period. All but two survived.

"That was just too many," owner Donald Huscher said Saturday of the 180-pound St. Bernard's activity. "She's tired, and she comes first. We'll probably fix her."

In the meantime, it seems doubtful that Sam will be meeting with Luke der Luderhund — Luke for short — the 200-pound proud pedigreed father.

Huscher, a self-employed paperhanger, said in about six weeks he and his wife Christine will sell the puppies and give a few to friends.

Pink Bus Line Purchase Again Given Approval

Purchase of the Pink Bus Line was approved today for the second time by Orange County Transit District directors.

Three weeks ago the district agreed to buy the line from Mike and Paul Kadletz. Their line has provided service between La Habra and Huntington Beach for the past two years.

But the bus line operators balked at the $30,000 price offered by the district because they said the sales agreement called for them to continue operation of the Beach Boulevard line this summer.

The Kadletz brothers claimed that the district directors had added that provision after they had signed the sales contract.

Today's offer is to buy the line for $32,000, up $2,000 from the original offer and does not include the requirement for the brothers to continue operation this summer.

Attorney Terry Moshenko, representing the bus line, said his clients want until a week from Tuesday to consider the new offer. He hinted that they might want more money for the line.

Border Officers Nab 229 Aliens Over Weekend

Border patrolmen at the San Onofre checkpoint reported another weekend of major migrations by illegal aliens. A total of 229 immigrants were detained at the station over the past few days.

Besides the large numbers of illegal migrants, officers Saturday arrested two young men alleged to be smuggling marijuana.

The pair, Marshal Robert Wilkerson, 23, of San Diego and Jeffrey Lauren Evans, 23, of Aspen, Colo., allegedly were carrying 28 pounds of the weed in the trunk of their car.

The discovery was made by officers during a routine immigration check, officials said.

The two men face charges of smuggling and were turned over to U.S. Customs agents.

Fans Go Berserk When Rock Fest Music Halted

SAN JOSE (AP) — A rock festival here that drew up to 10,000 spectators ended with an estimated 300 youths throwing bottles and swinging clubs because they didn't want the music to stop, authorities said.

When sheriff's deputies arrived at the private park site to break up a knife fight Sunday, there were only about 1,000 persons still at the festival.

When officers ordered the music to end, angry participants grabbed bottles and broke up soft drink stands to use the wood for clubs.

One youth was hospitalized with a knife wound and three persons were arrested for drunkenness, officials said.

One with a broken bottle but a bullet-proof vest kept him from a stab wound.

High Court Rules Women Get Dependents' Benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court ruled 8 to 1 today that women members of the armed forces are entitled to dependents' benefits on the same basis as men — a possible landmark decision in favor of women's rights.

The opinion brought the women's rights movement nearer than ever before to winning a high court ruling that sex is in the same "suspect" classification as race and alienage. The vote was 4 to 4 on this broad issue. One justice abstained.

Governments have a harder time justifying laws which deny benefits to persons in "suspect" classifications.

Nevertheless, Air Force Lt. Sharon Frontiero won her point, with only Justice William H. Rehnquist dissenting, because other justices voted in her favor on the basis of past decisions.

She sued to obtain benefits for her student husband, Joseph Frontiero, then attending Huntington College in Montgomery, Ala.

A man in the armed services has been getting housing and medical allowances automatically for his wife, whether he actually supports her or not, while the 6,000 married women must prove they contribute more than half their husbands' support.

The administration argued that the difference in treatment between the sexes was justified by the need for efficiency in administration.

A special three-judge federal court upheld the statute.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. announced the court's judgment in an opinion which said America "has had a long and unfortunate history of sex discrimination."

Solon Cites White House Link to CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said today three highly placed White House staff members tried seriously last year to involve the CIA in covert matters other than the burglary of the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Reporting on secret testimony from four officials of the Central Intelligence Agency, Symington said he was surprised to learn that former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman was "heavily involved."

Symington, acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the other White House aides reported to be involved were John D. Ehrlichman, former chief domestic adviser to President Nixon, and former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

He would not reveal details of the testimony but said new revelations had come from the CIA's deputy director, Army Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters.

Gen. Walters did not join the CIA until December and Symington said the general testified to episodes involving the three White House aides that have occurred since that time.

"What I learned today that I didn't know before was how deeply involved Haldeman was as well as Ehrlichman and Dean," Symington said.

"Whatever the CIA was ordered to do," he said, "was at the direction of the top staff people of the White House. They would have liked to see the CIA involved."

Symington confirmed "there were other matters besides the Ellsberg case in which the White House staff tried to involve the CIA."

He refused under repeated questioning to give details.

In another Watergate development U.S. Judge John Sirica today ordered the clerk of his court to take possession of classified documents that had been placed in a safe deposit box by Dean, the man fired as White House counsel by President Nixon in the Watergate affair.

Following a brief hearing, Sirica ordered that certified copies of the documents be made available to government prosecutors in the Watergate case and to the Senate special committee.

By making the Papers available to the prosecutors, who are under the executive branch, they'll also be available to the White House which has asked for their return. The White House requested the originals; it will get only copies.

Sexy Artwork?

Student's Sculptures X'd Out

HOUSTON (UPI) — Jean Elizabeth Hutchison is a 17-year-old high school senior who is a little confused today.

"The teachers told me my work is on a college level and is not acceptable on a high school level, whatever that means," she said.

Jean did a pair of sculptures for a high school art show. One of the glazed statues depicts a nude embrace between a male and a female. The other showed a nude man, woman and child.

Jean worked for 70 hours — on school nights and weekends — to finish the works. She admits to being influenced by Michelangelo.

She said she took preliminary drawings of the sculptures to art teachers three months ago and they approved them.

"One art teacher said the reproductive organs of the males were too detailed," said Jean's mother, Hedy. "Another said the statues were too sexy."

Jean took her statues to the art show Saturday but was stopped from putting them on display by school officials.

"They are not appropriate because they are a bit advanced for this type of show," assistant principal Charles Vann said. "But they are very fine pieces of art work."

Jean's father was outraged. He parked his car across the street from the art festival and displayed the statues all day on the car hood for everyone to see.

Solons Back Efforts for Upper Bay Preserve

California Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney will join Rep. Andrew J. Hinshaw and Rep. Clair W. Burgener in introducing legislation to create a national wildlife preserve in Upper Newport Bay.

Announcement of the bipartisan effort to create the Back Bay preserve came from Congressman Hinshaw's office today. Hinshaw and Burgener are Republicans while Cranston and Tunney are Democrats.

Action comes on the heels of an offer by the Irvine Company to turn over Upper Bay lands to governmental agencies for immediate use by the public.

Today's action was the first by any public officials toward taking up the company on its offer.

The four legislators forwarded a letter to Secretary of Interior Rogers C. B. Morton indicating the intent to introduce the Upper Bay legislation. They asked for cooperation and support from the Nixon Administration.

The text of their letter indicated, "It is our understanding that over the past several years the Department of the Interior has been conducting studies of Upper Newport Bay, to determine the feasibility of its establishment in whole, or in part, as a national wildlife refuge. We are further advised the department has been soliciting data from other federal and state agencies in the preparation of these studies.

"Recent events have made the completion and publication of the department's conclusions increasingly urgent. There has been a decision of the land exchange agreement between the County of Orange and the Irvine Company.

At a meeting held recently in San Francisco, the Irvine Company offered to transfer the property immediately to the public for its use, in exchange for an assurance of just compensation in the near future, and the resolution of related matters.

"However, juxtaposed against these events is the fact there has been no overall plan regarding the potential use of Upper Newport Bay or the preservation of its resources advanced by any of the governmental agencies expressing a jurisdictional interest in the area.

"This uncertainty about the fate of Upper Newport Bay should not be unduly prolonged. At present, we know of no program to protect the existing wildlife and recreational values of the Upper Bay. We are concerned that any unnecessary delay in establishing any designated portion of the area as a refuge may place these values in jeopardy.

"Therefore, we feel it would be helpful to have available to us at the earliest possible moment, your department's report on the wildlife values present in the area, the importance of the preservation of these values, the amount of land which

Skylab Flight Jeopardized

Jet Flight Curb Ruled Not Legal

In a decision that could affect operation of Orange County Airport, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 today that local agencies cannot impose curfews on jet flights from private airports.

Robert Nutman, an assistant Orange County counsel who deals with airport affairs, said the ruling probably would not affect short term operation of the airport but might have long term effects.

"We have a publicly owned and operated airport," Nutman commented. "Today's ruling concerned a privately owned airport, which is a very different case."

"But it is possible that airlines might attempt to use the ruling to remove the curfews they now have," he said.

Jet takeoffs are currently banned from Orange County Airport between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. Landings are banned after 11 p.m.

Officials from Airwest this morning declined comment on the court decision. They also declined to say whether the airline wanted to run flights during hours that now are restricted.

"It would be presumptuous of us to say whether we want late night flights until we can see a full text of the court decision," an Airwest spokesman said.

Airwest is currently operating on a month-to-month lease at the airport.

Robert Clifford, president of Air California, said he doubts the recent case would apply at Orange County Airport.

"But even if it did give us a legal precedent to push for night late flights," (See JETPORT, Page 2)

SKYLAB FANS USE SHADE UMBRELLAS AS ROCKET LIFTS OFF
Giant Saturn V Propels First Orbiting Space Station

Two Solar Panels Foul Up

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed into orbit today but failure of two solar panels to extend threatened to jeopardize the mission.

From Wire Services

CAPE KENNEDY — America's Skylab space station rocketed successfully into orbit today while its first three astronauts waited on the ground for their chance to join it Tuesday.

The big spaceship, largest ever launched, soared into a near-perfect 271-mile-high orbit at 10:40 a.m. (PDT), 10 minutes after a flawless launch.

Moonwalk veteran Charles "Pete" Conrad, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, the nation's first space physician, and aeronautical engineer Paul J. Weitz are set for launch at 10 a.m. Tuesday. They plan to spend a record 28 days in orbit.

The three astronauts watched as their space laboratory rocketed out of sight into a cloud cover.

The smooth flight into space marked a new era in the U.S. space program. Project Skylab is designed to push back the frontier of human endurance in earth orbit and cash in on the promise of spaceflight.

Once in orbit, Skylab quickly separated from its spent second stage rocket. Five minutes later, Skylab's protective cocoon-like nose cover separated in four pieces as planned.

Then Skylab, following orders from its onboard electronic brains, slowly swung its high-powered solar observatory into position. Mission control in Houston reported it securely latched in place.

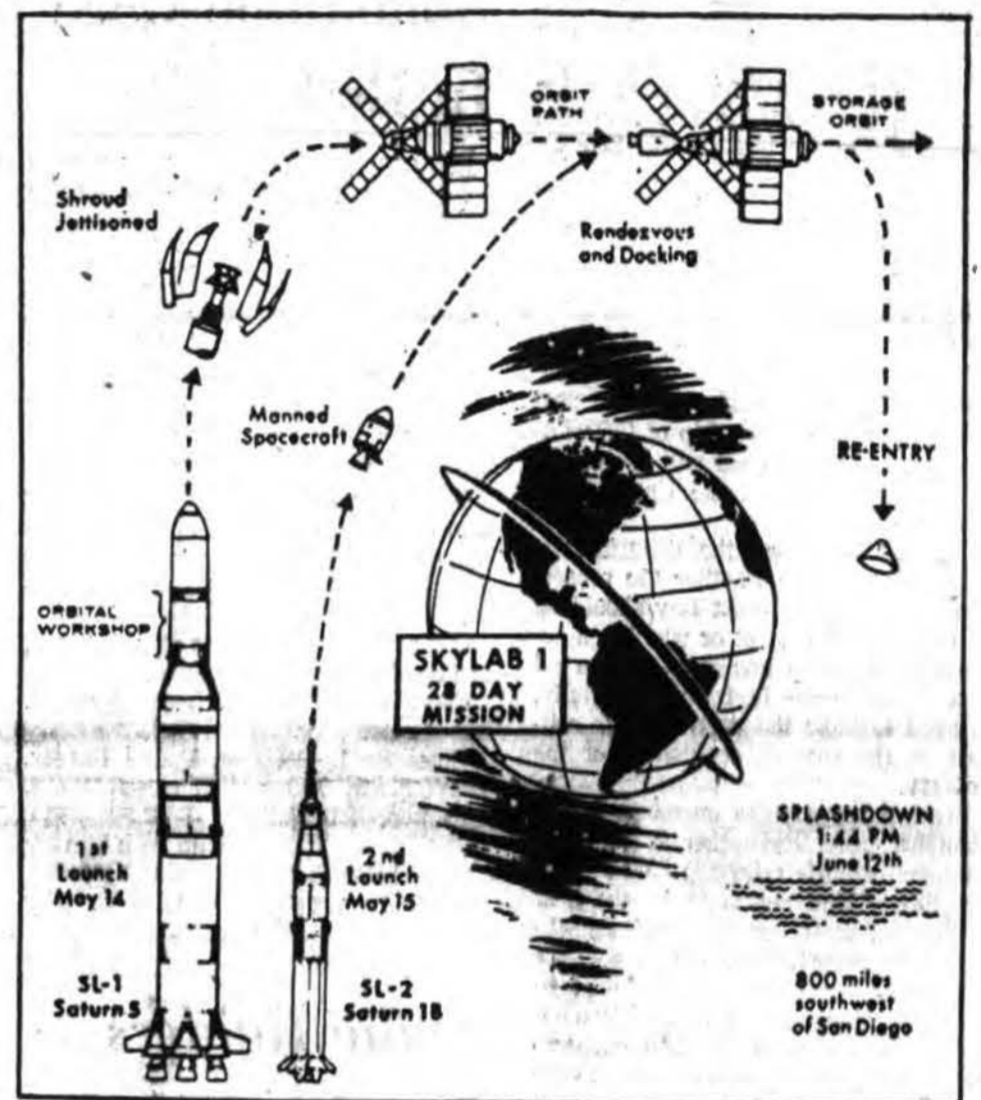

The astronauts plan to use it to conduct the most extensive solar studies ever attempted.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,200 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

The astronauts' smaller, 22-story Saturn 1B rocket stood on another pad, 8,700 feet away, awaiting the signal to blast off Tuesday if all goes well.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

Huntington Crew Views Launch of First Skylab

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The United States fired a shot today which you might say was "heard around the world."

Vibrations from the Skylab launching were certainly felt in Huntington Beach where most of it was designed and built at McDonnell Douglas Astronautics.

Top engineers gathered in a special control room this morning to watch the launching. They'll use that control room throughout Skylab's 140 days of manned orbit to back up the Houston Space Center in case any problems arise.

Engineers in Huntington Beach will be called on to answer any questions which may come up during the flight.

Local reaction to this morning's successful shot was, as expected, one of joy and relief, though McDonnell Douglas officials did not have much to say about it.

Hugh R. Rowe, executive assistant to the chairman and president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, summed up the company's official view:

"We're proud to be a part of Skylab's first team. We are anticipating with great interest the benefits to humanity directly attributable to Skylab I, America's first orbiting space station."

The space workshop, which will be home for three separate three-man crews of astronauts, was officially finished in Huntington Beach Sept. 8, when it was turned over to NASA officials.

McDonnell Douglas had a $390 million contract to build the Skylab, a partially complete backup unit and certain ground support systems.

At the peak of activity, in May of 1972, there were 2,600 workers at the Huntington Beach plant concentrating on Skylab I. Skylab workers accounted for more than half the plant's work force.

While the end of Skylab means the beginning of a new step in space exploration, it also means more to hundreds of local Skylab workers.

The sad part of their project is that many, if not most, of them are now out of work. They must seek new jobs, a somewhat difficult task in the field of aerospace.

In mid-April, McDonnell Douglas announced it would lay off 2,000 Skylab workers over a period of nine months. Those layoffs would affect Huntington Beach, Santa Monica and the Cape Kennedy facility.

FBI Marksman Shoots Gunman Atop Fuel Tank

BULLETIN

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An FBI marksman shot and killed an airport employee who had held a man hostage almost eight hours atop an aviation fuel tank today near Portland International Airport, authorities said. The hostage was reported safe.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The man, identified as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

John Murphy, a supervisor for Lockheed, said Abernathy drove to the Lockheed tank farm facility about 4 a.m. and captured the two men. A spokesman for the Multnomah County sheriff's office said shots were fired then, but no one was hurt.

Efforts were made to drain the tank through underground hoses but they were not successful.

Lightning Kills Pitcher From Saddleback JC

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Luggage Falls From Airplane

An Orange County Airport runway was inadvertently "bombed" by a Golden West Airlines commuter plane this morning.

The DeHavilland Twin Otter bound for Los Angeles dropped three pieces of baggage from an improperly closed compartment on takeoff, an airline spokesman said today.

The garment bag, briefcase and suitcase were retrieved after the pilot turned back and landed the plane.

There was no damage to the contents although the briefcase opened upon impact, scattering papers on the runway, according to the spokesman.

'In Ehrlichman's Safe'

Ellsberg Wiretap File Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus said today that the missing wiretap file in the Daniel Ellsberg-Pentagon Papers case has been found in a safe at the office of former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman.

Files on some 16 others involving 4 newsmen and 12 government officials were also found in the safe, he said.

The recent revelation that Ellsberg's telephone conversations had been tapped by the FBI while he was staying at the house of Morton Halperin — then an aide to Dr. Henry Kissinger — was a central element cited by Judge Matthew Byrne in dismissing the government's case against Ellsberg.

Prior to the dismissal, Byrne asked to see the logs of the wiretaps but the FBI said it was unable to locate them.

Ruckelshaus told a news conference that that file and some 16 others concerning wiretaps which ranged from May 1969 to February of 1971 "were located in the White House, having been filed in a safe in Mr. Ehrlichman's outer office."

Ruckelshaus said all the wiretaps had been placed after President Nixon — and specifically Kissinger — aired their concern to the FBI that leaks to the news media could be imperiling international negotiations relative to the war in Vietnam and Strategic Arms Limitation.

But the acting director said a preliminary look confirmed no such dangers to his knowledge in that none of the individuals who were tapped had been prosecuted or deprived of their government posts.

Ruckelshaus said the search for the files culminated after agents interviewed Robert Mardian, former assistant attorney general, at his home in Phoenix, Ariz., and learned from him that they might still be at the White House.

According to Ruckelshaus, Mardian claimed that former FBI Assistant Director W. C. Sullivan removed the files from the FBI because he felt "that Mr. Hoover might use the records in some manner against the attorney general or the President." Sullivan, Ruckelshaus said, "does not affirm" Mardian's version.

In any event, Ruckelshaus said, Sullivan delivered the files to Mardian who then took them to the White House.

Ruckelshaus said the FBI records, including notations by the late J. Edgar Hoover, indicate that then-Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell later told Hoover that the files had been destroyed. Mitchell has denied making such a statement.

Ruckelshaus said that he had gone to the White House personally Saturday to retrieve the wiretap files, and at one point "had to arm wrestle with the Secret Service" to get them.

Ziegler Says Nixon Was In the Dark

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler reiterated today denials that President Nixon had any knowledge of the bugging of the Watergate or efforts to cover it up.

Ziegler, however, declined under repeated questions by reporters to issue a flat denial of a Newsweek magazine report that former White House counsel John W. Dean never made an investigation and report of the Watergate which Nixon attributed to him last August. (Related stories, Page 3).

Ziegler said the White House would stand on remarks Nixon made in a televised speech April 30 in which he said he had been misled by members of his staff until last March into thinking the Watergate was far less serious than he now considers it.

Child Care Defended

Cranston Speaks in Mesa, Vows Fight Over Cuts

Sen. Alan Cranston told a Costa Mesa audience this weekend that he is prepared to fight Nixon Administration proposals to reduce federal child care funds.

"Adequate day care centers are essential to help mothers get off welfare and into productive, paying jobs," the California Democrat said.

His remarks were prepared for a public forum sponsored Saturday by the Children's Services Council of Orange County on the Orange Coast College campus.

Day care centers, Cranston believes, "also are needed so that mothers already working can continue work."

Cranston said that restricting eligibility of children for day care services would have "grave consequences, particularly here in California."

The proposed cutbacks would exclude more than 22,000 California children from day care programs but Cranston said he and 40 other senators are pledged to see they never occur.

The four cutbacks under consideration would affect programs involving preschool children, children of working mothers, children of migrant workers, and children of college-student parents.

Nudie Raiders Keeping Watch Over Mesa Bars

Costa Mesa police department vice officers are poised for further raids on the Fire House night spot today if compliance with a new anti-nudity law is not met.

Sgt. John Regan, chief of the vice and narcotics detail, said his men would make periodic checks on the 17th Street soda pop parlor throughout the day.

If nudity persists, so will vice arrests under sections 61300-61305 of the Costa Mesa Ordinance Code. The sections prohibit nude entertainment in places where food and drink are sold.

Officers raided the Fire House twice on Friday and once on Saturday, arresting a total of six persons, several of them more than once. There were no arrests Sunday.

Regan said one of the raids Saturday had the effect of shutting down the Fire House. "We took everybody and there was no one left to keep it open," he explained.

After the employees bailed out and resumed operation of the Fire House, Regan said his men visited the place again and found all the dancers clothed.

"It was my impression that they didn't want to dance nude any more. There was one girl who was technically in violation because of the clothes she was wearing but she covered herself up. I got the feeling they didn't want any more of this type of arrest action," Regan said.

To make certain all Fire House employees understood the new ordinance and its application, Regan said he counseled them personally.

"They have all been advised of the section. They have no excuse to break the law again. If they break it, they know it will be them, not their employer, who must suffer the consequences."

Newport Officer Discovers Body

A Newport Beach policeman checking a report of a suspicious person in a car parked at the Fashion Island shopping center Saturday discovered the body of a Santa Ana woman who had apparently taken her life.

Patrolman Ron Rodgers noted 14 prescription drug vials were found with Margaret E. Jones, 45, who lay on the back seat with the car radio still playing.

A note explaining despondency over ill health was turned over to Orange County coroner's deputies by investigating police officers.

Building Permit Issuances Total $28.5 Million

New statewide development controls enacted over the past year have apparently had little effect on the number and value of building permits issued in Newport Beach since Jan. 1.

Building Officer Bobby Fowler said today the city issued $5.7 million worth of permits in April bringing the total valuation so far this year to $28.5 million. That's nearly double the value during the same period last year.

Fowler said many of the projects, unless they are exempt for one reason or another, still must clear the South Coast Regional Coastal Conservation Commission before they can be built.

Single family homes lead the way during April with a total valuation of $2.8 million for 67 houses.

Fowler said the largest single permit was for a $33,000 house at 27 Augusta Lane owned by Harold Hartley.

More than $2.5 million worth of permits were issued to the Donald Bren Company for construction of 61 homes in the extension of Harbor View Homes.

Fowler said the biggest single commercial permit was for the Don Koll Company's $393,600 office building at 4040 MacArthur Blvd.

That was followed by Walter Botello's $350,000 Velvet Turtle restaurant in Fashion Island and a $280,000 restaurant by Harry Healy at 4248 Martingale Way.

Fowler said the total valuation of permits issued in the first 10 months of the fiscal year is about $94.8 million — nearly $30 million ahead of the entire last fiscal year.

Action Starts In Attorney's Perjury Trial

Jury selection began today in the Orange County Superior Court trial of Newport Beach attorney Everett Eldon Stone, who is accused of offering a witness $1,000 to provide false testimony in the lawyer's trial on lewd conduct charges.

Judge H. Walter Steiner was appointed today by presiding Judge Bruce Summer to take the bench in the trial of Stone, 42. Stone is charged with soliciting perjury and bribing a witness.

It is alleged that Stone offered the witness $1,000 and actually paid him $500 in return for a false account of an incident involving Stone and a policeman in the restroom of a Santa Ana park.

Stone was found guilty of lewd conduct and fined $500 by Municipal Court Judge Paul Mast after the policeman told the jury that the lawyer made improper advances while both men occupied the restroom.

Stone, who lives in Newport and practices law in Santa Ana, also faces disciplinary action by the state bar of California on the lewd conduct conviction. His appeal in that case has been rejected by the Superior Court's appellate division.

Newport Plan Topic Of Citizens' Meet

Continuing with an examination of urban development, the Citizens' Harbor Area Research Team will convene Thursday for a review of Newport Beach's general plan and rezoning ideas.

Rod Gunn, the beach city's advance planning technician, will address CHART members at 7:30 a.m. at the Mesa Verde Country Club in Costa Mesa. No admission is charged for the informal breakfast gatherings and the public is invited to the sessions.

he said, "we wouldn't want to attempt to do anything that the community does not want. I want to stress that as strongly as possible."

In a dispute between the city of Burbank and Lockheed Air Terminal Inc., the Supreme Court ruled that the city doesn't have the right to impose flight curfews because authority in that area is preempted by the federal government.

In delivering the majority opinion, Justice William O. Douglas said that if cities began to regulate times when planes could take off and land it could lead to a "piecemeal" air traffic law.

The case involved a 1968 Burbank law setting an 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew, and Lockheed Air Terminal Inc., owner and operator of Burbank Airport.

Nutman of the county counsel's office explained that Burbank had attempted to enforce its curfew restrictions under authority of its police powers.

But at Orange County Airport, Nutman said, the curfew was enforced through the landlord-tenant relationship that existed between the county and the airlines.

"The principle that federal control preempts local control could be applied in a very broad manner," Nutman said. "How broadly will depend on the language of the court decision, and I haven't yet had a chance to see a copy of the decision."

In the court decision Douglas wrote that Congress has delegated power to regulate airlines to the Federal Aviation Administration FAA which now acts in Protection Agency.

Eva McCulloch, 40-year Area Resident, Dead

Eva K. McCulloch, 93, cultivated the rose garden at her Balboa cottage for more than three decades and maintained membership in the Railroad Engineers Auxiliary for 69 years.

Sunday she joined her husband, whose own earthly ticket as an engineer for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad in Alabama was canceled by a fatal heart attack nearly 40 years ago.

Death came for the 93-year-old woman who had lived at 306 E. Bay Ave., on the Balboa Peninsula ever since she came west to follow the couple's son Clarence.

Funeral services will be in Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday, with the pastor of the Inglenook Presbyterian Church, whose membership rolls she never left officiating.

Despite her nearly four decades of living in the Harbor Area, Mrs. McCulloch was not widely known.

"She was just a fine little old lady who minded her own business," says her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Clarence McCulloch.

"Her garden was her life," added Mrs. McCulloch whose husband is a Harbor Area contractor and custom home builder.

Her specialty, notes Mrs. McCulloch, was roses, but the little southern lady grew every type of flower that would flourish on a cool coast so far from balmy Alabama.

No local funeral services were scheduled.

Steel Company Boosts Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., the nation's second largest steel company, followed the lead of major steelmakers today and boosted the prices of sheet and strip products.

Thursday, U.S. Steel, the biggest steelmaker, announced it was raising prices on high volume sheet steel an average of 4.8 percent, effective June 15. Other steelmakers, including Jones & Laughlin, Wheeling-Pittsburgh, Kaiser and Armco, announced similar hikes the following day.

The proposed increases have encountered opposition from the Cost of Living Council, however, which says it plans to review U.S. Steel's justification for the boost.

7 Arrested, 65 Pounds of Pot Seized in Mesa

Seven persons, including three juvenile girls, were arrested and 65 pounds of marijuana seized following a raid at a Costa Mesa home by narcotics officers from the Laguna Beach, San Clemente and Costa Mesa police departments Friday.

The bust ended two weeks of investigation by the Laguna Beach narcotics squad and cracked what Sgt. Neil Purcell alleged was a major supply operation for the Laguna Beach area.

A foot locker-sized box containing 30 kilos of cellophane-wrapped marijuana bricks was held today as evidence. Police value this haul at $16,000.

Arrested were Joseph Steveling, 30, of 2260 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach, held on $75,000 bail; Joseph O. Helmer, 42, of Valdez, Alaska, held on $10,000 bail; John Miller Kaufman, 18, of Palo Alto, Calif., held on $10,000 bail; Barbara Anne Black, 19, of 440 Lenwood, Costa Mesa, held on $10,000 bail.

Purcell said all were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale. He claimed Steveling was the ringleader, and alleged that the 30-year-old Lagunan was responsible for sale of 150 to 200 pounds of marijuana weekly.

A 15-year-old Laguna Niguel girl, a 17-year-old Newport Beach girl and a 17-year-old Whittier runaway were booked on charges of possession of marijuana for sale.

Steveling, found hiding in a closet at the Costa Mesa residence at 299 Mesa Drive, was removed at gunpoint by narcotics officers. A large-bore automatic pistol was found in the closet afterward, Sgt. Purcell said.

Sgt. Purcell said Laguna Beach officers first began investigating Steveling two weeks ago and alleged that several buys were made by narcotics agents working through the 17-year-old Whittier girl who was living with Steveling, Purcell said.

He said Steveling had been under surveillance by officers for about 10 days prior to the raid.

Seven narcotics officers including two from San Clemente and one from Costa Mesa were involved in the action Friday.

Purcell said two detectives observed the Laguna Niguel and Newport Beach girls go into the house and then quickly reappear with a brown shopping bag. Officers alleged the bag contained five kilos of the neatly wrapped pot.

More officers were called and entry gained into the house.

"People were running all over the house like crazy," Purcell said. He said that 30 kilos of marijuana were "out in plain sight." He valued the seized property at about $15,000 on the street.

Purcell said Steveling would go to the desert areas of San Diego County and return to the Laguna Beach area by a network of backroads, never passing (See MARIJUANA, Page 2)

Skylab Flight Jeopardized

Ehrlichman Safe Yields Secret File

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus said today that the missing wiretap file in the Daniel Ellsberg-Pentagon Papers case has been found in a safe at the office of former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman.

Files on some 16 others involving 4 newsmen and 12 government officials were also found in the safe, he said, were also found in the safe, he said. (Related stories, Page 3).

The recent revelation that Ellsberg's telephone conversations had been tapped by the FBI while he was staying at the house of Morton Halperin — then an aide to Dr. Henry Kissinger — was a central element cited by Judge Matthew Byrne in dismissing the government's case against Ellsberg.

Prior to the dismissal, Byrne asked to see the logs of the wiretaps but the FBI said it was unable to locate them.

Ruckelshaus told a news conference that that file and some 16 others concerning wiretaps which ranged from May 1969 to February of 1971 "were located in the White House, having been filed in a safe in Mr. Ehrlichman's outer office."

Ruckelshaus said all the wiretaps had been placed after President Nixon — and specifically Kissinger — aired their concern to the FBI that leaks to the news media could be impeding international negotiations relative to the war in Vietnam and Strategic Arms Limitation.

But the acting director said a preliminary look confirmed no such dangers to any knowledge in that none of the individuals who were tapped had been prosecuted or deprived of their government posts.

Ruckelshaus said the search for the files culminated after agents interviewed Robert Mardian, former assistant attorney general, at his home in Phoenix, Ariz., and learned from him that they might still be at the White House.

According to Ruckelshaus, Mardian claimed that former FBI Assistant Director W. C. Sullivan removed the files from the FBI because he felt "that Mr. Hoover might use the records in some manner against the attorney general or the President." Sullivan, Ruckelshaus said, "does not affirm" Mardian's version.

In any event, Ruckelshaus said, Sullivan delivered the files to Mardian who then took them to the White House.

Ruckelshaus said the FBI records, including notations by the late J. Edgar Hoover, indicate that then-Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell later told Hoover that the files had been destroyed. Mitchell has denied making such a statement.

FBI Marksman Shoots Gunman Atop Fuel Tank

BULLETIN
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An FBI marksman shot and killed an airport employee who had held a man hostage almost eight hours atop an aviation fuel tank today near Portland International Airport, authorities said. The hostage was reported safe.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A man armed with a rifle and shotgun today took two hostages, climbed atop a storage tank containing highly explosive jet fuel and threatened to blow it up.

The hostage, as William Howard Abernathy, 25, fired several shots at passing planes and persons on the ground, but officers did not return the fire for fear of exploding the 1.3 million gallons of fuel in the tank.

The 50-foot-high tank is located in an open field near Portland Airport, which was closed for a short time but then reopened.

Abernathy, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal Services at the airport, sent down word with one hostage that if his former wife and children were not brought to the scene by noon he would explode the tank.

Deputies said the tank, with a capacity of 1.6 million gallons, could be exploded by a shot.

The hostage, Steve Dalling, a Lockheed mechanic, returned to the tank after delivering the message but later was released unharmed.

The other hostage was identified as Gene Lloyd, manager of the Lockheed terminal.

Portland police officer Dale Austin said Abernathy was using Lloyd to answer questions shouted to him. Lloyd was being sent to the edge of the tank to wave his arms in reply while Abernathy held a gun pointed at him.

John Murphy, a supervisor for Lockheed, said Abernathy drove to the Lockheed tank farm facility about 4 a.m. and captured the two men. A spokesman for the Multnomah County sheriff's office said shots were fired then, but no one was hurt.

Efforts were made to drain the tank through underground hoses but they were not successful.

Dalling told Murphy: "He ain't listening to nothing."

Mesa Vice Officers Wait, Watch for Violations

Costa Mesa police department vice officers are poised for further raids on the Fire House night spot today if compliance with a new anti-nudity law is not met.

Sgt. John Regan, chief of the vice and narcotics detail, said his men would make periodic checks on the 17th Street soda pop parlor throughout the day.

If nudity persists, so will vice arrests under sections 61300-61305 of the Costa Mesa Ordinance Code. The sections prohibit nude entertainment in places where food and drink are sold.

Officers raided the Fire House twice on Friday and once on Saturday, arresting a total of six persons, several of them more than once. There were no arrests Sunday.

Regan said one of the raids Saturday had the effect of shutting down the Fire House. "We took everybody and there was no one left to keep it open," he explained.

After the employees bailed out and resumed operation of the Fire House, Regan said his men visited the place again and found all the dancers clothed.

"It was my impression that they didn't want to dance nude any more. There was one girl who was technically in violation because of the clothes she was wearing but she covered herself up. I got the feeling they didn't want any more of this type of arrest action," Regan said.

To make certain all Fire House employees understood the new ordinance and its application, Regan said he counseled them personally.

"They have all been advised of the section. They have no excuse to break the law again. If they break it, they know it will be them, not their employer, who must suffer the consequences."

Fire House management has pledged to continue the nude shows in the face of legal adversity. But, owner Ray Rohm could not be contacted on how long he intends to carry out that policy.

Regan said he personally believes it (See NUDES, Page 2)

Two Solar Panels Foul Up

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Skylab, America's first space station, rocketed into orbit today, but failure of two solar panels to extend threatened to jeopardize the mission.

The unmanned Skylab was fired into orbit to serve as a "cabin in the sky" for nine astronauts in the next eight months, with the first three-man crew scheduled to be launched to the lab Tuesday.

A Saturn 5 rocket propelled the 85-ton Skylab into a perfect orbit nearly 271 miles above the earth, and all systems seemed to be working well until Mission Control Center reported nearly two hours after the 10:00 a.m. PDT liftoff that the two 30-foot solar panels had not deployed.

An effort was being made to extend the wing-like panels by radio signal from the ground.

If the panels do not deploy, it is doubtful that astronaut Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz will rocket into space to hook up with the station on Tuesday.

"If the wings are not completely deployed, I frankly doubt that we'll send them up," launch director Walter Kapryan said.

The solar cells are designed to collect the rays of the sun and convert them to electrical energy to run the spacecraft systems.

Conrad, Kerwin and Weitz, who are scheduled to spend a record 28 days aboard the orbiting laboratory, watched the liftoff of the Saturn 5 from a viewing area three miles away.

Their smaller Saturn 1B rocket stood on another launch pad 8,700 feet away. The planned launch time is 10 a.m. PDT Tuesday.

Once in orbit, Skylab quickly separated from its spent second stage rocket. Five minutes later, Skylab's protective cocoon-like nose cover separated in four pieces as planned.

The astronauts plan to use it to conduct the most extensive solar studies ever attempted.

The astronauts and thousands of others in the Cape Kennedy area watched as the big booster rose slowly from its pad, gradually easing over on a northeast course as its five first-stage engines belched a fiery tail 2,200 feet long.

It was the final planned flight for the Saturn 5, the world's largest and most powerful rocket, which was built for the Apollo program.

Also observing were the members of Skylab 2 and 3 crews, who are to rocket up to the same station later this year, each for 56-day visits.

The station is the size of a three-bedroom house and is the largest, most complex spaceship ever built.

Lightning Kills Pitcher From Saddleback JC

A lightning bolt killed John W. Wade Jr., 19, Saddleback College pitcher Sunday and injured seven other persons during a semi-pro baseball game at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

WADE, A FORMER Mission Viejo resident, was winding up to deliver a pitch when the big bolt struck, knocking every player in the infield and outfield off their feet.

An ambulance operator said the lightning vaporized the youth's clothing, leaving only shreds. It struck the young man's head.

WADE'S SISTER was watching from the stands and ran screaming to his body.

Wade grew up in Orange County. He attended Mission Viejo High School through his junior year and played both baseball and football there. His parents recently moved to Lake Havasu. See Page 16 for detailed story and pictures.

Huntington Crew Views Launch of First Skylab

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The United States fired a shot today which you might say was "heard around the world."

Vibrations from the Skylab launching were certainly felt in Huntington Beach where most of it was designed and built at McDonnell Douglas Astronautics.

Top engineers gathered in a special control room this morning to watch the launching. They'll use that control room throughout Skylab's 140 days of manned orbit to back up the Houston Space Center in case any problems arise.

Engineers in Huntington Beach will be called on to answer any questions which may come up during the flight.

Local reaction to this morning's successful shot was, as expected, one of joy and relief, though McDonnell Douglas officials did not have much to say about it.

Hugh R. Bowe, executive assistant to the chairman and president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, summed up the company's official view:

"We're proud to be a part of Skylab's first team. We are participating with great interest the benefits to humanity directly attributable to Skylab I, America's first orbiting space station."

The space workshop, which will be home for three separate three-man crews of astronauts, was officially finished in Huntington Beach Sept. 8, when it was turned over to NASA officials.

McDonnell Douglas had a $390 million contract to build the Skylab, a partially complete backup unit and certain ground support systems.

At the peak of activity, in May of 1972, there were 2,600 workers at the Huntington Beach plant concentrating on Skylab I. Skylab workers accounted for more than half the plant's work force.

Bipartisan Effort

Solons to Back Bay Preserve

California Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney will join Rep. Andrew J. Hinshaw and Rep. Clair W. Burgener in introducing legislation to create a national wildlife preserve in Upper Newport Bay.

Announcement of the bipartisan effort to create the Back Bay preserve came from Congressman Hinshaw's office today. Hinshaw and Burgener are Republicans while Cranston and Tunney are Democrats.

Action comes on the heels of an offer by the Irvine Company to turn over Upper Bay lands to governmental agencies for immediate use by the public.

Today's action was the first by any public officials toward taking up the company on its offer.

The four legislators forwarded a letter to Secretary of Interior Rogers C. B. Morton indicating the intent to introduce the Upper Bay legislation. They asked for cooperation and support from the Nixon Administration.

The text of their letter indicated, "It is our understanding that over the past several years the Department of the Interior has been conducting studies of Upper Newport Bay, to determine the feasibility of its establishment in whole, or in part, as a national wildlife refuge. We are further advised the department has been soliciting data from other federal and state agencies in the preparation of these studies."

"Recent events have made the completion and publication of the department's conclusions increasingly urgent. There has been a recision of the land exchange agreement between the County of Orange and the Irvine Company."

At a meeting held recently in San Francisco, the Irvine Company offered to transfer the property immediately to the public for its use, in exchange for an assurance of just compensation in the near future, and the resolution of related matters.

"However, juxtaposed against these events is the fact there has been no overall plan regarding the potential use of Upper Newport Bay or the preservation of its resources advanced by any of the governmental agencies expressing a jurisdictional interest in the area."

"This uncertainty about the fate of Upper Newport Bay should not be unduly prolonged. At present, we know of no program to protect the existing wildlife and recreational values of the Upper Bay. We are concerned that any unnecessary delay in establishing any designated portion of the area as a refuge may place these values in jeopardy."

"Therefore, we feel it would be helpful to have available to us at the earliest possible moment, your department's report on the wildlife values present in the area, the importance of the preservation of these values, the amount of land which must be acquired to insure their protection, and the relationship of the wildlife values to open space and recreation values also present in the Upper Newport Bay."

"We want to know the department's recommendation on whether the preservation of Upper Newport Bay should be solely a federal project or whether a cooperative program involving state and local governments is feasible. Finally, we need to have the department's estimate of the cost of acquisition of the property."

"We are prepared to introduce at the propitious time, legislation to establish a national wildlife refuge in Upper Newport Bay if that seems to be the best proposal after we've reviewed the department's report. Toward that end, we invite your suggestions about language for the legislation, and we solicit a and would urge your support and cooperation in getting the measure through Congress."

Ex-Costa Mesa Man Recovering From Blast Burns

Former Costa Mesa resident John Maslyn, 24, was reported improving today from critical burns he received May 5 in a mobile home explosion that killed his 16-year-old wife.

Mrs. Charles Colburn, of 1540 Elm Ave., said her son, a former Newport Harbor High School and Costa Mesa High School student, has been taken off the critical list but "he has a long way to go."

Maslyn is at San Luis Obispo General Hospital where he was taken after the blast. His bride of two weeks, Elizabeth Ann Maslyn, died in the fire.

Their 50-foot house trailer blew up while parked in an Atascadero mobile home park. The cause of the explosion is still under investigation.

Maslyn, a cabinet maker and painter, lived in Costa Mesa until he moved to the San Luis Obispo area three years ago.

Fountain Valley Shooting Victim Remains Critical

Adelaide Luna, director of Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez Community Center, remains in critical condition today after she was shot several times in an unexplained incident Saturday.

Mrs. Luna, 44, of 10371 Calle Independencia, is in the intensive care unit of Fountain Valley Community Hospital after undergoing surgery for bullet wounds in her head, arm and back.

Mrs. Luna was found in a car stopped for a traffic violation by Officer Ron Gillman. The driver of the car, Richard Archabaca Morones, 46, of 4906 W. 7th St., Santa Ana, was taken into custody on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Investigators said today they have not established what started the incident, but they will be filing charges against Morones this afternoon.

According to police reports, Gillman allegedly saw Morones make an illegal U-turn near the intersection of Euclid Street and Warner Avenue at about 12:30 a.m.

The officer reported that when he walked up to the side of the car, he saw Mrs. Luna who was bleeding profusely.

She was taken immediately to the nearby hospital and Morones was taken into custody. He allegedly told officers he was taking her to the hospital.

Investigators said she had been shot with a .22-caliber revolver which they found when they took Morones into custody.

Only Home He Knows

Boy in Dismay Topples Into Swim Pool, Dies

A little Costa Mesa boy's fear at an accident that injured his substitute daddy in a foster care home for the retarded sent him running to his death Saturday.

Coroner's deputies said Michael P. McAllister, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McAllister, toppled into a swimming pool at 10962 Rocky Road, in the Santa Ana area, and drowned.

Investigators said Frederick Williams, a school teacher who operates the sheltered environment home for han-dicated children was repairing a garage door when the mishap occurred.

A large spring securing the door snapped and slammed Williams in the shoulder area, sending the McAllister boy fleeing from the frightening commotion.

He was found in the pool shortly afterward and taken to Tustin Community Hospital and pronounced dead. Williams was treated for a shoulder injury.

Rosary was scheduled for 7:30 tonight for the boy, and Requiem Mass set for Tuesday at 10 a.m., both in St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, Costa Mesa. Burial will be in Ascension Cemetery, El Toro.

Police Slaying Inquiry Pushed By County Unit

The Orange County Grand Jury will be asked to reopen its investigation into the police shooting death of a young Mexican-American April 13 in Fountain Valley.

The request comes from Orange County's Human Relations Commission which met Saturday in Santa Ana to discuss the shooting.

"Several community representatives have indicated to us that there is additional information which has not been presented to the Grand Jury, including the possibility of one or more eyewitnesses," said Jack Turk of Huntington Beach, chairman of the commission.

On the morning of April 13, Westminster Police Officer Timothy Miller shot Miguel Angel Ronquillo, 20, in the back.

Miller was helping Fountain Valley police search for Ronquillo and three other Santa Ana youths who had been stopped earlier, but who had fled from two Fountain Valley officers.

Miller told investigators he had his gun drawn and the youth backed into him causing the pistol to fire accidentally. Miller was accompanied by Fountain Valley Officer Robert Mosely, who reportedly also had his pistol unholstered.

Morry Lindros, director of the Human Relations Commission, told commissioners Saturday that there were discrepancies between the testimony of the two officers, though he did not elaborate.

Lindros also pointed to the lack of community input into the first Grand Jury hearing.

The Grand Jury on April 30 declared Officer Miller innocent of any wrongdoing in the death of Ronquillo. The District Attorney's office, which investigated the matter for the Grand Jury, had recommended such a verdict.

Lindros told the commission that the District Attorney's office gave him full cooperation in looking into the details of the first investigation.

Commission Chairman Turk also said the suspension of Officer Miller, or his reassignment, would also be recommended pending any further investigation of the shooting.

The Human Relations Commission was asked to act on the shooting by Mexican-Americans from Santa Ana who were friends and relatives of the dead youth. They handed the commission a petition signed by 315 people, asking for another Grand Jury investigation.

alien Mexican checkpoints. He said that the base of operations was moved to the rented Costa Mesa residence, next to the Santa Ana Country Club, several weeks ago and that the home was used for the distribution of marijuana.

Jet Flight Curb Ruled Not Legal

In a decision that could affect operation of Orange County Airport, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 today that local agencies cannot impose curfews on jet flights from private airports.

Robert Nutman, an assistant Orange County counsel who deals with airport affairs, said the ruling probably would not affect short term operation of the airport but might have long term effects. "We have a publicly owned and operated airport," Nutman commented. "Today's ruling concerned a privately owned airport, which is a very different case."

"But it is possible that airlines might attempt to use the ruling to remove the curfews they now have," he said.

Jet takeoffs are currently banned from Orange County Airport between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. Landings are banned after 11 p.m.

Officials from Airwest this morning declined comment on the court decision. They also declined to say whether the airline wanted to run flights during hours that now are restricted.

"It would be presumptuous of us to say whether we want late night flights until we can see a full text of the court decision," an Airwest spokesman said.

Airwest is currently operating on a month-to-month lease at the airport.

Robert Clifford, president of Air California, said he doubts the recent case would apply at Orange County Airport.

"But even if it did give us a legal precedent to push for night late flights," he said, "we wouldn't want to attempt to do anything that the community doesn't want. I want to stress that as strongly as possible."

In a dispute between the city of Burbank and Lockheed Air Terminal Inc., the Supreme Court ruled that the city doesn't have the right to impose flight curfews because authority in that area is preempted by the federal government.

In delivering the majority opinion, Justice William O. Douglas said that if cities began to regulate times when planes could take off and land it could lead to a "piecemeal" air traffic flow. The case involved a 1968 Burbank law setting an 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew, and Lockheed Air Terminal Inc., owner and operator of Burbank Airport.

Nutman of the county counsel's office explained that Burbank had attempted to enforce its curfew restrictions under authority of its police powers.

But at Orange County Airport, Nutman said, the curfew was enforced through the landlord-tenant relationship that existed between the county and the airlines.

"The principle that federal control preempts local control could be applied in a very broad manner," Nutman said. "How broadly will depend on the language of the court decision, and I haven't yet had a chance to see a copy of the decision."

In the court decision Douglas wrote that Congress has delegated power to regulate airlines to the Federal Aviation Administration FAA which now acts in Protection Agency.
