Aussie at UCI Deplores Crime's Hold on U.S.

By DOUGLAS FRITZSCHE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Americans are on a course toward social division into classes that can and cannot afford private security and a third class which preys on those who can't according to an Australian criminologist.

FRITZSCHE

That outsider's view of the crime beset country he sees as America comes from Paul Wilson, 31, a professor at the University of Queensland, Australia, who has toured U.S. cities for the past five months on a Fulbright fellowship.

"It strikes me as an outsider," he said in an interview at UC Irvine where he is teaching two classes during his tour, "that crime is more of a threat than the economy to the rights and freedoms that have been a traditional part of American history."

Americans, he said, are evolving into a society where the wealthy—those who can afford hired security—will "live in guarded compounds and those who can't afford it will have to take their chances with crime out on the street or in the suburbs."

SUNDAY SPECIAL

"When you can't walk on the streets at night," Wilson said, "you can't really say you live in a free society, can you?"

The sandy haired Australian, who is traveling for the dual purpose of examining law enforcement and public housing in America has published nine books and a five-page list of articles dealing largely with law enforcement topics.

In the field of crime, he said, Australia is still a developing nation, ten years behind the U.S. in the rising incidence of lawlessness.

The relatively "backward" status of the lower Australian crime statistics, he said, gives the country the "luxury" of enforcing vice and morals laws.

That luxury, he said, is one the U.S. can no longer afford.

Another luxury America can't afford, he said, is the continuing series of studies into criminal behavior and law enforcement.

"The last thing you need in this country are more commissions and more academic research on crime," Wilson said.

"Since 1967 you have spent $4 billion to come up with the solutions to crime. Now you have them and nobody will implement them. Millions of dollars have been wasted on academic research," he said.

Wilson admits to being a cynic when it comes to academic endeavors, and, in a recent paper of American criminology, aims a dry and well-honed wit at the profession.

In the paper he accuses criminologists of paying more attention to their academic standing and correlating information through computers than making inroads into crime.

Were the work of criminologists to be measured by any change in the rate of crime, he said, "a glowing report on our work as scientists would not now be forthcoming."

Nixon Snubs Paddling Passer-by

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Larry Capune, who is paddling the length of California on a surfboard, said Saturday he holds no grudge against Richard Nixon for refusing to put him up at his San Clemente home.

The 32-year-old Capune, who left Brookings, Ore., on Aug. 17, said he wrote Nixon aides three years ago, and again last week, informing them of his trip and his desire to "stop by" Casa Pacifica for the night when he paddled ashore.

But Capune, in a telephone call to UPI, said his reception was anything but warm Friday afternoon as he lit a smoke distress flare just offshore Casa Pacifica, paddled to the beach and rattled the compound gate.

Response came, he said, in the form of a voice booming through a loudspeaker: "Yeah, what do you want?" Capune explained he was paddling down the coast and wanted to greet Nixon.

He said he was told, again via the loudspeaker, "We don't do business that way." Then a marshall appeared at the gate and instructed him to go to the compound's front entrance.

There Capune, who was wearing only swimming trunks, again explained his mission, this time to the coast guardsman at the gate, who notified the secret service.

As he talked with a secret service agent, Capune said former White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler rode up to the gate on a motorcycle. However, Ziegler refused to talk with Capune.

"No one smiled the whole times, Capune said later of the episode. "No won-

Newport Pair Win National Hobie Title

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Hobie Cat-16 national championship regatta off Mission Bay wound up Saturday sounding like the title of a new movie.

Would you believe Dick and Carol and Bob and Jenalyn? That's the way the official scoring reads with Dick and Carol Beauchamp of Corona del Mar winning the title with ease while Dick's brother, Bob Jr., and his wife, Jenalyn, pulled themselves into the runner-up position in the final three races.

The Dick Beauchamps had such a breeze in the best seven of eight races that they did not bother to sail the last race, using it as the official throw-out. Their best seven finishes were 2-1-1-8-1-1-1 for a total of 13 ¾ points under the reverse scoring system.

After enjoying second place after the first three races Thursday, Bob and Jenalyn dropped to fourth on Friday with a 10th place finish they were forced to keep. But in the final three races Saturday they posted two third place finishes which allowed them to edge Reg Jaworski of Canada.

The regatta almost turned into an

Watergate Probe Nearly Complete, Jaworski Quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski resigned Saturday as special Watergate prosecutor, saying the investigations which have led to the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon and the indictment of his top aides were nearly complete.

In one of two letters to Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe, Jaworski emphatically rejected suggestions that he try to indict Nixon as a means of challenging the legality of the pardon granted the former president by President Ford.

Without specifying who had made such suggestions, Jaworski wrote to Saxbe:

"I think it proper that I express to you my views on this subject to dispel any thought that there may be some relation between my resignation and that issue."

"For me to procure an indictment of Richard M. Nixon for the sole purpose of generating a purported court test on the legality of the pardon would constitute a spurious proceeding in which I had no faith; in fact, it would be tantamount to unprofessional conduct and violative of my responsibility as prosecutor and officer of the court."

Jaworski submitted his resignation effective Oct. 25.

The 69-year-old Texas lawyer sent the letters to Saxbe the day after a jury was seated in the trial of five former Nixon administration and campaign aides charged with having conspired to block the investigation of the Watergate break-in.

He told Saxbe that with the start of that trial his staff "is beginning to address itself to the completion of remaining investigations and to such prosecutions as are still to be conducted.

"The bulk of the work entrusted to the care of this office having been discharged, I am confident that such of our responsibilities as remain unfulfilled can well be completed under the leadership of another special prosecutor."

Jaworski recommended Henry S. Ruth, deputy special prosecutor, to be his successor.

Jaworski, a senior partner in a Houston, Tex., law firm that is fourth largest in the nation, has never made any secret of his wish to return to Texas as soon as his work was done.

"I'll tell you that I'm certainly not going to stay with it any longer than I'm needed," he said in one interview.

Child's Body Found Off Road

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A child's skull, other skeletal remnants and a pair of blue jeans were being examined today, following their discovery Saturday along Ortega Highway near eastern Orange County.

The remains are believed to be those of a 5-year-old boy reported missing six weeks ago from the Lennox area of Los Angeles County.

Investigators were reluctant early today to discuss possibilities of what happened to the dead child, pending an autopsy.

"I don't know," said one Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputy when asked if the tot might have been kidnaped.

He and other investigators agreed it was highly unlikely a child of that age, who has been missing for that period of time, vanished willingly.

The decomposed body was found off the side of the highway beyond the California Division of Forestry Station at El Cariso, just over the Riverside County line.

"The remains are pretty well decomposed and they are about two months old," the deputy added. "This one has been missing for about 1½ months," he said of the suspected victim.

Rocky Admits Blame, Apologizes for Book

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller apologized to former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg by telephone Saturday for failing to prevent publication of a book derogatory to his opponent in the 1970 race for New York governor.

"I take full responsibility for the whole regrettable episode," he said to Goldberg and then telephoned President Ford to whom he read the text of his apology.

White House news secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had no immediate comment.

Beleagured not only by the book dispute but by a political uproar over almost $2 million in gifts to present and former associates, Rockefeller discussed with Ford what effect these incidents might have on congressional confirmation of his appointment as vice president, an aide to the former governor said.

The aide said President Ford assured Rockefeller "there is no problem."

Goldberg had called the book "pornographic" and demanded a congressional investigation of the circumstances surrounding its publication.

After hearing Rockefeller's apology, he issued a statement in Washington saying:

"The Senate and House Committees and ultimately both bodies of Congress are the proper agencies to determine whether Gov. Rockefeller's now-admitted misconduct and its attempted cover up are compatible with his being confirmed vice president.

"I am content to leave this overriding question in their hands since this is their constitutional responsibility to the people of our country."

Informed by the Associated Press of Goldberg's statement, Rockefeller said "I agree with Justice Goldberg that it is entirely a matter for the committees and Congress."

The controversy over the book erupted almost simultaneously with release by Rockefeller of a list of 18 former associates who received gifts totaling at least $1.7 million from him over the past 17 years.

Sources close to the former governor said he had supplied the information to the Senate six weeks ago and now felt he was the victim of selective leaks from the supposedly confidential material.

"That is why we have released the information now," a spokesman said.

The information consisted of a list of loans or gifts made by Rockefeller to former or present public officials from 1957 through the 3rd quarter of 1974 and of loans or gifts to specific individuals named in requests from the Senate or House panels.

These categories did not cover a $10,000 Rockefeller gift to Joan Braden, wife of syndicated columnist Thomas W. Braden.

The former governor denied again Saturday that he had known his brother Laurance had put up $60,000 to finance

Wiechecki Found Guilty in Death Of Aged Woman

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

An Orange County Superior Court jury that had twice declared itself to be hopelessly deadlocked reached a verdict late Saturday and found Louis Stanley Wiechecki guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the strangulation killing of Marion Camillla Morgan, 79.

Wiechecki, 30, listened without any trace of emotion as Judge Lloyd E. Blanpied Jr. ordered him returned to the courtroom Nov. 14 for sentencing.

The unemployed hospital orderly faces a possible state prison term of up to 15 years for the killing last March 1 of the frail, silver-haired widow who managed the Aladdin Apartments in Santa Ana for her son-in-law, Dr. Louis J. Cella.

Dr. Cella is the Mission Viejo physician whose name has often been associated with hospital construction projects in Orange County and who has, over the years, backed many Democrats seeking public office in this area.

Deputy Public Defender Ron Butler, Wiechecki's lawyer in the keenly fought nine-week trial, declared himself to be "really delighted" with the verdict.

"It was certainly better than I expected," he added. Deputy Dist. Atty. Frank Briseno, obviously disappointed at the outcome of a trial in which he had demanded a verdict of first degree murder, declined to comment.

Wiechecki was arrested last March 1 after Santa Ana police found the body of Mrs. Morgan, wrapped in an old bedspread that was later identified as having come from Wiechecki's apart-

Kissinger Meets Rabin Amidst Angry Protests

AHAB THE NON-ARAB — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger clowns it up, wearing checkered Arab headdress favored by Jordanian King Hussein's Bedouin troopers. "This will make a great picture," exulted the U.S. diplomat, who is Jewish. He is renewing efforts for Mideast peace.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger met with Yitzhak Rabin at the Israeli prime minister's home Saturday, leaving moments before hundreds of angry Israeli demonstrators smashed through police lines shouting "Kissinger go home."

Kissinger had just concluded his first conference with Rabins since arriving in Jerusalem on his latest Mideast peace trip and had taken off in a bulletproof limousine. He did not see police as they shoved back and hit some of the Jewish protesters with clubs.

The shouting crowd, most of them wearing the white skullcaps that identify religious Jews, waved a placard bearing the word "Kissinger — burn oil not Jews."

Hours before Kissinger flew to Jerusalem from Jordan on the fourth day of his trip, Israeli security sources reported at least five Arab guerrillas slipped across the Lebanese border, apparently planning a terrorist raid to coincide with his talks. But, so far no incidents were reported.

Outside Rabin's house, the demonstrators demanded that Israelis be allowed to live in the occupied west bank in Jordan and that Israel not give the war-won land back to King Hussein, no matter what peace bargain Kissinger might reach.

The protest had started peacefully earlier when about 8,000 demonstrators, mostly religious Jews, gathered outside Rabin's office less than two hours after Kissinger arrived.

Patty's Mother Says She Acted Unwillingly

CHICAGO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's mother believes her daughter suffers from an "induced psychosis" and was not a willing participant in criminal activities, the Chicago Tribune reported in its Sunday edition.

The newspaper said Catherine Hearst broke a months-long silence and appealed to her daughter to "get in touch with us and explain this terrifying experience."

Miss Hearst, 21, was kidnaped Feb. 4 from her Berkeley apartment. She was last seen May 17 in Los Angeles when several members of the Symbionese Liberation Army — the terrorist organization she joined after it kidnaped her — were killed in a shootout with police.

The wife of Randolph Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, said she constantly fears that Patricia "will not be alllowed to tell her story," but still believes her daughter is the victim of the SLA.

"What Patty has heard on the radio and read in the newspapers is that she is a wanted and dangerous fugitive with more than $1 million bail hanging over her head," the Tribune quoted Mrs. Hearst as saying.

"I am sure she visualizes and believes that if she is found, she will either be killed by police or, if captured, will spend the rest of her life in prison.

"What I want her to know is that the opinions expressed by a few law enforcement representatives are not the facts.

"The statements may have been made in a moment of haste but I beleive they owe my daughter a clarification of her legal position.

"Charging her with kidnaping, armed robbery and an assortment of other crimes which could put her behind bars for several lifetimes is all based on the belief that she had an alternative to these situations. But there is just no proof that she had any options open to her.

"No one has given us sufficient proof of Patty's willing acceptance of her role as a terrorist revolutionary," Mrs. Hearst told the Tribune. "Many persons connected with the investigation of Patty's kidnaping, and her subsequent disowning and criticism of her father and me, are convinced that her defection was forced upon her. We believe she reacted out of a psychological need to survive under any circumstances.

Man Killed In Shootout; Three Held

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A group of white-robed black men slashed an elderly black man across the face Saturday, shot a retired white policeman to death and staged a two-hour shootout with police at a radio station before surrendering.

Five men were reported involved in the attack, but two escaped before the others holed up in the black oriented radio station, WAPX.

Police Chief Ed Wright described the men as part of a "very small, select group of people who are masquerading or are part of the Black Muslims."

Authorities said they attacked 78-year-old Aldron Parham on a downtown street for no apparent reason, slashing his face with a machete.

They then fled in a car with Assistant Police Chief Roy Houlton in pursuit. The assailants' car crashed, Houlton said, and the men jumped out. Houlton said he shot at them and they fired back with sawed-off shotguns.

M. E. Furr, a 70-year-old retired policeman working at a department store, was shot by one of the five when he ran to aid Houlton, the assistant chief said.

Houlton said he then chased the men on foot down a main street before two of them disappeared. The other three ran into the radio station three blocks from the state capitol, and took two persons hostage.

Furr died at a hospital a few hours after the shooting. Parham was taken to surgery. Three other persons were injured including a secretary at the station who was shot in the head.

Station Manager Al Dixon said his son, Alfonso, 20, and a secretary at the station, Gloria Gilmer, were held hostage for a short time. He said his son managed to elude his captors and Miss Gilmer fled across the rooftops with the aid of a fireman's ladder.

Aerospace Union Workers Prepare Plans for Strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unions representing some 50,000 aerospace employes in Southern California are preparing strike contingency plans as negotiations with management bogged down, spokesmen report.

A strike would affect a total of about 250,000 Southern California employes in the industry in Southern California.

Local 148 of the United Aerospace Workers, representing about 12,000 McDonnell Douglas workers in Southern California, has scheduled a strike authorization vote at 2 p.m. Sunday in Long Beach Veterans Memorial Stadium. The International Association of Machinists Local at McDonnell had previously authorized a strike.

UAW members at Rockwell International Thursday authorized a strike and Lodge 727 of the IAM at Burbank will hold an authorization vote Oct. 20.

"If we don't have an agreement on Oct. 20, it looks as though this thing will come to a head," said Jim Quillin, president of Lodge 727, representing about 14,000 Lockhead-California employes.

UAW and IAM officials met Friday with McDonnell-Douglas officials in Long Beach.

Quillen predicted that unions at McDonnell Douglas, Rockwell International and Lockheed "may come down to the wire on the same day."

He said a contract reached by Boeing Corp. and the IAM would not be a model, as some observers had anticipated. The contract included 11 percent pay hikes the first year with cost-of-living increases to be computed quarterly.

ment, dumped on a vacant lot at the rear of the 17th Street building.

They immediately discounted a reported call to the FBI and a ransom note found near the body as "red herrings" devised by Wiechecki to divert suspicion from himself.

Statements made by Wiechecki's wife, Sandy, 23, led to his arrest the same day and she later became the prosecution's key witness at the trial.

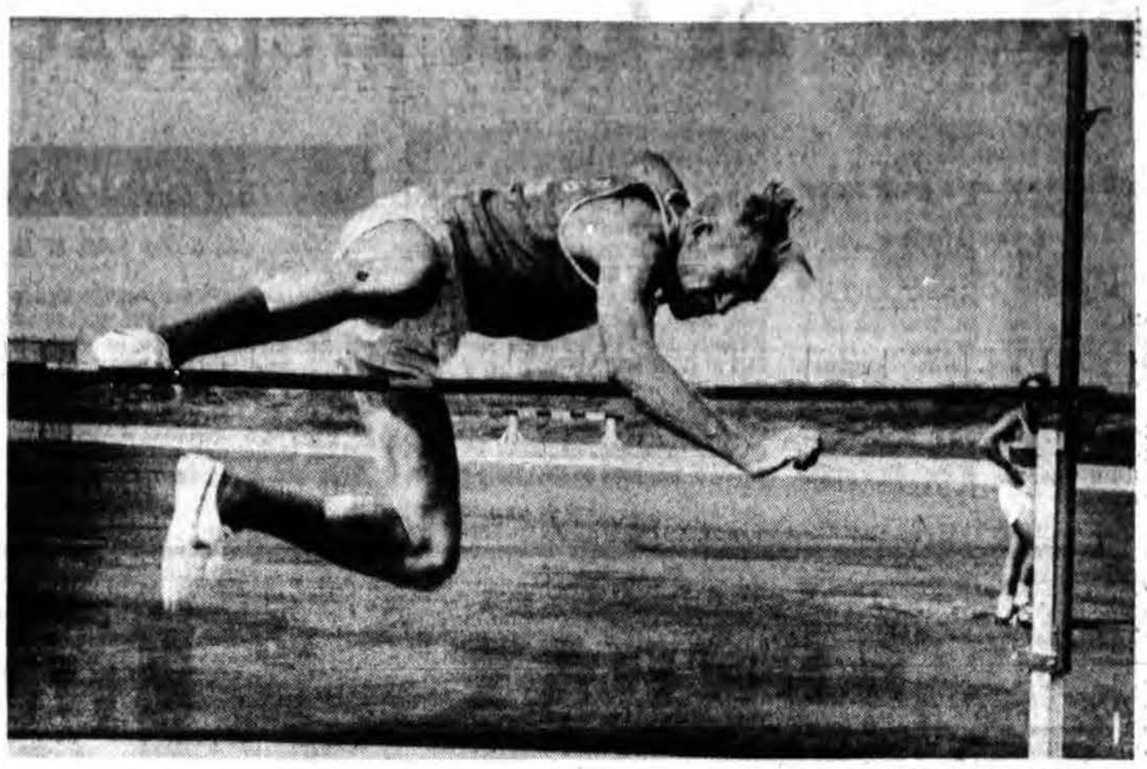

Mrs. Wiechecki confirmed for Briseno that Mrs. Morgan had repeatedly tackled her husband, while he worked as janitor for Dr. Cella, about rent payments made to him by other tenants that never reached her office.

Briseno alleged that her renewed complaints about the missing rent and Wiechecki's reluctance to move out of the apartment he had been ordered to vacate led to his killing of the elderly widow.

Mrs. Wiechecki testified that she saw her husband enter Mrs. Morgan's office and that she then heard screams and a thud. She said Wiechecki told her that Mrs. Morgan had had an epileptic fit and that he intended to take her to her room and give her medication.

Mrs. Wiechecki testified that all she saw at that time were Mrs. Morgan's feet as the widow apparently lay prostrate at the other side of the desk.

She said she did not learn until police arrived at the apartment house that Mrs. Morgan had died or that her husband was connected to the slaying.

Irvine Co. Project

Complex Complaints Grow

By DOUGLAS FRITZSCHE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two air pollution agencies have added their lists of concerns to the growing number of complaints about environmental information on the proposed Irvine Industrial Complex-East.

The California Air Resources Board and the Orange County Air Pollution Control District, in letters to the Irvine City Council, said the information in the Irvine Company environmental impact reports is inadequate.

The company has asked the city to change the zoning on its 2,058-acre tract between the southern corner of El Toro Marine Corps Air Station and the Santa Ana Freeway, to allow industrial use.

The report, said William C. Lockett, chief of evaluation and planning for the state board, does not "satisfy the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act in regard to the potential impact on air quality."

The information in the company's environmental document, the state board said, does not demonstrate that the project will not interfere with attaining air quality goals.

The board wants further study into how much pollution will be generated from the additional auto travel caused by the industrial area, what the effect of that pollution will be when coupled with other development in the vicinity, and how that will effect future air quality.

The company report projects a 30 percent drop in air pollution due to automobiles by 1986, an estimate attacked by the Orange County Air Pollution Control District.

Using the same figures as those in the Irvine Company document, the county district determined that "hydrocarbon emissions will increase 18 percent, carbon monoxide emissions will increase by 73 percent, oxides of nitrogen emissions will decrease four percent, and particulates and oxides of sulphur will increase 218 percent."

"The suggested reduction in the (report) cannot be supported by the district," says a letter from Air Pollution Control Engineer Martin Kay.

The district, Kay said, expects other Orange County air pollution to decrease significantly by 1986, thus making that caused by the industrial complex a larger portion of the total.

The complex is expected to have about 51,000 employees, most of whom will not live in Irvine due either to choice or inability to afford housing there.

The district suggests that some of the pollution problems could be alleviated by providing "affordable housing for any employe that would desire to live near work."

Other measures suggested include encouraging carpools, trying to ensure mass transit service to the area, and adapting work hours to fit bus schedules.

Such concerns about environmental impact reports must be addressed before the city can grant the zone change, according to state law.

The city could approve the project with a marginal answer, said Councilman Art Anthony, "but we would be doing so at our own peril."

The study requested by the state board, Mayor Gabrielle Pryor said, could cost as much as $80,000. It is not clear, she said, whether the city or the company would have to pay for the additional study.

The key to addressing such questions, said City Manager William Woollett, is a matter of using the proper procedure, not of fact-finding.

ROCKEFELLER APOLOGIZES . . .

publication of "Arthur J. Goldberg, the Old and the New," or that he was aware of its contents.

Publication details were handled by John Wells, a long-time Rockefeller associate, who dealt with Arlington House, a conservative publishing firm in New Rochelle, N.Y., which is owned by the Starr Broadcasting group of which columnist William F. Buckley Jr. is chairman.

Approximately 100,000 copies were given to Rockefeller campaign aides for distribution.

"Jack Wells told me early in the 1970 campaign," Rockefeller said, "that Victor Lasky was working on a biography of Arthur Goldberg.

"I didn't pay the matter any attention because I've always felt such a book coming out during a campaign doesn't cut any ice."

The Rockefeller gift list was made public in copies of a letter the vice-president-designate sent to Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.), chairman of the committee on rules and administration.

He noted that the 18 persons mentioned were present or former public officials and members of his staff while he was governor during the period 1957-1974. He gave a total figure as $1,778,878.

Sen. James B. Allen (D-Ala.) said in Washington that he believed the chances were good the Rules Committee would reopen the hearings after the congressional recess furing the election period.

The FBI has also been asked to make further investigations in the field of Rockefeller gifts.

Rockefeller's public disclosure Friday of gifts and loans to public officials did not include a $50,000 loan that "Rockefeller interests" arranged for L. Judson Morhouse in the late 1950s, according to NBC News.

The loan enabled Morhouse to purchase stock that was later sold for a profit of more than $100,000, according to NBC It previously was disclosed that Morhouse, a former Republican official in New York, also received an $86,000 gift from Rockefeller in the form of a canceled loan.

A Rockefeller spokesman said Saturday that Nelson Rockefeller was not involved in the reported $50,000 loan and that he had no information about the loan.

Waldheim to Ask Aid for Destitute

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim will shortly ask for billions of dollars of world aid to countries suffering the most from the world economic crisis, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The sources said Waldheim believes nations suffering the most, including Bangladesh and India, will face economic disaster if the international community does not act promptly to give them a total of $4.6 billion for the year 1974 and 1975.

Waldheim was encouraged by a recent upsurge in aid commitments, which now amount to $2.7 billion, the sources said, but he feels that the momentum of further assistance will have to be kept up to save not only the economies but the entire fabric of social and political life of some countries.

Refused admittance, Capune said he was taken by a local reporter to Nixon's next door neighbor, Thomas Bare, who invited Capune to be his guest.

From the Bare home Capune called Nixon aide Stephen Bull, who he said told him there was "just no room" at Casa Pacifica, and that his arrival was poorly timed.

Capune, referring to himself as a "good Republican," said that during a similar east coast journey just before the Watergate break-in in 1972, he spent two days with the family of Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"If you want to know an awkward place to be at an awkward time, that was it," he said. "But they took me, an emabarrassed Republican, in then."

He said he undertook the journey to "demonstrate to young people that you can go out, be different, do something different and still live within the laws and values of our country."

Mexico Reports Major Oil Find Along Gulf Coast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The head of the Mexican state oil monopoly said Saturday that a new oil find in southeastern Mexico may be the richest yet in the country.

The Washington Post reported that preliminary estimates place the potential yield at up to 20 billion barrels of high-grade oil — double the amount believed to lie under Alaska's North Slope. The paper said the oil was discovered in the states of Tabasco and Chiapas, about 800 miles south of Houston.

Antonio Dovali Jaime, director of the state oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos said in an interview he did not have exact figures.

"I cannot confirm such a figure now, but I believe the find is the richest yet in the country," Dovali Jaime said. "Explorations may reveal that it could be even bigger than that."

He said the current production from the area was 235,000 barrels a day, out of a national daily production of 635,000 barrels.

Mexico will be exporting 200,000 barrels a day next year, according to the Washington Post, and the new oil discovery along the Gulf of Mexico could boost that figure to nearly two million barrels a day by 1980.

Mexico's oil industry was expropriated from American and British firms in 1938.

A government corporation known as Petroleos Mexicanos, or PEMEX, directs the industry. The Post said PEMEX discovered the new oil deposits by drilling deeper in old ground that had proved dry in previous drilling.

President Ford is expected to discuss additional petroleum shipments when he meets with Mexican President Luis Echeverria on Oct. 21. But the Washington Post quoted State Department officials as saying that was not the reason for setting up the meeting.

The United States now imports a total of about six million barrels of oil a day, much of it from Arab sources in the Persian Gulf area.

Coast Fisherman Beats Odds

Angler Brings In 314-pound Swordfish off Newport Beach

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It wasn't until the struggle was in its 90th minute that those aboard the Grin 'N' Barrett Oct. 4 knew they were key players in a classic sport fishing confrontation.

The realization came when the huge black and silver swordfish leaped from the sea 14 miles outside Newport Harbor and skittered across the choppy waters on its tail.

"My God, it's a 300 pounder!" a member of the fishing party reportedly exclaimed as the enraged fish plunged back into the ocean to continue its battle with 27-year-old Larry Barrett of South Laguna.

Three hours later the broadbill swordfish was hauled aboard the Grin 'N' Barrett, its lifelcss body the key dimension in a pending world angling record.

From tip of bill to tail the massive fish measured 11 feet. At its broadest point, its girth was 44 inches. And, the fish weighed 314 pounds.

It wasn't the biggest broadbill swordfish ever landed by a sport fisherman.

But it was the biggest by far ever caught by an angler using 30-pound test line, tentatively obliterating the existing world record of 204 pounds.

Experienced Newport Harbor anglers say that to catch such a fish using 80-pound test line would be a severe test of a fisherman's skill and sportsmanship.

They also say that to land a 314-pound broadbill on 30-pound test line classed as "light" is a record "that will stand forever."

But Barrett, a former member of the University of Colorado ski team who is as much at home on a tennis court as on a fishing deck, isn't claiming a world's record yet.

"That's something only the International Game Fish Association can determine," says Barrett.

That determination won't come until after the association has examined the equipment used, scale accuracy and the circumstances surrounding the prize catch.

As dedicated sport fishermen competing in an Avalon Angling Club tournament, the four men aboard the Grin 'N' Barrett paid meticulous attention to international game fish rules during the four and a half hour contest between a 175-pound man and the 314-pound fighting swordfish.

Midway through the encounter, for example, Barrett's father, Richard Barrett of Lido Isle, deliberately dove overboard to avoid contacting the fishing line with his body.

Had such a brush occurred, the fish would not have qualified either as a potential world record or tournament entry.

Five times during the exhausting struggle the huge fish rocketed to the surface to dance wildly along the water in a futile attempt to shake loose from the hook embedded in his body.

Six times the broadbill "came" to the boat only to race away from his adversary in a determined bid to win the battle of wits and might.

Barrett says his chief concern was keeping some tension on the line. Had any slack developed, a sudden lunge by the swordfish could have easily snapped the lightweight line.

And, the South Lagunan admits, he was haunted by frequently told tales of such fish gaining victory by slashing the line with their sharp bills.

When the gigantic swordfish was finally hauled aboard the Grin 'N' Barrett, Warren Merrill, a Barrett family friend from Long Beach, slipped into the water.

"My dad, Warren and I, all of us driping wet, just stood there and laughed when it was all over," says Barrett.

He gives much of the credit for the successful catch to the "expert" boat handling of skipper Jon Beatty and to the shouts of encouragement that came from the other two men.

It is the common practice on the Barrett boat to tag and release all fish caught that they don't either intend to eat or to enter in tournaments.

"Why destroy a beautiful animal without purpose?" asks the younger Barrett.

In the case of the 314-pound swordfish, it was the winning catch in the Tuna Club of Avalon tournament, a pending world's record and has now been butchered.

In retrospect, Larry Barrett marvels at the circumstances leading to his encounter with the prize fish.

For one thing, Barrett's quest was for a catch that would qualify him for membership in the Avalon Tuna Club. A possible world's record, he says, "was the farthest thing from my mind."

Five lines were strung out behind the Grin 'N' Barrett when the giant fish struck, four of them 20-pound test lines. And, the swordfish went after a marlin lure trailing red and white streamers, normally an unattractive enticement for such fish.

"I don't know why things happened as they did and probably will never understand why," he says when discussing his once-in-a-lifetime encounter.

For Grin 'N' Barrett skipper Beatty, it was his first day at sea on the well-equipped sport fishing boat.

After 15 years as a private fishing boat captain and countless catches, Beatty says:

"I couldn't help but join the others when they looked down at the dead fish and congratulated it for putting up a helluva fight."

CRIME IN AMERICA . . .

U.S. BESIEGED BY CRIME
Aussie Paul Wilson

If the trend toward armed encampments is to change, he said, "you have to stop making the law a moral busybody and begin to decriminalize such activities as gambling, prostitution, sexual activities between consenting adults in private and public drunkenness.

"You should apply the same conditions to marijuana as to alcohol and the same to guns as to car licenses.

"You should pay the police the same as judges.

"And you should stop pouring millions of dollars into increased police hardware such as guns, helicopters and cars.

"The millions you have spent have had no impact on crime at all. If they have, I'd like to see just one scrap of evidence," Wilson said.

With the rapid rise in the crime rate and "eight to nine times the number of crimes that are reported, the police don't have the resources to enforce victimless crime laws," he said.

"People have the right to go to hell in their own way, as long as they don't hurt someone else in the process," he said.

"It's hard to see how prostitutes, homosexuals and public drunks are hurting anyone. The same goes for gambling.

"On the other hand, I see tremendous harm when it's made illegal. The whole history of organized crime in this country is centered around providing these services," Wilson said.

Good public housing, he said, linking the two subjects of his research together, is one way to cut crime.

"In every society in the world—particularly in the Western industrial nations—there are those who can't compete," he said.

"There will always be people who cannot adequately compete for jobs or for housing and they have to rely on the state for the necessities of life.

"It's found in Austrailia, in Western Europe, everywhere. Why the United States should be any different eludes me."

Providing those necessities through effectively managed public housing and service programs, he said, is one way to cut the impetus toward crime.

Unless a reversal is brought about in current trends, he said, "I see the middle class—in the broad sense—living in these compounds. The very poor living in public housing. And those in between being the victims of crime in the cities and in the suburbs."

All the answers, he said, have already been found through the variety of studies into crime.

"I really can't add anything new or miraculous," he said, "it's all there. All you have to do is implement it."

President Urges Boston 'Reject Violence'

BOSTON (AP) — President Ford, in a tape-recorded message made in the White House and broadcast here Saturday, urged Bostonians to "reject violence of any kind" in connection with school desegregation.

"The people of Boston share a tradition for reason, fairness and respect for the right of others," Ford said. "Now, in a difficult period for all of you, it is a time to reflect on all that your city means to you: to react in the finest tradition of your city's people."

The President said the statement was made at the request of Sen. Edward W. Brooke (R-Mass.), who urged Ford to personally seek an end to the four weeks of troubles connected with school busing to achieve integration.

Brooke said following the broadcast, "I'm very pleased the President did grant my request." Brooke said he had wanted to "see the full force of the presidency bringing peace and calm to Boston and doing everything possible to avoid any further outbreak of violence."

Ford said in his message, "It is up to you, every one of you, every parent, child, to reject violence of any kind in your city." He asked Bostonians "to reject hatred and the shrill voices of the violent few."

The President said, "I know that nothing is more important to you than the safety of the children in Boston and only your calm and thoughtful action now can guarantee that safety."

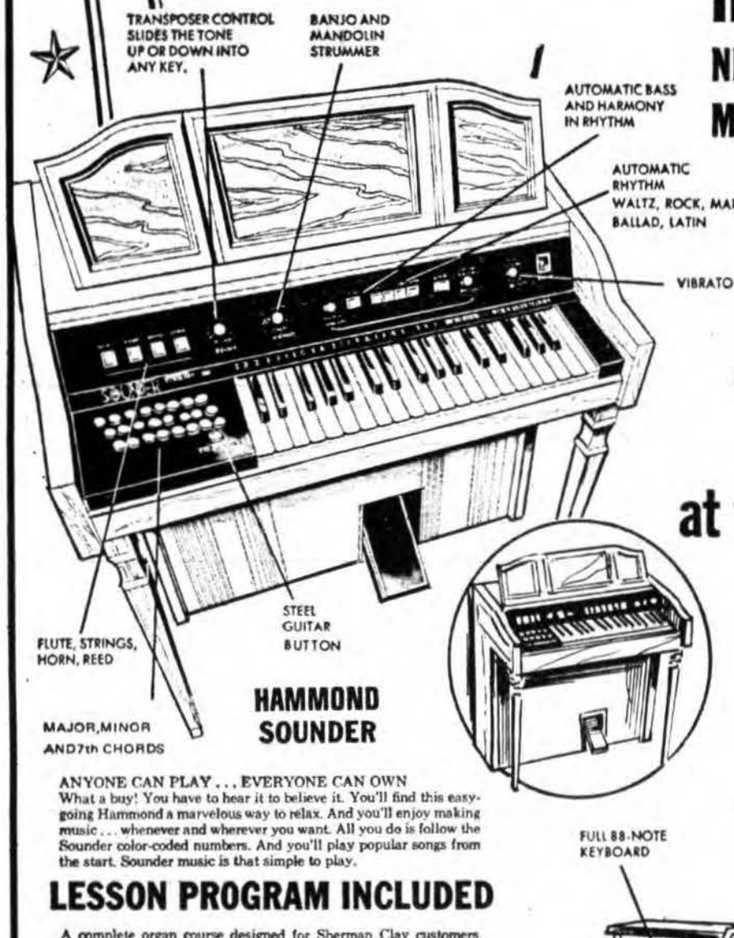

Ford was accused earlier in the week by Boston Mayor Kevin H. White of having "encouraged false hopes and fanned the flames of resistance that will most inevitably lead to further disruption in Boston." White also criticized Ford's refusal to send federal help to protect school children.

MEDIUM SURVEY SHIP FAIRWEATHER ANCHORED OFF NEWPORT JETTY
231-foot Ship Is Surveying Ocean Bottom and Shoreline to Update Nautical Charts

Coastal Waters Surveyed

MSS Fairweather at Work Recharting Changes

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

What changes have taken place on the ocean bottom in Southern California coastal waters since the original surveys were made more than a century ago?

What new landmarks have arisen to guide or confuse pleasure boatmen and commercial vessels in the last few years?

For that matter, what changes have taken place on the bottom of Newport Harbor since the last survey in 1953?

Except for an occasional mention in the U.S. Coast Guard's Notice Mariners, the modern skipper has no way of knowing until he runs afoul of some uncharted rock or fetches up on a sandbar.

All that is due to be changed shortly after an extensive hydrographic survey now being made by vessels of the National Ocean Survey (formerly Coast and Geodetic Survey).

The survey vessel, MSS Fairweather, is anchored off the Newport Harbor jetty from whence it will dispatch small boats with modern, sophisticated sounding gear to work along the beach and inside Newport Harbor.

The Fairweather arrived here Tuesday after spending several weeks in the area of Dana Point. From here it will proceed to the Long Beach area.

Capt. Charles A. Burroughs, commander of the 231-foot Fairweather, says the overall mission of the Fairweather and her sister-ships is to survey the coast and the ocean depths from the beach to the 110 fathom curve.

When the task is complete, present Coast and Geodetic Survey charts will be updated new large scale coastal charts will be issued in strip form on a scale of 1:20,000. Most coastal charts now in use were published at scales from 1:50,000 and 1:100,000 — approximately 1.4 nautical miles per inch.

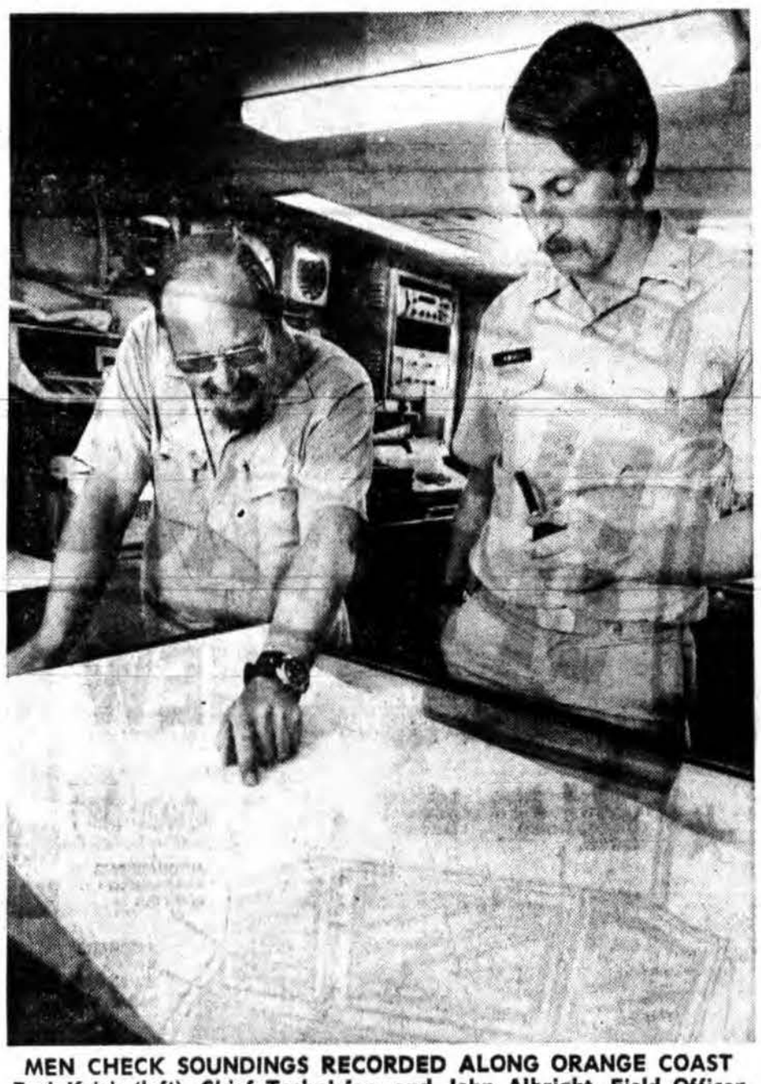

Cmdr. Burroughs said charts for such harbor areas as Newport Beach are being surveyed at 1:5,000 and will be published at 1:10,000, less than one nautical mile per square inch.

In addition to the modern electronic sounding gear used on the mother ship and by sub-parties, the party is also conducting "sweep surveys" using a contrivance known as a "wire drag" which turn up such hitherto uncharted hazards as submarine rocks and peaks in shoal waters.

One such hazard was discovered at the entrance to Dana Point Harbor in the form of what is believed to be a fragment of Crawfish rock when blasting was taking place for the development of the harbor. The survey will recommend that such hazards be buoyed or removed by further blasting.

Cmdr. Burroughs said his party is also examining the shoreline with the aim of charting new landmarks and perhaps changing the name off lesser one to conform with more modern geographic names.

In addition, the Coast Pilot, known as the bible to coast mariners will be updated as a result of the survey.

The National Ocean Survey is a component of the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration which operates under the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The Fairweather is known as a Medium Survey Ship (MSS). She was commissioned in 1968 with capabilities for oceanography, deep sea and shoal water hydrography. She is equipped with the most modern precision sounding equipment plus two shoal water fathometers and all modern navigation instruments.

The Fairweather's 1974 field season commenced in March with hydrographic surveys off the northwest coast of Washington. In May Fairweather shifted operations to Lower Cook Inlet, Alaska, completing a 10-year survey of the Kamishak Bay area.

Her present hydrographic operations along the Southern California coast north of Dana Point is the continuation of a project started in 1968 by other NOAA ships to update the charts of the California coast.

The Fairweather's sister-ship, Ranier is working the area around such offshore islands as San Clemente, Catalina and other channel islands. When the field season ends next month, both ships will return to their home port, Seattle for winter maintenance and preparation for the 1975 field season.

Newport Sailor Takes 2nd in Race

HONOLULU (UPI) — A 50-foot mistake in the fourth race of the tornado world sailing championships disqualified Hans Track, Salzburg, Austria, Friday and gave the victory to Jorg Sengler, Hurenberg, Germany.

Another Austrian, Robert Jessenig, the 1972 world champion, held the overall lead after four races by placing seventh in Friday's race which was held in eight to 10 knot trade winds off the Waikiki Yacht Club.

Prack, and his crewman brother, Bernard, gambled on the first leg of the 18-mile course by sailing very wide on the windward leg and caught strong offshore winds that shot them into a lead they never relinquished.

But as the 43 boats crossed the finish line, Prack passed to the left, or port side, of the finish buoy instead of the right, or starboard side. The gray catamaran was a good 1,200 meters ahead of Spengler in "Fuzzi 7."

But the cannon boomed only when "Fuzzi 7" crossed the line well behind the Prack brothers. They immediately backtracked and attempted to correct their error. However, the rules committee said they "did not unwind or pull their strings" — meaning they had failed to retrace their course to correct their error.

The disqualification plus their failure to finish in Tuesday's boisterous winds, gave them a point total of more than 100 and made it practically impossible to finish among the leaders in the best six of seven races which end Monday.

Hans Prack said he had filed a protest to the ruling.

"We were confused at the finish as there were two boats flying the blue pennants of the Waikiki Yacht Club," Hans said. "They both looked similar and we did not know we had gone on the wrong side of the buoy until we finished the race and were told we had made an error. We then reversed our course and corrected our error."

There were no casualties in the perfect sailing weather and 43 out of the 45 starters finished.

The second boat was Bob Kettenhoffen's "Ta-daa" out of Newport Beach. Kettenhoffen who was eighth in the standings until the race, finished a good 500 meters ahead of another American boat, Bruce Badeau's "Wildcat" out of Houston, Tex. Badeau had been tied with the Prack brothers for ninth position at the start.

Fourth was Rick Taylor, Costa Mesa, in "Duck Hawk." Fifth was Roy Seaman, Malibu, in "Pacific Fox," Sixth was Donald Coote, Quebec, and seventh was Jessenig.

CORONA DEL MAR COUPLE WIN HOBIE CHAMPIONSHIP

HOBIE CHAMPIONSHIP . . .

Orange County sweep with eight of the first 10 places going to the Orange Coasters.

For the most part, it was a light weather affair with the best breezes blowing up in the first two races Saturday when 12-15 knot gusts had skippers and crews taking to the trapeze wires. The dress of the day was wet suits for all hands.

In the light going Thursday and Friday many of the crews were hampered by kelp which kept fouling their rudders.

The regatta was officially billed as the Miller High Life Hobie-16 nationals as the Hobie Cat Association took on a major sponsor for the first time.

The final races for the championship were among 50 competitors who had survived three days of racing in an original field of 89. The top 50 were chosen after Friday's races. Colorful, rambling Vacation Village on Mission Bay was the headquarters for the regatta.

Dick and Carol Beauchamp have been sailing Hobie Cats for five years. They came into this year's national championships heavy favorites after winning the Southern California high-point championship in five regional races.

The husky 31-year-old real estate development consultant attributed his success in the title regatta to "good luck on the starting line and no gear failures."

Top 10 in the final standings: 1, Dick Beauchamp; 2, Bob Beauchamp; 3, Reg Jaworski; 4, Hobie Alter, Capistrano Beach; 5, Richard Loufek, Costa Mesa; 6, Jim Black, Newport Beach; 7, Mike Milbburn, Seattle, Wash.; 8, Wayne Schafer, Capistrano Beach; 9, Russell Edington, Newport Beach; 10, Jerry King, Newport Beach.

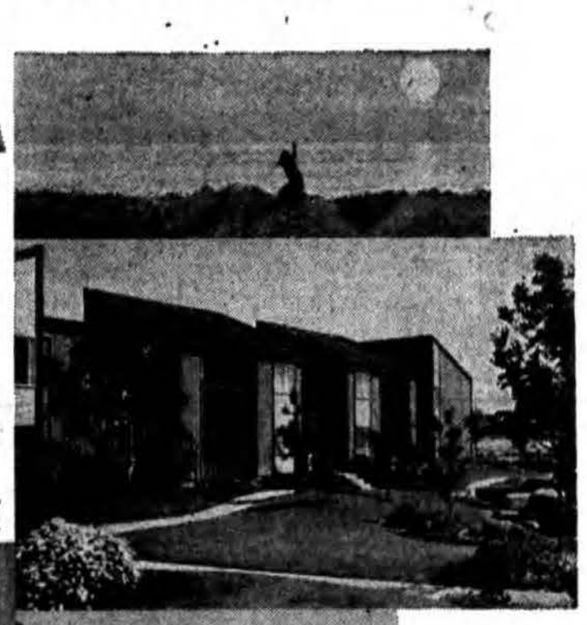

2 Bills Vetoed, Others Signed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford vetoed two bills Saturday — the fourth and fifth vetoes of his administration — and signed several others, including one taking some of the copper out of the penny.

The White House also announced Ford will sign the Campaign Reform Spending Act, which includes federal funding for presidential campaigns, next Tuesday at cermemonies to which all members of Congress will be invited. It is considered to be one of the most important bills passed by Congress this session.

On Saturday, Ford vetoed a railroad employes benefit bill and an amendment to the Atomic Energy Act.

Heavy Rains Drench Plains States

A fresh outbreak of cold air sent showers and thunderstorms spilling over the central Plains, through the middle Mississippi Valley and into the upper Great Lakes Saturday.

Heavy rains soaked portions of eastern Kansas, with over 3 inches reported at Herrington. Nearly 3 inches splashed into Wilsey, Kan.

Locally heavy rains also drenched areas in Northern Missouri and a few showers with thunderstorms were scattered from the central Rockies to the central Plateau region.

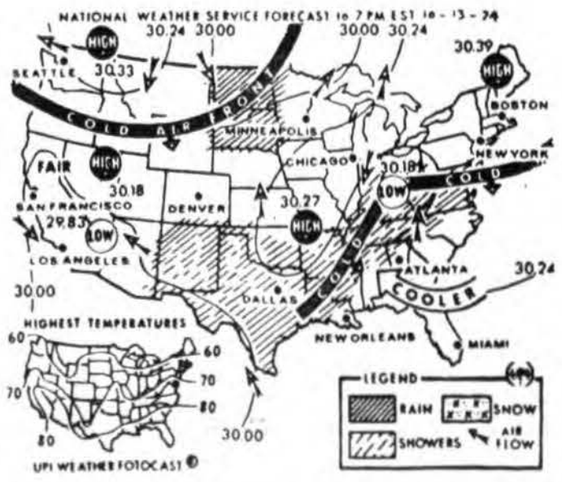

Truth or Consequences, N.M. reported .81 inches of rain and nearly that much fell on Alamagordo, N.M.

Light rain sprinkled the eastern Florida peninsula and northern New England.

Clear skies covered most of the Pacific states and much of the Atlantic Coast to the Appalachians. The exceptions had low-lying clouds and fog.

Skies also began to clear from the northern Rockies into the Great Basin.

Cooler weather moving in behind the midcontinent rains dropped temperatures into the 20s and 30s over parts of the Northern Plains and Rockies. Readings in the 50s and 60s prevailed from the central Plains to the Great Lakes and South.

Patty Pregnant, Author Believes

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — An author-television news reporter who has trailed the Symbionese Liberation Army and the newspaper heiress they kidnaped and converted says she believes Patricia Hearst is pregnant.

"Why wouldn't she be," Marilyn Baker, 45, said Friday, here in connection with a new book in which she chronicled the kidnaping. "She was in love with Willie Wolfe a one of the dead (SLA members) and as Steven Weed (Miss Hearst's former fiance) put it, 'She's a very accommodating girl.'

"Add to that she forgot her pills and I would say she's pregnant," Mrs. Baker went on.

SHE ALSO said Miss Hearst, who has taken the name Tania, "can stay hidden indefinitely until she double parks or runs a red light.

"You don't catch criminals through some extensive dragnet but by mistake," Mrs. Baker added.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has sought Miss Hearst and the two other known surviving members of the SLA for months. Six SLA members — four women, Wolfe and self-styled field marshal Donald DeFreeze, a former Cleveland resident — died in a fiery shootout in Los Angeles last May.

Mrs. Baker said the SLA, which described itself as fighting against oppression, was involved in "a child's game of playing big and bad guerrilla and 'we will be creepy-crawling through your yard and you won't even know we're here.' They played a game of freeing the oppressed of the world."

POLITICAL MOTIVATION?

Lt. Gov. John Harmer

Harmer's Minisummit Criticized

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lt. Gov. John Harmer called an economic minisummit for California, and was hit immediately with charges of political profiteering from two former colleagues in the state Senate.

Harmer, who is acting governor during Ronald Reagan's three-day vacation in Mexico, announced Friday that as lieutenant governor he would chair a two-day meeting of the state Commission on Economic Development in Los Angeles beginning Oct. 22.

Harmer said business, labor and consumer leaders in California will all be invited to attend.

But his Democratic foe in the campaign for lieutenant governor, state Sen. Mervyn Dymally of Los Angeles, said Harmer "is playing politics with hard times."

Another state senator, George Moscone (D-San Francisco), immediately challenged Harmer's vote against a low interest housing bill in the Senate shortly before accepting Reagan's appointment as lieutenant governor.

"Now, in an obvious ploy to the voters Harmer decries the lack of housing money and the state of market conditions," said Moscone, the Democratic leader of the Senate.

Harmer replied to the charges of partisan politics in the calling of a state economic summit meet that President Ford has asked leaders of every state to do this.

"I have no control over President Ford's speech or his request. This was hardly something I could dream up for my own political advantage," Harmer said.

Harmer was appointed lieutenant governor last week to fill the three remaining months of the term of Ed Reinecke, who resigned minutes before his sentencing for perjury in the ITT case.

Bomb Dismantled

A member of the Oakland police bomb squad defused a small pipe bomb that was found early Saturday in the Safeway main office doorway in a lunch pail. No note communication accompanied the device.

KPFK 'Will Abide by Law'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will Lewis, manager of controversial radio station KPFK, gets mad when people accuse him of being above the law.

"People say we're putting ourselves above the law," Lewis said Saturday. "We're just going to let the courts decide who is right. We'll abide by the law, distasteful as it may be."

It's been a tough week for Lewis.

His station was searched for nine hours Thursday by police looking in vain for a message from a group claiming responsibility for bombing two Sheraton hotels. The next day, Lewis was subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury Oct. 15 and ordered to bring with him the message and the container in which it was received.

Last summer, Lewis spent 16 days in federal prison for contempt after refusing to give authorities an original tape from the Symbionese Liberation Army. Free pending appeal, he lost the first appeal, but intends next week to ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review his case.

"I'M NOT very optimistic they will review it," Lewis conceded.

Lewis said at times he feels like he is fighting alone.

"I can see the Los Angeles Times and Time Magazine lecturing me again on the responsibility of the press," he said.

He recalled there was a "great outrage" when the Palo Alto police searched the newsroom of the Stanford University newspaper in 1971.

"Where is the outrage now?" Lewis asked. "The silence is deafening. It bothers me that I don't have any real support from the media."

What bothers him most, he explained, is that the search gave the police all sorts of information about the station and its news activities, none of it having anything to do with the message from the bombers.

"IT IS really worth drying up sources of information to get at a document that probably isn't a clue at all?" asked Lewis. "The FBI got all kinds of communications from the SLA and it didn't take them one step closer to solving the case."

On a more practical note, Lewis said he is concerned about the money that is being spent on his lawsuits.

"We're not NBC or CBS. We just barely earn enough to keep going. And there's a limit to how much time I can afford to spend in jail. I have a station to run and a family to feed."

Brown Plans To Assist Candidates

CRESCENT CITY (UPI) — With an airborne caravan of four small airplanes, Democratic gubernatorial nominee Edmund Brown Jr. campaigned confidently through the scenic North Coast Saturday, unveiling plans to help other Democrats in the Nov. 5 election.

Brown said he would take a portion of the limited money he agreed to spend for broadcast advertising and turn it over instead for a massive "get-out-the-vote drive" for all Democrats.

Brown's campaign manager, Tom Quinn, said about $81,000 of the $150,000 broadcast budget already has been earmarked for the turn-out effort.

It is planned to involve 10,000 campaign workers and be the biggest Democratic drive to get voters to the polls in 16 years, Brown said. At that time organized labor mounted a massive campaign on the issue of right-to-work laws.

On the second leg of a campaign tour through the cities of Northern California, Brown, 36, secretary of state, told a rally of about 50 supporters in Ukiah, "The campaign is going well."

He also attacked Flournoy for an "indifferent and inept" record of public service.

Flournoy Campaigns At $250-a-pair Dinner

WALNUT (AP) — The man in the gray business suit was wearing a red-and-white "WIN" button as he moved among the crowd that had paid $250 a couple to join him for dinner.

Houston I. Flournoy seemed at home at the Pomona National Country Club with many of his former collegues on the faculty at Pomona College and Claremont Graduate School.

The "Whip Inflation Now" buttom supporting President Ford's anti-inflation program — brought by a Republican congressman that night — also seemed to draw favorable reactions from those at the dinner.

Holding a microphone in one hand with the other in his pocket as an entertainer would, the Republican candidate for governor issued a call for help in the last month of his battle to whip Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the governorship of the Golden State.

"I really wasn't discouraged with the test poll," said the 45-year-old state Controller of the California Poll last week that showed him trailing by 11 points.

"I've never led in the polls and I've never lost an election," he explained.

The release of the California Poll had been the first major event of a hectic week opening the final month of the campaign.

The survey was followed quickly by the third of their scheduled six debates, with Brown accusing Flournoy of promoting "recycled Reaganism" and Flournoy replying that Brown was trying to link him with every Republican evil since Herbert Hoover.

The brown-haired Republican seemed angry at the end of the debate, a mood that lasted through the next day.

"It's time to start ripping the facade off of Jerry Brown," Flournoy told about 75 San Francisco businessmen at a luncheon at the Fairmont Hotel. "We are going to get tougher because I'm sick and tired of my opponent mouthing a litany of tired charges."

'Financial Angels'

Contributions Told

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Nelson A. Rockefeller, Howard Hughes and hundreds of other "financial angels" have shelled out more than $2 million for campaign warchests in California's race for the governorship.

Campaign reports made available Saturday showed Democratic nominee Edmund G. Grown Jr. has amassed nearly $1.2 million and Republican Houston I. Flournoy has raised about $896,000 for general election battles.

Brown's coffers included at least $132,000 in labor union donations, with the biggest chunks — $25,000 apiece — coming from the United Auto Workers union and the Hotel and Restaurant Workers union.

FLOURNOY received at least $77,000 from agribusiness — farmers, packing companies and ranchers — including $23,500 from the Western Growers Assn.

Rockefeller, the vice presidential nominee who has been questioned recently about large gifts to aides, contributed $5,000 to Flournoy's campaign. Flournoy made a personal trip to the east to visit the former New York governor last month.

Hughes, the recluse billionaire, contributed $5,000 to Flournoy and $1,600 to Brown, according to the campaign statements.

The statements did not include contributions received by the two candidates during the primary election campaign, when Brown collected $1.6 million and Flournoy raised about $1.2 million.

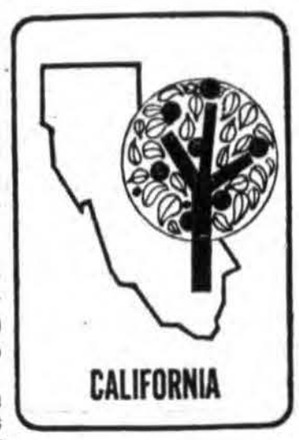

SOME FIRMS gave to both campaigns, such as 20th Century Fox — which gave $2,500 to Flournoy and $2,200 to Brown.

Richard O'Neill and Lou Cella, Orange County friends of Democratic nominee for controller Ken Cory, contributed $16,000 to Brown's campaign. The two "financial angels," as they are called by political aides, have dumped several hundred thousand dollars into Cory's campaign.

Brown also received a $50,000 loan from Joan Palevsky, a longtime patron of Democratic campaigns.

Flournoy also received more than $10,000 from backers of Gov. Reagan and $15,000 from James Garibaldi, a lobbyist for the liquor and racetrack industries.

Brown picked up a $1,000 donation from the Chinese Herb and Acupuncture Co. and $60,000 in loans and gifts from Auburn Manor Holding Co., owned by Southern California builder Martin Harmon.

Minor Quake Near Hemet

HEMET (UPI) — A minor earthquake that "gave us one quick shake" rumbled through this small community at the base of the San Bernardino mountains Saturday, but no damage was reported.

The quake, registering 3.4 on the Richter scale, followed by one week another temblor that measured 4.0 in the same area.

"It gave us one quick shake, but that was all," said Police Sgt. Brad Hough. "We only got a few calls."

The temblor occurred at 5:21 a.m.

A Groundless Charge

Polls continue to show that California Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger is one of few Republicans strongly favored to win in the November election. So perhaps it makes political logic for his opponent to grasp at any issue to draw attention.

Unfortunately, the "issue" picked by Democratic candidate William Norris in an attempt to stir up Orange County is a bummer.

Norris charged Younger deliberately erred in ruling that Gov. Reagan could appoint Gen. Thomas Riley to the Orange County Board of Supervisors for a two-year-plus term. He called it an "outrageous" politically motivated move, said an election should have been held, and promised, if elected, to act to oust Riley.

Whether or not Younger's ruling was legally correct (and it probably will be tested in court at year's end), two points should be made.

Riley is virtually an apolitical figure. And the primary reason the Board of Supervisors vacancy was not filled by a special election was the opposition of Norris' own party — the Democratic leadership in the state Assembly, and particularly Assemblyman (and controller candidate) Kenneth Cory, and Democratic leaders here in Orange County.

It seems fair to question whether the legal sensibilities and righteousness of Mr. Norris would have been so outraged if the appointee to the supervisor's post had been some fellow Democrat.

Gold for the Developing

When it comes to prime property open for development, potential developers would find nothing but superlatives in describing a hunk of Orange County that measures out to pure gold in its unique potential.

Ocean frontage, ocean view, gentle hills and unrestricted by previous development: All are part of the assets of the 10,000 acres — including 3.5 miles of beautiful beach — along the Pacific between Newport Beach and Laguna Beach.

The land is owned entirely by the Irvine Company, excepting 118 coastal acres and some 1,200 inland acres to be bought by the state for parks.

Of primary interest both to the Irvine Company and to Orange County residents is which city will control development of this gold coast. On one side, it faces the ocean; the rest borders Laguna Beach, the city of Irvine and Newport Beach.

Each city wants it — or some of it. Yet each city has reservations. Left unincorporated, it would be governed by Orange County. The Irvine Company has gently sparred with all three cities and last week dropped still another tantalizing proposal: Perhaps the land could be incorporated as the county's 27th city.

Obviously, the idea was offered as a trial balloon. Newport and Laguna have assumed stiff attitudes toward extending their services to take in the property. The city of Irvine has enough land and enough problems as it is. And the Irvine Company likely would be reluctant to entrust its intricate plans to the whims of county government.

But each of these entities also has visions of what potential such a development would offer.

Whatever postmark they use, the eventual 50,000 residents of the land certainly will occupy one of the most prestigious pieces of real estate anywhere. And with the heavy environmental considerations involved, it should be an asset and point of pride to all Orange Countians.

Fall's Creepy Creatures Ignore Man's Stumbles

RICHARD WILSON

SNICKERS GAP, VA. — The population explosion has reached the Blue Ridge. This has been a year of unparalleled growth in an area remote from the stagnation and slowdown of the rest of the nation.

Confidence has been restored in the American way of life and traditional values which were well-established before the Indians came.

In fact, growth has been so phenomenal that it may run the ecologists out of business, restore DDT, glamorize the steel trap and apotheosize the American Rifle Association.

BENEATH the floor where this is written a family of groundhogs, elsewhere elegantly called woodchucks, is preparing for its fall hibernation safe from any practical remedy except tearing down the building and digging them out. A groundhog (woodchuck) normally burrows to a depth of five feet with tunnels extending from the central residence up to 25 or 30 feet. Poison gas is the extreme remedy.

On the honeysuckle-covered bank 100 feet away three young deer are nibbling away and scouting the premises against the winter days when they will come to devour down to the bare branches the more stylish shrubbery which surrounds the house.

In the furnace room, encased in concrete against all intruders, the population explosion of another species was apprehended before it became a disaster. The mother copperhead was come upon lodged on a concrete ledge while in the process of procreating what would have been 10 live progeny. A baby copperhead comes rolled up in a membrane sack and unrolled is about six inches long and rarin' to go. Relentless genocide was the only remedy.

ON A TERRACE painfully carved out of the hillside and enclosed in walls of stone removed from the mountain soil, what would have been the vegetable garden lies sear and dismal in the fall air. Not a bean, nor a tomato, nor an ear of corn was reaped. A rollicking family of bandits masquerading under the name of raccoons got it all. On a moonlit night a sophisticated raccoon will sit on his haunches, hold the corn in his forepaws and play it like a harmonica, lacking only the butter and salt of his human counterpart.

Two seckel pear trees and two plum trees are barren of fruit at a time when their luscious produce should be ready for the picking. At first it was entertaining to watch the ground squirrels (elegantly called chipmunks) mount the trunk and branches, snip off green pears and then scurry down to retrieve them. But in the end the ground squirrels and the squirrels, which daringly scampered in from the woods, got all the pears and the plums, too. Also, the deer are harvesting the orange-red fruit of the genuine English Hawthorne, which is rare in these hills but thrived anyway.

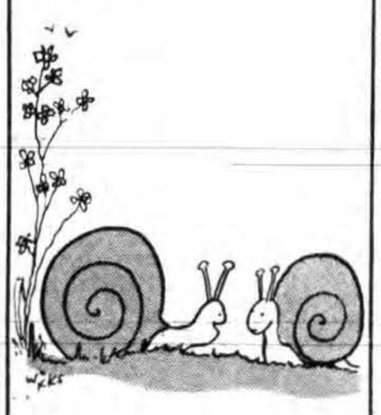

LATER, it can be foreseen, the cedar waxwings will flock in to strip a 20-foot-tall American holly of its brilliant red berries just before Christmas. A 40-foot-tall persimmon is awaiting its rape by late-staying robins, grackles, crows and other marauders driven into a frenzy by the seeds inside its mushy, ripened fruit.

Nothing bad will be said here of the black ants. They have had their year and are going deep into mounds as much as five feet in diameter and three feet high. These provide a goodly supply of finely granulated potting soil for the seedlings to feed next year's wildlife population. The much-hated chemical compounds which may someday be necessary for man's survival merely make the busy ant go somewhere else for awhile, but he always comes back.

Who knows what is going on below the surface of the earth in the network of burrows and warrens where revenge against the human intruder is being plotted? And who knows why there are good years and bad years for the critters and varmints who have defied man in these hills in three centuries since he first set foot here?

It was a very good year for the things that crawl, creep, lope and scamper, if not for the men who scratch, claw, slug and strangle in the gleaming stone buildings along the Potomac only 55 miles away.

Duo Stages a Comeback

Duo Stages a Comeback

By MELVIN MADDOCKS

Once upon a time, and a not-so-bad time it was, too, people used to work in pairs. The Noah's ark syndrome In music there was Rodgers and Hart, and when Hart went — quick as an Oklahoma twister — there was Hammerstein.

Comedians (the thin and the fat, the funny and the straight) came two by two as well. Laurel and Hardy Abbott and Costello In baseball second basemen and shortstops the doubleplay combination, were thought of as hyphenates: Gordon-Rizzuto for the Yankees. Doerr-Pesky for the Red Sox.

There was no Brinkley, it seemed, without a Huntley, no Nureyev without a Fonteyn, no Frick without Frack.

Then came the Age of the Solo. Jerry Lewis — having no doubt read Emerson on self-reliance ("We but half express ourselves") — had to prove he could be somebody without Dean Martin. It was that sort of world.

Today the ampersand — that great little sign that goes before "Co." — is back. One wouldn't want to claim that partnership has become a motif exactly. But even in literature — loneliest of pastimes — the Noah's ark syndrome can be detected again.

GEORGE ORWELL, a solitary among solitaries, is the subject for a duo of excellent biographers, William Abrahams and Peter Stansky. Of all literary forms, none except perhaps poetry seems more of a solo specialty than autobiography. Yet Dick Cavett, in his precocious memoir, has turned autobiography into a dialogue —a sort of late-night-in-the-dorms talk show with Christopher Porterfield, his old Yale roommate.

But the most ambitious of recent collaborations may be that between two young writers, Richard Burgin and J M Alonso, on an experimental novella titled "The Man with Missing Parts"

Their premise is that one author finds himself possessed by Silence — a story he cannot give voice to. It is the mission of the second author to free the first author. He is, as it were, the backup knight of the quest, delivering the first knight from his dragon so that he can rescue the princess from hers

Beyond this fundamental act of liberation from writer's block, Burgin and Alonso conceive of other mutual duties. "Real astonishment is our deepest taboo," they write, and clearly they feel they can bring out a primal freshness, a buried wonder in one another by improvising back and forth on their themes, like jazz-musicians playing statement-and-response.

FOR INSTANCE, A may stare at an object (telephone wires, a plate of ravioli, a face), and B will explain to him what he sees in a kind of team game of "Show and Tell " There are risks in the sport. As Burgin and Alonso are the first to point out, hallucinations are not the same as visions to a saint or an artist.

Yet even when the method isn't quite working, it isn't quite failing either. A negative good is being accomplished. Time, space, matter — the grand illusions of realism — are seen as less than reality

Does it take two people to see this? Sometimes it helps — especially if a seer is not to overdo things and float off into pure abstraction. Like mountain climbers roped together, Burgin digs into the rock while Alonso dangles over the abyss, and vice versa.

But they do more than display a cooperative technique. In fact, the argument of their fable is that every man alone has missing parts — that "all men are incomplete."

The trade secret of the collaborator goes like this: The world is full of half-truths that are not truths at all without the other half. What good is head without heart, yin without yang, seriousness without humor, masculine without feminine?

THE AUTHOR seeking to coauthor is reenacting an ancient drama. He is a modern version of the caveman with a flat stick looking for another caveman with a flat stick so that they can rub them together until (who knows?) a fire might start.

The individual needs a force to work against, and that force is the collaborator — the stand-in for the second voice that people contain within themselves.

The collaborator is the good friend — or even better, the good enemy — we all dream about who will bring out the hidden best in us, put the pieces together, replace the missing parts.

In the end, the collaborator is an embodiment of everybody's desire to be whole — to become, as Burgin and Alonso suggest, nothing less than "an attribute of the Divine."

And so, may Laurel always find his Hardy — and a little bit more.

'And Leave the Propaganda to Us'

S. I. HAYAKAWA

Was the press out to "get" former President Nixon? Is it out now to "get" President Ford? The question has been asked by more than one thoughtful reader.

In its Aug. 19 issue Time had a cover picture of a benign President Ford over the caption, "The Healing Begins." Then Mr. Ford pardoned Nixon, as he said, as a step towards the healing (I cannot prolong the bad dreams that continue to reopen a chapter that is closed").

In its issue of Sept. 23 Time commented: "There was yet no evidence that Ford's motives were other than high-minded and merciful. Indeed some of the criticisms of his actions were overwrought and hysterical. Suggestions that justice was dead in the United States and that Ford's administration had been irretrievably compromised were exaggerated."

Having said this, Time proceeded at once to criticize the President in terms that cannot be described otherwise than "overwrought and hysterical" and gave a dozen quotations, which, in the absence of quotations to the contrary, certainly depicted the administration as irrevocably compromised:

"FORD'S FIRST major decision raises disturbing questions about his judgment and his leadership capabilities and called into question his competence. He had apparently needlessly, even recklessly, squandered some of that public trust that is so vital to every president.

The decision, Time continued, was "premature and unwise," a "serious disappointment." "Those somewhat jesting earlier cracks about Ford's intellect were now seen in a more serious light. How could he have failed to see the ramifications — legal, political and moral — of his decision."

NEWSWEEK ALSO reported that "all the old jokes about the President's intellectual capacity were being revived," that he "seemed to have stampeded himself into a badly timed decision," and that "the White House rarely seemed to know what it was doing," and that "partly in response to the administration's blunders . . . the stock market plunged 50 points last week."

Newsweek also displayed prominently a satire on Ford, described as a "Wickedly witty parody" of Chaucer, written by a woman whose knowledge of Chaucerian English appears to be no better than my knowledge of Swahili.

Media reactions to President Ford's announcement of a conditional amnesty plan for deserters and draft evaders followed a similarly predictable pattern. Reporters were sent to such places as Toronto and Vancouver to interview leaders of expatriate American groups.

They said exactly what they would be expected to say, namely that the amnesty plan was unacceptable and that nobody was going to return to the United States under the announced conditions.

Inevitably one gets the impression that the media — at least most of them — do not want the nation to be healed. They do not want the uproar over Nixon to be laid to rest nor the divisions over Vietnam resolved.

Long ago Newsweek used to go to a lot of trouble to separate fact from opinion. They even boasted of this in advertisements, in order to distinguished themselves from their chief rival, Time.

But Newsweek has long since joined Time in mixing fact and opinion inextricably together. Hence they not only tell you what there is to think about, which is the function of journalism, but what to think, which is the function of propaganda.

Time describes President Ford's decision as "premature and unwise," as if this were a matter of fact. But others might say with equal conviction, it was "wise and beautifully timed." No doubt the decision was "a serious disappointment" to some, but to admirers of Ford it was "an act of statesmanship and compassion."

FORD'S DECISION, in the eyes of some, reveals his stupidity and "confirms all the old jokes about the President's intellectual capacity." Others see it as evidence of his great personal courage; "I cannot rely upon public opinion polls to tell me what is right," he said as he took this controversial step.

Well, you pays your money and you takes your choice. Except that among the media there is little choice. The news weeklies, the TV networks, the newspapers so often give you the same evaluations, driven, it seems, by a kind of professional herd instinct.

When people say they distrust the media more and more, they are not complaining about the facts the media give them. What they distrist are the evaluations forced upon them by arrogant journalistic activists who do not trust people to think for themselves.

Rockefeller Valued People

By TOM McCANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The hardest part was raising money for a candidate named Rockefeller.

Somehow even the old, reliable party activists couldn't picture Nelson Rockefeller as a politically needy case in Orange County in 1964.

I worked for the Nelson-Roberts agency, the Los Angeles-based firm that had been hired for the "making of a President" in California that year. My official title was Orange County field manager.

It meant I did everything from renting office space and setting up a "boiler room" phone operation capable of calling more than 150 voters a day ("Hello, we're taking a public opinion poll for the Republican party. . .") to sharpening pencils and begging for those campaign funds.

Getting people to contribute money — particularly to a Rockefeller — is supposed to guarantee that they will get involved in the campaign.

Contrary to what many might think, Governor Rockefeller felt his big contribution was getting involved, not giving money.

HE WORKED BEST where involvement was most obvious, at a face-to-face, touch-to-touch level. And despite the size of some of the operations his public relations folks created for him, he never let them get to be impersonal. People were important.

My wife will never forget her first encounter with The Man in that highly charged political setting. He was brought into a tightly packed meeting room off the huge ballroom at the Disneyland Hotel. Later that evening, he would stand for more than four solid hours shaking hands at a public-invited reception.

This small room full of people in the pre-reception was comprised of staff members and spouses, inner-circle politicos and a few hotel staffers who would not get the chance to meet Rockefeller later.

There were maybe 150 people in that room. He made sure he understood the pronunciation of each name and the connection of each person with the gathering.

FOUR HOURS LATER, after shaking hands with a stream of voters that numbered — really — more than 1,500 persons, he happened to pass my wife in the hall.

"Thank you, Mrs. MCann, for your help in there tonight," he said, "and be sure to tell your husband how much we appreciate the job he has been doing for us here in Orange County."

I had never even met my boss at that point.

I met him later, in the back room of a hotel suite in San Diego, when he proved the private Rockefeller is the same as the public Rockefeller, very much as he has been showing the entire nation in the recent congressional hearings.

We had just found a couple of gutsy Republicans willing to lead the Rockefeller campaign in "Goldwater's own" Orange County.

As a means of saying thanks and, at the same time, getting them plugged into the campaign, I was invited to fly Vic Andrews and the late Bill Martin to San Diego from Orange County Airport aboard Leonard Firestone's personal plane.

WE WERE RUSHED to the hotel suite on arrival and quickly introduced into the circle of California Power Structure surrounding the governor (no one called him Rocky to his face).

Someone asked what he thought about the Rumford initiative, the hot potato on the ballot back there in 1964. It has to do with repealing the first fair-housing law ever passed in California.

It was an explosive question he could have ducked. There was no press coverage; he wasn't talking for the record.

"You fellows ought to do everything you can to support a fair-housing law," said the governor. "We've had one for some time in New York and I think it's important . . ."

A couple of the group's more conservative types turned white and backed out the door.

Anyway, we pulled one out of three Republican votes cast in Orange County in that 1964 primary — not bad, we felt, in a county that set the tone for a state where Rockefeller was virtually booed from the platform at the national convention.

THAT CAME, AS SOME may remember, right after the state primary. It was in the Cow Palace in San Francisco. And it was a sorry scene for the party: Rockefeller being introduced to speak and then heckled so badly he had to call on the chairman, a congressman from Michigan named Gerald Ford, to restore order.

"It's your convention. When you get 'em settled down, I'll talk."

It's not so far from San Francisco 1964 to congressional hearing rooms 1974.

The Governor — I guess that's the way I'll always think of him — may not now be quite as vigorous as then. Ten years have passed, after all.

But he's still telling his friend Jerry Ford:

"You quiet 'em down and I'll talk to them."

With Rocky, First Class Looks Cheap

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
United Press International

NEW YORK — Traveling with Nelson Rockefeller makes first class look cheap.

A half dozen long, black limousines rolled through the streets of Manhattan before dawn last week, picking up their sleepy passengers and heading for the airport. Rockefeller was on the move.

The cars wheeled up to the private air terminal. Rockefeller was the last to arrive. He stepped out of his car, as if on cue, just as his $4.5 million Grumman Gulfstream jet rolled to the gate, engines roaring, ready for takeoff.

The three-man crew, four reporters, four Rockefeller aides, six Secret Service men and the vice president designate went aboard.

WITHIN MINUTES the plane was airborne for a quick speech at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, then on to San Francisco for a speech to the UPI editors and publishers annual meeting.

The interior is more like a living room than an airplane, with big swivel reclining chairs and small couches, a well-stocked bar and a crew of three wooed away from major airlines, including a steward who serves from a minikitchen.

The plane travels about 100 knots faster than commercial jetliners. It is one of three jets owned by the Rockefellers and kept at the ready for their use.

Normally the Secret Service doesn't approve of the officials it protects taking private or chartered airlines. "Normally, charered jets don't meet our standards for checkups and safety," said one agent. "This plane — no problem. It's in better shape than Air Force One."

THE LANDING STRIP at Provo is a bit short, but no major difficulty for the pilot, who lands smoothly, then slams on the brakes.

After the speech, the steward brings Rockefeller his standard drink, a Dubonnet on the rocks with a twist.

The former New York governor is a light drinker, sticking to wine and seldom having more than two glasses. He beckoned reporters to join him.

At 5 a.m. the next morning, the Rockefeller team is on the move again.

Five hours later, a reporter compliments Rockefeller on the flight, and another asks him if after he is confirmed he will use a Convair — the somewhat outdated and much slower prop-jet used as Air Force Two.

He makes a face. "We used those back in 1960 — or was it 1950?"

Wall Street Watches as the Nation Writes Its Will

VON HOFFMAN

WALL STREET — Walking around here looking at the "for rent" signs, listening to the waiters in the restaurants describe what it used to be like when business was good, it occurs to one that this time the stockbrokers can't throw themselves out their office windows.

The fenestration of air-conditioned glass, cement and steel prevents the bankrupt from destroying himself by that method. The pharaohs of finance must perish in their 50-story high sarcophagi. They'll be mumified as death found them, looking at their desk computer-display screens when the market gave IBM its lumps, too.

"Don't Sell America Short — Be a Bull, Not a Bear," a sticker on a broker's office door exhorts anybody who's left with some cash in his pocket. But at lunch a colleague asks, "Have you noticed that people are setting their houses in order, that they're settling their human relations? You know, getting their affairs in order?" America writes out her will.

The apprehensive feeling that the stroke from the sky is coming, and soon now, can be picked up all over the country, but nowhere is it stronger than on Wall Street. The topic of conversation is no longer about how you make money; all concentration is centered on how you can keep what you have if you still have any to keep.

OF COURSE, THERE are many looking for the money market's equivalent of the sailor's landfall — "the major bottom," the low point on the graphs and charts from which the V starts up again. A few analysts, like Tom Holt, who is respected because he has a record of having his predictions come true, see the possibility of a rally, "But it will only last three to six months," Holt thinks. "It will be instigated by the Wall Street financiers and the banks with Federal Reserve money pushed on them."

If it happens, this will be the small investor's third and last hosing. Twice before in recent years they've had a job done on them, when they were sold "the go-go stocks" and the "glamorous nifty fifties," but they may have a little money left to be euchred out of by being told "now is the time to buy, at these prices stocks are the greatest bargain around," and then blip.

Some people on the street even doubt there can be a last lunge upwards. They think the final fling is already taking place on the commodity market, where they sell the grain and cattle futures. For them the question is survival — where do you hide and how do you hide? Certificates of deposit in the safe, major banks?

The news that the Rockefellers' mighty Chase Manhattan is having trouble counting up bonds has stimulated the suspicion that if somebody could open up the bank vaults of America, all they'd find inside are bundles of old Action Comics.

THERE ARE SO many rumors and stories going around. The one about how there was no gold left in Fort Knox got so prevalent they had to open the safe and show the television cameras the piles of bullion. Now the whispers are that the Treasury Department has secretly designed new currency, and that one morning we're going to read that three of our green dollars will henceforth be worth one new blue one.

Such tales don't have to be true to make men wonder if they really ought to be putting their life accumulations into government securities. "Everybody wants to bail out, but they don't trust their parachutes," remarks a broker. "But if you strap 100 of them on to make sure you've got one that works, their combined weight'll drop you like a shot anyhow."

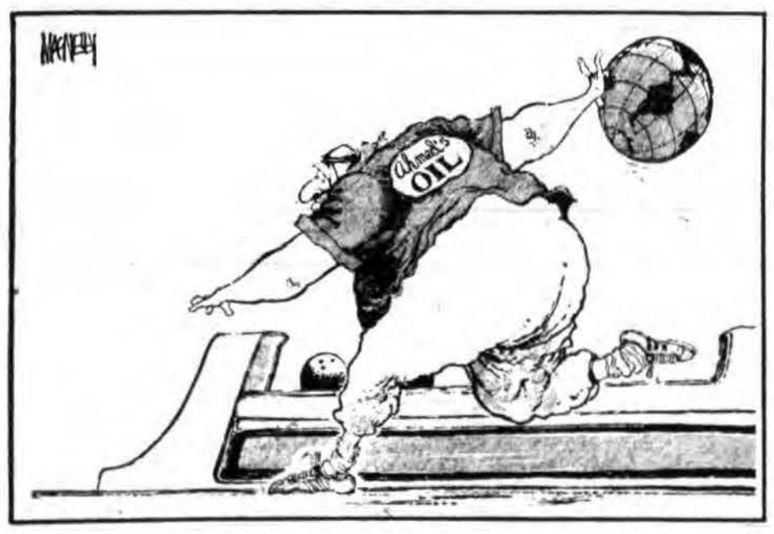

There is no confidence left. Every time President Ford does something like unilaterally intervene to stop a grain sale to Russia or read letters from voters saying the way to conserve fuel is to cut down the time you keep your back door open to put your cat out, the sense of a government that vacillates between the irrational and the frivolous is increased.

As another Wall Streeter put it, "I looked into the tunnel to see if there was a light at the other end. There was, but it's attached to the front of an onrushing locomotive . . . President Ford's keeping the same economic advisers that have been running the show all these years is like taking the pilot off the Titanic and letting him steer the Carpathia."

NOT THAT EVERYONE on the Street is broke and unhappy. In one office at least (name withheld out of deference to businessmen's skittishness about publicity), they're making money and jokes. The men there are so unimpressed about the barrels of eyewash coming out of Washington on the oil crisis and its alleged effect on the economy, they have an Arab burnoose that the company funster puts on to entertain the customers.

"First they blamed it on Watergate, then they blame it on oil. Look, there's so much oil around, the tankers are cruising around out there like taxicabs," he says, pointing out the window in the general direction of the Staten Island ferry slip and the Atlantic Ocean.

They think they know what's wrong with the economy in this office and they believe no Administration is going to address itself to it; so they make their money on the mudslide of American finance while on the wall they've attached a brass ship's bell. They say they're going to ring it on the day the ticker says the Dow is down to zero.

The CIA Fights Evil With Evil

NORMAN COUSINS

Two men named Joseph played powerful roles in the birth and growth of the CIA. One was Joseph McCarthy, who gave the government jitters about anything that smacked of "softness" on communism. The other was Joseph Stalin, who regarded Communist parties throughout the world as an indispensable instrument for advancing Soviet foreigh policy.

The CIA from its inception has had two broad purposes. One has been the development of information useful to our foreign policy planners, especially in matters of national security. The other has been directaction programs, all the way from secretly underwriting cultural activities to undercover operations, some of which have not stopped short of seeking the overthrow of other governments.

In terms of its information activities, the consensus among people who have seen CIA reports is that they are of a very high order. On several occasions, when I have had government assignments and have had access to CIA analyses of background papers, I have found them to be extraordinarily valuable and authoritative.

I refer not to cloak-and-dagger material but rather to data and analyses concerned with economic, political and intellectual matters. I know of very few academic or professional journals, in fact, that publish articles as scholarly and incisive as exist in the background materials produced by the CIA.

WHEN WE DEAL with the direct-action program of the CIA, however, we are dealing with an entirely separate matter. The questions raised by these activities are basic to our conception of the institutions of American society.

The first question has to do with the fact that the agency is separated from the constitutional process. Vast sums of money running into the billions have been spent by the CIA. The appropriations have not been publicly discussed or debated. This fact in itself would probably not pass constitutional scrutiny.

Haldeman and Ehrlichman, during the course of the Watergate revelations, were shown to have turned to the CIA as a possible way of getting large sums of money quickly for their clandestine operations. They were acting because it is possible for the agency to use money without having to account for it publicly. Only the integrity of the CIA officials prevented the CIA from becoming drawn into the Watergate miasma.

The point here, however, is not that the CIA resisted top White House officials, but that top officials should have seen the CIA as a device for accomplishing illegal purposes. It also should be pointed out that the top officials have the power to replace the leaders of the CIA with men of their choosing.

The declared position of the United States — historically, politically, ideologically — is complete respect for the right of other people to choose and operate their own form of government. This right was not respected in Laos or in the action of the CIA in Chile, an intervention, paradoxically, that resulted in the strengthening of the Communist Party, as the present action of the Christian Democratic Party in making common cause with the Chilean Communists may indicate.

THE ULTIMATE question about such activities, of course, is whether they are subversive of American institutions. It is nonsense to say we have to imitate evil in order to deal with it. What happens instead is that we become part of the evil we think we are trying to fight.

If we want to create a stable world society in which all peoples can enjoy the right of self-determination, we are not without resources or options. The most important and sensible thing we can do toward that goal is to help build a world rule of law. The strengthening of the United Nations, rather than terror and subversion, gives us our best chance to serve both the national interest and the human interest.

U.S. Plays Sucker in Airline Market

BARRY GOLDWATER

One of the things we can do to help out in the growing U. S. airlines crisis is for Uncle Sam to stop playing patsy to the world.

There is no reason why Pan American World Airways should have to pay the Australian government $4,200 for the right to land a Boeing 747 at Sydney Airport while Australia's Qantas Airways is required to pay only $271 to land a 747 in San Francisco.

One of the problems which has forced Pan Am to ask for financial help from the U. S. government is the plain fact that U. S. international airlines must compete as free enterprises against other airlines controlled and financed by governments. Now they have to do it in a market where both prices and costs are a question of government regulations.

The story of how U. S. airlines are discriminated against was laid out in stark facts published by the Airline Pilot Magazine for August.

IN ADDITION TO the Australian situation, Airline Pilot says that in Rome Trans World Airlines is billed $800 for every 747 landing (plus a 50 percent surcharge if the landing is at night). The Italian national carrier Alitalia pays nothing for the same privilege.

Airline Pilot goes on to say:

"When U. S. airlines want to add airplanes to their fleets, they borrow money from commercial banks at interest rates currently in the 11-12 percent neighborhood. When a foreign airline wants to buy a U. S.-built airplane, it finances the purchase at 7 percent through the Export-Import Bank. As a result, the U. S. airline pays about $7 million more for a wide-body jet than does the foreign line that competes with it on its route."

Actually, foreign airlines have virtually unrestricted access to the U. S. passenger market, while U. S. carriers are hampered at every turn in their efforts to do business abroad.

IT IS FINE FOR some administration spokesmen to talk about U. S. airlines providing better service, but the fact remains that U. S. carriers (Pan Am, TWA, Braniff, Northwest Orient) engaged in major international service are taking a bad beating which our government has failed to recognize for years.

The discriminations that disturb U. S. carriers the most:

— Foreign airlines spend less for new planes because they are able to finance through the Export-Import Bank at much lower interest levels. In 17 years the Export-Import Bank has loaned $4.2 billion to nearly 100 airlines for the purchase of 1,009 commercial jets.

— Foreign governments spend a considerable amount of money to entice U. S. citizens to fly on foreign airlines, but U. S. airlines do not have equal promotional assistance from the U. S. travel services.

— There is no requirement that U. S.-financed travel be accomplished on other U. S. carriers, as is the case in most countries whose airlines we compete with.

Golda Meir Has No Time for Retirement

Mrs. Meir complains of the lack of freedom in her life since her resignation as prime minister of Israel but that has not kept her from acting as an enthusiastc grandmother.

Christian Science Monitor Service

TEL AVIV, Israel — For nearly four months now, Golda Meir has been living in retirement — but her life can hardly be called retired.

She complained to a visitor recently: "I try to get two or three hours a day for myself. But I don't always manage. Yesterday, for instance, I spent all day with a delegation of the United Jewish Appeal from the United States.

"My little grandson has already suggested I should go back to my old job, then I would have more time for resting."

The former prime minister of Israel lives in a semi-detached cottage that she owns in Ramat Aviv, a pleasant, quiet quarter in the north of Tel Aviv. Half of the two-story house, surrounded by a tidy garden, belongs to her and the other half to her son, Menahem, a cellist and director of the Tel Aviv Academy of Music.

'I know my limitations better than any journalist who wants to libel me. Who am I to enter history?'

AT THIS cottage Mrs. Meir spends most of her free time; for weekends and holidays, however, she likes to travel south to the kibbutz of Revivim, where her daughter and family are members.

But, wherever she may be, she is "never really undisturbed," she complains, because like every ex-prime minister she is still under secret service protection.

"I have no freedom. I cannot go wherever I fancy. Thank God, when I recently went to see an opera at the Caesarea Amphitheater, they allowed me to travel with only one car instead of two!"

She would also like to go by bus, she says, but agrees that she must deny herself this pleasure because the job of protecting her in crowds would a make the lives of her bodyguards unbearable.

BECAUSE of difficulties like these, friends do much of Mrs. Meir's daily shopping.

If she does her own shopping occasionally, such trips are usually for the benefit of her five grandchildren. She is an "enthusiastic grandmother," as a friend put it. "She never forgets a birthday. She is like a tribal matriarch."

In her Tel Aviv apartment, Mrs. Meir's bedroom is on the top floor. On the ground floor she has a roomy parlor, furnished with taste and restraint. On a green sofa there are some white embroidered cushions; in the middle of the room a small brass-topped table.

On the wall, among several other pictures, hangs a Chagall with a personal dedication by the artist.

In this room Mrs. Meir receives her guests. Asked by a visitor whether she was concerned about her image in history, Mrs. Meir said indignantly, "My children can testify that nothing could be further from my intentions. I know my limitations better than any journalist who wants to libel me. Who am I to enter history?

"THE JEWISH people have a long history, but I can swear that I have never dealt with my part in it. I do not even have an archive. I do not condemn people who collect their speeches. But I have never done it. What historical value would this have?"

However, some Israelis believe that deep down in her heart, Golda Meir does worry about what history books will say about her in a generation hence.

Many think that because of this she may have resigned from the premiership only in June after the conclusion of the separation agreement between Israel and Syria and not right after last year's October war or, at least, after the December elections.

One of the pleasures in which Mrs. Meir indulges is cooking, and particularly baking. She admits that she is a little out of practice because during her term of office she could not spare much time for it. But now she is training again.

What she likes is traditional Jewish fare — "no French cuisine," she quips.

Another of her hobbies is reading. In her daughter's kibbutz, she recalls she has begun Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag Archipelago." "I hope people will forget me in a few months' time, so that I can have a little more time for reading," she said.

AS SHE USED to while she was prime minister, Golda Meir today, too, dresses with taste. She is never seen with a piece of jewelry that does not match her dress. But she has no interest at all in changes of fashion and never uses cosmetics.

Golda Meir receives several hundred letters a day, including invitations from foreign universities asking her to lecture. But she turns them all down. Later this autumn she plans a short trip to the United States to campaign for the United Jewish Appeal.

Every letter addressed to her is first checked by security officials. But eventually all of them reach her. That was not the case when she was still prime minister; then she had a staff of secretaries who screened her correspondence.

But not all Israelis admire Golda Meir. When she recently attended a concert in Tel Aviv where Arthur Rubinstein played, no one rose and no one clapped when she entered the hall. But when Rubinstein came, he received rousing applause.

A year ago she would have got more applause than Rubinstein.

Cranston Avoiding Debate?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston was accused Saturday of trying to protect a huge lead in his campaign for re-election by avoiding face-to-face debates with his Republican challenger.

State Sen. H.L. Richardson, Cranston's Republican challenger, made the charge shortly before the two men appeared back-to-back on a Los Angeles television program.

Cranston, who is running for a second two-year term in the Senate, led the latest California Poll 59-24 percent term in the Senate, led the latest California Poll 59-24 percent over Richardson.

The station, broadcasting the progrm, KNBC, had orginally requested the two candidates to appear side-by-side for questions by a panel of three newsmen.

But Cranston rejected that format, saying he thought candidates for the American Independent party and Peace and Freedom party should appear also.

4 Lagunans Survive Fifi

Waited Out Hurricane in Tiny Church on Stilts

By JACK CHAPPELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Huddled in a tiny, rickety church with 6 other souls, Sher Becker watched a hurricane swirl and smash through a small Central American village.

Hurricane Fifi killed more than 9,000 persons in neighboring Honduras. Sher's village of Placencia in the nation of Belize was spared.

The 27-year-old woman was one of four Lagunans in the emerging nation when the hurricane hit in mid-September.

"One day the wind started up and it blew and blew all day and it kept getting stronger and stronger'" Sher said.

"Then we heard over the radio it was going to be a hurricane. I was really frightened.

"I DIDN'T know if I was going to die in it or what — if it was just going to blow over," she said.

With Sher on the trip were Brian Krill, 26, William Schmidt, 28, and a girl known only as Viki. They had gone to the primitive nation to aid in Schmidt's movement, a self-help program for the Belizeans, teaching them agricultural techniques on model farms.

When Hurricane Fifi hit, all four were stranded in isolated sections of the country and were without communications to outside areas. At home, anxious parents feverishly tried to find out if their children were alive.

Sher, who does architectural drawings, returned to Laguna last week by plane. Krill, Schmidt and Vicki are still enroute by car.

The church in Placencia, a sandy peninsula, was supported about six feet off the ground on a foundation of skinny posts.

The eye of the hurricane passed directly through the village.

SHER said it was eerie. For hours the hurricane blasted at the small spit of land, bending trees and battering the houses. Then it stopped.

"I pretty much thought it was over when it got calm," she said. There was little water and no real damage, she said.

"Then they told me this was the eye, the calm part," she related. "They told me the second part is usually the worst. It was"

"The tideline rose four feet. All the animals were swimming. They lost chickens and pigs. The dogs seemed to survive, though. Trees blew down.

"I was really excited. I felt like I was a little kid. I was awestruck.

"Few people have the opportunity to see the magnitude that nature expresses itself with," she said.

Sher said it rained constantly. The rain was blown nearly horizontal by the wind.

When it stopped, the people left the church and a brick school house nearby to inspect the damage — and to face hunger.

"They had prepared almost all their food before the hurricane. Then it was all used up.

"The only live thing I saw besides people were two scorpions," she said.

The rains stopped just in time, before the soaking reached the roots of the larger trees. Had that happened, the trees would have begun toppling in the heavy winds.

"No one was even injured," she said.

But, leaving the village, Sher slipped and fell from a two inch walkway and cut her foot open, the only serious injury sustained in the ordeal.

Driver Faces Trial For Accident

Craig Alan Postil was ordered Friday to face trial Nov. 20 in Orange County Superior Court on manslaughter charges filed in Newport Beach after a head-on crash that killed the other driver and seriously injured his passenger.

Judge Everett W. Dickey ordered the trial date and a pretrial appearance Nov. 8 for Postil, 19, of Placentia. He remains free on bail.

Postil was arrested last June 21 after a Riverside Drive collision in which Philip E. Siggers, 46, of 9312 La Jolla St., Huntington Beach received fatal injuries.

Siggers died on the operating room table in Hoag Memorial Hospital less than an hour after Postil's sports car swerved into the oncoming lane and rammed into Siggers' station wagon.

Runway Overshot

AVALON (AP) — Four San Diego residents were hospitalized Saturday after the light airplane in which they were riding overshot the runway on a landing attempt at the Catalina Island airport and plunged over a 300-foot embankment, authorities said.

The pilot, James Joseph Pinto, 36, suffered head and back injuries, officials at Avalon Municipal Hospital said. Dan Allen Vance, 20, suffered a pelvic fracture and head injuries. Jack A. Lucas, 27, and his wife, Joanne, 24, sustained abrasions. All were reported in satisfactory condition.

Man Guilty of Reuben E. Lee Robbery

Brad Anthony Kluewer of Corona del Mar pleaded guilty to second degree armed robbery Friday in admitting that he took $8,5000 at gunpoint from the Reuben E. Lee restaurant in Newport Beach.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Everett W. Dickey delayed sentencing of Kluewer, 21, of 504 Jasmine St., until Jan. 27, 1975, to enable the defendant to undergo a pre-sentencing diagnostic study.

Kluewer faces a possible state prison term of not less than one year or lesser county jail term.

Biologist's Papers Given To UC Irvine Library

The personal papers of the late Edward A. Steinhaus — scientist, author, editor and founder of the UC Irvine School of Biological Sciences — have been donated to the UCI Library by his widow, Mabry Steinhaus of Newport Beach.

An entomologist, Dt. Steinhaus founded the field of insect pathology.

The first personal collection of a prominent faculty member to be donated to the library, the Steinhaus papers would tower more than 30 feet high if placed in a single stack. They currently are undergoing preliminary processing in the library's special collections section.

The papers cover three major periods in Steinhaus' 30-year career and consequently in the development of an entire biological discipline and a new approach to the study of biology.

AFTER STUDYING such insect-borne diseases as Rocky Mountain spotted fever and typhus with the U.S. Public Health Service during the early 1940s, Dr. Steinhaus joined the faculty at UC Berkeley.

During 17 years there he organized the continent's first research laboratory devoted to the study of insect diseases and founded Berkeley's world-renowned department of insect pathology. His pioneering work in the field has led to practical applications in the control of insect pests.

He wrote the basic reference books in the field as well as several encyclopedia articles and more than 150 research papers.

In 1963 Dr. Steinhaus became UCI's first academic dean and set about organizing an innovative school of biological sciences that could respond administratively to rapid and profound changes in the structure and substance of modern biology.

"BIOLOGICAL science definitely is going to be the next wave in the march of science, filling the position which chemistry and physics have held in the recent decades," he wrote in 1960. "We cannot afford to be caught with our thinking geared to the way things have been done in the past."

Editor of several scientific journals, he served as president of the Entomological Society of America and founded the Society for Invertebrate Pathology.

ORANGE COUNTY

State Bar Penalizes Attorneys

SACRAMENTO—Two Orange County attorneys have been disciplined by the State Bar of California following a hearing into allegations of misconduct filed against both men.

Tustin attorney Joseph D. Powers has been suspended from the practice of law pending final disposition of Orange County Superior Court action that ended with his conviction on charges of theft.

Powers, it was testified before the State Bar, withdrew a client's funds from a trust account and used the money for personal or business expenses.

Orange attorney Martin F. Roston has been placed on probation for three years and suspended from the practice of law for three months in other State Bar action.

Roston, who operates a private school devoted to the Montessori principles of teaching, filed lawsuits against one of his teachers with allegations that he knew were not legal or just, the State Bar inquiry revealed.

Marines To Face Court Trial

SANTA ANA — Two Camp Pendleton Marines booked by San Clemente police on auto theft charges after they allegedly stole a car parked outside an El Camino Real motel have been ordered to face trial Nov. 13 in Orange County Superior Court.

Judge Everett W. Dickey set the trial date and a pretrial appearance for Oct. 25 for Marines James Lee Preston, 21, and Delmas Wayne Blue, 18.

Both men were arrested in Blythe, Calif., on the basis of reports circulated by San Clemente police who accuse the pair of stealing the car Aug. 30.

Conviction on the auto theft allegations could bring the defendants a state prison term of one to five years.

Six Candidates Appear in TV Forum

Six northern Orange County men want to represent the 69th and 70th Assembly Districts in the California State Legislature. Only two of them will.

To help Orange County citizens decide which two will represent them, KOCE-TV's "Voter's Pipeline" series presents all six candidates on "Sacramento Dateline" on Wednesday and Sunday, Oct. 20, at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 50.

The candidates from the 69th District are incumbent John Briggs (R), Jack Mandel (D), and Albert Solomon (AIP).

Vying for the seat in the 70th Assembly District are A. Neal de Gaston (AIP), Donald Endreson (D), and Bruce Nestande (R).

During the program, each candidate will give a statement briefly discussing his candidacy and his reasons for seeking office. The statements will be followed by questioning from a member of the Orange County Press Club, Daily Pilot reporter Gary Granville, and a League of Women Voters member, Pat Evans. The program will be moderated by KOCE-TV's Jim Cooper.

The candid conversations of the candidates — reacting to each other, as well as to probing questions from interviews — give viewers an opportunity to see these men "first-hand" as they deal with the basic issues and actions of Orange County. "Sacramento Dateline" is the second of seven special pre-election programs broadcast each Wednesday night at 7:30 and produced by Channel 50 in order to keep Orange County voters abreast of developments in the 1974 campaign season.

Sheriffs Train Three Women

Huntington Beach Police Officer Gary M. Meza and UC Irvine Police Officer Laurie E. Woods were among a class of 30 officers who recently graduated from the Orange County Sheriff's Training Academy.

The 30 graduates, members of the department's 25th Basic Recruit Class, included three women officers: Officer Woods, Sheriff's Deputy Maryann Chavez and Sheriff's Deputy Irma U. DeWees.

'Super E' May Halt Aging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two California researchers have raised new possibilities about the role of Vitamin E, a mystery nutrient burdened over the years with unproven claims it could cure or prevent a variety of human ailments.

The lack of knowledge about Vitamin E, once described as the "vitamin in search of a disease," has given rise to numerous rumors of its miracle effects. There have been claims, among others, that large doses could improve sexual prowess, prevent heart attacks, smooth facial wrinkles and banish body odor.

These claims were repudiated a year ago by a committee of the National Research Council, which said they had no basis in sound experimentation or clinical observations.

Now Drs. Lester Packer and James R. Smith of the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory say they have found Vitamin E capable of stopping the normal aging process of human lung cells in test tubes.

THIS IS not to suggest the vitamin can make people live longer, the physiologists said, because it cannot reverse other aging processes of the human body. But their finding did suggest some interesting possibilities.

> 'Even if vitamin E can't turn a 40-year-old into a 14-year-old, it might prevent an an early death, or brain disease, heart attack or senility.'

"Even if Vitamin E can't turn a 40-year-old into a 14-year-old, it might prevent an early death, or brain disease, heart attacks or senility," Packer said. "Of course, we don't know these things at all yet. That's speculation.

"We don't want to overstate it," he said in a telephone interview. "We can't jump from experiments with isolated cells to the human body. I personally feel this is the level at which we need a lot more work before we can do intelligent tests in animals and humans."

What Packer and Smith found was that human lung cells survived twice their normal life span in a laboratory environment when Vitamin E was added. These cells normally die in test tubes after reproducing themselves about 50 times. With the vitamin, they continued past 120 cell divisons and still appeared young.

"QUITE frankly we don't really understand it very well," Packer said. "We have found these effects. The real significance remains to be explained."

A traditional view is that Vitamin E functions chiefly to protect body cells against damage from chemicals known as oxidants. Oxygen from these chemicals can cause cell deterioration by entering molecules and changing their structure and behavior.

This led some scientists to speculate that Vitamin E might protect people against air pollution.

Packer said it is possible such antioxidant activity might be involved in the extension of the cell division. He and Smith plan to continue their search for an explanation in studies supported partly by the National Institutes of Health, the Veterans Administration and the University of California.

Dr. John G. Bieri, a nutrition specialist at the National Institute of Arthritis, metabolism and digestive diseases, said the Packer-Smith report was interesting, "but it's too early to tell what it means."

Vitamin E was discovered in 1923 and 14 years later was isolated as a light yellow viscuous oil from wheat germ oil. It is fat soluble like Vitamins A, D and K and is widespread in nature.

Two-thirds of the Vitamin E in an American diet comes from salad oils, shortening and margarine, and the rest from fruits, vegetables and grains.

Although scientists disagree on how much Vitamin E humans need, the National Research Council Committee said most people get enough in their normal diets.

55 Limit 'Requires Larger CHP'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Highway Patrol's new and old commissioners said last week more patrolmen will be needed if the state wants to fully enforce the 55 m.p.h. speed limit — more than 550 new officers could be needed.

Commissioner Walter Pudinski, who Monday announced his resignation, and Dan Lanza, who was named by Gov. Ronald Reagan to replace Pudinski when he returns to the ranks Nov. 1, said the additional men would be needed if the CHP is expected to enforce the controversial speed limit next year.

PUDINSKI, who earlier became involved in a controversy over the reduced speed limit, said the additional traffic officers could cost taxpayers $9 million.

If the men were added it would push the number of uniformed officers to 6,100.

Lanza told UPI in an interview, "If the new administration decides that more emphasis should be placed on the 55 m.p.h. ... then we are going to need more manpower."

"Right now we just don't have the manpower despite the fact our enforcement is a couple hundred percent over what it was on speed," Lanza said. "We don't have the manpower to make the proper dent in it."

Pudinski said if the conditions remain the same and the patrol is expected to fully enforce the lower speed a minimum of 550 officers would be needed.

HE SAID the CHP now is preparing two budgets. One includes the additional men and the other does not. The patrol's budget this fiscal year is $177 million.

Pudinski said if California is again hit by gasoline shortages the driving public may again begin obeying the reduced speed limit. Early this year motorists drove slower because of the "energy crisis," he said, but as gasoline became available and summer approached "they returned to their old driving habits."

The names of deputy sheriffs reportedly were pulled out and union material was mailed to their homes. Sheriff John Duffy complained it was "a violation of the right to privacy.

Campaign Trail Plotted

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — Mickey Mouse jokes notwithstanding, the Disneyland Hotel is a mandatory stop for Republican candidates for president and governor.

The once-popular Ambassador on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles has been shunned by Democrats ever since 1968.

The Century Plaza Hotel in Beverly Hills is always "in" with both parties.

These are political facts the layman would know if he or she had access to such a thing as "A guide to the California Campaign Trail."

The Trail is more than a mythical line on a map. It comes alive every two years as candidates for president on down seek votes in the nation's most populous state.

The Ambassador has been shunned by Democrats since Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was fatally wounded there after his June 1968 presidential primary victory celebrations.

But the important part of the seemingly aimless zig-zag track across California is the collection of dots that form stops along the way.

THE STREETS

Wilshire Boulevard — Is to politics what Wall Street is to finance. Center for campaign headquarters, the big hotels where major fund-raising events are held, candidates stay and hold their victory parties.

Montgomery Street — Heart of San Francisco's Financial District and popular for candidates' street parades. One such mythical parade was filmed for the movie "The Candidate" on New Year's Eve when workers traditionally shower the street with the old year's shredded calendars.

THE HOTELS

Century Plaza — On Avenue of the Stars in Century City but considered part of the Wilshire District. Where former President Nixon feted Moon astronauts and campaigned in 1972, as did Sen. George McGovern, twice. The Los Angeles Ballroom is the state's most popular setting for big fundraising dinners.

Fairmont — San Francisco's equivalent to the Century Plaza. A favorite of campaign managers and political writers for its grand style and cable car access to famed restaurants such as Ernie's.

Disneyland — In the heart of conservative Republican Orange County, billing self as "Hotel of the Magic Kingdom." Ready access to Anaheim Convention Center and Knott's Berry Farm, popular for major GOP campaign speeches. McGovern campaigned here, too, in 1972.

Del Coronado — The rambling tarreted 19th century resort long in fashion for Democrats raising funds in the San Diego area. Currently out of grace with Democrats since its Democratic owner is supporting the Republican candidate for governor, Houston I. Flournoy.

Ambassador — Shunned by Democrats since Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was fatally wounded there after his June 1968 presidential primary victory celebrations. Republicans occasionally still hold meetings at the Ambassador. One of the most starstudded fund-raising events in California political history was held four years ago in the old Coconut Grove ballroom for Gov. Reagan featuring entertainment by John Wayne, Bob Hope, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra.

THE SCHOOLS

Fairfax High — On Fairfax Avenue in the heavily Jewish West Side of Los Angeles. Popular stop for Democrats.

Robert F. Kennedy Junior High — Mostly black school in nearby Compton. aiso popular with Democrats although Reagan was here in 1970.

Old Newport Landing, Mid-1800s, a Busy Place When Lumber Ships Arrived

Newport Landing: Seed of a Busy Coast City

By STEVE DONALDSON

It was 100 years ago — 1874 — that James McFadden received his first cargoes of lumber at Old Newport Landing.

That fall, it might be argued, he set a pattern that has grown into today's Sunday traffic jams that clog up Pacific Coast Highway right near where he started his operations.

The first lumber cargo was delivered to a site that is approximately the present location of Bayside Trailer Park, across the Upper Bay bridge from Wil Wright's ice cream parlor.

That event marked the beginning of a lumber and transportation business centered in Newport Beach that was to endure for a quarter of a century. It led to the founding of the city.

Admittedly, McFadden was not the first person to utilize the bay as a commercial shipping point. That credit goes to Captain Samuel Dunnells of San Diego who established the bay landing and provided irregular local service thereto with a small steamboat named "Vaquero" from 1870 to 1872.

However, it was McFadden who, after acquiring the landing in 1874, persevered in developing it and the associated lumber yards and transportation routes to become the most important enterprise of Orange County in that era.

McFADDEN HAD first visited the area in 1868 when he bought some ranchland about halfway between Santa Ana and Newport. The bay was then known as the San Joaquin Slough and was not used for commerce or navigation.

McFadden, curious about the slough, measured the water on the bar at its entrance and found the water at the bay mouth was deeper than at either Anaheim Landing or San Pedro harbor, the nearest shipping points at that time.

When the time came for McFadden to erect some fences and buildings on his property, he could not resist the natural temptation to try to have the necessary lumber delivered at Newport Landing. The wharf and warehouse at Newport Landing were by then unused, but pressure was mounting from Santa Ana Valley farmers to reopen Newport due to the inconvenience and expense associated with Anaheim Landing.

McFadden, with his brother Robert, made arrangements in San Francisco with some ship owners to have carried to Newport 100,000 board feet of pine lumber they had purchased at Trinidad in Northern California.

The agreement provided that if the captain succeeded in crossing the bar at Newport, the McFaddens would load him back to San Francisco with a cargo of barley. If he was unable to cross the bar they were prepared to raft the lumber to shore.

IT WAS early in August 1874, then, when a small schooner called the "Mose" arrived off the entrance to Newport Bay laden with lumber for McFadden. By retracting the centerboard and kedging, the captain was able to maneuver the flat-bottomed schooner across the bar and into the harbor. He made his way to the old landing, passing mudflats and marshlands in the lower bay that would someday become prized residential developments.

It was apparent that the reopening of Newport Landing and the provision of shipping service to Northern California would be successful. McFadden retained the "Mose" and a smaller vessel named "Susie" for several more voyages and also opened a lumber yard at the landing.

The two schooners thereafter ran regularly with full lumber cargoes on the down trip and with local farmers' products on the up trip.

By that December 1874, 16 cargoes of lumber had been discharged at Newport Landing, and large shipments of grain had been made from Santa Ana and Tustin.

Outgoing shipments of agricultural products through Newport rose to 2,500 tons in 1875 and grew to 4,500 tons in 1876, while incoming lumber and merchandise amounted to about 3,000 tons per year. Insignificant by today's standards, the numbers represented most of the commerce of the area at that time. To better provide for the handling of this traffic, McFadden made several improvements in the facilities used to conduct the freight operations there.

THE HARBOR entrance was modified, the wharf was rebuilt, the warehouse was enlarged, and a tram was installed on the dock, among other improvements.

McFadden had a new steamship built to overcome the high operating costs of the small schooners and the danger in crossing the bar with sail. Named "Newport," the new ship was designed along shallow lines for use especially in the Newport trade. She was rated at 165 tons and measured 130 feet in length. She originally resembled the steam schooners of the north coast and was said to be able to carry 1,000 bales of wool, 1,000 head of sheep or 150,000 feet of lumber. She even had a few staterooms.

She would be a regular visitor to Newport Bay over the ensuing years, calling about every two weeks on a schedule which coincided with the highest tides to afford her maximum water on the bar and in the bay.

A new warehouse was built in 1875 on the hill beside the landing. It had chutes for receiving and transferring freight from wagons and to vessels. The two-story structure was divided into several large bins for the segregation of freight.

The upper level was even with the top of the bluff and had unloading platforms for the wagons a few feet above the surface of the ground. Small chutes and trap doors permitted the grain and other produce to be unloaded directly into the bins below, while a large, main chute extended from the base of the lower floor out over the channel for loading ships.

This chute had a slope of about 45 degrees and featured a 2x12 brake which, by means of a lever, could slow the rush of the bags of grain to keep them from bursting or damaging the bulwarks of the vessels. The lower section was hinged to permit its being placed over the hold of ships and raised or lowered according to the ebb and flow of the tide.

The upper levels of the storage bins were emptied by using small chutes leading to the main chute, while the remaining goods had to be carried out by hand to the head of the big chute.

Newport Landing was a rather quiet home for about a dozen families in those days, some of whom were fishermen. Others worked for McFadden.

OCCASIONALLY a group of pleasure-seekers from Santa Ana or other inland areas would come down to have a picnic or a dance, bringing a band and using the warehouse for a hall. But the biggest events were the coming and going of various ships.

The channel would be sounded and marked in advance, and the large produce warehouse would be jammed with freight until it was necessary to pile more outside. Then the ship would be brought in and up to the dock. After discharging her freight at the lower warehouse, the vessel would move out and up to a mooring under the produce chute.

So efficient were all the arrangements that a ship such as the "Newport" could discharge a 200,000-foot lumber cargo and reload with corn within 48 hours, the actual time consumed in freight transfer being only 18 hours, and the services of only three men being required in handling all the goods sent through the elevated produce warehouse.

Sometimes as many as 80 teams would arrive at the landing on a single day following a vessel's arrival, to carry away the freight. They hauled such diverse items as a piano or a fire engine.

Outgoing commodities were corn, barley, wheat, rye, oats, beans, castor beans, sheep, wool, cattle, hides, eggs, honey, fowls, butter, fish oil, ore, beeswax, hogs, mustard seed, mohair, hops, starch, alfalfa seed, dried fruit, flax seed, raisins, popcorn, potatoes, walnuts, peanuts, abalone shells, bacon, cheese, ham, limes, oranges, pelts, onions, oil, pits, and tallow.

A RAILROAD from Santa Ana to Newport was contemplated as early as 1875. Some enterprising citizens of Santa Ana and vicinity held a meeting to discuss the feasibility of building an eight-mile narrow-gauge rail line between their town and the port.

Los Angeles transportation developer Phineas Banning and an engineer were present at the meeting, and the engineer estimated that such a railway could be built and equipped with an engine and flat cars for about $75,000. The idea was premature, apparently, as no further action was taken at that time and no such railroad materialized until some 15 years later, although it would be a recurring subject of public agitation during the intervening period.

THERE WAS other railroad building in Southern California that would have an impact on Newport Landing traffic, however. In the latter 1870s the Southern Pacific extended its tracks through Southern California and into Santa Ana, thereby offering Santa Ana Valley shippers railroad access to the seaboard at San Pedro or direct rail service to San Francisco.

At that time, 90 percent of California's population was situated in Northern California, and that was the location of the state's primary markets.

The Southern Pacific locally, as elsewhere along its system, attempted to monopolize the freight movements in the areas it served, and offered favorable rates to shippers who used its lines, thereby diverting traffic away from Newport. Outgoing traffic at Newport declined from 4,000 tons in 1878 to 3,000 tons in 1879 and 1880, and to 2,000 tons in 1881, while Southern Pacific shipments out of Santa Ana increased, to 4,000 tons in 1879, to 6,000 tons in 1880, and to 9,000 tons in 1881.

To offset this competition, McFadden aligned himself with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company to whom he sold his ship and landing in 1878, under the condition that service would be continued to Newport at stipulated rates and that the McFadden brothers would be retained as agents.

The steamship company used the ship to serve other ports along the coast in addition to Newport and by such better utilization was presumably able to operate the vessel without the losses which McFadden faced alone.

TO SUSTAIN the Newport operation, McFadden solicited business from points further inland. By employing what amounted to a wagon train he was able to compete successfully with the Southern Pacific at points as far inland as San Bernardino in the carriage of certain types of freight.

Consequently, incoming shipments at Newport withstood the decline, persisting at a level of 2,500 tons per year, which exceeded the volume coming into Santa Ana over the S.P. tracks.

In 1882, the Santa Fe completed a line from San Diego to Colton and thereby succeeded McFadden's Newport wagon train as the primary S.P. competition for San Bernardino Valley freight.

Newport business continued to change during the 1880s. Shipment of lumber and grain via the steamship company grew smaller, while the desirability of more frequent service by deeper draught merchandise vessels became more pressing. The steamship company became anxious to rescind its contract. But the McFaddens were unwilling to let Newport be abandoned.

The United States government investigated the possibility of improving the harbor but concluded that such a project was not justifiable at that time.

Instead, McFadden would build an ocean wharf in 1888 where today's Newport Pier stands, which thereafter became the focal point of Newport shipping and soon sustained a scale of traffic 20 times that conducted at the old bay building.

About the Author

Steve Donaldson describes himself as "an amateur historian interested in local transportation aspects of this area's history for about the last 10 years." He has written extensively about the city and its port and railway activities.

His illustrated booklet, "Santa Ana & Newport Railway," published by The Western Railroader, tells the story of the "outside" wharf, its ocean-going vessels and railroad lines which tied it to Huntington Beach, Costa Mesa, and other hinterland points. The booklet, at $1 a copy, including postage, can be ordered directly from Donaldson at 2201 Vista Hogar, Newport Beach, CA 92660.

Dog Ownership Not Public

DEAR PAT: I was bitten by a dog in front of a house in Costa Mesa on Feb. 27. My doctor said that since the dog has had its shots I was safe, but I have been trying for months to find the dog's owner. The animal control officer won't send it to me in spite of many requests. I may decide to use this information for legal purposes and feel I have a right to it.

J.S., Costa Mesa

Unless you initiate a civil action and obtain a court order, the only police records available for public scrutiny are accident and theft loss reports, according to the Costa Mesa animal control officer. If you wish a more complete explanation, contact Records Supervisor Sgt. Ted Curry at 566-5377.

Getting to Know the Soil

DEAR PAT: I am a newcomer to Huntington Beach and although I was able to grow all kinds of shrubs and plants in the Pomona Valley for 60 years, this sticky adobe-alkaline soil here is a problem I can't seem to cope with. I have two new English yew trees, planted as the nursery instructed, which now are turning yellow and seem to be dying. I can't keep buying new soil additives and sprays forever. Can you give me advice on growing plants in this soil?

H.R., Huntington Beach

Kenneth E. Mueller, agricultural extension home advisor, recommends blending a 50 percent organic matter mix (such as redwood compost) with 50 percent existing soil for planting in your area. Be sure to provide a gravel drainage base for plants with deep root systems. An inexpensive soil analysis can be arranged by mail wherever Kellogg's garden products are sold. The result would give you a better idea of what materials need to be added to your soil for good balance and best growth possibilities.

Busy Bookkeeper Sends Refund

DEAR PAT: I sent a $5 membership fee to the Complimentary Vacation Club in Tarzana on Feb. 3 with the understanding that I could return my membership within 10 days for a full refund. The dinner club was not what I expected and I returned it within two days on March 4. The club then requested a copy of my canceled check, saying that was "all we need" to issue a refund. I followed their instructions, but no refund came. Several days later I sent another copy of their letter and my check, but several weeks have passed and I still don't have my money back.

J.B., Costa Mesa

The firm's bookkeeper, who says she has "more to do than sit down and write checks," is attending to your refund immediately. The AYS contact was fortunate for you since your previous address was listed in the club's files.

Wading Area Public, Sitting Places Private

DEAR PAT: This summer I took my children to a small public beach in Laguna. There were so many other people there that we had a problem locating any open space. Surrounding this beach were "private property" signs and I was afraid I'd be trespassing if we used the fringe area of this beach. Just what is public and what is private on the beaches at Laguna, Newport Beach and Lido Island?

D.F., Corona del Mar

Any area of the beach coastline is "public" from the water to the mean high tide line. Beyond that point, the beach area may or may not be private property. Harbor District officials advise you to consult a map available at its headquarters, 1901 Bayside Drive, Newport Beach, to determine the public or private property status of specific sandy beach areas along the Orange County coastline. Although this sounds complicated, basically you can "wade" anywhere, but must be careful where you sit!

MRS. MIDGE NOBRIGA

Good Deeder

She's Involved

It has taken someone born out of the country to show many of her neighbors how to be a good citizen, as well as a fullfilled person. Midge Nobriga, who still speaks with a charming British accent, has been in Southern California since 1947, and for the last several years has been a very involved person.

Currently serving as secretary for the West Orange County Volunteer Board of Directors, Midge is also president of the Hylond hospital guild where she has spent the past three years as a volunteer. As president she helps the guild raise funds for Hylond, as well as providing transportation and taking the children on picnics and outings. A main involvement is planning and putting on a weekly party for exceptional children.

In addition Midge has been involved for many years with the Daughters of the British Empire, and formerly was a volunteer at Fairview State Hospital.

When asked why she devotes so much of her time to volunteer work Mrs. Nobriga turns thoughtful. Several years ago she lost a talented 19-year-old daughter in a tragic accident. "After the death of my daughter I needed something to fill the void. Now when the children at Hylond see me walking through the door all that love just flows out. I could never stop."

Blood Sugar Tests

Hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) has recently become a popular topic. Since it is frequently accompanied by nervousness, perspiration, shakiness, headache, weakness, palpitations, hunger and changes in vision, hypoglycemia has taken a kind of catch-all blame when these symptoms occur. Actually, low blood sugar is rarely the agent responsible for such symptoms; other reasons, such as simple anxiety, being far more common.

Before the hypoglycemia label is attached to an individual, it is necessary that a blood test (or series of tests) be performed documenting the low blood sugar at the time of the associated symptoms.

The most common kind of low blood sugar — reactive hypoglycemia — occurs in adults a few hours after meals and generally does not require treatment unless symptoms occur on a regular basis. In children, on the other hand, hypoglycemia after eating may be the initial manifestation of a number of different conditions, the recognition and treatment of which are crucial to the growth and development of the child. Such episodes appearing in children require prompt medical attention.

If a low blood sugar attack occurs while fasting (generally in the early hours of the morning before breakfast), a complete medical investigation, including detailed laboratory studies, is indicated.

Devices Seen Saving Fuel

PASADENA (UPI) — A pair of aerodynamic devices introduced last week may mean the nation's 4.5 million medium and heavy trucks will be using one billion fewer gallons of fuel each year, according to researchers.

The devices, displayed at a National Science Foundation conference at Caltech, could save the trucking industry up to $500 million in delivery costs, said officials of Aerovironment Inc of Pasadena, the firm which designed the equipment.

IT'S BUMPER TO BUMPER IN ORANGE COAST COLLEGE PARKING LOT OR HOW DO YOU FIND YOUR PLACE IN COLLEGE?

50,000 on Coast District Campuses

By FRED SCHOEMEHL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the fall enrollment figures for Orange Coast and Golden West colleges came in, Coast Community College District officials were surprised to find:

— The district posted the highest enrollment increase of any community college district in California.

— Orange Coast showed a 23.5 percent increase over last year while Golden West was up 31.5 percent.

— Combined enrollment now exceeds 50,000 full and part time students, the most in the district's history.

Figures show that OCC has 31,192 students this fall, while 19,287 are enrolled at Golden West.

THE WHOPPING enrollment increases hardly match the state average of 6.1 percent, said Dr. Norman Watson, chancellor of the district.

Nor do they follow the Orange County average enrollment increase of 10 percent.

Cory Thompson, business manager for the district, believes the increases are due to an extensive telephone information drive conducted by the district last spring.

Other factors, Thompson said, include the growing unemployment rate, new courses, the lower cost of community college education and the "lure of the beach."

The spring information drive involved thousands of calls to former district students. They were asked if they planned to return to school and if they had any questions.

Response to the program was tremendous, Thompson said.

"WE ALSO see that when the unemployment rate is higher people tend to come back to school. I'm sure this has had an ffect on the increase," Thompson said.

Tighter financial times for college students has increased enrollments at both campuses because the district has no tuition, Thompson said. UC Irvine, for example, has tuition totalling $624 per year.

"And let's face it, we live in a desirable area. I'm sure the lure of the beach has something to do with the increase," Thompson added.

Has the unexpected crush of students created problems for the district?

"Yes and no," said Thompson, explaining that parking problems are worse than ever but that no classroom space crimp has developed.

"THE FACULTY has been extremely cooperative in admitting, one, two and sometimes five more students in their classes," Thompson said.

He pointed out that planning is under way for new parking facilities at both campuses.

Thompson said he prepared the budget for this school year based on an enrollment equal to last year's. Since the district receives state aid on a per student basis, the district expects quite a windfall this year.

The business manager said the extra income will be tucked away in reserves until fiscal 1975-76.

GWC Cites Community Appeal

By TERRY COVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Just two years ago the administrators at Golden West College in Huntington Beach were almost begging for more students.

"We didn't experience the growth we had expected in the fall of 1972," says Fred Garcia, director of admissions. "So it spurred our efforts to let the community know what we have to offer."

The effort, combined with current economic conditions, has paid off with a bumper crop of students this year.

Total enrollment, counting daytime and night students, is up 31.5 percent this year over 1973 — a population boom administrators had not expected.

"WE HAVE a very fuzzy crystal ball," quips Garcia. "We were surprised. We were predicting an 18-20 percent increase."

Dr. R. Dudley Boyce, Golden West president, is both surprised and pleased with the rise in student population. He believes it indicates the school is doing its job as a "community college."

"We pride ourselves in being a uniquely community institution in higher education The measure of your success at that is the number of students you attract with a broad base of interest," explains Dr Boyce

By statistica measurements then, Golden West seems a booming success this year in the local community

THE DAY enrollment is 8,390 (a 31 7 percent increase) at night it is 10,897 (up 31 3 percent) and there are 565 students enrolled in television courses through KOCE-TV.

Boyce considers it significant that daytime enrollment is beginning to catch up to the evening college.

"We now have the day and evening programs more carefully balanced," he says. "You can get your education from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. We no longer seem to have two separate institutions."

Garcia notes that among early registrants, when most classes are still open, about 20 percent of the day students also take one or two night courses.

The average age of Golden West students is up to 26-years-old this year, indicating more and more working adults attending classes.

But while more students are coming on campus, the average class load per student is dropping, indicating a greater number of parttime students.

"I think the economic threats have spurred the college growth," says Garcia "We are providing students with courses they need for success in life for job improvement."

A few years ago the two-year college system shed its title of "junior" college and donned the cloak of "community 'college

Enrollment figures at Golden West indicate the school is no longer considered just a stepping stone to a four-year university.

Five years ago when students enrolled, about 75 percent of them indicated they planned to transfer to a four-year school, says Boyce. Last spring, only 43 percent said the same, and only about 20-25 percent do it.

Boyce now refers to the community college as a "50-year experience," and noting the variety of course offering, including two-year career programs, as well as the community services performed, he feels the school has arrived as a cornerstone of the community.

"We are not just the halls of ivy at the corner of Edginer (Avenue) and Golden West (Street) — we are a part of the community "

The encreased enrollment, and the greater emphasis on the "community" aspect of the school has presented educators with a new challenge, Boyce believes

"As a student pursues a fractional education, he looses sight of the full complete education The new challenge is to help a student broaden his scope of education while he follows a linear (longer) time span

"We want a complete college experience for students, but it doesn't have to be limited to just four years."

"UNEXPECTED GROWTH" Fred Garcia

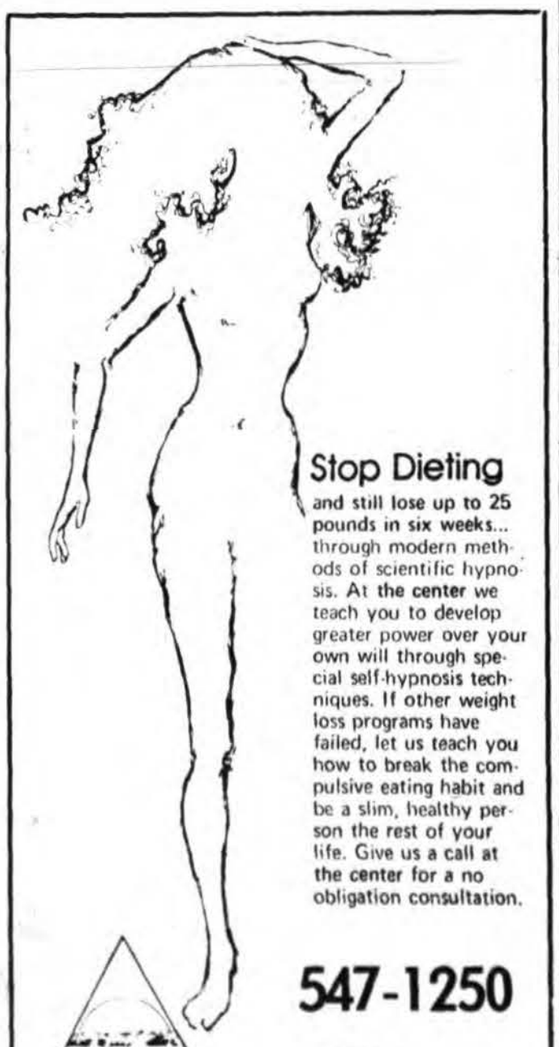

"COMMUNITY COLLEGE" Dr. R. Dudley Boyce

"Education in a free society benefits people with an increasing opportunity to taste the culture," says Boyce. "And we have an increasing number sitting down at the banquet table."

Application forms for refunds were mailed to every resident of the state last August by the attorney general's office. But Riles says there is concern that many consumers entitled to refunds may not get the word.

American Dream — Part 3

'New Land' Held Myriad of Surprises

Editor's Note: This is the third of 18 articles exploring the theme, In Search of the American Dream. This article discusses the settling of America and the surprises encountered by colonists. The author is professor of history at the University of California, Berkeley.

By WINTHROP D JORDAN

When Englishmen first began to scent opportunity in America, they were told two contradictory "facts" about the new land. They were told, on the one hand, that it was a "desert," a "waste firmament."

They were told, at the same time, that "savages" lived there. For Englishmen and Anglo-Americans both statements remained correct for centuries: America was both empty (an opportunity) and filled (with problems).

AMERICA'S apparent emptiness can be explained by considering English perspectives at that time. The native Indians were not numerous by European standards, especially not in comparison to the enormous expanse of territory they lived in. What we would call a relatively low density of population, Englishmen were then perfectly justified in perceiving as "few." More importantly, Englishmen thought the Indians had no "settled habitations."

What we now know to have been Eastern woodland Indian cultures which rested on a combination of agriculture and hunting were perceived by Englishmen as a thoroughly uncouth (i.e., un-English) sort of people who neither occupied the land (properly) nor would stay put.

Initially, therefore, Englishmen had no notion of exterminating the native peoples, nor even of sweeping them aside; even though people already lived in America, Englishmen thought, such an immense land had plenty of room for more.

The warped perception that caused the English to see Indians as unsettled wanderers was in large measure a function of how they saw society at home.

THE SEVERE, almost catastrophic dislocations which accompanied the English Reformation and Henry VIII's fluctuating tempers had resulted in large numbers of displaced persons.

Thrown off the land onto English countryside and villages, they became the "wandering beggars" to whom Hakluyt, the "trumpet" of American colonization, had referred in his "Discourse Concerning Western Planting."

Social dislocation and what we would call "underemployment problems" persuaded many Englishmen that England was overpopulated in general and especially overpopulated by "undesirables."

Given the assumptions of the day, America was seen not as a dumping ground for these undesirables (as Australia was to seem much later) but as an empty and fertile ground for the settlement, employment, and hence moral and social reformation of the offscourings of English society.

At the same time, as the Protestant Reformation took increasing hold on English society, certain religious fringe groups came to think of America as a refuge from a mounting threat of persecution.

They were not immune, any more than Englishmen generally, to the scent of opportunity which by the early 1600s was so very much in the air. The various streams of attraction to America and propulsion from England were thoroughly mixed.

In retrospect, the early "great migration" (1620-1650) of the English to America is particularly striking in terms of the number and variety of people and motivations involved.

Relative to the population of Europe, probably more persons left Europe for the New World during those decades than at any time before or since. The English went principally to three areas: the eastern Caribbean (Barbados and the few small Leeward Islands), the Chesapeake Bay (Virginia and Maryland), and eastern New England (the Massachusetts Bay and the Plymouth Colony)

Some went against their will, especially the Scots and Irish, victim-prisoners of the English Civil Wars, who migrated to the West Indies. Many went for better fortunes and better times such people probably predominated in the Chesapeake area and were certainly prevalent everywhere else

Some went in the hope of fulfilling the faith we describe as religious, and while it would be right to ascribe "religion" as the predominating motive of those who came to New England, it would be radically incorrect to assign thereby a lack of other worldly faith to those not fortunate enough to have joined God's special project there.

HOWEVER sure various breeds of Englishmen were about God's intentions, the various English communities in America turned out to be different sorts of places. In the islands, sugar and the slave labor it seemed to require took over almost totally.

The Chesapeake settlements, with a diffuse population, spilled all over the eastern, watered portions of the area. After almost being wiped out by the native inhabitants, the colonists eventually succeeded in establishing a populous but sparsely settled community in Virginia, devoid of real villages and devoted mainly to staple agriculture.

(They hunted but mainly they farmed; ironically they went, unintentionally, part way toward reproducing the Indian woodland cultures their forebears had disliked.)

Only in New England (and this development was to persist for a very long time) did the English manage to reproduce, in the New World what they thought valuable, as a social mode, in the Old

The Pilgrims in Plymouth and the Puritans in Massachusetts have long attracted attention because they were so articulate about their own goals

THOUGH the Puritans were a much larger, wealthier, and better educated group, they shared with the Pilgrims a powerful sense of mission. In England, their own low-church, modified-Calvinist Protestantism seemed to be on the defensive against the forces of the Crown, the closely allied Church of England, and, not least, the numerous legions of ungodliness.

Determined that their "true religion" and the Lord's will should prevail in the wilderness, they set about to establish "Bible Commonwealths" where families, society, the polity, and the churches would all be harmoniously ordered according to God's Word.

All this required inner discipline and inevitably (given their view of the essential nature of man) outer discipline as well. They sternly punished lying, drunkenness, fornication and all the myriad other sins to which men and women, and even children, seemed so wickedly inclined.

They enforced orthodoxy and discipline in the churches; they harried out religious dissenters and went so far as to hang two Quakers. The Puritans were indeed pious, intolerant moralists, but they were not prudes.

THEY punished sexual offenses but they were not in the least surprised by them. They wore colorful clothing, suitable, of course, to their social stations.

When Harvard College thought it necessary to limit drinking at commencement, the authorities restricted degree-takers to three gallons of wine per man.

Whether the Puritans succeeded or failed in their mission is a matter of definition and they were themselves ambivalent on the matter. Even as they railed at the prevalence of wickedness among them and at the decline of true piety, they remained acutely conscious that their society and churches were superior to England's.

While they were keenly aware of man's tendency to disperse to new, empty lands, they prided themselves on their regulated pattern of settlement, ordered town by ordered town.

They were, indeed, the most realistic of utopians. They expected to establish a New Israel in the wilderness, and they demanded godly thoughts and behavior of its members; at the same time they knew that Adam's fall from grace meant that men were inherently and perversely wicked. People who demand perfection yet do not expect to achieve it are inevitably condemned to ambivalence about the results

THERE WERE other such experiments in America, but with major differences. The most notable and undeniably successful was Pennsylvania. There William Penn and his fellow Quakers (whom the Puritans hated, partly because they had so much in common) deliberately founded a colony that would welcome all varieties of Protestants.

The idea was a relatively new one, but it led quite directly, as things turned out, to populousness and prosperity even beyond the dreams of the founders. It led also to an even greater novelty-ethnic diversity, a development of such critical importance in all the colonies that it will receive separate attention in another lecture.

Next: New Societies, by Winthrop D. Jordan, professor of history, University of California, Berkeley.

'PEACEABLE KINGDOM' — Painting by Edward Hicks (from Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Art Collection) depicts what early settlers of America found — a land that was empty, but also was inhabited by savages and animals, some friendly, some otherwise.

California Eases Air Standards

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's air quality standards for sulfur dioxide, a pollutant from oil refineries and other industrial plants, have been eased by the state Air Resources Board.

The board voted unanimously in favor of its staff's recommendation to increase the state's standard for 24-hour concentration from .04 parts per million (ppm) of air to .10 parts per million.

The federal standard for sulfur dioxide is .14 ppm.

The ARB staff said the old standard of .04 ppm is "excessively stringent" and described the change as "justified by the available information on health effects."

The higher limit also had the support of the state Department of Health. John Heslep, director of the department's Laboratory Management Program, said the standard posed no threat to public health.

The ARB said that from 1970 to 1973, the .04 standard was exceeded often in the South Coast Air Basin around Los Angeles, and "at times" in the San Francisco Bay area.

DES Seen in Beef, Second Time in '74

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department has reported that inspectors have found the second positive sample of the growth hormone DES in a beef animal this year.

The sample was found by inspectors of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service and verified by the Food and Drug Administration.

Officials said the residue of the growth stimulant was found in the liver of a steer owned by Weber & Sons of Friend, Neb., and slaughtered at a Council Bluffs, Iowa, packing plant. The only other positive finding of DES this year also was in a Nebraska animal.

Scientists analyze the livers of meat animals on a random basis to check for the use of DES, and 2,093 samples have been taken so far this year. The liver is the only part of an animal's body in which residues have been detected.

The positive finding was obtained Aug. 26 during a routine sampling at the plant, but any potential legal action would be aimed at the Nebraska company that fed the cattle. Officals said any legal action would be the responsibility of the FDA.

No traces of DES are permitted in the tissues of animals slaughtered for human consumption because the DES hormone has been known to produce cancer in laboratory animals.

DES is legal for use in the United States as long as it is withdrawn from animal feed for a sufficient time before slaughter to permit the residues to pass out of the animal's body. Veterinarians said no residues will remain when proper withdrawal times are observed.

Airline Use By Disabled Imperiled

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's director of rehabilitation believes the right of handicapped persons to travel aboard commercial aircraft is being threatened by regulations proposed by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Alan C. Nelson, in a letter to the FAA, said last week, "We urge the Federal Aviation Administration to forgo adopting proposals contained in the federal register of July 5."

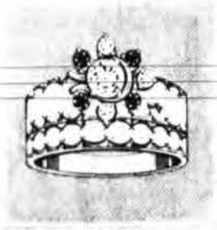

Nelson questioned the FAA giving authority to airline employes to deny the right of a handicapped person to travel in an aircraft without any provision for a review of an abuse of that authority.

"We believe the proposed regulations raise serious equal protection and due process issues chiefly because they severely interfere with the fundamental constitutional right of freedom to travel," Nelson said.

Paul Muni: Actor's Actor

Life Traced

By ALLISON DEERR
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

"Some define God as the little voice within which keeps saying, 'It isn't good enough.' If that is so, then Paul Muni must have lived very close to God."

Quoting author Robert E. Lee's eulogy of the legendary character actor, columnist-author Michael Druxman opened the Celebrity Book Review Series of Pi Beta Phi, South Coast Alumnae.

In "Paul Muni: His Life and His Films" Druxman reveals the uniqueness of the man.

"An actor's actor, Muni remained deeply in character even off camera. He never took an acting lesson, never read a book on the subject," Druxman said.

"He told the press when asked about his method of acting that it could not be taught, or analyzed. He said he acted the way his grandmother made apple pie.

"First she'd wash her hands, then comb her hair, then put on her apron and make apple pie."

His method was knowing his characters, real or fictional. For "Good Earth" he haunted San Francisco's Chinatown. For "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" he spent many hours in prisons.

AUTHOR: MICHAEL DRUXMAN

DID RESEARCH

"If possible, he visited the places where the characters lived as for Emile Zola and Louis Pasteur."

Muni received his scripts months in advance so that he could study the character, perfect his interpretation of the part, the author said. Once his mind was set, there was no changing it.

He noted that on one picture the director called for Muni to enter stage right. Muni had practiced stage left at home and would not change his mind. Scenes had to be reshot, and the set torn down and rearranged to fit Muni's direction.

"Today, that wouldn't be possible."

CHOSE SCRIPTS

Muni had script approval, something quite rare at that time, said Druxman, who writes a monthly column for Coronet Magazine.

It was on the actor's urging that "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Good Earth" were made, over the objections of the respective studio heads at Warners and Metro-Goldyn-Mayer. He earned two of his five nominations for these films.

And, Muni the actor hated other actors who played games. While playing Clarence Darrow to Ed Begley's William Jennings Bryan on Broadway, he was upstaged by an extra.

The extra, a disgruntled young actor who could find no other part, added his "Amen" over a Muni line. "I'd like those Amens on the record," said Muni, "except that one over there who won't be here tomorrow night." He wasn't.

Coming out of the Yiddish theater, which had prompters in the wings, Muni never learned to master his lines, a detriment in television.

For a part on the old Playhouse 90 series, he wore a hearing aid to play a barrister coming out of retirement to defend his son. His wife sat in the control booth and fed him his lines. Muni was nominated for an Emmy.

But, said Druxman, perfectionist Muni was very human. Envious of Edward G. Robinson's chauffeured limosine when he appeared on Broadway, he hired one of his own.

"What Muni didn't know was that Robinson's came with his contract, paid for by the show's producers."

He is still considered, said Druxman, one of the greatest character actors of all time.

Advantages Tallied

Editor's Note — More women than ever are running for office this year. But politics, they say, is still a world in which men get most of the campaign money, and a young mother has a hard time running for Congress if grandma won't mind the kids.

By ANN BLACKMANN
Associated Press Writer

A year ago, Martha Keys was known in Manhattan, Kan., as the attractive wife of a college dean, a mother of four. "I had no desire to run for Congress," she says.

But one late-summer night several weeks ago, she was resting her head against the back seat of her campaign car and munching on dinner — a slice of pepperoni pizza.

It was 11 p.m. She'd been up since that morning — shaking hands . . . smiling . . . a staff meeting . . . notes for a speech . . . shaking hands . . . smiling . . . a tea . . . a fund raiser . . . another chili dinner . . . shaking hands . . .

All for one end.

Mrs. Keys, 44 and a Democrat, is taking her first shot at elective office. She's a candidate for Congress.

"I found that if changes were going to be made, I'd have to run myself," said Mrs. Keys of her Kansas election district, which has elected Republicans for years.

Fran Ryan of Columbus, Ohio, Democrat, Roman Catholic, mother of five, also is running for Congress.

And so is Millicent Fenwick of Somerset County, N.J., 64, Republican, divorcee, mother of two, grandmother of eight.

The list of women running this year for local, state and national office is long enough to make even the most dedicated housewives and male chauvinists take notice.

One hundred and twenty-five women tried for Congress in state primaries, almost twice as many women as in 1972. Forty-three won their party's nomination for the House, three for the Senate.

Three women are gubernatorial candidates. Two years ago there were none. Four have won their party's nominations for lieutenant governor. And from Massachusetts to California, hundreds of women are running for local office.

Some politicos are calling 1974 "The Year of the Woman," a time for fresh faces, clean images and putting scandals behind.

But the candidates have problems; the problems of being women.

Some say that regardless of their husband's offers to share household duties, they find themselves campaigning during the day and doing housework at night.

And most say it's almost impossible for a mother with small children to run for office unless there's a grandmother, aunt or close friend around to mind the kids.

For those women already in Congress among them Rep. Pat Schroeder, 33, a Colorado Democrat, there's a daily problem.

"It's the constant subtle put down," she said. "There's all sorts of innuendoes. They say, 'Why don't you talk to your husband more often?' or 'Who on your staff told you that?' "

The biggest problem the women face is raising money. Common Cause records show that in 1972, male candidates for Congress received 22 percent more in campaign contributions than their female opponents.

"When I go home, they ask me all kinds of tough questions," says Rep. Schroeder of Colorado, who faces a stiff battle for re-election.

"It's almost like they're asking themselves, 'What can we find that you don't know about?' I speak to a military group and they say, 'We're amazed you know so much.' Women have to be more prepared, more on their toes."

Some women candidates said that men often don't feel comfortable discussing politics with them. "I've never been offered a cup of coffee by a lobbyist," said Millicent Fenwick, a New Jersey assemblywoman active in Republican politics for almost 20 years.

She paused for a moment and took a long puff on her pipe. "When the door of the smoke-filled room is closed, there's rarely a woman in it," she said.

Helen Meyner, a New Jersey congressional candidate, echoed the sentiments of some female colleagues when she said she wants to be recognized for her own achievements, not those of her husband.

"I was always introduced as former Governor Meyner's lovely wife, Helen," she said. "I'm looking forward to the day when we're introduced as Congresswoman Meyner and her lovely husband, Bob."

Although most of the women interviewed insisted at first that their families are 100 percent behind their candidacy, they conceded after some probing that husbands and children have had to make adjustments.

Fran Ryan, a consumer-oriented congressional candidate from Ohio, said her sons have learned to make spaghetti and put their own football uniforms in the washer.

But more important, she said, "It takes a very well-adjusted marriage." Her husband sold their pet shop to help her campaign.

"There's no question you have to make some adjustments. You have to accept the mental and physical strains that come with running for office."

Several women said that although they are running to win, their husbands will be more disappointed if they lose than they themselves would be.

"It will be a bigger blow to Sam if I lose than to me," said Mrs. Keys. "His ego is very much wrapped up in me winning."

"The average woman candidate hasn't been in the communities of power and money," said Fredrica W. Wechsler, political action coordinator for the Woman's Political Caucus, an organization started three years ago to encourage women to run for political office.

"She's usually from an academic background, a volunteer background or the social services.

"Who are the people she knows? Not the people with money. Many male candidates are from business backgrounds, they're attorneys with well-to-do clients. Raising money is less of a problem for them."

Mrs. Keys is running against John C. Peterson, a two-term Republican state representative who by Sept. 1 had raised $31,167 in campaign contributions, more than 2½ times as much as she had. He had outspent her 4 to 1 in advertising.

While Peterson, 26 and single, was representing his traditionally conservative Republican district in the Kansas legislature, Mrs. Keys was active in community projects, including the United Fund Drive, the county Democratic club and the local arts council.

Her campaign literature makes a point of calling her a "newcomer to politics."

Yet, Robert Brock, Kansas State Democratic chairman, said she is "at least a 50-50 bet. People are fed up with typical-type politics. More and more people are seeing a woman as a good candidate."

Fran Ryan takes her consumer-oriented campaign straight to the supermarket in Columbus, Ohio.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, a political science professor at Georgetown University, said an increasing number of female students are considering politics as a career.

"Politics has always been a masculine thing," said Ms. Kirkpatrick, author of a new book called "Political Woman."

"It's had a locker room smell . . . While it's true that discrimination against women is real, it's also true that women have been more reluctant than other groups to try to overcome the discouragements."

Ms. Kirkpatrick's point is illustrated by the fact that women represent almost 52 percent of the electorate and only three percent of Congress.

Some insist that after Watergate, it's an advantage to be a female candidate.

"I thought being a woman would be the biggest hurdle to get over," said Judy Petty, a 31-year-old Republican congressional candidate from Little Rock, Ark. She is challenging Rep. Wilbur Mills, one of the most powerful men in Congress.

Mrs. Petty has hammered away at the financing of Mills' brief 1972 presidential campaign, which was aided by what she says were illegal contributions from a big dairy cooperative and two corporations.

She also has sought to benefit from voter dissatisfaction with high federal taxes, for which she says Mills must bear much responsibility as chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

Rep. Bella Abzug, (D-N.Y.), one of the most prominent of the elected female officials in the country, agreed.

"In the Watergate years, there's an enormous response to credibility, honesty and newness in the political arena," she said.

"Wherever I go, people say to me, 'I didn't always feel this way, but maybe women can clean up this mess.' "

Mrs. Abzug chuckled. "It's almost like we're being asked to clean up the house," she said.

'In the Watergate years, there's a tremendous response . . . almost like we're being asked to clean up the house.

Does Father Know Best?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl 17 and my sister is 12. We need your help desperately.

Our father has been secretly dating another woman off and on for several years. Mom knew about it and it broke them up on two occasions.

Last January Mom died. Dad started to date this woman almost immediately. Sometimes he doesn't come home at night and we know he is with her.

It looks like they are going to be married. This is very hard for us to take because we know how much heartache she caused our mom. The woman is divorced and has two children. There are four of us. (We have two younger brothers).

My sister and I think that if the 10 of us try to live under one roof it will be a disaster. We are unable to hide our true feelings for this woman and don't know what to do. Are we wrong in feeling this way? — FROM CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: I have no idea what your father's marriage was like, and neither do you. I am not condoning his behavior, but I am suggesting that there might have been some factors you kids didn't know about.

If your dad does marry this woman please do your darnedest to create an atmosphere of acceptance and forgiveness. Remember — "Hate the sin, but love the sinner."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It's taken me until now to simmer down after reading the letter from the young man who wanted to picket the doctor's office because he was sent a bill for $40 after removing a plantar's wart.

I have been a medical assistant's secretary for nearly three years and I am sick of hearing complaints like this. First of all, a doctor is a professional man who has studied, worked and sacrificed many previous hours of leisure that many of us take for granted.

My boss is at the hospital at 6 a.m. to make his rounds. He pinch hits for other doctors, does clinic work, attends meetings and is in his office at 12:30 to see patients.

His bills are reasonable, yet I must spend hours sending out "reminders" and telephoning patients about long-overdue remittances. It's strange how they turn from sick and desperate people to deadbeats. They MUST see the doctor at once because they are dying! When they get well they'd rather have died than pay their bill.

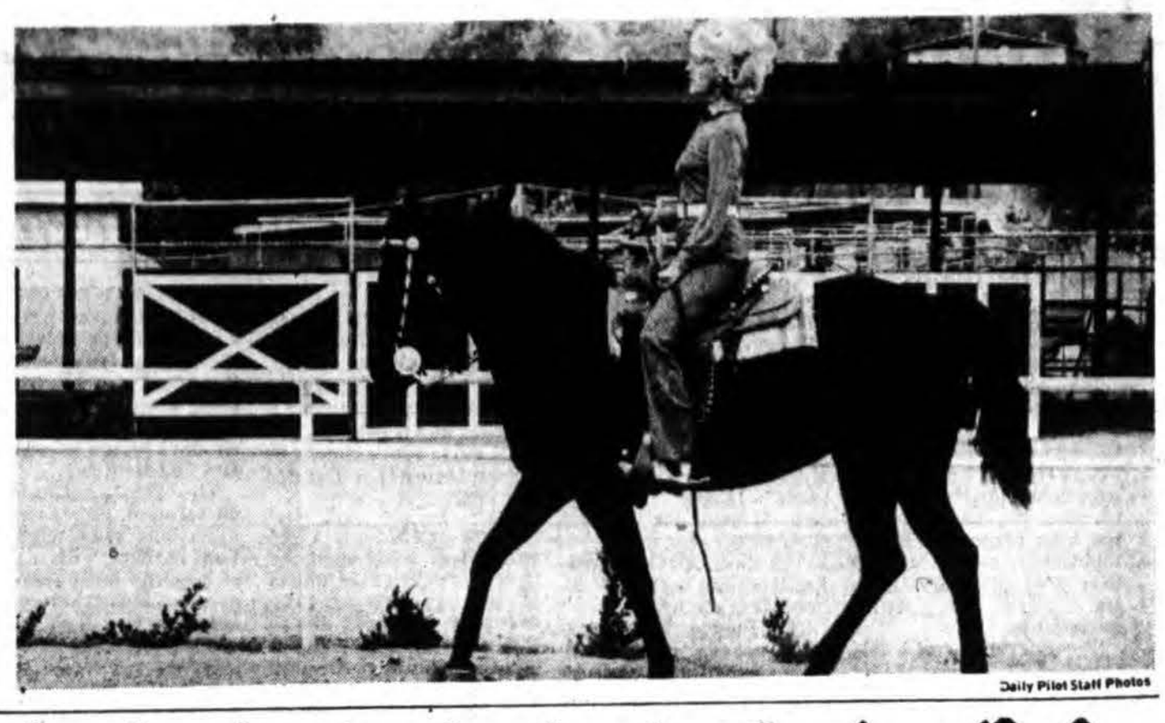

Thanks for listening, Ann. I feel better now. — TEED OFF

DEAR T.D.: I hope the kid who had the plantar's wart sees your letter. And for the record, the price was NOT high. If the job was well done and the wart was removed permanently, he got a bargain.

Capistrano Horsewoman Finds Therapy in Riding

Horsin' Around with Tom McCann

"That's neat. . ." "How neat. . ." "Oh, wow. . ."

The blonde in the red cowboy outfit and the two-toned, needlenose boots who sprinkles her conversation with such expletives is not a rodeo queen candidate.

She's 50 years old, the mother of grown boys and stoked by the world of horses that she has discovered just in the past couple of years.

And, in what is apparently a completely characteristic move for Fran Amendt, she has gone all the way. She is immersed in the business of working and showing her horse.

Though the eight-hour-a-day, five-days-a-week routine, in which Fran indulges when getting up for a show is not completely typical of her fellow "barnmates" at Capistrano Equestrian Village, her attitude typifies the place and its operations.

SO SAYS Rob Griffith, a 23-year-old horseman who is, himself, pretty well immersed in the daily business that goes on at the 16-acre facility in the San Juan Creek bottom off Ortega Highway.

There in the yellow dirt of the creek bottom, down a dusty lane that runs between two citrus groves, Jan Raymond and her husband, Scott, a San Juan Capistrano attorney, have put together what may become the first do-it-yourself "olympic" class horse training facility.

The Village, as their clients call it, already has 45 stalls — some of them pipe corrals and some enclosed box stalls — with more planned. It also has one large arena and plenty of parking places for visiting trailers.

The clubhouse will be built soon. Still in the planning stage is an olympic-size arena in which English-style training and jumping events can be accommodated.

Griffith has only been around the Village for a few months as resident trainer for Western-style riding and competition.

But he has contributed much to the do-it-yourself concept that is almost unique in the training and campaigning of horses of the caliber the Village sends into competition.

IT WOULD be more typical for owners of this kind of horses to see them only in the show ring or to catch a glimpse of them as they were being loaded or unloaded at trailerside.

What would be even more typical would be for the teen-aged daughters and sons of owners to show up for training and practice once in a while after professional trainers and handlers had done the day-to-day exercising of the animals.

But that just ain't the way it is at the Raymonds' Capistrano Equestrian Village.

Teen-agers are all over the place and plenty busy in the early-morning and after-school hours and on weekends, with chores that range from grooming and cleaning to tack repair and polish, plus, of course, hours and hours of in-saddle training for themselves and their mounts.

The Village even has its own (unofficial) seamstress and tailor. Mary Bison of Yorba Linda makes not only all of her own clothes for the horse show ring, but she has begun to tailor outfits for many of her barnmates.

Griffith foresees the day when the Village may roll into competition miles from San Juan Capistrano in matched horse vans or trailers carrying painted-on trademarks and with all contestants sporting the same colors or, at least, in matched outfits.

But all that is the superficial side of a regime that is filled with dedication and hard work.

BEYOND the bright red outfit made by Mary Bison and worn by Fran Amendt during a recent visit to the Village it was easy to see, in the mind's eye, the numerous hours of rail-riding hard work that went into the saddle skills she showed off.

Congenital hip problems and related weaknesses of spine and shoulders make Fran's riding style unorthodox, but "legal" in the eyes of a show judge.

And the style she displays once in the saddle is calculated to make the observer quickly forget that she climbed on from the "wrong" (right) side of the horse and that she holds the reins in her "wrong" (right) hand while trailing the romal over the left side of her lap, the "wrong" side for most riders.

Hip problems that make it difficult for her to walk much more than 100 yards are part of the motivation that seem to drive Fran to be the most horsewoman she can be.

"I was a candidate for a wheelchair," she says frankly, "and possible confinement for the rest of my life."

Her doctor gave her a couple of choices — exercise and stay mobile or get into a wheelchair and vegetate.

"It didn't take me long to make up my mind," says Fran, flashing a big, open-mouthed smile. "He said I could swim, but that raises hell with my hair — turns it green. When he offered horseback riding as an alternative, I could have kissed him."

She bought her mare — a thoroughbred-quarter horse crossbreed with the arched neck and short coupling typical of the Morgan breed — from actor George Peppard.

THE FILLY (her registered show horse name is Celestial Dawn, but Fran calls her "Sugar") was "green broke" when Fran's husband, Ray, bought her for his wife.

"And I wasn't even 'green broke,' myself," Fran volunteers.

She says she and the horse really "got broke together" in the hands of trainer Billy Warren at the Peacock Hill Riding Club in Tustin.

It is since she and her husband moved to San Juan Capistrano, however, and since she has become one of Griffith's prize pupils at the Village, that she feels her skills and those of "Sugar" are really beginning to bloom and mesh.

Griffith took over Fran's training 18 months ago and put her into her first show in about five months. "Now I've got a roomful fo ribbons," she says

Griffith praises Mrs. Amendt for her stick-to-itiveness.

"She will work for hours to get some small thing down just perfectly," Griffith says.

Fran explains her patience in the practice arena. "I used to do a little singing. You have to practice the same notes over and over if you want to be able to sing a song like you knew it all your life

"I guess I want to look like I've been riding all my life when I go into the arena. Sometimes I wish I had been."

Puerto Rico Lures Tourists With Slots

By MILTON MOSKOWITZ

When the tourists stop coming, what do you do? Puerto Rico has come up with one answer: slot machines.

Following Fidel Castro's accession to power in Cuba, Puerto Rico and other Caribbean islands became thriving meccas for American tourists. Hotel after hotel went up and during the high season — in the middle of winter — you had to reserve far in advance to be assured of accommodations.

The Puerto Rican hotels siphoned off tourist traffic from Miami, and one reason was the availability of casinos.

In recent years, however, the tourist flow to the Caribbean has ebbed sharply. There were many reasons — competition from new resort havens (Acapulco, Grand Bahamas), political instability and inflation-caused belt-tightening.

MEANWHILE, the tourist business in Las Vegas has boomed — and Puerto Rico has now decided to take one leaf from the Las Vegas book by importing slot machines. It will soon be installing 13,000 of the one-armed bandits on the island.

The decision was certainly heartwarming news to Chicago-based Bally Manufacturing Corp. As the world's largest maker of slots, it won out over six other bidders for the Puerto Rican plum. All the Puerto Rican casinos will have Bally-made machines.

The Puerto Rican contract works differently from the business done by Bally in Las Vegas and other gambling centers around the world. The company normally sells its slot machines directly to a casino operator. In Puerto Rico, the buyer is the government.

The Commonwealth of Pureto Rico is buying the slots from Bally and then leasing them to the casinos on the island. The profits — and slot machines are always profitable — will be split 40 percent to the casinos, 60 percent to the government.

ADDING Puerto Rico to its customer list is a breakthrough for Bally, which faces the frustrating circumstances of making a product, slot machines, that is illegal in every state in its home country except Nevada.

Even with that tight restriction, Bally manages to do more than $150 million of sales a year, thanks to its overseas business (more than one-half of its volume), and thanks also to its other products (pinball machines and amusement games of various kinds).

It's a highly profitable business too. Bally earned $13 million after taxes last year, up sharply from the $9.7 million it netted in 1972.

Bally's next target (after Puerto Rico) is New Jersey. The voters in that state vote in November on a referendum that would permit gambling — and the consensus of observers is that it will pass.

AutoTrain Service Set To Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — AutoTrain, a private corporation which transports travelers and their cars on train trips on two routes to Florida, has announced it plans to start a similar service between the U.S. and Mexico.

The Washington-based corporation announced an agreement in principle had been reached with a group of Mexican businessmen to operate auto-train service between the U.S. border and a point close to Mexico City.

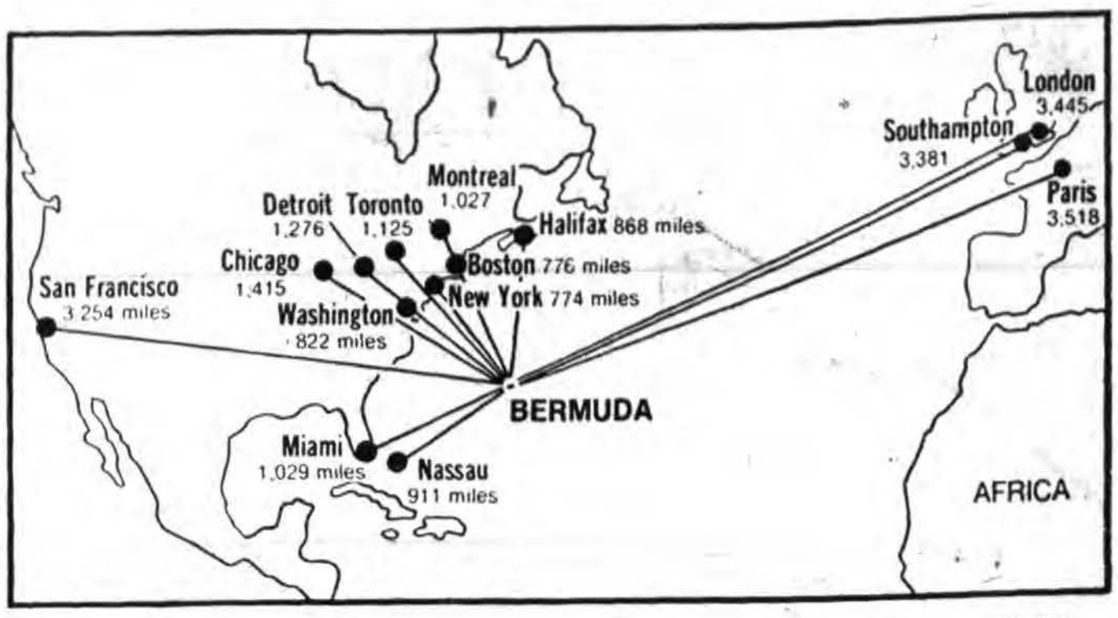

It said the route presently under study will go between Nuevo Laredo, Tex., and Queretaro, Mexico about 1½ hours from Mexico City.

Discussions with the Mexican government regarding operating conditions and routes already have begun. No date has been set for the start of the service.

Auto-Train currently operates trains between Washington and Sanford, Fla., near Disney World, and between Louisville, Ky., and Florida.

TRAVELERS on Auto-Train drive their cars into special railroad cars and then retire to coach and bar or dining car for the trip to Florida. The cars are unloaded at the end of the train trip and the travelers then drive to their final destination. The service has proved successful financially with the corporation announcing a seven percent stock dividend, subject to Interstate Commerce Commission approval.

Amtrak, the quasi-government corporation which operates most of the nation's passenger trains, planned to start a competing service this year but announced recently it was unable to get the necessary rail cars to start the service. Amtrak hopes to start similar service sometime next year.

More Visitors But More Costs

Bermuda In Season

By RALPH HUBLEY
Christian Science Monitor Service

There will be no "off season" in Bermuda this year.

Those waiting for Bermuda hotel rates to go down as they usually do in November and December will be disappointed.

Although there will be slight reductions by some smaller hotels, guest houses, and cottage colonies, the larger luxury resorts are not planning to lower rates. And the hotel tax is scheduled to be raised from two to four percent Nov. 1.

This means that peak-season rates will continue.

The reasons: higher costs for supplies and labor to operate these large hotels and an unprecedented 90 to 92 percent occupancy rate this past spring and summer.

These occupancy rates are running from 5 to 12 percent over last year — hardly any reason for offering special incentives for more visitors.

ON THE surface, this unusual surge of visitors this year could be attributed to the rise in Atlantic air fares which favor shorter trips, trouble in the Caribbean and closer evaluation of services by visitors.

The general comment by visitors is that despite high prices they feel assured of getting their money's worth in Bermuda. The service is excellent, food tasty, and there are many special activities such as are planned for the "Rendezvous season" from Dec. 1 to March.

Today's popularity of Bermuda may go a bit deeper, however. There's a changeless quality about these islands that endears them to the visitor. From the pomp of British tradition to knobby knees protruding just below Bermuda shorts, these islanders insist on maintaining the unique character of Bermuda — at all costs.

I look at Bermuda with nostalgia. It was 1945. The whole world was at war. The U.S. Army Air Corps was shifting heavy bomber operations from Europe to the Pacific. I was a navigator being retrained from sorting out Allied and German lines in the close-knit countries of Europe to plotting courses on ocean expanses.

BERMUDA was selected as an ideal training mission because of its isolated position 568 miles off the U.S. coast.

In many places I had visited during wartime, the residents would explain that everything was much different. Not so on Bermuda.

But above all, it was a haven from the war, a retreat where normal routine was only slightly interrupted. We toured on bicycles much as vacationists do today, although ours were not motorized. We sailed in the Great Sound as visitors like to do today. And we swam in sparkling waters lined with pink beaches.

Of course many new hotels have been built and others enlarged. But to the credit of the Bermuda government a firm hand has been maintained over all these establishments.

Numbers of cruise ships are limited so as not to flood Hamilton's shopping areas, and a moratorium on hotel building has been effective in holding down the total number of island visitors until additional impact studies have been completed.

INSTEAD of warplanes, airliners of British Airways, Pan American World Airways, Delta Airlines, Eastern Airlines, and Air Canada move vacationers in and out of the islands on daily schedules. American Airlines has petitioned the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board for Bermuda service. Action is expected later this year.

Through its colorful history, Bermuda has remained the same stable island of refuge with an atmosphere of rest and relaxation surrounding these coral and sand tops of seamounts solidly based 16,000 feet below the surface on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean.

Arrowhead's 'Red Gods' Arriving

The red gods of autumn have come to Lake Arrowhead.

Indian legend explained the brilliant colors that herald the change of season from summer to fall in terms of gods who visited their lands and painted the landscape in orange, red and yellow.

Whatever the reason, autumn is an excellent time to visit the mile-high resort area off State Highway 138 in the San Bernardino Mountains. Crisp fall air is giving the deep green pines and cedar a colorful backdrop that visitors can enjoy on a day's drive to the area.

The mountain air is still warm enough for picnics and, of course, hiking during the autumn is ideal.

Lake Arrowhead, as the major resort in the area with accommodations, restaurant and entertainment facilities, offers an ideal location for full-day outings, weekends or vacations.

The "enchanted loop nature trail" at nearby Cedar Glen and the Forest Service lookout at adjacent Strawberry Peak (open to the public) offer spectacular views of the area.

Cash Exchange

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Romania announced today that as of Nov. 1, Western tourists will be required to exchange at least $10 a day into local currency.

Among other East European countries, East Germany requires a minimum exchange of $8; Poland $10; Hungary $6, and Czechoslovakia $10.

Many Miss Best Part: Underwater

You wave your fins gently and glide across the bottom. Freed from the demands of gravity, you can hover effortlessly over ancient barnacle-encrusted cannon. This is underwater Bermuda.

Practically every visitor to Bermuda has included the Blackwatch Pass, the Government Botanical Gardens, and Tom Moore's famous calabash tree in his tour of the islands.

They have usually stood on the south shore admiring the surf creaming on the coral reefs. But too many visitors to Bermuda limit their tours to the dry-land sights.

There is as much Uermuda just offshore; another world moving at even a slower pace than the islands' 20 m.p.h. maximum, a world alive with brilliantly colored fish and plant life.

No underwater exploration in Bermuda is complete without a dive to the reefs, preferably the famous Southwest Breaker.

AS YOUR boat chugs toward the breaker, the sea is rippled into millions of glittering points by a gentle breeze. Even though you are over a thousand feet from shore, the bottom is clearly visible 30 feet below through the warm blue-green water.

After the anchor is dropped, you hoist your air tank onto your back, slip a mask over your face, clench the AquaLung's rubber mouthpiece in your teeth, and slip backward into the water.

As you sink slowly, you feel an exhilarating sense of buoyancy. The air tank that was so burdensome on the surface is scarcely felt.

Looking up along the anchor line, the boat appears to be tethered in midair. It is extraordinarily quiet; the only sound is your own breathing.

Before your eyes parade all the beautiful and graceful tropical fish that previously you have seen only in the aquarium or pet-shop tank. Blue-striped grunt timidly hide in waving bottom grasses that time the slow beat of the sea.

Rainbow parrotfish dart around regal purple coral fans and plumes. Yellowtail snapper, a Bermuda delicacy, swim past slowly, eyeing the strange visitor.

Small sharks glide by, several parasite remora cling to their host with tiny suction discs like silvery hitchhikers. A school of sergeant majors swims by, like a submarine army on the march, black fish with bright orange chevrons.

Huge brain coral rise to within a few feet of the surface, and antler Coral's branchlike arms form an arch to swim under. Cactuslike sea whips rise from the sandy floor, almost like in the dry deserts of the American West.

The coral garden is alive, the coral at roadside shops are only the bleached white skeletons of the once-living animals.

Desert Inn Closes Wing Due to Age

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Desert Inn Hotel, one of the oldest resort centers in this vacation city, will close a wing of about 90 rooms Monday because the foundation is deteriorating.

Officials of the hotel last week announced closure of the Carriage House wing and said an updated structure will be built in its place.

The announcement followed an inspection by the county Department of Building and Safety in which deterioration of the wing's foundation was noted. However, Jerry Hanson of the department noted that there was no immediate danger of the wing collapsing.

Britain Offers Country Hotels

By STAN DELAPLANE

EXFORD, England — English hotels cater to tweedy, elderly Englishmen who sit dead silent behind their newspapers, Scotch-and sodas in hand. I came off the bleak Exmoore, rust-brown with splashes of butter-yellow gorse, and into The Crown where a fire burned small and tidy in the fireplace.

I said to the barmaid: "Scotch and soda, please." (All the newspapers came down. They looked me over. The newspapers went up again.)

I said: "With ice." (The newspapers came down again. I could feel the disapproval. Not only an interloper. A bloody Yank as well.)

Hotels in these small villages have about 20 rooms. Half of them are taken by permanent residents—there's a "Residents Lounge." A refuge of TV, sprung couches and frayed magazines, off-limits to the traveling public.

In the evening, the pub bar is "the local" for the farmers and village people. They take their pint of bitter and argue the high cost of living.

It's lively enough. (You don't tip the barmaid. You ask if you can "shout her a beer." "Of course, luv. Thank you very much.")

If you don't push it, even a visiting Yank can get in on the conversation.

British Tourist Authority has put together the best of the country hotels — Commended Country Hotels. (Write for it at 680 Fifth Avenue, New York City.) They sound great. Average price, $20 with breakfast for two.

These are NOT Hiltons. Very likely the bathroom is down the hall. The toast will be stone-cold — British prefer it that way.

But — at The Crown the waitress brought a splendid, rich beef soup and said: "If you'll wait a minute, I'll go down to the river and pick some fresh watercress. What we had at noon has probably gone up by now."

"I'd like to take a small gift to a family we are visiting in France."

Friend of mine found a $2 box of candy — (fresh, not drugstore packaged) — was a BIG gift in Paris. Says: "Candy at Orly Airport is sold by the piece — 50 cents! And a two-pound box of candy on the posh Faubourg-St. Honore was marked $40!"

A couple of presents from overseas I've found: From Spain: buy saffron in a local store. For saffron rice as in paella. Home cooks in the U.S. say you can't buy saffron that good here. From Mexico: Wax matches packaged by the dozen boxes. Look for Talisman brand. Different colored boxes and each box has a sign of astrology.

"On a Caribbean cruise are we limited on the cigarettes or liquor we can take aboard?"

Don't take them aboard. As soon as you're out of port, you buy both much cheaper in the ship's shop. They get them duty-free, tax-free. The liquor and cigarettes will be a half to two-thirds what you'd pay at home.

In the Caribbean your island stops are duty-free, tax-free. But check your ship's shop prices. I found a lot of things — perfume for instance — cheaper on a French cruise ship than they were in duty-free ports.

Those big duty-free signs are NO guarantee of low prices. The shopkeeper buys duty-free. He can sell to you at any old price he likes.

The closer a shop is to a Hilton or Sheraton, the higher the price. In Europe, the highest priced shops are usually around the American Express.

"...where to get a suit made in Hong Kong?"

You walk down any street on the Kowloon side and the tailors will drag you in. But I don't go for Hong Kong suits anymore. Price used to be $50. It's now $150. I can do just as well off the rack in a good store at home.

"I want to buy clothing for grandchildren — three and five years — in Europe..."

Spain has the best buys for children. Get them handmade to order.

Spain's very good for baby presents, too. Baby blankets. Dresses. The Spanish really baby their babies. (Who by the way in Spain "come from Paris." As we say "the stork brings them.")

Luxury Tax Considered

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Tourists in Mexico City may face a 15 percent "luxury tax" in restaurants and night clubs, government officials say.

Restaurant owners have begun talks with officials to limit the proposed tax.

The association of Mexican restaurants charges the new tariff would "severely limit tourism in the better clubs and restaurants" if the prices continue to rise.

'Firebird' Concert On KCET

Maestro Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two noted works by Stravinsky and Haydn for the second concert on "Evening at Symphony" tonight at 9:30 o'clock on KCET, Channel 28.

The "First Symphony" of Franz Josef Haydn lasts barely 10 minutes and contains only three movements. It is the first of its kind by the man known to history as the Father of the Symphony.

Stravinsky's "The Firebird," written 1909-10, is known as the composer's last 'old-fashioned work'. The music Stravinsky wrote is as colorful as the plot, employing exotic instruments like a xylophone, celesta, tenor and bass tubas, a Basque drum, and a bass clarinet; but while it has many novel effects, it is squarely in the 19th century Russian tradition of Rimsky-Korsakov.

KCET repeats the concert Saturday, Oct. 21, at 9 p.m.

Elizabeth Ashley a Real Woman in 'Cat'

REX REED in the raw

By REX REED

An exciting actress has kicked off the new Broadway season with a lot of money and hope will be riding on her pretty head.

Elizabeth Ashley opens in a new production of Tennessee Williams' decadent evergreen, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Elizabeth Ashley comes back to Broadway as Maggie the Cat after a series of punk movies and sassy interviews determined to prove once again she can act right along with the best of them.

She's come a long way from her early success in "Barefoot in the Park," and in a way this independent fireball has come full circle.

From humble beginnings in Baton Rouge, La., she's got the most demanding role of her career and the role is Southern. If there's one requirement for Maggie the Cat, one of Williams' most physically exhausting characters, it's stamina, and Ms. Ashley has plenty of that.

AT THE end of her freshman year at Louisiana State University she arrived for her final exams with a copy of "Peyton Place" under her arm, read through the bio-science test, scrawled her real name, "Elizabeth Ann Cole," across the blank examination paper, and headed for New York a few days later to become a star.

She lived in cold-water flats with bathtubs in the kitchen, studied diligently at the Neighborhood Playhouse, worked as a showroom model and as the Jello Pudding girl on a TV game show, got married and divorced twice (to actors James Farentino and George Peppard), landed on the cover of Life Magazine, became the toast of Broadway in "Take Her She's Mine" and "Barefoot in the Park," gave out interviews proclaiming herself to be "a cross between Betty Crocker and Zelda Fitzgerald," learned to talk dirty, and had a nervous breakdown.

ELIZABETH Ashley is a different kind of woman today. She has learned about life, liberated herself from the shackles and drives that plagued her private life, and perfected her craft.

When I saw her powerful performance as Maggie in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" this summer at the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., I could hardly believe I was seeing the same neurotic, insecure actress who once told an interviewer "Men are like cities you see from a train and I've passed through them all."

Here was an accomplished actress carving off a piece of her craft like rare roast beef and washing it down with the wine of human experience in a shimmering, shattering performance.

"I'VE spent my life sashaying my fanny on and off the stage and I usually take my money for simple endurance. You get a script and you say 'How the hell am I gonna wrap my mouth around this garbage?' The tragedy is that nobody is writing relevant journalistic theater.

"By that, I mean plays and films that deal with the way we live now. So I consider Maggie the Cat the most fulfilling thing I've ever done.

"And I've spent a lifetime looking for truth. I've found it in this play. I never saw it on Broadway, but I saw Elizabeth Taylor in the movie and forgot it. So I've had to create my own character out of my own raw materials and there's been a lot of Maggie in my own life. Some of what I do is Tennessee Williams, but a lot of it is me. I've never been in a movie I'm proud of, but I'm proud of this play.

"I've played those birdbrains because I wanted to earn a living. Now it's changing. Faye Dunaway, Jane Fonda — even I — are more interesting than we were at 22, because we've lived some and we're breaking through the barriers and myths. 'Cat on a Hot Tin Roof' is like a new beginning for me as a serious artist, and baby, I don't want to mess around with the finger of fate."

Coast Panels Face Tough Fight for New Mandate

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FOCUS

A little more than a year before the state Coastal Conservation Commission is scheduled to turn over its comprehensive plan for California's coastline to the Legislature, the battle lines are forming for the fight that will follow.

For Proposition 20, passed by the voters in 1972, set up that commission and six subordinate regional ones for terms lasting only through 1976.

If the commissions and the controls they have exerted are to last beyond that time, they'll have to win a new mandate — this time from the Legislature.

And that won't be easy. Conservation bills almost identical to Proposition 20 were defeated repeatedly over a four-year period before their prime sponsors turned to the initiative process and finally won out.

THE SAME forces which fought against those bills will be back in 1976, aiming their biggest guns at whatever plan the coastal commission submits.

But this time they'll probably be stronger. One sign of this is the recent formation of a new Southern California group called Concerned Citizens for Property Rights.

In just over three months, its top executive claims, the group has drawn memberships from more than 1,000 individuals and organizations. A few have already contributed amounts exceeding $5,000.

Of course, coastal land use isn't the group's only concern.

Founder Richard Bradford, formerly an executive with a number of Southern California chambers of commerce, says his new organization will fight any efforts at state or regional land-use controls.

For example, he claims partial responsibility for last month's defeat of two major land-use measures. One was the proposal by Republican Assemblyman Paul Priolo of Pacific Palisades for a state land-use commission, and the other a measure by Democratic Assemblyman Howard Berman of Los Angeles setting up a commission with broad powers over the Santa Monica Mountains in Ventura and Los Angeles counties.

"WE SEE THESE ideas as a threat," said Bradford, who traces his ancestory to pioneer Puritan William Bradford. "People aren't going to be able to do what they wish with their property. That's the very sort of thing that led people like William Bradford to come to America in the first place."

Stacked against Bradford's new group and other traditional enemies of land-use legislation like the California Real Estate Association will be the conservationists whose efforts led to passage of Proposition 20.

They want the new coastal agency that might emerge from the current planning process to have more powers than the existing commission.

Peter Douglas, chief consultant to the Assembly Committee on Coastal Zone Resources, last month advocated a plan under which the new statewide commission would not only have the planning and permit authority it now enjoys, but would also have powers of eminent domain.

That would allow it to take private property for public use, with adequate compensation.

DOUGLAS, formerly administrative assistant to Democratic Assemblyman Alan Sieroty of Beverly Hills, was a major framer of the Coast-line initiative in 1972 and his thinking usually parallels that of Sieroty, the chief legislative spokesman for coastal controls.

Douglas seems sure to win support for his idea from both the Sierra Club and the California Coastal Alliance, neither of which has felt the current commission has been tough enough on developers.

Douglas and Bradford appear to be totally at odds. Bradford wants property owners and developers to be free to do almost anything they wish with their land, while Douglas is pushing for more freedom for the public where access to and use of beaches and coastal land are at stake.

Whatever proposal the coastal commissions finally submit, the arguments of these two sides will be the chief points used in the legislative battle that will result. And it's clear developers and conservationists are already gearing up for that fight.

Reincarnation Alive And Well on TV

By ERXA BOMBECK

An avid television viewer from Sarasota, Florida named Doris has noted some rather interesting observations regarding the daytime "suds" circuit.

"Clara Shea died on 'As the World Turns'," she writes, "but a few weeks later turned up with a new hairdo on 'Guiding Light.'

"At one time Robert Hughes was looking for his wife, Sandra, who had left him. If he had hung around for the soap opera following his, he would have found her there. Despite the fact that I've seen Tom Hughes played by three different men, the wives never appear to notice when they rur in a new one.

"SOMETIMES I think soap operas are worth watching just to see where the characters will pop up next."

Well, Doris, that should tell you something about the stamina of everyday people. My husband and I have been the key figures in our own personal soap opera for 25 years, seven days a week (with options to renew yearly) and not once has either of us been written out of the script. (A substitute, I'd notice!)

I think one of the reasons for our obvious long run is that my husband works steady. As I have often said, "I married him for better or for worse, but not for lunch." Soap opera husbands never seem to "keep hours."

And this business of pussyfooting around the house all day drinking coffee and discussing abortions, incest, divorce, runaways, murder, embezzlement, identity crisis, amnesia, custody of the kids, and what car to drive to the funeral is enough to drive anyone off to another series.

I can't help but compare one of the old radio serials to the present day. Remember Vic and Sade and their son Rush? And Uncle Fletcher? Why, sometimes they'd sit around for a week and listen to the screen door squeak.

The high spot in their day was when Rush would rock on his own foot. No social-ills, no earth-shattering decisions, no pressures of living — only the sometimes boring, sometimes reassuring slice of life.

Yes, Doris, life on TV is not only demanding and confusing, it's downright exhausting. I saw one girl who on a commercial made rotten coffee, appeared three days later with irregularities, a week later had a metal drain in her face showing her sinuses were congested, and last night was thanking her momma for putting her on pills so she could sleep in the city at nights.

I hope she finds a nice soap opera and settles down to a nice illicit relationship-custody suit-major surgery-etc.

A's Make the Most of Opportunities, Win, 3-2

By ROGER CARLSON
Of The Daily Pilot Staff

LOS ANGELES—Oakland A's field manager Alvin Dark says pitching, speed and defense are a way of life for his American League champions, and it was those things which paid off with a 3-2 victory Saturday in the first game of the 1974 World Series before a record Dodger Stadium crowd of 55,974.

The A's also used such items as the home run and squeeze bunt, much to the dismay of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers squandered a dozen baserunners while Oakland's two-time, defending world champions made the most of what they had to gain a one-game edge over LA.

The key to victory was Bert Campaneris, the swift A's shortstop. His squeeze bunt with pitcher Ken Holtzman on third in the 5th inning, padded Reggie Jackson's solo homer to make it 2-0.

The unexpected squeeze came on a 2-2 count and Campaneris said he was surprised at the assignment.

"I moved close to the plate so I could protect myself against the outside pitch," Campy told the press.

"But the pitch was inside and it wasn't hard to handle."

Campaneris was also instrumental in the A's last tally in the 8th. He singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Ron Cey's throwing error, never hesitating coming around third base.

Jackson, despite a painful hamstring injury, homered his first time up, and said he can't hit a ball any harder. The injury won't keep him out of the lineup today with ace Don Sutton of the Dodgers hooking up against Oakland's Vida Blue.

On TV Today, 1:15 Channels 4 and 11

"I can't beat a ball out or take an extra base," Jackson said of his leg injury.

Jackson said he was robbed of an rbi on Joe Ferguson's tremendous throw from center field to cut down Sal Bando at the plate in the 8th.

"I felt so sure I had an rbi," said Jackson. "But when Ferguson cut loose I knew it was a super throw.

"It's the kind of thing you see in a World Series. I never touched first base, I just watched Ferguson do his thing."

"If the ball had bounced I think Bando would have been safe. All I could say to myself was (expletive deleted)."

Holtzman, although he had to give way to Rollie Fingers in the 5th, was a sore spot for LA pitcher Andy Messersmith.

Messersmith walked his adversary in the 3rd and gave up a stinging double in the 5th, which evolved into the A's second run. It was Holtzman's first two appearances at the plate since the 1973 Series.

The A's starter said he was surprised to be lifted in the bottom of the 5th because he felt Steve Garvey's single in the 2nd inning was the only ball hit hard by a Dodger.

Lopes scored for LA in the 5th on a pair of Oakland miscues and Jimmy Wynn homered in the 9th.

"Messersmith pitched well," said Dodgers manager Walt Alston. "But he made a couple of mistakes. . .and that was the game.

"We got men on base and then couldn't get the hits. When that happens there isn't a helluva lot you can do. I think good pitching is going to keep scoring down in this Series."

Didn't See Throw

Ferguson Misses Date With Destiny

By GLENN WHITE
Of The Daily Pilot Staff

LOS ANGELES—To some it seemed that Dodgers outfielder-catcher Joe Ferguson was about to keep a date with destiny as he came to bat with two outs in the bottom of the 9th inning Saturday in the first game of the World Series.

Mate Steve Garvey was parked at first base after Jimmy Wynn had homered in the 9th to trim Oakland's lead to 3-2. Ferguson had kept his mates in reach of overhauling the two-time world champion A's with a tremendous throw from right-center-field to the plate to mow down Sal Bando in the 8th.

Now he had a chance to win the game if he could knock the ball out of the park. Ferguson was facing 25-game winner Catfish Hunter, who had just relieved Rollie Fingers when the latter began to show signs of faltering.

Ferguson worked the count to 2-2, then struck out.

Afterward he admitted he too felt he had a date with destiny, that this might be his day as he came to bat in the 9th.

"I wanted to hit the ball out of the park. . .that's the only thing I was trying to do in the 9th," he told writers.

"I've come up other times this year with that objective, and hit it out. Today I couldn't. It was tough to see the ball by then because of the shadows. The ball was coming in and out of the shadows and when you're trying to hit it hard, any little distraction will throw you off.

"The first strike Hunter threw would have been the one to connect on. There was nothing on it and it came right down the middle of the plate.

"He put two pitches down the middle and the last one was breaking away."

Ferguson's throw in the 8th was a thing of beauty. Bando was on third base with one out when Reggie Jackson hit a fly ball which Jimmy Wynn seemingly was going to play. Bando tagged up, ready to come in after Wynn's catch.

But just before the ball got to Wynn, Ferguson jetted in front of Wynn, caught the ball and threw on the run. The ball came like a bullet, some 75 yards — a perfect strike to catcher Steve Yeager.

Bando slammed into Yeager and flattened him, but the young backstop held the ball for the out. "Wynn knew I was going to make the catch," Ferguson said.

"We discussed what we would do with balls hit out there when the inning started and there was really no danger of us colliding.

"I couldn't see the throw because when I made it my glasses fell over my eyes. But I did see the play at the plate. I have made similarly long throws from the outfield. But frankly, it would have been much more pleasing to hit it out in the 9th.

"I think I can throw as well as anyone from the outfield and if you don't make a perfect throw on a play like that, they'll score everytime."

Referring to the game, Ferguson said, "We didn't swing the bat like we can. . .even with 11 hits. We didn't bunch the hits together. I just hope we can put something together tomorrow (today)."

STEVE YEAGER HOLDS BALL AFTER TAGGING OUT SAL BANDO ON THROW FROM JOE FERGUSON.

Field Goal By White Ties Cards

Special to the Daily Pilot

LOS ANGELES—Brett White, junior kicking specialist from Huntington Beach, booted a 37-yard field goal on the last play of the game to give UCLA a 13-13 tie with Stanford in Pac-8 circuit football action Saturday night at the Coliseum.

White, who performed for Huntington Beach High and Golden West College, prior to becoming a UCLA Bruin, had earlier made a field goal from 19 yards and missed one from 32.

The Bruins had damaged their chances of winning by failing to call time out during the final scoring drive and instead of going for a possible winning touchdown, had to settle for the tie. An incomplete pass with one second left stopped the clock and gave White a chance to do his thing.

White admitted afterward that confusion on the field was responsible for failure to halt the clock on appropriate occasions.

White also said, "I felt pretty bad about missing the other field goal. We might have won if I'd have made it. It was wide right."

It was the second time this year his foot had been called upon in the closing seconds of the game. He tried a 40-yard kick against Tennessee with 14 seconds left which would have given UCLA a win. But the effort was wide and the game wound up a 17-17 deadlock.

It was the third time in recent years that a field goal had taken victory away from Stanford at the Coliseum.

Stanford, winless and now with a 0-3-2 record, appeared to have the game won. Quarterback Mike Cordova, with a timely assist from his fellow sophomore backup quarterback Guy Benjamin, took the lead in the second quarter and it was 13-10 at the half.

Benjamin entered the game late in the second quarter and promptly steered the Cardinals to a touchdown that put his team ahead. It was not immediately explained why he replaced Cordova, but the youngster completed six of seven passes for 58 yards—the last for six points on an 11-yard throw to Phil Singler.

Cordova, with clutch passing and daredevil escapes on scramble plays steered Stanford 78 yards in 13 plays for the opening touchdown. Sig Ostrom scored from the one. The extra point try failed.

Less than three minutes later Sciarra drove UCLA 69 yards in eight plays, firing a 22-yard scoring strike to Norm Andersen.

Trojans Sting Cougars, 54-7 Behind Davis

SPOKANE (AP) — Senior tailback Anthony Davis rushed for 194 yards and two touchdowns, and two Southern California second string backs scored two touchdowns each as the Trojans opened their Pacific-8 Conference football season with a 54-7 victory over Washington State.

Second-string tailback Allen Carter and No. 2 quarterback Vince Evans each scored twice as the seventh-ranked Trojans demolished the Cougars defense with repeated runs through the middle.

Washington State's only score came early in the fourth quarter as sophomore quarterback John Hopkins — replacing both starter Wally Bennett and senior Chuck Peck — threw a seven-yard touchdown pass to tight end Carl Barschig.

Davis, who left the game early in the third quarter, scored his second touchdown on a one-yard plunge after Cougards tailback Ron Cheatham fumbled on his own 13-yard line to Doug Hogan.

Other touchdowns for the Trojans came on a three-yard first-quarter pass from Pat Haden to split end John McKay, and a 59-yard fourth quarter dash by third-string fullback Ricky Bell.

Davis chalked up 189 of his yards in the first half on 24 carries, most of them through the middle of the Cougars line. His efforts brought the Trojans to the WSU goal line three times in the first half.

Medwick Bombarded

Controversial Series Recalled by Reardon

Editor's note, The modern era sports vista is providing entertainment, quality and occasionally controversy on a scale never before attained in the world of athletics. Yet sports of days gone by also had great moments and star performers. Today our look at these days focuses on former National League umpire Beans Reardon.

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Over-ripe fruit, vegetables, lunch boxes and newspapers were thrown at Joe "Ducky" Medwick in the seventh game of the 1934 World Series in Detroit, causing his removal from the game by the commissioner.

Going Back IN SPORTS

The bombardment took place in the bottom half of the sixth inning of a one-sided game in favor of the visiting St. Louis Cardinals and the Detroit fans weren't in any mood to be charitable.

History records that the Cards had scored seven runs in the third inning and were leading 11-0 when Medwick went to his position in left field.

The first base umpire in that game was John E. "Beans" Reardon, currently retired and enjoying life in Long Beach.

In the top of the sixth inning Medwick and Detroit's Marv Owen had an altercation but neither was kicked out of the game.

"When Medwick would come into a base, he would give you the knee and when Owen tagged him hard, he jumped up and took a belt at the Detroit third baseman," Reardon recalls.

"We broke that up in a hurry and neither one of the players was thrown out because of the importance of the game.

"But when Medwick went to the outfield in the bottom of the inning, the Detroit fans started throwing over-ripe vegetables and everything else at him and they wouldn't stop.

"Finally, Mickey Cochrane (Detroit manager) went to the outfield and held up his hands for the crowd to stop throwing things.

"The minute he would turn his back, they would bombard Medwick again and they kept it up and the game couldn't go on under such circumstances.

"Judge Kenesaw M. Landis was sitting behind the Cardinals dugout on the first base side and being the first base umpire, he called me over to his box and asked me to bring that fellow in left field in to talk to him.

"I went out and told Medwick the judge wanted to talk to him and brought him in.

"The judge asked him one question, "who threw the first punch."

"When Medwick told him he had thrown the first one, the judge told him he was out of the game in order to stop the disturbance.

"Frankie Frisch was the St. Louis manager and he became incensed. 'That old so-and-so can't do that," he screamed.

"I had a hard time keeping him away from the judge's box but things finally quieted down and they put in a different outfielder.

"They were afraid for his life when they took him out of the game and assigned two detectives to guard him until he was on the train heading for St. Louis."

New U.S. Star on Horizon

Dixon Shakes Injuries, Posts Big Score

America's newest young Olympic prospect is going to be one of the Orange Coast area's newest residents. Fred Dixon, 24, plans on moving to Newport Beach, where he'll begin intensive training in the decathlon, an event the U.S. once sparkled in at the Olympics.

However, except for 1968 when Laguna Beach resident Bill Toomey won at Mexico City, the U.S. has had little Olympic decathlon success since Bob Mathias captured the gold medal in 1952.

Now, Dixon looms as a bright spot on the horizon, having already chalked up 8,023 points in a recent competition at Santa Barbara, where adverse conditions supposedly knocked a couple of hundred points off decathlon scores. His total is ninth best by an American and is especially impressive since he was in competition more for the fun of it instead of being out to rack up a big total.

"The score just sort of came," he says. "I wasn't under any sort of pressure. Still, I had two bad events — the shot put (46 feet) and the 440 (49.2)."

Dixon will work out with Russ Hodge, former U.S. star who has been plagued by injuries throughout his career. Hodge believes Dixon is capable of scoring 8,300 points or more within the next year, saying his protege could improve three feet in the pole vault by the time the 1976 Olympics come up in Montreal.

Dixon, now a 13-1 vaulter, thinks he can also knock considerable time off his present 4:38 1,500 meters. His lifetime bests of 10.6 (100 meters), 49.0 (400 meters) could also be bettered.

And he stands tough with a 155-9 discus throw, a 14.6 110-meter high hurdles, 225 feet in the javelin, 24-4 for the long jump and 6-6 in the high jump.

GLENN WHITE

WHITE WASH

How did he get into the decathlon? He was a fine gymnast in junior high school. But by the time he had gone from his freshman to sophomore year at North Hollywood High, he'd grown from 5-8 to 6-1 and his coordination was temporarily left behind.

So he went out for track, long jumping and later triple jumping at LA Valley College. He was then recruited by Cal State (LA) for the decathlon and scored 6,300 points in his first competition.

Four years later, after surviving a bout with tendonitis and a slipped disc that left him athletically idle for most of 1973, he started easy jogging to test the injuries and to reactivate his body.

"I ran a little farther and a little faster every day. As I felt better and better, I said to myself, 'it's time for one more decathlon'," he recalls.

"My leg responded and I decided I'd learn to accept the discomfort in my back."

When he tried a decathlon last April he chalked up 7,800 points and from then on it's been serious business.

"The decathlon becomes a lifestyle after while — it's not something you do for ego because not many people are interested in the decathlon and not many spectators turn out to see competitions.

"Russ has been a good influence because I'm pessimistic and he's a super optimist. He's helped me with training and improving my techniques. For the first time in my life I feel I can seriously think about being in the Olympics.

"And being in the Olympics would be a dream come true."

CAL'S CHUCK MUNCIE GOES FOR A LONG GAINER AGAINST OREGON.

Muncie-led Cal Sinks Ducks, 40-10

BERKELEY (AP) — Chuck Muncie ran 46 yards for one touchdown, threw a scoring pass and caught an 11-yard touchdown pass to spark California to a 40-10 victory over Oregon Saturday in a Pacific-8 Conference opener.

California 4-1, ripped apart an Oregon defense that was missing its key man, Reggie Lewis, sidelined with a sprained left ankle.

The Bears got a pair of touchdowns in the second quarter and two more in the third, and with a 34-3 lead rested star quarterback Steve Bartkowski in the final period.

Bartkowski hurled a bomb to Wesley Walker that was good for a 70-yard touchdown which put the Bears ahead 20-3 and the Ducks never got back in the game, in spite of a 138-yard rushing effort by Rick Kane who carried 18 times.

Muncie, who had a 52-yard touchdown run nullified by an illegal procedure penalty in the first quarter, gained 126 yards in 20 carries and was voted offensive player of the game.

The 6-foot-3 Union Town, Pa. junior, the Pac-8's leading rusher, threw a 10-yard pass to Dave Bateman for Cal's opening score. It was his first pass of the season, and the touchdown throw was set up by Karl Crumpacker's recovery of a Ron Reynold's fumble on Oregon's 23.

Bartkowski completed four of five passes in a 69-yard drive culminating in Muncie's catch of an 11-yarder in the end zone. A 42-yard Bartkowski pass to Steve Rivera down the right sideline set up that score.

It took only two plays for Cal to score the next time they got the ball — a 10-yard rush by Muncie and Bartkowski's 70-yarder to Walker who scampered the last 15 down the sideline. It was Walker's first catch of the season.

Bartkowski, the Pac-8's leading passer, completed 10 of 17 for 183 yards before giving way to Mark Cahill in the last period. Cahill passed nine yards to Walker for Cal's final score.

Missouri Surprises Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Reserve quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz led Missouri to three fourth-period touchdowns and lifted the Tigers to a 21-10 upset of fifth-ranked Nebraska Saturday in the season's first Big Eight Conference football game for both teams.

It was Nebraska's first loss at home since 1972 when the Huskers bowed to Oklahoma, 17-14.

Missouri trailed 10-0 with 11:26 remaining in the game after Nebraska scored on Terry Luck's 10-yard pass to wingback Don Westbrook. But the Missouri offense, that had been unable to sustain a drive all day, devastated the Cornhuskers from that point on.

Pisarkiewicz guided his teammates 71 yards in 12 plays, then popped over from the two-yard-line for the first Missouri score.

On the next series, Nebraska fullback Gary Higgs bobbled a pitchout, and Missouri recovered on the Nebraska 25. Five plays later, Pisarkiweicz passed a nine-yard scoring toss to slotback Mark Miller.

KU Rallies

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Sophomore Laverne Smith wrestled loose from would-be tacklers and raced 51 yards for a late fourth-quarter touchdown, boosting 8th-ranked Kansas to a 20-13 Big Eight Conference football victory over rival Kansas State Saturday.

Smith's burst came with 4:06 left, just about the time many in the stadium record crowd of 45,000 had resigned themselves to a Kansas State triumph.

Buffs Romp

BOULDER, Colo. — Long touchdown runs by juniors Dave Logan and Clyde Crutchmer, and the running of sophomore tailback Billy Waddy, lifted Colorado to a 34-7 victory over Iowa State Saturday in the Big Eight football opener for both schools.

With 2:36 left in the half, after Iowa State had pulled within 14-7, Logan took a punt, headed for the left sideline to pick up a wall of blockers and cut back to the right for a 51-yard return that put the Buffs on top 20-7 at the half.

Buckeyes, Michigan Topple Big-10 Foes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Archie Griffin rushed for more than 100 yards for the 16th straight game, and Cornelius Greene ran for two touchdowns and passed for another Saturday, powering top-ranked Ohio State to a 52-7 Big Ten football victory over No. 13 Wisconsin.

A record Ohio Stadium crowd of 87,717 gave Griffin a standing ovation when he left the game in the fourth quarter with 112 yards in 18 carries.

The junior tailback has gained over 100 yards in 15 consecutive regular-season games, plus the 1974 Rose Bowl.

The victory extended the Buckeyes' undefeated streak to 16 games.

Griffin's performance leaves him two games shy of the record 17 in a row established by Steve Owens of Oklahoma.

Actually, the architect of Ohio State's fifth straight victory this season was Greene. His running and passing handed the Badgers their second loss in five games, and knocked them from a share of the conference lead.

The junior quarterback darted 11 and 6 yards for touchdowns and passed six yards to wingback Brian Baschnagel for another score.

MSU Tumbles

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Fourth-ranked Michigan took advantage of Michigan State fumbles to score twice in the second quarter, one when Dan Jilek recovered a Spartans bobble in the end zone, and the Wolverines recorded a 21-7 Big Ten football victory Saturday.

A crowd of 104,682— second largest in National Collegiate Athletic Association history — watched the Wolverines jump to a 21-0 halftime lead and run their record to 5-0 for the season. The Spartans dropped to 2-3.

Jilek's touchdown, Michigan's second, came when Spartans punter Tom Berney fumbled in his own end zone.

Later in the quarter, Michigan recovered a fumble by Spartan Levi Jackson at the Michigan State 41, and four plays later scored on a pass from Dennis Franklin to Jim Smith as time ran out in the first half.

Iowa Breezes

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Rod Wellington gained 129 yards on 12 carries, including a 42 yard touchdown sprint and a 48-yard reception for a touchdown and Iowa snapped a five-year homecoming losing streak to hand Northwestern a 35-10 Big Ten defeat Saturday.

The Hawkeyes survived a five-fumble performance in mounting a 423-yard attack, including a 94-yard drive in the third quarter.

Illini Triumphs

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Sophomore slotback Frank Johnson grabbed a pair of touchdown passes from Illinois' alternating quarterbacks, and Dan Beaver added two field goals Saturday as Illinois ruined Purdue's homecoming, 27-23, in a Big Ten football collision.

The victory was the fourth in five games for the Illini, their best start since 1964, and raised their conference record to 2-0. The Boilermakers slipped to 1-3-1 and 0-2.

Indiana Howls

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Sophomore Courtney Snyder rambled for 160 yards and two touchdowns and junior Trent Smock caught two touchdown passes from quarterback Terry Jones, leading Indiana to a 34-3 Big Ten football victory over Minnesota Saturday.

The victory ended Indiana's 11-game losing string, matching its longest ever.

Beavers Bag 23-9 Pac-8 Win

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — A brilliant 24-yard run by Ray Taroli set up the game-winning touchdown by fullback Dick Maurer and Oregon State went on to a 23-9 victory over Washington in a Pacific-8 Conference football opener Saturday.

Taroli, who has been injured, appeared to be going down but regained his balance and his 24-yard run put Oregon State on the Washington 22 with 2:57 remaining.

Maurer slammed over from the 2-yard line with 1:10 left as Oregon State won its first game of the season after four non-conference setbacks.

It was the Huskies' third loss in five games.

Oregon State, which trailed 9-6 after three periods, added an insurance touchdown with 10 seconds to go after Washington quarterback Chris Rowland was unsuccessful on a fourth down pass from his own 3. Reserve tailback Bill Cecil took it in from there.

Washington turned an Oregon State fumble into a 7-0 lead in the opening period. Linebacker Jim Kristof recovered at the OSU 22 and three minutes later the Huskies scored on a one-yard run by Russ Earl.

The Washington defense, led by tackle Dave Pear, and excellent punting by Skip Boyd shut down the Oregon State offense for nearly all of the first half. The Beavers scored on a spectacular pass play covering 47 yards in the first quarter.

OSU quarterback Alvin White, a former Newport Harbor High and Orange Coast standout, handed off to tailback Elvin Momon, whose fumble set up Washington's first score. Momon handed off to wide receiver Chuck Gardner, who pitched back to White. White found split end Grant Boustead open for the scoring toss.

Irwin Nabs Title; Kings Gain Tie

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Hale Irwin, the U.S. Open champion, dethroned Gary Player of South Africa 3 and 1 Saturday and won the Piccadilly world match play golf championship and the first prize of $24,000.

The dramatic, seesaw 36-hole final provided more excitement than top quality golf.

Player, below form, hooked his drive five times, missed a number of vital short putts, lost his chance to win the title for the sixth time in 11 years and settled for the $12,000 second prize.

Irwin, a former college football star from Kirkwood, Mo., was remarkably accurate with his three-wood second shots on the long holes, planting them regularly on the greens.

Player conceded the match on the 35th hole,sparking controversy over the final score.

Kings Deadlock

MONTREAL — Steve Shutt came out of the penalty box to take a pass from Guy Lafleur and score a power play goal at 10:15 of the third period, giving the Montreal Canadiens a 4-4 National Hockey League tie with the Los Angeles Kings Saturday night.

The Canadiens spotted Los Angeles a 2-0 lead after Bob Nevin beat goaltender Ken Dryden with a long shot that skimmed the ice in the first period and Bob Berry knocked in Mike Corrigan's rebound at 3:45 of the second.

Penn State, Pitt Rout East Foes

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Shuman threw a pair of touchdown passes and freshman Jim Cefalo and sophomore Duane Taylor each scampered for two more scores in Penn State's 55-0 college football victory over winless Wake Forest Saturday.

It was no contest from the opening kickoff, which Penn State returned to its 38 and then marched 62 yards in eight plays to take a 7-0 less than four minutes into the game.

The victory was the fourth against one loss for 15th-ranked Penn State, and the fifth straight defeat for Wake Forest, which has given 199 points and scored only 21.

Shuman, the Nittany Lions' senior signalcaller, completed 12 of 14 passes for 183 yards, and directed an attack that included drives of 62 and 69 yards in Penn State's biggest offensive show of the season.

Pitt Eases

PITTSBURGH — Carson Long booted a 45-yard, tie-breaking field goal and Billy Daniels fired two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter giving Pitt a come-from-behind 31-14 victory Saturday over arch-rival West Virginia.

The Panthers, down 14-7 at halftime, tied the game late in the third quarter on a Tony Dorsett-led, 73-yard drive with Dorsett diving over from the one.

With 8:47 remaining, Long kicked his field goal and Pitt led for the first time.

Navy Bows

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Syracuse, buoyed by its longest scoring play of the season and the fine all-around performance of junior quarterback Jim Donoghue, upended a determined Navy team, 17-9, Saturday.

Donoghue broke a 3-3 tie shortly before intermission when he fired a scoring pass to split end Lonnie Allgood in a play that covered 56 yards, and then outwitted the Navy defense for the deciding score mid way through the fourth quarter.

Dulich Leads 49ers, 28-6

Quarterback Bob Dulich, a former Mission Viejo High and Saddleback College star tossed two scoring bombs and fullback Tommy Nathan scored twice as Cal State (Long Beach) overpowered Cal State (Fullerton), 28-6, Saturday night in Pacific Coast Athletic Associaiton play.

Nathan ran up 139 yards in 23 carries as the Long Beach workhorse. He rambled 43 yards for one score and hit three yards for another.

Long Beach, now 2-3, rolled up 421 yards in total offense, while the losers squeezed out 174.

Aggies Rip Tech; Sooners Scared

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Elusive Skip Walker slipped through and around ninth-ranked Texas Tech for three second quarter touchdowns Saturday and led 16th-ranked Texas A&M to a 28-7 victory in a key Southwest Conference college football game.

Skip Walker capped three A&M scoring drives after a scoreless punting duel in the first quarter when the Raiders failed to make a first down. Tech managed only one first down in the second quarter en route to its first loss in 14 games.

The Aggies struck quickly in the second quarter with Walker scoring his first two touchdowns in a span of 1:22.

The first was a one-yard plunge climaxing a time-consuming 67-yard drive.

Texas Falls

DALLAS — Oklahoma's Tony DiRienzo kicked a 37-yard field goal late in the final quarter following a daring but unsuccessful Texas fourth-down gamble and the second-ranked Sooners edged the charged-up Longhorns, 16-13, in their annual college football grudge match.

The Sooners victory over the three-touchdown underdog Longhorns kept Oklahoma unbeaten through its last 19 games.

With the game tied 13-13, coach Darrell Royal ordered his Longhorns to go for it on a fourth-and-one situation at midfield. Freshman fullback Earl Campbell appeared to have the yardage made but fumbled when hit by Leroy Selmon. All-American linebacker Rod Scholte recovered at the 50.

Oklahoma quarterback Steve Davis worked the Sooners into position, using freshman Elvis Peacock to move to the Longhorn 21. DeRienzo, a junior, calmly kicked a field goal, and the Sooners fans among the sellout crowd of 72,000 in the Cotton Bowl went wild.

Arkansas Upset

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Baylor tailback Steve Beaird blasted over from one yard out with 63 seconds left to play and the Bears upset 14th-ranked Arkansas, 21-17, Saturday.

The victory was Baylor's first over a Southwest Conference opponent since the 1972 season finale.

Arkansas had gone ahead 17-14 on Barnabas White's three-yard scoring run with 7:42 remaining. The Razorbacks had a chance to ice the game but quarterback Mark Miller fumbled the snap from center and Wharton Foster recovered at the Arkansas 36 with 2:40 remaining.

Tide Avoids Big Upset; Florida Not as Lucky

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Bucky Berrey kicked a 36-yard field goal with 33 seconds remaining Saturday, giving the third - ranked Alabama Crimson Tide an 8-7 triumph over Florida State.

The hungry Seminoles, winless in 17 straight games, used a determined first half to hold Alabama's vaunted offense, minus its top quarterbacks, at bay.

Leading 7-3 with three minutes left, Florida State gave Alabama a safety then free kicked to put the Crimson Tide in its own territory. FSU punter Joe Downey ran out of the end zone in a punting situation with just over a minute left for the safety.

Then Berry kicked the placement to give the Tide its fifth straight victory and its 32nd in a row on its home field.

Commodores Sail

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Reserve quarterback David Lee directed Vanderbilt in four scoring drives and tight end Barry Burton dazzled eighth-ranked Florida with his running and pass catching in the Commodores' 24-10 upset of the Gators in a Southeastern Conferance football game Saturday.

Lee, playing the final three quarters for the injured Fred Fisher, ran seven yards for a third-quarter touchdown and a 14-7 lead.

Vols Defeated

BATON ROUGE, La. — Louisiana State overcame four first-half fumbles and got a clutch fourth-down touchdown from quarterback Billy Broussard Saturday night enroute to a 20-10 Southeastern Conference football victory over Tennessee.

It was LSU's first victory since the Tigers' season opener against Colorado. It left both teams with 2-2-1 records.

Broussard, a much-maligned senior quarterback who rose to first string status when the Tigers' supposed superstar Mike Miley chose pro baseball over college football, directed the Tigers on two impressive drives.

Rebs Blasted

ATHENS, Ga. — Horace King scored four touchdowns Saturday, one on a 79-yard run, as Georgia crushed Mississippi, 49-0, in a Southeastern Conference football game.

King, who got three of his scores on short runs in the opening half, equalled a school scoring record with the performance but hardly had a monopoly on big plays in the offensive outburst by the Bulldogs.

Aaron First Black GM?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The poorest kept secret in the smoke-filled rooms of the 1974 World Series is that home run king Hank Aaron is a good bet to break another racial barrier and become baseball's first black general manager.

The first step is expected to be taken next Tuesday at a formally called news conference in Oakland at which Aaron will announce his disenchantment with the Atlanta Braves and hopes to join Milwaukee briefly as a designated hitter and later as boss of the front office.

Atlanta officials are mum on the matter. There is nothing official out of Milwaukee. Yet the story is being bandied about in the tight little clusters of baseball men gathered here for the post-season spectacle.

"Hank is ready to lower the boom on the Braves," a source close to the situation said Saturday. "He doesn't think the Braves have treated him right. In some ways, he thinks they have been deceptive.

"He definitely wants to go to Milwaukee — he has said so — but he doesn't want to go to any other club. Also, he is determined not to take Atlanta's offer for a public relations post after his retirement from play."

Rams Clash With Packers Today

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Coach Dan Devine hopes his Green Bay Packers can "erase our record of predictability" when they meet the Los Angeles Rams at County Stadium today.

"To be a contender, you have to beat the teams you're expected to beat, but you also have to beat a good percentage of the good teams," Devine says.

The Packers have beaten — by a combined margin of just nine points — Baltimore and Detroit, both winless thus far in the National Football League season. Moreover, Devine is disturbed by the Packers' failure to come close to beating Minnesota or Buffalo, two solidly favored opponents.

Most observers, including Devine, consider the Rams, 3-1, at least as formidable as Minnesota and Buffalo.

"People have hurt them a little with the pass, but no one has been able to run at them," he said. "They lead the NFC in defense against the rush.

"Los Angeles is an extremely talented team," he added. "They have above average people at every position, and John Hadl gives them excellent leadership at quarterback."

On TV Today Channel 2 at 1

Hadl has completed 48 percent of his passes for 621 yards and five touchdowns and has fine receivers in speedster Harold Jackson and veteran Jack Snow at the wide spots and running back Lawrence McCutcheon.

McCutcheon, who leads the team with 11 receptions, is No. 1 in the league in rushing with 345 yards and a 5.1 average per carry. He amassed 1,097 yards and showed a 5.2 average last year.

Green Bay's running game, meanwhile, has been a disappointment, averaging only 3.3 yards per rush, third from the bottom among the 13 NFC teams. John Brockington, who rushed for 3,276 yards in his first three NFL seasons, shows only 181 yards in four games this year.

The Packers rank eighth in the NFC in passing. Third-year quarterback Jerry Tagge has hit on 51.4 percent of his throws, but has had seven intercepted.

The Packers are rated a surprisingly poor 11th in pass defense in latest NFL statistics. Part of the problem has been the inability of cornerback Willie Buchanon to return to his brilliant rookie form of 1972 after an injury cost him most of last season.

El Toro Upset Bid Falls Short, 21-8

BY DAVE ROMANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Chargers of El Toro played even with top ranked El Dorado most of the way Saturday night at Mission Viejo High before the Golden Hawks took advantage of good field position and the arm of quarterback Mike Farra to record a 21-8 non-league football win over the Chargers.

El Toro fell behind in the game, 14-0, but battled back to cut the gap to 14-8 at halftime. The Chargers held off El Dorado in the second half despite poor field position until the Hawks put the game away with a touchdown with 8:11 left on the clock.

The Chargers appeared to carry the momentum into the second half, but their drvies started on their own 20, 10, nine, 13 and 16 yard lines. El Toro couldn't really get it offense going because of this and El Dorado was able to hold on.

El Toro's defense played a fine game, but El Dorado came up with the big play when it needed it. Farra completed only five of 15 passes with every completed aerial appearing to come in key situations.

The Chargers had trouble moving the ball on offense, picking up 136 yards on the ground and 79 through the air. Most of their yardage was gained while in their own territory. El Toro would pick up one or two first downs and then have to punt.

El Toro's offensive line did a good job, opening holes and pass blocking for quarterback Gary Key. Key completed only six of 24 passes with El Dorado's defensive backs being responsible for the poor percentage.

The Chargers' only score of the night came late in the second quarter. A 16-yard pass from Key to Jeff Green helped bring the ball to the El Dorado 25. From there, Key hit wide receiver Joe Carta with a touchdown

Carta ran a simple fly pattern and outran his defenders. Key then connected with Charles Hicks for a two-point conversion toss.

Saxons Stop Barons, 21-20

By ED BURGART
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Loara High Saxons were happily shouting, "We're No. 1" Saturday night after defeating the Fountain Valley Barons at Huntington Beach High.

And, if the scoreboard is a true indication, the Saxons are indeed No. 1, edging the Barons by only one point, 21-20, in a Sunset League football game.

The Saxons were able to successfully run outside against the Barons, but they gained most of their success with the help of a missed PAT attempt and some questionable decisions from the Barons bench.

The Barons missed the extra point after Fountain Valley had scored early in the fourth quarter, cutting Loara's lead to 21-20 following Dave Kruetzer's 31-yard touchdown.

And, with 34 seconds left, the Barons were on the Loara eight-yard line, with a fourth down and one. Fountain Valley had two timeouts remaining but the Barons went to the line without a huddle and quarterback Chris Dove threw an incomplete pass to Dan Jackson, who trapped it in the end zone.

The Barons could have won it on a field goal but their coaches in the press box said they were too close to a first down to try for three points.

The Barons compiled a big statistics edge (19 first down to eight and 389 total yards to 242) but the Saxons came up with big plays and discovered a weakness in the Fountain Valley defense—containing the option.

Saxons quarterback Mark Carlton scored the game-deciding touchdown on an option, a four-yard sweep around left end with 32 seconds left in the third quarter.

After coach Bruce Pickford's Barons turned a Loara fumble into a touchdown early in the first quarter on Kruetzer's one-yard dive, the Saxons came back minutes later, when Carlton hit his favorite receiver, Ron Wilkinson, with a 70-yard TD.

The Barons turned another Saxons fumble into a score early in the second quarter on a one-yard sweep by Steve Thompson, but Loara tied it with 49 seconds left in the half on Snead's one-yard dive.

Rustlers In 31-20 Triumph

By JIM BROWN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Golden West College's undefeated Rustlers rolled to their fourth straight conquest Saturday night, dismantling LA Southwest, 31-20, in their Southern California Conference opener at Orange Coast College.

Coach Ray Shackleford's Rustlers dominated play from the outset, but the win could be costly with halfback Paul Fiskness knocked out of action with a badly twisted ankle.

Golden West won in a convincing manner, rolling to a 31-6 margin in the third quarter before Southwest rallied somewhat in the fourth period against Rustlers subs.

Four different Rustlers shared the four GWC touchdowns as Mark Davis started it all with a two-yard run with 6:51 left in the first period.

Fiskness added an eight-yard tally in the second period and only a 40-yard run with an interception by Southwest's Sam Wilson for a touchdown interrupted the GWC tide.

Mike Powell added a seven-yard touchdown run before the half was over and Dan McPherson added the third of four PATs.

McPherson added a 38-yard field goal in the third quarter before John Macauley put a cap to Golden West scoring with a 61-yard touchdown pass and run from quarterback Rich Shrout.

The Rustlers used a punishing ground game in rolling up 23 first downs (a school record) and the four victories this year, coupled with two at the end of '73 gives the Rustlers a six-game winning streak.

In all the Rustlers racked up 368 yards running in controlling the tempo from the outset.

Over Magnolia

Mesans Hold On For 22-20 Win

By JOHN MacDONALD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Costa Mesa High opened up a 15-6 first quarter lead and made it stick to post its first win of the season, a 22-20 squeaker over Magnolia in Century League football action Saturday night at La Palma Stadium.

The Mustangs narrowly avoided a tie when linebacker Rick Miller broke up a two-point conversion attempt by intercepting a stray pass by Magnolia quarterback Ron Hunt, leaving Costa Mesa in front with 2:06 to go in the game.

Mustangs quarterback Tim Rosauer had a fine passing night, clicking on 11 of 21 attempts for 97 yards and one touchdown. The biggest improvement in Costa Mesa's defense was the secondary, which contained Magnolia's passing to only 10 completions in 26 attempts.

The Sentinels closed to within one point in the third period when Hunt broke four tackles in route to a 50-yard scoring run. Hunt then hit Gerry Bullderdick in the end zone for the two-point conversion, and Costa Mesa was clinging to a slim 15-14 lead.

However, the Mustangs paced their lead on the first play of the fourth quarter when Rosauer capped a 89 yard drive on a 15-yard scoring pass to Keith Josephson.

For once the breaks were in the Mustangs favor as their last scoring drive had stalled on the Mesa 35, but a roughing the kicker call against the Sentinels kept the drive alive.

Trailing 22-14, Magnolia put together one last drive that lasted over seven minutes during the fourth period as the Sentinels successfully converted three third down situations.

Hunt capped the drive on a one-yard plunge. Tony Martinez led a balanced rushing attack by the Mustangs, picking up 66 yards and one touchdown. Teammate Steve Teregis finished with 55 yards and tailback Wayne Voring added 27 yards and a TD. The Mustangs piled up 209 net yards in the first half alone.

Costa Mesa also exhibited fine ball control in the second period, running off 22 offensive plays to the Sentinels' 11.

Kennedy Trips Oilers, 12-7

By ARMAND HANSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In a wild finish that had everyone in the stands on their feet, the luck of the Irish held and Kennedy High's football team escaped with a 12-7 victory over luckless Huntington Beach in an Empire League tilt at Western High Saturday night.

It was the fourth straight loss for coach Roy Brummett's Huntington Beach Oilers, and the fourth straight win for coach John Hangartner's Fighting Irish.

Huntington Beach had its shot at an upset.

After Kennedy had fought to come from a 7-0 deficit and take a 12-7 lead into the final minute of play, Syl Babinski alertly pounced on Kennedy's fourth fumble.

His recovery gave the Oilers the ball on the Kennedy 31.

An 11-yard pass from Bill Holst to John Potter put the ball on the 20 and with 52 seconds left there appeared time enough for the Oilers to upset the favored Irish.

But two passes fell incomplete. Then the Kennedy line threw Holst for a 10-yard loss. On fourth and 20 from the 30 and only 36 seconds left, Loren Micklin electrified the crowd with a 24-yard sprint with a flat pass.

But he was driven out of bounds at the six, giving the Oilers a first down.

Jim Lucas ran for five yards to the one and out of bounds with 15 seconds left. But a dive by Greg Nitzkowski netted nothing, then another attempt resulted in a fumble.

The ball squirted up in the air, into an official's hands and the gun went off.

The officials called the players back, however, marched off five yards against Huntington Beach and gave the Oilers one more chance.

A pitchout failed to produce and Kennedy escaped with its 12-7 conquest.

The Oilers took a 7-0 lead when Alan Wilson recovered a fumbled punt, giving Huntington Beach the ball on the Kennedy 25 in the first period.

Nitzkowski scored on the seventh play after Micklin did most of the work to the five yard line. Paul Gassman toed the PAT.

Defensive Battle

Tritons, Tigers In 7-7 Struggle

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Valencia High School broke a scoring dearth the first time it had the ball and made the first touchdown of the 1974 season stand up for a 7-7 deadlock against the San Clemente High Tritons Saturday night.

The non-league football battle was played on the Valencia High field and the score came on a determined 62-yard drive that took 10 plays with 8:23 left in the first stanza.

San Clemente hadn't had possession when the Tigers scored on a five-yard scamper by workhorse Mimi Rodriguez.

Other than a 38-yard scoring pass from Glenn Djll to Lance Berry with 3:52 left in the half and Carlos Bedella's conversion point to even the count, San Clemente spent most of the night on defense and in complete offensive frustration.

Tim Block was a block of granite for the Tritons on defense all night.

He batted passes to the ground, blitzed ball carriers around the end and otherwise got in the way of the Tigers' offensive charge.

His running mate on the defensive front line for most of the evening was Dom Peterson and what one didn't do, the other did to stop the Tigers from further scoring.

So adept was their rush that Valencia failed to complete a pass all night and the last one was intercepted by Berry at the final gun.

The host Tigers picked up most of their yardage on outside runs in the opening drive that brought the first touchdown of the year in four outings.

When the defensive unit for San Clemente was appraised of its errors the first time the Tritons had the ball, the sweeps were pretty well contained.

Other defensive standouts for the Tritons included Leo Vleisides, Greg Young, Vince Herman, Stan Mathis and Larry Poncino.

Both teams begin league play next weekend, the Tritons in the newly-formed South Coast circuit when they host the University Trojans Friday night at 7:30.

Gauchos Swipe Eight Passes, Roll, 44-6

By HARLAN MACK
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Saddleback College intercepted eight passes, returning four for touchdowns in rolling to a 44-6 non-conferennce football victory over Arizona Western Saturday night at San Clemente High.

The win ran the Gauchos' record to 4-0.

Rich White returned two of the errant Arizona Western passes for TDs, and David Singery and George Gay also had a touchdown each after interceptions.

It was White's second touchdown that put the game away for the Gauchos early in the third quarter.

Holding a 17-6 lead, White, a linebacker, picked the pass off at the Matadors 19 and ran it in unmolested. After Brian Hester's PAT, coach George Hartman's club had a 24-6 lead and the game put away.

White's first theft came with 59 seconds left in the opening quarter as he went 24 yards for a score. Bill Springman had scored earlier on a 21-yard run. Thus the Gauchos owned a 14-0 halftime edge.

Singery's TD scamper was for 47 yards and Gay completed the scoring late in the final period, racing 38 yards.

Jim Goldstone also had two interceptions and Jim Poettgen and John Curtis had one each.

Also adding a touchdown for the Gauchos was Poettgen on a 14-yard pass from quarterback Marty Mikkelsen. Hester booted a 26-yard field goal to complete the scoring.

Arizona Western actually outgained the Gauchos, 248-166, but the Matadors had big problems with their passing game, completing only 1 of 16.

Mark Dobis was Saddleback's leading rusher with 78 yards in 20 carries.

The Gauchos return to play next Saturday night, hosting San Bernardino Valley College in Mission Conference action at Mission Viejo High.

Duane "Pancho" Carter, Jr. clinched the USAC sprint car championship last weekend by leading all 50 laps of a race at Rossburg, Ohio.

Carter, the point leader in the sprint car division, all season, has the distinction of being the first driver in United States Auto Club history to win both the national midget and sprint car titles.

He has won four of the last five sprint features this season and recently set a half-mile speed record of 16.17 seconds on a flat, closed track. That figures out to 110.633 miles per hour.

He will join 11 other drivers for the world series of auto racing at Pocono, Pa. International Raceway next Sunday.

The series opens with sprint and midget division competition and concludes with stock and championship car races early next year.

Indy Winners at Riverside

There will be five former Indianapolis 500 winners entered in the Formula 500 championship at Riverside International Raceway Oct. 27.

A. J. Foyt added his name to the list this week along with Mario Andretti, Bobby Unser and Johnny Rutherford.

Foyt will be making his first road racing appearance in a formula car since the 1969 Rex Mays 300 at Riverside.

Prep Cycle Action at OCIR

Tom Berry of Huntington Beach was among the top entants in the AMA Golden West invitational motorcycle race at Ascot Park Friday night in the junior class.

On the motorcycle scene, Saddleback Park at Orange County International Raceway is staging weekly high school motocross races on Saturday night.

A night practice session has been added Wednesday with the track open for high school riders from noon to 10 p.m.

Thursday nights are reserved for qualifying races. Steve Rhyan of San Clemente High is the junior leader in the 100cc division. Marvin Masuda of Fountain Valley High is tied for the lead in the 250cc junior division and Aaron Bassett of San Clemente High is the expert leader in this division.

In the open category, Vic Galich of Huntington Beach High is the beginner leader.

There are six races left of the nine-race series in the qualifying competition for the state championships Nov. 30.

Bugs Delay Race

THE YELLOW FLAG — Once around the county . . . Ukiah Speedway was invaded by a gigantic horde of gnats this summer and just as it began to look like they had a "bug-out," someone thought to turn out the lights. The tiny pests departed and the program continued.

At Surrey, British Columbia, this one actually happened. With three laps left in a heat race, the lead car slowed in the back stretch and pulled into the pits, whereupon the entire field, thinking the event over, followed him like lemmings into the sea.

Skunks Take Residence

Rockford Speedway nearly became the first track to be "stunk-out," as a family of skunks took up residence in the sunken timing light enclosure at the start-finish line.

About $100 worth of fire extinguisher chemical was exhausted to freeze out the striped critters.

The water truck rollover took place at Grandview, Pa. Speedway. The track operator added this personal touch to the evening's racing program when he rolled the water truck between events.

He's answering to the name Evel Rogers and they say the line for bookings at other tracks forms near the big mudhole on the inside of turn two.

Then there's the one about a midwest promoter who announced to the drivers he was closing the track because of steadily declining attendance.

The drivers voted unanimously to present the evening's prize money to the promoter as a show of appreciation for three years of promotional effort.

There were 250 paying customers in the stands.

Oh well, it isn't the size of the gift that counts but the thought behinnd it.

Mesan Holds Big Lead

Ron "Sleepy" Tripp, a 21-year-old rookie from Costa Mesa, continues his bot hand in the USRCA midget circuit at Speedway 605. He's won four of the last five races and holds a commanding point lead with 950 to 684 for the runnerup.

Brother Bobby Tripp is third with 585 and Westminster's Steve Van Berckelaer is fourth with 306.

Alexander, Lester Win

Steve Alexander and Janice Lester were the overall champions in Saturday's annual Anteater Olympian at UC Irvine.

Alexander totaled 2,390 points in the 18-22 bracket to win the men's title and Lester had 1,885 points in the 18-22 category to capture the women's championship.

In the 32-41 classification, the men's champion was Bob Maimbourg with 2,216 points with Kathy Sutherland nabbing the women's title (1,755).

Hal Wallace and Ellen Rose won championships in the 42-51 category. Wallace had 2,129 points and Rose totaled 1,313.

And in the 52-and-over group, Burl Gist was the champion with 1,931 points.

The team title went to the Gothard Street Gang with 2,971 points with the Corona del Mar Track Club finishing second (2,910) and Classic Cars placing third (2,834).

Over 200 participated in the annual Olympian with 15 events being held—the best 8 counting in the scoring.

Moving Up In Real Estate

PHIL GIBILISCO, a nine-year veteran in the Orange County real estate industry, has announced the formation of his own company, Hacienda Real Estate, Inc.

GIBILISIO

Offices have been opened at 1802 E. First Street, Santa Ana, and 18548 Beach Blvd., Huntington Beach. Additional branches are scheduled for Costa Mesa, Fountain Valley, Garden Grove and Orange.

Gilbilisco was designated "Manager of the Year" four consecutive years by one of Orange County's major real estate chains.

The central theme of the new organization is a new concept in personal service to buyers and sellers of residential real estate, together with an unusual incentive program for sales personnel.

HAROLD BETTAG, well known Orange County real estate broker, is owner of a new Herbert Hawkins Realtors sales office in Fountain Valley.

Inflation Cuts Into Housing

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) -- The president-elect of the National Association of Realtors Inc. says that if the inflationary trend continues, 40 percent of potential home buyers will be priced out of the market in four years.

Arthur Leitch of San Diego predicted that in four years the price of homes will double. He said in an interview that those who cannot afford single family homes will be forced to buy less expensive modular homes, mobile homes or condominiums.

LEITCH WAS in Asheville to speak to the 53rd annual convention of the North Carolina Association of Realtors, Inc. He will soon take office as president of the 500,000 member national realtors organization.

He said that even today the family that can't afford at least a $30,000 home is in trouble because there has been a drastic reduction in the number of such homes available. Leitch said this is partially because of a 15 percent increase in property costs over the past four years.

Leitch said the tight money situation has hurt less affluent home buyers more than the affluent. Families that can afford a home under $30,000 are having a difficult time obtaining mortgages, he said.

Leitch predicted there would be no immediate relief to the money squeeze, but said he expected loans to be more available a year from now. Interest rates will drop somewhat, he said, probably leveling off at eight or nine percent.

HOWEVER HE said it is false economy to wait for interest rates to decline before buying a home. Construction costs are going up even faster, Leitch said, and would more than offset a drop in interest rates.

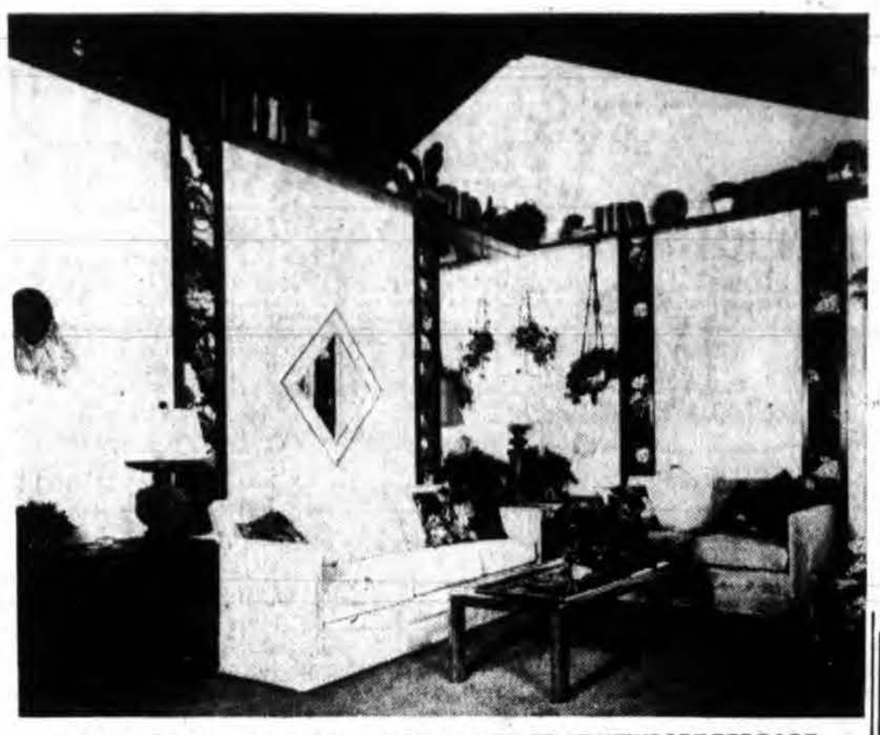

Leitch said that home sales are down across the country. Sales of homes valued under $30,000 are off 25 percent and sales are down 25 percent on more expensive homes.

"The housing industry is going through one of the most prolonged tight money markets we've had," he said. "I won't say it's the worst slump we've had, because it varies from one part of the country to the other."

Leitch said the housing industry in North Carolina was not as hard hit as in other areas.

Newport Terrace

Homes Geared for Youth

Now there's a community designed especially for the young homeowner, single or married, which combines the best features of community living with the opportunity to capitalize on real estate appreciation in one of the most swinging areas of southern California.

It's Newport Terrace, by Leadership Housing, Inc., in the heart of Newport Beach, where homes are priced from $37,450 to $43,950 and can be purchased for as little as 5 percent down.

Leadership, a nationwide developer noted for its success in multi-unit housing for young adults, developed Newport Terrace to meet changing trends in the tastes of young Americans.

THESE TRENDS were defined by Barry Brief, division manager of the company's southern California single-family home division. More than a year of research by housing industry analysts preceded opening of construction at Newport Terrace, he said.

"Our first concern was that more young people, both single and married, were considering buying a home, not only for better living than apartments offered, but for the tax advantages, equity buildup and inflation hedge which home ownership offers.

"The second trend we spotted was the large part outdoor activities and sports play in the lifestyle of today's young adult. To meet this desire, Leadership designed two and three bedroom homes surrounded by a veritable smorgasbord of recreational facilities — pools, co-ed sauna, a jacuzzi, basketball courts, handball, volleyball courts, putting green, badminton and a croquet field.

THE SITE chosen for the project, at the west end of 19th Street off Harbor Boulevard, is just one mile from beaches, boat docking and other ocean-oriented sports facilities as well, Brief pointed out.

Another strong trend in the taste of young persons today is sophisticated nostalgia. "They want modern conveniences, but with a strong relationship to the past, particularly the romantic years of U.S. history.

For this reason the project was designed with a Cape Cod look and feel, carried out in cobblestone-accented streets lined with brass lanterns and wood-sided homes with steeply-pitched roofs and bay windows. Inside, however, they are super-modern, with clean architectural lines adaptable to any type of interior decor.

THREE HOME designs are offered at Newport Terrace, with two bedrooms and two baths or three bedrooms and two and one-half baths. One plan even has dual master suites and is perfect for sharing with a roommate. All have both a garage and a carport and a fenced, completely private patio.

Decorated model homes are on view daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. Newport Terrace can be reached from Harbor Boulevard by going north on 19th Street to the very end. Information can be obtained by telephoning 646-5001.

Newport Crest Price Cutting Boosts Sales

Pacific N.C., Inc.'s precedent-setting move to reduce prices at its Newport Crest condominium community as one way to fight inflation, has resulted in 25 of the luxury towne homes being sold in just 10 days, according to George F. Meyer, development manager.

"Home buyers recognize a real bargain," says Meyer, who explained that the company's decision to reduce prices by as much as $10,000 on a selected group of 69 completed towne homes has won immediate approval from the public.

Newport Crest is a 460-unit towne home community with eight different one and two-story plans. Prices have been reduced on the selected group of homes starting at $53,000 to $63,000.

Real Estate Questions/Comment

By Realtor Randall McCardle

All of a sudeden we are seeing more and more "PRIVATE" signs being planted. We hear that "this land is our land" . . . but is it really? Do you have any thoughts on this "Keep-Out" rash that seems to have broken out everywhere in the world, and especially in our area? — M.S. Costa Mesa

The fence we build around our real estate can be annoying, but that should not be our major concern. You've noticed so much of life is spent in keeping other people out of it. Private rooms and houses, private clubs and offices, private roads and beaches — with all of them the point is the same: THIS ISN'T YOUR PROPERTY. IT'S MINE. KEEP OUT!

Of course, in one sense, a circle that shuts the world out is needed by everyone. We all need places of refuge. We are porcupines, and our quills are less troublesome if there is a little space around us.

But there is another sense in which the bigness of a human being can be measured by the circles he draws to take the world in. Some of us are too small to draw a circle larger than ourselves. Others go a little further and include our families. Still others draw the line at the edges of their own race and color, their own social group or political party or their own religion. And the people are too few who have the bigness of interest and compassion to draw a circle big enough for all.

All of us go around in circles, and there are times when "good fences make good neighbors." But the smaller the circle, the smaller the man. A strong man is not afraid of people different from himself, and a wise man welcomes them. If he knows nothing else, he knows that human beings have no place to live except upon the earth and that unless we want to die together, we must learn to live together.

But the wise man probably knows, too, that when he draws a circle to shut others out, he does less damage to others than he does to himself. He puts himself in solitary confinement, and he locks the door from the inside. He denies him self the riches of other men's experience. He starves his own mind, and he hardens his own heart.

In the beginning, God gave the world its shape. He made it round.

REAL ESTATE

Valentino New Grant Sales Chief

David Valentino has been named sales manager of Grant Company of California's $11 million development, Mira Costa Villas in San Clemente, according to Charles S. Dreyer, vice president — director of marketing who also announced that homebuyers have purchased nine of the luxury towne homes in the first week of sales.

Valentino has been with Grant since 1972 and most recently was sales a manager at Bradford Place-Santa Ana, a highly successful towne home development which has been sold out

He was previously employed by Walker & Lee Real Estate and Bankers Mortgage Corporation.

Mira Costa Villas is a 202-unit community being built on 31.15 acres just south of the Dana Point Marina. The one and two story towne homes are priced from $50,000 to $56,000

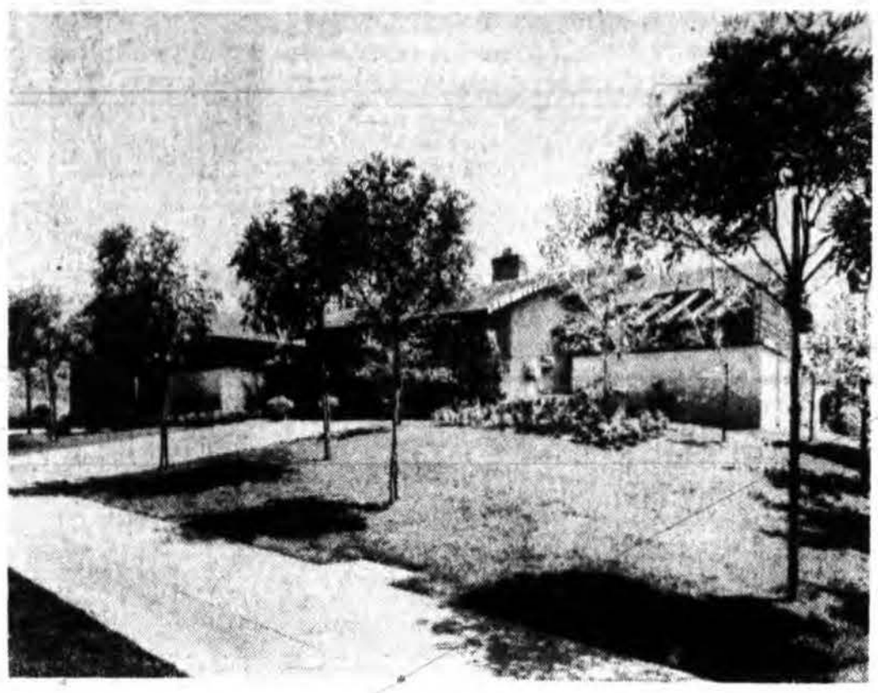

Jasmine Creek Opens in Newport

Jasmine Creek, a 346-unit neighborhood of luxury single story, split-level and two story attached homes on 89 acres in the Irvine Company's Village of Harbor View, Newport Beach is now open.

Six models in two- and three-bedroom plans, decorated by Beverly Thompson Interiors of Newport Beach, are on display at 22 Mainsail Dr., according to Vincent Petralia, Southern California Division Manager, for M.J. Brock & Sons, Inc., the developer.

Homes, ranging in size from 1,800 to 2,600 square feet, are priced from $94,500 to $114,500 with conventional financing.

The $32 million private hillside community will be developed in five phases, Petralia said, with the first increment consisting of 75 units. The main entrance with guard and gate is on Marguerite Avenue, near the corner of San Joaquin Hills Road in Corona del Mar.

JASMINE CREEK HOMES AT VARYING DISTANCES FROM STREET

RECREATIONAL features of the new community include a main pavilion, four tennis courts, and a jacuzzi as well as four swimming pools conveniently located within the development. Membership in the Jasmine Creek Homeowners Association, which is automatic with the purchase of a home, includes full rights for the use of such facilities.

The "inward oriented" homes are attached, forming two- to four-unit buildings, and are set at varying distances from the street but none back up to each other. Dramatic covered entries lead up to double entry doors.

All elevations have been given strong architectural treatment, the overall effect being natural with earthtone concrete life tile roofs, and exterior surfaces of brick, a stone and wood stained in nature's colors. Large overhangs and low eaves help blend into the site.

HEIGHTS OF patio walls vary from high where needed for privacy to low to bring in the view.

Utilities are underground and gas and electric meters are out of sight but easily accessible. All streets are private, with many cul-de-sacs.

The Jasmine Creek Homeowners Association will make life easy for all homeowners. Petralia points out, by handling all exterior maintenance including common greenbelts, other landscaped areas and the recreation facilities. The walled community will be protected by 24-hour security at the entry gate, a service which is also provided by the association.

The six different floor plans include one two-story, two-split level and three single story. All have two-car garages and ample provisions for additional parking.

ENTRIES ARE impressive and living rooms are large in all models. Every unit has a dining room and most a family room. Some also have studies and libraries. Master suites are luxurious with large dressing rooms, sunken Roman or oval tubs and planters.

All homes have at least one wood-burning fireplace. Ceramic tile is used throughout kitchens, pantries, entries and baths. Either gas or electric kitchen appliances may be chosen in most cases.

A full line of decorator selected light fixtures has been installed. Energy-saving full luminous ceilings are found in all kitchens and master baths. Every home also has either oversized or walk-in closets, and laundry facilities.

To reach Jasmine Creek from the San Diego Freeway, take the MacArthur Boulevard turnoff and proceed four and one-half miles to San Joaquin Hills Road, turn left and proceed one-quarter mile to Marguerite Avenue.

Realty Training Set

As the sophistication of the homeowner and prospective purchaser increases, Red Carpet, Realtors stresses a continuing education program so that its sales force can best serve the consumer's needs.

Approximately 70 percent of the 800 Red Carpet salesmen within the Orange County Council take a comprehensive advanced sales seminar consisting of 10 2½-hour segments. The program, an integral part of the Red Carpet franchise service, takes the salesman through the step-by-step procedures of obtaining listings through escrow.

Red Carpet Motivation Sales Trainer Harold Glaeser, who teaches similar courses for the San Diego and San Bernardino-Riverside Councils, points out that it is preferable for salesmen to enroll in courses as soon as possible.

TEACHES SALESMEN
Red Carpet's Glaeser

"IN THAT WAY, our training enables them to avoid many pitfalls," Glaeser continues.

"Basically, the training assists the salesman in obtaining listings, but even more important, how to service these listings on behalf of the client.

"From there, it deals with financing, buyer qualifications, answering consumer inquiries, closing the sales and escrow."

A University of Buffalo graduate with a degree in psychology, Glaeser has been with Red Carpet for 16 months now. Overall, he has trained approximately 8,000 salesmen and brokers, most of them in a five-year stint with Anthony Schools. In addition, Glaeser is an individual career counselor

IN ORANGE County, classes are held on Monday nights and Tuesday mornings, with 35 salesmen in a class.

"There are other specialty seminars which I conduct for Red Carpet as well," Glaeser said, "as there's a definite stress on professionalism in Red Carpet's modern merchandising program."

Business Park Started

In its first Orange County venture, the Business Centers Division of Kaiser Aetna has started construction of the first phase of a 226-acre business park which, when completed, will represent a total investment of more than $50 million.

Kaiser Aetna acquired the property from John D. Luksk and Son of Irvine in a two-step transaction handled by the Newport Beach office of Coldwell Banker Commercial Brokerage Co.

Bounded by Bolsa Avenue on the north, Springdale Avenue on the east, eFadden Avenue on the south and Bolsa Chica Avenue on the west, the site is south of and adjacent to McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Company's 246.6-acre missile space center facility.

ACCORDING TO Kaiser Aetna regional marketing manager John Hile, three major areas of activity are planned within Huntington Beach Business Park.

First of these is the sale of improved lots, the smallest of which is one acre in size. Hile noted that the lot lines are not defined until each lot is sold, thus affording a potential buyer the opportunity to purchase a custom-designed parcel including expansion land for future growth.

Hile said that Kaiser Aetna also was positioned to develop inventory building space ranging in size from 1000 sq.ft. to 60,000 square feet. He noted that these structures would have both dock-high and ground-level loading facilities and improved office space. The first of these buildings should be completed by next July, Hile said.

A THIRD, MAJOR area of activity at Huntington Beach Business Park is build-to-suit construction. Our marketing studies have shown a great deal of user interest in this area, Hile commented, by providing the necessary expertise we can eliminate many construction headaches and deliver a unique, specially designed turn-key facility.

Kaiser Aetna's entry into the Orange County business park arena follows by about one year the firm's relocation of its regional headquarters to Newport Beach. Hile explained that the development firm had previously concentrated much of its business park efforts on Warner Center, a $500 million, master-planned 1,100 acre "city within a city" in the southwest San Fernando Valley.

"As the final phases of Warner Center come to fruition, we are starting similar projects in other areas Hile explained.

AMONG OTHER Kaiser Aetna business park projects mentioned were Los Olivos, a 50-acre project in Fresno, Las Palmas, a 120-acre project, also in Fresno and Papago West Business Park, a planned 160-acre project in Phoenix. They complement ongoing projects such as SouthCenter Business Park, a 160-acre development in Carson, and Bixby Industrial Park, a 120-acre project adjacent to the Pomona Freeway in the City of Industry. Coldwell Banker was exclusive sales agent at Warner Center and held similar positions in the SouthCenter and Bixby projects.

Huntington Beach Business Park will have all the high quality amenities of other Kaiser Aetna projects, according to Hile. These include monument signs, meandering sidewalks, wide grass berms accented with large trees, architectural setbacks, and lush landscape treatments.

The Conscious Creation of a Classic

We believe that . . . the difference between 'art' and 'fine art' is often as basic as the artisan's point of view. The design, detailing, implementation and ultimate achievement must be, in great measure, an ego trip . . . the very best a man can do within the confines of his art. That's why everything we build has the Deane Homes name on it. Every plan is Deane designed . . . construction is custom in almost every sense of the word.

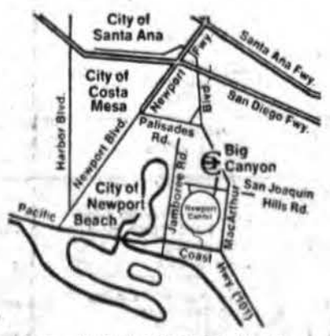

We believe that's why over 155 corporate presidents, vice-presidents, and their families are already 'at home' in Deane Homes of Big Canyon . . . an Irvine Company planned community built around the fairways and lakes of the prestigious Big Canyon Country Club.

The very finest locations have been developed last. There's room for only 17 more presidents. And, when they're gone, they're gone.

Iowa Fair - - a Big One

Flavor, Fun of Past Generations Much the Same

America's golden harvest is almost gathered. And well into October there were celebrations like the Iowa State Fair. It's a joyful, colorful mixture of farmers and merchants and livestock and produce and midways and contests and big name entertainers — a myriad of memories until next year's harvest.

By KAY BARTLETT

DES MOINES (AP) — It's the gentle lowing from the red-brick cattle barn, the oinking and grunting from the swine barn across Blue Ribbon Road, the roar of the stock car engines as they peel around the grandstand raceway, the cry of the huckster on the midway, the incessant beckoning of the calliope, the command of the ringmaster to "jog trot your horses, please," the bleating of the sheep, the squeals of little children for just one more pony ride.

Step right up, ladies and gents, it's the Iowa State Fair, a 10-day festival of food, livestock, contests, big name entertainment, honky tonk freak shows and the All-American proposition of the blue ribbon at the end of the hard road. In a depersonalized world, it's also a place where every little — or not so little — boy and girl can hold center stage at least for a moment, whether it be with a blue ribbon for the best homemade pickles or for belting out the best rendition of how to call the chickens home.

IT'S FOR FARMERS, housewives, businessmen, teen-agers, politicians and just plain folk. Over 80,000 souls, all intent on having a good time, swamp the fairgrounds on a given day.

They come in campers and in cars, in old school buses converted into mobile homes and in special buses from downtown Des Moines. Some haul sheep or pigs or cattle, dreaming of blue ribbons and admiring glances from the other breeders. Others cart in the most perfect apples, ears of corn and the biggest and reddest tomatoes that sunshine, rain and the rich Iowa soil can conspire to produce.

The Iowa fair is one of hundreds across the land celebrating, in the final weeks of summer, the country's golden harvest.

For some, it's a business date. Keith Hoelzen of the Triple Ranch in Burlington, Iowa, brought a string of the Polled herefords he raises. He figures it cost him about $1,200 to haul them here, plus work lost away from his farm. "We're here strictly for advertising," says Hoelzen. "Win, lose or draw in the show ring, we're here to show the public that these fast-gaining animals are not hard to look at."

ANOTHER BREEDER walks by and admires Hoelzen's prize bull, which a few days later was to walk off with the prestigious purple ribbon as grand champion in its class. Hoelzen chats with the man, appreciating his appreciation.

"We've worked 20 years to produce that bull," Hoelzen tells him. No boast. Just what cattle raising is all about.

"It's teddy bear time," the man on the midway booms out, even though it's 10 o'clock in the morning opening day and raining. Later, on the midway will be people-to-people as nickles are pitched at plates atop gigantic stuffed dogs of all hues, basketballs are arched for prizes, and baseballs are hurled with meaning at the red spot that will dump Bozo the clown into the water.

"You're nothing but a dumb dirt farmer from Nebraska," Bozo sneers at a man intent upon dropping him. The madder they get, the more money is plunked down.

Brave souls shell out 75 cents a crack to ride the double ferris wheel and the loop, a ride which spins you upside down and distributes the contents of pockets all over the grounds. Tape recorders bark the freak show routines. "Have you ever seen a woman with three breasts. She's inside topless. Have you ever seen a woman with four breasts. She's here, too. All of these are on the inside. Right before your very eyes. Come in now."

THERE'S ELLA MAE, the lion-faced girl, and Spiderola; the spider lady. There's the burlesque show, and the "Children of Forgotten Fathers." Are those deformed babies in jars real? "Well, you can say they were sold to me as real, but I wouldn't bet on it myself," the owner explains.

As the sound of the midway blares on, a white-coated judge carefully studies the cornbread entries at the bread judging. Some 25 persons, mostly women, watch intently as the judge neatly pulls out a slice, studies its texture, crumbles it and tastes it.

"That's a nice looking piece of cornbread there," volunteers Mrs. Vern Wilkie of Earlham, not an entrant, just a spectator-connoiseur. "The judge might think it's a little too brown, but that's how I like it." The judge agrees. The cornbread takes the blue ribbon.

ALL KINDS OF BREADS and cookies are entered. In the 4-H division, featuring foreign and regional cooking, the judge allows as how the most unusual entry this year was a bagel.

Mrs. John Steddom, 36-year-old mother of two, has 36 baked entries and nine entries in the sewing competition. She starts baking two weeks before the fair and is baking three delectables a day as the fair is about to open.

Why?

"I don't know. Why do people like horse races? It's just part of me coming to the fair. I was in 4-H all my life and it's a challenge," she says. She loads up the car, the loaves of bread in shoeboxes and drives in from nearby Grimes, where her husband raises hogs.

One year, she walked off with more than $160 in prize money. For a few, the prize money is the thing that brings them to the fair. Dale Newport, a professional florist from Cedar Rapids, comes every year to enter the garden competition, a test of landscaping. And every year he wins — he thinks it's about eight in a row now.

"That ribbon don't mean nothing," says Newport. "First prize is $225 to me." Predictably, he wins this year again.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN SEARS bring down 29 varieties of apples from the John Kazimour Orchard in Cedar Rapids. They've been doing this for 26 years and in good years, they walk off with $500 in prize money.

The Iowa State Fair — like many fairs across the country — is a giant family reunion. The rolling campground is packed with over 5,000 campers and up to 15,000 people, most of them reserving the same spot on the grounds for years.

When Wilmer and Sophie Fritchen came into camp in late August for the fair, they started tooting the horn of the 54-passenger school bus they converted into a camper that sleeps seven. Their friends tooted back and soon they were comparing notes on what they had been doing since last year.

Fritchen, a farmer from Ollis, has been coming to the Iowa State Fair for 53 years — since he was nine years old.

"He doesn't ever know a stranger," says Mrs. Fritchen. "I've got to ring the dinner bell for every meal. He's always out meeting someone new."

A REUNION OF another sort is at Master Jacks, one of the beer halls on the fairgrounds. The men who compete in the tractor-pulling contests are ordering up rounds of cold beer and trying to tell stories of past encounters over the sounds of the Ray Faubus Four, a local ensemble whose leader plays a mean sax on the weekends and raises hogs during the week.

"Some of those tractors got $30,000 in them," says Charlie Johnson of Clariton. "I've seen some of those race car drivers come over and say they'd give their right arm for some of the engines that are in those tractors."

Charlie came in second once at the fair. "I gave it away. I drove poorly that day," he laments. And then the turns to his brother, Lyle, who is still maintaining he is the best tractor puller around. "What did you ever do? You ever come in second?" Charlie taunts.

JUST AS THE MEN involved in the tractor-pulling contests all know each other, so do the other speciality contestants: the motorcycle racers, the men who goad on their huge draft horses to determine which team can pull the most weight, and the daredevils who fly around the track in race cars.

The big name stars who work the fair circuit in the summers all come in for a one-night show. This year's top attractions: Liza Minnelli, Chicago, Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, Loggins and Messina, a country all-star show featuring Tanya Tucker, and the Redd Foxx Show.

The first Iowa State Fair was held in 1854 in Fairfield and spread over six acres. The current behemoth stretches out over 400 acres. The most elaborate of farm equipment is on display, plus industrial displays of everything from snowmobiles to whirlpool baths.

The Iowa State Fair is not the biggest in the country and folks from other states would give you a hard time if you were to say it was the best.

But the 350-pound cow sculpted entirely out of butter, the 10-year-old with the broken arm who is stuffing a shorn sheep's fleece into a bag, the young girl shouting to a friend showing his Western pleasure horse — "Look at the judge, get his eye" — the squash weighing over 50 pounds and the giant cucumber over a yard long, the horseshow demonstration, the finesse of cookie and cake decorating, little children intent at water painting, teen-agers spray-painting their animals' hooves black.

These are the myriad sights and sound of the Iowa State Fair.

THEY DID IT AGAIN! NEARLY SOLD OUT!!

Sometimes the salespeople in our office get so steamed up that they can't be held back. When that happens, look out! That's what they did last week. Sold most of our listings and left darn little for ads. Two of the listings had been on the market for less than one week, one for only three days. If we can provide a service like this for others, why not for you? Our ONE YEAR WARRANTY and GUARANTEED SALE plans put us on top. Go with a winner! A special section for those with small pets

This Is the Setting . . .

Outdoors — a country villa with majestic trees and quietly running streams. By day, a magnificent home and recreation world. By night, a magic wonderland.

INDOORS — light and bright with the added spaciousness that extra large private patios and balconies afford. Each room decorator designed. Begin with fireplaces to warm the cool nights, and wet bars, beamed ceilings, wood paneling, lush wall-to-wall carpeting, color coordinated drapes and specially imported grasscloth wall coverings. Provide private garden areas and a sense of real privacy for each apartment.

PRACTICAL CONCERNS? Nothing has been overlooked. The finest in balanced power built-in appliances.

AT THE MEDITERRANEAN VILLAGE, the frenzied pace of urban life is left far behind. It is hard to believe that the city is so close by.

FOR OUTDOOR RECREATION, there are four night lighted tennis courts, and three swimming pools. And even a well equipped gymnasium and separate health clubs, with saunas, for men and women — all dedicated to your well being.

CONVENIENT TO ALL of Southern California, all of this is just minutes away from the Pacific Ocean and Newport Beach, overlooking beautiful Costa Mesa Country Club.

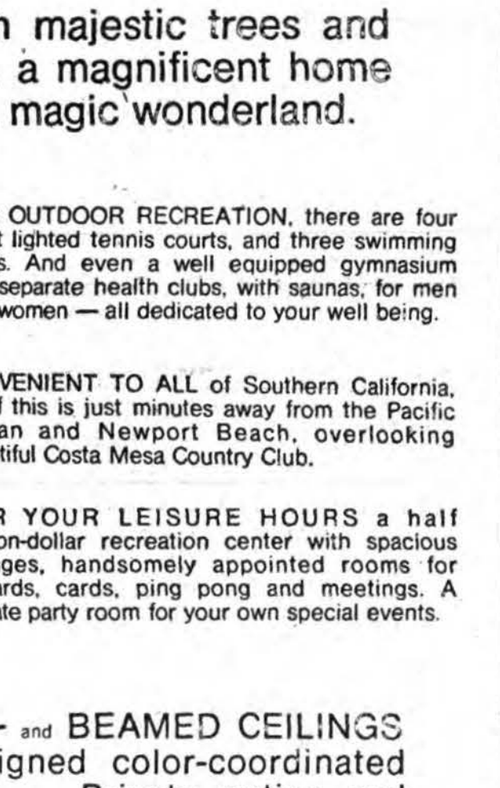

FOR YOUR LEISURE HOURS a half million-dollar recreation center with spacious lounges, handsomely appointed rooms for billiards, cards, ping pong and meetings. A private party room for your own special events.

FIREPLACES — some with WET BARS — and BEAMED CEILINGS — Wood paneling. — Fashion designed color-coordinated interiors, with carpets and drapes. — Private patios and balconies. — Community Center with spacious lounges, billiard & ping pong rooms. — 3 swimming pools, outdoor whirlpool, 4 night-lighted tennis courts. — Health spa with gymnasium and separate men's and women's facilities, including sauna baths. — Security systems to insure your privacy. — Fair housing.

A MILIEU OF MATCHLESS MUSIC

"Old blue eyes," Frank Sinatra, and the "Tijuana Rhythm King," Herb Alpert, both return to television this week with musical variety specials back to back. "Sinatra, the Main Event—Madison Square Garden," airs on ABC, Sunday at 9PM, and is followed by "Herb Alpert and the TJB," at 10PM. Sinatra performs in the center of the Garden where the ring is normally located. And sitting "ringside" is his special guest, Howard Cosell. Woody Herman and His Band supply Frank's musical accompaniment. Alpert's musical special will, of course, feature the TJB, and special guests include Jim Henson's Muppets and Lani Hall.

'LISTEN, THAT'S LOVE'

The many faces of singer/composer Paul Williams are unveiled in a one-hour, musical-variety special, "Listen, That's Love," featuring guest appearances by top-named contemporary artists, Helen Reddy, Olivia Newton-John, Roslyn Kind, and Seals and Crofts, Tuesday at 8PM on KNBC, Channel 4.

Williams, who has composed such million-selling hits as "Just

An Old Fashioned Love Song" and "We've Only Just Begun," wrote the title song, "Listen, That's Love," expressly for the program, and uses it to open the musical hour. He is then joined by popular songstress, Helen Reddy, who offers her hit version of the Paul Williams-composed song, "You and Me Against the World."

The comedic side of songwriter Williams decorates the musical hour, as Williams dons comic costume to impersonate such memorable Hollywood greats as Peter Lorre in "The Maltese Falcon," Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, Shirley Temple, and the possessed girl in "The Exorcist." At the same time, he sets his music humorously to the characters he portrays.

In a more serious moment, Williams offers his million-selling hit, "Rainy Days and Mondays," followed by the softly stylized voice of Olivia Newton-John, singing her current hit, "I Love You, I Honestly Love You." Williams then introduces composer/conducter Kenny Ascher at the piano, who joins him for their co-composed song, "Loneliness." Singer Roslyn Kind follows with "Winners," and Seals and Crofts entertain with "Ruby Jean and Billie Lee," as dedicated and sung to their wives.

In an audience setting, Williams closes the program with his solo performance of two more of his compositions, "I Won't Last a Day," and "Sad Song."

COVER CLOSE-UP

'LAND OF BEAUTY'

Contemporary is the key word for NBC's new Born Free series (Mondays at 8PM). Gary Collins and Diana Muldaur star as George and Joy Adamson, a Game Warden and his dedicated wife, living the free, rugged outdoor life in modern-day Africa. If there's a "message" in the series, it's that people and animals have a great deal in common and must learn to live in harmony to preserve the beauty of the land.

Some people think of Africa as the home of Tarzan, filled with swampy jungles and steamy riverbeds. Others conjure up the land of the Sahara. Even those who have seen the films "Born Free" and "Living Free" may remember Africa as mostly endless plains of burned-out grass and sparse shrubs.

Kenya does offer all of those settings, from the tropical forest to Lake Victoria, to the dry, treeless near-deserts close to Samburo. But within its borders also lie snow-capped Mounts Kenya and Kilimanjaro and seacoast cities with white sands and blue waters.

A variety of these sites are serving as background for segments of the new series. Though it occasionally travels afield, the Born Free company most often films near its home base in Naivasha, in the highlands of central Kenya, an hour's drive from Nairobi. One of the area's main attractions is Crescent Island, the exposed half-circular rim of an ancient volcano in the middle of Lake Naivasha, a shallow lake approximately five miles in diameter. The island is connected to shore by a short, narrow causeway flanked by lilly pads and high papyrus fronds. On the island, hundreds of water buck and Thompson's gazelles, as well as tiny antelope called dik-dik, vervet monkeys and baboons scamper freely in open grassy areas and in the shade of thickly clustered, yellow-barked fever trees which are visited by an astounding variety of birds.

A short drive from Naivasha takes the company to locations that fortuitously reproduce in miniature, the diversity of the Kenyan landscape. Though there is a rainy season with almost daily thunderstorms, the summer months get cold and in the dry season, the climate is nearly perfect. Most days are clear, with a pleasant breeze making the sun's rays tolerable. The average 68-degree temperature is not only good for the cast and crew, but fine to work with lions who might balk at performing during the heat of the day.

Most crew members are situated in hotels not far from the lakeshore. To wake up in the morning coolness and look outside to freshly mowed lawns, flower gardens and the tranquil lake, a newcomer to Kenya might suspect he was instead on a Newport estate or in the English countryside.

In fact, if you were to drop in at the location site for a visit at around 11AM or 4PM, you'd find an elegant table set with china, trays of cookies and sandwiches and pitchers of milk. The only respite in the long days shooting, which often starts at 8AM and lasts into the evening, are tea and coffee breaks and lunch. So, despite logistical difficulties, the production office sees to it that such breaks are as pleasant as possible. In deference to local custom and the predominantly English crew, it's tea time twice daily, and the tables are likely to be set up alongside a thatched-roof hut in a Kikuyu tribal village, or in a forest clearing with Elsa the lioness staked out in the grass only yards away.

But Kenya is also no place for the timid, as danger abounds in the beautiful but sometimes violent landscape. The lions who appear in every episode of the show pose the most obvious dangers. Though well trained, they still possess all the instincts of wild animals, as a frightened extra learned one day when—for some unexplained reason—Elsa broke away from her trainers and took off after him. Ever since, persons not working on a scene must stay in a closed vehicle when the cats are loose.

Other hazards abound in the tall grasses that hide puff adders, horned vipers, pythons and other poisonous snakes. Fierce Masai tribesmen who populate the area present another kind of problem. A photographer who filmed a Masai without permission barely got away with his life when the irritated warrior hurled a spear close enough to graze the man's leg.

Equally frightening are the unseen dangers of Kenya: the diseases that abound in the primitive countryside. Innoculated against cholera, typhoid, typhus, yellow fever, small pox and hepatitis, the cast and crew must also remember to take their weekly anti-malarial medication.

Despite all the hazards, however, the company has survived the first few months of shooting without any serious incidents.

'TOUCHING LOVE STORY'

Kay Lenz is up to her old tricks again. The youthful brunette who has specialized in portraying off-beat and controversial characters is once again in front of the cameras in a role that would tax the talent of any actress. Miss Lenz guests in the role of a 22-year-old retarded girl who is kidnapped and later befriended by a desperate bank robber in "The Hostage" episode of the new dramatic series, "Nakia," Saturday (Oct. 19) at 10PM on ABC. The role is, by her own admission, the most challenging she has ever played.

"When I first heard the story I thought it was just another kidnap and chase idea," she said on location in Madrid, New Mexico. "But when I read the script I realized that this was one of the most touching love stories I had ever read. I couldn't believe that it was a story being done for series television."

The young actor who plays the thief who finds love and companionship for the first time in the person of the retarded girl he has kidnapped is David Huffman, who won acclaim for his performance in the "Dangerous Age" episode of Police Story. It was a choice that met with instant approval from Kay. "I had been a fan of David's since I first saw him in the F. Scott Fitzgerald special 'The Last of the Belles.' In Nakia we found that we worked very well together which was lucky since both of our parts were demanding and we had hardly any rehearsal time. It made our work a little easier knowing that the director, Lee Philips, used to be an actor. He really understood our problems.

"This was the first time I had ever done a show where the stars of the series actually asked to have their parts cut down. But Robert Forster, Arthur Kennedy, Gloria DeHaven and Taylor Lacher simply told the producers that they wanted the show to be ours. It was a rare and special time for me."

Ever since her first major part when she played a suicidal, teenage hooker in "The Weekend Nun" for ABC's Movie of the Week, Kay has been in demand whenever there is a female part demanding more than a pretty face and attractive wardrobe. In just the past two years she has starred in four Movies of the Week; portrayed the love interest to William Holden in "Breezy" which was directed by Clint Eastwood; starred in the title role in "Lisa, Dark and Bright" for Hallmark Hall of Fame and guested in several series including The Streets of San Francisco and Cannon.

"When I first started getting nothing but off-beat parts I got scared that I might be type-cast," she said. "Now, though, I realize I have been lucky because these are the kinds of parts that really hone an actress's craft. When I get older maybe I can play some normal roles. I know that when they do come I will be better prepared to play them."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of "Family Secrets"

When did you first decide to be a writer?—A. S., Hartford, Conn.

● At five—when I saw my first "Tarzan" film! I thought it would be loads of fun to be a lady reporter and go into the dark and dangerous jungle with a man reporter. My first job was editing for a magazine where I had to rewrite other people's lurid stories (cleaning them up and toning them down). At that time sex wasn't as fashionable as it is now. My bosses felt that since I was 20, I was naïve and would therefore inject some innocence into the manuscripts. Finally I decided if I could improve the work of others, I should write under my own name.

FOR ALAN ALDA

How much are you and "Hawkeye," the character you portray on "M*A*S*H," alike?—Paula Wall, Hobbs, N.M.

● Neither of us is interested in war, and we both try to do our work as well as we can. Unlike the character, I'm a family man and I don't drink martinis (I've never had one in my life); but I do have a sense of humor that's always with me. When it's not on display, I keep it hidden—just below the surface!

FOR JEANE DIXON, seeress

I thought that you did not use your gift of prophecy for monetary gain but that you gave all remunerations to charity. Now I hear this is not true. Would you comment?—H. Tobola, Cadott, Wis.

● All the earnings from my lectures, articles and various radio and TV appearances go directly to the Children to Children Foundation. I personally do not receive one cent.

FOR JAYNE MEADOWS

Why do you wear furs and feathers when you claim to be a conservationist?—James Giarelli, Gainesville, Fla.

● The furs I wear are either fake or else minks that Steve bought me 15 years ago. Mink is not an endangered species. When I have to wear furs for a role, I make sure they're not from an endangered species. For "Love American Style," I wore the ostrich-feather coat designed by Edith Head 40 years ago for Carole Lombard, and supplied by Paramount Pictures. I'm not a hypocrite! I love all humans and animals.

FOR JOHNNY BENCH, catcher for the Cincinnati Reds

Doesn't being a catcher get pretty hard on your knees?—Taimi Crowell, Hawthorne, Calif.

● Actually, it's hard on the whole leg, not just the knees. When you get up and down that often, you really begin to feel it. That's one reason I like to play another position from time to time. It gives me a nice break from catching, and I still get to stay in the game.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON, football star

During the football strike, you said that "freedom of speech" was one of the players' demands that most concerned you. Could you explain?—Ted Davidson, Teaneck, N.J.

● Too often free speech in pro football has been a one-way street. For example, in Atlanta last year Coach Norm Van Brocklin said he would fine any player who criticized the Falcons' organization in the press. Yet he held players up to ridicule in front of media people. We want the chance to speak as freely as the people who discuss us with the media.

FOR ELIZABETH POST,
director of the Emily Post Institute

Should parents accept an invitation from their unmarried son or daughter to visit the apartment they're sharing with someone of the opposite sex?—G. B., Albany, N.Y.

● I definitely think they should. To refuse gains the parents nothing but a loss of communication and influence with their child. And, of course, "acceptance" of the invitation doesn't necessarily mean approval of the arrangement.

FOR MARY STUART, star of "Search for Tomorrow"

What episodes have you enjoyed most in "Search for Tomorrow"?—T. Valins, Pontiac, Mich.

● Two stand out. When I played a blind character and a deaf mute. It was challenging and fascinating, and it gave me enormous insight into how handicapped people live. I prefer stories in which I can become totally involved and lose my own identity. For selfish reasons, I'd love to have more of the music I write played on the show. My song, "Don't Look Back," was used on "Search," and it was very well received.

FOR ARTHUR HERZOG, author of "Swarm"

Is there a real likelihood that dangerous bees from South America are coming north, as you predict in your novel?—Tom Moore, Sacramento, Calif.

● Yes, there is. The bees are now in Brazil—they are imports from Africa and escaped there—and are coming north at about 200 miles a year. If they make it all the way to the U.S., they could be a problem, as they are very irritable and attack in swarms. But the U.S. Government is taking measures to try and keep them out.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Do you have any professional ideas on whether it's better for an adopted child to be told of his natural parents and the circumstances that led to his adoption?—A. C., Philadelphia, Pa.

● Professional opinion still indicates the child should NOT be told, because of the resultant search by the child for his biological parents and the emotional trauma that might result from it. Roger Grimsby, anchorman of ABC-TV's "Eyewitness News," is an adopted child who, despite sealed legal documents, was successful in locating his natural parents. In a recent lecture on the subject, he admitted he has been left with mixed feelings. He believes that the information should not be provided to the adoptive parents, but the child himself should be able to get it when he reaches legal age.

Famous Scandinavian Design Scissors

The Scissors that are molded to your hand

- Cushion plastic handles with contour finger grip gives you more comfort and cutting freedom than you've ever experienced before.
- Stainless steel blades
- Cut paper . . . patterns . . . fabrics with incredible ease

Some time ago those inventive Scandinavians introduced an entirely new concept in scissors. It was a scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally these scissors cost much, much more. In fact, even today you can find this design selling for $8.00 or more in fine stores. But now we've created this same design at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy"! It's got the familiar orange, cushion soft, plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8¼" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.

Johnny Cash Talks About Himself, His Music–And His "Anchor," June

Globe Photos

Johnny Cash and June Carter with their son John Carter. Johnny and June will host the CBS-TV special Country Music Award Show on October 14.

"On weekends, when I drive out the gate, sometimes there are 40 or 50 tour buses out there! They unload at the front gate and take pictures of the house. . . . I'd like to say it doesn't bother me."

Normally, country-western superstar Johnny Cash shuns interviews. And when he does consent to them, he invariably includes his wife, June Carter, or (as in this case) Rosanne Cash (Johnny's daughter) and Rosie Nix (June's daughter). The meeting was held in their New York hotel suite.

Johnny Cash seemed to be a very relaxed man, one who smiles so often he should pose for toothpaste ads. He is much younger looking and better looking in person than he seems on TV. He talked easily, giggled often and acted very much like a man who has just found the secret of how to stay happy. Like his wife June, he wears an Israeli wedding ring and, around his neck, both the Star of David and a gold cross.

FAMILY WEEKLY: What makes you happy now?

JOHNNY: Having my family with me. It really does. That's what makes me happy, and knowing that everything's all right! Of course, a man's got to enjoy his work. I really enjoy working. The girls and I come off the stage at night and we're as high as kites! We're just so happy with what we're doing. And having John Carter [Johnny's youngest son, age four] with us makes us all feel better. He's here today, playing out in the park.

FW: Music seems to be kind of a way of life with you.

JOHNNY: It always has been. The girls both inherited a legacy of music I suppose, especially Rosie. Music in this family goes back to 1927, when her grandmother, Maybelle Carter, first started recording. June, Rosie's mother, has been onstage since she was six. I've been at it for 20 years. All Rosanne has ever known is her daddy as an entertainer and performer. I guess she wouldn't know what it was like to have a daddy who lived a normal life and worked at a regular job.

FW: Then music has always been part of your family?

JOHNNY: It's a binding kind of thing because we feel a closeness when we're singing that nobody could feel any other way. It's like we're sharing a song together. And the song is coming from each one of us, but it's coming from all of us as well. It's like a marriage out there. We're all one!

FW: How do you explain the growing interest in country-and-western music?

JOHNNY: In many ways, country and western has grown up. It's appealing to a lot more people. It's meshing and merging in a lot of ways without losing any of its originality, pureness and simplicity of form. At the same time, which is a strange thing, people like Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings and guys like that are calling their music "hard country rock" or "hard country." Waylon Jennings is kind of like an outlaw in country and western. In many ways, he's like me. I've never really been quite orthodox country. I've done it according to feel. And that's the way a lot of people like Waylon are doing it. There's honesty in his performance and delivery. He doesn't compromise the way he feels just to please a certain group of peole. He is himself. But it's not all a bed of roses family-wise. Life on the road is very stimulating and exciting. It's a great life, living in a nice hotel like this and playing a beautiful place like the Music Theater. But when we get home, then the tough part starts. It's hard for a 42-year-old man to understand a 16-year-old or a 19-year-old girl! When we go home, there's a lot of pressure that builds up. Things are waiting for us to come home and take care of.

FW: But isn't home the only place you can really relax?

JOHNNY: It's the only place you can't relax unless you stay home three or four weeks. Then you can adjust to the change of pace. But you need time to separate the entertainment world and the home world. We haven't found that time.

FW: Do you find when you travel together as a family that you're so glad to be with each other that you don't need other people around?

JOHNNY: That's certainly not true with the girls. June and I are fairly exclusive. For example, when we finish a concert, we always have an invitation to go to a club or hear another entertainer. We rarely do it. If we could, we would put on wigs and glasses and go sit in the audience like everybody else. That would be great! We did that once.

FW: Would you like to be a bum and just go out there and do what you want to?

JOHNNY: Secretly, maybe I would! I have a blond wig and glasses. June put hers on one time, too, and the two of us went to see the Carter Family and sat right in the front row and nobody knew us. It was great fun. I guess there's a little bit of that in all of us, when we'd like to be just a face in the crowd.

FW: How do you relax?

ROSANNE: He goes off with John Carter mostly, fishing.

JOHNNY: I enjoy John Carter. I relax a lot with him. And I love to go to movies! Do you know what I like? I like children's movies! I looked in The New York Times and saw what movies were showing here for children. I saw "The Song of the South" was playing again. I'd like to go see that again. I took John Carter to see "Herbie Rides Again." That's the last movie I've seen. Do you know what I enjoy about it? The children! I enjoy the laughter and applause of children. I really get a kick out of that. I don't know if you saw it, but I really loved the scene when that Volkswagen ran up the side of that building and jumped across the river! All those kids were jumping and screaming and laughing!

FW: Have your exposure on TV and frequent public appearances robbed you of your privacy?

JOHNNY: Sometimes I resent the

One of the "little old ladies" who uses Silk & Silver.*

Eighth in a series:

She's Betty King Barker, industrial designer who can list among her credits 4 careers, 3 grandchildren, 2 sons, and 1 husband. She also manages to find time for tennis, golf and looking after her good looks. To keep her silvery hair bright and beautiful, she uses Silk & Silver, Clairol's long lasting color lotion in Silvery Pearl* #14.

"So easy," says Mrs. Barker, "I just shampoo it in every few weeks – it colors away the yellow, adds lots of body and wonderfully rich deep color." And it has no peroxide.

Mr. Barker approves. "Gray hair looks so young on Betty."

Precious 24K Gold, married to pure .999 Silver by an extraordinary advance in Gold Metallurgy.

12 Great Americans 1776-1976.

(UNITED STATES CITIZENS ARE LEGALLY ALLOWED TO OWN GOLD AND SILVER IN THIS FORM.)

As our great country approaches its second centennial. The Letcher Mint proudly presents a limited edition of intricately crafted commemorative medals...unique in all the world:

For more than four years research has been conducted in the laboratories of The Letcher Mint, drawing heavily on the latest space-age developments in the forming of precious metals.

As a result of these painstaking efforts by the craftsmen and technicians of the west's largest private mint, we now can create a single amazing piece of metal—with pure 24 K gold and the purest silver obtainable (99.9% silver) permanently combined to form a collector's item of exceptional rarity and beauty. This is not gold plating or common "gold on silver" —but an entirely new and revolutionary process.

A Treasury of Americana

In the relatively short span of time between 1776 and 1976 the ideas and deeds of these great men helped make America the most influential country in the world.

George Washington
Benjamin Franklin
John Paul Jones
Alexander Hamilton
Abraham Lincoln
Robert E. Lee
Mark Twain
Thomas A. Edison
Theodore Roosevelt
Charles A. Lindbergh
Dwight D. Eisenhower
John F. Kennedy

Now at a time when world events rush forward at breathtaking speed, the wise collector and novice alike have a rare opportunity. That of owning a series of precious medals of both historic significance and true intrinsic worth.

Sculptured by Boris Buzan

One of America's greatest contemporary sculptors — Boris Buzan was honored by the prestigious Society of Medalists in 1969 for his Apollo 11 design. Having recently completed his Signers of the Declaration of Independence series, Mr. Buzan is devoting himself to sculpturing the Great Americans series for The Letcher Mint.

Enduring Value

As the cost of gold and silver on world markets spirals inexorably upward, there could be no wiser choice for the collector than a purchase of pure gold and pure silver medals and coins. For here truly is a commodity whose value is timeless and virtually indestructible.

Each piece in this distinguished series measures a full 39mm (1.53") in diameter. The obverse side depicts each of 12 Great Americans sculptured in brilliant pure gold (24 K). The mirror-like, pure silver background is finely detailed with illustrations individually designed for each of the 12 medals. The reverse dies are exquisitely engraved with fascinating biographical details in raised, frosted lettering, against the gleaming, pure silver background. And each piece contains a total of 5 grains of pure 24 K gold and 370 grains of pure .999 silver (more pure than sterling).

Limited Edition

In honor of the 200th anniversary of the American Revolution, 9,800 sets of Great Americans medals will be struck. 5,000 of these have been reserved for existing Letcher Mint collectors, leaving only 4,800 available to the public at large, on a first come, first served basis. No other sets will be struck and the dies will be destroyed, insuring the rarity of the series and its value to the collector.

Price Guarantee

The Great Americans series will be issued at the approximate rate of one medal per month. And the issue price of $30 per piece will be maintained regardless of increases in the prices of gold and silver on world markets during the life of your series. This offer will expire December 30, 1974.

Please complete the order form below and each medal will be sent to you postpaid via insured mail, in its own case. You will be notified monthly as each medal is struck. What's more, when the order for your fourth medal is confirmed, you will be sent prepaid, a luxurious presentation case with lock and key, to house your entire collection.

Save $30

Charge to your credit card number or send a check for $330 with your application, you will receive prepaid, all 12 medals and the beautiful presentation case without additional invoices or effort (you save $30).

We believe that this extraordinary series will become one of your most valued possessions. If after viewing your first medal you do not agree, just return it within 10 days for a full refund. After that you may discontinue your subscription at any time with no further obligation.

knocks on the door. A lot of people just come walking up to our house—even at night. Of course, we have a guard, and the alarm system is always working. There's no way anybody could break in. But people come. A songwriter or somebody from a charity organization who thinks he needs my help. They knock on my door late at night and want to talk to me. Invariably, I say, "I'm sorry! I don't take care of business at home. You'll have to see somebody in my office tomorrow." I try to handle it as politely as I can.

FW: What steps do you take to insure your privacy?

JOHNNY: I lock the door or tell the guard I'm not at home or I don't want to see anybody unless it's an emergency. Or I go to my back room, stay in there and sleep or read by myself. I don't think I've done it more than twice in my life, but I can if I want to! On weekends, when I drive out the gate, sometimes there are 40 or 50 tour buses out there! They unload at the front gate and take pictures of the house. The bus goes up to the end of the street, turns around and comes back and picks up the people.

FW: Does that bug you?

JOHNNY: There are times when there might be 400 or 500 people standing out in front of my house! I'd like to say it doesn't bother me. Sometimes—and usually it's when I'm in a hurry—I hit that driveway and there are 300 people blocking the car! For pictures and autographs. It's taken a lot of wisdom and prayer to know how to handle it.

FW: How does June help you in this?

JOHNNY: She is a solid rock! She'll stop and talk to those people.

ROSIE: She'll give them her life story. And stand there and chat with them and give them recipes.

JOHNNY: I tell you, she has been the human anchor that God gave me to hold on to through those kinds of things. And I'm pretty hard on her. Sometimes when people want to talk or ask a question, I turn to her and let her answer it. June is a very strong person spiritually. No matter what the crisis is, she'll always stop me cold with a smile! She'll say, "Now raise your right hand and reach up for some strength!" Sometimes, if it's really a crisis, I'll say, "Don't bug me!" And I'll refuse to raise my hand! But she'll just keep looking at me and keep smiling. And she'll stick her hand up there higher and higher until finally I'll have to do it too!

SMART SHOPPERS TAKE NOTE!

Since September 8, consumers are finding more precise "open dating" information on packaged meat and poultry to assist them in determining the freshness of these products. Specifically, meat and poultry, which are calendar-dated, are now also carrying an explanation of what the date means.

Under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's newly amended regulations, the calendar date will have to be identified as a "packing date" "sell by date" or "use before date."

Hopefully, the new regulations will provide consumers with more information on the freshness of meat and poultry products.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

How Much Do You Know About (Grrrrrrr!) Hostility?

True or False: Most people feel there is no excuse for husbands and wives throwing things or slapping each other.
(See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If you are in a happy mood when confronted by someone who is angry with you, his hostility will gradually diminish.

2. If you happen to offend someone for whom you've done a favor, he is much less likely to explode with verbal or physical violence.

3. If a person is frustrated, a good way to keep him from blowing his top is to sympathize with him.

4. Most people feel there is no excuse for husbands and wives throwing things or slapping each other.

5. A chief reason why two people become hostile toward each other is that they have different types of brain rhythm.

ANSWERS

1. False. Studies show that your happy mood is likely to arouse more hostility and increase the chance of a violent altercation. Conversely, if you are in a depressed mood, this will have a cooling effect on the other person's anger.

2. False. Studies at the University of Pennsylvania have demonstrated that when a person offends someone he has helped, it makes the other person much angrier and "results in greater retaliation."

3. False. According to studies at the University of Alberta (Canada). It was found that sympathy actually elicited more aggression under frustration conditions.

4. True. A survey of more than a thousand adults showed that only 20 percent could easily visualize situations where they could fully approve of a husband slapping his wife's face. A somewhat higher percentage said they could imagine circumstances where a wife would be justified in letting her husband have a hard one right across the chops. But less than four percent could imagine situations in which they felt more extreme forms of marital mayhem would be justified.

5. True. Studies conducted by Dr. W. Grey Walter of the Burden Neurological Institute (Great Britain) have shown that if one person is a visual thinker (one who thinks in practical, down-to-earth terms) and another is an abstract thinker (theoretical as opposed to realistic or literal), neither understands the other, and a mutual hostility tends to build up almost immediately. "The antagonism between visual and abstract thinkers can cause an irrational rupture of communications among scientists, politicians, administrators, diplomats, and even married couples." The two antagonists may think they are speaking the same language, but they are not. Their brain rhythms, their mental faculties, function in diametrically opposite ways.

How to create professional-looking handcrafts like these "from scratch"

THE FAMILY CREATIVE WORKSHOP

A new library of craft projects

Published by Plenary Publications International, Inc.
Recommended by TIME-LIFE BOOKS

In all probability, you've enough materials in your home right now to plant a winejug terrarium, braid a colorful rug, block-print some handsome stationery, create ceramics you bake in your oven.

So why pay high prices for things you can create for yourself?

Let The Family Creative Workshop, a new craft encyclopedia, help you discover the personal satisfaction of making professional-looking crafts "from scratch."

Over 900 activities to choose from in alphabetically arranged volumes, are all the crafts you ever wanted to try and more! From tapestry to tie-dying, pottery to plastics. From things as simple as a paper airplane to things as complicated as building a kayak or a greenhouse.

Every member of your family will find a project to enjoy. Perhaps Dad would like to build a specialized birdhouse, or a simple concrete birdbath that costs practically nothing. Turn on a teenager by showing him how to make a free spirit out of an old car with a rainbow acrylic paint job...for less than the cost of a retread. Children will be fascinated (and learn ecology, too) from a mason-jar ant farm. Mom will love making placemats, colonial candles, luxurious strawberry soap, batik wall hangings.

Build your craft skills

You learn any of the over 200 basic craft skills by following step-by-step instructions for the variety of project ideas offered in each. Choose the ones that fit your time schedule, budget, degree of skill. There are symbols at the beginning of each project to guide you. The first project is usually a simple, quick, low-cost "starter" idea.

Each project has been designed by a highly regarded expert in the field, is explained with step-by-step directions, diagrams and photographs that show you exactly what to do. Follow them, and the professional look of your handcraft is assured.

Hours of fun and you save money too!

You can literally save hundreds of dollars by making your own lamps, rugs, pottery, gifts, turning garage-sale bargains into handsome "antiques." Or you can make money for your favorite charity by donating your crafts for sale.

The Strange Way We Groom Ourselves for Failure

By Allan J. Cox

Diana Bryant

"Courage to risk failure is what leads to success," says Allan J. Cox.

"It is always easier to blame others for some personal disappointment or problem rather than see how our own negative attitude guaranteed the occurrence."

Wise men have known for a long time that if you can change a person's expectations you can change his behavior. However, although we know this, we do not always make proper use of this important wisdom in our daily lives.

Perhaps it is because we have been burned by leaders who have misused—or, at the very least, misunderstood—the powerful tool of inspiration. Unfortunately, inspiration has been used more often than not to manipulate others for self-serving ends rather than for their own fulfillment. The lesson from political life is clear: Rash promises and the call to new hope among dispirited people lead to even greater depression and apathy when those promises go unfilled and those hopes are proved unjustified.

However, I think there are deeper reasons for our not being comfortable with the notion that by changing our expectations we can change our behavior. And I think the discomfort stems from knowing that this makes each of us responsible for the outcome of his life. It is always easier to blame others for some personal disappointment or problem rather than see how our own negative attitude guaranteed the occurrence.

At work, we see this harmful principle operating daily. For example, a subordinate has an idea with real merit, but he is sure the boss won't like it, so he never presents it. Or even if he does, his presentation is so lacking in verve that the boss is hard-pressed to take his attention away from his other duties to give the idea the consideration it deserves.

What purpose is served for the subordinate who has set up his failure with such low expectations and a consequent unenergetic performance? Is it that he can now comfort himself by blaming his "closed-minded" boss for prohibiting what surely would have led to a stellar outcome? I think so.

To one extent or another, I believe we all trip ourselves up this way. Without being aware of it, we use low expectations to get ourselves off the hook. By assuming a lack of cooperation on the part of others, we guarantee their uncooperativeness and our nonparticipation in an activity in which we would be expected to make a contribution. In this round robin, we excuse ourselves from an activity where we question our ability to perform and save face by blaming someone else for thwarting our ambitions. What we hide from ourselves, of course, is our ambition to be the star and our fear that we will never make it.

"What purpose is served for the subordinate who has set up his failure with such low expectations and a consequent unenergetic performance? Is it that he can now comfort himself by blaming his 'closed-minded' boss for prohibiting what surely would have led to a stellar outcome? I think so."

How does one break this self-limiting cycle? How does one meet a challenge on positive ground? How does one adopt a positive view of what he is, what the circumstances are and what he can accomplish? In short, how does one raise his expectations?

By not being afraid of making a mistake. Courage to risk failure is what leads to success. Self-confidence comes by taking risks where the outcome is no more than the fruition of what you truly believe can be accomplished. And remember, even when you make a mistake, that doesn't mean you are one!

LARRY MAHAN
A card-carrying cowboy

QUOTE: From Larry Mahan, six-time All Around Cowboy in rodeos and star of the rodeo documentary, "The New American Cowboy": "I've ridden over 6,000 animals in my career. I figured out that last year I was bucked off saddle broncs two times and, out of 130 to 150 bulls I rode, I was bucked off 30 percent of the time. I don't know how many times I've been stepped on, crushed or kicked. The cowboy is just as tough as he used to be, but he's had to organize to better himself. We've established card-carrying members of the Rodeo Cowboys Association because we get ripped off just like any other participants in spectator sports. The grounds owner can make $100,000 off us, so we're just trying to get a percentage of the gate. Top cowboys can win $60,000 a year while others only win $600 a month—we don't get a cent for just being there. If you don't place within the top four of a category, you don't make any money." UNQUOTE.

Steven Stills of the recently reunited rock group Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young: "I like playing music with these guys. It's a social event. I never wanted to be only the main guy. It's fun, subjective, or whatever, because we're old friends. We're playing new music, and it's fun to enjoy each other. We realized why we fell apart—our size of popularity—and this time we tried to be sensible, plan for it, grow up a little. I mean it's staggering when you face 60,000 people—you grow out of your skin. You'd have to be a cold man not to be affected by that much energy. It's also expensive on the person to travel on the road; you're tired; it eats on your energy level. I want to go home. I miss my son. He was born in the spring and I want to see him."

Steven Stills

JENNIE AND CRAIG
A cry of joy

Mother Jennie Thomson is delighted with her very ordinary baby boy, Craig, because she was such an extraordinary baby. When born 20 years ago, Jennie had a serious heart condition that forced her to live as an invalid in a hospital for the first six years of her life. Finally doctors were able to perform a revolutionary operation in which they inserted plastic plates in her heart. Since then she has been able to lead a normal, full life. Marriage, however, brought with it the fear that any children she might have might inherit the same heart affliction. Fortunately that was not the case. Every time Craig gives a hearty, healthy cry, Jennie breaks into a wide smile.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

CURBING MY TEMPER

My wife insists that I re-park
To get two car lengths nearer.
I do so, though I grump a bit
And check my rearview mirror.

In front and back, where first I parked,
The space was really spacious,
But now, as I work wheel and brake,
I must be skilled, sagacious.

Yet when it's done I'm rather proud
And of my deed I'm talking.
My wife? She's spared her shoes and feet
A full two car lengths walking.

A long-haired youth was getting his first haircut in a year and was alarmed to see the barber wave a large magnet over his head. "Don't worry," assured the barber, "it's not a new treatment. I'm just trying to find my scissors."
—Dorothea Kent

A lady complained to a pet-store owner, "You told me this cat wasn't finicky, but I can't get him to eat." The owner said, "I meant about what he drags in." —Robert Brault

DOOLEY'S WORLD by Roger Bradfield

Hal Kaufman's JUMOR WHIRL®

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Radiator is missing. 2. Bedboard is different. 3. Tissue box is missing. 4. Book is missing. 5. Bottle is missing. 6. Arm is different.

YOU CAN pretend you are a magician and have lots of fun with this magic-like math trick. Practice it a bit and you'll be ready to give your friends a surprise.

The magician writes the number 12345679 (note omission of 8) on a blackboard or a sheet of paper. He tells his audience that this is a magic number, and indeed it is. He next asks someone in the crowd to name his favorite number between 1 and 9. The performer multiplies this number by 9 and the result by the magic number.

Alakazam! The result is the selectee's favorite number repeated nine times.

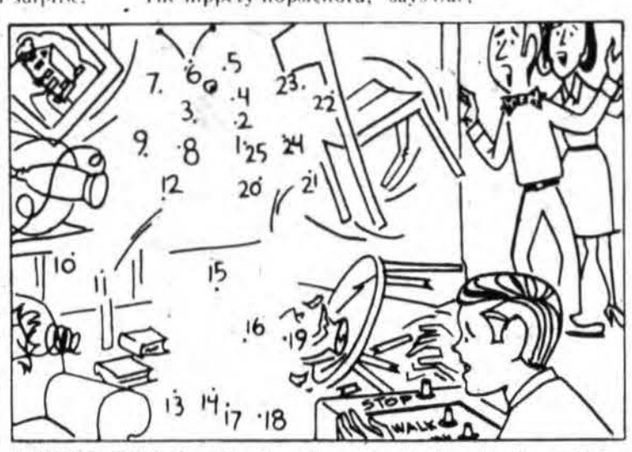

It will work with any number between 1 and 9. Amazing!

BULLETIN BOARD

  If he's living, he can't be buried anywhere.
- Follow directions: 1. Remove a bird and a fish remains: WCROEDN. 2. Remove a pest and a flower remains: RBOUSGE.

  1. Wren, cod. 2. Bug, rose.
- Sue Milliman, of Syracuse, N.Y., asks: "Which musical instrument is played by a bunny?" Give up? "The hippety-hopsichord," says Sue.
