CELLA AIDES BROKE, SEEK PUBLIC LAWYERS

Sex-for-hire Rap Hits Solon

Public Defense?

Cella's Aides Plead Poverty

By TOM BARLEY

Two of Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr.'s three codefendants may be represented by the public defender's office when their Orange County Superior Court trial gets under way in October.

Or they may be able to retain the lawyers who unsuccessfully represented them in a recent federal court trial with the expected substantial legal tab being picked up by the taxpayers.

Those alternatives will face Judge William C. Speirs Friday when he is asked by lawyers for Theodore Schiffman, 53, of Santa Ana and Stephen Robert Evans, 31, of Mission Viejo to allow them to withdraw from the case.

The motion is being opposed by the district attorney's office on the grounds that the prosecution is not satisfied that either of the two men qualifies for the indigent status that would allow Judge Speirs to grant the motion.

The two men are named with Cella, 51, and George Louis Olenford, 44, of Laguna Beach, as defendants in a Grand Jury indictment that lists 127 felony counts against the four men.

It is alleged that they siphoned an estimated $2 million in funds from two Orange County hospitals under Dr. Cella's control—Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital, Santa Ana.

All four defendants face sentencing July 19 in Los Angeles federal court following their conviction there last month on charges of Medicare fraud, check fraud and conspiracy.

Attorneys James Riddet and Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.

Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed, in effect, by their legal advisors.

Two Masked Bandits Rob Bank in HB

Two bandits wearing women's stockings over their faces fled with $2,115 in cash after holding up a Huntington Beach bank this morning.

The two walked into Pacific City Bank, 9104 Adams Ave., at 8:12 a.m., pulled a handgun and took the cash from teller drawers, police said.

The bandits ordered bank employees to lie on the floor and then fled, police reported. No car was seen, officers said.

One of the men was described as about six feet tall with brown hair and a beard showing through his stocking mask.

No description was available for the other man, who served as look-out during the incident, police said. There were no customers inside when the robbery occurred.

WANT TO BUY COAST TOWN?

HARMONY (AP) — This tiny California seacoast town has a new sign: For sale.

The owner, Fred Field, says he located 13 miles south of the Hearst Castle at San Simeon.

The town, which has no permanent residents, consists of a post office, blacksmith shop, restaurant and pottery shop.

Child Saved By Donation Of HB Family

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL

A little girl, 8, who will never meet her benefactor's family, has a chance for life today because of the tragic death 11 days ago of a young mother who formerly lived in Huntington Beach.

Relatives of traffic victim Kathryn Ann (Ray) Luedke, 19, authorized donation of her kidneys and eyes for possible organ transplantation if they were undamaged by the car crash that claimed her life.

Today, Mrs. Robert Rumbley, her mother, of 9372 Hyannis Port Drive, Huntington Beach, says a Los Angeles girl under kidney dialysis treatment for three years has received them.

"We'll never know who she is..." Mrs. Rumbley remarked, adding that she wishes to meet the family and express her own gratitude.

Transplant recipients are never identified to donors.

She also says she can understand how grateful that

Manslaughter Child Killer Guilty On Reduced Charge

Patrick Randall Hebert of Huntington Beach was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter late Wednesday in an Orange County Superior Court ruling that sent prosecutor Frank Briseno striding from the courtroom in anger.

Judge William S. Lee reached that verdict after a nonjury trial in which Hebert repeatedly argued that Hebert was clearly guilty of inflicting fatal injuries on Delta Dawn Davidson, 2.

The deputy district attorney vainly pointed out Wednesday that Hebert, 24, of 17441 Koledo Lane, had abused the child on at least one occasion prior to her death last Feb. 18 from what police alleged was a severe beating.

But Deputy Public Defender John Allen successfully argued that there had been no evidence in the trial to refute the defense theory that Delta Dawn suffered her injuries when she fell in the bathroom and struck her head on

A physician called by the defense testified that many of the injuries later photographed on the child's body could have been caused by such an incident.

Mrs. Betty Davidson, the victim's mother, testified that the injuries suffered by her daughter were inflicted during her absence from the apartment she shared with Hebert.

Mrs. Davidson said she was not aware that the child was ill until later that night when she heard choking sounds coming from her daughter's bedroom.

Delta Dawn died less than an hour later in a local hospital. Mrs. Davidson's first action on learning of the death of the child was to order Hebert to immediately leave her home.

Hebert will be sentenced July 28 to what could be a state prison term of up to 15 years or a county

Swimmer Dies

SONORA (AP) — A Santa Cruz teen-ager died Wednesday at a hospital here where he was taken after nearly drowning on Laguna Lake.

Thomas Zuckswert, 16, sank after jumping from a boat at Pinecrest Lake and trying unsuccessfully to swim 20 feet to shore, Tuolumne County sheriff's office reported.

Medics' Van On Toro Run Hit, Damaged

A paramedic van from the Laguna Hills fire station was wrecked Tuesday when it was hit by a car while rushing to the aid of an El Toro heart attack victim.

Although the van turned turtle and slid several yards on its roof, none of the three paramedics inside was injured. They were identified as Capt. Mark Hawkins, Eng. Tommy Pawloski and Mark Bodenbender, a trainee from Huntington Beach.

California Highway Patrol Officer H.B. Gillespie said the unit was eastbound on El Toro Road with sirens blaring and lights flashing.

The intersection at Muirlands Boulevard was blocked by traffic so the unit crossed over into the clear westbound lanes, he said. It started to turn right in front of the stopped cars to go south on Muirlands.

But Gillespie said it was struck in the rear by another eastbound vehicle reportedly driven by a 17-year-old Santa Ana youth whose identity was withheld.

After the impact, the van rolled over and slid down Muirlands.

Decoy Hookers Testify

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two $432-an-hour police decoy prostitutes have told a City Court judge that Rep. Allan T. Howe (D-Utah), offered them $20 for specific sex acts before he was arrested last month on a misdemeanor sex charge.

Dressed in casual pants, sandals and a see-through blouse, Margaret Hamblin covered her face Wednesday in apparent embarrassment when asked what the freshman congressman wanted her to do.

Chief City Prosecutor Phillip Palmer said she didn't have to use the exact language and asked whether Howe proposed sexual acts.

"Yes, he did," she told a hearing on motions to dismiss the charge against Howe of soliciting sex acts for hire.

Her written police report had quoted Howe as using explicit language for the acts.

Trial on the charge was postponed one week to July 19 because of the complexity of motions filed by the defense.

Kathleen Taylor, questioned by defense attorney Dean Mitchell, said she wore "Levis and a top" the night of the arrest. She was dressed similarly in court.

She said Miss Hamblin did all the talking when Howe approached in his car.

Asked who first mentioned a price for a sex act, Mrs. Taylor said, "Mr. Howe," glancing at the congressman.

Donors' Subterfuge

Campaign Gifts in Name of Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adult donors to political campaigns can use their children to circumvent legal limits on presidential campaign gifts, the Wall Street Journal said today. The newspaper conducted a random telephone poll of Democratic and Republican campaign donors and said it found that a few of them are as young as 5. One example it cited was from Long Beach. There was no indication how many child donors there are. Parents say the giving is legal because their children's donations come from the youngsters' own money and that the children are asked whether they want to contribute, the newspaper said. Still, political giving in the name of children could easily become a subterfuge, the Journal said. Federal law prohibits an individual from giving more than $1,000 per campaign to any one federal candidate. It also prohibits individuals from making donations in the name of another person.

David Fiske, a spokesman for the Federal Election Commission, told the Journal regulations are being drafted to prevent using children to evade donor limits. Fiske said the commission intends to require that gifts by donors under 18 must be made knowingly and voluntarily from a fund owned or controlled by the minor.

Judging from the telephone poll, Democrat Jimmy Carter "appears to have by far the biggest kiddie corps" of donors, the Journal said.

It said Francis Hertzog Jr., identified as an ophthalmologist from Long Beach and an old Carter friend, had given the legal limit of $1,000 to Carter more than a year ago. Seven of Hertzog's children also were listed for donations totaling $6,000 more, including $785 from Kate, 5, and another $785 from Lars, 7, the newspaper said.

The paper quoted Hertzog as saying all the children's donations came from trust funds established for them years earlier.

"They were all asked whether they wanted to contribute," he was quoted as saying. "It's all the kids' own money, not mine."

The newspaper said Carter's campaign treasurer, R. J. Lipshutz, has six children who have all given money to Carter, "but their father emphasizes that they have given their own money."

On the Republican side, the newspaper said it found that one $1,000 donation to Ronald Reagan came from 16-year-old Joe Bennett of Harlan, Ky.

"What? Me? Political contributions?" the newspaper quoted young Bennett as saying. "You'll have to ask my dad about that. He handles all that stuff for me."

The father, Clyde Bennett, was quoted as saying, "All my family has their own money."

The newspaper said that elder Bennett arranged a total of 10 gifts to the Reagan campaign of $1,000 each from his sons, daughter, in-laws and others.

courtroom with his wife, Marlene. The decoys acknowledged that Miss Hamblin was first to bring up money. They said she asked what Howe would pay, quoting him as saying, "I usually go about $20."

She said they asked if he wanted to pay that much and that he agreed.

The decoys, appearing in public for the first time since Howe was arrested June 12, were called during arguments on a defense motion to dismiss on grounds the congressman was a victim of entrapment.

Howe, who is running for reelection in Utah's 2nd District, acknowledged talking with the decoys but denies the charge. He said he was lured to the area with an invitation to a political social.

The decoys' testimony repeated details of a transcribed dialogue released by police shortly after Howe's arrest, although both women said the conversation had not been recorded or monitored.

Entrapment is one of five grounds on which Mitchell is asking dismissal of the case. Judge Raymond Uno took three of the motions under advisement and asked for a hearing Monday on two others, which are based on pretrial publicity and allegations of prosecutorial misconduct.

Bomb-injured Teen Shows Improvement

A Huntington Beach teenager critically injured when a homemade bomb blew a drill bit into his brain is reportedly rallying today, after his condition worsened Wednesday.

Kerry Snyder, 17, of 6062 Stone Ave., was listed in guarded condition after being placed under critical care at one point Wednesday, spokesmen at Huntington Intercommunity Hospital said.

Investigators theorize he was trying to drill a hole for a fuse in a length of pipe packed with explosives when it detonated Saturday in a backyard shed.

They said either a spark from the drill that disintegrated, sending the bit knifing into his skull, or heat from its friction caused the explosion

Final Solution

Author Says Ripper a Trio

LONDON (AP) — Jack the Ripper was actually three men engaged in a political coverup operation, a book published today says.

Jack the Ripper is the name given to the unfound slayer of young women in London's West End in 1888.

Stephen Knight, in the latest of a string of theories put forth about the case, says the murders were committed not by one man, but by three.

He maintains the three included Queen Victoria's physician, a painter and a coachman.

According to his book "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," the three killed four women because they knew of the secret marriage of a Roman Catholic commoner to the queen's grandson, which the prime minister feared would lead to scandal. The account says one other woman was killed because of a mistake in identity.

INDIGENT. Both men and Olendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.

Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddler and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two inditees.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

His Client Little Uptight

EL MONTE (AP) — Masaru Hisamune, a Los Angeles County probation officer, was put at a definite disadvantage when one of his probationers arrived at his office for an unexpected meeting.

The probationer came in Wednesday carrying a four-foot medieval broadsword and a loaded shotgun, which he pointed at a surprised Hisamune, reported El Monte police.

But Hisamune quickly knocked the shotgun aside, deflecting a blast into the ceiling, and wrestled the man to the floor, police said. He held his assailant pinned until El Monte police arrived.

Mondale Pondered

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter conferred today with Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, the latest of a half-dozen possible running mates expected to make the pilgrimage to Plains.

"I'm very pleased to be invited to meet and talk in Plains with the next president of the United States," Mondale said.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Mondale and his wife, Joan, outside their home before the meeting started.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was to arrive later in the day for an interview.

officials at the scene. Although the damage to the $14,000 vehicle was still being assessed today, Toussaint said he thought the loss would be total. The van also carried equipment valued at about $18,000.

A relief unit was brought to the scene, equipped and in service by 4 p.m., about two hours after the accident and there were no calls while the paramedics were out of service.

A department spokesman said Hawkins crawled out of the overturned van and told an engine company accompanying the paramedics unit to continue on to help the heart attack victim.

That person today was reportedly in stable condition at Mission Community Hospital.

No citations were issued at the scene but officers said the investigation would continue.

While fire officials and photographers milled around the overturned van, people from nearby businesses and residences gathered on the sidewalks to see what had happened. One passing car crunched into another, causing minor damage to both cars.

child's mother must be, yet she can well comprehend the awkward emotional position a potential transplant recipient's parents must confront.

"The little girl has been on the kidney machine for three years and all of a sudden a pair of kidneys are available to fit her," Mrs. Rumbley said.

"You want your own little girl to live," she adds, "but you can't want someone else to die."

"I think everyone should consider organ donation," Mrs. Rumbley added, hoping her daughter's death would remind others who might confront a tragic loss in the family.

Ironically, Mrs. Luedke succumbed in Fountain Valley Community Hospital just two days before a new law went into effect allowing motorists to authorize organ transplants in advance for themselves in event of sudden death.

Forms may be obtained at the Department of Motor Vehicles with stickers that attach to the volunteer's driver's license, one of the first items checked by authorities.

Sometimes, even a short delay in such cases renders the organs unusable.

"I think everyone should be aware of this," says Mrs. Luedke, adding the family suggests memorial contributions to the Kidney Foundation in Katherine's name.

A resident of Northridge, Mrs. Luedke was fatally crushed and her infant son Daniel, 10 months, was injured when their car hit a power pole guywire and flipped on Ward Street near Indianapolis Avenue. They were visiting the Rumbley home.

She attended Wardlow Elementary School but the family moved to the San Fernando Valley in her freshman year at Edison High School.

Services were held at Smith's Mortuary in Huntington Beach, with interment at Forest Lawn.

Survivors include her husband, Rodney; her mother and stepfather; her father, Billy W. Ray, of Sepulveda; a brother, Thomas, of the home; sisters Mrs. Carolyn Wingfield, of Denver, Colo., and Jeanene, and Cheryl, of the home.

Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ford, of Wilmington, Del., and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. V. D. Benedict, of Hemet.

Doctor Says Stress Cracked Fusselman

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A psychiatrist has compared the pressures on Daniel Alvin Fusselman's mental processes moments before he murdered his two small children to the pressure imposed on an earthen dam seconds before it cracks and collapses.

"He was definitely psychotic at that point," Dr. Donald W. Verin told an Orange County Superior Court Jury Wednesday. "He had lost all contact with reality."

The defense witness testified that when he talked to Fusselman, 52, for the first time four years ago the defendant could not recall that he had used a frying pan and kitchen knife to end the lives of his children on March 19, 1972.

And Dr. Verin made it clear in his testimony that he held Fusselman's wife to blame for actions that triggered Fusselman's mental condition on the night that his children Daniel, 5, and Danielle, 3 died in their beds.

Fusselman was found guilty on two counts of first degree murder following his first trial in Kern County Superior Court and sentenced to life in prison on each count.

The conviction was reversed by an appellate court when it was successfully argued by the defense that the trial judge improperly instructed the jury at the end of the first trial.

It was later decided that heavy publicity in Fusselman's home city of Bakersfield justified the defense demand for a change of venue. Orange County was selected.

Backing the defense argument that Fusselman was temporarily insane when he slashed his children's throats, Dr. Verin testified that Mrs. Fusselman's decision to divorce her husband and keep the couple's entire community property and the two children was a major factor in Fusselman's breakdown.

Dr. Verin told the jury that on the night Fusselman stayed with his children—he believed it to be the last night he would ever see them—and found that his wife never reported for night shift duty at the Bakersfield restaurant where she was employed.

Both his children had told him that their mother was running around with two men, the witness said. "They also told him that their mother had warned them she would beat them if they told their father."

Adding to Fusselman's mounting emotions, the witness said, were telephone calls from a mysterious woman who may have been the wife of one of the two men reportedly dating Mrs. Fusselman.

Dr. Verin said Fusselman got such a call at his wife's home while his children were sleeping on the night of the murders.

"She told him that he had been suckered again by his wife in the divorce action and that he could never see his children again even if he wanted to," the witness testified.

"Then he had a few beers," Dr. Verin said. "And that may have been the final straw in a mental condition that was rapidly deteriorating."

Dr. Verin said Fusselman, 52, found his wife's golf clubs and bent them all and then took a knife to destroy every individual item of his wife's clothing and slashed furniture throughout the home.

The witness said Fusselman then slept, had more beer and coffee when he awoke and went to the kitchen for a knife and a frying pan.

The defense does not dispute the allegation that Fusselman killed the children.

"He didn't mean to kill them," the doctor said while Fusselman quietly nodded at the counsel table. "Mr. Fusselman was not capable of forming the intent to kill."

Officially, the ruling issued last week was suspended pending research by lawyers to determine whether Title IX of the Civil Rights Act is violated by such events.

Nessen said that if it is found that the law is being violated, Ford would immediately send legislation to Congress to change the law.

The National Organization for Women took opposition to Ford's stand.

Dividing the sexes for school-sponsored fashion shows, softball games, banquets and breakfasts is a tradition in many communities.

Other opponents argue such affairs are unfair to children with only one parent.

Ford phoned HEW Secretary David Mathews and "expressed displeasure at the ruling," said Nessen.

The President advised the secretary that he cannot believe that it was the intent of Congress to prohibit mother-daughter or father-son events at schools.

"His main objection was that some lawyer or bureaucrat at HEW ought not to be handing down these rulings interfering with family-oriented, traditional American events," Nessen said.

NOW Raps Single-sex Functions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal ban on school-sponsored mother-daughter and father-son events irritated President Ford so much that he ordered it rescinded. But a women's group says such functions perpetuate sexual stereotypes and should be eliminated.

Ford ordered a study to determine if single-sex social events violate federal sex discrimination laws, as alleged by the civil rights office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Wednesday that Ford was irritated when he read of the ruling banning single-sex school events.

The HEW ruling was in response to an inquiry from the Scottsdale, Ariz., public schools, which sponsor father-son banquets and mother-daughter teas. Scottsdale officials wanted to know whether the events violated the laws prohibiting sex discrimination in public schools.

Officially, the ruling issued last week was suspended pending research by lawyers to determine whether Title IX of the Civil Rights Act is violated by such events.

Nessen said that if it is found that the law is being violated, Ford would immediately send legislation to Congress to change the law.

first reported by Marianne Means of King Features.

Nixon spokesmen at San Clemente were not immediately up and down 10 lines for one that isn't already busy weren't enough, however.

Not all the more than 1,200 telephone calls from Orange County homeowners who had just received their 1976-77 property evaluation notices from the Assessor's Office got through.

"We expected a big reaction and Mr. Jacobs made special provisions to handle the load," said Webster Guillory, the assessor's management director.

"We're sorry not everyone has been able to get through to us. We would ask them to keep trying. Eventually we'll get to everyone," Guillory continued.

Touching off the deluge of phone calls were evaluation notices that showed the value of most homes in Orange County climbed dramatically in the past year.

And most homeowner callers wanted to know why.

"That's the number one question," Guillory said. "Most callers want to know why their houses climbed so in value."

Other callers, Guillory said, wanted to know how much their tax bills will be going up as a result of the higher evaluations.

And still others, he added, wanted to know how they're going to afford paying those bills.

Jacobs and his staff can't tell callers the amount of their 1976-77 tax bills. Nor can they tell them how they're going to be able to pay their bills.

That's because the Assessor's Office has nothing to do with taxes other than evaluating the property on which tax rates set by others are applied.

Most county homeowners will be hit by about 13 different taxing agencies that, through elected officials, set property tax rates.

And if those taxing agencies don't cut rates substantially, most county homeowners will pay more in taxes, in some cases a great deal more, as a result of the rise in property values.

County Tax Collector Treasurer Robert Citron made it clear Wednesday that he is not the man to see to protest tax bills that are considered "too high."

"By the time it gets to me, it's too late for me or anyone else to help the taxpayer," said Citron.

He explained that the only portion of a property tax bill that can be protested is the property evaluation.

"The deadline for filing protests is Sept. 15," said Citron.

"My department won't mail the new tax bills until October. People who wait to protest will be out of luck by then," Citron pointed out.

He said persons wanting to protest the higher evaluations and the resulting likelihood of a higher tax bill should first discuss their problem with the Assessor's Office.

If the differences of opinion on values can't be reconciled after Jacobs' staff investigates the complaint, a protest notice should be filed.

"Persons whose homes are valued at less than $100,000 can ask to appear before an assessment appeals hearing officer," said Citron.

"If the house is valued at more than $100,000, it becomes a matter for a (three-man) Assessment Appeals Board hearing," he continued.

"After that? Well, a taxpayer can pay his taxes under protest and then file a civil suit seeking relief."

Citron stressed the only debatable portion of a tax bill is the property's evaluation and protests must be filed by Sept. 15.

He also emphasized that protesters must be prepared to back their arguments with "hard facts."

"It won't do any good for them to simply say it's too high," Citron said.

"They must be able to show, for example, that similar property in a similar neighborhood sold on the open market for less," he explained. "Or," he added, "the protester must be able to show the assessor overlooked some characteristic of his property when he placed a value on it."

Citron mentioned that as a private citizen he has a problem of his own.

The county Tax Collector-Treasurer received his evaluation notice Tuesday.

It showed the value of his home in north Santa Ana had risen 22 percent last year.

Ex-planner Faces Trial

Former Newport Beach Planning Director Ernest Mayer pleaded innocent Wednesday in Los Angeles to charges of accepting bribes while serving as Long Beach planning director.

Mayer, 45, was ordered to return to court July 29 for the setting of a trial date.

The Los Angeles County Grand Jury issued a two-count indictment against Mayer last June, accusing him of accepting bribes totaling $52,091.

LADY LUCK DEPT.—It now appears that Orange County and the Orange Coast may soon see the first public, legal bingo games operating in our region.

All of this comes to us through auspices of the initiative Proposition 9 on the June Primary Election ballot to make bingo legal.

Proposition 9 allows cities to legalize the game by local option. This is similar to the way liquor sales used to be allowed some years back.

Now we may get "bingo" or "bingoless" communities.

MANY FOLKS MAY have labored under the assumption that bingo, where you play on a card with beans and fill spaces according to drawn numbers, has always been a legal pastime.

Well it is legal, so long as you play for fun. But the minute you purchase the bingo card for a consideration with the possibility of winning a nice prize, the game abruptly becomes illegal gambling.

It's interesting that Anaheim is the first city in our region to consider taking up the local option and making bingo games legal. That's the city where the last great police bingo raid occurred.

COSTA MESA'S CITY Council got the issue through a request from the Girls Club of the Harbor Area, where leaders thought some nice legal bingo games might generate needed cash.

Mesa City Attorney Roy E. June's reading of the new law under Proposition 9, however, came up with some interesting controls built into legal bingo rules.

For one thing, you cannot operate a private bingo game. In order to be legal, the public must be invited.

Also, there are restrictions on who may operate the games. Sponsors must be organizations of religious, charity or scientific nature, or literary or educational, or catering to the prevention of cruelty to animals or children.

Thus City Attorney June suggested the Girls Club might not qualify for a permit.

Maybe if the Girls Club people organized a scientific nature walk they would then be allowed to play some bingo.

ALL OF THIS may seem weird but it pretty well squares with California's long-standing double standard on gambling.

Sponsor a back-room poker game for high stakes and you're likely to get raided by the local law. Set up a Casino Night for reputable charity and most folks will just wink.

You can bet on nags legally at the racetrack but you break the law by wagering on anything at your friendly corner tavern.

And of course, nobody would lay illegal bets on football games. The odds on gridiron contests get wide publicity just for fun. Sure.

Wild Horses Die Near Remote Post

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP)—Mystery continues to surround the deaths in a Utah desert mountain range of some 40 wild horses.

Officials of a military installation where the horses were found say base operations aren't to blame.

In addition to the dead horses, an unknown number of others were near death on a western slope of the Cedar Mountains on Dugway Proving Grounds, a remote chemical-warfare testing installation.

THE MOUNTAINS are at the edge of Skull Valley, where some 4,500 sheep died in 1968 during open-air nerve gas testing. Dugway officials denied then that nerve gas testing, suspended the next year, was the cause of

Man Kills Wife, Self, Children

CLEVELAND (AP)—A man killed his former wife as she sat beside him in a car, fatally wounded their two sons and wounded their daughter before taking his own life, authorities said.

"A little boy in a white T-shirt opened the car door. His T-shirt had a red spot on it and he fell out," said a retired fireman who heard the shots.

"I COULDN'T go fast because of the walker," 70-year-old Frank R. Cipra Jr. added, referring to the supportive device he must use while recovering from a heart attack.

Cipra said that while he was trying to reach the car, a man got out and picked up one of the boys, "threw him into the back seat like a sack of wheat," and drove away.

"I got down on my knees and crawled" to the other youngster, Cipra said. "I felt for a pulse. There was none."

the sheep deaths, and they again denied it Wednesday.

Military officials and civilian scientists at Dugway also insisted that no operation at the Army post could have caused the wild horse deaths.

Col. James Templeton Jr., acting Dugway commander, told reporters, "I can categorically rule that out."

HE AND OTHER officials at first declined to speculate as to the cause. But in response to questions they listed as possible causes water contamination, poison plants and disease. Ron Hall, a government wild horse expert, told the briefing, "In all my years of working with wild horses, I've never seen anything like this."

Officials from the Bureau of Land Management in Utah and Colorado, the Utah Department of Agriculture, and from Dugway said water, plants, horse carcasses and almost every element in the wild horse herd environment is being analyzed in a laboratory. They said results are not expected for several days, perhaps two weeks.

THE BLM completed a water project for a herd of 90-100 wild horses on May 21. Officials said they are investigating the possibility that land disturbance from that may have contaminated water at Orr Springs, where the dead horses were found in and about a dusty gully.

The horses were spotted Sunday. Burial began Wednesday. Also being checked is the possibility of poisoning from a toxic desert weed known as halogeton, which scientists say is rarely eaten by livestock or wildlife.

DUGWAY IS THE site of a nerve gas disposal program which has been in operation since the mid 1960s.

Israel Censure Unlikely

America Would Veto U.N. Condemnation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States would veto any U.N. Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its spectacular weekend rescue of hostages being held by terrorists in Uganda, according to American and diplomatic sources.

The veto promise was made to Israel as the Security Council prepared for Friday's debate on the Israeli raid in which more than 100 Jewish hostages were freed and seven terrorists and 20 Ugandan troops killed.

ACCORDING TO sources here, the United States will try to turn the Security Council focus to the question of international terrorism instead of the Israeli action in freeing the passengers of a hijacked Air France jetliner at Uganda's Entebbe Airport last Sunday.

The United States has long felt that many U.N. members may pay only lip service to agreements to fight airplane hijackings and other forms of terrorism.

The Israeli raid shows that determined and forceful action can offset the effects of terrorism and the United Nations has a perfect opportunity to support its past rhetoric, one U.S. official said.

IN THE MEANTIME, both Israel and the United States were putting together evidence to show that Ugandan President Idi Amin supported if not collaborated with the terrorists.

Under U.S. interpretation of international law, such proof would justify the Israeli raid because Uganda was not living up to its duty to protect Israel's citizens.

Actually, neither American nor Israeli officials feel the Security Council debate will go much beyond a pro forma effort to condemn Israel.

ALL OF THE Western nations have praised Israel, and even the Arab and African blocs have limited their criticism to relatively mild statements.

It was stated that one Arab government told the American ambassador in its capital that it admired the speed and efficiency of the Israeli operation.

U.S. officials would not identify the country and cautioned that the communication did not approve the raid, only taking note that it was admirably conducted.

ANOTHER indication of the relatively moderate stand by Israel's usual enemies is indicated by the total lack of protest from anyone but Uganda to Israel's use of U.S.-supplied planes to carry out the rescue operation. The lack of heat in the Arab-African criticism is attributed by U.S. officials to an almost universal dislike of Amin and a growing awareness by the Arabs that terrorism is counterproductive, if not wrong.

'Bizarre' Disorder Found in U.S. Tot

WASHINGTON (AP)—A State Department medical specialist says a 3-year-old American girl removed from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow has been hospitalized in the United States for treatment of a "bizarre" blood disorder.

IN SHORT

The girl was one of two children brought out two weeks ago at the direction of doctors investigating possible health effects of microwave radiation being beamed at the Embassy by the Soviets. The second child, also a 3-year-old, has since returned to the Soviet capital.

Christians Counterattack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—The Christians claimed today that their forces counterattacking in northern Lebanon had pushed into Moslem territory and were advancing toward Tripoli.

"Our counterattacking forces have overrun all leftist-held villages in the northern region of Green Khoura. We turned it into a Red Khoura," said the Christian Phalange party's radio station.

Lead Limits Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government says it won't impose limits on lead in gasoline until October in order to avoid the risk of creating a gasoline shortage during the summer peak driving season.

An Environmental Protection Agency official said Wednesday that imposing the limits now might interfere with the current "extraordinary demand" for both leaded and unleaded gasoline by vacationing American motorists.

Ford Issues 53rd Veto

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford said Congress is trying to grab too much of his authority and wielded his 53rd veto, disapproving money for the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

He cited a provision of the bill that "provides that Congress may, by concurrent resolution, veto a plan to commit funds for the National Academy for Fire Prevention and Control."

Ford said Wednesday that he will continue to oppose actions "that constitute a legislative encroachment on the executive branch."

Erection Ordered

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP)—Federal Judge Paul Williams signed an order today to evict 24 persons from a house in Grannis where they have been waiting for more than nine months for the Second Coming of Christ.

A spokesman for U.S. Marshal Lee Owens said Owens would be out of town until Monday and probably would not attempt to enforce the order until at least next week. Williams said he probably would give Owens a week to enforce the order, but the document did not include a time limit.

The vigil began Sept. 29 in a three-bedroom $15,000 brick house owned by Gene Nance.

California

A milder version of last month's heat wave is expected to continue in Southern California until the weekend, worsening already dangerous brush fire conditions and holding out little hope for a break in this year's drought.

The National Weather Service predicted the high in downtown Los Angeles, which reached a sweltering 93 Wednesday, will be in the upper 80s today.

The inland will be even hotter in the inland valleys, where highs will reach in the upper 90s. Coastal valleys and mountain resort areas can expect temperatures ranging in the mid- to upper-80s, while the deserts will sizzle with highs ranging from 100 to 115.

Unlike last month's record-setting heat wave, the current hot spell does not include the clear skies associated with June's mild Santa Ana conditions.

Coastal Weather

Light and sunny low clouds and fog, otherwise sunny Friday. Light variable winds night and morning hours. Highs near 70. Coastal temperatures will range between 63 and 75. Inland temperatures will range between 62 and 76. The water temperature will be 76.

Organized Crime 'Tie' Hit by Jury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego County sheriff should reassess his ties with known or suspected underworld figures, the county Grand Jury said Wednesday.

In a 57-page report from a two-month investigation on organized crime, the Grand Jury said that underworld activity does exist here, but not to the same extent as in the eastern United States.

"THERE IS NO indication that the Mafia or crime lords are here in San Diego County," said jury foreman Louis Metzger.

But the Grand Jury report criticized Sheriff John Duffy for voluntarily testifying in Los Angeles on behalf of the La Costa Country Club and Spa in Carlsbad.

Testifying in a libel suit against Penthouse magazine, which ran an article claiming the resort has underworld connections, Duffy filed an affidavit last February saying, "No evidence of criminal activity at La Costa or by the management of La Costa...has ever been detected at the resort."

FOR DUFFY TO offer such a statement willingly "was an error of major proportions," the report said. It added that the statement undermined the integrity of the sheriff's office.

Duffy later denied having anything to do with organized crime leaders.

Marriage Ends

Actor George Hamilton has filed suit to end his five-year marriage with actress-model Alana, citing irreconcilable differences. The couple, separated since last March, have a 21-month old son, George Ashley.

Viking Continues Site Search

PASADENA (AP) — Concern about the slopes and bumps of Mars' rugged surface has once again forced delay of the Viking 1 landing, this time until July 20 at the earliest.

Originally set for July 4 and rescheduled for July 17, the touchdown of Viking's life-seeking robot lander was put off again Wednesday night after Viking officials received bad news about the target area.

Killer Sent For Diagnosis

EL CENTRO (AP) — James Roe Faulkner, Sherman Oaks, has pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the hanging death of a young man known to others in a cult simply as Paul of Nazareth Christ.

After his plea, Faulkner, 56, was sent to Chino for 90-day diagnostic study before being returned for sentencing.

He was arrested after the victim, living near the Colorado River with others described by sheriff's deputies as "Jesus freaks," was tied with a rope, led to a post and left to die last Nov. 11.

THAT INFORMATION was the result of radar observations made over the weekend by a giant radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

The radar study indicated that the July 17 landing site, known as the Northwest site, could be strewn with boulders and slopes that could turn the landing into a disaster.

The roughness detected by the radar hadn't been seen in photos taken by Viking from its orbit about 1,000 miles above the surface.

BUT THE RADAR also found an area to the west that appears to be much smoother. It is a region about 200 miles west of the Northwest site in an area that has not been photographed by Viking's cameras.

Viking officials planned to have the spacecraft fire a rocket burst today to send it toward the uncharted region to begin taking pictures. If the area seems as flat and smooth in the photos as it appeared in the radar study, said Project Manager Jim Martin, a landing could be made there July 20.

On the other hand, he said, if the cameras show it to be more dangerous, Viking could return to the Northwest site for a landing July 22.

THE ORIGINAL JULY 4 landing site, selected long before the launch of Viking last August, had to be discarded when Viking's photographs revealed a much rougher, more knobby surface than had been expected.

"I think chances are very good that we are going to be able to find a landing site within a relatively few days," said Martin.

Time is of the essence because on about July 25, the attention of Viking scientists must turn toward a second Viking probe as it arrives near Mars. If the first Viking has not landed before then, its landing would have to be delayed until Viking 2 has been placed in orbit around Mars, now set for Aug. 7.

The new potential landing site is still within the general area known as Chryse, a broad basin at the mouths of several ancient Martian streambeds.

Parlor Law Takes Dive

SAN RAFAEL (AP) — A judge has slapped down a San Rafael ordinance restricting massage parlors on grounds the ordinance actually is aimed against prostitution.

Marin County Superior Court Judge Noel Martin, granting an injunction against enforcement of the law Wednesday, said he was not convinced by the arguments officials gave about the ordinance.

He said it was aimed at stopping false advertising, transmission of venereal disease and protecting the public from temptation.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "the evil being denounced by the ordinance is prostitution."

State Probes Tranquilizer Use

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Claims that tranquilizers are unnecessarily forced upon patients in state hospitals will be investigated, says Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo.

During a briefing for reporters Wednesday, Obledo also said former Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform basically deprived citizens of benefits they deserved.

He said the decision to investigate followed pressure from a San Francisco-area group of former mental patients called Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA).

Brown 'Presumes' Race Is On

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. says he's "presumed" he'll let supporters nominate him for president at next week's Democratic convention in New York City.

The 38-year-old governor, sole Democratic holdout against former

Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, said Wednesday, "I assume I'll run the process through to the end."

Plague Kills Two Squirrels

CARSON CITY (AP) — Deaths of squirrels in two northern California towns near the Nevada line were caused by bubonic plague and the disease probably caused deaths of more squirrels in the Stateline, Nev., area, says a state health official.

Dr. John Carr, state health officer, said Wednesday about five squirrels found dead around Markleville and Woodfords, Calif., had bubonic plague.

Fire Cracker Ban Requested

SAN MATEO (AP) — Nineteen fire chiefs in San Mateo County have voted unanimously to ask county officials to ban private fireworks next Fourth of July.

John Keller, county fire coordinator, said firecrackers caused some 130 fires during the weekend.

OPEN THURSDAY THROUGH SUNDAY

Let's Not Repeat It

Huntington Beach's off-again, on-again July 4th parade, California's official bicentennial parade, went off without a hitch Sunday. But it didn't look as if it would have such clear sailing for a while.

City council members feared that police, whose contract expired July 1, might refuse to work assigned overtime for the crowd expected at the 72nd annual event. When police negotiators failed to deliver a guarantee of their services, Mayor Harriett Wieder said she was calling off the extravaganza to protect public safety.

Half a day later, however, she called it back on again after Police Chief Earle Robitaille delivered his own guarantee of police protection. He had the backing of the police association.

The entire situation was unnerving to everyone involved — parade participants, spectators, police and city officials alike. It's a little hard to say just who was shoving whom and how hard, but it is safe to guess there was some game-playing and one-upmanship on both sides.

One thing is clear, however — the city needs to negotiate a contract with police officers that doesn't expire on the eve of the parade. If this year's contract had expired on July 5 or at some other time of the year, this nervous situation could have been avoided.

Lawson, a fireman for 30 years, joined the city staff as chief in December 1963, and got the first fire truck rolling by the following July.

The department now has two fire stations and a trained paramedic team. In addition, Lawson helped develop a joint powers agreement with neighboring cities. That agreement not only has been credited with saving money but — because it allows the nearest engine to respond to fires, despite city borders — it also can save lives and property.

City officials are wise to seek Lawson's replacement early to allow for a smooth transition. They should look for someone able to carry on Lawson's good work as well as a person who may be able to ease some of the growing labor relations tensions of late between the city and the firemen's association.

Honor Deserved

Congratulations are in order for Huntington Beach's new Citizen of the Year, Planning Commissioner Ruth Finley.

She was picked for the honor from among seven other well-deserving nominees by the Huntington Beach HOME Council, an organization of homeowners' associations.

Mrs. Finley has distinguished herself on the Planning Commission and in her work with the American Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters, environmental groups and in many other civic projects.

The HOME Council has a good project in this annual event. It draws attention to the work many volunteers donate to make the community a little nicer for everyone.

H/F

Important Replacement

Fountain Valley city councilmen are now recruiting the person they hope will eventually replace Fire Chief H.C. "Mickey" Lawson. Lawson, who built the department from scratch to a staff of 38, has announced plans to retire in January, 1978.

A Very Healthy 200 Years

PAUL HARVEY

We made it! We made a wish and blew out 200 candles in a single breath.

Our nation's birthday was celebrated without disaster, disruption or hangover.

Whereas most of the world's governments at the age of 150 are already suffering senility, ours has such a "remarkable Constitution" that at the age of 200 we're suffering nothing more serious than acne.

I've celebrated personally with a 100 American cities this Bicentennial year. Young and old and in-between we learned or re-learned American history by participating in it.

If only for a while, we talked about and thought about and planned for and worked together on painting the town red, white and blue.

HISTORY has been a declining subject in our secondary schools. So enamored have we become with the "political sciences" and the "social sciences" that in some states — New York, Indiana, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon — no prior training in history is required for high school history teachers. And the number of students taking history courses in college has been shrinking every year.

And without a knowledge of how we got where we are, the tendency is to go in circles.

Then along came the Bicentennial year and Paul Revere rode again. Elementary school-agers were on their knees and elbow deep in paint decorating fireplugs in patriotic colors.

PARADES, pageantry and church services recalled for us all that our nation's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain also included a declaration of "dependence" on God. And God and Country, since rent asunder, were reunited.

We looked around the world and saw that in the 200 years since our nation weaned itself, every other nation has been turned upside down. Ours is the only one still right-side-up.

Two hundred years ago England and France were monarchies, kings ruled both. Italy and Germany didn't even exist. Our Latin American neighbors were colonies. China was ruled by the Manchus, Japan by the Shoguns, Russia by tyrannical czars.

IT WAS only that what we built here was built so well it has remained intact. And with a society more fair and an economy more flourishing than any elsewhere, we are yet entitled to walk tall.

Bargaining Power Open to Question

Teacher Tenure Still Valid

To the Editor:

I read with interest your recent editorial regarding teacher tenure and will have to disagree with your analysis of the current employee-employer relationships in the professional field of teaching.

It is true that there is a new legislative act that governs the employee-employer relationships in education (The Rodda Bill), but a careful analysis of what it allows versus what has been under the old Winton Act is still under question. The new Rodda Bill had the support of the California School Boards Association among others and it is not likely that CSBA would have supported legislation not in the best interests of California school boards.

It is conceivable that teacher power will emerge as a strong force and it is conceivable that this power from a single pressure group will act in a manner not in the best interests of the community, but that question still remains open.

Teachers and school boards are negotiating presently and there is and there is going to be a lot of rhetoric, but how much more power teachers are going to have as a result of negotiations over what they now have is still open to legitimate question.

TENURE should not be abolished as a job protection for teachers. The nature of education and the vicarious whims of a community shifting from one emotional high to another call for some need of job protection. Take the efforts on the part of a vocal minority in Irvine to create the Fundamental School. This group of citizens settled for a school of their own, but if they were given their druthers all Irvine schools would be Fundamental, teachers be damned! This group's leader has been reported to say that if a teacher doesn't adhere strictly to a Fundamental School's dictates (as his group sees it), then he will be fired.

Job protection is not unreasonable in a profession such as teaching. It is available in other sectors; tenure and the abolishment of same has usually been truly against open-idea education for children. People who have supported the abolishment of tenure historically have been anti-public schools in America.

NORMAN GINSBURG

Libbers Happy?

To the Editor:

May I extend a big thank you, keep up the good work, to Doris Allen, Chairman of the "Save Our Status" organization, (Mailbox July 5).

Why have all those sincere, hardworking gals stood by and allowed the libbers and ERA to say they speak for all women? Do you think libbers are happy? Observe a picket line of them and listen to their lingo!

MANY millions of wonderful, hard-working moms have raised a family, contributed effort to school and church and have been the greater for it. Easy? No. They have "done their thing." Yes. However, even in those hours of travail, anguish and pinching pennies they did not throw out Dad and the kids to "go do their thing," or "get their head on straight."

Who said life would be easy? Who said each of you would find his niche in life and feel rewarded? In this Bicentennial year, we have recognized the great contributions made by our pioneer mothers and fathers. Do you think libbers and like thinkers equal that?

We have a great debt to those millions of mothers and fathers who find joy with their God, their spouse and their family circle.

The day we accept gays, lesbians and like thinkers as normal outlets that are socially acceptable, then, in fairness, all peeping Toms, prostitutes and the Mafia must be allowed equally to "do their own thing."

DR. G. V. MCKINNEY

Deserves Chance

To the Editor:

I can understand Nancy Ebsen's frustration at losing the candidate of her choice, (June 30, letter to the editor) but I can't understand her vehemence against the winner, Jim Slemons.

Not having a law degree or experience in Sacramento doesn't make him unfit to be an assemblyman. In fact, after viewing the shenanigans pulled by the experienced, it could be a help.

And hiring capable men to run his campaign, with his own or voluntary private contributions, is no crime. It is not nearly as reprehensible as Governor Brown wasting $100,000 of public matching funds for his hopeless bid for the Presidency.

I DON'T know much about Slemons — he wasn't my man either — but I think it would be fair to find out before we condemn him. As there are three Democrats to every Republican in the Assembly now, it would be a good idea for those 46,912 Republicans that didn't vote for him, to look before they leap to the other side.

GOLDIE JOSEPH

Angry Taxpayer

To the Editor:

I find it hard to express the anger many of us felt at the recent statement from the County Assessor regarding tax rates in Orange County. He stated that property taxes in the county would have to increase this year because of the increase in property values.

IF THIS is the kind of thinking done by our county officials we are in real trouble. Apparently it would never occur to him that rates might be dropped and spending decreased. He is saying openly that he has a windfall and it is burning a hole in his pocket, because the increase he talks about far outstrips inflation rates.

We are long past due for our representatives to become just that and busy themselves with thoughts of how spending and waste can be eliminated.

Code of Violence

To the Editor:

Re: The murder of Lynn McClure: The military court martial finding Harold Bronson innocent, and the attorney calling for dismissal of charges against the others involved because "the defendant was the victim of the malignancy hiding behind the perverted motto, "Only a few good men."

This is the way to train good men? The fact that the Marine Corps absolutely believes this proves that the Marine Corps and any other branch of the military service that believes this should be immediately abolished.

"VIOLENCE begets violence" — and this truth is evident in the humanitarian reporting of our news people as the backlash of this type of training is coming to light everywhere: Another man killed and four injured during another training session; Marines involved in every type of violent crime from rape to child-beating; the raging fires that come off the Marine base to destroy lives, homes and property, etc.

What makes me sick is the number of years this distorted system has existed — and been accepted — with all of its ugly symptoms and eruptions hidden in smug, dictatorial, hypocritical bureaucracy.

Every society has it's peace-loving people, and these are the people who should be placed in positions of leadership and influence throughout the world. Eventually all need for military services and weapons would diminish and fade away.

Maybe not in our lifetime — but in our children's lifetime — Carl Sandburg's vision will be fulfilled: "Sometime they'll give a war and nobody will come."

CB Can Help

To the Editor:

With regard to CB Channel 9 for help on the highways, it is one of the best things that could happen and could save a lot of lives.

For example, in a recent accident when a girl was pinned under her pickup truck, a party had to leave the freeway and call the police for help. By the time they arrived and she was taken to hospital it was too late. She would be alive today if Channel 9 was in service.

I would like to suggest that this call be in code to save time, with special codes for medic needed, ambulance needed, etc. The officers could copy the message and advise that help is on the way. The CBER should stay at the scene and put out flares until the unit arrives.

My handle on the air is Green Rabbit.

JEWELL GREEN (Green Rabbit)

Ford Eyes Efficiency

WASHINGTON — Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents, on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

When Carter is nominated, he could beat Jimmy Carter to the punch with a move to streamline the federal bureaucracy. The Democratic candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy.

JACK ANDERSON

promising a shake-up if he should become President.

INSIDE the Ford Administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it not only is strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development in mindboggling unmanageability.

But White House advocates believe the reorganization would increase bureaucratic efficiency and speed U.S. energy independence, thereby saving billions.

As laid out in the documents, the superagency might include the Federal Energy Administration, Energy Research and Development Administration, Atomic Energy Commission, and Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

IT PROBABLY would also draw in bits and pieces of the Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, State,

Transportation and Treasury Departments, not to mention the Council of Economic Advisors, Energy Resources Council, Environmental Protection Agency and Water Resources Council.

This jumble of bureaucratic jigsaw pieces are supposed to be fitted into one vast agency, with the possibility of forming a smaller, secondary agency to handle the regulatory functions.

The White House documents reveal that the work on this gigantic shotgun marriage began on May 20. The task force was given three months to prepare a "presidential decision paper" for Ford to contemplate.

THE NEW superagency would be charged with the responsibility for developing a "comprehensive energy policy" to replace the present catch-as-catch-can methods of dealing with crises.

Specifically, the agency would be expected to increase production, reduce energy demand, promote "fossil, water, nuclear, solar, wind, geothermal" energy, manage a 500-million-barrel strategic oil reserve, assure fair distribution of energy, set up contingency plans for handling any future oil shortage and generate electricity.

Tension Relieved

DEAR PAT: I purchased an Elna Super sewing machine in December 1972. The first week I had the machine I had problems with the tension adjustment that regulates the tightness of the thread. The thread knots and the machine skips stitches. White Sewing Machine Co., the manufacturer, repaired the machine and replaced several parts, but each time my machine is serviced, the knotting and skipping begin again. My dealer admitted that he cannot find what is wrong. Now the machine is several years old, and I'm tired of these continuing problems.

G.H., Laguna Beach
R.J. Drainville, customer service representative for White Sewing Machine Co. in Cleveland, has authorized UPS to pick up your sewing machine. He promises White will fully inspect your machine, make any necessary repairs and return it to you without further charge.

Wax, Piling Up

DEAR PAT: Can candle wax be removed from a carpet with a heated iron and blotting paper? I found some dried wax on my carpet, and my neighbor tells me this is the best way to remove it. Before I go ahead and use this cleaning method, I'd like you to check it out with a few of your "expert" sources.

G.L., Fountain Valley
 The experts say, "No!" Do not use a heated iron and blotter or cloth to absorb the wax, as it is often recommended for tablecloths or apparel. The high temperature will flatten the carpet pile and set it in the flattened position. Scrape up as much of the wax as possible, and then sponge repeatedly with dry cleaning fluid. Blot after each application.

Campaign Unglued

DEAR PAT: Our high school vocational group sent $21.60 to Holiday Co. in Bedford, Va., for an order of bumper stickers. We were going to sell them to raise money. We ordered the stickers in November 1975, and received our cancelled check, but no stickers. We'd planned a 1975 pre-Christmas sale, and since that time has long since passed, we would appreciate a refund.

C.E., Costa Mesa
E.T. Messiner, general manager of Holiday Co., says your order was sent via UPS in December. UPS claimed the package had been delivered, but in tracing the shipment, no receiver's signature could be produced. After UPS honored Holiday's claim, Messiner reports your organization was sent a refund.

Beater Jinx Whipped

DEAR PAT: I bought an expensive stainless steel mixer from Hamilton Beach several years ago. I've been trying for years to get the machine serviced properly. The first week I had the mixer, I had to send it back for service, but it was returned in the same condition. When I am mixing, the beaters drop down and become mangled and bent.

I've purchased five beater sets at a cost of more than $30. I sent the mixer to Hamilton Beach for repairs twice, but I'm still having the same troubles. I've spent enough on this mixer to buy another one. My last certified letter to Hamilton Beach remains unanswered.

G.H., Irvine
Lillie Wollard, consumer relations correspondent for Hamilton Beach, authorized you to return the mixer to Terry Allgood, warranty repair supervisor at Hamilton Beach's factory in Washington, N.C. The mixer was serviced and returned to you. You report that the mixer finally works, but the stand you sent along with it was not returned. Wollard was contacted, and a replacement stand now has been sent to you.

Redress Patterned

DEAR PAT: I have noticed that even so-called "better" dresses now seem to have shoddy workmanship. I realize that inflation may have something to do with the fact that we pay more for less quality than in previous years, but one should expect to get good quality from name-brand manufacturers. How should a person complain about this? Do you contact each manufacturer, or what?

D.F., Capistrano Beach
 Your first step should be to contact the clothing retailer. Most apparel stores want to know when a customer is dissatisfied with the quality of any merchandise, and they will contact the manufacturer for you. If you want to write to the manufacturer yourself, refer to your library's copy of "Thomas Register of American Manufacturers." This book lists items by brand name, followed by the manufacturer's name, address and phone number. A carbon copy of any letter of complaint also should be sent to the American Apparel Manufacturers Association, 1611 N. Kent St., Arlington, VA 22209.

Posting Pill Prices

At Your Service has received information from the California Department of Consumer Affairs regarding apparent public misunderstanding about the requirements of the law on prescription price posting.

Director Taketsugu Takei explained that legislation enacted in 1974 makes it mandatory that every pharmacy in California post in a conspicuous place a list of the 100 most widely prescribed drugs, and the current price of the three most widely prescribed quantities. It also must indicate the cost of professional or non-professional services provided or not provided, which contribute to the cost.

Consumers are encouraged to check the next time they visit their pharmacy and report violations to the California Board of Pharmacy. Offices are located in Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles, or one can write to the California State Board of Pharmacy, 1020 N. St., Sacramento, CA 95811.

'Superman' X Marks Spot Filming To Begin Viewer Fires at Screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superman will fly again, says producer Ilya Salkind, with Marlon Brando as one of his antagonists.

Brando is the first in what Salkind ("The Three Musketeers") promises will be a cast of top stars.

The producer added that he has raised the "Superman" budget from $20 million to $25 million.

Filming is expected to begin in various U.S. locations and in other parts of the world.

The director is Guy Hamilton, who directed "Goldfinger." The script is by Marie Puzo, Robert Benton, David Newman and Leslie Newman.

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — "Too Hot To Handle" and "Love Riders," the X-rated double-feature at Oshkosh's Grand Theater, offended Gerald Frey, and he decided to do something about it.

After watching part of the film, police said Frey, 34, went home and returned with a hunting dog and a shotgun, which they said he used to pump three shots into the theater's screen.

An employe telephoned for assistance, and other patrons fled to safety, some into the basement and others outside.

Frey was charged in Winnebago County Court with reckless use of a weapon and criminal damage to property. Officers said he also signed a statement saying he opposes X-rated films.

Oil Re-refining Gains

SUNNYVALE (AP) — From a small beginning three years ago, a movement called ROAR is striking a blow for energy conservation and anti-pollution by encouraging people to offer their used lubricating oil to centers for re-refining.

ROAR, said Mary Ecklund, an instructor at DeAnza College, "stands for Return Oil and Re-Refine."

SHE GOT INTO the movement by talking a local gas station dealer into allowing neighborhood residents to add their used oil to his underground tank.

Today, she said, 56 service stations in the Santa Clara Valley fly the ROAR banner. Used oil also is accepted at five recycling centers in the valley, four firehouses, two auto dealers and a city corporation yard.

EACH YEAR, 550 million gallons of used lubricating oil are dumped down storm drains or in empty lots, say ROAR distributed statistics.

Thus, the pollution factor would be eliminated by properly turning in used oil, it's pointed out.

Dye Ban Backed By Appeals Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has rebuffed manufacturers of Red Dye No. 2 who wanted to continue using the synthetic coloring, which the government suspects may be a weak cancer-causing agent.

The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld the Food and Drug Administration's five-month ban on Red No. 2, the nation's most widely used artificial coloring for foods, drugs and cosmetics until last year.

The three-judge panel upheld a federal judge who gave the FDA permission in February to ban future use of the coloring. The FDA did not order a recall of products containing the dye already on the shelves.

Faster Signups At OCC

Orange Coast College will initiate its computer registration system when students begin signing for fall classes Aug. 23.

"Our on-line computer system has been in a developmental stage for five years," said Kenneth E. Mowrey, OCC's dean of admissions and records. "The system was used on a limited basis this summer, but fall registration will provide its first real test."

MOWREY SAID the system is designed to eliminate much of the paperwork previously required. Massive bins of class cards have been replaced by seven computer terminals.

"This system will speed the entire process," Mowrey said. "Once a student steps up to a computer terminal, he or she will be enrolled within 30 to 45 seconds."

"IT MAKES registration easier for our standpoint, too," Mowrey said. "In past years, we've been unable to enroll more than 1,100 students per day. Now we can easily handle 2,500 per day."

Registration runs Aug. 23 to Sept. 17 in the OCC Admissions Office. Fall classes begin Sept. 13.

For registration information, phone 556-5735.

The five who served, working as a member of the "Kelsey County Board of Supervisors" seemed very real.

Among those who served on the board of the mythical county was Jody Lynne Drew of South Laguna's Three Arch Bay community.

Kelsey was set up as part of California Girls State activities conducted in Sacramento by the American Legion Auxiliary.

She attended Girls State under the sponsorship of American Legion Post 222, Laguna Beach.

Miss Drew is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin W. Drew.

3 Students Aided

Graduates of two local high schools have been awarded scholarships for agriculture study by The Irvine Company.

Paul B. Flanders, Katherine Senger and Inger Elizabeth Shiffler of University High School, Irvine, and Ronald R. Tressen of Corona del Mar High School in Newport Beach received $250 scholarships.

Info Number Still Easier

By WILLIAM SCHREIBER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Will Ma Bell's creativity never end? Since its birth in the workshop of an obscure Scottish-American inventor back in the centennial year of 1876, the phone company has blossomed into an immense private bureaucracy with a bountiful supply of imaginative ways to frustrate and annoy inveterate phone users like myself.

SCHREIBER

SOME OF THESE are outgrowths of bright ideas — such as the information service accessible by dialing just three numbers, like 411, 113 or whatever.

Being basically lazy and possessed of eyesight troubled by the fine print of phone books, this service is a godsend — at least it was. Lately, it seems to have come from that other place where bad people go when they die.

The trouble began when the phone company realized demands for information service had grown way out of proportion and the old profit margin was showing signs of wear. (Related Story, B6)

FIRST, THEY assailed us with advertising in all the media about how bad we had been in not using the phone book, thus causing information operator expenses to skyrocket out of sight. I forget how many millions they said it was costing.

This, warned the phone company, was making the executives edgy — that is, edging toward more rate hikes.

But there are those of us who don't respond well when we have our wrists slapped by television ads. We're like those people who pretend the warning label on cigarette packs doesn't exist.

INFORMATION SERVICE costs continued to rise, despite perfunctory treatment by some operators.

Now, having apparently failed in the mass media blitz approach, the phone company is trying the personal touch — if a tape recorded, radio-style basso voice can be considered personal in any way.

"If you have checked your directory (veiled chastisement) and are unable to find the number you wish (insinuation of stupidity) please stay on the line and a directory assistance operator will answer (cavalry to the rescue syndrome)."

THAT'S THE message, plus a few editorial observations. If you wait a few seconds, you'll hear a ring at the other end and an information person will come on the line.

I timed it and it's still a lot quicker and easier to wait for the message and the operator than to go to the book, leaf through a million pages of fine print and assail my eyes looking for a number.

Undoubtedly, my genre of habitual information users are asking for trouble by persisting. Next it'll be toll charges for information, electric shock treatment by phone line or little men in trench coats at the door. Never underestimate Ma Bell.

More Women Bankers

On-job, Classroom Training Available

By JOYCE L. KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I'm a woman who has just graduated from college with a design degree and a few business courses. After having worked as a part-time secretary in a small bank for three years, I think I want to change my career goal from fashion merchandising to banking. How can I find out more about banking opportunities for women, including management traineeships?
—T. J., Los Angeles, Calif.

Career Corner

for its many continuing education programs that can boost you up the executive ladder.

Traditionally banks were more interested in well-rounded individuals for officer trainee positions than in a specific degree. Any college major is still acceptable in many cases.

While men still predominate in minding the millions, more women are reaching higher levels every year — nationally at least 13 percent of bank officers are female and the ratio is much higher in some areas.

Management trainees often earn $8,000 upward; the more education and bank-related background a woman has, the higher her starting pay.

A TYPICAL TRAINING program lasts from one year to 18 months. Rookies get on-the-job — and often classroom training — in various areas of banking before zeroing in on any one specialty. Teller is a popular entry job in banks without formal programs.

The banking industry is noted

HOWEVER, THE business major who has concentrated in finance, economics, accounting or marketing has an edge. An advanced degree in business administration offers a big advantage, especially in large banks. In farming communities, an agricultural degree is a strong credential.

Most women officers today rose through the ranks, starting as tellers, bookkeepers, secretaries and so forth. It's still possible for the high school grad to move up, but chances for promotion are definitely greater for the college grad.

SAMPLE DEPARTMENTS you might work in include: commercial banking (business and corporate accounts); consumer banking (individuals and families); trust administration (managing assets, estates and benefit plans); marketing (promoting a bank's services and image); operations (day-to-day activities); and personnel (hiring and training, setting salaries and extra benefits).

Three steps to banking employment: (1) read career and industry literature, (2) make information-gathering appointments with women bankers to learn the pro's and con's (3) apply directly to bank personnel departments; any banking experience and business courses should be emphasized.

Evel Knievel Glitters Into Movie

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He talks bigger than Muhammad Ali. He wears more jewelry than Liberace. At 38 Evel Knievel is the king of the daredevils and now the star of a $5 million movie. "Kids look up to me more than anyone else in the world," proclaims the Butte-born motorcycleist and sometime flier. "Sure, they respect Ali, but not every kid wants to be a fighter. They all want to jump motorcycles and cars."

"I TELL PEOPLE, I'M EVEL Knievel, but I'm no necessary evil. I want to do good with my life. Mostly I want to reach kids and tell them the dangers of narcotics. That's the biggest crusade of my life."

"I said I would do this picture only if I were allowed to include the speech that I give at every place I appear. I tell the kids that race drivers at Indianapolis sometimes put nitro in their engines to give them an extra push, but it only lasts four or five laps and then it ruins the cars. The same with narcotics. Maybe it'll give you a lift for four or five years, then the body is ruined."

"I want to get that message across. 'Easy Rider' was an important picture for motorcycleists, but it blew the narcotics stuff. It probably had more to do with popularizing dope than anything in recent years."

WHETHER FIGHTING DOPE OR promoting Evel Knievel, he is a zealot. He is scornful of his film biography that starred George Hamilton, arguing with sound logic that none but himself can adequately portray Knievel.

He's doing it these days on Southern California locations of "Viva Knievel!" which theater owner Sherrill C. Corwin and disaster maker Irwin Allen ("The Poseidon Adventure," "The Towering Inferno") are producing for Warner Bros. release. Evel wrote the original story about dope smuggling, and is surrounded by an impressive cast: Gene Kelly, Red Buttons, Marjoe Gortner, Lauren Hutton.

One day the company was shooting at the San Fernando Valley's exclusive Lakeside Country Club, where Knievel recently joined; already he seems to know all the members. Red Buttons, playing the inevitable sidekick, told how Knievel enlivened the filming.

Knievel interrupted shooting one day to insist that everyone celebrate in his style, by taking slugs from his bourbon bottle. Corwin, Allen, director Gordon Douglas and others reluctantly agreed. Teetotaler Buttons refused. Knievel would not continue until Buttons drank.

THE COMEDIAN finally swallowed a full bourbon bottle to the horror of the film makers. He staggered around the set until the plot was revealed: the second bottle was filled with tea.

KNEIVEL

When the company broke for lunch, the assistant director told Knievel he had 45 minutes for lunch.

"Look, sonny," Knievel replied, "I've been risking my life for 10 years, and I spent three of those years in hospitals. Nobody's gonna tell me I got 45 minutes for lunch." He was kidding, no doubt. Over lunch in the clubhouse, Knievel talked about his life and career.

"I'M A RETIRED MILLIONAIRE," he announced, but admitted that he will continue the death-defying leaps. Not in the movie, though.

"I've done a few stunts, like falling out of a wheelchair," he said, "but they won't let me do the leaps. They can't get $5 million insurance on me."

"I have a three-picture contract with Corwin, and it doesn't allow me to do leaps over more than 13 cars. I have two dates later this year, in Boston and Seattle. I think I'll try 13 trucks next time."

Knievel's misses are as famous as his successful leaps, particularly the 1974 failure to jet across Snake River Canyon, Ida.

"NEVER AGAIN," HE SAID. "But I have no regrets about it, except for what I put my family through."

He wants to continue with the stunts until he's 40. He has been broken 14 times, and the prospect of further fractures doesn't faze him.

"I'm a bionic man," he said. "They say broken bones are stronger when they heal. So I gotta be the strongest man in the world."

Widow to Get Funds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury has awarded $255,969 in damages against Beech Aircraft Corp. to a woman whose husband and children were killed in a 1974 plane crash.

Jurors deliberated six days following the nine-week trial before ruling that pilot Zoltan Kuthy was 60 percent responsible for the crash. His widow, Mrs. Beryl Kuthy, 41, of Ottawa, originally asked $2.5 million in damages.

Kuthy and children Zoltan Jr., 10, and Allison, 6, were killed.

Mass Slayer Gets Life Term

NEW YORK (AP) — A 28-year-old drifter has been sentenced to 18 life prison terms for the murder of nine women, all but one in the same rundown hotel. Under state law, he could be eligible for parole in 30 years.

Calvin Jackson — Supreme Court Justice Aloysius J. Melia ticked off the sentences. "TWENTY-FIVE years to life," he intoned over and over again. Four of the sentences are to run consecutively.

Poem Made Them Heroes

The charge of the Light Brigade was an idiotic tragedy. Survivors were embarrassed, sorrowful and bitter. Worse, they were depressed to the point of sickness. Then Alfred Lord Tennyson wrote that poem about it, highlighting the heroism. And those survivors perked up immediately. It was one more classic occasion when a work of art, if you want to call it that, suddenly and profoundly influenced the popular outlook. Start with Tom Paine's "Common Sense."

Why a woodpecker doesn't bash its brains out I couldn't explain. But a customer writes: "An area of fluid is found between the bird's brain and skull. This fluid serves to absorb the shock."

Our Love and War man says sadly he will bet you a quarter on the corner that you've never met a man who actually got down on one knee to propose to a girl.

WHISTLES

Q. "Will identical whistles blown simultaneously put out twice as loud a sound as one whistle by itself?"

A. No, the difference wouldn't be that great. If one whistle produced 75 decibels, two might only produce 78.

Q. "How many rooms in a chipmunk's burrow?"

A. Three. Living room, bedroom and storeroom.

It was the late Bob Zupko, longtime coach at the University of Illinois, who first dreamed up the notion of the football huddle.

Another noteworthy bumper sticker reads: "Cancer cures smoking."

SPORTS

Certainly men tend to excel over women in those sports that require great physical strength. And exceptional men tend to excel in just about all the sports. But what makes the women in general superior to the typical men in ice skating is their relatively stronger thigh muscles. What makes women superior generally in gymnastics is their lower center of gravity. And what makes women superior in endurance swimming is an extra layer of insulating buoyant fat.

The real Australian aborigines, those few naked souls remaining, do their scatological thing quite indifferent to onlookers, but go off by themselves to hide when they eat. They become utterly ashamed, if seen at dinner.

As for tomatoes, we will not be able to celebrate their bicentennial in this country for another 13 years. It was in 1789 that Thomas Jefferson introduced them here.

$70 Pay Hike Plan Blasted at UCI

By HILARY KAYE Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The chairman of the UC Irvine Academic Senate says the $70-per-month across-the-board pay raise approved for all state employees would be an advantage for junior faculty members at the university.

But Dr. Harris Moyed added that such an increase would be "grossly inequitable" for senior faculty members, who earn much higher pay.

MOYED SAID THAT a flat figure increase, rather than a percentage raise would not give senior faculty members the pay increases they deserve.

"Whatever happens, most UC faculty members will wind up behind the eight ball again, as they have since 1968, when faculty salaries began eroding," said Moyed, a professor of microbiology in the UCI College of Medicine.

Lion Country Allows Camps

For the first time since it opened six years ago, Lion Country Safari is allowing recreational vehicle campers to spend the night on the 515-acre African wildlife preserve.

The new camping site, which includes fresh water and sewage disposal facilities, is protected from the lions and other animals roaming free at the Irvine park, according to spokesman Jerry Kobrin.

Kobrin said security patrols and double fencing prevent the animals from getting out and people from getting into the enclosures.

"Our visitors can hear the roaring of lions, the trumpeting of elephants and other nocturnal animal noises in the preserve, just as though they were camping in the African bush," Kobrin said.

The park official said the decision to accommodate campers was years in the making and included extra security precautions and modifications in local zoning codes.

Reservations can be made for spaces by calling Lion Country at 837-1200.

The $70-per-month pay raise was approved Wednesday by Gov. Jerry Brown for all state employees, but UC Regents determine faculty salaries. They may follow through on the governor's proposal, or they may distribute salary money any way they wish.

MOYED SAID HE EXPECTS THE regents

Weddle Wins Council Spot

The Orange County Criminal Justice Council has elected Carol D. Weddle, the mayor of Brea, as its new chairman. Santa Ana City Councilman Harry Yamamoto was elected vice chairman.

probably will make a compromise in deciding faculty salaries.

The regents will meet July 15 and 16 in San Francisco to make a decision regarding salaries. Moyed said the universitywide Academic Council will meet before then to form a recommendation.

"We'll probably recommend that a compromise be worked out between a flat raise such as the $70 figure and a percentage raise," Moyed said.

MOYED SAID HE'D PERSONALLY like to see a system where raises are given out depending on the faculty members' rank — with full professors, associate professors and assistant professors each receiving different raises.

But Brown said the flat dollar pay raise, instead of the usual percentage increase, insures that "those with the least income are treated fairly."

If the regents decide to go along with Brown's $70-per-month figure, it would mean an increase of 4.3 percent for the average faculty member at UC, who earns about $20,000 a year, according to a spokesman for the university.

THE AVERAGE INCREASE FOR faculty members last year was 7.2 percent, the spokesman added.

While it is uncertain how the regents will handle faculty salaries, the spokesman for UC Irvine said it seems fairly certain that other employees at the university will receive the suggested $70-per-month raise.

Peter Frampton: Nice Guy of Rock

By LISA ROBINSON

Everyone adores Peter Frampton. Even after he's sold three million copies of the "Frampton Comes Alive!" LP, people in the (occasionally vicious) music business who have followed his career during the struggling years wish Peter well. "I never consciously tried to be nice," Frampton said. "I'm aware that I have this reputation, and I love it. I wouldn't want to be known as a punk rock and roller."

"I SMILE ONSTAGE, AND I am nice to people. But I don't work at it. Maybe I'm just like that, maybe I really am nice," laughed Frampton who has long, curly, permed blond hair and wide, bright blue eyes.

"My record company told me that this live album is so big," he continued, "it'll be another 'Tapestry.'" ("Tapestry" is the Carole King LP that's sold 17 million copies and has been on the Billboard charts 274 weeks.)

"But I mustn't expect to have another album this big. I don't know why it happened, something about the chemistry of the album and my tour did it."

"IF I KNEW WHY IT happened, there wouldn't be any excitement to it."

"Obviously onstage we've got to stick to material from the live album," said Frampton.

"That's why so many people are coming to see us. We gradually work new numbers in, but I'd probably have to sing 'Show Me the Way' for the rest of my life."

Does it get boring doing the hits? "Oh no. I could never get fed up with doing something people chose, that they really love. It's helped make me what I am," he replied.

The Who return to the U.S. the first week of August for four — and possibly more — concerts. Scheduled are Largo, Md. (Capitol Centre), Winston-Salem, N.C., Miami and either Tampa or Jacksonville, N.C. Dates will be announced momentarily.

And all those rumors about The Who disbanding are just rumors. They'll record another album in the fall and return for an extensive U.S. tour to coincide with the LP's release.

In an attempt to "expand" their audience to include more than 8-year-olds, The Bay City Rollers have recorded an album with producer Jimmy Iener (Grand Funk, Raspberries, Eric Carmen). One assumes they want to develop more, musically.

And, when the Rollers performed at the Steel Pier in New Jersey last week, they were sullen and angry after the show (just like a real rock group) because of sound problems. Of course, the 2,000 prepubescent fans who screamed all through the show the way they used to for David Cassidy hardly knew the difference.

Aerosmith's Steven Tyler and Joe Perry jammed one night in a New Orleans club with David Johansen's Onlies. The number they performed was a slightly out-of-character blues. (And July 4 saw a bicentennial wedding for Johansen and Andy Warhol star Cyndia Foxe.)

Bob Dylan's TV special is called "Hard Road" and airs on NBC Sept. 21. Mick Jagger and Ron Wood are vacationing in the south of France. Grand Funk begins its fall tour in Knoxville, Tenn., at the end of September. Boz Scaggs performs with full orchestra at LA's Greek Theater in August. Elton John, at LA's helps musicians he believes in (Neil Sedaka, Kiki Dee, Cliff Richard) has signed British rocker Dave Edmunds to E.J.'s Rocket Records.

You can catch Stu Daye in concert all summer with either Aerosmith or Ted Nugent. Their first LP, "Free Parking," was released on CBS, and they'll record another at the beginning of next year.

Power Crisis Priorities Set

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A system of priorities for statewide curtailment of electric service in case of a power crisis has been adopted by the state Public Utilities Commission.

Five categories were set up in the interim opinion Wednesday as a result of hearings held between last September and February.

THE FIRST AREA TO BE curtailed, called Priority 5, would include luxurious or wasteful usage by residential customers such as heating or circulating swimming pool water unless for therapy; using inefficient appliances and ornamental lighting or display.

Priority 1 or top priority covers essential or protected customers or uses.

THIS WOULD INCLUDE GOVERNMENTAL agencies providing essential service for fire, police and street lighting; national defense activities; hospitals and convalescent homes for critical facilities such as operating and emergency rooms, life-support machines and minimal lighting.

Other priority uses include gas, water and public utilities providing electric, gas, private and communications and sewage disposal services and public transportation; production and transmission of fuel; radio and television for transmitting emergency and public information messages, and residential customers for the use of life support equipment.

PRIORITY 2 COVERS THOSE who would suffer unusual or irreparable loss from curtailment or interruption of power. This would include agriculture where electricity is directly needed for production, processing or storage, and other businesses where curtailment would cause an unemployment crisis or where prolonged shutdown would cause major irreparable damage to equipment or its product.

Priority 3 is for residential customers as far as using minimal lighting and heating, certain electric appliances and cooking facilities.

PRIORITY 4 COVERS USAGES and customers not covered in the first three priorities as well as all customers at their general level of usage in the year before the crisis.

During the public hearings on priorities, some 117 witnesses testified and there were more than 60 exhibits and 1,952 pages of transcript.

THE PUC SAID PARTIES could agree "on little except the difficulty of establishing an equitable plan and the complexity of the problems for the utilities who must implement such a plan."

Corpse Mutilating Charges Denied

DETROIT (AP) — A former assistant Wayne County medical examiner has pleaded innocent to charges of mutilating corpses at the county morgue and at Wayne State University.

Dr. Millard Bass stood mute to the charges and an innocent plea was entered by Judge Samuel Gardner. Bass, a 45-year-old osteopath, was charged in criminal warrants issued Friday with desecrating 12 bodies and skeletonizing or stripping the flesh from 14 others.

Under Michigan law, mutilating a corpse is a felony punishable by 10 years in prison.

THE WARRANTS against Bass were issued after a four-month investigation in which a headless body was dug up, and investigators discovered 11 heads in a vat of liquid and a cache of other body parts at Wayne State.

NO MOTIVE has been given for the mutilations. Bass and his attorney had no comment for reporters.

Sherri, Adasa Goodspeed's poodle is the picture of elegance after receiving a complete grooming. Some pet owners bring their dogs in every four weeks.

This Is a Dog's Life?

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

She looked like a new person. She was bathed, had her nails trimmed and her hair cut and styled. She was sprayed with a sweet-scented cologne and topped off with an eye-appealing pink bow.

It was your typical Pygmalion story: Take a scruffy, unkempt wench off the street and turn her into everybody's fair lady.

In this case, however, the Eliza Doolittle role was played by "Sherri," Adasa Goodspeed's white-haired poodle.

Her Henry Higgins was Cheryl Denny, whose job as pet groomer it is to transform even the most motley of mutts into eye-catching (and tail wagging) things of beauty.

In the past only the pampered poodles of the well-to-do were afforded the luxury of regular visits to the pet beauty shop. Today all breeds are brought in.

"Dog grooming is becoming a big industry," said Anthony Moriana. "People are more grooming conscious than years ago. They demand it."

HIDDEN TREASURES

The pet's coat, often after a year's lapse between brushing, usually is matted, tangled and totally unmanageable. Groomers have been known to find paper clips, straight pins, thumb tacks and rubber bands under the frizzled fur.

The transformation, which may include, as the piece de resistance, pink nail polish, is unbelievable.

"They seem to know they look better," said one groomer. "And, of course, the owners make such a fuss, they know."

"They love it," said Flo Reuther. "They enjoy it when they get a bath. They're proud of themselves. They love to be pretty."

She said one poodle walks around like he's a hundred years old before being groomed. "He won't hold his tail up. But once he's on the grooming table, he's a whole new dog."

Another dog, when it gets to the point she just can't do a thing with her fur, refuses to eat until she is taken to the grooming parlor.

BEAUTY CONSCIOUS

And a springer spaniel, reports Rebec Gainey, loved the beauty treatment so much, she ran away from home and headed straight for the shop. Attendants called the owner who didn't even know the dog was missing.

Groomers average 15-20 dogs a day at a cost of $8 to $20, depending on pet size and type of work required. During the two-hour visit, most get the works: Bath, brushing, nail trim, ear cleaning, haircut and, if needed, a flea dip.

Some are so thoroughly matted, said groomer Ed White, that they must be shaved to the skin. The GI style cut is especially popular during the summer months—it's a lot cooler.

Although owners are told beforehand if the close-cropped look is required, they often are-

GISTYLE

Mrs. Gainey tells of one man who brought a poodle in with fur "just matted to the skin." When he returned he looked at the cage with his name on it and the shaved pooch inside.

He picked up the dog in the next cage and was walking out the front door before the groomer caught him. "He just wanted one with hair," explained Mrs. Gainey.

It is easy to liken a pet grooming parlor to a human beauty shop. But a hairdresser, at least, doesn't have to contend with trying to keep a soaking wet client in the bath tub.

Being bitten by an unwilling customer also is not an occupational hazard for hairdressers.

"We sometimes get them with blood in their eyes," said White, whose last biter was eight years ago.

That is rare. Some solve the problem by muzzling the snappy customer. Most dogs, however, stand patiently and are totally cooperative.

PLAIN ORNERY

"Generally we can cope with the fear biter by being reassuring," said Mrs. Gainey. "We don't take dogs who are just plain ornery."

Being at ease around animals and, more importantly, enjoying working with them is the primary quality for being successful in the business, groomers agree.

Mrs. Reuther hasn't had any problems handling dogs in her 15 years in the business. "If you're a dog lover, they sense it."

Why the boom in the dog grooming business?

It is largely because of the domestication of man's best friend. Fido sleeps now in the house and, in many cases, in his master's bed. Dogs have become a member of the family. One owner feeds her two poodles scrambled eggs and toast in the morning, even before the old man rolls out of the sack.

TOP DOG

The royal treatment is not unusual.

"For many people this is their whole life," said White. "A dog is all they have. It's their companion and, of course, they treat him as such."

"Sometimes," said Mrs. Gainey, "I wish they'd give them a little more discipline."

"Some dogs scream when they arrive. As soon as mother leaves, he's king of the whole grooming room."

The reason so many dogs are being brought in, Mrs. Gainey believes, is because most people just plain don't know how to brush or care for their pets.

"Brushing is an art," she said. "They try real hard, but because they don't know what they're doing, they come in with tangled fur."

BEAUTY SECRET

The secret is making sure the brush reaches all the way down to the skin, she said. Many people merely surface brush.

An offshoot of the grooming boom is the pet clothing industry.

There are not only the usual array of rhinestone collars, but coats, sweaters, pajamas, raincoats and rubber boots. And for the females there are even diaper-like panties for holding sanitary napkins.

But clothes do not a woman (or dog) make. First comes the grooming.

"It's hard for me to find someone to cut Rocki the way I like," explained Carolyn Morrow, picking up her toy poodle.

Does she think her cologne-scented pooch feels better now?

"I don't know," she said, "but I feel better."

A less than elegant Sherri is clipped by groomer Cheryl Denny. Many pets enjoy the beauty treatment.

New Work: A New Life

By JO OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Work is a "Monday through Friday sort of dying," according to Studs Terkel, author of a mammoth book on the world of work.

In it he interviews people from all areas of life about what they do for a living and how they like it. Many people feel trapped by their jobs, he found.

Laile Bartlett, in contrast, discovered people who changed their jobs to make them more creative and fulfilling. She describes them in her most recent book, "New Work/New Life."

Terkel's book is about people who put up with work. Mine is about people who are looking for and finding work that is fulfilling and satisfying," Mrs. Bartlett said.

"My thesis is this: many people who are finding work which is fulfilling started unconsciously turning the system around to do it in more humanistic ways."

When she was asked about the system around are "tomorrow people," Mrs. Bartlett said, "These people are fixing up our system in some way."

Mrs. Bartlett, a sociologist and journalist who holds a PhD from the University of California, Berkeley, said she also has discovered a new career choice which has emerged in the last few years.

SOCIAL CHANGE

"This is a social change artist," she said, "someone who is specifically, explicitly working to improve the system."

There are guidebooks for people wishing to get into this new field, she said. One is "The New Professionals," edited by Ronald Gross, and another is "Creating the Future" by Beitz and Washburn.

The latter tells where most of the changes are taking place and where the best opportunities for new work are, Mrs. Bartlett said.

In her book she interviews people of all ages who are spearheading change in their fields. She writes about a psychoanalyst, in his 60's, for example, who had spent 40 years in his practice.

He realized that only middle class whites were served by his profession so he decided to train housewives to help in emergency situations.

The result was a 24-hour clinic staffed by trained volunteers. "This was before hotlines," Mrs. Bartlett said. "He was so successful that people began to pay 'tuition' to work there.

TERKEL'S GUEST

The sociologist author, who spoke at the Unitarian-Universalist Center in Laguna Beach, was a recent guest on Terkel's television program in Chicago.

She said she got her idea for "New Work" the night before she was to talk to her publisher in New York about another book she was working on.

She had been interviewing her "tomorrow" people for separate stories but suddenly realized that it was a whole new concept.

"I asked my publisher four questions: is the idea worth anything, is it a book, has anyone done it and where should I take it," Mrs. Bartlett said.

His answers were yes, it's worth something, no, no one else has done it, and don't you dare take it to anyone else.

Mrs. Bartlett is a "tomorrow" person herself but admits it takes some juggling.

She has taught in colleges and universities but likes to combine the two worlds.

"If I'm going to be a 'tomorrow' person I don't want to get backed into the traditional professorial cul de sac," she said. "I don't want to spend my life there. I want to be using any perceptions I have as a sociologist to help people. This means I have to come out of my academic world."

The price is high at times. By not going up the academic ladder she has given up some of the prestige and her academic colleagues tend to be jealous. "They don't want you to do what I do—write popular stuff," she said. The public, on the other side, is suspicious of ivory tower types, she added.

As a reporter Mrs. Bartlett is constantly picking up leads everywhere she goes. She is West Coast editor for Datalert, and news release editor for the Society for Scientific Study of Religion and the Religious Research Association and a correspondent for various channels.

Mrs. Bartlett said her particular talent is in "sticking up her antennae" to see what's ahead for the future. "I've had pretty good luck with being able to do it," she admitted.

She is optimistic about what she sees. In every area of society there is promise, she said.

She has talked to the people already in "tomorrow" and has gotten the word that it's better than today.

Not everyone feels trapped in his job. Many find fulfilling work, says author Laile Bartlett.

Love a Generation Too Late

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm in love with my daughter's fiancé. Madly, passionately and completely.

I have a good husband, three fine children, and a lovely home. I married young and didn't know what love was. No one has ever turned me on like this until now. It's not just physical (although it's that, too).

I want my daughter to marry this man. He is kind and good, all that anyone could want. I look at him and my heart aches. I ask God, "Why not till now?"

Don't tell me to keep busy, Ann. I do — with a job, college courses, and club work. I know I must leave him alone. Please, tell me I'm not unique. I need to hear from you. — BORN TOO SOON

DEAR BORN: No, you are not unique, but knowing there are others doesn't solve the problem. I see so many negative elements in your dilemma — guilt, ambivalence, rivalry, fear and shame. I urge you to get some counseling and resolve these conflicts so you can have peace of mind and freedom from anxiety.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: With summer vacations here, relatives and friends are again traveling great distances to see each other. I'd like to bring something to the attention of each and every person, old and young, male and female.

Check yourself out. Are you monopolizing the conversation and depriving others of a chance to talk?

After driving a thousand miles to get together, one person in our family has been talking non-stop the entire weekend. When others in the room begin to squirm or carry on whispered conversations on the side, Ego Mouth doesn't even notice. At the end of the visit many of us will go home with all those things we've been saving up to talk about still unsaid.

Why doesn't the rockhead notice signs — like an abrupt question on a completely different subject? It means people would like him to knock it off for a while. Would a normal person talk at someone who is trying to study, read, write or watch TV? Is he insecure, immature, or just plain rude in demanding so much attention?

Thanks, Ann. Perhaps through your column I will FINALLY get a chance to speak. — NUMB EARS

DEAR EARS: You have spoken. But don't expect the Ego Mouths of the world to get the message. They never think you mean them.

Dear Abby once said, "A person who monopolizes the conversation at a get-together is just as big a hog as the person who comes to a party and eats all the food." How true!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 15-year-old girl who is worried about my best friend. She used to be just neat but lately she's been telling a lot of crazy lies. Like she says she gets phone calls from famous people. Yesterday she said the earrings she was wearing were a gift from Richard Burton. What's with her anyway? — E.L. INLA

DEAR E.L.: Your friend needs to make up things to make her feel important. This is very sad. You can help by being kind and building her ego. This girl desperately needs emotional support.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In a column you wrote several weeks ago, you quoted St. Paul as having said, "It is not good for a man to be alone." I have heard of robbing Peter to pay Paul, but you, Ann Landers, are robbing God. The statement you attributed to Paul was His — from the Book of Genesis 2:18.

You get so many things right, I hope you won't mind this correction. — A PASTOR WHO QUOTES YOU OFTEN

DEAR PASTOR: Not at all. In fact, dozens of others caught the mistake. It's flattering to know so many well-versed Bible scholars read this column.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill., 60120.

Aries: Be Specific

FRIDAY, JULY 9
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on journeys, deciphering messages, getting most from educational materials. Be direct, specific — refuse to sacrifice quality for temporary accolade.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who is loquacious may be persuasive. Key, however, is to get beneath the surface. Reject "quick solutions." Do some detective work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on partnership, public relations, legal documents, marital status. Home environment, domestic situation becomes more important than in past days.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): See people and places in realistic light. Steer clear of self-deception. One who is poetic, sensitive and psychic plays key role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Involvement, intense feelings, emotions are featured.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your abode, security, family relationships, budget. Use material at hand. Don't go too far form a montage. Key is sagacious.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar position highlights self-assertion, added confidence, willingness to socialize and experimentation. What was roadblocked gets new lease.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New contacts, ideas are featured. Movement replaces moribund situation. What was roadblocked gets new lease.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on consolidation, pulling together, getting appraisals, analyzing budget. Use material at hand. Don't go too far form a montage. Key is sagacious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some of your ingratiating qualities surface. Your loquaciousness returns.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You regain sense of authority. Control returns. What was a chaotic situation becomes something you can handle.

Aid Varied

Orange County Senior Citizens will benefit from a variety of efforts.

Providing special transportation is the aim of the Orange County Community Development Council, and through the efforts of the South Orange County Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) arrangements have been made for special discounts and services.

Some theaters, a pharmacy, restaurant and Anaheim Stadium are discounting prices.

Free sport fishing licenses are available to persons receiving aid from the State of California Supplemental Program for the Aged who are over 62 and who have resided in the state for five years.

The Department of Motor Vehicles will issue an identification card upon proof of age to seniors who do not drive but would like an "accepted" ID.

A film series will run through August in the Costa Mesa City Council Chambers Fridays at 1 p.m. A donation of $1 is asked for the series. Punch, coffee and popcorn will be provided. Further information is available at 556-5391.

Anyone wishing to know about additional offers may call the Community Referral and Information Service, 835-4357.

In an all-out drive, CDC is raising matching funds for special transportation. Twenty percent of a grant from Caltrans must be met by July 15 so CDC can purchase 10 12-passenger, radio-equipped vans.

At present, it is estimated that one of five seniors who need special transportation is being served.

To raise funds, CDC is taking orders for plants, which sell from $6 to $15. Orders may be placed by calling the Senior Opportunities Service office, 751-3136 or CDC, 979-2050.

Jump Suits Only a Few

By ERMA BOMBECK

If you ever hear that I jumped into a jumpsuit, don't believe it. I was pushed.

This has to be the Brand X of the fashion industry.

There are only six women in this country who look well in jumpsuits. Five of them are terminal and the other was sired by a Xerox machine.

Out of sheer curiosity, I was rummaging through a rack of them when a saleswoman approached and asked, "Which size are you? 12? 14? 16?"

"Yes," I said.

"All three. My bust is a 12, my waist a 14, and my hips 16."

"Try the 14," she said dryly.

"The fitting room is behind better dresses."

The fitting room was something I had never seen before. It was a community deal — a large room with 16 mirrors on the wall, a rack in the center to hang discards and a woman by the door to make sure you didn't wear out any more than you wore in.

A fitting room to me has always been like a confessional — where my body and my contrition take up the entire room. There is no room for anyone else. I looked around. All eyes seemed to be focused on one woman. She weighed about six pounds and was trying on a jumpsuit...one of the six women mentioned above. It slid on easily, up over her hips and onto her arms. I winced as she distributed the cloth left over around her waist.

I looked at the crowd who could not take their eyes off her. I had seen that look of resentment and pain on only one other occasion. It was a Charlton Heston movie just before the door slid back between the Christians and the lions.

Inching closer, I whispered, "Lady, you better get out of here before they tear you to shreds."

It was my turn. For 15 minutes,

AT WIT'S END

I tugged and inched my way into the jumpsuit and looked into the mirror. The chest was disguised as a back, the stomach strained at the buttons, the legs were numb without circulation and the hems wrinkled around the floor.

"How do you...?"

"You get a carton of water pills with every suit," offered the salesperson.

I didn't buy the jumpsuit, but what the heck. For awhile seven women forgot about the Panama Canal.

day for "In Fashion," with Sunday matinees scheduled for 3 p.m. at SCR's Third Step Theater, 1827 Newport Blvd., Costa Mesa. Reservations 646-1363.

CALLBOARD — The Westminster Community Theater is reminding prospective performers who can act, sing and dance that auditions for the rock musical "Godspell" will be held Sunday, July 18, at 2 and 7 p.m. and Monday, July 19, at 7 p.m. in the theater, 7272 Maple St., Westminster. . . director Stan Pritchard is looking for a cast of five men and five women in the 20-35 range for the show, which opens Sept. 10. . .

BACKSTAGE — Costa Mesa's Kent Johnson, one of the area's better known directors, steps across the footlights later this month in an original musical, "The Orphans," to be presented by the Ana-Modjeska Players. . . other local cast members are Zoreene Burlin of Costa Mesa and Fountain Valley's Johanna Lepley and Marc Ratter. . . the show opens July 23 for three weekends with an 8 p.m. curtain at the Loara School, 1601 W. Broadway, Anaheim. . .

ENTERTAINMENT

'Nessie' To Star

TOKYO (AP) — The fabled Loch Ness monster is to star in a $7-million dollar, joint Japanese-British movie, with filming due to start this fall using a Japanese replica of "Nessie."

The contract to make the movie, the first joint venture of major British and Japanese film producers was signed in Tokyo Wednesday by Isao Matsuoka, vice president of the Toho Motion Picture Company, Euan Lloyd, representing Michael Carreras, who will be in charge of actual production, and television personality David Frost.

Fuel of Future: Oil Alternatives Abound, But Their Technology Is Costly

Editor's Note: We hear a great deal about other, exotic sources of energy during the oil embargo — power from the sun, windmills, coal gasification, etc. Some said they could free us from foreign oil dependence. What's happened since the Arabs turned the oil back on? This first of two articles on energy alternatives brings things up to date.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK AP Business Writer

It is possible today to warm your home at night with heat from the sun, run your car on fuel made from wheat or power your electric toothbrush with the wind. It's all possible, but unlikely to happen soon.

Since the oil embargo in late 1973, and the sudden jump in oil prices that followed, the dream of a cheap, clean and unlimited supply of energy has led a handful of people to build solar collectors on their roofs, install methane-burning engines in their cars or erect windmills in their backyards.

AND MILLIONS OF dollars have been poured into research and development of these alternative energy sources since American motorists waited an hour in line to buy gasoline. Such spending by government and industry jumped from $145.3 million in 1973 to $402.6 million in 1975, according to a survey prepared for the U.S. House Committee on Science and Technology. The share of industry and government energy research money going to alternate sources has grown from roughly 9 percent in 1973 to 16 percent in 1975. The rest has gone to the more conventional energy sources.

Most research money supplied by industry goes to energy forms it currently produces and sells; petroleum is No. 1. More government money goes to nuclear research than anything else.

IN FISCAL 1976, for instance, the Energy Research and Development Administration spent almost half a billion on the breeder nuclear reactor, four times the amount allocated to any other single item.

More exotic energy alternatives account for only a fraction of the nation's total needs. Oil, natural gas and coal carry most of the load and will for some time to come.

Those who determine how research money will be spent foresee only a limited role for solar, geothermal and synthetic fuel energy in the next decade. The Federal Energy Administration, estimates they will supply only about 1 percent of the total energy in 1985.

For the most part, the technology needed to replace some of the limited oil with unlimited sun or wind is there. The hold-up barring their widespread use is economic: Although the world price of crude oil has quadrupled in the past three years, it is still cheaper than most of the alternatives, say government and energy industry experts.

AND SOME INDUSTRY projects to produce a synthetic gas from coal or wring oil from shale rock, which were begun in earnest shortly after the embargo, sit idle.

"We had perceived the inevitable transformation to the more abundant resources well before the embargo," said A. L. Shrier, who directs special energy projects for Exxon Corp., the nation's largest oil company.

That alternate fuels have not yet become competitive with Mideast oil was noted in June by Nicholas Sarkis, director of the Arab Petroleum Research

NEWS ANALYSIS

Center, when he predicted that the oil exporting countries will raise their prices again later this year.

A look at other problems shows why alternative energy sources haven't developed more quickly:

— CONSUMER MARKETS for new products, such as solar collectors or windmills, are undeveloped.

— The capital costs of some new energy forms are tremendous.

Some homeowners, for instance, could reduce their monthly utility bills by installing a rooftop solar collector to provide hot water and room heat. But estimates of the cost of such collectors range from $4,400 to $8,000. It would take 10 to 20 years to pay for them with savings in utility bills, depending on whether they replace expensive electrical heating or cheaper oil or gas.

— INDUSTRY FACES enormous capital costs if it pursues the production of synthetic fuels.

Several coal-to-gas projects are in the planning stages, but such plants could cost as much as $800 million. The gas they would produce would cost $3 to $5 per thousand cubic feet, compared with the current regulated price of 52 cents per thousand cubic feet of new, interstate gas.

"We hear a great deal of talk about the need to develop new technology for coal conversion," R. R. Breckenfeld of Shell Oil Co. said. "The real problem is not the availability of technology, but that the technology that is available is too expensive."

June Car Sales Race Toward Record

DETROIT (AP) — Americans bought domestic new cars in June, 1975, when the industry was still stuck in a two-year recession. The latest year continued its rapid climb from a severe slump to the third best sales year in its history.

The nation's auto makers reported a combined daily selling rate of 31,890 cars for the month, a 29 percent rise over June, 1975, and the highest tempo since July, 1973, when the industry was in the middle of a boom before the Mid-East oil embargo.

All together, the four U.S. makers reported sales of 829,146 cars in 26 selling days last month, up from 618,763 in 25 days in June, 1975, when the industry was still stuck in a two-year recession. The latest year compared with 24,751 a year ago and 32,316 in July 1973.

Income Loss Told

Data Technology, Costa Mesa, has reported that for the year ended May 1, net income was $610,000, or 50 cents per share, compared with $779,000, or 64 cents, reported for the year ended May 3, 1975.

Income from continuing operations was $464,000, or 38 cents, for the year ended May 1, down from $771,000, or 63 cents, in fiscal 1975. Sales from continuing operations for fiscal 1976 were $10,502,000, down 18 percent for fiscal 1975 sales of $12,754,000.

Fund Total Eyed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California expects a $645-million year-end balance in its unemployment insurance fund, but should have a $3-billion cushion to weather another big recession, a study of the fund says.

However, William Lawson, spokesman for the state Employment Development Department, said, "All in all, I think the fund is in good shape. We're going to pay out less than we take in."

Facility Planned

S-C Division of Gulton Industries, Inc., Costa Mesa, has announced plans for construction of a second manufacturing facility on the Whittier Avenue.

The S-C Division of Gulton has occupied the adjoining property since 1960.

Phone Earnings Up

Pacific Telephone has reported an increase in earnings for the second quarter.

For the three-month period ended May 31, earnings per common share were 52 cents, compared with 44 cents for the same period in 1975. Earnings for the 12-month period ended May 31 were $1.98 a share, compared with $1.69 for the like 12 months of 1975.

Board Chairman J. W. Huff said higher earnings resulted from rate increases that went into effect in August, 1975, and January, 1976.

NEW BUSINESS (AP) — Saying that a balance is needed between economic and environmental concerns, the county Grand Jury has recommended relaxing air pollution restrictions in order to attract new industry.

Citing the "economic consequences of overzealous use of air pollution restrictions on industry," the 1975-76 Grand Jury said there has been a tendency to stop new industry from locating in Los Angeles County if the industry would be a source of any — even minute — air pollutants.

Walk, Fingers PUC Hangs Up on Fee Plea

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Public Utilities Commission (PUC) has turned down a Pacific Telephone proposal to charge for directory assistance for regular residential and business use.

THE TELEPHONE company had proposed a 20 cent per call charge for directory assisted calls over three per month.

In an interim opinion, the PUC limited the scope of its investigation into directory assistance charge plans to proposals relating to areas of "extreme abuse of the current system of no-charge directory assistance." This would include use of directory assistance for credit investigation or in greater proportion than appear necessary.

Earlier, the PUC had severed assistance charge plans from the current Pacific Telephone $119 million rate increase application. It had said it would treat the issue separately, expanding its investigation to cover the other 28 telephone companies operating in the state.

"WE DO NOT regard ordinary residential and business use of directory assistance to fall within that category of extreme abuse, particularly in view of the high turnover of telephone subscriptions, the large percentage of unlisted numbers and the multiplicity of telephone directories within single area codes," said the PUC.

It declared it believed the use of directory assistance to obtain current, accurate listings for subscribers not in the directory "is fully legitimate" and should continue to be available without charge.

BURBANK — Walt Disney Productions has announced that it has reached agreement with Mitsui Real Estate Development Company Ltd. and Keisei Electric Railway Company Ltd. in cooperation with Mitsui and Company Ltd. to proceed with the second, or design, phase for a Disney-oriented amusement theme park to be located on a 600-acre peninsula bordering Tokyo Bay known as Oriental Land.

Oriental Land, a site which has been committed to the development of a total recreational complex, is situated in Chiba Prefecture in the approximate center of the national capital region of Tokyo.

During the second phase, which should require approximately 12 months, the companies will plan, design and engineer the theme park, develop construction cost estimates, prepare the final definitive agreement and establish guidelines for the management and operations of the Japanese theme park.

Upon completion, both Walt Disney Productions and the Japanese companies will have the right to withdraw from the project.

Cool Dinners Use Microwave Oven With Care

By SYLVIA PORTER

People who want to prepare balanced, cooked dinners in a few minutes on hot summer nights are responding to the appeal of cool cooking with microwave ovens, America's first space-age appliance to come of age.

"It's the most important appliance development since homeowners began acquiring freezers along with refrigerators," says William W. George, president of Litton Industries microwave cooking division (which has about one-third of the market).

Ten years ago, the microwave oven was a novelty; now the industry expects to sell 1,500,000 units in 1976 alone, up more than 55 percent over 1975. Sales in 1975 were 30 percent ahead of the previous year against an actual downturn in sales of conventional cooking appliances; by 1985, the prediction is that 40 million units will be in use; that's one in about every two homes.

THERE IS AGREEMENT THAT microwave cooking is a great time-saver. And there are strong proponents who claim it also has significant energy-saving advantages.

The average family of four can save an estimated $26 a year by using a microwave oven in place of a conventional electric range. The home appliance industry is compiling data to devise a standard for measuring energy consumption. The federal government is reported to have a similar study under way.

The amount of food being cooked plays an important role in the energy consumed by a microwave oven.

IN A SERIES OF TESTS, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (PG&E) for instance, found that the microwave oven saves energy when cooking or reheating small amounts of food. When cooking larger amounts of several different dishes, however, PG&E noted that the microwave used more energy than it would for small amounts of food.

Testing laboratories have found that significant savings are achieved on microwave ovens when they are used exclusively. Conversely, when they are used in conjunction with conventional range or oven, more energy is used.

As an illustration, PG&E found the microwave faster and cheaper to bake four potatoes — but found the gas burner of a range faster and cheaper to cook frozen green beans.

THE KEY QUESTION ABOUT microwave ovens from the beginning, however, has been neither convenience nor relative cost. It is safety.

To give the industry's case first, experts say there have been no documented cases of injury since the oven was developed in 1950. Since then, particularly in the past five years, many improvements have been made.

Microwave radiation is the public's major fear, but this very fear has led to requirements for construction and use of the ovens by the Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) Bureau of Radiological Health. When used according to manufacturer's instructions, and serviced periodically by authorized repairmen, harmful leakages are not likely. Nor is there a hazard from stored microwave energy in food or in the oven.

BUT THERE ARE QUESTIONS about the allowable level of radiation emission on the basis of long-term effect. Prolonged exposure to high levels of microwave energy has produced eye damage in test animals under laboratory conditions. Thus, users should heed these precautions:

- Periodic inspection by an expert is essential to make sure there is no radiation leakage. In many communities, the local health department will test an oven brought to its office. Tests of old or possibly damaged microwave ovens in some cases may be arranged by calling the nearest FDA district office.

- Clean the oven scrupulously. Crumbs and grime that build up around door seals can cause radiation leakage.

- Never turn on the oven when it is empty. Microwaves can be reflected back into the heating element and burn it out faster than normal when there is no food or liquid for absorption. Similarly, no foil should be used.

- Use the correct household voltage for your microwave oven. A portable model needs its own 110-120 volt circuit. A full-size range needs a separate 220-volt line.

'Snoopy' May Aid Pipeline Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Keeping the troubled Alaska pipeline on schedule may be a job for "Snoopy" — not a comic character, but a manned, space-type capsule rolling through hundreds of miles of buried pipe and bouncing high-frequency sound off the steel walls.

An Interior Department source said Wednesday the experimental acoustical device will be tested as an alternative to digging up thousands of the 31,423 joints that join the steel pipeline.

THE WELDS WERE TO HAVE been X-rayed to verify their strength when they were made last year. But reports of discrepancies in the X-rays done by a subcontractor, Ketchbaw Industries, were confirmed, casting doubt on the adequacy of 3,955 welds.

A new study showed there could be more problem welds than that. Arthur Andersen and Co. auditors cast doubt on Alyeska's entire checkup of weld X-rays in a report to the Interior Department.

Alyeska, the consortium of oil companies which is building the $7.7-billion pipeline, is attempting to come up with better records to verify existing X-rays. Without them, the only way to satisfy federal requirements may be to examine all the welds again.

NEW X-RAYS WOULD MEAN digging up 18,000 welds along 270 miles of pipeline. It would be a costly and time-consuming process, and Alyeska and federal officials are studying "Snoopy" as an alternative.

Andersen's report, obtained by The Associated Press, said the firm was instructed to consult with the government if its review "cast doubt on the Alyeska audit," and added: "We believe we have reached that point."

As a result, Deputy Transportation Secretary John Barnum is being sent to Alaska Sunday to investigate the welding mess. Two department experts were set today to begin inspecting the pipeline and five more were to join them July 14.

Bank Merger Okayed

A proposal by Wells Fargo Bank for the merger of Eldorado Bank, Tustin, with Wells Fargo Bank has been approved in principle by the directors of Eldorado Bank.

The announcement was made by Eldorado Bank President, Eldorado Bank, and A. William Barkan, executive vice president, Wells Fargo Bank.

The proposal, which is subject to the preparation and execution of a definitive merger agreement and to the approval of the boards of directors and shareholders of the banks, and of regulatory authorities, calls for payment of $22 a share by Wells Fargo for the 125,000 shares outstanding of Eldorado Bank stock.

Auto Workers Strike

DETROIT (AP) — A strike by 4,100 auto workers at a key Chrysler Corp. engine plant could force the shutdown of company assembly plants and the layoff of thousands of other workers, officials say.

Members of United Auto Workers Local 372 walked off the job at the engine plant in suburban Trenton, Mich., Wednesday after negotiations failed to resolve a dispute centering on wages and benefits.

Another 400 Chrysler tool and die workers struck the auto maker later in the day, also in a dispute over working conditions. But company spokesmen said the second walkout would have no immediate impact on other operations.

For Everybody Study Calls For Child Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should provide child care facilities for all families regardless of income, instead of concentrating on families on welfare, a federally sponsored report on women says.

The National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year warned in a report to President Ford that the nation faces a crisis in child care because of a shortage of quality day care centers at a time when mothers are taking jobs outside the home in record numbers.

child care is still primarily designed to shift mothers away from public assistance rolls and into jobs.

"Unfortunately, such an approach tends to label child care a poor people's program and to produce, too often, a program of poor quality due to inadequate funding."

THE COMMISSION called for a new federal study of child care facilities to survey the quality of existing centers and to determine the demand for child care. The last government survey, published in 1968, was based on statistics now 12 years old.

More recent figures gathered by the Senate Finance Committee showed that in 1972 there was room for only one million children in licensed day care centers and family day care homes.

MORE THAN six times that many children under 6 need day care facilities, the commission said. It cited Census Bureau figures showing that from 1970 to 1975, the number of working wives and women heading families grew by two million to a record 14 million.

More than five million of the working mothers have children under 6, the commission said.

Congress passed a comprehensive child care bill in 1972, but it was vetoed by then President Nixon. Similar legislation has been pending for two years. Congress has given some relief to parents, however, by permitting tax deductions for child care costs.

Spraying Permits Weighed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Do farmers have to file environmental impact reports before using pesticides on their crops?

A recent opinion by the state attorney general said they did, but state agriculture officials aren't certain what to do about it.

Herschell Mills, assistant director of the state Food and Agriculture Department, said the problem is under discussion by the department and its parent Agriculture and Services Agency.

Assistant Director Dave Bingham said county agricultural commissioners have been instructed to continue to issue pesticide permits.

Board member M.E. Willson said it was "just asinine" to require environmental impact reports (EIRs) everytime a farmer used a pesticide. "We can lose our crops in the meantime," he said.

Esperanza Team Wins in Olympics

Twelve students from Esperanza School for the trainable mentally retarded in Mission Viejo won medals at the California Special Olympics held at UCLA.

The students, part of a 16-member team from the school, competed against 2,500 participants in the event designed by the Kennedy Foundation to give handicapped youngsters the opportunity to compete and achieve in sports.

IN TRACK AND FIELD events, David Grimes took first in the standing broad jump and Kelly Corcoran third in the mile run. Greg Ahlman won the wheelchair slalom and scored second in the 25-yard wheelchair dash.

Three women students won awards in the pentathlon, a series of five track and field events. Linda Vanaudoll placed first and Judy Vanaudoll and Peggy Bonk tied for third.

Carol Perkins took a first and Mike Yuhnke a second in bowling competition.

In swimming, Eric May won the breaststroke and was second for the butterfly. Barbara Corzine took first in the backstroke; Pam Cole first in diving, and Kathy Ramey second in the backstroke.

OTHER STUDENTS WHO WON

Becky Heinzen, Esperanza's physical education teacher, said each of the students took a first in previous county competitions.

The competitors were sponsored by the Mission Viejo Swim and Racquet Club, Mission Viejo Men's Club, Mission Viejo Women's Club, the Cosmopolitans of Newport Beach and four private citizens.

Miller Takes British Open Lead

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Johnny Miller fired four birdies on the last six holes today for a four-under-par 68 and took the second-round lead in the British Open golf championship with a 36-hole total of 140.

Two strokes back was Hubert Green who shot a two-under par 70 to go with an opening 72.

Christy O'Connor Jr. of Ireland, one of three co-first round leaders at 69, shot a 73 and was tied with Green at 142.

Meanwhile, 19-year-old Severiano Ballesteros of Spain and Norio Suzuki of Japan, who also had 69s Wednesday, were having problems.

Ballesteros turned in two-over-par 36 and was one under for the tournament while Suzuki carded three bogeys for a first-nine 37 and was at even par.

Tom Kite, who headed the U.S. contingent after the first round with 70, shot himself immediately into trouble by starting the second round with three bogeys — all five — on the first three holes.

Tom Weiskopf fired a 72 today for a two round total of 145. Tom Watson also had a 72 and now totals 147. Sam Snead has a two-day 154, carding a 75 today.

Miller, who shot a par-72 Wednesday over the 7,001-yard Royal Birkdale Course, made the turn today in par 34. He also matched par on each of the first three holes on the back nine on the dry, hard links, then sizzled home.

The blond U.S. pro birdied the par-five No. 13 and the par-two 14th. Then, after pars on the No. 15 and No. 16, he closed with pair of birdies.

Green made the turn in a one-under-par 33, thanks to birdies on the fourth and fifth holes that wiped out a second-hole bogey-five.

Four strokes back was favored

Jack Nicklaus, a two-time British Open champion, who shot 70 to go with an opening round 74. Nicklaus birdied No. 8 to go out in 33. Jack, who had complained Wednesday about the condition of the greens and the pin placements, got the birdie with a 40-foot putt.

Then he dropped a couple of strokes with two bogeys on the first three holes on the back nine but picked them up on with birdies on the 13th and 15th. He finished with a birdie on No. 18.

"I gave away a lot of shots, but British golf is like that," Nicklaus said.

PHILADELPHIA—Did a clubhouse meeting in this city Monday night turn the tide in favor of the Los Angeles Dodgers?

That question will only be answered in the future but a three-game sweep of the potent Philadelphia Phillies, the National League East leaders, has the Dodgers believing in themselves again.

tory, extending the Phils' losing streak to four, longest of the campaign.

The Dodgers won it with three runs in the seventh and Ron Cey, the man who called Monday night's meeting of players, feels it wouldn't have happened the same way two weeks ago.

"Had we fallen behind a week or two ago, we'd have rolled over and died. We had lost faith and lost pride.

"I firmly believe that the meeting drove us out of our shell and gave us an improved attitude.

"The sweep here is especially satisfying for that reason. It's a reminder to us of our capability."

National League All-star first baseman Steve Garvey agrees with Cey.

"There was a feeling we had to get together before it was too late," he said. "And we had to do it among ourselves, on our own, without Walt Alton and the coaches being involved. We had been wasting talent, wasting time. This sweep only proves it."

In Wednesday night's game, it was shoddy infield play that did in the Phils. Third baseman Mike Schmidt made a pair of errors that led in three runs including the winning marker in the seventh on a wild throw.

The Dodgers jumped out to a 2-1 lead in the fourth on Ron Cey's single and a grounder by Reggie Smith that rolled through Schmidt's legs for a two-base error. Dusty Baker drove in the runs.

Ex-college Grid Star Succumbs

STURBRIDGE, Mass. — William Swiacki, a former All-American football player at Columbia, was found dead in his home Wednesday, police said. He was 53.

Swiacki attended Holy Cross and Columbia and received a degree in business administration from the Columbia School of Business in 1947.

He began his football career at Holy Cross and continued playing during a stint in the Air Force. He returned to college football at Columbia, making the All-American team in 1947 as an end. He is best remembered for an outstanding pass reception which helped Columbia beat Army, 21-20, ending a long unbeaten streak by the Cadets.

Sneed to Arizona

TUCSON — John Sneed, basketball coach at Verbum Dei High School in Los Angeles, has been named as assistant basketball coach at the University of Arizona, coach Fred Snowden said Wednesday.

Sneed, 27, has an overall three-season record of 81-10, winning three league championships in the process.

Messersmith Out

SAN FRANCISCO — Right-hander Dick Ruthven, 10-7, of the Atlanta Braves will replace teammate Andy Messersmith, on the National League All-star pitching roster.

Messersmith, who would have made his fourth appearance in an all-star game, was sidelined Tuesday after reinjuring a hamstring muscle.

Mesa Triumphs

Paul Schones of Costa Mesa won the 125cc division motorcycle race at Orange County Fair before 680 fans.

Dave Hunt of Irvine was third in the 125cc division. Other winners included Val Tamiotti of Baldwin Park in the open and Morris Malone of Santa Ana in the 250cc division.

Russians Dominate Canoeing

NEW YORK (AP) — Similar to several Olympic events, canoeing came about more through necessity than sport.

Though canoeing had its early beginnings in North America, this continent has had the least success in medal competition at the Games.

The Eastern European nations have completely dominated the sport, with Russia winning six of a possible seven gold medals at the 1972 Olympics in Munich. Rumania took the other.

This year, Russia's production should increase, mainly because four more events have been added. But much to the dismay of the fans, whitewater canoeing has been removed from these Games. Whitewater canoeing was one of the more popular television events of 1972.

The United States has won but three medals in canoe competition in Olympic history. This year, it doesn't look like the Americans will add to that total.

The two-man canoe, which placed sixth at Munich, returns with veterans Andy Weigand and Roland Muihlen. Those two have totally dominated their event in the United States, but in international competition the finals seem a distant goal. Newport Beach's Chuck Lyda is also a member of the U.S. team.

Lyda will be competing with Andras Toro, a four-time Olympian. Toro began his Olympic career for the Hungarian team in 1960, won a bronze medal for Hungary in 1964, then emigrated to the United States. He became a citizen and competed in '72.

Canadian fans could be in for a surprise this year as Canada is entering a fairly strong contingent in the Games. The Canadian team received sponsorship from a national brewery and the team is much improved.

According to U.S. coach Peter Weigand that is what the U.S. needs to compete on an international level. "If we could receive the funding to allow the kind of training that is necessary for this level of competition, and we added to that all our hard work, then I know that with the talent we have we could be contenders in Moscow in 1980."

Overpowers Tribe Ryan Still Bothered By Pain in Elbow

Nolan Ryan has a slight pain in his arm. The Cleveland Indians, meanwhile, have a slight pain in their batting averages and strikeout totals.

Ryan powered the over-powering form that carried him to three straight 300-plus strikeout seasons before the string was snapped last season by numerous injuries — including one which necessitated elbow surgery. He fanned 10 Indians and hurled the 26th shutout of his career Wednesday night at Anaheim Stadium, blanking the Indians 2-0.

Ryan's 10 strikeouts ran his major league-leading total to 154 and it was the 76th time in his career that he has struck out 10 or more in a game. Five have occurred this year where Ryan's record is presently 7-9.

The Angels, who began the season having lost an American League record-tying 13 straight games to Cleveland at home, reversed the trend in remarkable fashion.

Son's Advice Aids Nicklaus

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Jack Nicklaus was not in a good mood following his first round 74 Wednesday in the British Open, but he did find time for one chuckle involving his new caddie.

"He performed much better than I did," grinning out the Golden Bear, now played out of North Palm Beach, Fla., "He scored 68 and I had a 74."

The caddie is his son Jack Jr., 14.

"It was fun for me to have him along," Jack Sr. said. "He'd suggest a six iron so I would use a seven. I hit a bit farther than he does."

Jack Jr. took over the caddie's regular job during a practice round earlier in the week.

LA's Garvey Outpolls Reds' Perez

NEW YORK — Steve Garvey of Los Angeles beat out Tony Perez of Cincinnati as the starting National League first baseman in Tuesday's All-star game in Philadelphia to prevent the Reds from sweeping the entire NL infield in the 47th classic.

Garvey is the only Dodgers and Angels starter in the annual game.

Joe Morgan, second baseman for the Reds, was the top vote getter with 3,079,811. He will be starting his fifth straight all-star game. The MVP from the National League is batting .333 with 14 home runs and 60 runs batted in.

He will be joined in the starting lineup by four teammates including Johnny Bench, catcher; Pete Rose, third base; Dave Concepcion, shortstop; and George Foster, outfield.

The two remaining outfield posts will be filled by Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia and Dave Kingman of the New York Mets, the major league home run leader.

Boston's Fred Lynn was the top vote getter in the American League with 2,953,664 votes.

Welcome Aboard

By ALMON LOCKABY

James S. "Jim" Linderman of Balboa Yacht Club is a yacht racing enthusiast who has won many races — both "around the buoys" and offshore in whatever boat he happened to be sailing, and under any handicap or rating rule.

During the past couple of decades I have watched Jim's performances in such craft as the H-28 Cappy, the Holiday 30 yawl, Lenero, the eight-meter Prelude, the Nicport-41 Trend, and his present machine, the Ericson-46, Raider.

During those years Jim raced under such handicap rules as the old Arbitrary Handicap which later became the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet (and more recently, Performance Handicap Racing Fleet) then to the Cruising Club of America (CCA) rule and now the International Offshore Rule and all its "marks" (amendments).

ALL OF THIS IS BY way of confirming Jim's right, as he puts it, "to vocalize my observations." In a recent letter to this column, Jim's vocalizing was loud and clear regarding some of the ongoing controversy over the various rating rules under which offshore yacht racing is conducted. Here are some of his observations:

"Perhaps you will recall when I was involved with the early years of PHRF. As president, I ground out a weekly pep letter extolling the virtues of our system and castigating the CCA 'rule beaters.' At any rate, I had the satisfaction of watching the Pacific Handicap grow from a mere handful to the vast fleet it now represents.

"BUT MY POINT IS: There will always be a villain. I can remember, for example, when the L-36 and Cal-40 were cussed and discussed as rule beaters under CCA.

"It is my personal opinion that whatever rating rule that happened to be in effect during the past five or six years would have come for some heavy criticism. We now have a situation that never before existed.

"I suppose it was the advent of the fiberglass boat that triggered it, but whatever, we suddenly had mass production in a field that had heretofore been practically a custom operation. With the increased profits came good hard cash to pay top designers for their best efforts.

"THERE FOLLOWED A PERIOD of fierce competition among major builders to come up with a winner. This produced some really fast boats. It was inevitable. The same thing happened with automobiles, motorcycles, airplanes and anything you can name that is mass produced and used competitively.

"You wouldn't expect to win the Indy 500 with your 1923 Stutz Bearcat—so why expect to win a yacht race with some old bucket. There would be no incentive for a better design if whatever a designer accomplished was destined to be shot down by some sort of 'handicap' rule.

"However, I think the IOR Mark IIIa revision has gone a long way toward that end. If some of those guys would stop bitching long enough to go out and try a race or two under it I think they would be pleasantly surprised.

"WHAT HAS REALLY HAPPENED to ocean racing is it's growing excellence of execution. This is certainly desirable. Besides the improved equipment, the crew work and sail handling of a modern 'hot boat' is beautiful to behold. This is as it should be.

"Any sport worth its salt favors improving the quality of its players. So then, should yacht racing.

"The day when you could pick up a crew in the club's pump room and go out and give an indifferent effort with sloppy sail handling, questionable tactics and faulty navigation is gone forever. That is, if you want to end up in the money. Ocean racing has gone big time and one had better get with it. Why should yacht racing become the only sport where obsolescence is king?"

And there are Jim Linderman's observations for anyone who wants to stand up and cheer — or shoot them down.

Governor's Cup Race Set Today

The Balboa Yacht Club's Governor's Cup match racing series got under way today with skipper representing a dozen clubs expected to participate in the series in Soling version.

The Governor's Cup is the junior version of Long Beach Yacht Club's famed Congressional Cup match racing series. Skippers and crews are 19 years and under.

NATOMA FIRST TO FINISH IN TAHITI RACE
Big Ketch Enters Papeete Harbor

Natoma Finishes First at Tahiti

Don Dalziel's 56-foot ketch Natoma, from Berkeley, crossed the finish line at Papeete, Tahiti at 4:37 p.m. PDT Tuesday to pick up first to finish honors in the 3,571-mile Los Angeles to Tahiti race.

Her elapsed time for the crossing was 21 days, 03 hours, 37 minutes and 37 seconds, about four days short of the record set by the 73-foot ketch Ticonderoga in 1964.

Invering Loube's 48-foot sloop Bravura, from Oakland, finished five hours behind Natoma to take over the handicap lead. Her elapsed time was 21 days, eight hours, 36 minutes and 10 seconds.

Natoma surprised the natives after crossing the finish line by sailing through the gap in the reef and into the harbor under full sail.

There was no report from the other two boats in the race, Henry Grandin's 36-foot sloop Tinsley Light, San Francisco, and Jean-Francois Lussan's 36-footer Tancois.

Tension has not been heard from for six days. With a time allowance of 63 hours she stands a slim chance of winning handicap honors.

Hail Rock and Roll

Two Musicians Defect From Soviet Union

Faced with official disapproval of rock music back home, two young musicians have immigrated from the Soviet Union to an enthusiastic reception from the audience at a very Western saloon in San Francisco.

"We're just as decadent as everyone else — that's why we left," Sasha Lerman, 24, mused as he and partner Yuri Valov prepared for another set at the Old Waldorf nightclub.

Lerman and Valov, 28, decided to leave the Soviet Union several months ago after repeatedly being told that Western rock was a "nyet-nyet."

A federal judge extended the psychiatric evaluation period for convicted bank robber Patricia Hearst an additional 90 days.

The order by U.S. District Court Judge William Orrick Jr. told the director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons to complete the study within 90 days and "report to the court as soon as possible within that time."

Miss Hearst's trial judge, the late Oliver J. Carter, ordered a 90-day psychiatric evaluation April 12 at the request of defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey. That order would have expired Sunday.

Miss Hearst, 22, is at the San Diego correctional facility undergoing the tests.

Robert M. Takasugi, who lived four years in an American detention camp for Japanese-Americans during World War II, has become a federal district judge for Southern California.

"Having my life blotted out for four years has made me sensitive to due process," Takasugi said as he was sworn in. "I have a better perspective on what the Constitution means by due process."

Takasugi said from the age of 11 to 15 he lived in the internment camp at Tule Lake, and his father died there.

President Ford named him to the federal bench in April.

The California developer of the financially troubled Ports O' Call shopping center in Portland said he plans to sell the Oregon complex.

David Tallichet, who owns similar developments in Tallinn, told Port of Portland commissioners that he intends to retain control of two restaurants at the center. The facility is on Swan Island in the Willamette River in the downtown Portland area.

The $3 million center has lost tenants and is virtually empty, with only nine shops and the two restaurants still in operation.

Self-styled mercenary David Bufkin, 39, who admits he recruited Americans who were tried and convicted as mercenaries by an Angolan court recently, wants President Ford to help them "because these individuals were paid in U.S. dollars that came from the United States."

Bufkin, a crop duster in the small Central California community of Kerman, said the money used to hire American mercenaries came from funds paid by the Central Intelligence Agency to pro-Viet Angolans.

President Ford will meet with the U.S. Olympic team at a reception in Plattsburgh, N.Y., on Saturday before traveling to Rhode Island for a dinner with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

President Ford will visit with the Olympic team early in the afternoon at a Plattsburgh State College reception.

Mrs. Ford, who has been curtailing her activities because of a flareup of osteoarthritis in her neck, will skip the Plattsburgh stop and fly separately to Newport, R.I., where she and the President will be guests of the queen and Prince for dinner aboard the British royal yacht Britannia.

Attorney Melvin Belli says a report that Jack Ruby once conferred with Fidel Castro about the possibility of assassinating President Kennedy was "a false story," although Ruby had talked of going to Cuba on a gun-running mission.

"Jack was an intensely loyal American. He worshipped Jack Kennedy," Belli said in San Francisco.

Belli, who described himself as Ruby's attorney and friend, conceded that the late Dallas nightclub owner may have been in Cuba six months before the 1963 assassination but was not involved in a plot to kill Kennedy.

"Jack never saw Castro," he said.

Planner Furor Flares

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ruth Finley was elected chairman of the Huntington Beach Planning Commission Wednesday night, seven days after her term on the panel had officially ended.

The election was viewed in some quarters as a defiance of the City Council.

Mayor Harriett Wieder and Mayor Pro Tem Ron Pattinson had both requested that the planning commissioners put off the election for two weeks when two new members are either appointed or re-appointed.

"I regard this as a flagrant disregard of City Council wishes," Mrs. Wieder said today.

"I am really sorry to hear about the election. The mayor is the last to know," the mayor said.

Mrs. Wieder said that Wednesday night's action would cause her to call for a whole new look at the makeup of all the city's boards and commissions.

She stopped short of saying that the council would make a complete housecleaning of the seven-member planning commission, however.

Mrs. Finley, who was named citizen of the year by the HOME Council for civic and countywide efforts last month, said her election could very well spell the end of her stint on the planning commission.

"I may have the shortest tenure as planning commission chairman on record," she said in a light vein this morning.

She replaced Roger Slates who has served as planning commission chairman for 11 months.

Slates said previously he had hoped to be re-elected.

"We took this action simply because we thought it was the best and most honest thing to do," Mrs. Finley said.

"I feel that Roger (Slates) is scrupulously honest and is extremely ethical but the fact remains that he is encumbered by business interests.

"I feel that 11 months is long enough to serve as chairman and that he shouldn't have the role for another year," she said.

"I don't have to abstain on any issues and will not toady to any interests," she said.

The election itself was clouded by a degree of confusion.

An original agenda didn't include the election but officials said later it was omitted as an oversight.

A second agenda then was prepared to include the election.

When the time came, however, both Slates and Planning Commissioner Prim Shea said they would defer to the City Council's wishes and didn't participate.

They left their positions on the dais and sat in the audience.

But the remaining four members — Mrs. Finley, Brian Parkinson, Joseph Boyle and Edward Kerins — voted to go through with it. Robert Bazil was absent.

They elected Parkinson vice chairman.

The terms of Mrs. Finley and Boyle have expired but the City Council has received a long list of applicants for the two posts and members say they haven't had time to screen the nominees.

Killer Guilty

Tot-slayer Verdict 'Manslaughter'

Patrick Randall Hebert of Huntington Beach was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter late Wednesday in an Orange County Superior Court ruling that sent prosecutor Frank Briseno striding from the courtroom in anger.

Judge William S. Lee reached that verdict after a nonjury trial in which Briseno repeatedly argued that Hebert was clearly guilty of inflicting fatal injuries on Delta Dawn Davidson, 2.

The deputy district attorney vainly pointed out Wednesday that Hebert, 24, of 17441 Koleda Lane, had abused the child on at least one occasion prior to her death last Feb. 18 from what police alleged was a severe beating.

But Deputy Public Defender John Allen successfully argued that there had been no evidence in the trial to refute the defense theory that Delta Dawn suffered her injuries when she fell in the bathroom and struck her head on the toilet seat.

A physician called by the defense testified that many of the injuries later photographed on the child's body could have been caused by such an incident.

Mrs. Betty Davidson, the victim's mother, testified that the injuries suffered by her daughter were inflicted during her absence from the apartment she shared with Hebert.

Mrs. Davidson said she was not aware that the child was ill until later that night when she heard choking sounds coming from her daughter's bedroom.

Delta Dawn died less than an hour later in a local hospital. Mrs. Davidson's first action on learning of the death of the child was to order Hebert to immediately leave her home.

Hebert will be sentenced July 28 to what could be a state prison term of up to 15 years or a county jail term of up to one year.

He looked around with a broad smile as he was led from the courtroom to the county jail Wednesday.

Pier Cycle Crash Kills Downey Man

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A motorcyclist was killed instantly Wednesday night at the Huntington Beach Pier when his bike hit a service road dip at high speed, rocketed airborne and ramed him headfirst into a concrete pier piling.

Richard Mark Harris, 22, of Downey, was pronounced dead at the scene of the 6 p.m. accident.

Investigators said today a Huntington Beach teenager narrowly escaped the same fate in another motorcycle accident in pre-dawn hours on Main Street near Beach Boulevard.

Several friends of Harris watched as he was killed at the pier's base where officers previously had warned him about stunt riding.

Patrolman William Barthelmy interviewed companions who told him the victim had been showing off by roaring under the old pier, much as surfers shoot the pier on their boards.

One companion said Harris had been doing wheel stands on his modified motorcycle shortly before the fatal accident.

Harris was not wearing a helmet.

Harris' remains were taken to Smith's Mortuary in Huntington Beach, where funeral services were pending today.

The second motorcycle accident, which occurred early today, left Ralph G. Dignan, 17, of 18981 Florida St. Huntington Beach, in the intensive care unit at Pacifica Hospital.

He was listed in good condition, despite the fact he suffered head injuries when hurled from a borrowed motorcycle.

Investigators said the motorcycle he was riding struck the center divider, flipping and flinging him into a street sign. He suffered head injuries.

Paid-sex Decoys Tell of Howe Offer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two $4.32-an-hour police decoy prostitutes have told a City Court judge that Rep. Allan T. Howe (D-Utah), offered them $20 for specific sex acts before he was arrested last month on a misdemeanor sex charge.

Dressed in casual pants, sandals and a see-through blouse, Margaret Hamblin covered her face Wednesday in apparent embarrassment when asked what the freshman congressman wanted her to do.

Chief City Prosecutor Phillip Palmer said she didn't have to use the exact language and asked whether Howe proposed sexual acts.

"Yes, he did," she told a hearing on motions to dismiss the charge against Howe of soliciting sex acts for hire.

Her written police report had quoted Howe as using explicit language for the acts.

Trial on the charge was postponed one week to July 19 because of the complexity of motions filed by the defense.

Kathleen Taylor, questioned by defense attorney Dean Mitchell, said she wore "Levis and a top" the night of the arrest.

She said Miss Hamblin did all the talking when Howe approached in his car.

Asked who first mentioned a price for a sex act, Mrs. Taylor said, "Mr. Howe," glancing at the congressman.

He sat silently in the courtroom with his wife, Marlene.

The decoys acknowledged that Miss Hamblin was first to bring up money. They said she asked what Howe would pay, quoting him as saying, "I usually go about $20."

She said they asked if he wanted to pay that much and that he agreed.

The decoys, appearing in public for the first time since Howe was arrested June 12, were called during arguments on a defense motion to dismiss on grounds the congressman was a victim of entrapment.

Howe, who is running for reelection in Utah's 2nd District, acknowledges talking with the decoys but denies the charge. He said he was lured to the area with an invitation to a political social.

The decoys' testimony repeated details of a transcribed dialogue released by police shortly after Howe's arrest, although both women said the conversation had not been recorded or monitored.

Entrapment is one of five grounds on which Mitchell is asking the judge to dismiss the charges.

Raymond Uno took three of the motions under advisement and asked for a hearing Monday on two others, which are based on pretrial publicity and allegations of prosecutorial misconduct.

Two Masked Bandits Rob Bank in HB

Two bandits wearing women's stockings over their faces fled with $2,115 in cash after holding up a Huntington Beach bank this morning.

The two walked into Pacific City Bank, 9104 Adams Ave., at 8:12 a.m., pulled a handgun and took the cash from teller drawers, police said.

The bandits ordered bank employees to lie on the floor and then fled, police reported. No car was seen, officers said.

One of the men was described as about six feet tall with brown hair and a beard showing through his stocking mask.

No description was available for the other man, who served as look out during the incident, police said. There were no customers inside when the robbery occurred.

HB Mom's Death Saves Stricken Child

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A little girl, 8, who will never meet her benefactor's family, has a chance for life today because of the tragic death 11 days ago of a young mother who formerly lived in Huntington Beach.

Relatives of traffic victim Kathryn Ann (Ray) Luedke, 19, authorized donation of her kidneys and eyes for possible organ transplantation if they were undamaged by the car crash that claimed her life.

Today, Mrs. Robert Rumbley, her mother, of 9372 Hyannis Port Drive, Huntington Beach, says a Los Angeles girl under kidney dialysis treatment for three years has received them.

"We'll never know who she is..." Mrs. Rumbley remarked, adding that she wishes to meet the family and express her gratitude some good came of her own tragedy.

Transplant recipients are never identified to donors.

She also says she can understand how grateful that child's mother must be, yet she can well comprehend the awkward emotional position a potential transplant recipient's parents must confront.

"The little girl has been on the kidney machine for three years and all of a sudden a pair of kidneys are available to fit her," Mrs. Rumbley said.

"You want your own little girl to live," she adds, "but you can't want someone else to die."

"I think everyone should consider organ donation," Mrs. Rumbley added, hoping her daughter's death will remind others who might confront a tragic loss in the family.

Ironically, Mrs. Luedke succumbed in Fountain Valley Community Hospital just two days before a new law went into effect allowing motorists to authorize organ transplants in advance for themselves in event of sudden death.

Forms may be obtained at the Department of Motor Vehicles with stickers that attach to the volunteer's driver's license, one of the first items checked by authorities.

Sometimes, even a short delay in such cases renders the organs unusable.

"I think everyone should be aware of this," says Mrs. Luedke, adding the family suggests memorial contributions to the Kidney Foundation in Katherine's name.

A resident of Northridge, Mrs. Luedke was fatally crushed and her infant son Daniel, 10 months, was injured when their car hit a power pole guywire and flipped on Ward Street near Indianapolis Avenue. They were visiting the Rumbley home.

She attended Wardlow Elementary School but the family moved to the San Fernando Valley in her freshman year at Edison High School.

Services were held at Smith's Mortuary in Huntington Beach, with interment at Forest Lawn.

Survivors include her husband, Rodney; her mother and stepfather; her father, Billy W. Ray, of Sepulveda; a brother, Thomas, of the home; sisters Mrs. Carolyn Wingfield, of Denver, Colo., and Jeannene, and Sheryl, of the home.

Others include her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ford, of Wilmington, Del., and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. V.D. Benedict, of Hemet.

Public Defense?

Cella's Aides Plead Poverty

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two of Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr.'s three codefendants may be represented by the public defender's office when their Orange County Superior Court trial gets under way in October.

Or they may be able to retain the lawyers who unsuccessfully represented them in a recent federal court trial with the expected substantial legal tab being picked up the taxpayers.

Those alternatives will face Judge William C. Speirs Friday when he is asked by lawyers for Theodore Schiffman, 53, of Santa Ana and Stephen Robert Evans, 31, of Mission Viejo to allow them to withdraw from the case.

The motion is being opposed by the district attorney's office on the grounds that the prosecution is not satisfied that either of the two men qualifies for the indigent status that would allow Judge Speirs to grant the motion.

The two men are named with Cella, 41, and George Louis Ollendorf, 44, of Laguna Beach, as defendants in a Grand Jury indictment that lists 127 felony counts against the four men.

It is alleged that they siphoned an estimated $2 million in funds from two Orange County hospitals under Dr. Cella's control—Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital, Santa Ana.

All four defendants face sentencing July 19 in Los Angeles federal court following their conviction there last month on charges of Medicare fraud, check fraud and conspiracy.

Attorneys James Riddet and Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.

Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed, in effect, by their legal advisors.

Both men and Ollendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named as defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.

Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two indigees.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

WANTS HIS SEAT
College Teacher Ortell

Instructor Fights for Board Seat

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange Coast College math instructor Michael Ortell, barred last week from taking office on the county school board, is mounting a legal challenge to again win the seat he won in an election last month.

Ortell, who defeated four other candidates in Trustee Area 1, was to have taken office last Thursday. But he was told by Deputy County Counsel John Grisct he could not.

Grisct quoted a section of the state Education Code that apparently bars any employee of a school district from taking office on a county board of education.

The outgoing incumbent, David Brandt, said he will continue to serve in his old seat until the district holds another election.

Ortell will try to see to it that there isn't another election.

Ortell said today he will challenge the deputy county counsel's ruling on several grounds.

First, Ortell said, "I was never informed of that restriction by the registrar of voters" either at the time he took out nomination papers or when he filed them.

Ortell argued that another section of the education code does not apply the definition of "school district" to community college districts, and so there should be no reason he could not take his seat.

Ortell said if his own interpretation of what that code provides is faulty, then he plans a constitutional challenge of that section of the code.

He's hired Garden Grove attorney Paul Crost, who's now researching that possibility.

Crost said he is examining the relationship between the county school board and the community college district to see if Ortell's disqualification can be upheld.

Cadet Calls Honor Code Inconsistent

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A West Point cadet who says the U.S. Military Academy enforces its honor code inconsistently has alleged in federal court here that cadets sold stolen military equipment, cheated on exams and impersonated government officials.

Those cadets, he claims, were never punished for honor code violations — and therefore he shouldn't be either.

The allegations were included Wednesday in affidavits said to have been sworn to by about 20 of the 148 cadets awaiting hearings on charges of violating the academy's honor code.

The individuals who signed the affidavits were not named.

The documents were submitted in federal court to support a suit by one of the cadets under suspicion, Kenneth Harms, 20, of Emerson, N.J. The case is before U.S. District Court Judge Vincent P. Biunno.

Harms has asked Biunno to block a scheduled July 16 military hearing for himself and several others on charges that they cheated on a take-home ex-

March. His claim is that unfair and inconsistent enforcement of the honor code makes its enforcement in his case a violation of his rights.

Yacht Dock Tiffs Ends With Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A City Councilman, who serves on a regional coastal commission, has agreed to pay $2,000 to settle a civil suit brought against him by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners in a dispute over docking fees for his yacht.

The settlement was announced Wednesday by the harbor commissioners.

Councilman Louis R. Nowell was charged with berthing his 51-foot vessel Sharolyn at a public dock for 120 days without paying harbor fees.

Commissioners originally sued Nowell for $7,920, the amount they contended he deserved to pay under harbor regulations.

Nowell countered that the Harbor Department had given him permission to dock at the location and had never intended to bill him.

The Sharolyn caused criticism of Nowell in 1974 when real estate developers reportedly rented a slip to the city councilman at half the normal rate.

Nowell claimed the preferential treatment did not influence a later favorable vote he gave the real estate firm in his capacity as South Coast Regional Coastline Commissioner.

Last March the councilman charged that the docking fee disputes were the result of persons "politically trying to see that I was required to vacate my office."

Mondale Pondered

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter conferred today with Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, the latest of a half-dozen possible running mates expected to make the pilgrimage to Plains.

"I'm very pleased to be invited to meet and talk in Plains with the next president of the United States," Mondale said.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Mondale and his wife, Joan, outside their home before the meeting started.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was to arrive later in the day for an interview.

A meeting is scheduled next Thursday for that purpose.

Parkinson said that Wednesday night's election was justified because the commission's bylaws state that it should be carried out as soon as practical in July.

Parkinson said it was the commission's job to complete its duties as it sees fit and that the council has options to make changes.

The terms of office are for one year.

Rites Set For Victim Of Slaying

A large turnout is expected tonight and Friday at funeral rites for a Santa Ana teenager gunned down five days ago in Huntington Beach.

Petitions charging seven boys, aged 16 and 17, with murder have been filed in Orange County Juvenile Court and hearings for the suspects are pending.

Michael Calleros, 17, was killed almost instantly early Saturday when hit in the right eye by a shot from a passing car in a west Huntington Beach apartment complex.

Bitterness over a broken romance involving a 15-year-old girl standing by the victim at the time is blamed for the murder.

A wake for Calleros is set at 8 p.m. tonight in the First Assembly of God Church of Santa Ana, followed by funeral services Friday at 10 a.m. in the Latin American Free Methodist Church, Santa Ana.

Spokesmen for MacDougall Family Mortuary said survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Calleros; brothers, Albert, Orlando, Alexander and Mark, and a sister, Mrs. Jeanette Velazquez.

Burial will be at Fairhaven Memorial Park.

Wall Outlet Set $15,000

HB Blaze

A charred electrical wall outlet fixture has been identified as the cause of a $15,000 fire that gutted one unit in a Huntington Beach apartment house owned by blind pop singer Jose Feliciano 10 days ago.

The blaze in an upstairs unit occupied by John Vail, of 7611 Washington Ave., was quickly controlled and extinguished due to swiftness in spotting it.

Huntington Beach Fire Department paramedics Joe Mohney and Chuck Reynolds noticed the column of rising smoke and headed for it while returning from another fire.

Fire Capt. Roger Hosmer said Wednesday that examination at a manufacturer's laboratory has confirmed beyond doubt a faulty socket caused the 8:15 a.m. blaze a week ago Tuesday.

His Client Little Uptight

EL MONTE (AP) — Masaru Hisamune, a Los Angeles County probation officer, was put at a definite disadvantage when one of his probationers arrived at his office for an unexpected meeting.

The probationer came in Wednesday carrying a four-foot medieval broadsword and a loaded shotgun, which he pointed at a surprised Hisamune, reported El Monte police.

But Hisamune quickly knocked the shotgun aside, deflecting a blast into the ceiling, and wrestled the man to the floor, police said. He held his assailant pinned until El Monte police arrived.

Neighbors Lose Irvine Bridge Round

A last-minute "stop the bridge" group in Irvine turned out for Wednesday's Transportation Commission meeting to protest the proposed Yale Avenue bicycle bridge above the railroad tracks.

The two dozen citizens mostly lived on Eccelstone Circle that is adjacent to the proposed $100,000 bridge. They asked that the bridge plans be abandoned and that the city consider constructing a tunnel instead.

The commission listened to the protest by Frank Minnino, who brought petition signatures from about two dozen neighbors. But commissioners voted 3-2 to reaffirm their support for the bicycle bridge and referred the item to the city council for its meeting Tuesday.

The council is scheduled to accept a bid on the bridge project, plus bids on two other projects that have been lumped together with the bridge.

However, Juanita Moe, one of the commissioners, said today she fears the last-minute protest might throw a "monkey wrench" into the bridge plans.

Construction on the overcrossing was scheduled to begin as soon as the low bid was accepted.

Completion was set for Sept. 1.

Mrs. Moe said the city hoped to complete the bridge by the time school opens in the fall.

Minnino, a resident of the Ranch, told the commission that the proposed bridge, which would span Yale Avenue above the tracks, wouldn't look good and would allow people using the bridge to look into the backyards of the Eccelstone Circle residents. He called for a tunnel.

City engineer John Brown told the commission that building a tunnel would cost about $400,000.

Mrs. Moe added that a 400-foot tunnel would present "security problems" and would set back the entire project about one year.

She said that discussions on the Yale Avenue bridge began in September 1975.

However, Minnino disputed

Brown's figures. He claimed the tunnel would require only 40 feet and therefore would cost only $40,000. Brown said that was not so.

Commissioners Juanita Moe, John Carlyle and Lyndon Calderline all voted to reaffirm their support of the bridge. Pat Bonner and Marsha Polizzi voted against the motion, saying they believed the questions raised by Minnino should be answered.

Gifts Queried Campaign Donors Name Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adult donors to political campaigns can use their children to circumvent legal limits on presidential campaign gifts, the Wall Street Journal said today.

The newspaper conducted a random telephone poll of Democratic and Republican campaign donors and said it found that a few of them are as young as 5. One example it cited was from Long Beach. There was no indication how many child donors there are.

Parents say the giving is legal because their children's donations come from the youngsters' own money and that the children are asked whether they want to contribute, the newspaper said.

Still, political giving in the name of children could easily become a subterfuge, the Journal said.

Federal law prohibits an individual from giving more than $1,000 per campaign to any one federal candidate. It also prohibits individuals from making donations in the name of another person.

David Fiske, a spokesman for the Federal Election Commission, told the Journal regulation (See DONORS, Page A2)

The motion is being opposed by the district attorney's office on the grounds that the prosecution is not satisfied that either of the two men qualifies for the indigent status that would allow Judge Speirs to grant the motion.

The two men are named with Cella, 51, and George Louis Ollendorf, 44, of Laguna Beach, as defendants in a Grand Jury indictment that lists 27 felony counts against the four men.

It is alleged that they siphoned an estimated $2 million in funds from two Orange County hospitals under Dr. Cella's control—Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital, Santa Ana.

All four defendants face sentencing July 19 in Los Angeles federal court following their conviction there last month on charges of Medicare fraud, check fraud and conspiracy.

Attorneys James Riddet and Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.

Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed. In (See INDIGENT, Page A2)

School Board Seeks To Cut Tax Rate

By HILARY KAYE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Confronted with nearly $700,000 of unexpected money, Irvine school trustees said Wednesday they would like to trim the tax rate and pass the savings along to the taxpayers.

The new money is the result of additional state aid and also assessed valuations in Irvine that came in higher than predicted.

At least three trustees—Frank Hurd, June Foley and Lee Sicoli—said they'd like to lower the tax rate as much as possible.

But Hurd, who referred to Irvine as a "Cadillac" school district, was the most vocal in his belief that the rate could be cut by as much as 25 cents.

District officials first proposed a tax rate of $5.25 per $100 assessed valuation—slicing a penny off last year's rate.

Even if school trustees agree on setting a lower rate, Irvine taxpayers will pay a bigger tax bill next year due to the higher assessed values in Irvine.

District officials had expected an increase in assessed values of 21.5 percent, bringing $243,409,664 into the budget.

Instead, the values climbed 25.1 percent, raising the amount of school district money to $250,725,427.

The second increase was in the area of state aid, where district officials had anticipated receiving $5,190,301. Instead, because of a just-signed educational finance measure, the district will receive $5,466,923.

Together, the two sources will net an extra $682,250.

Medics' Van On Toro Run Hit, Damaged

A paramedic van from the Laguna Hills fire station was wrecked Tuesday when it was hit by a car while rushing to the aid of an El Toro heart attack victim.

Although the van turned turtle and slid several yards on its roof, none of the three paramedics inside was injured. They were identified as Capt. Mark Hawkins, Eng. Tommy Pawloski and Mark Bodenbender, a trainee from Huntington Beach.

California Highway Patrol Officer H. B. Gillespie said the unit was eastbound on El Toro Road with sirens blaring and lights flashing.

The intersection at Muirlands Boulevard was blocked by traffic so the unit crossed over into the clear westbound lanes, he said. It started to turn right in front of the stopped cars to go south on Muirlands.

But Gillespie said it was struck in the rear by another eastbound vehicle reportedly driven by a 17-year-old Santa Ana youth whose identity was withheld. After the impact, the van rolled over and slid down Muirlands.

"I can't believe no one was injured," said Battalion Chief George Toussaint, one of many California Division of Forestry-Orange County Fire Department officials at the scene.

Although the damage to the $14,000 vehicle was still being assessed today, Toussaint said he thought the loss would be total. The van also carried equipment valued at about $16,000.

A relief unit was brought to the scene, equipped and in service by 4 p.m., about two hours after the accident and there were no calls while the paramedics were out of service.

A department spokesman said Hawkins crawled out of the overturned van and told an engine company accompanying the paramedics unit to continue on to help the heart attack victim.

That person today was reportedly in stable condition at Mission Community Hospital.

No citations were issued at the scene but officers said the investigation would continue.

While fire officials and photographers milled around the overturned van, witnesses gathered on the sidewalks to see what had happened. One passing car crunched into another, causing minor damage to both cars.

Stores Sue Developer of Coast Center

Damages totaling more than $35 million are being demanded from the Segerstrom family of Costa Mesa by tenants of the South Coast Village shopping complex in 20 lawsuits charging the defendants with fraud and breach of contract.

The actions on file today in Orange County Superior Court allege that the Segerstroms and the original leasing agents have failed to develop the complex on the lines promised when tenants signed agreements.

The Segerstroms said the claims were without foundation and pledged a vigorous defense. They said the legal actions are "inconsistent with the establishment commercial success of the village."

It is alleged that the defendants have failed to produce in South Coast Village a shopping center with the amenities of a South Coast Village, such as a Farmer's Market, Ports O'Call in San Pedro or Ghirardelli Square in San Francisco.

Final Solution Author Says Ripper a Trio

LONDON (AP) — Jack the Ripper was actually three men engaged in a political coverup operation, a book published today says.

Jack the Ripper is the name given to the unfound slayer of young women in London's West End in 1888.

Stephen Knight, in the latest of a string of theories put forth about the case, says the murders were committed not by one man, but by three.

He maintains the three included Queen Victoria's physician, a painter and a coachman.

According to his book "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," the three killed four women because common to the queen's grandson, which the prime minister feared would lead to scandal. The account says one other woman was killed because of a mistake in identity.

tions are being drafted to prevent using children to evade donor limits. Fiske said the commission intends to require that gifts by donors under 18 must be made knowingly and voluntarily from a fund owned or controlled by the minor.

Judging from the telephone poll, Democrat Jimmy Carter "appears to have by far the biggest kiddie corps" of donors, the Journal said.

It said Francis Hertzog Jr. identified as an ophthalmologist from Long Beach and an old Carter friend, had given the legal limit of $1,000 to Carter more than a year ago. Seven of Hertzog's children also were listed for donations totaling $6,000 more, including $785 from Kate, 5, and another $785 from Lars, 7, the newspaper said.

The paper quoted Hertzog as saying all the children's donations came from trust funds established for them years earlier.

"They were all asked whether they wanted to contribute," he was quoted as saying. "It's all the kids' own money, not mine."

The newspaper said Carter's campaign treasurer, R. J. Lipshutz, has six children who have all given money to Carter, "but their father emphasizes that they have given their own money."

On the Republican side, the newspaper said it found that one $1,000 donation to Ronald Reagan came from 16-year-old Joe Bennett of Harlan, Ky.

"What? Me? Political contributions?" the newspaper quoted young Bennett as saying. "You'll have to ask my dad about that. He handles all that stuff for me."

The father, Clyde Bennett, was quoted as saying, "All my family has their own money."

The newspaper said that elder Bennett arranged a total of 10 gifts to the Reagan campaign of $1,000 each from his sons, daughter, in-laws and others.

Both men and Ollendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named as defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.

Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two indictees.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

Teacher Challenges

For His Board Seat

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Orange Coast College math instructor Michael Ortell, barred last week from taking office on the county school board, is mounting a legal challenge to again win the seat he won in an election last month.

Ortell, who defeated four other candidates in Trustee Area 1, was to have taken office last Thursday. But he was told by Deputy County Counsel John Grisot he could not.

Grisot quoted a section of the state Education Code that apparently bars any employe of a school district from taking office on a county board of education.

The outgoing incumbent, David Brandt, said he will continue to serve in his old seat until the district holds another election.

Ortell will try to see to it that there isn't another election. Ortell said today he will challenge the deputy county counsel's ruling on several grounds.

First, Ortell said, "I was never informed of that restriction by the registrar of voters" either at the time he took out nomination papers or when he filed them.

Ortell argued that another section of the education code does not apply to the definition of school district "to community college districts, and so there should be no reason he could not take his seat."

Ortell said if his own in-

15,000 Await Island Evacuation

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The death toll from an earthquake and the landslides it triggered in Indonesia's remote West Irian province has climbed over 9,000, Minister of Social Welfare Mintaredja said today.

The minister told reporters 15,000 survivors were awaiting evacuation from the stricken area on New Guinea island.

West Irian Gov. Surtan said landslides ripping down into jungle valleys had covered some villages with 90 feet of mud and rock, burying at least 5,800 people, the Antara news agency reported Wednesday.

Mintaredja said today the government has flown in 50 tons of rice and the equivalent of about $35,000 for victims of the quake and slides, and $20,000 more would follow soon.

He said because of the rough terrain and the large number of victims, it would be difficult to fly the 15,000 survivors out by helicopter. The safest way would be to guide them out, he said, but it would take at least 10 days for them to walk to safety from the stricken area.

The use of fixed-wing aircraft for evacuation is not possible because two air strips in the area were badly damaged in the earthquake, Antara reported.

Assistance has come from the government, businessmen and missionary groups operating in the area.

Many people there still live in Stone Age conditions, hunting wild animals and eating sweet potatoes, wild fruits and vegetables, Mintaredja said. They depend on wild herbs for medicine, he added.

The earthquake struck June 26, but reports of casualties began filtering out only this week because of the remote and primitive area in which the quake struck.

Manslaughter

Child Killer Guilty

On Reduced Charge

Patrick Randall Hebert of Huntington Beach was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter late Wednesday in an Orange County Superior Court ruling that sent prosecutor Frank Briseno striding from the courtroom in anger.

Judge William S. Lee reached that verdict after a nonjury trial in which Briseno repeatedly argued that Hebert was clearly guilty of inflicting fatal injuries on Delta Dawn Davidson, 2.

The deputy district attorney vainly pointed out Wednesday that Hebert, 24, of 17441 Koledo Lane, had abused the child on at least one occasion prior to her death last Feb. 18 from what police alleged was a severe beating.

But Deputy Public Defender John Allen successfully argued that there had been no evidence in the trial to refute the defense theory that Delta Dawn suffered her injuries when she fell in the bathroom and struck her head on the toilet seat.

A physician called by the defense testified that many of the injuries later photographed on the child's body could have been caused by such an incident.

Mrs. Betty Davidson, the victim's mother, testified that the injuries suffered by her daughter were inflicted during her absence from the apartment she shared with Hebert.

Mrs. Davidson said she was not aware that the child was ill until later that night when she heard choking sounds coming from her daughter's bedroom.

Delta Dawn died less than an hour later in a local hospital. Mrs. Davidson's first action on learning of the death of the child was to order Hebert to immediately leave her home.

Hebert will be sentenced July 28 to what could be a state prison term of up to 15 years or a county jail term of up to one year.

He looked around with a broad smile as he was led from the courtroom to the county jail Wednesday.

Teen Injured

By Bomb Said

'Improving'

A Huntington Beach teenager critically injured when a homemade bomb blew a drill bit into his brain is reportedly rallying today, after his condition worsened Wednesday.

Kerry Snyder, 17, of 6062 Stone Ave., was listed in guarded condition after being placed under critical care at one point Wednesday, spokesmen at Huntington Intercommunity Hospital said.

Investigators theorize he was trying to drill a hole for a fuse in a length of pipe packed with explosives when it detonated Saturday in a backyard shed.

They said either a spark from the drill that disintegrated, sending the bit knifing into his skull, or heat from its friction caused the explosion.

Clemente Okays $7 Million Center Plan

By JACK CHAPPELL

Following a stormy and at times bitter public hearing, the San Clemente City Council narrowly approved a plan Wednesday calling for rezoning of 19 acres allowing construction of a $7 million shopping center.

ed to approve a general plan amendment for the site, a hilly wedge of land bordering the San Diego Freeway at Avenida Pico. The action was sought by developer A. L. Wulfeck who has been seeking city permission to construct a shopping center on the land. The action taken by the council is a preliminary and necessary step toward the development.

Wulfeck's plan was hotly opposed by some of the city's present businesses and nearby residents. In his presentation to the City Council, Wulfeck said the shopping center would be an economic boon to the community. He said the development would bring an additional $240,000 in taxes to the city, that it would provide employment for 240 full-time employees and that local contractors would receive much of the $7 million construction cost. He said that currently much of the shopping done by San Clemente is done outside the city and his shopping center would help stop the "leakage" of San Clemente dollars from the community.

Wulfeck said that if the city had the same per capita spending as Laguna Beach, an additional $24 million would be spent in the city annually. And, he said if the city did not expand capriciously, San Juan Capistrano, Capistrano Beach and other nearby communities would. In opposition, Vance Simonds, representing the Merchants Association, called for the city to delay its action until a thorough economic study showed a need for new commercial development. Asked by Councilwoman Wilkinson if the merchants were advocating a moratorium on commercial development until the city's economic picture were clarified, Simonds said yes, until "independent, up to date, un- (See CENTER, Page A2)

Gifts Queried

Campaign Donors Name Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adult donors to political campaigns can use their children to circumvent legal limits on the presidential campaign gifts, the Wall Street Journal said today. The newspaper conducted a telephone poll of Democratic and Republican campaign donors and said it found that a few of them are as young as 5. One example it cited was from Long Beach.

many child donors there are. Parents say the giving is legal because their children's donations come from the youngsters' own money and that the children are asked whether they want to contribute, the newspaper said. Still, political giving in the name of children could easily become a subterfuge, the Journal said. Federal law prohibits an individual from giving more than $1,000 per campaign to any one federal candidate. It also prohibits individuals from making donations in the name of another person. David Fiske, a spokesman for the Federal Election Commission, told the Journal regulations are being drafted to prevent using children to evade donor limits. Fiske said the commission intends to require that gifts by donors under 18 must be made knowingly and voluntarily (See DONORS, Page A2)

San Juan Nixes Bid By Builder

San Juan Capistrano city councilmen voted 3-2 Wednesday to deny a Mission Hills Ranch petition for a general plan amendment.

The amendment would allow 174 homes on 157 acres of undeveloped land east of its existing subdivision in northeast San Juan Capistrano.

Councilman Yvon Heckscher, pointing out the council's sensitivity to a $4 million lawsuit filed by Mission Hills against the city, made the motion which led to defeat of the developer's petition.

The effect of Heckscher's motion was to ignore a Mission Hills compromise which called for 221 homes on the site. The city's general plans would allow 180 homes.

Voting to approve the Mission Hills petition were Councilmen John Sweeney and Richard McDowell. Sweeney said he falls his support of the Mission Hills compromise on the builder's willingness to provide better access to the proposed development.

"We were concerned about access, and the developer has provided access," Sweeney said. "It is only fair now to compromise in density."

McDowell said he stands firmly behind Mission Hills.

"Phase I is a fine development," he said, speaking of the existing subdivision. "I expect he same high quality in Phase II. It would be unfair to pull the rug out from under Mission Hills at this point."

Voting to deny the petition were Councilmen Kenneth Friess and Yvon Heckscher and Mayor Douglas Nash.

"The general plan is already a compromise," said Nash, who called the developer's lawsuit "strategy 39-a."

"There is no need to compromise further," he said.

"What we have seen here is a process of erosion," said Friess. "This matter has been going through the process of public hearings for two years now."

The city planning commission had asked the council to reject both the original petition for 274 homes and the alternate proposal for 221 homes.

"If this petition is approved," said Robert Davies of the planning commission prior to the council's vote, "we had better take the general plan, throw it in the trash and start all over again."

Saying the planning commission has been involved in deliberations on the development for the duration of Davies two-year tenure, he said members of the commission know the Mission Hills property better than any other single property in San Juan.

"I'm very pleased to be invited to meet and talk in Plains with the next president of the United States," Mondale said. Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Mondale and his wife, Joan, outside their home before the meeting started. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was to arrive later in the day for an interview.

LB Firemen Win Raise, Short Week

Laguna Beach firemen have won a two-year contract that will provide an immediate cut in the length of their work week and a five percent salary increase Jan. 1.

The salary increase and fringe benefits improvement package, developed through negotiations between the city and the Teamsters Union, was ratified by the Laguna Beach City Council at 2 a.m. today following an executive session.

The new work week for firemen will be 59 hours long, one hour shorter than previously in effect.

While the contract provides for no immediate salary increase, firemen will receive a five percent increase next January and a 4.5 percent increase on Jan. 1, 1978.

The package will cost the city $42,506 over the two-year period. The settlement calls for a further reduction in the firemen's work week from 59 to 56 hours during the second year of the contract.

The work week reductions will be accomplished without hiring new staff by the city "buying back" holiday shifts.

The settlement also provides for an increase in the city's contribution to the cost of health insurance premiums.

The Teamsters-affiliated firemen entered this year's salary negotiations in March seeking a 9.8 percent salary increase and a reduction in the (See FIREMEN, Page A2)

San Onofre Border Check Opens Friday

The Border Patrol's highway checkpoint south of San Clemente for illegal aliens will reopen Friday after being closed for more than a year.

"Barring anything unforeseen," the checkpoint will resume operations in its old location on Interstate 5 near the San Onofre nuclear power plant, said Robert McCord, assistant chief Border Patrol agent.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the checkpoint, at which certain vehicles are stopped and searched for illegal aliens, did not violate 4th Amendment guarantees against illegal search and seizure.

The practice was stopped in March 1975 when the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declared unconstitutional the blanket warrants being used to continue it.

Drape Sales Fraud Told

Residents in the Dana Point area are being warned by Orange County sheriff's officers that doing business with a drapery salesman in the area could result in a trip to the cleaners.

They cite the loss of $500 suffered by Mrs. Glenda Dramis, 30, of 24351 Taxco Drive, as an example of the recent activities of the man they wish to interview.

Mrs. Dramis told deputies she paid $500 to a man whose name is held by investigators for draperies to be hung in her home. She has not seen the salesman since the payment was made May 23.

$9,000 Fleet To Transport LB Visitors

A $9,000 program that will keep a fleet of vans, trams and buses rolling along Laguna Beach's highways and byways during the upcoming art festival was approved Wednesday by the City Council.

The intent of the program is to guarantee that municipal transit will be available to Art Colony visitors at designated stops at 15-minute intervals.

The summer transit fleet will be made up of four vans, two trams and three buses that will run on routes along Coast Highway, downtown streets and Laguna Canyon Road.

One hope of city officials is that visitors will be encouraged to park outside of the congested downtown and art festival areas and use municipal transit to get to their destinations.

The council was told by Mark Gumbiner, chairman of the Parking, Transportation and Circulation Committee, that the key to making municipal transit work is guaranteeing that a van, tram or bus is available at stops every 15 minutes.

Gumbiner said a system based on 25 or 35 minute intervals would fail.

Councilwoman Sally Bellerue said she favored an election "so that the people know exactly what they are getting."

Her motion to lay the question to rest was carried unanimously. The deadline for placing a measure on the November ballot is Aug. 23.

City Manager Alfred Theal estimated the $68,000 could be raised through a five-cent increase in the tax rate.

Alternatively, Theal said, the city could finance the city's cost by using a portion of a $320,000 windfall created by a 23.9 percent increase in the city's assessed valuation. That suggestion was met with a negative comment from council members.

Medical emergencies in the city are now handled by Laguna Beach firemen. A private ambulance service transports victims to the hospital. The city operates an ambulance for use when the private carrier is not available.

Paramedics would provide more sophisticated treatment. They are allowed to administer medication, monitor vital signs and use other medical equipment.

The council further directed that a letter be sent to the county to determine the precise status of the South Coast paramedic program.

Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.

Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed, in effect, by their legal advisors.

Both men and Ollendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named as defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.

Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two inditees.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

biased information proves a need for whatever businesses are proposed to go in.

He cited the creation of blighted business districts in Long Beach and Oceanside when the existing commercial areas were overwhelmed by new development.

Another speaker urged the council to "learn from Laguna Beach" which he said was halting new development and preserving its business community.

"What are we trying to do, compete with Santa Ana, Anaheim, LA?" the speaker asked.

On a motion by Councilman Walker, the council approved the amendment but tacked on two conditions which must be satisfied before development of the Wulfeck shopping center.

The first condition asked for a report on creation of a total architectural control zone between the freeway and Pacific Coast Highway from Avenida Pico to Avenida Magdalena and the second, the initiation of a complete economic study to be reviewed by the city council.

Councilman Anthony DiGiovanni opposed the motion because the rezone would eliminate some industrial land from the city and Councilman Thomas O'Keefe opposed it saying additional residential zoning should be included to buffer the shopping center.

Surfer's Car Rifled

A Laguna Beach man surfing at San Clemente's T-Street Beach returned to his car Wednesday and found a brand new set of surfboard racks had been stolen from his small foreign vehicle. Fred Swegles, 729 Gaviota St., told San Clemente police the rack valued at $20 had been taken despite an arrangement he had devised to secure it to the car.

Final Solution Author Says Ripper a Trio

LONDON (AP) — Jack the Ripper was actually three men engaged in a political coverup operation, a book published today says.

Jack the Ripper is the name given to the unfound slayer of young women in London's West End in 1888.

Stephen Knight, in the latest of a string of theories put forth about the case, says the murders were committed not by one man, but by three.

He maintains the three included Queen Victoria's physician, a painter and a coachman.

According to his book "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," the three killed four women because they knew of the secret marriage of a Roman Catholic commoner to the queen's grandson, which the prime minister feared would lead to scandal. The account says one other woman was killed because of a mistake in identity.

work week from 60 to 56 hours.

The settlement is the first time that the city and any of its employe associations have agreed to a multi-year contract on salaries and fringe benefits.

Still unsettled are negotiations with police officers and miscellaneous city employes.

Steve Silver, an attorney representing police officers, said police representatives and the city are at an impasse over the officers' "rock bottom" demand for a five percent salary increase, retroactive to July 1.

The city has countered with a proposal for a four percent increase retroactive to June 28 or a five percent increase, effective Sept. 6, Silver said.

Silver said he will appear before the council July 21 to outline the officers' position.

Police officers entered salary negotiations seeking a 12 percent salary increase and numerous fringe benefits improvements.

The remaining city employes, represented by the Orange County Employes Association, are still negotiating with the city on a settlement. Employes are seeking eight percent, the city has countered with a five percent offer.

City employes initially sought a 12 percent increase when their negotiations with the city started in April.

Although the damage to the $14,000 vehicle was still being assessed today, Toussaint said he thought the loss would be total. The van also carried equipment valued at about $16,000.

A relief unit was brought to the scene, equipped and in service by 4 p.m., about two hours after the accident and there were no calls while the paramedics were out of service.

A department spokesman said Hawkins crawled out of the overturned van and told an engine company accompanying the paramedics unit to continue on to help the heart attack victim.

That person today was reportedly in stable condition at Mission Community Hospital.

No citations were issued at the scene but officers said the investigation would continue.

While fire officials and photographers milled around the overturned van, people from nearby businesses and residences gathered on the sidewalks to see what had happened. One passing car crunched into another, causing minor damage to both cars.

Council Sets Budget Study In Clemente

The San Clemente City Council has scheduled a budget study session Wednesday to review the city's $7.4 million 1976-77 spending plan.

Meeting Wednesday, the council also set a public hearing on the budget, up $1.3 million over last year's budget. That hearing will be Aug. 4.

As presented by City Manager Gerald Weeks, the budget retains the city's property tax rate of $1.44 per $100 assessed valuation (about $144 yearly to the owner of a $40,000 house.).

Weeks said no tax reduction is planned in the budget despite a 23 percent increase in the assessed value of town property. The assessment is made by the Orange County assessor's office.

HOT DIAPER SPARKS FIRE

San Clemente Fire Marshal Don Hodgson suspects he knows the cause of a fire in a park restroom fire Wednesday afternoon. A burning baby diaper was quickly extinguished by firemen called to the scene.

2 Escapees Ask Return To Center

San Clemente police arrested two 16-year-old female escapees from the Santa Ana Youth Guidance Center following the burglary of a pier area business today.

One of the girls was from Huntington Beach and the other from La Habra.

Both turned themselves in to police. Officer Mike Currell said the girls had just gotten tired of hiding since fleeing the center Tuesday. A third girl is still missing.

A burglary occurred at the Sidewalk Cafe, 613 Avenida Victoria about a half hour before the young women called the department from a pay telephone in the 200 block of Avenida Del Mar.

Entry to the cafe was via a window. Police said they did not know if anything was taken from the business.

Both girls were booked for burglary and were to be turned over to juvenile authorities today.

Judging from the telephone poll, Democrat Jimmy Carter "appears to have by far the biggest kiddie corps" of donors, the Journal said.

It said Francis Hertzog Jr., identified as an ophthalmologist from Long Beach and an old Carter friend, had given the legal limit of $1,000 to Carter more than a year ago. Seven of Hertzog's children also were listed for donations totaling $6,000 more, including $785 from Kate, 5, and another $785 from Lars, 7, the newspaper said.

The paper quoted Hertzog as saying all the children's donations came from trust funds established for them years earlier.

"They were all asked whether they wanted to contribute," he was quoted as saying. "It's all the kids' own money, not mine."

The newspaper said Carter's campaign treasurer, R. J. Lipschutz, has six children who have all given money to Carter, "but their father emphasizes that they have given their own money."

On the Republican side, the newspaper said it found that one $1,000 donation to Ronald Reagan came from 16-year-old Joe Bennett of Harlan, Ky.

"What? Me? Political contributions?" the newspaper quoted young Bennett as saying. "You'll have to ask my dad about that. He handles all that stuff for me."

The father, Clyde Bennett, was quoted as saying, "All my family has their own money."

The newspaper said that elder Bennett arranged a total of 10 gifts to the Reagan campaign of $1,000 each from his sons, daughter, in-laws and others.

Two other vans, one to be purchased and one to be leased on a trial basis, will be placed in service along with two trams on routes along north and south Coast Highway.

City buses will run along regular bus routes during the day. They will be placed on the van-tram tour route during the evening hours.

Councilman Jack McDowell voted against the program. He said he was disturbed at the cost of the program and the fact that it had been organized so late. The art festival opens July 16.

Killer Guilty

Tot-slayer Verdict 'Manslaughter'

Patrick Randall Hebert of Huntington Beach was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter late Wednesday in an Orange County Superior Court ruling that sent prosecutor Frank Briseno striding from the courtroom in anger.

Judge William S. Lee reached that verdict after a nonjury trial in which Briseno repeatedly argued that Hebert was clearly guilty of inflicting fatal injuries on Delta Dawn Davidson, 2.

The deputy district attorney vainly pointed out Wednesday that Hebert, 24, of 17441 Koledo Lane, had abused the child on at least one occasion prior to her death last Feb. 18 from what police alleged was a severe beating.

But Deputy Public Defender John Allen successfully argued that there had been no evidence in the trial to refute the defense theory that Delta Dawn suffered her injuries when she fell in the bathroom and struck her head on the toilet seat.

A physician called by the defense testified that many of the injuries later photographed on the child's body could have been caused by such an incident.

Mrs. Betty Davidson, the victim's mother, testified that the injuries suffered by her daughter were inflicted during her absence from the apartment she shared with Hebert.

Mrs. Davidson said she was not aware that the child was ill until later that night when she heard choking sounds coming from her daughter's bedroom.

Delta Dawn died less than an hour later in a local hospital.

Mrs. Davidson's first action on learning of the death of the child was to order Hebert to immediately leave her home.

Hebert will be sentenced July 28 to what could be a state prison term of up to 15 years or a county jail term of up to one year.

He looked around with a broad smile as he was led from the courtroom to the county jail Wednesday.

Paid-sex Decoys Tell of Howe Offer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two $4.32-an-hour police decoy prostitutes have told a City Court judge that Rep. Allan T. Howe (D-Utah), offered them $20 for specific sex acts before he was arrested last month on a misdemeanor sex charge.

Dressed in casual pants, sandals and a see-through blouse, Margaret Hamblin covered her face Wednesday in apparent embarrassment when asked what the freshman congressman wanted her to do.

Chief City Prosecutor Phillip Palmer said she didn't have to use the exact language and asked whether Howe proposed sexual acts.

"Yes, he did," she told a hearing on motions to dismiss the charge against Howe of soliciting sex acts for hire.

Her written police report had quoted Howe as using explicit language for the acts.

Trial on the charge was postponed one week to July 19 because of the complexity of motions filed by the defense.

Kathleen Taylor, questioned by defense attorney Dean Mitchell, said she wore "Levis and a top" the night of the arrest.

She was dressed similarly in court.

She said Miss Hamblin did all the talking when Howe approached in his car.

Asked who first mentioned a price for a sex act, Mrs. Taylor said, "Mr. Howe," glancing at the congressman.

He sat silently in the courtroom with his wife, Marlene.

The decoys acknowledged that Miss Hamblin was first to bring up money. They said she asked what Howe would pay, quoting him as saying, "I usually go about $20."

She said they asked if he wanted to pay that much and that he agreed.

The decoys, appearing in public for the first time since Howe was arrested June 12, were called during arguments on a defense motion to dismiss on grounds the congressman was a victim of entrapment.

Howe, who is running for reelection in Utah's 2nd District, acknowledges talking with the decoys but denies the charge. He said he was lured to the area with an invitation to a political social.

Train Derails; Ties Splinter

OCEANSIDE (AP) — The derailment of seven freight cars left 600 feet of track twisted and several hundred feet of railroad ties splintered today.

The Santa Fe Railway train was bound for Escondido when one of the 22 cars left the track Wednesday.

Traffic was delayed on the closest street for 45 minutes as workers removed the cars filled with grain.

Organized Crime 'Tie' Hit by Jury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego County sheriff should reassess his ties with known or suspected underworld figures, the county Grand Jury said Wednesday.

In a 57-page report from a two-month investigation on organized crime, the Grand Jury said that underworld activity does exist here, but not to the same extent as in the eastern United States.

"THERE IS NO indication that the Mafia or crime lords are here in San Diego County," said jury foreman Louis Metzger.

But the Grand Jury report criticized Sheriff John Duffy for voluntarily testifying in Los Angeles on behalf of the La Costa Country Club and Spa in Carlsbad.

Testifying in a libel suit against Penthouse magazine, which ran an article claiming the resort has underworld connections, Duffy filed an affidavit last February saying, "No evidence of criminal activity at La Costa or by the management of La Costa...has ever been detected at the resort."

FOR DUFFY TO offer such a statement willingly "was an error of major proportions," the report said. It added that the statement undermined the integrity of the sheriff's office.

Duffy later denied having anything to do with organized crime leaders.

Viking Continues Site Search

PASADENA (AP) — Concern about the slopes and bumps of Mars' rugged surface has once again forced delay of the Viking 1

landing, this time until July 20 at the earliest.

Originally set for July 4 and rescheduled for July 17, the touchdown of Viking's life-seeking robot lander was put off again Wednesday night after Viking officials received bad news about the target area.

Killer Sent For Diagnosis

EL CENTRO (AP) — James Roe Faulkner, Sherman Oaks, has pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the hanging death of a young man known to others in a cult simply as Paul of Nazareth Christ.

After his plea, Faulkner, 56, was sent to Chino for 90-day diagnostic study before being returned for sentencing.

He was arrested after the victim, living near the Colorado River with others described by sheriff's deputies as "Jesus freaks," was tied with a rope, led to a post and left to die last Nov. 11.

THAT INFORMATION was the result of radar observations made over the weekend by a giant radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

The radar study indicated that the July 17 landing site, known as the Northwest site, could be strewn with boulders and slopes that could turn the landing into a disaster.

The roughness detected by the radar hadn't been seen in photos taken by Viking from its orbit about 1,000 miles above the surface.

BUT THE RADAR also found an area to the west that appears to be much smoother. It is a region about 200 miles west of the Northwest site in an area that has not been photographed by Viking's cameras.

Viking officials planned to have the spacecraft fire a rocket burst today to send it toward the uncharted region to begin taking pictures. If the area seems as flat and smooth in the photos as it appeared in the radar study, said Project Manager Jim Martin, a landing could be made there July 20.

On the other hand, he said, if the cameras show it to be more dangerous, Viking could return to the Northwest site for a landing July 22.

THE ORIGINAL JULY 4 landing site, selected long before the launch of Viking last August, had to be discarded when Viking's photographs revealed a much rougher, more knobby surface than had been expected.

"I think chances are very good that we are going to be able to find a landing site within a relatively few days," said Martin.

Time is of the essence because on about July 25, the attention of Viking scientists must turn toward a second Viking probe as it arrives near Mars. If the first Viking has not landed before then, its landing would have to be delayed until Viking 2 has been placed in orbit around Mars, now set for Aug. 7.

The new potential landing site is still within the general area known as Chryse, a broad basin at the mouths of several ancient Martian streambeds.

State Probes Tranquilizer Use

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Claims that tranquilizers are unnecessarily forced upon patients in state hospitals will be investigated, says Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo.

During a briefing for reporters Wednesday, Obledo also said former Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform basically deprived citizens of benefits they deserved.

He said the decision to investigate followed pressure from a San Francisco-area group of former mental patients called Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA).

Brown 'Presumes' Race Is On

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he's "presumed" he'll let supporters nominate him for president at next week's Democratic convention in New York City.

The 38-year-old governor, sole Democratic holdout against former

Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, said Wednesday, "I assume I'll run the process through to the end."

Plague Kills Two Squirrels

CARSON CITY (AP) — Deaths of squirrels in two northern California towns near the Nevada line were caused by bubonic plague and the disease probably caused deaths of more squirrels in the Stateline, Nev., area, says a state health official.

Dr. John Carr, state health officer, said Wednesday about five squirrels found dead around Markleeville and Woodfords, Calif., had bubonic plague.

Parlor Law Takes Dive

SAN RAFAEL (AP) — A judge has slapped down a San Rafael ordinance restricting massage parlors on grounds the ordinance actually is aimed against prostitution.

Marin County Superior Court Judge Noel Martin, granting an injunction against enforcement of the law Wednesday, said he was not convinced by the arguments officials gave about the ordinance.

They said it was aimed at stopping false advertising, transmission of venereal disease and protecting the public from temptation.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "the evil being denounced by the ordinance is prostitution."

School Study Timely

A question that has hung over Laguna Beach High School for several years is how effectively its administration operates.

The high school, with an enrollment of 1,100 students — the smallest of any high school in Orange County — has a principal and two assistant principals. Additionally, some teachers receive extra pay for performing certain administrative duties in the areas of student activities and athletics.

Whether this system is the most efficient and cost-effective has not been studied adequately. It should be.

Robert Hughes, the new high school principal, has just started his duties. One of the assistant principal positions now is vacant due to a resignation.

This seems to be a particularly good time to study the administration issue.

Under the agreement, neither side is committed to paying or accepting the salary arrived at by the consultant. But certainly, nonacceptance of the report's major findings would necessitate a lot of explaining.

A Dangerous Delay

Saddleback College trustees have finally acted to clear up a dangerous situation first detected months ago — toxic gases leaking into offices and classrooms from chemistry lab experiments.

The problem in the school's new math and science building has been so severe at times that instructors and students have gone home ill from breathing the vapors.

Faculty members say administrators have been aware of the improper venting of laboratories for some time. If that is the case, it is inconceivable that officials would have waited as long as they did to act.

After considerable discussion, trustees voted to hire a consultant to find out how repairs can be made, which means actual work probably won't begin for another few months.

Naturally, until the problem is corrected, experiments that could be vital to the science education program must be curtailed.

The disturbing aspect in all of this is that, with health and safety at stake, the response time should have been a lot quicker.

And apart from correcting the mechanical flaw, trustees should have ordered an immediate investigation to determine who is to blame for the problem and who might be liable for the repair costs.

City Pay Scales

The San Clemente City Council and city employees have taken a wise and responsible step in hiring an outside consultant to perform a thorough job position and salary comparison between San Clemente and similar communities.

For too long the city has endured an annual wail from employees complaining they are the lowest paid in the county, the state or among sample cities or what ever.

For too long the employees have endured an annual cold shoulder from the council and administration who in varying degrees contended the city can't pay more, that its employees aren't worth more, or the privilege of working in the San Clemente paradise ought to offset some monetary disadvantages.

A Very Healthy 200 Years

PAUL HARVEY

We made it! We made a wish and blew out 200 candles in a single breath.

Our nation's birthday was celebrated without disaster, disruption or hangover.

Whereas most of the world's governments at the age of 150 are already suffering senility, ours has such a "remarkable Constitution" that at the age of 200 we're suffering nothing more serious than acne.

I've celebrated personally with a 100 American cities this Bicentennial year. Young and old and in-between we learned or re-learned our American history by participating in it.

If only for a while, we talked about and thought about and planned for and worked together on painting the town red, white and blue.

HISTORY has been a declining subject in our secondary schools. So enamored have we become with the "political sciences" and the "social sciences" that in some states — New York, Indiana, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon — no prior training in history is required for high school history teachers. And the number of students taking history courses in college has been shrinking every year.

And without a knowledge of how we got where we are, the tendency is to go in circles.

Then along came the Bicentennial year and Paul Revere rode again. Elementary school-agers were on their knees and elbow deep in paint decorating fireplugs in patriotic colors.

PARADES, pageantry and church services recalled for us all that our nation's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain also included a declaration of "dependence" on God. And God and Country, since rent asunder, were reunited.

We looked around the world and saw that in the 200 years since our nation weaned itself, every other nation has been turned upside down. Ours is the only one still right-side-up.

Two hundred years ago England and France were monarchies, kings ruled both. Italy and Germany didn't even exist. Our Latin American neighbors were colonies. China was ruled by the Manchus, Japan by the Shoguns, Russia by tyrannical czars.

IT WAS only that what we built here was built so well it has remained intact. And with a society more fair and an economy more flourishing than any elsewhere, we are yet entitled to walk tall.

Job protection is not unreasonable in a profession such as teaching. People who have supported the abolishment of tenure historically have been anti-public schools in America.

Libbers Happy?

To the Editor: May I extend a big thank you, keep up the good work, to Doris Allen, Chairman of the "Save Our Status" organization, (Mailbox July 5).

Why have all those sincere, hardworking gals stood by and allowed the libbers and ERA to say they speak for all women? Do you think libbers are happy? Observe a picket line of them and listen to their lingo!

MANY millions of wonderful, hard-working moms have raised a family, contributed effort to school and church and have been the greater for it. Easy? No. They have "done their thing?" Yes. However, even in those hours of travail, anguish and pinching pennies they did not throw out Dad and the kids to "go do their thing," or "get their head on straight."

Who said life would be easy? Who said each of you would find his niche in life and feel rewarded? In this Bicentennial year, we have recognized the great contributions made by our pioneer mothers and fathers. Do you think libbers and like thinkers equal that?

We have a great debt to those millions of mothers and fathers who find joy with their God, their spouse and their family circle.

The day we accept gays, lesbians and like thinkers as normal outlets that are socially acceptable, then, in fairness, all peeping Toms, prostitutes and the Mafia must be allowed equally to "do their own thing."

DR. G. V. MCKINNEY

Deserves Chance

To the Editor: I can understand Nancy Ebsen's frustration at losing the candidate of her choice, (June 30, letter to the editor) but I can't understand her vehemence against the winner, Jim Slemmons.

Not having a law degree or experience in Sacramento doesn't make him unfit to be an assemblyman. In fact, after viewing the shenanigans pulled by the experienced, it could be a help.

And hiring capable men to run his campaign, with his own or voluntary private contributions, is no crime. It is not nearly as reprehensible as Governor Brown wasting $100,000 of public matching funds for his hopeless bid for the Presidency.

I DON'T know much about Slemmons — he wasn't my man either — but I think it would be fair to find out before we condemn him. As there are three Democrats to every Republican in the Assembly now, it would be a good idea for those 46,912 Republicans that didn't vote for him, to look before they leap to the other side.

Angry Taxpayer

To the Editor: I find it hard to express the anger many of us felt at the recent statement from the County Assessor regarding tax rates in Orange County. He stated that property taxes in the county would have to increase this year because of the increase in property values.

IF THIS is the kind of thinking done by our county officials we are in real trouble. Apparently it would never occur to him that rates might be dropped and spending decreased. He is saying openly that he has a windfall and it is burning a hole in his pocket, because the increase he talks about far outstrips inflation rates.

We are long past due for our representatives to become just that and busy themselves with thoughts of how spending and waste can be eliminated.

Code of Violence

To the Editor: Re: The murder of Lynn McClure: The military court martial finding Harold Bronson innocent, and the attorney calling for dismissal of charges against the others involved because "they don't deserve this kind of treatment" is only the tip of the malignancy hiding behind the perverted motto, "Only a few good men."

This is the way to train good Corps absolutely believes this proves that the Marine Corps and any other branch of the military service that believes this should be immediately abolished.

"VIOLENCE begets violence" — and this truth is evident in the humanitarian reporting of our news people as the backlash of this type of training is coming to light everywhere. Another man killed and four injured during another training session. Marines involved in every type of violent crime from rape to child-beating; the raging fires that come off the Marine base to destroy lives, homes and property, etc.

What makes me sick is the number of years this distorted system has existed — and been accepted — with all of its ugly symptoms and eruptions hidden in smug, dictatorial, hypocritical bureaucracy.

Every society has its peace-loving people, and these are the people who should be placed in positions of leadership and influence throughout the world. Eventually all need for military services and weapons would diminish and fade away.

Maybe not in our lifetime — but in our children's lifetime — Carl Sandburg's vision will be fulfilled: "Sometime they'll give a war and nobody will come."

CB Can Help

To the Editor: With regard to CB Channel 9 for help on the highways, it is one of the best things that could happen and could save a lot of lives.

For example, in a recent accident when a girl was pinned under her pickup truck, a party had to leave the freeway and call the police for help. By the time they arrived and she was taken to hospital it was too late. She would be alive today if Channel 9 was in service.

I would like to suggest that this call be in code to save time, with special codes for medic needed, ambulance needed, etc. The officers could copy the message and advise that help is on the way. The CBER should stay at the scene and put out flares until the unit arrives.

My handle on the air is Green Rabbit.

Ford Eyes Efficiency

WASHINGTON — Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents, on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

If the President wins the nomination, he could beat Jimmy Carter's campaign with a major to streamline the government. The energy candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy, promising a shake-up if he should become President.

INSIDE the Ford Administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it not only is strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development in mindboggling unmanageability.

But White House advocates believe the reorganization would increase bureaucratic efficiency and speed U.S. energy independence, thereby saving billions.

As laid out in the documents, the superagency might include the Federal Energy Administration, Energy Research and Development Administration, Federal Power Commission and Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

It would also include Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, State,

Transportation and Treasury Departments, not to mention the Council of Economic Advisors, Energy Resources Council, Environmental Protection Agency and Water Resources Council.

This jumble of bureaucratic jigsaw pieces are supposed to be fitted into one vast agency, with the possibility of forming a smaller, secondary agency to handle the regulatory functions.

The White House documents reveal that the work on this gigantic shotgun marriage began on May 20. The task force was given three months to prepare a "presidential decision paper" for Ford to contemplate.

THE NEW superagency would be charged with the responsibility for developing a "comprehensive energy policy" to replace the present catch-as-catch-can methods of dealing with crises.

Specifically, the agency would be expected to increase production, reduce energy demand, promote "fossil, water, nuclear, solar and geothermal" energy, manage a 500-million-barrel strategic oil reserve, assure fair distribution of energy, set up conservation programs, and generate electricity.

Cool Dinners Use Microwave Oven With Care

By SYLVIA PORTER

People who want to prepare balanced, cooked dinners in a few minutes on hot summer nights are responding to the appeal of cool cooking with microwave ovens, America's first space-era appliance to come of age.

"It's the most important appliance development since homeown-ers began acquiring freezers along with refrigerators," says William W. George, president of Litton Industries microwave cooking division (which has about one-third of the market).

Ten years ago, the microwave oven was a novelty; now the industry expects to sell 1,500,000 units in 1976 alone, up more than 55 percent over 1975. Sales in 1975 were 30 percent ahead of the previous year against an actual downturn in sales of conventional cooking appliances; by 1985, the prediction is that 40 million units will be in use; that's one in about every two homes.

THERE IS AGREEMENT that microwave cooking is a great time-saver. And there are strong proponents who claim it also has significant energy-saving advantages.

The average family of four can save an estimated $26 a year by using a microwave oven in place of a conventional electric range. The home appliance industry is compiling data to devise a standard for measuring energy consumption. The federal government is reported to have a similar study under way.

The amount of food being cooked plays an important role in the energy consumed by a microwave oven.

IN A SERIES OF TESTS, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (PG&E) for instance, found that the microwave oven saves energy when cooking or reheating small amounts of food. When cooking larger amounts of several different dishes, however, PG&E noted that the microwave used more energy than it would for small amounts of food.

Testing laboratories have found that significant savings are achieved on microwave ovens when they are used exclusively. Conversely, when they are used in conjunction with conventional range or oven, more energy is used.

As an illustration, PG&E found the microwave faster and cheaper to bake four potatoes — but found the gas burner of a range faster and cheaper to cook frozen green beans.

THE KEY QUESTION ABOUT microwave ovens from the beginning, however, has been neither convenience nor relative cost. It is safety.

To give the industry's case first, experts say there have been no documented cases of injury since the oven was developed in 1950. Since then, particularly in the past five years, many improvements have been made.

Microwave radiation is the public's major fear, but this very fear has led to requirements for construction and use of the ovens by the Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) Bureau of Radiological Health. When used according to manufacturer's instructions, and serviced periodically by authorized repairmen, harmful leakages are not likely. Nor is there a hazard from stored microwave energy in food or in the oven.

BUT THERE ARE QUESTIONS about the allowable level of radiation emission on the basis of long-term effect. Prolonged exposure to high levels of microwave energy has produced eye damage in test animals under laboratory conditions. Thus, users should heed these precautions:

—Periodic inspection by an expert is essential to make sure there is no radiation leakage. In many communities, the local health department will test an oven brought to its office. Tests of old or possibly damaged microwave ovens in some cases may be arranged by calling the nearest FDA district office.

—Clean the oven scrupulously. Crumbs and grime that build up around door seals can cause radiation leakage.

—Never turn on the oven when it is empty. Microwaves can be reflected back into the heating element and burn it out faster than normal when there is no food or liquid for absorption. Similarly, no foil should be used.

—Use the correct household voltage for your microwave oven. A portable model needs its own 110-120 volt circuit. A full-size range needs a separate 220-volt line.

'Snoopy' May Aid Pipeline Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Keeping the troubled Alaska pipeline on schedule may be a job for "Snoopy" — not a comic character, but a manned, space-type capsule rolling through hundreds of miles of buried pipe and bouncing high-frequency sound off the steel walls.

An Interior Department source said Wednesday the experimental acoustical device will be tested as an alternative to digging up thousands of the 31,423 welds that join the steel pipeline.

THE WELDS WERE TO HAVE been X-rayed to verify their strength when they were made last year. But reports of discrepancies in the X-rays done by a subcontractor, Ketchikan Industries, were confirmed, casting doubt on the adequacy of 3,955 welds.

A new study showed there could be more problem welds than that. Arthur Andersen and Co. auditors cast doubt on Alyeska's entire checkup of weld X-rays in a report to the Interior Department.

Alyeska, the consortium of oil companies which is building the $7.7-billion pipeline, is attempting to come up with better records to verify existing X-rays. Without them, the only way to satisfy federal requirements may be to examine all the welds again.

NEW X-RAYS WOULD MEAN digging up 18,000 welds along 270 miles of pipeline. It would be a costly and time-consuming process, and Alyeska and federal officials are studying "Snoopy" as an alternative.

Andersen's report, obtained by The Associated Press, said the firm was instructed to consult with the government if its review "cast doubt on the Alyeska audit," and added: "We believe we have reached that point."

As a result, Deputy Transportation Secretary John Barnum is being sent to Alaska Sunday to investigate the welding mess. Two department experts were set today to begin inspecting the pipeline and five more were to join them July 14.

Bank Merger Okayed

A proposal by Wells Fargo Bank for the merger of Eldorado Bank, Tustin, with Wells Fargo Bank has been approved in principle by the directors of Eldorado Bank.

The announcement was made by J.B. Crowl, president, Eldorado Bank, and William Barkan, executive vice president, Wells Fargo Bank.

The proposal, which is subject to the preparation and approval of the boards of directors and shareholders of the banks, and of regulatory authorities, calls for payment of $22 a share by Wells Fargo for the 125,000 shares outstanding of Eldorado Bank stock.

For Everybody Study Calls For Child Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should provide child care facilities for all families regardless of income, instead of concentrating on families on welfare, a federally sponsored report on women says.

The National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year warned in a report to President Ford that the nation faces a crisis in child care because of a shortage of quality day care centers at a time when mothers are taking jobs outside the home in record numbers.

DESPIE VARIOUS calls for universal child care for 15 years, the commission report said, "federal support for child care is still primarily designed to shift mothers away from public assistance rolls and into jobs.

"Unfortunately, such an approach tends to label child care a poor people's program and to produce, too often, a program of poor quality due to inadequate funding."

THE COMMISSION called for a new federal study of child care facilities to survey the quality of existing centers and to determine the demand for child care. The last government survey, published in 1968, was based on statistics now 12 years old.

More recent figures gathered by the Senate Finance Committee showed that in 1972 there was room for only one million children in licensed day care centers and family day care homes.

MORE THAN six times that many children under 6 need day care facilities, the commission said. It cited Census Bureau figures showing that from 1970 to 1975, the number of working wives and women heading families grew by two million to a record 14 million.

More than five million of the working mothers have children under 6, the commission said.

Congress passed a comprehensive child care bill in 1972, but it was vetoed by then President Nixon. Similar legislation has been pending for two years. Congress has given some relief to parents, however, by permitting tax deductions for child care costs.

Esperanza Team Wins in Olympics

Twelve students from Esperanza School for the trainable mentally retarded in Mission Viejo won medals at the California Special Olympics held at UCLA.

The students, part of a 16-member team from the school, competed against 2,500 participants in the event designed by the Kennedy Foundation to give handicapped youngsters the opportunity to compete and achieve in sports.

IN TRACK AND FIELD events, David Grimes took first in the standing broad jump and Kelly Corcoran third in the mile run. Greg Ahlman won the wheelchair slalom and scored second in the 25-yard wheelchair dash.

Three women students won awards in the pentathlon, a series of five track and field events. Linda Vanausdoll placed first and Judy Vanausdoll and Peggy Bonk tied for third.

Carol Perkins took a first and Mike Yuhnke a second in bowling competition.

In swimming, Eric May won the breaststroke and was second for the butterfly. Barbara Corzine took first in the backstroke; Pam Cole first in diving, and Kathy Ramey second in the backstroke.

OTHER STUDENTS WHO WON participant medals were Kenny Tompson, Tom Reynoso, Terri Boyd and John Cameron. Esperanza School principal, Esperanza School teacher, said each of the students took a first in previous county competitions.

The competitors were sponsored by the Mission Viejo Swim and Racquet Club, Mission Viejo Men's Club, Mission Viejo Women's Club, the Cosmopolitans of Newport Beach and four private citizens.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Do farmers have to file environmental impact reports before using pesticides on their crops?

A recent opinion by the state attorney general said they did, but state agriculture officials aren't certain what to do about it.

Herschell Mills, assistant director of the state Food and Agriculture Department, said the problem is under discussion by the department and its parent Agriculture and Services Agency.

Assistant Director Dave Bingham said county agricultural commissioners have been instructed to continue to issue pesticide permits.

Board member M.E. Willson said it was "just asinine" to require environmental impact reports (EIRs) everytime a farmer used a pesticide. "We can lose our crops in the meantime," he said.

More than five million of the working mothers have children under 6, the commission said.

Congress passed a comprehensive child care bill in 1972, but it was vetoed by then President Nixon. Similar legislation has been pending for two years. Congress has given some relief to parents, however, by permitting tax deductions for child care costs.

School Rate Down; Property Tax Up?

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Trustees of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District will be able to make a "double digit" decrease in the school tax rate in light of an unprecedented 22.2 percent increase in the district's assessed valuation.

because of the property value boosts.
Dr. John Nicoll, district superintendent, said he is confident of the tax rate decrease in view of figures released by Orange County Assessor Bradley Jacobs which show that the district's assessed valuation topped the $1 billion mark.

was unified," declared Nicoll, "and I am confident that it will result in the sharpest drop in the tax rate in the district's history."
Nicoll said he expects to have "hard figures" for school trustees when they meet Tuesday to adopt a publication budget. The $47 million budget will not receive final approval until August when the 1976-77 tax rate will be set.

District taxpayers are currently paying about $4.76 per $100 assessed valuation in Costa Mesa and $4.42 per $100 in Newport Beach.
Despite Nicoll's optimistic projection of a drop in the tax rate, district residents' tax bills are likely to be higher this year because of the increase in the assessed value on which the tax rate is levied.

Recognizing this factor, trustees earlier this year lopped two cents off a permissible override, lowering the levy for so-called civic center recreation projects from 10 cents to eight cents.
Nicoll said the assessed valuation increase will not be used to increase the budget's list of general fund expenditures.

the board that we concentrate on lowering the tax rate," he said.
According to figures released by Jacobs, the assessed valuation in the district rose by $181 million to $988 million.
But Nicoll said those figures do not reflect increase in assessments against public utilities which will carry the district's total assessed value over the $1 billion mark.

Poverty Plea Made By Cella's Aides

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Two of Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr.'s three codefendants may be represented by the public defender's office when their Orange County Superior Court trial gets under way in October.

federal court trial with the expected substantial legal tab being picked up by the taxpayers.
Those alternatives will face Judge William C. Speirs Friday when he is asked by lawyers for Theodore Schiffman, 53, of Santa Ana and Stephen Robert Evans, 31, of Mission Viejo to allow them to withdraw from the case.

the district attorney's office on the grounds that the prosecution is not satisfied that either of the two men qualifies for the indigent status that would allow Judge Speirs to grant the motion.
The two men are named with Cella, 51, and George Louis Ollendorf, 44, of Laguna Beach, as defendants in a Grand Jury indictment that lists 127 felony counts against the four men.

New York Disbars Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon was ordered disbarred today in New York state. (Related story A3)

WANTS HIS SEAT
College Teacher Ortell

The order came from a state appeals court, which ruled on obstruction of justice charges brought by the city bar association.
"We find that the evidence adduced in the case at bar warrants the imposition of the most severe sanction available to the court," the majority said in its 4-1 decision.

Instructor Fights for Board Seat

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Orange Coast College math instructor Michael Ortell, barred last week from taking office on the county school board, is mounting a legal challenge to again win the seat he won in an election last month.

Nixon refused to defend himself on the charges but the Appellate Division of the state Supreme Court said "no reason whatever has been shown why a respondent who has chosen to reject or ignore service may by stony silence postpone judgment indefinitely."

Ortell, who defeated four other candidates in Trustee Area 1, was to have taken office last Thursday. But he was told by Deputy County Counsel John Grisette he could not.

Nixon previously resigned from the California bar, but under the New York procedure could not resign his membership in this state's bar unless he acknowledged guilt by stating he was unable to defend himself on the charges.

Grisette quoted a section of the state Education Code that apparently bars any employee of a school district from taking office on a county board of education.

The grievance committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York began an investigation into allegations of professional misconduct by Nixon in September 1974 — a month after he resigned the presidency.

The outgoing incumbent, David Brandt, said he will continue to serve in his old seat until the district holds another election.
Ortell will try to see to it that there isn't another election.

The committee eventually filed five charges against Nixon, including obstructing the FBI in investigation into the Watergate break-in, and concealing.

Mesa Just Didn't Get The Massage

The Costa Mesa City Council turned down a conditional use permit this week which would have allowed the city's fifth message establishment.

Ortell said today he will challenge the deputy county counsel's ruling on several grounds.

The American Institute of Massage asked the council to permit it to convert a television repair shop at 573 W. 19th St. into a school of massage.

First, Ortell said, "I was never informed of that restriction by the registrar of voters" either at the time he took out nomination papers or when he filed them.

Council members unanimously rejected the request, citing lack of enough parking spaces as the reason.

Ortell argued that another section of the education code does not apply the definition of "school district" to community college districts, and so there should be no reason he could not take his seat.

A representative of the group said the idea for another Costa Mesa massage school is not dead, however, hinting a modified plan may be in store.

Ortell said if his own investigation of what the city planning department recommended that there be at least 13.

Both the Planning Commission and the Redevelopment Agency concurred in denying the permit.

It is alleged that they siphoned an estimated $2 million in funds from two Orange County hospitals under Dr. Cella's control—Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital, Santa Ana.

All four defendants face sentencing July 19 in Los Angeles federal court following their conviction there last month on charges of Medicare fraud, check fraud and conspiracy.
Attorneys James Riddet and Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.

Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed, in effect, by their legal advisors.
Both men and Ollendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named as defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.

Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long trial.

Pat Nixon Suffers Stroke; in Hospital

BULLETIN
LONG BEACH (AP) — Pat Nixon, wife of former President Richard Nixon, was taken by ambulance to Long Beach Memorial Hospital today after suffering what a spokesman said was a stroke.

A spokesman for the hospital, where Nixon was treated in 1974 for phlebitis, confirmed that Mrs. Nixon was hospitalized but could not confirm the cause or her condition.
"She is alert and resting comfortably," said Nixon spokesman Ken Khachigian.

Paid-sex Decoys Tell of Howe Offer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two $4.32-an-hour police decoy prostitutes have told a City Court judge that Rep. Allan T. Howe (D-Utah), offered them $20 for specific sex acts before he was arrested last month on a misdemeanor sex charge.

Dressed in casual pants, sandals and a see-through blouse, Margaret Hamblin covered her face Wednesday in apparent embarrassment when asked what the freshman congressman wanted her to do.

Chief City Prosecutor Phillip Palmer said she didn't have to use the exact language and asked whether Howe proposed sexual acts.
"Yes, he did," she told a hearing on motions to dismiss the charge against Howe of soliciting sex acts for hire.

Her written police report had quoted Howe as using explicit language for the acts.
Trial on the charge was postponed one week to July 19 because of the complexity of motions filed by the defense.

Kathleen Taylor, questioned by defense attorney Dean Mitchell, said she wore "Levis and a top" the night of the arrest. She was dressed similarly in court.

She said Miss Hamblin did all the talking when Howe approached in his car.
Asked who first mentioned a price for a sex act, Mrs. Taylor said, "Mr. Howe," glancing at the congressman.

He sat silently in the courtroom with his wife, Marlene.

Medics' Van On Toro Run Hit, Damaged

A paramedic van from the Laguna Hills fire station was wrecked Tuesday when it was hit by a car while rushing to the aid of an El Toro heart attack victim.

Although the van turned turtle and slid several yards on its roof, none of the three paramedics inside was injured. They were identified as Capt. Mark Hawkins, Eng. Tommy Pawloski and Mark Bodenbender, a trainee from Huntington Beach.

California Highway Patrol Officer H.B. Gillespie said the unit was eastbound on El Toro Road with sirens blaring and lights flashing.

The intersection at Muirlands Boulevard was blocked by traffic so the unit crossed over into the clear westbound lanes, he said. It started to turn right in front of the stopped cars to go south on Muirlands.

But Gillespie said it was struck in the rear by another eastbound vehicle reportedly driven by a 17-year-old Santa Ana youth whose identity was withheld. After the impact, the van rolled over and slid down Muirlands.

"I can't believe no one was injured," said Battalion Chief George Toussaint, one of many California Division of Forestry-Orange County Fire Department officials at the scene.

Ten Injured By Bomb Said 'Improving'

A Huntington Beach teenager critically injured when a homemade bomb blew a drill bit into his brain is reportedly rallying today, after his condition worsened Wednesday.

Kerry Snyder, 17, of 6062 Stone Ave., was listed in guarded condition after being placed under critical care at one point Wednesday, spokesmen at Huntington Intercommunity Hospital said.

Investigators theorize he was trying to drill a hole for a fuse in a length of pipe packed with explosives when it detonated Saturday night.
They said either a spark from the drill bit disintegrated, sending the bit knifing into his skull, or heat from its friction caused the explosion.

Final Solution
Author Says Ripper a Trio

LONDON (AP) — Jack the Ripper was actually three men engaged in a political coverup operation, a book published today says.

Jack the Ripper is the name given to the unfound slayer of young women in London's West End in 1888.

Stephen Knight, in the latest of a string of theories put forth about the case, says the murders were committed not by one man, but by three.

He maintains the three included Queen Victoria's physician, a painter and a coachman.

According to his book "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," the three killed four women because they knew the queen's grandson, which the prime minister feared would lead to scandal. The account says one other woman was killed because of a mistake in identity.

Organized Crime 'Tie' Hit by Jury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego County sheriff should reassess his ties with known or suspected underworld figures, the county Grand Jury said Wednesday.

In a 57-page report from a two-month investigation on organized crime, the Grand Jury said that underworld activity does exist here, but not to the same extent as in the eastern United States.

"THERE IS NO indication that the Mafia or crime lords are here in San Diego County," said jury foreman Louis Metzger.

But the Grand Jury report criticized Sheriff John Duffy for voluntarily testifying in Los Angeles on behalf of the La Costa Country Club and Spa in Carlsbad.

Testifying in a libel suit against Penthouse magazine, which ran an article claiming the resort has underworld connections, Duffy filed an affidavit last February saying, "No evidence of criminal activity at La Costa or by the management of La Costa...has ever been detected at the resort."

FOR DUFFY TO offer such a statement willingly "was an error of major proportions," the report said. It added that the statement undermined the integrity of the sheriff's office.

Duffy later denied having anything to do with organized crime leaders.

Marriage Ends

Actor George Hamilton has filed suit to end his five-year marriage with actress-model Alana, citing irreconcilable differences. The couple, separated since last March, have a 21-month old son, George Ashley.

Viking Continues Site Search

PASADENA (AP) — Concern about the slopes and bumps of Mars' rugged surface has once again forced delay of the Viking 1

landing, this time until July 20 at the earliest.

Originally set for July 4 and rescheduled for July 17, the touchdown of Viking's life-seeking robot lander was put off again Wednesday night after Viking officials received bad news about the target area.

Killer Sent For Diagnosis

EL CENTRO (AP) — James Roe Faulkner, Sherman Oaks, has pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the hanging death of a young man known to others in a cult simply as Paul of Nazareth Christ.

After his plea, Faulkner, 56, was sent to Chino for 90-day diagnostic study before being returned for sentencing.

He was arrested after the victim, living near the Colorado River with others described by sheriff's deputies as "Jesus freaks," was tied with a rope, led to a post and left to die last Nov. 11.

THAT INFORMATION was the result of radar observations made over the weekend by a giant radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

The radar study indicated that the July 17 landing site, known as the Northwest site, could be strewn with boulders and slopes that could turn the landing into a disaster.

The roughness detected by the radar hadn't been seen in photos taken by Viking from its orbit about 1,000 miles above the surface.

BUT THE RADAR also found an area to the west that appears to be much smoother. It is a region about 200 miles west of the Northwest site in an area that has not been photographed by Viking's cameras.

Viking officials planned to have the spacecraft fire a rocket burst today to send it toward the uncharted region to begin taking pictures. If the area seems as flat and smooth in the photos as it appeared in the radar study, said Project Manager Jim Martin, a landing could be made there July 20.

On the other hand, he said, if the cameras show it to be more dangerous, Viking could return to the Northwest site for a landing July 22.

THE ORIGINAL JULY 4 landing site, selected long before the launch of Viking last August, had to be discarded when Viking's photographs revealed a much rougher, more knobby surface than had been expected.

"I think chances are very good that we are going to be able to find a landing site within a relatively few days," said Martin.

Time is of the essence because on about July 25, the attention of Viking scientists must turn toward a second Viking probe as it arrives near Mars. If the first Viking has not landed before then, its landing would have to be delayed until Viking 2 has been placed in orbit around Mars, now set for Aug. 7.

The new potential landing site is still within the general area known as Chryse, a broad basin at the mouths of several ancient Martian streambeds.

Parlor Law Takes Dive

SAN RAFAEL (AP) — A judge has slapped down a San Rafael ordinance restricting massage parlors on grounds the ordinance actually is aimed against prostitution.

Marin County Superior Court Judge Noel Martin, granting an injunction against enforcement of the law Wednesday, said he was not convinced by the arguments officials gave about the ordinance.

They said it was aimed at stopping false advertising, transmission of venereal disease and protecting the public from temptation.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "the evil being denounced by the ordinance is prostitution."

State Probes Tranquilizer Use

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Claims that tranquilizers are unnecessarily forced upon patients in state hospitals will be investigated, says Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo.

During a briefing for reporters Wednesday, Obledo also said former Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform basically deprived citizens of benefits they deserved.

He said the decision to investigate followed pressure from a San Francisco-area group of former mental patients called Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA).

Brown 'Presumes' Race Is On

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he's "presumed" he'll let supporters nominate him for president at next week's Democratic convention in New York City.

The 38-year-old governor, sole Democratic holdout against former

Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, said Wednesday, "I assume I'll run the process through to the end."

Plague Kills Two Squirrels

CARSON CITY (AP) — Deaths of squirrels in two northern California towns near the Nevada line were caused by bubonic plague and the disease probably caused deaths of more squirrels in the Stateline, Nev., area, says a state health official.

Dr. John Carr, state health officer, said Wednesday about five squirrels found dead around Markleeville and Woodfords, Calif., had bubonic plague.

Fire Cracker Ban Requested

SAN MATEO (AP) — Nineteen fire chiefs in San Mateo County have voted unanimously to ask county officials to ban private fireworks next Fourth of July.

John Keller, county fire coordinator, said firecrackers caused some 130 fires during the weekend.

Density Curbs Loom

Planning commissioners last week rejected a request for a general plan change in north Costa Mesa that would have allowed high density development in that part of the city.

The unanimous commission vote, which now goes to the city council, opposes a developer's plan for a 776-unit apartment complex on a 31-acre parcel. Commercial development on another seven acres was involved in the zone change request.

The planners received support from more than 200 members of the North Costa Mesa Homeowners Association, who argued that the property, bordered by the San Diego Freeway, South Coast Drive and Bear Street, should not be developed to that density.

The land is currently zoned for commercial and recreational use.

The homeowners said, and the city's planning department agreed, that the general plan change should be for medium density, which would be consistent with a four-year-old study of the area by the city.

If the city council agrees with the planning commission recommendation, it will be a strong indication that massive maximum-density developments no longer are compatible with Costa Mesa's goals.

We hope the council does concur with the concept.

Homeowner Help

Low-interest home improvement loans for low-income Costa Mesans are now a reality, and the city is taking applications from qualified homeowners.

The program, funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, provides individual loans of up to $3,000 for home improvements at a low interest rate of 3 percent to the homeowners.

Costa Mesa has signed an agreement with Crocker Bank that provides a total of $200,000 in homeowner loans. The $60,000 HUD grant will be used to subsidize the program.

The city will guarantee repayment of the loans to the bank.

Two other HUD programs also may be good news to Mesans in lower-priced homes. These programs involve grants—not loans—and homeowners do not need to pay them back.

The first allows up to $3,000 for bringing low-cost homes up to building code. The second provides fund grants to low-income families to rehabilitate or improve their property.

If you think you may qualify for a loan or grant, contact Tony Cannariato, coordinator of the city's housing and community development program. He may have good news for you.

Decades of Service

Dr. Thomas Blakely, himself a product of a junior college, has retired after 23 years with the Coast Community College District.

Blakely was instrumental in developing the highly successful evening college program for the district as its director since 1964. This past school year, enrollment in the night school program reached approximately 35,000.

His friends, 400 of them, turned out last week at a retirement party to thank him for his more than two decades with the college district.

Thousands more—those who have benefited from the evening college offerings and related community programs—can testify that Blakely's efforts in developing and broadening the community's educational opportunities have been appreciated.

A Very Healthy 200 Years

PAUL HARVEY

We made it! We made a wish and blew out 200 candles in a single breath.

Our nation's birthday was celebrated without disaster, disruption or hangover.

Whereas most of the world's governments at the age of 150 are already suffering senility, ours has such a remarkable Constitution that at the age of 200 we're suffering nothing more serious than acne.

I've celebrated personally with a 100 American cities this Bicentennial year. Young and old and in-between we learned or re-learned American history by participating in it.

If only for a while, we talked about and thought about and planned for and worked together on painting the town red, white and blue.

HISTORY has been a declining subject in our secondary schools. So enamored have we become with the "political sciences" and the "social sciences" that in some states—New York, Indiana, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon—no prior training in history is required for high school history teachers. And the number of students taking history courses in college has been shrinking every year.

And without a knowledge of how we got where we are, the tendency is to go in circles.

Then along came the Bicentennial year and Paul Revere rode again. Elementary school aghs were on their knees and elbow deep in paint decorating fireplugs in patriotic colors.

PARADES, pageantry and church services recalled for us all that our nation's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain also included a declaration of "dependence" on God. And God and Country, since rent asunder, were reunited.

We looked around the world and saw that in the 200 years since our nation weaned itself, every other nation has been turned upside down. Ours is the only one still right-side-up.

Two hundred years ago England and France were monarchies, kings ruled both. Italy and Germany didn't even exist. Our Latin American neighbors were colonies. China was ruled by the Manchus, Japan by the Shoguns, Russia by tyrannical czars.

IT WAS only that what we built here was built so well it has remained intact. And with a society more fair and an economy more flourishing than any elsewhere, we are yet entitled to walk tall.

Bargaining Power Open to Question Teacher Tenure Still Valid

MAILBOX

Letters from readers are welcome. The right to condense letters to fit space or eliminate libel is reserved. Letters of 300 words or less will be given preference. All letters must include signature and mailing address but names may be withheld on request if sufficient reason is apparent. Poetry will not be published.

To the Editor: I read with interest your recent editorial regarding teacher tenure and will have to disagree with your analysis of the current employe-employer relationships in the professional field of teaching.

It is true that there is a new legislative act that governs the employee-employer relationships in education (The Rodda Bill), but a careful analysis of what it allows versus what has been under the old Winton Act is still under question. The new Rodda Bill had the support of the California School Boards Association among others and it is not likely that CSBA would have supported legislation not in the best interests of California school boards.

It is conceivable that teacher power will emerge as a strong force and it is conceivable that this power from a single pressure group will act in a manner not in the best interests of the community, but that question still remains open.

Teachers and school boards are negotiating presently and there is and there is going to be a lot of rhetoric, but how much more power teachers are going to have as a result of negotiations over what they now have is still open to legitimate question.

TENURE should not be abolished as a job protection for teachers. The nature of education and the vicarious whims of a community shifting from one emotional high to another call for some need of job protection. Take the efforts on the part of a vocal minority in Irvine to create the Fundamental School. This group of citizens settled for a school of their own, but if they were given their druthers all Irvine schools would be Fundamental, teachers be damned! This group's leader has been reported to say that if a teacher doesn't adhere strictly to a Fundamental School's dictates (as his group sees it), then he will be fired.

Job protection is not unreasonable in a profession such as teaching. It is available in other sectors; tenure and the abolishment of same has usually been presented by people who are truly against open-idea education for children. People who have supported the abolishment of tenure historically have been anti-public schools in America.

Libbers Happy?

To the Editor: May I extend a big thank you, keep up the good work, to Doris Allen, Chairman of the "Save Our Status" organization, (Mailbox July 5).

Why have all those sincere, hardworking gals stood by and allowed the libbers and ERA to say they speak for all women? Do you think libbers are happy? Observe a picket line of them and listen to their lingo!

MANY millions of wonderful, hard-working moms have raised a family, contributed effort to school and church and have been the greater for it. Easy? No. They have "done their thing?" Yes. However, even in those hours of travail, anguish and pinching pennies they did not throw out Dad and the kids to "go do their thing," or "get their head on straight."

Who said life would be easy? Who said each of you would find his niche in life and feel rewarded? In this Bicentennial year, we have recognized the great contributions made by our pioneer mothers and fathers. Do you think libbers and like thinkers equal that?

Transportation and Treasury Departments, not to mention the Council of Economic Advisors, Energy Resources Council, Environmental Protection Agency and Water Resources Council.

This jumble of bureaucratic jigsaw pieces are supposed to be fitted into one vast agency, with the possibility of forming a smaller, secondary agency to handle the regulatory functions.

The White House documents reveal that the work on this gigantic shotgun marriage began on May 20. The task force was given three months to prepare a "presidential decision paper" for Ford to contemplate.

THE NEW superagency would be charged with the responsibility for developing a "comprehensive energy policy" to replace the present catch-as-catch-can methods of dealing with crises.

Specifically, the agency would be expected to increase production, reduce energy demand, promote "fossil, water, nuclear, solar and geothermal" energy, manage a 500-million-barrel distribution of energy, set up contingency plans for handling any future oil shortage and generate electricity.

We have a great debt to those millions of mothers and fathers who find joy with their God, their spouse and their family circle.

The day we accept gays, lesbians and like thinkers as normal outlets that are socially acceptable, then, in fairness, all peeping Toms, prostitutes and the Mafia must be allowed equally to "do their own thing."

Deserves Chance

To the Editor: I can understand Nancy Ebsen's frustration at losing the candidate of her choice, (June 30, letter to the editor) but I can't understand her vehemence against the winner, Jim Slemmons.

Not having a law degree or experience in Sacramento doesn't make him unfit to be an assemblyman. In fact, after viewing the shenanigans pulled by the experienced, it could be a help.

And hiring capable men to run his campaign, with his own or voluntary private contributions, is no crime. It is not nearly as reprehensible as Governor Brown wasting $100,000 of public matching funds for his hopeless bid for the Presidency.

I DON'T know much about Slemmons — he wasn't my man either — but I think it would be fair to find out before we condemn him. As there are three Democrats to every Republican in the Assembly now, it would be a good idea for those 46,912 Republicans that didn't vote for him, to look before they leap to the other side.

Angry Taxpayer

To the Editor: I find it hard to express the anger many of us felt at the recent statement from the County Assessor regarding tax rates in Orange County. He stated that property taxes in the county would have to increase this year because of the increase in property values.

IF THIS is the kind of thinking done by our county officials we are in real trouble. Apparently it would never occur to him that rates might be dropped and spending decreased. He is saying openly that he has a windfall and it is burning a hole in his pocket, because the increase he talks about far outstrips inflation rates.

We are long past due for our representatives to become just that and busy themselves with thoughts of how spending and waste can be eliminated.

Code of Violence

To the Editor: Re: The murder of Lynn McClure: The military court martial finding Harold Bronson innocent, and the attorney calling for dismissal of the charges against the others involved because "they don't deserve this kind of treatment" is only the tip of the malignancy hiding behind the "innocent" motto.

This is the way to train good men? The fact that the Marine Corps absolutely believes this proves that the Marine Corps and any other branch of the military service that believes this should be immediately abolished.

"VIOLENCE begets violence" and this truth is evident in the humanitarian reporting of our news people as the backlash of this type of training is coming to light everywhere. Another man killed and four injured during another training session; Marines involved in every type of violent crime from rape to child-beating; the raging fires that come off the Marine base to destroy lives, homes and property, etc.

What makes me sick is the number of years this distorted system has existed — and been accepted — with all of its ugly symptoms and eruptions hidden in smug, dictatorial, hypocritical bureaucracy.

Every society has its peace-loving people, and these are the people who should be placed in positions of leadership and influence throughout the world. Eventually all need for military services and weapons would diminish and fade away.

Maybe not in our lifetime — but in our children's lifetime — Carl Sandburg's vision will be fulfilled: "Sometime they'll give a war and nobody will come."

CB Can Help

To the Editor: With regard to CB Channel 9 for help on the highways, it is one of the best things that could happen and could save a lot of lives.

For example, in a recent accident when a girl was pinned under her pickup truck, a party had to leave the freeway and call the police for help. By the time they arrived and she was taken to hospital it was too late. She would be alive today if Channel 9 was in service.

I would like to suggest that this call be in code to save time, with special codes for medic needed, ambulance needed, etc. The officers could copy the message and advise that help is on the way. The CBER should stay at the scene and put out flares until the unit arrives.

My handle on the air is Green Rabbit.

promising a shake-up if he should become President.

INSIDE the Ford Administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it not only is strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development in mindboggling unmanageability.

But White House advocates believe the reorganization would increase bureaucratic efficiency and speed U.S. energy independence; thereby saving billions.

As laid out in the documents, the superagency might include the Federal Energy Administration, Energy Research and Development Administration, Federal Power Commission and Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

IT PROBABLY would also draw in bits and pieces of the Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, State,

WASHINGTON — Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents, on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

If the President wins the election, he could beat Jimmy Carter to the punch with a move to streamline the federal bureaucracy. The Democratic candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy,

School Rate Down; Property Tax Up?

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Trustees of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District will be able to make a "double digit" decrease in the school tax rate in light of an unprecedented 22.2 percent increase in the district's assessed valuation.
While the tax rate may go down, bills to taxpayers are still likely to be higher this year because of the property value boosts.

Dr. John Nicoll, district superintendent, said he is confident of the tax rate decrease in view of figures released by Orange County Assessor Bradley Jacobs which show that the district's assessed valuation topped the $1 billion mark.
"It is the greatest increase in assessed value since the district was unified," declared Nicoll, "and I am confident that it will result in the sharpest drop in the tax rate in the district's history."

Nicoll said he expects to have "hard figures" for school trustees when they meet Tuesday to adopt a publication budget. The $47 million budget will not receive final approval until August when the 1976-77 tax rate will be set.

District taxpayers are currently paying about $4.76 per $100 assessed valuation in Costa Mesa and $4.42 per $100 in Newport Beach.
Despite Nicoll's optimistic projection of a drop in the tax rate, district residents' tax bills are likely to be higher this year because of the increase in the assessed value on which the tax rate is levied.

Recognizing this factor, trustees earlier this year lopped two cents off a permissible override, lowering the levy for so-called civic center recreation projects from 10 cents to eight cents.
Nicoll said the assessed valuation increase will not be used to increase the budget's list of general fund expenditures.
"I think I read the feelings of the board that we concentrate on lowering the tax rate," he said.

According to figures released by Jacobs, the assessed valuation in the district rose by $181 million to $998 million.
But Nicoll said those figures do not reflect increase in assessments against public utilities which will carry the district's total assessed value over the $1 billion mark.

Poverty Plea Made By Cella's Aides

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff
Two of Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr.'s three codefendants may be represented by the public defender's office when their Orange County Superior Court trial gets under way in October.
Or they may be able to retain the lawyers who unsuccessfully represented them in a recent federal court trial with the expected substantial legal tab being picked up the taxpayers.

Those alternatives will face Judge William C. Speirs Friday when he is asked by lawyers for Theodore Schiffman, 53, of Santa Ana and Stephen Robert Evans, 31, of Mission Viejo to allow them to withdraw from the case.
The motion is being opposed by the district attorney's office on the grounds that the prosecution is not satisfied that either of the two men qualifies for the indigent status that would allow Judge Speirs to grant the motion.

The two men are named with Cella, 51, and George Louis Ollendorf, 44, of Laguna Beach, as defendants in a Grand Jury indictment that lists 127 felony counts against the four men.
It is alleged that they siphoned an estimated $2 million in funds from two Orange County hospitals under Dr. Cella's control—Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital, Santa Ana.

Beach at Peninsula Point

The Peninsula Point beach just off of Granada Avenue has a lifeguard, a public pier and a fair amount of sand. One drawback to using this beach is the lack of parking. Beachgoers have to hunt through nearby streets to find a place to park. As on all bay beaches, picnics, dogs and alcoholic beverages are prohibited.

New York Disbars Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon was ordered disbarred today in New York state. (Related story A3)
The order came from a state appeals court, which ruled on obstruction of justice charges brought by the city bar association.
"We find that the evidence adduced in the case at bar warrants the imposition of the most severe sanction available to the court," the majority said in its 4-1 decision.

Resigns

Attorney James Parker has resigned from the Newport Beach Planning Commission for "personal reasons."
Parker, also president of the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce, leaves the commission with one year remaining on his four-year term. The city council will appoint a replacement.

All four defendants face sentencing July 19 in Los Angeles federal court following their conviction there last month on charges of Medicare fraud, check fraud and conspiracy.
Attorneys James Riddet and Thomas Crosby have represented Evans and Schiffman, respectively, since the two men were named last January in indictments returned by the Orange County and Los Angeles Federal Grand Juries.
Both lawyers commented during federal court action that their clients were in arrears on legal fees and were being financed, in effect, by their legal advisors.
Both men and Ollendorf lost their hospital posts shortly before the indictments were issued.

They, Cella, and south Orange County rancher Richard O'Neill are additionally named as defendants in lawsuits filed by both hospitals that seek $37 million in damages.
Judge Speirs may decide Friday that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two indictees.

Decoys Say Howe Offered Pay for Sex

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two $432-an-hour police decoy prostitutes have told a City Court judge that Rep. Allan T. Howe (D-Utah), offered them $20 for specific sex acts before he was arrested last month on a misdemeanor sex charge.
Dressed in casual pants, sandals and a see-through blouse, Margaret Hamblin covered her face Wednesday in apparent embarrassment when asked what the freshman congressman wanted her to do.
Chief City Prosecutor Phillip Palmer said she didn't have to use the exact language and asked whether Howe proposed sexual acts.
"Yes, he did," she told a hearing on motions to dismiss the charge against Howe of soliciting sex acts for hire.
Her written police report had quoted Howe as using explicit language for the acts.
Trial on the charge was postponed one week to July 19 because of the complexity of motions filed by the defense.
Kathleen Taylor, questioned by defense attorney Dean Mitchell, said she wore "Levis and a top" the night of the arrest. She was dressed similarly in court.
She said Miss Hamblin did all the talking when Howe approached in his car.
Asked who first mentioned a price for a sex act, Mrs. Taylor said, "Mr. Howe," glancing at the congressman.
He sat silently in the courtroom.

Tax Increase Seen To Balance Budget

A 22.6 percent increase in Newport Beach assessed valuation may be needed to keep the city's budget balanced, according to City Manager Bob Wynn.
Wynn said that the increase, which was announced by County Assessor Bradley Jacobs, will bring about $300,000 in unanticipated revenue to the city, if the city council maintains the existing tax rate of $1.16 per $100 assessed valuation.
Wynn said the figures released by Jacobs do not include assessments on public utilities, so the increase could be even greater than the $125 million increase now shown in assessed values in the city.

He said he will probably not recommend a decrease in the tax rate to city councilmen, nor will he advocate an increase in the budget.
He said he will simply point out that the 1975-76 budget had an ending surplus of $760,000. The new budget approved last month shows a surplus of $572,900, but if members of the police and fire association take the 5.2 percent pay raises offered them, that balance will drop to $30,000.
"Because we will be using some of last year's surplus in this year's budget," Wynn said, "we will be in a position of spending more money than we take in."
"I intend simply to point out to the council that they do have the option of lowering the tax rate, or they may choose to use the extra income from the increase in assessed valuation to maintain the budget balance."
Councilmen approved a $21.7 million budget on June 28. The city tax rate, however, will not be set until Aug. 9 when the board of equalization has released the final assessment figures.

Burglars Hit Balboa Eatery

More than $2,300 in cash receipts was taken early Wednesday morning during a burglary at Kelly's Steak House in Balboa.
Police report the thief broke into the restaurant at 209 Palm St. by cutting the screen off a window into a storage room and then breaking into the main building.
Investigators said the money was stored in a safe which the burglar opened after ransacking the office to find the key.

Trio Turn On NB Man, Rob Him

Newport Beach police are investigating the strong arm robbery of a local resident who lost $350 in cash and five gallons of gasoline to a trio of bandits.
James McGuy, 18, told police he befriended the three suspects early Wednesday morning in a parking lot near the Balboa Pier and drove them to a liquor store to buy some beer.
According to police reports, the group returned to the parking lot and after drinking some of the beer, they began beating McGuy.

Bomb Kills Four?

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — A bomb dropped by a U.S. Navy plane during a bombing exercise killed four Filipino fishermen last month, the government Philippine News Agency reported today. Police reported that the four were fishing from a motorboat in the Zambales Sea off San Antonio, Zambales, 70 miles northwest of Manila, when they were hit by the bomb on July 18, the agency said.

Jack Errion, St. Anthony High basketball coach for 22 years, has been selected head basketball coach at Corona del Mar High, the Daily Pilot has learned.
Errion, 50, succeeds Tandy Gillis, who directed the Sea Kings to a 121-57 record over seven seasons. Gillis recently was chosen basketball coach at Orange Coast College.
Errion coached St. Anthony's boys basketball teams advanced to the CIF playoffs 15 times. They also won or shared in 11 league championships.

Beer Tossing Guilty

A beer-tossing incident at Democratic Party leader Richard O'Neill's May 3 birthday party ended in municipal court Wednesday with a member of the county Democratic Central Committee pleading guilty to disturbing the peace.
Additionally, Neil Graney paid a $50 fine and agreed to leave Assemblyman Richard Robinson Graney and his twin brother, Edward Graney, were hauled into court in late May after one of them allegedly threw a mug of beer in Robinson's face and threatened his life.
The incident occurred May 3 as the Democratic Central Committee was paying its annual birthday respects to O'Neill at party headquarters in Santa Ana.
Both Graneys were reportedly angry at Robinson for his failure to pay them as private investigators for an arrest report used by Robinson in an attempt to disqualify Robinson from standing for a year.
And during that year, the former Chicago policeman, like his brother, agreed to leave Robinson alone.

Harbor Bridge Construction Under Way

Grading has begun on Harbor Ridge adjacent to Spyglass Hill in preparation for construction of a 350-home tract, the Irvine company said today.
The tract will include 100 lots for custom homes and 250 developer-designed homes on the 165-acre parcel that lies between Spyglass Hill and Harbor View Homes.
Irvine Company spokesman Martin Brower said the initial work calls for the grading of the road bed for Spyglass Hill Road from its terminus at El Capitan Drive downhill to San Miguel Drive.
At the completion of that project in the fall, work will begin to prepare the hillside for the homes.
Brower said approval for the project was originally granted two years ago.
Construction will be done by the land company's subsidiary, Irvine Pacific. Plans call for the opening of sales on the custom lots in the summer of 1977 and the other homes will go on sale in the fall of 1977.
Brower said the Irvine Pacific-built homes will be evenly divided between lots with views of Irvine and views of Newport Harbor.

Kid 'Donors' Subvert Campaign Limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adult donors to political campaigns can use their children to circumvent legal limits on presidential campaign gifts, the Wall Street Journal said today.

The newspaper conducted a random telephone poll of Democratic and Republican campaign donors and said it found that a few of them are as young as 5. One example it cited was from Long Beach.

There was no indication how many child donors there are. Parents say the giving is legal because their children's donations come from the youngsters' own money and that the children are asked whether they want to contribute, the newspaper said. Still, political giving in the name of children could easily become a subterfuge, the Journal said.

Federal law prohibits an individual from giving more than $1,000 per campaign to any one federal candidate. It also prohibits individuals from making donations in the name of another person.

David Fiske, a spokesman for the Federal Election Commission, told the Journal regulations are being drafted to prevent using children to evade donor limits. Fiske said the commission intends to require that gifts by donors under 18 must be made knowingly and voluntarily from a fund owned or controlled by the minor.

Judging from the telephone poll, Democrat Jimmy Carter "appears to have by far the biggest kiddie corps" of donors, the Journal said.

It said Francis Hertzog Jr., identified as an ophthalmologist from Long Beach and an old Carter friend, had given the legal limit of $1,000 to Carter more than a year ago. Seven of Hertzog's children also were listed for donations totaling $6,000 more, including $785 from Kate, 5, and another $785 from Lars, 7, the newspaper said.

The paper quoted Hertzog as saying all the children's donations came from trust funds established for them years earlier.

"They were all asked whether they wanted to contribute," he was quoted as saying. "It's all the kids' own money, not mine."

The newspaper said Carter's campaign treasurer, R.J. Lipschutz, has six children who have all given money to Carter, "but their father emphasizes that they have given their own money."

On the Republican side, the newspaper said it found that one $1,000 donation to Ronald Reagan came from 16-year-old Joe Bennett of Harlan, Ky.

"What? Me? Political contributions?" the newspaper quoted young Bennett as saying. "You'll have to ask my dad about that. He handles all that stuff for me."

The father, Clyde Bennett, was quoted as saying, "All my family has their own money."

The newspaper said that elder Bennett arranged a total of 10 gifts to the Reagan campaign of $1,000 each from his sons, daughter, in-laws and others.

NIXON . . .

City of New York began an investigation into allegations of intentional misconduct by Nixon in September 1974 — a month after he resigned the presidency.

The committee eventually filed five charges against Nixon, including obstructing the FBI investigation into the Watergate break-in, and concealing evidence of unlawful activities by members of his staff and the Committee to Re-elect the President.

Nixon refused to accept service of a petition with the five charges Jan. 21. An attempt to have the papers served at his home in California a week later was unsuccessful. The court authorized service by regular mail Feb. 4.

Testimony began March 18. Nixon did not respond in person or through counsel. No papers were filed on his behalf. The appellate court said each of the allegations was substantiated by evidence from Nixon's White House tapes or testimony given to various congressional committees.

Today's court opinion said obstructing justice was "a most serious offense, but one which is rendered even more grievous by the fact that in this instance, the perpetrator is an attorney and was at the time of the conduct in question the holder of the highest public office in this country and in a position of public trust."

It said the evidence "forms a prima facie case and warrants our sustaining of the charges."

It added that Nixon's failure to respond to the charges "must be construed by this court as an admission of the charges and an indifference to the attendant consequences."

Mesa Developers Sued by Tenants

Damages totaling more than $35 million are being demanded from the Segerstrom family of Costa Mesa by tenants of the South Coast Village shopping complex in 20 lawsuits charging the defendants with fraud and breach of contract.

The actions on file today in Orange County Superior Court allege that the Segerstroms and the original leasing agents have failed to develop the complex on the lines promised when tenants signed agreements.

The Segerstroms said the claims were without foundation and pledged a vigorous defense. They said the legal actions are "inconsistent with the established commercial success of the village."

It is alleged that the defendants have failed to produce in South Coast Village a shopping center that was to become a rival to Farmer's Market, Ports O'Call Square in San Francisco.

The plaintiffs also claim: — They weren't provided with a Landmark Tower they had ex-

WANTS HIS SEAT College Teacher Ortell

Instructor Fights for Board Seat

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Orange Coast math instructor Michael Ortell, barred last week from taking office on the county school board, is mounting a legal challenge to again win the seat he won in an election last month.

Ortell, who defeated four other candidates in Trustee Area 1, was to have taken office last Thursday. But he was told by Deputy County Counsel John Griset he could not.

Griset quoted a section of the state Education Code that apparently bars any employee of a school district from taking office on a county board of education.

The outgoing incumbent, David Brandt, said he will continue to serve in his old seat until the district holds another election.

Ortell will try to see to it that there isn't another election.

Ortell said today he will challenge the deputy county counsel's ruling on several grounds.

First, Ortell said, "I was never informed of that restriction by the registrar of voters" either at the time he took out nomination papers or when he filed them.

Ortell argued that another section of the education code does not apply the definition of "school district" to community college districts, and so there should be no reason he could not take his seat.

Ortell said if his own interpretation of what that code provides is faulty, then he plans a constitutional challenge of that section of the code.

He's hired Garden Grove attorney Paul Crost, who's now researching that possibility.

Yacht Dock Tiff Ends With Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A City Councilman, who serves on a regional coastal commission, has agreed to pay $2,000 to settle a civil suit brought against him by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners in a dispute over docking fees for his yacht.

The settlement was announced Wednesday by the harbor commissioners.

Councilman Louis R. Nowell was charged with berthing his 51-foot vessel Sharolyn at a public dock for 120 days without paying harbor fees.

Commissioners originally sought Nowell for $7,920, the amount they contended he deserved to pay under harbor regulations.

Nowell countered that the Harbor Department had given him permission to dock at the location and had never intended to bill him.

The Sharolyn caused criticism of Nowell in 1974 when real estate developers reportedly rented a slip to the city councilman at half the normal rate.

Final Solution Author Says Ripper a Trio

LONDON (AP) — Jack the Ripper was actually three men engaged in a political coverup operation, a book published today says.

Jack the Ripper is the name given to the unfound slayer of young women in London's West End in 1888.

Stephen Knight, in the latest of a string of theories put forth about the case, says the murders were committed not by one man, but by three.

He maintains the three included Queen Victoria's physician, a painter and a coachman.

According to his book "Jack the Ripper — The Final Solution," the three killed four women because they knew of the secret marriage of a Roman Catholic commoner to the queen's grandson, which the prime minister feared would lead to scandal. The account says one other woman was killed because of a mistake in identity.

Newport Sets Frisbee Match

The Newport Beach Parks, Beaches and Recreation Department will hold the eighth annual World Junior Frisbee Championships July 23 for youngsters under 16 years of age.

Youngsters aged 12-15 will compete against each other while those children 11 and under compete in a separate category. Both the boy and the girl champion in each category will be eligible to compete in the state finals.

Competition includes a variety of basic Frisbee events such as accuracy, curves, skip flights, distance and novelty catches.

Prizes include a $1,000 U.S. savings bond for national champions, $500 and $250 bonds for runnerups and $100 bonds for regional winners.

This year's World Championship Frisbee event will be held at the Six Flags Over Georgia amusement center in Atlanta in early October.

Mondale Considered

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) Jimmy Carter conferred today with Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, the latest of a half-dozen possible running mates expected to make the pilgrimage to Plains.

"I'm very pleased to be invited to meet and talk in Plains with the next president of the United States," Mondale said.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Mondale and his wife, Joan, outside their home before the meeting started.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was to arrive later in the day for an interview.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

The decoys acknowledged that Miss Hamblin was first to bring up money. They said she asked what Howe would pay, quoting him as saying, "I usually go about $20."

She said they asked if he wanted to pay that much and that he agreed.

The decoys, appearing in public for the first time since Howe was arrested June 12, were called during arguments on a defense motion to dismiss on grounds the congressman was a victim of entrapment.

Howe, who is running for reelection in Utah's 2nd District, acknowledges talking with the decoys but denies the charge. He said he was lured to the area with an invitation to a political social.

Azusa Brushfire

AZUSA (AP) — Two firemen suffered heat exhaustion and a third was treated for burned hands as fire crews put out a stubborn eight-acre brushfire in San Gabriel Canyon, authorities said. A Los Angeles County fire department spokesman said about 200 men were aided Wednesday by four air tankers and three helicopters in fighting the fire north of here.

Organized Crime 'Tie' Hit by Jury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego County sheriff should reassess his ties with known or suspected underworld figures, the county Grand Jury said Wednesday.

In a 57-page report from a two-month investigation on organized crime, the Grand Jury said that underworld activity does exist here, but not to the same extent as in the eastern United States.

"THERE IS NO indication that the Mafia or crime lords are here in San Diego County," said jury foreman Louis Metzger.

But the Grand Jury report criticized Sheriff John Duffy for voluntarily testifying in Los Angeles on behalf of the La Costa Country Club and Spa in Carlsbad.

Testifying in a libel suit against Penthouse magazine, which ran an article claiming the resort has underworld connections, Duffy filed an affidavit last February saying, "No evidence of criminal activity at La Costa or by the management of La Costa...has ever been detected at the resort."

FOR DUFFY TO offer such a statement willingly "was an error of major proportions," the report said. It added that the statement undermined the integrity of the sheriff's office.

Duffy later denied having anything to do with organized crime leaders.

Marriage Ends

Actor George Hamilton has filed suit to end his five-year marriage with actress-model Alana, citing irreconcilable differences. The couple, separated since last March, have a 21-month old son, George Ashley.

Viking Continues Site Search

PASADENA (AP) — Concern about the slopes and bumps of Mars' rugged surface has once again forced delay of the Viking 1

landing, this time until July 20 at the earliest.

Originally set for July 4 and rescheduled for July 17, the touchdown of Viking's life-seeking robot lander was put off again Wednesday night after Viking officials received bad news about the target area.

Killer Sent For Diagnosis

EL CENTRO (AP) — James Roe Faulkner, Sherman Oaks, has pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the hanging death of a young man known to others in a cult simply as Paul of Nazareth Christ.

After his plea, Faulkner, 56, was sent to Chino for 90-day diagnostic study before being returned for sentencing.

He was arrested after the victim, living near the Colorado River with others described by sheriff's deputies as "Jesus freaks," was tied with a rope, led to a post and left to die last Nov. 11.

THAT INFORMATION was the result of radar observations made over the weekend by a giant radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

The radar study indicated that the July 17 landing site, known as the Northwest site, could be strewn with boulders and slopes that could turn the landing into a disaster.

The roughness detected by the radar hadn't been seen in photos taken by Viking from its orbit about 1,000 miles above the surface.

BUT THE RADAR also found an area to the west that appears to be much smoother. It is a region about 200 miles west of the Northwest site in an area that has not been photographed by Viking's cameras.

Viking officials planned to have the spacecraft fire a rocket burst today to send it toward the uncharted region to begin taking pictures. If the area seems as flat and smooth in the photos as it appeared in the radar study, said Project Manager Jim Martin, a landing could be made there July 20.

On the other hand, he said, if the cameras show it to be more dangerous, Viking could return to the Northwest site for a landing July 22.

THE ORIGINAL JULY 4 landing site, selected long before the launch of Viking last August, had to be discarded when Viking's photographs revealed a much rougher, more knobby surface than had been expected.

"I think chances are very good that we are going to be able to find a landing site within a relatively few days," said Martin.

Time is of the essence because on about July 25, the attention of Viking scientists must turn toward a second Viking probe as it arrives near Mars. If the first Viking has not landed before then, its landing would have to be delayed until Viking 2 has been placed in orbit around Mars, now set for Aug. 7.

The new potential landing site is still within the general area known as Chryse, a broad basin at the mouths of several ancient Martian streambeds.

Parlor Law Takes Dive

SAN RAFAEL (AP) — A judge has slapped down a San Rafael ordinance restricting massage parlors on grounds the ordinance actually is aimed against prostitution.

Marin County Superior Court Judge Noel Martin, granting an injunction against enforcement of the law Wednesday, said he was not convinced by the arguments officials gave about the ordinance.

He said it was aimed at stopping false advertising, transmission of venereal disease and protecting the public from temptation.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "the evil being denounced by the ordinance is prostitution."

State Probes Tranquilizer Use

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Claims that tranquilizers are unnecessarily forced upon patients in state hospitals will be investigated, says Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo.

During a briefing for reporters Wednesday, Obledo also said former Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform basically deprived citizens of benefits they deserved.

He said the decision to investigate followed pressure from a San Francisco-area group of former mental patients called Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA).

Brown 'Presumes' Race Is On

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he's "presumed" he'll let supporters nominate him for president at next week's Democratic convention in New York City.

The 38-year-old governor, sole Democratic holdout against former

Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, said Wednesday, "I assume I'll run the process through to the end."

Plague Kills Two Squirrels

CARSON CITY (AP) — Deaths of squirrels in two northern California towns near the Nevada line were caused by bubonic plague and the disease probably caused deaths of more squirrels in the Stateline, Nev., area, says a state health official.

Dr. John Carr, state health officer, said Wednesday about five squirrels found dead around Markleville and Woodfords, Calif., had bubonic plague.

Fire Cracker Ban Requested

SAN MATEO (AP) — Nineteen fire chiefs in San Mateo County have voted unanimously to ask county officials to ban private fireworks next Fourth of July.

John Keller, county fire coordinator, said firecrackers caused some 130 fires during the weekend.

Pay and Percentages

On the surface, it could appear that pay raises parceled out to Newport Beach city employees this year were inequitable.

City employees under the management level all received pay raises averaging 5.2 percent. Meanwhile, City Manager Bob Wynn got a 7.5 percent pay boost, City Attorney Dennis O'Neil got 9.1 percent and the rest of the management level staff got raises averaging 5.9 percent.

However, the pay situation is more balanced than it might seem considering the raises handed out last year.

At that time, employees under the management level, including police and firemen, got raises of 7.8 percent, while management employees got 6 percent. And last year, Wynn's raise worked out to 5.2 percent and O'Neil's figured out to 4.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the 175-member police association and the 95-member fire association still are waiting on their increases because negotiators have been unable to reach an agreement with the city over the offered pay raises and other issues.

Political Budgeting

After months of planning, study and debate, the city of Newport Beach has the budget that will carry it through another year—a budget that was shaped in part by the geographical pressures which often influence decisions in Newport Beach.

For instance, there is the $3,600 budget item to pay for a part-time parking and traffic control officer for the exclusive use of the Balboa Peninsula. No need to mention that that item was introduced by Mayor

Howard Rogers, who happens to live on the peninsula.

Or there is the extra dogcatcher that Don McInnis, the West Newport Beach resident, wanted added to the budget. That addition will cost Newport Beach taxpayers $23,300 this year in salary and equipment.

The dogcatcher McInnis urged was added to a budget that had already provided money to boost the animal control force from four to five, so now the city has six. And in adding that sixth man, the city had to spend $10,300 to provide him with a truck.

That kind of addition to the budget is difficult to square with the deletion of a $6,000 Hurst power tool requested by the fire department for use in prying people out of wrecked cars. The tool was reinstated at the last minute, but McInnis was one of two councilmen who voted against it.

Decades of Service

Dr. Thomas Blakely, himself a product of a junior college, has retired after 23 years with the Coast Community College District.

Blakely was instrumental in developing the highly successful evening college program for the district as its director since 1964. This past school year, enrollment in the night school program reached approximately 35,000.

His friends, 400 of them, turned out last week at a retirement party to thank him for his more than two decades with the college district.

Thousands more—those who have benefited from the evening college offerings and related community programs—can testify that Blakely's efforts in developing and broadening the community's educational opportunities have been appreciated.

A Very Healthy 200 Years

PAUL HARVEY

We made it! We made a wish and blew out 200 candles in a single breath.

Our nation's birthday was celebrated without disaster, disruption or hangover.

Whereas most of the world's governments at the age of 150 are already suffering senility, ours has such a "remarkable Constitution" that at the age of 200 we're suffering nothing more serious than acne.

I've celebrated personally with a 100 American cities this Bicentennial year. Young and old and in-between we learned or re-learned American history by participating in it.

If only for a while, we talked about and thought about and planned for and worked together on painting the town red, white and blue.

HISTORY has been a declining subject in our secondary schools. So enamored have we become with the "political sciences" and the "social sciences" that in some states—New York, Indiana, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon—no prior training in history is required for high school history teachers. And the number of students taking history courses in college has been shrinking every year.

And without a knowledge of how we got where we are, the tendency is to go in circles.

Then along came the Bicentennial year and Paul Revere rode again. Elementary school-agers were on their knees and elbow deep in paint decorating fireplugs in patriotic colors.

PARADES, pageantry and church services recalled for us all that our nation's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain also included a declaration of "dependence" on God. And God and Country, since rent asunder, were reunited.

We looked around the world and saw that in the 200 years since our nation weaned itself, every other nation has been turned upside down. Ours is the only one still right-side-up.

Two hundred years ago England and France were monarchies, kings ruled both. Italy and Germany didn't even exist. Our Latin American neighbors were colonies. China was ruled by the Manchus, Japan by the Shoguns, Russia by tyrannical czars.

IT WAS only that what we built here was built so well it has remained intact. And with a society more fair and an economy more flourishing than any elsewhere, we are yet entitled to walk tall.

Bargaining Power Open to Question

To the Editor:

I read with interest your recent editorial regarding teacher tenure and will have to disagree with your analysis of the current employer-employee relationships in the professional field of teaching.

It is true that there is a new legislative act that governs the employer-employee relationships in education (The Rodda Bill), but a careful analysis of what it allows versus what has been under the old Winton Act is still under question. The new Rodda Bill had the support of the California School Boards Association among others and it is not likely that CSBA would have supported legislation not in the best interests of California school boards.

It is conceivable that teacher power will emerge as a strong force and it is conceivable that this power from a single pressure group will act in a manner not in the best interests of the community, but that question still remains open.

Teachers and school boards are negotiating presently and there is and there is going to be a lot of rhetoric, but how much more power teachers are going to have as a result of negotiations over what they now have is still open to legitimate question.

TENURE should not be abolished as a job protection for teachers. The nature of education and the vicarious whims of a community shifting from one emotional high to another call for some need of job protection. Take the efforts on the part of a vocal minority in Irvine to create the Fundamental School. This group of citizens settled for a school of their own, but if they were given their druthers all Irvine schools would be Fundamental, teachers be damned! This group's leader has been reported to say that if a teacher doesn't adhere strictly to a Fundamental School's dictates (as his group sees it), then he will be fired.

Job protection is not unreasonable in a profession such as teaching. It is available in other sectors; tenure and the abolishment of same has usually been presented by people who are truly against open-idea education for children. People who have supported the abolishment of tenure historically have been anti-public schools in America.

NORMAN GINSBURG

Libbers Happy?

To the Editor:

May I extend a big thank you, keep up the good work, to Doris Allen, Chairman of the "Save Our Status" organization, (Mailbox July 5).

Why have all those sincere, hardworking gals stood by and allowed the libbers and ERA to say they speak for all women? Do you think libbers are happy? Observe a picket line of them and listen to their lingo!

MANY millions of wonderful, hard-working moms have raised a family, contributed effort to school and church and have been the greater for it. Easy? No. They have "done their thing." Yes. However, even in those hours of travail, anguish and pinching pennies they did not throw out Dad and the kids to "go do their thing," or "get their head on straight."

Who said life would be easy? Who said each of you would find his niche in life and feel rewarded? In this Bicentennial year, we have recognized the great contributions made by our pioneer mothers and fathers. Do you think libbers and like thinkers equal that?

Transportation and Treasury Departments, not to mention the Council of Economic Advisors, Energy Resources Council, Environmental Protection Agency and Water Resources Council.

This jumble of bureaucratic jigsaw pieces are supposed to be fitted into one vast agency, with the possibility of forming a smaller, secondary agency to handle the regulatory functions.

The White House documents reveal that the work on this gigantic shotgun marriage began on May 20. The task force was given three months to prepare a "presidential decision paper" for Ford to contemplate.

THE NEW superagency would be charged with the responsibility for developing a "comprehensive energy policy" to replace the present catch-as-catch-can methods of dealing with crises.

Specifically, the agency would be expected to increase production, reduce energy demand, promote "fossil, water, nuclear, solar and geothermal" energy, manage a 500-million-barrel distribution of energy, set up contingency plans for handling any future oil shortage and generate electricity.

We have a great debt to those millions of mothers and fathers who find joy with their God, their spouse and their family circle.

The day we accept gays, lesbians and like thinkers as normal outlets that are socially acceptable, then, in fairness, all peeping Toms, prostitutes and the Mafia must be allowed equally to "do their own thing."

DR. G. V. MCKINNEY

Deserves Chance

To the Editor:

I can understand Nancy Ebsen's frustration at losing the candidate of her choice. (June 30, letter to the editor) but I can't understand her vehemence against the winner, Jim Slemmons.

Not having a law degree or experience in Sacramento doesn't make him unfit to be an assemblyman. In fact, after viewing the shenanigans pulled by the experienced, it could be a help.

And hiring capable men to run his campaign, with his own or voluntary private contributions, is no crime. It is not nearly as reprehensible as Governor Brown wasting $100,000 of public matching funds for his hopeless bid for the Presidency.

I DON'T know much about Slemmons—he wasn't my man either—but I think it would be fair to find out before we condemn him. As there are three Democrats to every Republican in the Assembly now, it would be a good idea for those 46,912 Republicans that didn't vote for him, to look before they leap to the other side.

GOLDIE JOSEPH

Angry Taxpayer

To the Editor:

I find it hard to express the anger many of us felt at the recent statement from the County Assessor regarding tax rates in Orange County. He stated that property taxes in the county would have to increase this year because of the increase in property values.

IF THIS is the kind of thinking done by our county officials we are in real trouble. Apparently it would never occur to him that rates might be dropped and spending decreased. He is saying openly that he has a windfall and it is burning a hole in his pocket, because the increase he talks about far outstrips inflation rates.

We are long past due for our representatives to become just that and busy themselves with thoughts of how spending and waste can be eliminated.

WILLIAM A. HOFF

Code of Violence

To the Editor:

Re: The murder of Lynn McClure: The military court martial finding Harold Bronson innocent, and the attorney calling for dismissal of charges against the others involved because "they don't deserve this kind of treatment" is only the tip of the malignancy hiding behind good men.

This is the way to train good men? The fact that the Marine Corps absolutely believes this proves that the Marine Corps and any other branch of the military service that believes this should be immediately abolished.

"VIOLENCE begets violence"—and this truth is evident in the humanitarian reporting of our news people as the backlash of this type of training is coming to light everywhere: Another man killed and four injured during another training session; Marines involved in every type of violent crime from rape to child-beating; the raging fires that come off the Marine base to destroy lives, homes and property, etc.

What makes me sick is the number of years this distorted system has existed—and been accepted—with all of its ugly symptoms and eruptions hidden in smug, dictatorial, hypocritical bureaucracy.

Every society has its peace-loving people, and these are the people who should be placed in positions of leadership and influence throughout the world. Eventually all need for military services and weapons would diminish and fade away.

Maybe not in our lifetime—but in our children's lifetime—Carl Sandburg's vision will be fulfilled: "Sometime they'll give a war and nobody will come."

MARY EILEEN DOYLE

CB Can Help

To the Editor:

With regard to CB Channel 9 for help on the highways, it is one of the best things that could happen and could save a lot of lives.

For example, in a recent accident when a girl was pinned under her pickup truck, a party had to leave the freeway and call the police for help. By the time they arrived and she was taken to hospital it was too late. She would be alive today if Channel 9 was in service.

I would like to suggest that this call be in code to save time, with special codes for medic needed, ambulance needed, etc. The officers could copy the message and advise that help is on the way. The CBER should stay at the scene and put out flares until the unit arrives.

My handle on the air is Green Rabbit.

JEWELL GREEN (Green Rabbit)

Ford Eyes Efficiency

WASHINGTON Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents, on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

If the President wins the nomination, he could beat Jim move to streamline the federal bureaucracy. The Democratic candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy, promising a shake-up if he should become President.

JACK ANDERSON

INSIDE the Ford Administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it not only is strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development in mindboggling unmanageability.

But White House advocates believe the reorganization would increase bureaucratic efficiency and speed U.S. energy independence, thereby saving billions.

As laid out in the documents, the superagency might include the Federal Energy Administration, Energy Research and Development Administration, Federal Power Commission and Nuclear Regulatory Com-

IT PROBABLY would also draw in bits and pieces of the Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, State,

For Everybody Study Calls For Child Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should provide child care facilities for all families regardless of income, instead of concentrating on families on welfare, a federally sponsored report on women says.

The National Commission on the Observation of International Women's Year warned in a report to President Ford that the nation faces a crisis in child care because of a shortage of quality day care centers at a time when mothers are taking jobs outside the home in record numbers.

child care is still primarily designed to shift mothers away from public assistance rolls and into jobs.

"Unfortunately, such an approach tends to label child care a poor people's program and to produce, too often, a program of poor quality due to inadequate funding."

THE COMMISSION called for a new federal study of child care facilities to survey the quality of existing centers and to determine the demand for child care. The last government survey, published in 1968, was based on statistics now 12 years old.

More recent figures gathered by the Senate Finance Committee showed that in 1972 there was room for only one million children in licensed day care centers and family day care homes.

MORE THAN six times that many children under 6 need day care facilities, the commission said. It cited Census Bureau figures showing that from 1970 to 1975, the number of working wives and women heading families grew by two million to a record 14 million.

More than five million of the working mothers have children under 6, the commission said.

Congress passed a comprehensive child care bill in 1972, but it was vetoed by then President Nixon. Similar legislation has been pending for two years. Congress has given some relief to parents, however, by permitting tax deductions for child care costs.

On Honor Roll
 Lynn C. Baird of Costa Mesa has been named to the spring honor roll at Eastern Washington State College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Fallin, 333 Cabrillo St., Costa Mesa.

Assistant Director Dave Bingham said county agricultural commissioners have been instructed to continue to issue pesticide permits.

Board member M.E. Willson said it was "just asinine" to require environmental impact reports (EIRs) everytime a farmer used a pesticide.

"We can lose our crops in the meantime," he said.

Esperanza Team Wins in Olympics

Twelve students from Esperanza School for the trainable mentally retarded in Mission Viejo won medals at the California Special Olympics held at UCLA.

The students, part of a 16-member team from the school, competed against 2,500 participants in the event designed by the Kennedy Foundation to give handicapped youngsters the opportunity to compete and achieve in sports.

IN TRACK AND FIELD events, David Grimes took first in the standing broad jump and Kelly Corcoran third in the mile run. Greg Ahlman won the wheelchair slalom and scored second in the 25-yard wheelchair dash.

Three women students won awards in the pentathlon, a series of five track and field events. Linda Vanaudoll placed first and Judy Vanaudoll and Peggy Bonk tied for third.

Carol Perkins took a first and Mike Yuhneke a second in bowling competition.

OTHER STUDENTS who won participant medals were Kenny Tompson, Tom Reynoso, Terri Burk and John Cameron.

Becky Heinzen, Esperanza's physical education teacher, said each of the students took a first in previous county competitions.

The competitors were sponsored by the Mission Viejo Swim and Racquet Club, Mission Viejo Men's Club, Mission Viejo Women's Club, the Cosmopolitans of Newport Beach and four private citizens.

Spraying Permits Weighed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Do farmers have to file environmental impact reports before using pesticides on their crops?

A recent opinion by the state attorney general said they did, but state agriculture officials aren't certain what to do about it.

Herschell Mills, assistant director of the state Food and Agriculture Department, said the problem is under discussion by the department and its parent Agriculture and Services Agency.

Assistant Director Dave Bingham said county agricultural commissioners have been instructed to continue to issue pesticide permits.

Board member M.E. Willson said it was "just asinine" to require environmental impact reports (EIRs) everytime a farmer used a pesticide.

"We can lose our crops in the meantime," he said.

College Continues Signups

Enrollment for the second summer session at Saddleback College, which runs from July 19 to Aug. 20, is still open.

College officials have announced that the summer student population has surpassed 5,500, an increase of more than seven percent over last year.

South Orange County residents can sign up for the five-week second session in Building M on the lower campus. Applications for the fall semester, which begins Aug. 30, are also being accepted.

There are no tuition charges for people who have lived in California longer than a year and the only registration charge is a $5 health services fee, entitling the student to on-campus medical care.

Services Set

For Realtor

Mrs. Selufsky

Graveside services will be held Friday at Ascension Cemetery in El Toro for realtor Elaine Selufsky, who died Tuesday at Mission Community Hospital.

Mrs. Selufsky and her husband, Walt, were among the first families to settle in Mission Viejo 10 years ago. Her son, Greg, and daughter, Lorraine, are graduates of Mission Viejo High School. Mrs. Selufsky had been in the real estate business about two years.

The graveside services will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Selufsky is survived by her husband, Walt, of the family home, 24192 Puerta De Luz; by her children, Greg and Lorraine; by her mother, Mary Lorraine; and by her sister, Marilou Hightower.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Laguna Hills Mortuary.

day that it would be cheaper in the long run to allow Riddet and Crosby to continue their defense of Evans and Schiffman with the taxpayers meeting the costs of what is expected to be a long Orange County trial.

It was explained that the public defender's office would require several weeks to study the mountain of pretrial documents now in Judge Speirs' courtroom to ensure an adequate defense of the two indictees.

And it was made clear by the public defender's office today that the county department already is trying to cope with a heavy caseload and may not be able to immediately take on the added burden of defense chores in the Cella trial.

It was also pointed out that those costs might become prohibitive if, as expected, the defense motion for a change of venue from Orange County is granted by Judge Speirs.

The hearing will open at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Judge Speirs' courtroom.

Sewage in Sea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Solid waste that has only been partially treated is being released into the ocean because of the strike by county sanitation workers, an official of the state regional water quality control board said Wednesday.

bathtub and struck her head on the toilet seat.

A physician called by the defense testified that many of the injuries later photographed on the child's body could have been caused by such an incident.

Mrs. Betty Davidson, the victim's mother, testified that the injuries suffered by her daughter were inflicted during her absence from the apartment she shared with Hebert.

Mrs. Davidson said she was not aware that the child was ill until later that night when she heard choking sounds coming from her daughter's bedroom.

Delta Dawn died less than an hour later in a local hospital. Mrs. Davidson's first action on learning of the death of the child was to order Hebert to immediately leave her home.

Hebert will be sentenced July 28 to what could be a state prison term of up to 15 years or a county jail term of up to one year.

He looked around with a broad smile as he was led from the courtroom to the county jail Wednesday.

up money. They said she asked what Howe would pay, quoting him as saying, "I usually go about $20."

She said they asked if he wanted to pay that much and that he agreed.

The decoys, appearing in public for the first time since Howe was arrested June 12, were called during arguments on a defense motion to dismiss on grounds the congressman was a victim of entrapment.

Howe, who is running for reelection in Utah's 2nd District, acknowledges talking with the decoys but denies the charge. He said he was lured to the area with an invitation to a political social.

Teacher Challenges For His Board Seat

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Orange Coast College math instructor Michael Ortell, barred last week from taking office on the county school board, is mounting a legal challenge to again win the seat he won in an election last month.

Ortell, who defeated four other candidates in Trustee Area 1, was to have taken office last Thursday. But he was told by Deputy County Counsel John Grispet he could not.

Grispet quoted a section of the state Education Code that apparently bars any employe of a school district from taking office on a county board of education.

The outgoing incumbent, David Brandt, said he will continue to serve in his old seat until the district holds another election.

Ortell will try to see to it that there isn't another election.

Ortell said today he will challenge the deputy county counsel's ruling on several grounds.

First, Ortell said, "I was never informed of that restriction by the registrar of voters" either at the time he took out nomination papers or when he filed them.

Ortell argued that another section of the code...

...apply the definition of "school district" to community college districts, and so there should be no reason he could not take his seat.

Ortell said if his own in-

Bicentennial Baby Born At Mission

James Michael Bray's arrival at 2:41 a.m. on the 4th of July came as a relief not only to his mother, Carolyn, of Mission Viejo, but to a local service club as well.

Last year, the Rancho Viejo Junior Women's Club began a program in conjunction with the March of Dimes to honor the first baby born at Mission Community Hospital each July 4.

They hardly expected the arrival of twins born to unwed parents, but that's what happened in 1975 when Eliza Skye and Molley Jennifer were born to Maggie Thomsen and Michael Aspinwall, both of Laguna Beach.

The birth of the Bray baby last Sunday morning marks the start of Healthy Baby Summer 1976, a Rancho Viejo Juniors and March of Dimes drive to impress on the public the importance of prenatal care.

More than 200,000 American babies are born each year with birth defects, according to Martha Gutteron, club health chairman. Some of these defects could be prevented with better prenatal care.

Every pregnant woman should arrange for prenatal care as soon as she knows she is pregnant, said Mrs. Gutteron. This is the crucial first step toward the protection of her baby.

Additional information on the prevention of birth defects is available from the Orange County chapter of the March of Dimes, 979-2270.

He's hired Garden Grove attorney Paul Crost, who's now re-

Quake Kills 9,000

15,000 Await Island Evacuation

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The death toll from an earthquake and the landslides it triggered in Indonesia's remote West Irian province has climbed over 9,000. Minister of Social Welfare Mintaredja said today.

The minister told reporters

15,000 survivors were awaiting evacuation from the stricken area on New Guinea island.

West Irian Gov. Surtan said landslides ripping down into jungle valleys had covered some villages with 90 feet of mud and rock, burying at least 5,800 people, the Antara news agency reported Wednesday.

Mintaredja said today the government has flown in 50 tons of rice and the equivalent of about $35,000 for victims of the quake and slides, and $20,000 more would follow soon.

He said because of the rough terrain and the large number of victims, it would be difficult to fly the 15,000 survivors out by helicopter. The safest way would be to guide them out, he said, but it would take at least 10 days for them to walk to safety from the stricken area.

The use of fixed-wing aircraft for evacuation is not possible because two air strips in the area were badly damaged in the earthquake, Antara reported.

Assistance has come from the government, businessmen and missionary groups operating in the area.

Many people there still live in Stone Age conditions, hunting wild animals and eating sweet potatoes, wild fruits and vegetables, Mintaredja said. They depend on wild herbs for medicine, he added.

The earthquake struck June 26, but reports of casualties began filtering out only this week because of the remote and primitive area in which the quake struck.

The quake had a magnitude of 7.2 on the open-ended Richter scale. A magnitude of 7 on the scale means a major quake capable of widespread destruction. New tremors were reported in the area as early as Sunday.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number, say from magnitude 5.5 to magnitude 6.5, means the ground motion is 10 times greater. Some experts say the actual amount of energy released may be 30 times greater.

Mesa Developers Sued by Tenants

Damages totaling more than $35 million are being demanded from the Segerstrom family of Costa Mesa by tenants of the South Coast Village shopping complex in 20 lawsuits charging the defendants with fraud and breach of contract.

The actions on file today in Orange County Superior Court allege that the Segerstroms and the original leasing agents have failed to develop the complex on the lines promised when tenants signed agreements.

The Segerstroms said the claims were without foundation and pledged a vigorous defense. They said the legal actions are "inconsistent with the established commercial success of the village."

It is alleged that the defendants have failed to produce in South Coast Village a shopping center that was to become a rival to Farmer's Market, Ports O'Call in San Pedro or Ghirardelli Square in San Francisco.

The plaintiffs also claim:

— They weren't provided with a Landmark Tower they had expected. The structure was to serve as a sightseeing platform.

— Sales figures were below predictions given by the defendants.

— They were not linked to the adjacent South Coast Plaza mall by a tram or shuttle service as discussed when leases were signed.

Officials of the development company had no comment today referring queries to Robert Currie, attorney for Segerstrom who read a prepared statement that said in part:

"C.J. Segerstrom and Sons, the developer and owner of South Coast Village in Santa Ana... believes the claims are without foundation, and regrettably are typical of recent trends in the country of attacking reputable businesses with unwarranted claims and lawsuits. The actions are viewed by Segerstrom as inconsistent with the established commercial success of the Village.

"It is Segerstrom's intention to defend vigorously against these claims."

Citizens band radio and transmitting equipment valued at $332 was stolen from a Mission Viejo man's parked van while he slept in his nearby home.

Orange County sheriff's officers said an intruder forced open the van owned by Raymond Otto Kohler, 23, of 26211 San Roque.

Organized Crime 'Tie' Hit by Jury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego County sheriff should reassess his ties with known or suspected underworld figures, the county Grand Jury said Wednesday.

In a 57-page report from a two-month investigation on organized crime, the Grand Jury said that underworld activity does exist here, but not to the same extent as in the eastern United States.

"THERE IS NO indication that the Mafia or crime lords are here in San Diego County," said jury foreman Louis Metzger.

But the Grand Jury report criticized Sheriff John Duffy for voluntarily testifying in Los Angeles on behalf of the La Costa Country Club and Spa in Carlsbad.

Testifying in a libel suit against Penthouse magazine, which ran an article claiming the resort has underworld connections, Duffy filed an affidavit last February saying, "No evidence of criminal activity at La Costa or by the management of La Costa...has ever been detected at the resort."

FOR DUFFY TO offer such a statement willingly "was an error of major proportions," the report said. It added that the statement undermined the integrity of the sheriff's office.

Duffy later denied having anything to do with organized crime leaders.

Marriage Ends

Actor George Hamilton has filed suit to end his five-year marriage with actress-model Alana, citing irreconcilable differences. The couple, separated since last March, have a 21-month old son, George Ashley.

Viking Continues Site Search

PASADENA (AP) — Concern about the slopes and bumps of Mars' rugged surface has once again forced delay of the Viking 1

landing, this time until July 20 at the earliest.

Originally set for July 4 and rescheduled for July 17, the touchdown of Viking's life-seeking robot lander was put off again Wednesday night after Viking officials received bad news about the target area.

Killer Sent For Diagnosis

EL CENTRO (AP) — James Roe Faulkner, Sherman Oaks, has pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the hanging death of a young man known to others in a cult simply as Paul of Nazareth Christ.

After his plea, Faulkner, 56, was sent to Chino for 90-day diagnostic study before being returned for sentencing.

He was arrested after the victim, living near the Colorado River with others described by sheriff's deputies as "Jesus freaks," was tied with a rope, led to a post and left to die last Nov. 11.

THAT INFORMATION was the result of radar observations made over the weekend by a giant radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico.

The radar study indicated that the July 17 landing site, known as the Northwest site, could be strewn with boulders and slopes that could turn the landing into a disaster.

The roughness detected by the radar hadn't been seen in photos taken by Viking from its orbit about 1,000 miles above the surface.

BUT THE RADAR also found an area to the west that appears to be much smoother. It is a region about 200 miles west of the Northwest site in an area that has not been photographed by Viking's cameras.

Viking officials planned to have the spacecraft fire a rocket burst today to send it toward the uncharted region to begin taking pictures. If the area seems as flat and smooth in the photos as it appeared in the radar study, said Project Manager Jim Martin, a landing could be made there July 20.

On the other hand, he said, if the cameras show it to be more dangerous, Viking could return to the Northwest site for a landing July 22.

THE ORIGINAL JULY 4 landing site, selected long before the launch of Viking last August, had to be discarded when Viking's photographs revealed a much rougher, more knobby surface than had been expected.

"I think chances are very good that we are going to be able to find a landing site within a relatively few days," said Martin.

Time is of the essence because on about July 25, the attention of Viking scientists must turn toward a second Viking probe as it arrives near Mars. If the first Viking has not landed before then, its landing would have to be delayed until Viking 2 has been placed in orbit around Mars, now set for Aug. 7.

The new potential landing site is still within the general area known as Chryse, a broad basin at the mouths of several ancient Martian streambeds.

Parlor Law Takes Dive

SAN RAFAEL (AP) — A judge has slapped down a San Rafael ordinance restricting massage parlors on grounds the ordinance actually is aimed against prostitution.

Marin County Superior Court Judge Noel Martin, granting an injunction against enforcement of the law Wednesday, said he was not convinced by the arguments officials gave about the ordinance.

They said it was aimed at stopping false advertising, transmission of venereal disease and protecting the public from temptation.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "the evil being denounced by the ordinance is prostitution."

State Probes Tranquilizer Use

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Claims that tranquilizers are unnecessarily forced upon patients in state hospitals will be investigated, says Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo.

During a briefing for reporters Wednesday, Obledo also said former Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform basically deprived citizens of benefits they deserved.

He said the decision to investigate followed pressure from a San Francisco-area group of former mental patients called Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA).

Brown 'Presumes' Race Is On

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he's "presumed" he'll let supporters nominate him for president at next week's Democratic convention in New York City.

The 38-year-old governor, sole Democratic holdout against former

Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, said Wednesday, "I assume I'll run the process through to the end."

Plague Kills Two Squirrels

CARSON CITY (AP) — Deaths of squirrels in two northern California towns near the Nevada line were caused by bubonic plague and the disease probably caused deaths of more squirrels in the Stateline, Nev., area, says a state health official.

Dr. John Carr, state health officer, said Wednesday about five squirrels found dead around Markleeville and Woodfords, Calif., had bubonic plague.

Fire Cracker Ban Requested

SAN MATEO (AP) — Nineteen fire chiefs in San Mateo County have voted unanimously to ask county officials to ban private fireworks next Fourth of July.

John Keller, county fire coordinator, said firecrackers caused some 130 fires during the weekend.

A Dangerous Delay

Saddleback College trustees have finally acted to clear up a dangerous situation first detected months ago — toxic gases leaking into offices and classrooms from chemistry lab experiments.

The problem in the school's new math and science building has been so severe at times that instructors and students have gone home ill from breathing the vapors.

Faculty members say administrators have been aware of the improper venting of laboratories for some time. If that is the case, it is inconceivable that officials would have waited as long as they did to act.

After considerable discussion, trustees voted to hire a consultant to find out how repairs can be made, which means actual work probably won't begin for another few months.

Until the problem is corrected, experiments vital to the science program must be curtailed.

The disturbing aspect in all of this is that, with health and safety in mind, the response time should have been a lot quicker.

And apart from correcting the mechanical flaw, trustees should have ordered an immediate investigation to determine who is to blame for the problem and who might be liable for the repair costs.

Tricky Maneuver

Saddleback Valley Unified School District trustees have threatened to freeze salaries of some district employees unless their representatives agree to delay a binding contract until July, 1977.

In normal circumstances, negotiated items would be effective at the beginning of the new school year.

Although the sudden action involves three employe groups, it probably will have the greatest effect on teachers.

The district's negotiator has admitted the move was meant to counter the teachers' talk of a strike in the fall. It might have been a good strategic maneuver if it had been done differently.

Though trustees deny it, the action they took was not quite above board because it was buried in a so-called "routine" action approving the district salary schedule for next year.

Only after several more agenda items had been discussed did trustee Dennis Smith state that, indeed, the board would withhold all normal in-service raises next year if the agreement to delay isn't signed.

If this was supposed to have been a show of board muscle we think trustees should have delivered a fair blow above the belt.

Improving on Nature

Preserving things in their natural state has become very fashionable these days. So the fact that the Culverdale Community Association wanted a "wilderness" park, as opposed to the neatly trimmed parks and greenbelts seen in the rest of Irvine, made sense.

The city council agreed, and motorists who travel on the San Diego Freeway can now see the rugged park that lies behind Culverdale Village. It's got tall, wild grass and native trees and shrubs.

It should cost the city much less to maintain the Culverdale Wilderness Park, since it's to be mowed only four times per year and requires little water.

But the Culverdale folks are now unhappy with their decision to go the natural route. They say the wild-looking park presents a bad image for Culverdale. They plan to ask the city council next week to provide money to make the park look like the rest of the parks in Irvine.

Their feeling may be understandable. But it's rather sad that their love of nature was so short-lived. Apparently wilderness parks cannot be easily integrated into a planned society of greenbelts.

A Very Healthy 200 Years

PAUL HARVEY

We made it! We made it and blew out 200 candles in a single breath. Our nation's birthday was celebrated without disaster, disruption or hangover.

Whereas most of the world's governments at the age of 150 are already suffering senility, ours has such a "remarkable Constitution" that at the age of 200 we're suffering nothing more serious than a sneeze.

I've celebrated personally with a 100 American cities this Bicentennial year. Young and old and in-between we learned or relearned American history by participating in it.

If only for a while, we talked about and thought about and planned for and worked together on painting the town red, white and blue.

HISTORY has been a declining subject in our secondary schools. So enamored have we become with the "political sciences" and the "social sciences" that in some states — New York, Indiana, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon — no prior training in history is required for high school history teachers. And the number of students taking history courses in college has been shrinking every year.

And without a knowledge of how we got where we are, the tendency is to go in circles.

Then along came the Bicentennial year and Paul Revere rode again. Elementary school-agers were on their knees and elbow deep in paint decorating fireplugs in patriotic colors.

PARADES, pageantry and church services recalled for us all that our nation's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain also included a declaration of "dependence" on God. And God and Country, since rent asunder, were reunited.

We looked around the world and saw that in the 200 years since our nation weaned itself, every other nation has been turned upside down. Ours is the only one still right-side-up.

Two hundred years ago England and France were monarchies, and France were monarchies, and Germany didn't even exist. Our Latin American neighbors were colonies. China was ruled by the Manchus, Japan by the Shoguns, Russia by tyrannical czars.

IT WAS only that what we built here was built so well it has remained intact. And with a society more fair and an economy more flourishing than any elsewhere, we are yet entitled to walk tall.

they were given their druthers all Irvine schools would be Fundamental, teachers be damned! This group's leader has been reported to say that if a teacher doesn't adhere strictly to a Fundamental School's dictates (as his group sees it), then he will be fired.

Job protection in a profession such as teaching. It is available in the other sectors; and the abolishment of same has usually been presented by people who are truly against open-idea education for children. People who have supported the abolishment of tenure historically have been anti-public schools in America.

Libbers Happy?

May I extend a big thank you, keep up the good work, to Doris Allen, Chairman of the "Save Our Status" organization, (Mailbox July 5). Why have all those sincere, hardworking gals stood by and allowed the libbers and ERA to say they speak for all women? Do you think libbers are happy? Observe a picket line of them and listen to their lingo!

MANY millions of wonderful, hard-working moms have raised a family, contributed effort to school and church and have been the greater for it. Easy? No. They have "done their thing?" Yes. However, even in those hours of travail, anguish and pinching pennies they did not throw out Dad and the kids to "go do their thing," or "get their head on straight."

Who said life would be easy? Who said each of you would find his niche in life and feel rewarded? In this Bicentennial year, we have recognized the great contributions made by our pioneer mothers and fathers. Do you think libbers and like thinkers equal that?

'Oh dear. The pound's dropped again!'

We have a great debt to those millions of mothers and fathers who find joy with their God, their spouse and their family circle.

The day we accept gays, lesbians and like thinkers as normal outlets that are socially acceptable, then, in fairness, all peeping Toms, prostitutes and the Mafia must be allowed equally to "do their own thing."

Deserves Chance

To the Editor: I can understand Nancy Ebsen's frustration at losing the candidate of her choice, (June 30, letter to the editor) but I can't understand her vehemence against the winner, Jim Siemons.

Not having a law degree or experience in Sacramento doesn't make him unfit to be an assemblyman. In fact, after viewing the shenanigans pulled by the experienced, it could be a help.

And hiring capable men to run his campaign, with his own or voluntary private contributions, is no crime. It is not nearly as reprehensible as Governor Brown wasting $100,000 of public matching funds for his hopeless bid for the Presidency.

I DON'T know much about Siemons — he wasn't my man either — but I think it would be fair to find out before we condemn him. As there are three Democrats to every Republican in the Assembly now, it would be a good idea for those 46,912 Republicans that didn't vote for him, to look before they leap to the other side.

Angry Taxpayer

To the Editor: I find it hard to express the anger many of us felt at the recent statement from the County Assessor regarding tax rates in Orange County. He stated that property taxes in the county would have to increase this year because of the increase in property values.

IF THIS is the kind of thinking done by our county officials we are in real trouble. Apparently it would never occur to him that rates might be dropped and spending decreased. He is saying openly that he has a windfall and it is burning a hole in his pocket, because the increase he talks about far outstrips inflation rates.

We are long past due for our representatives to become just that and busy themselves with thoughts of how spending and waste can be eliminated.

Code of Violence

To the Editor: Re: The murder of Lynn McClure: The military court martial finding Harold Bronson innocent, and the attorney calling for dismissal of charges against the others involved because "they don't deserve this kind of treatment" is only the tip of the malignancy hiding behind good men.

This is the way to train good men? The fact that the Marine Corps absolutely believes this proves that the Marine Corps and any other branch of the military service that believes this should be immediately abolished.

"VIOLENCE begets violence" — and this truth is evident in the humanitarian reporting of our news people as the backlash of this type of training is coming to light everywhere: Another man killed and four injured during another training session; Marines involved in every type of violent crime from rape to child-beating; the raging fires that came off the training base to destroy lives, homes and property, etc.

What makes me sick is the number of years this distorted system has existed — and been accepted — with all of its ugly symptoms and eruptions hidden in smug, dictatorial, hypocritical bureaucracy.

Every society has its peace-loving people, and these are the people who should be placed in positions of leadership and influence throughout the world. Eventually all needs for military services and weapons would diminish and fade away.

Maybe not in our lifetime — but in our children's lifetime — Carl Sandburg's vision will be fulfilled: "Sometime they'll give a war and nobody will come."

CB Can Help

To the Editor: With regard to CB Channel 9 for help on the highways, it is one of the best things that could happen and could save a lot of lives.

For example, in a recent accident when a girl was pinned under her pickup truck, a party had to leave the freeway and call the police for help. By the time they arrived and she was taken to hospital it was too late. She would be alive today if Channel 9 was in service.

I would like to suggest that this call be in code to save time, with special codes for medic needed, ambulance needed, etc. The officers could copy the message and advise that help is on the way. The CBER should stay at the scene and put out flares until the unit arrives.

Ford Eyes Efficiency

WASHINGTON — Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents, on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

If the President wins the nomination, he will move to streamline the federal bureaucracy. The Democratic candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy, promising a shake-up if he should become President.

INSIDE the Ford Administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it not only is strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development in mindboggling unmanageability.

But White House advocates believe the reorganization would increase bureaucratic efficiency and speed U.S. energy independence, thereby saving billions.

As laid out in the documents, the superagency might include the Federal Energy Administration, Energy Research and Development Administration, Federal Power Commission and Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

IT PROBABLY would also draw in bits and pieces of the Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, State,

Transportation and Treasury Departments, not to mention the Council of Economic Advisors, Energy Resources Council, Environmental Protection Agency and Water Resources Council.

This jumble of bureaucratic jigsaw pieces are supposed to be fitted into one vast agency, with the possibility of forming a smaller, secondary agency to handle the regulatory functions.

The White House documents reveal that the work on this gigantic shotgun marriage began on May 20. The task force was given three months to prepare a "presidential decision paper" for Ford to contemplate.

THE NEW superagency would be charged with the responsibility for developing a "comprehensive energy policy" to replace the present catch-as-catch-can methods of dealing with crises.

Specifically, the agency would be expected to increase production, reduce energy demand, promote "fossil, water, nuclear, solar and geothermal" energy, and "develop a comprehensive strategy on fuel, pipelines and distribution of energy, set up contingency plans for handling any future oil shortage and generate electricity.
