"It was beautiful work. They're heroes," says Huntington Beach police detective Art Droz of the two rescuers, Robert Maness, 23, of Huntington Beach, and Michael Spears, 24, of Costa Mesa.

He spoke of the capture last Thursday by the pair of a suspect who allegedly dragged the teenager off busy Beach Boulevard into a grassy gulch near Adams Avenue.

Lon Dean Vickery, 24, a Huntington Beach short order cook, today remained in jail custody in lieu of $10,000 bail.

He is accused of the attempted rape in a criminal complaint issued earlier this week by the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Investigators say Maness, the initial witness, and Spears to whom he cried for help, pounced on the suspect as he pinned the girl down in a field.

She was not sexually assaulted before they intervened, but her clothes had been partially torn off and she was hysterical, police said.

"They saved her a lot of anguish. . .a lot of mental torment. . .a lot of trauma. I talked to her again the other day and she seems to be doing just fine now," said Detective Droz.

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Pendleton Marine Held In 2 Killings

By The Associated Press

A young Marine photographer apparently selected his victims as he went on a shooting-stabbing rampage at Camp Pendleton that left two senior co-workers dead and four others wounded.

Sgt. Earl J. Holley, 24, of Staten Island, N.Y., was arrested Wednesday, sitting with the .22-caliber automatic pistol he allegedly used to kill two senior photographers at the base audio-visual center.

"We have reason to believe he knew who the victims were and he sought them out," said Lt. Col. D.W. Brown, head of the public affairs office at the nation's largest Marine base, 25 miles north of San Diego.

Master Sgt. Daniel P. Hurley, 42, of Uniontown, Pa., and Staff Sgt. Gilbert N. Donham, 38, of Ladelle, Ark., died of multiple gunshot wounds, a Marine spokesman said.

Hurley lived in Oceanside with his Korean-born wife and five-week-old daughter, a Marine spokesman said. He was dead at the scene and Donham died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital.

Other Marines who knew Holley told reporters he felt victimized and ridiculed by other

Carter Promises European Freedom

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing

Dollar Takes 'Sharp Rise'

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in Europe today following major U.S. government intervention on foreign exchange markets to prop the currency.

But trading was cautious, and many of the market's big operators stayed on the sidelines waiting to see whether the Carter administration would continue its support action.

The British pound was quoted at $1.88 in midafternoon, a drop of nearly 8 cents from its Wednesday close at $1.9590 and down 2 cents fromits opening today at $1.90.

Lightning Bolt Strikes HB Home

Lightning struck in Huntington Beach Wednesday, blowing a smoking, two-foot hole in the roof of a home as the rains came with a vengeance.

Raymond Hirko, 12, and his mother, Mrs. Cathy Hirko, were in the Andrew Hirko home at 5982 Brassie Drive when the 3:52 bolt struck, knocking out power in the house and stopping clocks.

They were uninjured, firemen said, although young Raymond, seated in front of the television set, had the daylights scared out of him when the TV screen lit up like a giant flashbulb.

Firemen from the Heil Station, just around the corner, raced to the scene and tore smouldering shingles from around the hole in the roof.

Rain so heavy at times it drummed on cars and rooftops as heavily as hail apparently caused little serious flooding in Huntington Beach or Fountain Valley.

Sunshine Saturday?

But Rain Forecast Friday, Sunday

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Rainwatcher J. Sherman Denny of Huntington Beach reported 1.09 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.28 for the season and 6.32 for last season at this time. He said an unusually large amount, 4.03 inches, has fallen in Huntington Beach between Dec. 22 and today.

John Gietzen of the Orange County Flood Control District recorded a 24-hour total of .62 inches for Santa Ana. The season total there is 5.64 inches, compared to 4.46 last year.

At Santiago Peak on Saddleback Mountain, he said, today's tally was 1.5 inches, for a season total of 17.2 compared to 11.0 last year.

One inch of rain provides an estimated 10,000 acre feet of replenishment for the county's underground water basin, Orange County Water District officials said today.

non-commissioned officers in the photography and audio-visual departments and was quoted as saying he would seek revenge.

Acquaintances said Holley had unclipped an ammunition belt and laid down his pistol, then sat on a table with his legs crossed waiting to be taken after the spree was over.

"He'd done what he had to do," one said.

Brown said Holley had sought private talks with his superior officers shortly before Christmas in which he complained of dissatisfaction with his job after being transferred from photography to the audio-visual supply room.

"Specifically, he pressed some grievances toward more senior men" in the photo departments, Brown said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

A Marine account of the rampage said Holley attacked three of his victims at the center, then ran to a nearby photographic laboratory where he shot three other men.

"When he came into the first building, he shot one man and ignored two others, then went to a supply room and stabbed two men, ignoring several other workers — a man and a woman," Brown said.

Holley then went to the photo lab where he opened fire on three non-commissioned officers, again selecting them out of a crowd, the colonel said.

Brown said Holley was a competent photographer and other Marines described him as quiet and introverted.

In October, 1976, Holley received a meritorious promotion to sergeant.

"It was a personality thing," one Marine said., Holley felt abused by other Marines because of incidents "like embarrassing him in front of other people.

"The six he wanted. . .they were in the power structure," the Marine said.

The wounded were identified as Master Gunnery Sgt. Jose L. Penalosa, 40, of Vista, Calif., listed in stable condition with gunshot wounds to the left thigh and face; Staff Sgt. Lee Connelly, 25, of Decatur, Ill., serious after undergoing surgery for multiple stab wounds; Gunnery Sgt. David E. Ostrander, hometown undetermined, who was treated for a bullet in the right shoulder and released, and Gunnery Sgt. Manuel C. Concepcion, 36, of Oceanside.

Concepcion, a supply man at the audio-visual center and the only victim who was not a photographer, was reported in serious condition after surgery with munities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive; Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

There were no serious injuries reported.

In Huntington Beach, a home in the north part of the city was struck by lightning which burned a hole through the roof but was quickly doused by firemen stationed just around the corner.

Damage in Newport Beach was slight although city officials said streets in low-lying Balboa Peninsula and Balboa Island remained flooded hours after the storm passed.

Cancer Victim Turns Picket

FRESNO (AP) — Frustrated at refusal of physicians to turn over her records, a Fresno woman treated for cancer has begun picketing their office.

Louise Crossley began parading in front of the office of Drs. R.W. Wolk and A. Padmanabhan, demanding that they release to her records of her five years of cobalt treatment, chemotherapy and three operations.

Her husband, mother and a friend joined in the picketing.

Effort Hampered

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The chances of an anti-busing measure qualifying for the June state ballot have practically ended with the defeat by the Senate Elections and Reapportionment Committee Wednesday of a bill that would have changed the last date for legislative passage of June ballot measures from Jan. 26 to Feb. 10.

Gun Sales Up

Self-protection Motivation

VISTA (AP) — A rash of home invasions, rapes and shootings is bringing a run on handguns along with warnings from authorities that watch dogs and night lights are safer.

"People are creating their own panic," said sheriff's Lt. Paul Franklin.

In cities and hamlets throughout northern San Diego County, gun shops report sharply increased sales.

A year-old office of crime prevention specialists in Vista said more requests for advice have been handled this week than in the 11 months of the federal-financed pilot program.

Last week, George G. Mottino, a 68-year-old farmer, was shot to death by gunmen trying to force their way into his home. Masked gunmen have broken into several homes, raping women and four masked men broke into a Fallbrook physician's home and robbed him and guests.

stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Pointing to more than two centuries of French-American partnership, dating to the American Revolution, Carter told his French audience:

"We're proud of what we've done together. We're sure our friendship will be everlasting."

Brought by bus from Germany for the occasion were troops of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division that lost 2,000 men at Omaha Beach on D-Day.

Representatives of the French armed forces joined them, as did some American Legion members, survivors of the wartime French resistance movement and a French military band.

Carter, who walked alone with Giscard to the edge of the cliff for a view of the beach at the end of the ceremony, was bundled in a short white raincoat and scarf.

Giscard d'Estaing wore a sweater under his gray suit but was otherwise unprotected from the cold. Mrs. Carter, in cloth coat and boots, carried a scarf in one hand.

The two leaders then drove from Omaha Beach to Bayeux, the first French town liberated after the D-Day landing. There a flag-waving crowd of several thousand cheered as both Carter and Giscard d'Estaing engaged in campaign-style politicking.

The French president was quick to follow the lead of his guest, who lost no time reaching out for the hands of welcomers held behind metal barricades.

When a small tow-headed girl wearing the colorful traditional costume of the Calvados region presented a bouquet to Mrs. Carter, the American president swept the child into his arms and, to cheers from the crowd, kissed her on the cheek.

Brown Calls Legislative Tax Session

$1 Billion Relief Bill Tops Agenda

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

In a wide-ranging address to a joint session of the Legislature, Brown also said he will support "substantial increases" in state funds for mental hospitals and community care programs. But he did not spell out specifics.

The Democratic governor also called for abolition of the business inventory tax, long sought by the business community.

He also said he will ask the Legislature again this year to appropriate funds for new state prisons. A similar Brown request was denied last year.

But Brown said in his "State-of-the State" message that property taxes are "first on the list" of challenges facing California in 1978.

"Homeowners and renters want relief. The rapid economic growth has driven up assessments," Brown said.

"Before this month is out, you should put on my desk a billion dollar property tax relief program."

Brown asked for a tax relief bill containing no increases in other state taxes, and said it should include "stringent controls" on local government spending.

He ordered the special session convened 1½ hours after the conclusion of his speech.

Brown did not give reasons for convening a special session when the Legislature is already convened in its regular session. But that is a parliamentary maneuver that can get around delays required under regular house rules without going to Republicans to get a two-thirds majority.

Bills passed in the regular session don't take effect until Jan. 1, 1979. But a bill passed in a special session takes effect 90 days after that session is adjourned.

Brown's desire for quick action on property tax relief is clearly fueled by a voters' tax initiative on the June ballot which would cut local property taxes by about two-thirds.

The measure, known as the Jarvis Initiative, would cut revenues for cities, counties and local schools by about $7 billion.

Brown's fourth annual address to the Legislature was a few seconds short of 10 minutes long, which continued Brown's tradition of brief formal speeches.

In that time, Brown touched briefly on a wide range of issues. But he gave details of few items.

Brown described 1977 as "a good year" in which California enjoyed "an economic boom unparallelled in the nation.

"This is California — a good environment, a healthy economy and a commitment" to social justice.

Brown said in addition to requesting funds to build new prisons, his administration will also be cracking down on prison gangs.

Reaction to the speech was predictable. Democrats praised it and Republicans were generally critical.

Maness is more blunt about what he and Spears did while the shaken teen-aged victim ran back to the service station to call police who found Vickery held captive inside on arrival.

People's Protest

Legion Chief Sees Canal Pact 'Death'

Robert Charles Smith, national commander of the American Legion, predicted Wednesday night in Newport Beach that a wave of protest from "the people" will kill the new Panama Canal treaty.

Smith spoke to a crowd of about 150 Orange Coast Legionnaires and their wives during a dinner sponsored by Newport Harbor Post 291.

He said ratification of the treaty, which would phase out U.S. control of the canal and Canal Zone, is going to be the most pressing issue facing the 95th Congress which reconvenes next week. (Related story, A4.)

The Legion, nationwide has launched a campaign in opposition to the treaty in which "the rank and file members and their friends are going to be sending their input to their congressmen and senators," he said in an interview prior to his speech.

He believes there is great opposition to the treaty among the American people, but because of apathy, that opposition might not be expressed.

Smith said the Legion can provide the means for the public to express its views on the treaty.

"Complacency of the American people is the biggest problem of the United States at this time," he commented.

Carter Promises European Freedom

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

KICKED 'CAT' RAISES STINK

DURAND, Ill. (AP) — Jack Yaun walked out to his barn in early morning dimness and saw in the doorway that same old stray cat that had been hanging around.

"Well, I up and gave it one hell of a good kick," Yaun said Wednesday.

Yaun failed to see the white stripe down the animal's back.

The skunk retaliated.

Farmers Happy

'Berry Good' Storm Hailed

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

While rains that fell Wednesday and early Thursday are causing some harvesting problems for Orange County farmers, most concede that the much-needed water is doing much more good than harm.

A county agriculture commission spokesman said early today that farmers in the Irvine Ranch area are having some difficulty harvesting cauliflower, celery and broccoli because of mud but that the rains are doing the "strawberries nothing but good."

He said strawberries grown on small acreages throughout the county are not scheduled for harvesting until late March through June. "This rain will leech the root structure and do wonders for the crop," he added.

Fred Keller, Irvine Company's agriculture vice president, said the inch of rain that fell across the company ranch has slowed down cauliflower and celery harvesting and has halted work in broccoli fields.

"We can't get the tractors in," he said, adding that the company's avocado harvest also has been temporarily stopped because of the rain.

However, Keller was happy about the condition of Irvine Co. grazing land. Late last month he had predicted the firm would import hay to feed its 1,000 head of cattle.

He indicated this morning that grasslands are now in good grazing condition.

A Rancho Mission Viejo spokesman said this morning that the latest storm had dropped approximately 1.25 inches of rain on the ranch's 40,000 acres of grazing land.

The county's southernmost ranch is running only 600 head of cattle on its range this year. Gil Aguirre, vice president for ranch operations, said last month that his company is stocking no range beef cattle this year because of drought conditions. Normally, he said, the ranch runs up to 4,000 head of cattle during the winter months.

downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Rainwatcher J. Sherman Denny of Huntington Beach reported 1.09 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.28 for the season and 6.32 for last season at this time. He said an unusually large amount, 4.03 inches, has fallen in Huntington Beach between Dec. 22 and today.

munities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive; Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

In Huntington Beach, a home in the north part of the city was struck by lightning which burned a hole through the roof but was quickly doused by firemen stationed just around the corner.

Damage in Newport Beach was slight although city officials said streets in low-lying Balboa Peninsula and Balboa Island remained flooded hours after the storm passed.

Much of Costa Mesa was turned to an asphalt-bottomed sea as many gutterless roads were transformed to channels complete with flooded cars and floating garbage cans on State Avenue near Wilson Street.

A section of 19th Street was wholly under water; Costa Mesa police detoured traffic onto smaller downtown area roads.

Costa Mesa City Hall employees reported about an inch of rain — on the second floor — because drain pipes couldn't handle the fast-falling rain. Firemen drained the backwash with water pumps, confining damage to a soggy carpet.

In San Clemente there was slippage of bluffs along Pacific Coast Highway, one lane of which was closed because of mudslides, from Estacion north to Camino San Clemente.

Firemen in Laguna Beach helped downtown merchants pile sandbags in front of their stores to prevent flooding; it worked, according to reports.

Several small mudslides were reported in that city, one in the 800 block of Bluebird.

Southern California Edison Co. reported power blackouts Wednesday afternoon, and early today, in Fountain Valley, Newport Beach, Costa Mesa and Irvine.

In Fountain Valley, an underground cable failed at 2 a.m. today, affecting 80 customers in the area of San Lorenzo west of Euclid Street. Power was expected to be restored this morning.

The Newport-Costa Mesa area was hit with a brief power outage at the onset of the storm at noon Wednesday. About 1,950 homes on 16th and 17th streets between Newport Boulevard and Westcliff Drive were without electricity for 25 minutes after a palm frond was blown by winds into a high voltage line.

KING TUT FANS LINE UP FOR TICKETS AT COSTA MESA'S SOUTH COAST PLAZA
Ducats for Egyptian Art Show in Los Angeles Go Fast on Orange Coast

Crowds Hit by Tutmania

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

About 45,000 Orange Coast residents flocked to six area stores this week, braving long lines and rain to buy most of the available tickets for the treasures of Tutankhamun Egyptian art exhibit in Los Angeles.

Orange Coast store managers said the culture-seeking crowds were of all ages and very well mannered as they waited to buy the tickets for the four-month exhibit opening Feb. 15 at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Store officials said most of the Tut tickets were sold Tuesday.

The Orange Coast stores were allotted between 7,000 and 9,000 tickets each.

Huntington Beach May Company and Broadway department store officials said several hundred ticket buyers waited in the rain for several hours Tuesday and Wednesday before receiving the tickets. Lines also were in evidence at Broadway, May Co. and Bullock's ticket outlets in Laguna Hills and Costa Mesa.

Store officials said that by Wednesday afternoon only "singles" and tickets for exhibit times during the week were still on sale. Most tickets for weekend exhibit times were sold during the first few hours Tuesday.

Store officials at the May Company, Broadway and Bullocks said they expected all the Egyptian exhibit ducats to be sold by today.

Officials at the Los Angeles museum expect about 1.3 million Southern Californians to view the precious artifacts.

Some three million people have seen the exhibit in Washington, D.C., Chicago and New Orleans where it closes Jan. 15.

The show also will travel to Seattle, New York and San Francisco.

Stamp Burglaries Told

Huntington Reports $45,000 in Theft Losses

Huntington Beach police said today they believe a stamp collection burglary ring has struck three times in their city and may soon hit other Orange County collectors.

Police Detective Marty O'Reilly said stamps valued at $45,000 have been taken from three Huntington Beach collectors during the past two weeks.

O'Reilly has advised all area stamp collectors to lock up their treasures because the thieves are using a mailing list of philatelist club members to select their victims.

Police believe the thieves found a stamp collectors club mailing list at the home of their first victim who lived in a mobile home park.

O'Reilly declined to identify the victims because that information would tip off other burglars as to where to find the valuable stamps, he said.

The first victim, a 72-year-old former McDonnell Douglas Company employee, told police an old mailing list of other stamp collectors was taken in the Dec. 23 burglary.

The burglary victim told police the mailing list could tip off the burglar as to where other prominent stamp collectors in the area are living.

The name and address of the second victim, a 74-year-old trailer park resident in another part of the city, was on that list.

O'Reilly said the stamp thieves struck while the victim was away from his home. As in the first theft, a door was pried open to gain entry.

In the second break in, which occurred Dec. 31, a mink coat was also taken. Despite this, O'Reilly said he believes it was the work of the same stamp burglars.

"They were more selective in the stamps they stole the second time," O'Reilly said.

The third stamp theft occurred Monday while the 41-year-old victim was away at the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

NB Doctor Eyes Governor's Post

Dr. Eugene Atherton, the Newport Beach physician known for his authorship of environmentally oriented initiative campaigns, will be seeking the Democratic nomination for governor.

Atherton has until Feb. 23, to get the signatures of 10,000 registered Democrats in order to qualify as a candidate for the June primary election.

Otherwise, a spokesman for the Orange County Registrar of Voters said, he will have to pay a $982 filing fee to get his name on the Democratic ballot in June.

Atherton's last try for elective office came in 1976 when he ran against Tom Riley for the Fifth District seat on the county Board of Supervisors. He finished a distant third to Riley and Max Binswanger.

Atherton, who has associated himself with a variety of causes generally aimed at protecting the county's natural environment, has written a handful of initiative peititions which have been presented to Orange Coast area voters in the past two years.

One, which qualified in Newport Beach and was enacted by the city council, calls for the dedication of five acres of park land per 1,000 residents of new developments. The city previously required two acres per 1,000 people.

A similar measure also authored by Atherton has qualified for the March ballot in San Clemente.

In Newport Beach, Atherton is currently working on a petition requiring dedication of access to bluff tops alongside the Newport Bay or the ocean.

He is also circulating another petition he wrote which calls for a county ordinance requiring increased park land dedication from developers and would provide incentives for low-cost housing.

Teacher Suit Proposed in Saddleback

Saddleback Valley Unified School District Trustee William Kohler wants the district to sue teachers for the cost of last year's strike.

Kohler proposed Wednesday that trustees find out how much the strike cost and bring a suit against the teachers for that amount. The trustees did not discuss his proposal but Kohler said later that he hopes they will consider it during their next meeting.

He explained that the Pasadena school system is suing its teachers for the $330,000 cost of a strike in its schools. Since the courts have said this could be done and the state Supreme Court has denied the teachers' appeal, he said, similar action now is open to other school districts.

He said the court's action now can be considered the law so strikes are illegal. In the past, teachers have contended that their strikes are not covered by the law because they're not specifically mentioned in the law.

Is Our Juvenile Justice System Fair?

The man in charge of a $100 million-a-year federal program to keep non-criminal juvenile offenders from being locked up says up to 90 percent of the youngsters detained in institutions shouldn't be.

That is what Frederick P. Nader, deputy administrator for the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, told Orange County officials Wednesday.

"None of us thinks in any kind of naive sense that every youngster ought to be just turned free," Nader said. "There are some young people that present a threat to the community and a threat to themselves.

"The question is how many of those youngsters are there really and what do we do about those others?" Nader continued.

The youthful offenders Nader was referring to are those who have committed such offenses as truancy and running away—offenses which would not be law violations if they were adults.

He also was talking about abused and neglected children who often are locked up for their own protection.

Nader told supervisors and county law enforcement officials that corrections experts believe only 10 to 12 percent of the juveniles in U.S. corrections facilities really belong in locked institutions.

The other 88 to 90 percent, he contended, are not a threat to the community, and the services they receive in institutions are considered by many as "grossly inadequate."

What is needed, Nader said, are cooperative efforts between those in juvenile justice and those who offer human services — social workers, mental health workers and educators, for example.

"Someone who says delinquency is a problem of the justice system is making a misinformed statement," Nader continued.

The juvenile offender who arrives in court may face health problems, education problems, mental health problems or problems in his home environment, Nader said.

"I suggest to you that the justice system is probably the most poorly equipped to handle those problems," he continued.

Yet, he said, there are whole professions of human services officials who are paid with tax dollars to help youngsters and families who are troubled.

"It is time to say . . . here work with them," Nader

Supervisor Thomas Riley asked Nader about some $6 million in juvenile treatment funds withheld from California by federal authorities.

That allocation includes $330,000 to help finance Orange County programs this year.

Nader said state funds have been withheld because the California Youth Authority mixes adult and juveniles offenders in the same institutions, a violation of federal regulations.

He said negotiations are under way to resolve the difficulties and federal authorities don't wish to withhold any funds from the state.

Convict Hurt in 'Escape'

A jail inmate was seriously injured Wednesday when he made an ill-fated attempt to escape his captors by clinging to the undercarriage of a sheriff's bus that was returning 50 prisoners from Orange County Courthouse to jail.

The self-imposed ride taken by Richard Gonzalez Arellanes, 40, of Los Angeles, lasted only from the courthouse basement to the drive leading to Civic Center Drive.

It was there that Arellanes either fell or was scraped from his undercarriage hiding place and then run over by the bus dual rear wheels.

The seriously injured man was taken to UCI Medical Center where he underwent emergency surgery and is reported to be in guarded condition today.

Arellanes was arrested Monday by Santa Ana police on charges of impersonating a police officer, robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and kidnapping.

At the time of his arrest he used the name Albert Martinez.

He allegedly was at the wheel of an auto that led police responding to a robbery call on a 100 mph chase through Santa Ana and Orange side streets before he and a companion were chased down on foot after the car crashed into a wall.

The two men were suspected of attempting to rob a resident at 1900 W. Civic Center Drive after posing as policemen to gain entry into the hourse.

Arellanes was in court Wednesday morning to be arraigned in Municipal Court and was not seen crawling under the bus when he and 49 other prisoners began their two-block journey back to Orange County Jail shortly after noon.

LIONEL WILLIAMS (RIGHT) HELD FOR MINEO MURDER
Jail Cell in Michigan Bugged to Get Evidence

Suspect Charged In Mineo Slaying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Michigan convict whose jail-cell conversations about the stabbing death of actor Sal Mineo were bugged by police has been charged with murder.

A single charge of first-degree murder was filed in Beverly Hills Municipal Court on Wednesday against Lionel R. Williams, 21, who is slated to complete an eight-month jail term for forgery at Calhoun County Jail in Marshall, Mich., on Friday, said Deputy District Attorney Burton Katz.

Calhoun County Sheriff Roger Dean said today that Williams indicated he won't fight extradition.

If that happens, Dean said, Williams will be handed over to California authorities for return to that state "by the weekend."

In tape-recorded conversations in June and December, Williams talked to cellmates in Marshall about the Mineo case after his jail cell was bugged at the request of the Los Angeles County sheriff's department.

Dean said the tape-recorded conversations "contributed investigative leads. . . we went in there and interviewed all of Williams' cellmates."

Dean refused to say what was on the tape recordings or what evidence was gleaned from interviewing prisoners housed in Williams' 12-man cell.

Dean said Williams' cell was bugged after a search warrant was issued by a Calhoun County circuit judge.

Meantime, Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter Pitchess said authorities believe the killer acted alone in the February 1976 slaying "and killed Mineo with the apparent motive of robbery," although investigators were puzzled because money was found on the 37-year-old actor's blood-stained body.

A hunting knife apparently was the murder weapon, Pitchess said, although he offered a terse "no comment" when asked if the murder weapon was found.

"We think we have a very strong case," Pitchess said.

Teen-age Drinking

NBC-TV May Face Lawsuit by School

HARTSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Hartsdale school board officials say they'll meet to decide whether to take legal action against NBC television consumer reporter Betty Furness and the TV network for serving an alcoholic beverage to 15 under-age high school students who took part in a show on teenage drinking.

But NBC says Miss Furness warned officials of the Westchester County school that she would be serving 30-proof drinks to the students, aged 12 to 16, during a Nov. 28 taping of a "Today" show segment that was shown Dec. 13. The state's minimum drinking age is 18.

Miss Furness was unavailable for comment.

Hartsdale School Superintendent Robert Frelow said the school board directed lawyer Richard Gyory to explore legal options. The board will meet on the matter Tuesday.

Frelow said the producers of the NBC report on drinking among teen-agers "misled" teachers when they got permission to use students in the report.

He said school officials were unaware that alcohol was on the menu when the television people "told us that they wanted to do a consumer panel with some youngsters" who would sample "subtly enticing" snack foods.

The products were various flavored drinks of Malcolm Hereford's Cows, a sweet, milkshake-like, 30-proof beverage which Miss Furness offered to the students. She then elicited opinions about the drinks.

Miss Furness said in her report that Heublein's advertising makes "liquor look like something that should be sold at the corner soda shop instead of a liquor store."

A Heublein spokesman said the firm was misrepresented in the broadcast and that Heublein is considering a lawsuit.

A spokesman for NBC said Wednesday that a counselor on the faculty at the school, Robert Petrillo, had given permission for students to participate in the report. He said the network proceeded under the belief that the school was acting "in loco parentis" — in the place of parents.

The Westchester County district attorney directed the school board to file a complaint if it wants his office to investigate.

Conviction for violation of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Act is punishable by a one-year sentence and $1,000 fine, a spokesman for the district attorney said.

County Doctor Ball Services Set Friday

Funeral services will be held Friday in Santa Ana for longtime Orange County physician Dexter R. Ball who died Wednesday at the age of 83.

Dr. Ball, who practiced medicine in the county for more than 49 years, was one of the founders of St. Joseph Hospital in Orange.

The son of a physician who moved to Santa Ana from Quebec in 1887, Dr. Ball was a graduate of Santa Ana High School, UC Berkeley and the UC San Francisco College of Medicine.

He opened his general practice in Santa Ana in 1922.

In addition to Dr. Ball and his father, the family includes five other physicians. Dr. Ball's late brother, John, was a surgeon. His three sons, Dexter T., Robert and Donald all practice medicine in Orange County, as does his nephew, Dr. John D. Ball Jr.

Dr. Ball leaves his widow, Edna, of Santa Ana; his three sons; a sister, Arvilla Witmer, of Santa Ana; 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Services will be held at 3 p.m. at the Waverley Chapel in Fairhaven Memorial Park, Santa Ana.

The family suggests memorial donations to St. Joseph Hospital High Risk Infant Nursery.

Guilt Salved

Shoplifter Gives $40 to HB

A person in Salt Lake City, probably suffering from a guilty conscience, is trying to make things right in Huntington Beach.

THE APPARENTLY reformed shoplifter sent two $20 bills to the Chamber of Commerce, asking that the money be distributed to three stores in the city.

The anonymous letter writer directed that $10 be given to Alpha Beta, $10 to Safeway and $20 to Zody's.

Ralph Kiser, the chamber's executive manager, said the request was a first for him.

KISER SAID he would carry out the letter writer's request immediately.

The envelope, which had a Salt Lake City postmark, was addressed to the Chamber of Comserse, Hunnington Beach.

"About a year ago," the letter said, "I took a number of items from some stores in your city, and I would apriciate it verry much if you would give this money to those stores; (since I no longer live in the state and am never down their.").

A spokesman at Zody's headquarters in Los Angeles said the company receives money in the mail about once a month, sometimes as little as 50 cents.

HE SAID small items are sometimes picked up impulsively by normally good people. "They return the money to get it off their chest," he said.

"We call it conscience money and will give the $20 to charity. We'll let the man's conscience do some good work," the spokesman said.

DIRTY DEALINGS: Up in our wondrous County Seat, a Superior Court jury has been locked up in the back room for some time now, trying to figure out how much indignity the city of Santa Ana suffered over 11 sex films.

This is the case of Santa Ana versus the Mitchell Brothers, who operate a movie house not far from our grand Civic Center and just a stone's throw away from Santa Ana College.

The Mitchells specialize in flesh films. Thus for some time, our County Seat municipality has been trying to figure a way to show the brothers to the city limits.

After numerous legal efforts, plus the City Council closeting itself for hours in a back room to ponder still photographs of the awful films, success struck.

SANTA ANA GOT the Mitchell Brothers and 17 of their films into court. A jury then suffered through the agonies of witnessing all of these X-rated skin flicks. These included hard-core hits with names like "Sodom and Gomorrah" (which should give the prospective viewer some hint as to content), and "Behind the Green Door" (which perhaps only slyly hints at content).

Anyway, the jury sat through the agonies of all this sex and finally ruled that 11 of the 17 films are obscene.

You are left to assume that the other six motion pictures were tame enough to be considered only soft-core X. Or maybe you'd call them X-rated fakes.

This leaves you with the question of whether or not the theater patrons who witnessed those six films not condemned can also file a class-action lawsuit against the Mitchell Brothers. They might allege they paid to see something really sexy and instead got flimflammed.

ANYWAY, MONEY is now key to the jury deliberations. Nobody is trying to get cash from the Mitchell Brothers on the six films that weren't dirty enough to qualify.

Instead, the City of Santa Ana is asking the jury to give it nearly half a million dollars because the brothers Mitchell screened the 11 really pornographic ones. To be precise, the figure asked is $480,500.

This sum allegedly represents the Mitchell Brothers' take during the 382 days in which the 11 Awfuls were flickering across the silver screen out on 17th Street.

IT IS UNCLEAR if the figure includes profits from popcorn and candy sales at the concession stand.

Anyway, Santa Ana's lawyer pleads that the city ought to be awarded the money to punish the Mitchell Brothers and to compensate for "a corruption of morals."

How the already-corrupted morals of the theater-goers will become uncorrupted by the cash fine is slightly puzzling.

That aside, after the jury awards Santa Ana all that money, surely the City Dads won't keep it. They'll surely donate it all to a worthy cause like a children's hospital or for aid to the aged or needy.

Santa Ana wouldn't want to dirty its own hands with money from pornography, now would it?

Treaty Changes Due

Torrijos Heeds Baker Warning

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Acknowledging a warning that the Panama Canal treaty is doomed to failure in the U.S. Senate, Gen. Omar Torrijos and other top Panamanian leaders are looking for ways to salvage the pact with a series of changes.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., told Torrijos on Wednesday that the treaty cannot be ratified without important modifications, and that he could not support it as written.

IT WASN'T THE first time Torrijos has heard that from a visiting senator, but Baker's message carried special clout. The senator holds a crucial vote on the treaty and concedes the issue is important to his own political fortunes, which may include a bid for the White House.

Following his meeting with Baker and two Republican colleagues at his seaside villa at Farallon, Torrijos called top political advisers, including some members of his cabinet, into an emergency conference.

The meeting lasted five hours. Another will be held before the senators leave on Saturday, sources close to Torrijos said.

THE PANAMANIAN leader said he hopes to have some proposals for Baker to take back to the United States.

Neither he nor the senators were willing to give details on the issues at stake, but Baker indicated that the major problem lies with the treaty provision for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense of the canal after it is turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

In conversations with reporters, Baker repeatedly refused to give further details.

"MY NEXT JOB is to canvass the people on my side of the aisle and see if a package (of changes) can be put together," Baker said.

But he said any further recommendations from his party to Torrijos would be channeled through the White House and State Department, because "we did not come down here to try to renegotiate the canal treaty."

At the worst, changes in the accord could require its renegotiation and approval by a second national referendum in Panama. Voters here gave it a 2-1 majority in a plebiscite last September.

However, Baker said he believes it is possible to modify the treaty through amendments or reservations that would not require another vote in Panama. Based on his discussions with Torrijos and Panama's chief negotiator, Romulo Escobar Betancort, he added, those officials agree.

Cloud Dissipates

A 10-mile-long cloud of acrid gas that drifted into Pennsylvania today dissipated with "no serious effects," the state Civil Defense Council said. The gas was released from a ruptured tank at a Procter & Gamble factory in South Baltimore, Md., where some 100 people complained of respiratory and eye problems.

Hall to Close

Largest Theater Failing

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio City Music Hall, the world's largest movie theater and home of the high-kicking Rockettes, will shut down after 45 years following its April 12 show, the president of the Rockefeller Center landmark announced today.

It was the latest in a series of "closing" announcements since 1962 by the financially troubled theater. But each time previously the tourist mecca has manáged to survive for another season.

ALTON G. MARSHALL, PRESIDENT, said the action was "taken with a deep sense of regret" and with appreciation of the efforts of its employees to keep the showplace of the nation open.

He said the 6,200-seat theater had operated for the past several years with heavy losses and projected it would drop more than $3.5 million for 1978.

Through war and peace, from depression to boom times, Radio City Music Hall was a fixture in the New York City firmament. While styles changed with the seasons, its Art Deco halls never changed.

MARSHALL SAID ATTENDANCE had fallen from 5 million annually through 1967 to less than two million last year and finding family films had become increasing difficult.

"We'll do everything we can to see how we can keep it open. If it were closed, it would be terrible," Mayor Edward Koch said after the announcement.

Radio City Music Hall opened its doors on Dec. 27, 1932, with a bill that included Martha Graham, Ray Bolger, Jan Peerce, the Wallendas, and the comedy team of Weber and Fields.

Budapest Gets Crown

Controversial Symbol Returned to Homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial Crown of St. Stephen, symbol of Hungary's nationhood, is heading back to its homeland.

An Air Force jet bearing the legendary crown left Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland for Budapest today, accompanied by a delegation of 24 Americans.

The State Department refused to announce where the crown was kept before its departure, citing security precautions. It was secretly transported here on Wednesday from Fort Knox, Ky., where it had been kept in the U.S. gold depository.

IN SHORT

Bodies Remain

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The bodies of five people killed in an airplane crash and four helicopter crewmen who died trying to rescue them remained on a densely wooded mountainside more than 24 hours after the initial crash.

Rescuers said it would take all day today to recover the bodies. "The terrain is rugged and there's dense vegetation," said Roger Miller, a spokesman for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Wallaces Divorce

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, his marriage ended in divorce, says there are "no hard feelings" between himself and his wife of seven years, Cornelia.

Under terms of their out-of-court divorce settlement Wednesday, Mrs. Wallace, 38, will receive a $75,000 cash award and some of the couple's personal property, including a lot on nearby Lake Martin. They had been married seven years to the day.

Chile 'Closed'

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)— President Augusto Pinochet says there will be "no more elections or votings or consultations" following his massive victory in a referendum rejecting foreign criticism of his military regime.

The 62-year-old army general also told thousands of supporters waving torches, flags and placards outside the government headquarters Wednesday night that Chile was closed to U.N. investigators wanting to investigate the human rights situation.

'Hardly Believe It'

Boeing Suspects Reds Copied Jet

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. says it suspects the Soviet Union has copied the basic design of a military jet transport being developed for the U.S. government.

Not likely, says a Soviet embassy official in Washington.

The Boeing design at issue is for a short-takeoff, short-landing transport, designated the YC-14.

"IT'S OBVIOUS to us that we gave the idea to them by showing and talking about the short-takeoff, short-landing plane," said Bill Clark, a spokesman for Boeing's military enterprises.

"We didn't make any secret of the basic concept. It is obvious they saw it and they might have copied it. It looks like our airplane in so many respects that I can hardly believe it."

Why didn't Boeing make it a secret?

"BECAUSE THERE is no point to it," said Clark. "It might be kept secret a couple of years but eventually you fly it. Anybody with an airplane can fly alongside and take a picture."

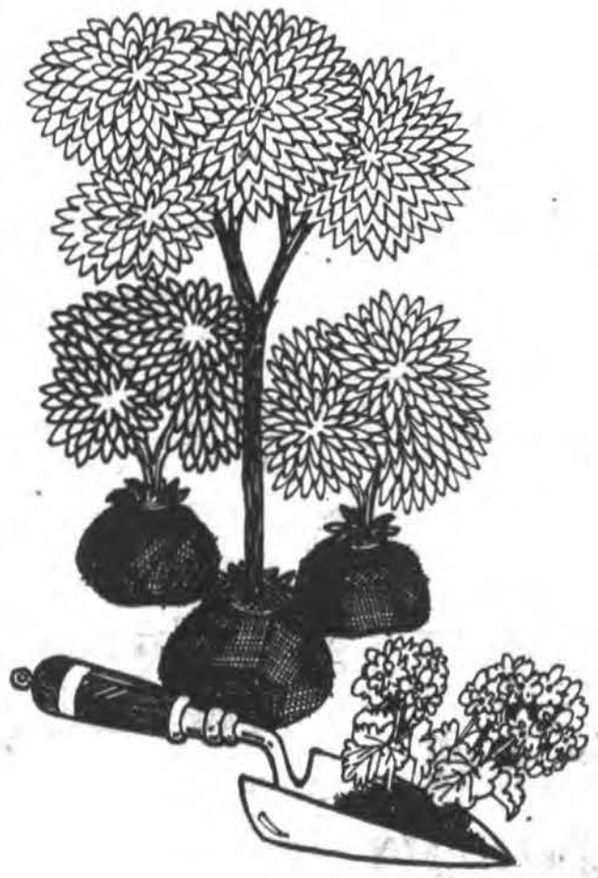

Clark noted that Boeing has no way of knowing for sure the Soviet AN-72, unveiled in the West last month, is a copy of the Boeing version.

"They have three design bureaus in Russia," he said. "They might have come up with the same design we did. I don't want to cause an international incident."

A U.S. MILITARY intelligence source in Washington, who asked not to be identified, would say only that the Russian plane "resembles" the Boeing craft.

An engineer with McDonnell Douglas Corp. at Long Beach says the markedly similar design raised eyebrows there.

"We saw the picture of the Soviet plane in the paper and surmised it was copied from Boeing," said the engineer, who asked not to be identified because his remarks were not cleared by the company, a Boeing competitior.

U.S. Summary

Warnings for local flooding were in effect along the Oregon coast.

There was snow in the mountains of the Northwest and Southwest, making driving hazardous.

Elsewhere, a few thunderstorms were reported in southern Florida and showers over the central Mississippi Valley.

And there were scattered snow flurries from New England through the Great Lakes and into the central Missouri Valley.

Otherwise, skies were partly cloudy over most of the nation and temperatures cooler than normal for this time of year.

Some warming was expected later today in the Southeast and south Atlantic states.

California

The storm is far from over, the National Weather Service says.

The weather bureau predicted the heavy rains from a Pacific storm that hit the southern half of the state Wednesday would continue through today at least.

By late Wednesday evening, the storm had dropped 1.14 inches of rain on downtown Los Angeles, pushing the season total to 7.38 inches, the weather service said. That is compared with 5.30 inches last year and an average rainfall by this date of 5.02 inches.

The California Department of Transportation and Highway Patrol issued wind warnings along the winding Grapevine section of Interstate 5, with wind speeds of up to 60 mph record Wednesday.

Coastal Weather

Considerable cloudiness tonight becoming partly cloudy Friday. Chance of showers tonight and Friday.

Light variable winds night and morning hours. Highs Friday 56 to 62.

Coastal temperatures will range between 54 and 59. Inland temperatures will range between 53 and 60. The water temperature will be 59.

50 Birds Killed By Slick

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A mysterious oil slick has killed about 50 birds, mostly sea ducks, and harmed about 25 others in San Diego Bay, the state Game and Fish Department says.

The Coast Guard Marine Safety office said patrol boats dispatched after the dead birds were discovered found "a light sheen" of oil on the water on the Coronado side of the bay.

OFFICIALS said the source of the oil was undetermined but no spills had been reported.

They speculated that oil from street surfaces may have been washed into the bay by heavy rain. But a Coast Guard spokesman said it was "hard to believe this would be enough to kill the birds."

FRANK TODD, curator of birds at Sea World, said a light, high-grade diesel oil was responsible for the deaths. He noted the birds "displayed all the symptoms of such a spill."

The injured birds were taken to Sea World after Project Wildlife volunteers washed off the slick and placed them in heating pads.

Todd said the creatures will remain at Sea World for several weeks until they recover.

Service Halted

Stuntman Evel Knievel talks with limousine chauffeurs he hired to take work furlough prisoners to and from their jobs Wednesday in Los Angeles. The livery service upset the sheriff's department, and Knievel has decided to call a halt to it.

Disney World Expansion Set

BURBANK (AP) — Walt Disney Productions has unveiled plans for a major addition to its Walt Disney World complex in Florida.

The project, to be called The Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow (EPCOT), "will be devoted to the advancement of international understanding and the solution of the problems of people everywhere through the communication of ideas," the company said in its 1977 annual report.

Disney said the EPCOT Center would have two major areas, Future World and World Showcase. The company made no estimate of when the new center would be completed.

FUTURE WORLD will include a major introductory theme show called Spaceship Earth, Disney said, accompanied by what the company called a "global marketplace of new ideas" called the Communicore.

Also planned are pavilions dealing with Energy, Life and Health, The Sea, The Land, Transportation and Space.

North Pounded by Rain

By The Associated Press

More drought-defying rain and snow were forecast for Northern California today in a one-day follow-up to the powerful storm that slammed into the state with howling winds and gushing showers.

In nearly all districts of the top half of the state showers were predicted into the night. Travelers warnings were issued for blowing snow in the Sierra, expected to descend to 3,500 feet at times. Chains were required on most mountain routes.

PARTS OF THE BAY Area reported thunder, lightning and hail during Wednesday's storm. Some areas reported winds of 40 miles an hour.

The National Weather Service found another wet weather system stationed off the Oregon Coast, suggesting even more precipitation may be on the way beyond the forecast period.

Wednesday's showers dropped rivers of water onto the land. One thunderstorm dumped an inch of rain on Oakland International Airport between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

MARIN COUNTY reported the heaviest rainfall, ranging up to 1½ inches by late afternoon.

Rain-slick roads caused many accidents, including a whopper of a 22-car pileup on Highway 17 between Los Gatos and Santa Cruz just before dawn. Traffic was backed up for an hour and a half.

All the precipitation activity is buttressing notions that the California drought is getting a good working over.

"THERE IS AN AIR of optimism here, but we're trying to be realistic," said Bill Clark Wednesday at the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento.

Clark added the drought is not over, despite the precipitation. Major reservoirs are still very low and rain is needed this month and in February. Of critical importance in gauging the situation will be the depth of the Sierra snowpack next month.

3 Prized Redwoods Lost to Vandalism

PIERCY (AP) — Three of California's prized ancient redwood trees will fall today, the victims of vandalism.

The three giant trees, each reaching some 100 yards above the ground and measuring more than six feet in diameter, were hacked at the base with a chainsaw.

One tree was cut all the way around the base, with only a 2-foot core remaining. The others were slashed randomly with a series of cuts.

JIM HIBBERT, manager of state park lands in the Piercy area, said the trees stood in a grove of old redwoods, ranging in age from 1,500 to 2,000 years. The grove, in the Smithe Redwoods State Reserve, is in northern Mendocino County, some 200 miles north of San Francisco.

One of the trees was more than six feet in diameter and two were some 11 feet across.

The grove is just some 100 feet off California Highway 101.

THE GROVE WAS popular with tourists. Two of the stricken trees had walk-through tunnels carved at the base and were popular settings for photographs.

Hibbert said the damage was irreversible and the trees would be downed today by a private contractor. He said the highway would be closed to traffic for two or three hours.

Despite high winds and the severe damage, the trees were not in danger of falling over and did not pose an immediate threat to traffic, Hibbert said.

THE TREES WERE struck some time between Monday afternoon and Tuesday, he said.

The state parks department is investigating the vandalism and will seek felony criminal charges should anyone be arrested, according to department spokeswoman Gene Cone.

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office was investigating the case, but had no suspects or motive for the vandalism.

Dog Ban Delayed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A ban on dogs at most beaches in San Diego would cost $100,000 annually, the City Council has been told.

Beach patrols and communications gear are needed.

A final vote on the proposed ordinance was delaved Wednesday.

$150 Tax Cut Gets Support

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A plan to give four million California homeowners property tax cuts of $150 or more appears to be gaining support in the state Senate.

But there was still no decision Wednesday on the plan for across-the-board tax cuts — roughly the same amount for both rich and poor homeowners. Another Democratic caucus was scheduled for today to decide whether to offer the plan to the floor.

The plan faces a rival bill giving the biggest tax break to poor renters and homeowners.

Woman Dies in Ill-fated Leap

LONG BEACH (AP) — A 22-year-old woman bled to death Wednesday after severing her jugular vein when she crashed through a window to escape a roaring apartment fire that killed Angel Palanco, 2, who was left in her care, police said.

The woman, identified as Paula Archuleta, managed to save her year-old daughter, Angelica, by handing her to a neighbor through a small opening in the ground-floor window before taking her ill-fated leap, fire officials said.

High Court Gets Hearst Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's federal bank robbery conviction, upheld by an appellate court, now heads for the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to reconsider its Nov. 2, 1977, ruling upholding the guilty verdict.

Pipeline Abandonment Opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city attorney's office has formally contested Southern California Gas Co.'s application for state permission to abandon a natural gas pipeline and lease it to Standard Oil of Ohio to transport Alaskan crude oil to Texas.

City Attorney Burt Pines' motion opposing the pipeline abandonment was filed Wednesday at a state Public Utilities Commission hearing into the utility's request to abandon a 120-mile stretch of pipeline running from near Blythe to Moreno, Calif.

Arts Council Director Quits

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Clark Mitze, executive director of the California Arts Council is leaving his job in a conflict over the allocation of grant funds.

Council Chairman Peter Coyote of San Francisco said Wednesday the conflict is between the establishment art forms such as opera, symphony and ballet, and the art forms of a number of minority cultures.

Critical Choice For Costa Mesa

As the 1978 Costa Mesa city council campaign prepares to move into full swing, nine candidates and incumbent Mayor Norma Hertzog will be vying for two seats on the council.

One of these two seats was held for the past eight years by Jack Hammett, who last week decided not to seek re-election to a third term on the council.

While Hammett is correct in saying that serving more than two-terms in office tends to remove one from the pulse of the community, he still will be missed.

Prior to his dedicated service on the council, which included a stint as mayor, Hammett served seven years as a city planning commissioner.

His 15 years in city government have helped him develop a sense of leadership that will soon be missing from a council that is fairly inexperienced for the most part.

This makes the upcoming election for two seats on the five-member council even more important. A high premium must be placed on the leadership qualities of the potential council members.

There also will be more unity required in the future from Councilman Dom Raciti — the councilman with the most longevity — and Ed McFarland and Councilwoman Mary Smallwood, both of whom have yet to complete their second year in office.

The current council has proved to be a generally capable unit that has addressed many of the city's problems with positive results. There's no need to think that the loss of Hammett will mean a halt in the city's progress.

However, he has been a key member who deserves a hearty thank-you from the community for his guidance and service to Costa Mesa.

School Sessions Stall

Following a narrow Tuesday night vote, it appears that a citizens' advisory committee appointed by the Newport-Mesa School District has had enough public heat and is fleeing the fiery subject of school closures.

The committee's decision was a classic non-decision: a declaration that no more recommendations would be made to school trustees on elementary school closures for two years.

While this certainly eases the minds of parents whose students attend Victoria, California or Mesa Verde schools in Costa Mesa, a major question remains unanswered.

Can the district afford to wait two years before it closes more schools because of what appears to be an irreversible declining enrollment situation and the adverse effects of the Serrano decision?

Well, the citizens' advisory committee, which had taken firm stands in the past, has decided to tackle budget cuts and leave the tougher and more sensitive task to school trustees.

Trustees conceivably could reject this non-recommendation and tell the committee to get back to its assignment, or perhaps appoint a new committee.

At any rate, the committee has apparently choked on a crucial issue. At least the committee action serves as a lesson as to what can happen to a group when faced with an unpopular decision.

Signals Needed Now

It doesn't take a genius, nor should it take a fatal accident to realize that the traffic situation in north Costa Mesa is going from bad to worse, especially with the addition of the Corona del Mar Freeway link that exits onto Bear Street.

This was the scene of the city's latest traffic fatality last week when an elderly driver drove down the offramp and apparently through a stop sign at the end of the offramp. He was killed when his car was broadsided by an oncoming police unit.

Even if motorists halt at the offramp stop sign, they still must cross the busy thoroughfare if they wish to turn north toward South Coast Plaza. Southbound traffic on Bear Street is not required to stop, thus making the crossing especially hazardous during peak hours.

The freeway connection is under the jurisdiction of the state, which normally waits a few years before initiating a study to determine if traffic signals are needed. They are needed, badly.

The city plans to complete the signalization of the nearby Bear Street/Paularino Avenue intersection during the next fiscal year.

If the state would quickly initiate a similar project — possibly a joint effort with the city — and synchronize the two sets of signals, a safer traffic flow would be assured.

Truck 'Crackdown' Questioned

Has the California Highway Patrol cracked down on speeding trucks? Its recent report of more than 5,000 citations having been issued to speeding truck drivers during the month of October suggests that, at long last, the complaints of motorists have seeped through to CHP Commissioner Glen Craig.

Almost from the inception of the unrealistic 55 mph speed limit, the motoring public has been pleading for protection from the behemoths of the highways which thunder down from on high on freeway travellers, tailgating and otherwise terrorizing drivers who have the temerity to stand in their way by observing the speed limit.

Last summer Craig announced a "crackdown" on the trucks and the October report tended to show it was being carried out. And, although the activity shown amounted to barely more than one truck stopped during the month by each state traffic officer, it still would be significant had the target indeed been those roaring beasts of the road about whom the public has been complaining.

BUT AN examination of the facts cast some doubt about the "crackdown." While there are only about 90,000 tractors registered in California an estimated 300,000 such units enter the state each year. These are the motorized components which pull the huge freight trailers seen rumbling up and down the freeways.

And, although it is not known how much of the time these trucks, out of state and home based, are actually on California highways, the relatively small number compared to the total of passenger cars, might make 5,000 speed citations seem a heavy enforcement effort.

However, CHP sources disclose that the count was not limited to the type of trucks which come instantly to the mind of the motorist but included a myriad of other types. There are nearly 3 million "trucks" registered in the state. These include panels, pickups and station wagons, which were not counted, although many two-axle and other small trucks were. So the total of 5,000 is no way indicative of the CHP effort against the mammoths about which the public complains.

"You're straddling the wrong camel."

IN COMPARING the CHP record on speed citations to trucks against the overall of 89,052 issued to vehicles of all types it might still seem a good performance, being more than 5 percent, especially when the number of trucks is matched against the near 12 million passenger vehicles registered.

But comparing total registrations is a false measurement. With rare exceptions passenger cars stand idle far more than they are in use and many of them never or rarely venture out on the freeways. Not so with the monster trucks whose high costs make it essential to get the highest usage possible. The only real measurement then would be a comparison of mileage travelled on state highways by trucks versus passenger cars.

One thing the report clearly revealed is that speed occupies nearly 50 percent of the emphasis of the CHP for the total number of tickets written for violations of all types was only 195,194.

ALSO misleading is the total of traffic officers on the CHP, reported as 4,165. The five-day week reduces the number available for duty to about 3,000 while sick leave, courtroom time and other causes further erode the number to where there are probably no more than 2,000 reporting for duty on any given day to cover a 24-hour period. On certain holidays, when super efforts are made, the patrol may field as many as 1,000 at one time but overtime earned then reduces the CHP strength on subsequent days.

It is this force which must not only cover both sides of the state's 3,794 miles of freeway and more than 11,000 additional miles of state highway, but also thousands of miles of county roads.

Is Remedial Education Money Wasted?

WASHINGTON — Every few months from one section of the country or another comes fresh news confirming the fact that many children pass in, through and out of school without learning to read or figure.

So parents and other taxpayers demand that kids who didn't learn anything be held back, a practice that was given up some years ago when somebody noticed that the first grade at P.S. 40 had 11 six-footers in it.

Being a 14-year-old Big Stoop in a class of otherwise bright and proficient 10-year-old chums is thought to cause anxiety and inferiority feelings in the larger, laggard scholar who may then wap his little buddies around in a paroxysm of misplaced resentment.

To get around this problem it's being suggested that kids who don't even know the easier part of the multiplication table be shunted off to special classes. . .a scholastic chain gang where they will crack their rock-like heads learning that 6 x 8 equals 48. If they don't learn to read, as they probably won't, at least they will be failing out of sight. And no more diplomas for the boneheads; henceforth all they get is a certificate of attendance.

BEHIND all this concern and activity are some propositions which may or may not be true. Proposition one is that schools are to teach reading and writing; proposition two is that when they don't it's the teachers' fault and the taxpayers are getting cheated; number three is that if you don't have an abnormally depressed I.Q. you can and you must learn to read and do elementary arithmetic.

Of course, all depends on number three. We know from ourselves and our friends it doesn't follow that if you can read you can count. Some of us are whizzes at numbers and can barely read; the reverse is even more common. As for the goal of a totally literate society, while it may be possible to teach everyone but the mentally handicapped how to read, it also may be very expensive. Somewhere we hit the law of diminishing returns.

THE COST in teachers, remedial reading instructors, counselors and therapists, physical and psychological, to drive Nasty Nate and Snide Sally into learning how to read is much too expensive. The society isn't going to get its money back on that investment.

Is it necessary to teach everybody how to read and figure? What about using the millions that math instruction is going to cost us to give away hand-held calculators to all those who can't count but signify a desire to do comparison shopping at the supermarket? If there is no readily apparent reason why so much money should be spent so that everybody — literally everybody — in our society, can do long division, the need for 100 percent literacy is not apparent either.

Work is another question. It is generally agreed on the basis of the scantiest information that you can't hold down a job if you lack these two basic skills. If that's so, the reason has less to do with the work itself than with how the job requirements are set up. Why does a bus driver in an exact-change-only system have to know how to add and subtract?

Teachers who are supposed to "larn" the recalcitrant dunces don't care for proficiency exams; they prefer to speak of instructing their obtuse charges in such things as "life coping skills," an odious expression hatched in the gastrointestinal tract of a professor of ed-psych no doubt. The danger is that pupils will be made to pass an exam in this amorphous subject, and those flunking life coping will be adjudged socially incompetent at an even higher financial cost to the community.

All children must go to school. There is nothing else to be done with them once they escape infant exposures, but all children don't have to learn while they're there. For some, romping about with the coping skills teacher is the answer, while the rest of us acknowledge defeat and admit that occasionally high standards aren't the best standards.

Boyd/Cat's Eyes

By L.M. BOYD

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relationship to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" All right.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middleage spread.

Fifteen percent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology, is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.

Congressmen Preparing for Televised Sessions

To the Editor:

Many thanks for your kind remarks regarding my efforts in obtaining a one-year moratorium on the relocation of federally protected witnesses to Southern California. I am pleased by the Justice Department's decision, and I plan to watch carefully when a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducts hearings on the witness protection program sometime next year.

EARLY this month, you editorially mentioned the "salutary effect" of television coverage on the Florida state legislature and spoke of congressional debate on the subject of television and radio access to the floor of the House. On Oct. 27, the House approved by a vote of 342 to 44 House Resolution 866, which provides for television and radio coverage of floor proceedings. The cameras and cable are being installed right now, and I expect that the TV and radio networks will be taking full advantage of this progressive move by the Congress when we reconvene in January.

The American people deserve to see firsthand how their government operates. They will not be disappointed in the performance of the House, I am certain.

MARK W. HANNAFORD
Member of Congress

Lovely Indeed

To the Editor:

I read your editorial entitled "A Lovely Present," (about the Festival of Lights boat parade) and indeed it was. I am an expatriate, newly arrived from the vast wasteland of the northeast, a place founded by the Dutch in 1623 and called Manhattan.

I used to enjoy New York City during Christmas. It was also a fairyland and sparkled — Fifth Avenue, Park Avenue, the lights, the stores, Radio City, and the people — even amidst the hustle, bustle, pushing and shoving there was the friendliness of Christmas.

But the Festival of Lights boat parade was absolutely lovely. I enjoyed this Christmas in Southern California and love my new home. Thank you, Southland.

Meddling Lesson

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "Campus Meddling," Dec. 20, shows how far government strings twist. Private Hillsdale College, that has never taken government funds, is being harassed for having students that do.

The students may be getting them as veterans, for disability pay, pensions or any other individual reason. But if they choose to use them for education instead of clothes, vacations or beer, HEW, the Health, Education and Welfare Department, says the educators are the recipients of the federal aid and so are subject to their government control.

It is a good warning, to keep hand off government strings, that the cities should heed. To touch those strings, no matter how lightly, is to be entangled in government's mystic maze.

Too Casual?

To the Editor:

It occurred to me today that perhaps some of us are responsible for the ugly treatment some men are bestowing upon us. How long have we women (I was once) been so casual with our bodies and ourselves? How long have we chased after men and willingly encouraged an affair?

I am shocked always by the women here who dress so lewdly. Is it an accident or unconscious copying of others? Or is it a call out to men. It may be ignorance that makes a girl or woman dress so immodestly. Or is it a bold statement of her desire? A desire to be loved.

How many women think they can have love if a man physically loves them or is attracted to them? Finally, is it a bold negating of long-standing values naturally attached to women such as modesty, sweetness, humility, quietness and consideration?

Women will have to examine their everyday actions and dressing. It seems to me that men are still the same: a woman attracts them. Women are lucky. Let us enjoy the role, but be aware of what it entails.

A Columnist in Search of a Home of His Own

There comes a time in every man's life when he realizes that he must stop pouring money down the bottomless rent hole, and buy a home of his own. So it was the other afternoon that I telephoned the offices of Arthur Rubloff and Co., Chicago realtors.

"I am interested in purchasing a property which you represent," I announced.

"And what property would that be?" the receptionist inquired.

"The building at 1340 North State Parkway," I said.

"But that," said the receptionist, ". . . would be the Playboy Mansion."

"Correct," I said. "I wish to make it my new place of residence."

A slight delay ensued, after which a Mr. David Feinberg came onto the telephone line.

"I understand that you are interested in buying one of the properties which we represent," he said.

"Yes," I said. "The Playboy Mansion."

"MAY I inquire to what purpose you propose to use this property?" Mr. Feinberg said.

"I intend to make it my home," I said.

And that was true. I had read that Hugh Hefner, enjoying the life in his California Mansion, had decided to rid himself of the Mansion in Chicago. Ever since the time I was a mere child, when I had snuck copies of Playboy out of the bottom of my father's shirt drawer, I had dreamed of that Chicago Mansion. And now it could be mine.

"You understand that we are handling this account very discreetly," Mr. Feinberg said. "We have placed no advertisements and sought no publicity."

"But you do represent the Playboy Mansion?" I said.

"Well . . ." Mr. Feinberg said, "yes."

"Fine," I said. "I should like to make an appointment to meet you there."

And one mid-afternoon I arrived at the front gates of the Playboy Mansion, where Mr. Feinberg was waiting for me.

"I HAVE to be clear about this," he said. "You are serious about purchasing this property?"

"Sure," I said.

We walked into the house. There by the doorbell, to greet us, was the famous brass plaque bearing the Latin translation of the inscription, "If you don't swing, don't ring."

"This is going to have to go," I said.

"Let's not get ahead of ourselves," Mr. Feinberg said.

We walked into the living room that has been embedded in millions of American memories. There were the two suits of armor, the Picasso nude, the descending movie screen, the stereo setup. But the Mansion was deserted. No Bunnies. No butlers. No party-goers. As Mr. Feinberg and I walked over to a couch, our footsteps echoed.

We sat down.

"I have to make certain that you truly are a serious buyer," Mr. Feinberg said. "Mr. Hefner has asked us to make sure that anyone given a tour of the house is in a legitimate position to purchase the Mansion. So I think we had better discuss price before we go any further."

"OK," I said. "How much is it?"

"Two and a half million dollars," Mr. Feinberg said.

I paused.

"Does that include carpeting and draperies?" I asked.

Mr. Feinberg sighed. "I might as well give you a tour of the place so you can see if you want it," he said.

He pushed a hidden button and a door whirred open. A revolving staircase led up to the first of more than 50 bedrooms and playrooms in the house. We walked through bedroom after bedroom, bathroom after bathroom.

"These toilets work?" I asked.

"The plumbing is in excellent condition," Mr. Feinberg said.

We entered a kitchen that stretched as far as the eye could see.

"This kitchen was designed to provide high cuisine 24 hours a day," he said. "It is capable of being used to entertain as many of your friends as you could conceivably think of inviting over."

"I don't have any friends," I said.

"Let us continue, then," Mr. Feinberg said.

THE TOUR took us through rooms the grandeur of which was comparable to an ancient Roman palace. I kicked the baseboards to be sure they weren't loose. We passed through bedrooms with Tasmanian possum bedspreads, through studies with velvet wallpaper. We inspected the pool with the hidden grotto, and the game room with the dozens of pinball machines, and the meeting rooms with ornate mahogany tables. I checked every lamp to see that the lightbulbs were there.

We descended to the underwater bar, with its porthole looking into the swimming pool. Deep-cushioned lounges were built into every corner. On the wall were color transparencies of past Playmates of the Month.

"Do you think this room could be converted to a small chapel?" I said.

"Perhaps you would like to see Mr. Hefner's personal quarters now," Mr. Feinberg said

"Lead on," I said.

Mr. Feinberg unlocked a series of doors, and then we were in Hugh Hefner's bedroom. Even though Hefner had not been in the Chicago Mansion in a year, the clutter around his bed had been kept exactly as he had left it. Mr. Feinberg pointed out to me a videotape camera, complete with a Vietnam-type see-in-the-dark a sniper lens, which was pointed directly at Hefner's round bed.

"Never mind that," I said. "What about closet space."

"I think you'll find it more than adequate," Mr. Feinberg said. He flung open a closet door — and there were dozens of Hugh Hefner's paisley shirts and approximately 50 pairs of his black shoes, all of them the same style.

"I'll want these out of here," I said.

"Of course," Mr. Feinberg said.

During the earlier part of our inspection tour, Mr. Feinberg had taken me into the electronics room, where Hefner kept his thousands of feature-length movies and record albums. I noticed that Hefner had taken only one of the records into his notorious bedroom, and I walked over to the bed to see what it was.

IT WAS a Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald album.

Mr. Feinberg continued to lead me around the house. The complete examination of the premises took well over an hour. Finally we were back where we had started, in the living room.

We sat down again.

"Well?" Mr. Feinberg said.

"I'd like to buy it," I said. "Do you think Mr. Hefner is at all flexible on the price?"

"I sincerely doubt it," Mr. Feinberg said. "Mr. Hefner believes two and a half million dollars is a fair asking price, and he's pretty firm on it. And that doesn't include $40,000 a year in taxes and $60,000 a year in utilities."

"I AGREE that it's worth it," I said. "The thing is, I have a little cash-flow problem at the moment. I have just recently upped my payroll deduction for the United Appeal by a dollar a week."

"Well, if you don't feel you can do it, then you don't feel you can do it," Mr. Feinberg said. "We have other prospects. Countries which need a consulate, or corporations which need entertaining and guest facilities."

"Oh, don't show it to anybody else just yet," I said. "I plan to get back to you within the week."

And I will. But first things first. Right now, I have to go out and kidnap me a countess.

SEPARATE TRIAL?

Bovan Slaying

Suspects' Lawyers Seek Trial Delay

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Attorneys for three defendants in the slaying of Stephen John Bovan have asked the state Supreme Court to delay the pending Jan. 23 trial in the case.

The delay is being sought while Supreme Court justices rule on another case similar to the Bovan case.

Attorney William Sheffield said he argued the case of People vs. Levins in which he contends a defendant in a criminal case has an absolute right to a preliminary hearing.

THE LEVINS CASE is similar to the Bovan case because the seven defendants in the Bovan case have not had a preliminary hearing.

Preliminary hearings are conducted at the municipal court in order to establish if there is sufficient evidence in a case to bind defendants over for Superior Court trial.

No preliminary hearing was held in the Bovan case because the defendants were named in Orange County Grand Jury indictments. Because of the indictments, the case was taken out of the municipal court prior to the preliminary hearing and moved directly into Superior Court.

SHEFFIELD SAID he and attorneys Tom Crosby and Philip DeMassa are asking the high court to delay the Bovan trial until the justices have made a ruling in the Levins case.

"We could get all the way to jury deliberation in the Bovan case and have to go back and start over if the Supreme Court rules that a preliminary hearing is required because of the Levins case," Sheffield explained.

Deputy District Attorney Dave Carter, who is prosecuting the case, said he believes the motion was made as a stall tactic. "I'm ready to go to trial," he said. "But there is absolutely no advantage to the defense to go now."

CARTER SAID HE also believes the motion may be the initial move of an effort to get the three attorneys' clients — Anthony Marone Jr., Raymond Steven Resco and Alexander Kulik — separate trials in the complex case.

Of the seven defendants, one, Joseph Fedorowski, has yet to be apprehended by police.

Police allege that Kulik, Fedorowski, their two business partners and Kulik's wife, Elsie, hired Resco, Marone and a third man, Jerry Peter Fiori, to kidnap and kill Bovan.

Bovan died Oct. 22 outside a Newport Beach restaurant in a murder police believe was motivated by revenge for an earlier kidnapping of Kulik.

Cost Hangs in Balance

County Tallies Possible Juvenile Hall Job

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County officials may have to complete a $1.25 million remodeling job at Juvenile Hall and spend $250,000 a year to meet proposed new state standards.

Or, the county's cost for meeting the suggested juvenile hall regulations could be as little as $200 a year, depending upon how rigidly the proposed standards are applied.

CALIFORNIA YOUTH Authority officials have said they intend to seek a "reasonable application" of the proposed regulations, but some judgments would be made on a case-by-case basis.

Supervisors approved this week a tally of how much the proposed standards for juvenile halls might cost local government.

That inventory will be combined with similar surveys from other counties and submitted to state officials.

WHAT COUNTY ADMINISTRATORS don't know yet is how strictly the proposals would apply to existing juvenile halls as well as to new ones being built.

If Orange County Juvenile Hall isn't "grandfathered", or permitted to exist as it stands, the county would have to spend:

— $1 million for a new air conditioning and heating system to meet the proposed 65 to 81 temperature range.

— $100,800 TO INSTALL new lighting in 288 children's rooms.

— $47,700 for doors with smaller glass view panels leading into 159 sleeping rooms.

— $60,000 for new holding rooms for children awaiting court.

— $35,000 FOR ADDITIONAL showers, new interview rooms and additional holding area for children's property.

Pearl West, director of the California Youth Authority, said in a letter to board of Supervisors Chairman Thomas Riley that state officials would have to make a determination as to whether structural conditions at Juvenile Hall "are so unsuitable as to cause a danger to life, health and welfare to minors."

As for new heating and cooling equipment, she said, such installation "would not appear necessary" based on information obtained from Riley.

Bay Plans Accented

Endangered species in Newport Beach's Back Bay and plans for the bay's future will be the topic of a slide talk Jan. 17 before the Sea and Sage Audubon Society.

Chuck Schneebeck, a Fullerton College professor, will give the talk. The meeting will be held in the Spurgeon Room of the Santa Ana Library at 7:45 p.m.

Installation

Zenas F. de Camp of Huntington Beach will be installed as worshipful master of the Seafaring Lodge No. 708 Saturday at the Masonic Temple in Newport Beach.

How One or Two Rooms with Intertherm Hot Water Heat Without Plumbing Can Greatly Reduce Your Home Heating Bill

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

STEP 1 Whether you have grown-up children living away — or young children living at home . . very likely there are rooms in your home that are seldomly used . . If so, heat is wasted in those rooms every day. Because, with a central heating furnace, there's no way of controlling heat in individual rooms except by closing the dampers which does only part of a job.

STEP 2 INTERTHERM heating provides the nearest floor-to-ceiling comfort in individual rooms of all heating methods tested.

STEP 3 This temperature uniformity in individual rooms saves up to 30% on heating costs.

STEP 4 So safe for children — you can cover heaters with blankets with absolute safety.

STEP 5 The hot water temperatures provide cleanest as well as healthiest heat in home.

STEP 6 There are portable, plug-in models for single, cold rooms.

STEP 7 There are permanently installed models for entire homes.

STEP 8 Simple to buy for your individual rooms, entire homes, apartments, etc. More than one million have been sold.

QUEENIE By Phil Interlandi

"Don't bring up equal rights with him. He doesn't reason, he just shouts."

Carter Views Site of Noah's Ark

By FRANK CORMIER

PARIS (AP) — There was President Carter, flying over Turkey at 33,000 feet on his hands and knees. He was looking for Mount Ararat, if not Noah's ark.

Carter dropped to his knees so he could better divide his attention between a map of Turkey and the view out a window of his blue, white and silver jet. Joining him in the exercise, and also on their knees, were Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, foreign policy adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and press secretary Jody Powell.

A BIBLE TEACHER in his home town before moving into the White House, the globe-trotting president long has been familiar with the story of Noah and the ark that he piloted to refuge atop Mount Ararat during the great flood.

When Carter learned that Ararat would be visible from Air Force One during his flight from Poland to Iran, he called for the map and interested his advisers in the project of finding the mountain.

The president's current travels to seven nations are doing wonders for his circle of intimate friends. The circle, in fact, soon may reach regimental proportions.

When Carter visited Poland, he added communist leader Edward Gierek to his roster of "close personal friends." At his next stop, he declared, presumably at least half in jest:

"SOME HAVE ASKED why we came to Iran so close behind the delightful visit we received in Washington from the Shah and Empress Farah just a month or so ago.

"After they left our country, I asked my wife, 'With whom would you like to spend New Year's Eve?' And she said, 'Above all others, I think with the Shah and Empress Farah.' So we arranged the trip accordingly.

But perhaps Carter wasn't joking at all. A few minutes later he declared that his friendship with the Shah is "irreplaceable."

In Warsaw, press secretary Powell, bound for a meeting with Carter at Wilanow Palace, argued in vain for a half hour with Polish security agents who denied him admission because he lacked a staff credential.

A reporter, happening upon the scene, helpfully informed one of the Poles, "If he told me he was the president's press secretary, I wouldn't believe him either."

Powell eventually was extricated from his predicament by Richard Keiser, who is Carter's chief bodyguard.

U.S. government employees traveling abroad are instructed to patronize American air carriers wherever possible. Because of this, an 11-member advance party sent to Tehran to arrange for the president's visit flew from Washington via New York and Frankfurt.

Only five of the 11 arrived in the Iranian capital with their baggage. The luggage of the others was around the globe. One official's suitcase finally was tracked down in Hong Kong.

The question of U.S. energy policy, or the lack of one, has come up in Carter's discussions everywhere.

Foreign policy adviser Brzezinski told reporters Americans aren't sufficiently concerned because "it's the kind of chicken that doesn't come home to roost until 1985."

He added:

"The time span of most people is measured roughly by the NFL sports season. Anything beyond that is remote."

Organic Food Curbs Urged

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Food labeled as "organic" would have to meet stricter state standards under a proposal in the California Legislature.

Assemblyman Vic Fazio, D-Sacramento, introduced AB 2135 Wednesday. It would require food labeled as organic to carry a label saying that no chemical pesticides or fertilizers were used on it.

The label would also have to certify that no synthetic or chemical additives were used in the production of the food.

Deaths Elsewhere

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paul Jacobs, 59, an organizer for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union who later served as an international representative for the Oil Workers International Union, died Tuesday. He was an author of a number of books.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Robert J. Chenoweth, 73, a founding member and former board chairman of the Humane Society of the United States, died Monday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Billy Gray, 73, famous in the 1960s for his "My Fairfax Lady" parody of the Lerner and Loewe musical "My Fair Lady," died Wednesday.

TOKYO (AP) — Shoji Hamada, 83, one of the world's great potters, died today of pneumonia in Mashiko, the town he raised to international prominence as a pottery center.

RENO (AP) — A memorial service has been set Friday for Nevada botanist Olga Reifschneider, 77, who died Sunday in Redwood City.

How to Get Handle on Insurance

DEAR PAT: We've read so much about the advisability of obtaining catastrophic medical-hospital insurance. So far, I've not been able to find a company which sells this type of insurance. Can you tell me where I could obtain the names of these companies?

H.R., Newport Beach

A complete list of companies selling catastrophic health insurance in California will be provided if you write the American Council of Life Insurance, Information Services Department, Attention: Arlene Lilly, 1850 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006. Although AYS knows of several companies offering this type of coverage, you would be wise to get this list, contact each company and then compare the benefits and cost of coverage by each.

Presley Records On the Way

DEAR PAT: I ordered two sets of "The Elvis Presley Story" records from Candlelite Music Inc. on Sept. 8, 1977. One set arrived, but the other did not. I've written two letters, but I didn't get a reply to either.

B.J., El Toro

AYS contacted Candlelite, and your other record set is being mailed immediately. A shipping error was blamed for the nondelivery, but no explanation was offered for the firm's lack of response to your letters.

How Far Can Repossessor Go?

DEAR PAT: Can a car repossessor take a car from the owner's locked garage? How about when the garage is unlocked? Please let me know as soon as possible.

N.N., Santa Ana

If the vehicle is in a locked garage the repossessor cannot legally break in to get it as this would leave him open to be sued. Some repossessors will take a vehicle from an unlocked garage when they only have to open the door, and some will not. All of them will grab a vehicle in the driveway or from a carport. They also search the neighborhood for several blocks in all directions if the car is not parked within sight of the owner's residence. Remember that no one has the right to take a motor vehicle from your personal possession without your consent. If anyone tries to take the vehicle while you are present, they are legally liable for any harm done you or property if it is reasonably related to their actions. You have the right to protect yourself and the motor vehicle without liability to yourself, but you cannot start any hostile or violent behavior if none is used against you. A complete rundown of the ins and outs of car repossession is included in the book, "Billpayers' Rights," by Attorneys Peter Jan Honigsberg and Ralph Warner (Publisher: Nolo Press).

Dad's Marbles Historic Items

DEAR PAT: My son has become very interested in the marble collection I used as a boy. He's asked me about the background of several of my prize marbles, and I must admit I don't know. Along with several agates and a tigereye, my pride is a sulphide glass marble. It's clear and has a tiny silver eagle figure inside. If you can provide some information about it, we'll both appreciate it.

C.W., Laguna Beach

Agate marbles, a type of transparent quartz, became popular on American playgrounds in the 1930s. They're still being chipped from the chalcedonic stone of Germany's Nahe River and polished in Idar-Oberstein village. The tigereye from South Africa is golden quartz embedded with asbestos. It received its name from the unique light reflections that occur in the asbestos as the marble is turned. Your sulphide glass marble is somewhat of a collector's item. Produced in Germany from 1850 to 1910, the figures appear to be silver, but they are actually china clay.

'Permanent' Edge Goes Fast

DEAR PAT: I received several Permanent press blouses and some slacks for Christmas. Is there any way I can avoid the problem I've had before with this material looking worn along crease lines, cuffs and collars long before the rest of the material shows any wear?

P.L., Mission Viejo

A lab test at UC Davis indicates that washing 50/50 cotton and polyester blend clothing wrong side out, using slow agitation speed, or a shortened washing cycle, resulted in the least edge abrasion on creases and cuffs. Drying for a long time, using an enzyme pre-soak or washing in cold water tended to result in the most edge abrasion. It also was found that sharp permanent press creases showed a higher rate of edge abrasion after laundering than softer creases. In another study, over-drying cotton — broadcloth durable press fabrics was found to be the chief cause of edge abrasion, followed by right side out laundering.

Wax Drippings Can Come Out

DEAR PAT: Help! My daughter spilled wax from a red Christmas candle on my light green carpet and it seems to have sunk right into the fiber. Can I get this stain without ruining the carpet in the process?

C.F., Newport Beach

Hopefully, this method will work. Flake off any loose wax with a dull knife. Then, place brown wrapping paper (not grocery bags) over the wax and press lightly with a warm — not hot — iron. The heat is supposed to pull the hardened wax up and allow it to be absorbed by the paper. Repeat this process two or three times. If this dosen't work, a professional mini-steam cleaning is recommended.

Posh Estate on Block

But Takers Lacking for $7 Million Mansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Another of the gargantuan Long Island estates on which the wealthy lived in cocoons of silken luxury is going the way of the gaslight.

Built by a horse doctor and pharmaceutical heir, the 556-acre Bell estate on a half-mile of white sand in Easthampton went up for sale two months ago.

WHETHER IT'S the asking price of $7 million or the real estate taxes of $1,000 — a week — no one has made a serious offer for all or part of the wooded estate.

The sale bespeaks a vanishing era, propelled to a precipitous end by rising taxes, the expense of maintaining huge staffs and the ravenous appetite of the middle class for housing in suburban Nassau and Suffolk counties.

"Even the rich couldn't afford to maintain this kind of losing enterprise," said Arthur Kunz, planning coordinator of the Nassau-Suffolk Regional Planning Board.

WHERE ONCE 600-odd estates rambled eastward across Long Island from New York City, perhaps 100 remain. Of those, only a few approach the size of the Bell estate.

"It has to be one of the biggest, if not the biggest, one still in estate condition," Clark Halstead Jr., regional vice president of Sotheby Parke Bernet's real estate division, said Tuesday.

Gardiner's Island, a 3,300-acre estate which boasts a bird sanctuary, is still in the hands of family heir Robert David Lion Gardiner. So are the more modest, but nonetheless vast estates of the publishing Whitneys and the banking Morgans.

GONE ARE the estates built by the likes of Frick, the coal and steel magnate and art collector; Post, the cereal king; Tiffany, the jeweler; Phipps, the horse breeder; Pratt, the oil magnate, and Vanderbilt, the railroader.

One estate on the famed Gold Coast had its own steeplechase course. Another had an attached dormitory for a staff of 25. Now they have become housing developments, golf courses, nursing homes, colleges, parks or camps.

Dr. Denniston Bell built his 21-room Georgian-style mansion on a bluff 80 feet above Gardiner's Bay in 1914. There followed a manicured park in the English style, a special garage just for two Rolls-Royce limousines, a chair-lift to the beach and four furnished guest houses, now rented summers by the Bank of Tokyo as an executive retreat.

BELL DOCKED his 70-foot yacht at his private pier. And he kept a staff of 28 maintaining such luxuries as his marble fireplaces, his mahogany-paneled library and a glass-enclosed solarium.

Sotheby's Halstead said Bell died in the early 1950s, his widow about a decade later. The estate went to charity, and real estate developers Laurence Tisch, Preston Robert Tisch and Charles Benenson bought it as an investment in 1969.

"They now feel that the appreciation that they hoped to garner has now happened and it's now time to sell it," Halstead said, adding that they bought the Bell estate for about half the present asking price.

GUZZLERS MEASURED

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Luxembourg citizens are the biggest drinkers of hard liquor in the European Common Market while West Germans consume the most beer, the official market publication said.

The weekly Euroforum said that in 1976, the average Luxembourger drank 4.1 liters (about 8.2 pints) of distilled alcohol, far outdistancing the average German at six pints. The Germans guzzled 318 pints of beer per citizen compared with 306 per person in Belgium.

Brazilian Fruit Recalled by FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has announced the recall of nearly 200,000 cans of the Brazilian delicacy, hearts of palm, sold throughout the United States under six brand names.

The FDA said Wednesday the recalls resulted from failure to control acidity in the canning process, which can lead to the growth of deadly botulin toxin.

The brand names are Bonavita, Tropic Palm of Brazil, Ibel, Fancy Food, Lucky Boy and Rykoff.

KID GLOVES
President Carter

FIRED 'FRIENDS'
Richard Nixon

EARLIER OUSTER
Bert Lance

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — It sounded as though Jimmy Carter had just fired Superman.

"He is so wise. He has so much experience. His record is so superb. His integrity is perfect, almost."

AND BESIDES HE was a close personal friend.

So much for Arthur F. Burns. At the end of the month, he's out as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, a job he wanted to keep.

The president's eulogy was in keeping with the odd etiquette of Washington. Nothing so becomes an official as the leaving of his job, especially if it's involuntary.

BUT BURNS WAS a special, kid gloves case for Carter. The last thing Carter needed was to have Burns, an economic hero to much of the business establishment, depart in anger.

Carter had him flown to Washington from a Palm Beach vacation, with no less an escort than Vice President Walter F. Mondale, to tell him he wouldn't be reappointed. Burns responded with praise for his successor, businessman G. William Miller.

Whether politics, controversy or even scandal convinces a president that somebody important must go, the dismissal often is cushioned with praise that makes it seem the fellow should have stayed forever.

RICHARD M. NIXON produced the classic example when, amid Watergate, he ousted H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, "two of the finest public servants it has been my privilege to know."

When Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller was nudged off the 1976 Republican ticket, then-President Gerald R. Ford said he "has done a superb job and will continue to do so in the months ahead."

For Carter, there was the Bert Lance resignation, but it was different. Lance was the closest of friends, and Carter's personal anguish showed as he praised and released his budget director, under challenge for private banking practices.

FOR RITUAL FAREWELL, Carter peaked with the Burns episode. One set of political necessities said Burns had to stay, another said he had to go.

Burns, 73, and chairman of the Fed since 1970, was strongest where the administration needs strength: with the business community. But labor and liberal Democrats, including some key people in Congress, saw his conservative monetary policies as a damper on the very economic expansion they want to promote.

Anyone who paid attention to the Carter campaign could marvel at the fact that there was a possibility the Democratic president would reappoint Burns.

FOR CARTER HAD said that presidents should be able to appoint Federal Reserve chairmen to terms corresponding with their own; that the board's policies should be consistent with those of the elected administration; and that he wanted an expansionary monetary policy to help cut unemployment.

Furthermore, Burns had irked labor by opposing a sharp increase in the minimum wage and worked to block the $50 tax rebate Carter proposed and then dropped.

Those weren't Fed matters, but Burns never was one to muffle his economic opinions and had taken special pains to demonstrate the Fed's independence of any administration.

CARTER'S SOLUTION: a new chairman with impeccable business credentials, G. William Miller, 52, chairman of Textron Inc. and a public request to Burns to stay on as a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

It has seven members, appointed to 14-year terms, with one of them designated as chairman for four years at a time. Burns' term as a member runs until 1984.

Burns said he hadn't decided. His pay would drop $5,000 from the chairman's $57,500 a year. More important, his visibility would plummet.

CARTER SAID THAT if Burns doesn't want to stay on the board, he'll give Burns another job, although he was vague about what it might be.

Having said all that, the president had a little trouble explaining in his Dec. 28 television interview why he had replaced such an exemplary public servant.

He settled on an old political theme: it was time for a change.

Nothing personal, Carter said. Indeed, they had become good friends. He even insisted that "we never had any sort of disagreements when we were together."

PERHAPS NOT, BUT Burns had an ample corps of critics in the White House and among congressional Democrats.

All told, it was quite an exit for a Republic economist who once headed Dwight D. Eisenhower's Council of Economic Advisers and owed his Federal Reserve appointment to Richard M. Nixon.

TWIN TRAGEDY FOR FAMILY

PESHTIGO, Wis. (AP) — A father and son were killed when a barn ceiling collapsed and buried them under 2,000 bushels of grain, authorities said. Three hours later, the son's father-in-law was killed in a traffic accident.

The barn accident Wednesday on a farm near Peshtigo in northeastern Wisconsin killed Frank Fetterly, 84, and his son, Irvin, 56, according to Marinette County authorities.

Burned Husband, 3 Kids

Tests Set for Slayer

TORRANCE (AP) — A Redondo Beach woman who pleaded guilty to the murders of her husband and of three children in a fire she set has been ordered to undergo 90 days of psychiatric examination before sentencing.

Superior Court Judge Thomas W. Fredericks ordered the tests Wednesday and told Margaret Tanner, 38, to return to court April 5 for sentencing.

Authorities said Mrs. Tanner set the Aug. 3 fire in the home she shared with her husband, Robert Potter, and the children by placing three lit cigarettes in the front bedroom.

Mrs. Tanner pleaded guilty Dec. 7 to one count of first-degree murder in the death of Potter, and three counts of second-degree murder in the deaths of Potter's daughter Judy, 8, his son Bobby, 7, and their guest, Melinda O'Brien, 8, of Hermosa Beach.

Investigators said Potter apparently died while trying to rescue the children, who died in their sleep of smoke inhalation. Mrs. Tanner was also burned in the fire.

Synanon: Asceticism Mixed With Wealth

BADGER (AP) — Synanon is a study in contrasts.

Its men and women shave their heads and make other major lifestyle changes as a unit in the tradition of religious asceticism but live in comfort and plenty in the tradition of American business enterprise.

SYNANON STARTED as a pioneer rehabilitation center for hardcore drug addicts but has evolved into a religion fueled by businesses worth $22 million.

Its spokesmen explain Synanon's beliefs and activities with openness and precise command of language interspersed with numerous expletives.

Synanon, which terms itself "the People Business," is quick to sue or investigate institutions its leaders feel oppose the organization.

"WE HAVE A PRETTY damn funny lifestyle," founder Charles E. Dederich says of the communal group's dedication to providing material security through the free enterprise system.

"Our asceticism takes other forms — forms that require internal discipline," Dederich explains. "Nobody at Synanon smokes, takes mind benders, takes any booze like I used to. Nobody eats any sugar."

That philosophy of everyone following the same discipline in personal habits makes many outsiders uncomfortable, Dederich feels.

'We argue, laugh, cry and explore all manner of personal. . .issues in a totally uninhibited way.'

"LOTS OF PEOPLE in the U.S. of A. don't eat sugar, but we do a terribly frightening thing. We don't eat sugar in concert.

"There's something very fascinating and frightening about that, something very aggressive and frightening about people who do things in concert. We don't do it to frighten people. It is just what we do."

Dederich denies that he dictates lifestyle changes for Synanon members such as a decision last fall for couples to divorce, then form a "love match" with another partner.

"I CAN'T DEMAND anything," he says. "All they have to do is walk out . . . I have to manipulate and convince and can't get too far ahead of people in decisions that affect their lives. I have to sell and be a diplomat."

The change of partners developed from concern over the nation's high divorce rate, Dederich says.

"We asked what could happen if bunches of people rather happy in relationships in monogamous situations . . . would leave at the peak of satisfaction, part friends at that plane instead of the depths of anger."

HE CONVINCED HIS daughter and son-in-law to divorce. They "got other mates as other marriages began to fall in line," says Dederich, who also remarried because his wife Betty died of cancer last April.

'Shaved heads are a sign of something different to identify our religion.'

"It was a domino effect," Dederich says. "I had my fingers crossed. I didn't know if it would go or not."

A few couples left, unwilling to break up their marriages, but 230 couples changed partners at Synanon's home place in this Sierra Nevada foothill area and at facilities around Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THE BAN ON SUGAR in food followed Mrs. Dederich's earlier bout with diabetes.

Dederich, 64, does not always do what he advises his followers to do. About 250 Synanon men had vasectomies on grounds that the world is overpopulated, but Dederich didn't.

"I always sort of lag behind, like any sensible leader," he said.

Dederich says the decision to change partners resulted from "a long dialogue over years."

THAT DIALOGUE WHICH can evolve into lifestyle changes is the Synanon game, a no-holds-barred verbal jousting match in which members say whatever they want about anyone or anything.

Groups of eight to 16 gather in a circle in comfortable chairs several evenings a week to have at it with no restrictions against criticizing employers, teachers, mates or even Dederich.

A Synanon brochure explains the "game" this way:

"We argue, laugh, cry and explore all manner of personal and community issues in a totally uninhibited way . . . It is the single most important element in each Synanon resident's growth and in the success of Synanon as a whole.

"IN THE GAME, you can say anything to anybody without getting punched in the nose. Out of the game, we practice the Golden Rule."

Expletives punctuate much of the talk of Synanon members in the games and out.

"We use bad language because it has very rich meaning, right at the root of language," Dederich explains. "Language grows from the bottom, not from the top."

'I ALWAYS SORT OF LAG'
Founder Charles Dederich

If Synanon's philosophy seems startling to some, its method of financing that lifestyle is right in the mainstream of American business enterprise. It also accepts donations of food and materials both for its own use and to distribute to needy people.

Dederich, himself an alcoholic who worked for Gulf Oil Corps as a youth, founded Synanon two decades ago to help drug addicts. Much of the rehabilitation involved working in service stations or selling pencils to support the organization and teach the work ethic to the "punk squad" of troubled youths who come to Synanon.

SYNANON STILL sells pencils as part of its work-ethic rehabilitation, but it isn't a street corner operation anymore.

Through its Ad-Gap subsidiary, Synanon has developed into one of the nation's largest distributors of major brand pens and other gift items used by large corporations to promote their products and services.

A second trust deed company in Southern California which was donated to Synanon generates $18 million in receipts annually.

"OUR EFFORT FOR a long, long time has been incorporated as much as possible with the profit system," Dederich says.

For years, Synanon members, many of whom adopted the lifestyle even though they were not drug addicts, received only small amounts of spending money.

But long-time members among Synanon's 1,100 residents now receive salaries with over $600,000 paid out in 1976. The "home place" here even has a stockbroker to handle personal investments.

STATE RECORDS LIST Dederich's salary at $75,000 annually. He estimates his net worth at $750,000, much of it from a $600,000 libel settlement he and Synanon shared.

Synanon officials, claiming they are victims of religious persecution, have filed several other suits or launched investigations against government agencies and newspapers they feel have treated the group unfairly.

Attorney Dan Garrett stresses that the religion is not a tax dodge because Synanon already has tax exemptions as a non-profit charitable organization.

HOWEVER, STATE AND county officials say they are studying Synanon's various holdings to determine which aspects involved rehabilitation and which are commercial ventures or are used for communal living.

Garrett says the group meets "certain accepted judicial standards" in its claim to be a religion.

"We have a set of central beliefs held in common by a group of people who act in concert in their daily lives. We believe that if we live that way, our lives will be better. Also, a religion usually is characterized by a charismatic leader."

THAT CHARISMATIC leader is Dederich, who is nevertheless called "the old man" by other Synanon leaders. "Irreverence is a big part of our posture," says Mike Kaiser, public relations director.

"We're irreverent about ourselves, sacred cows generally," adds Garrett.

Dederich characterizes the shaved heads, actually short butches on men and women alike, as "a sign of something that makes us a little different to identify our religion — something that requires sacrifice in a hair-ridden culture like ours."

BUT DEDERICH SCOFFS at suggestions that he is a religious prophet.

"I like to categorize myself as the only non-prophet of this non-profit foundation," he says. "My philosophy is to get things done."

Jobless Benefits Reversed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A UCLA law student who refused to seek work that would interfere with her daytime classes is ineligible for unemployment benefits, a state appeals court has ruled.

The 3rd District Court of Appeal reversed rulings by the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board and Sacramento County Superior Court Judge Lawrence Karlton that awarded jobless benefits to Enid Ballentyne.

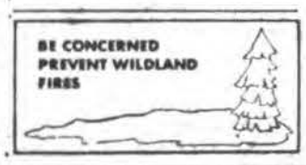

GOV. EDMUND Brown Jr.'s Employment Development Department appealed the lower court ruling, saying the court was awarding unemployment benefits "virtually as scholarship money."

In applying for jobless benefits, Ms. Ballentyne said she would accept night work only. She was attending law classes all day.

IN HIS ruling granting benefits, Karlton said Ms. Ballentyne had earned unemployment benefit credits with part-time work in the past and remained available for part-time work.

He was reversed on a 3-0 ruling, written by Appeals Justice George Paras. It said in part:

"The sympathetic facts presented by Ballentyne, a laudable claimant, have influenced the board and the Superior Court to depart significantly from the meaning and intent of the Unemployment Insurance Code."

Efforts In Recall Backed

Based on results of a recent homeowners' phone survey, San Clemente Homeowners' Association directors have decided to continue efforts to initiate a recall of Mayor Donna Wilkinson and Councilman William Walker.

With two board members absent last week, directors voted on the basis of a phone survey of more than 90 percent of the association's membership, said Howard Mushett, president.

HE REFUSED TO say how many members are in the homeowners group.

Of those polled, 73 percent supported recall, 20.5 percent opposed it and 6.5 percent were undecided, Mushett said.

THE BASIS FOR the association's grievance with the two councilmen is the City Council's unanimous vote in December not to comply with an association request to put a pier-bowl redevelopment issue on a citywide ballot in March.

Walker and Mrs. Wilkinson are the only two councilmen not up for re-election in March. Councilmen Patrick Lane and Thomas O'Keefe will not seek re-election. Councilman Tony DiGiovanni will be running for a second term.

FDA Plans Hair Dye Warnings

Help Arrives

Unidentified window washer hangs by a cable while a rescue ladder draws near. He was working on a Washington, D.C., building when the scaffold gave way. Another worker stands stranded above on the ledge of a sixth-floor window. Both were rescued.

Cancer Threats Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has announced plans to require warning labels on many permanent hair dyes that contain coal tar derivatives suspected of causing cancer.

The agency also proposed Wednesday requiring all beauty salons to display posters warning that some hair dyes contain ingredients that may cause cancer and advising consumers to check for warning labels on dyes to be used on their hair.

THE FDA PROPOSAL follows a finding by the National Cancer Institute that a chemical used in many permanent hair dyes, 4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine and its sulphate, caused cancer when fed to laboratory rats and mice.

The regulation would require dyes containing the suspect chemical to carry this statement on their labels: "Warning — Contains an ingredient that can penetrate your skin and has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

Lorna Rhoades, a spokeswoman for the Cosmetic, Toiletry & Fragrances Association, said the industry would oppose the FDA proposal because the label "doesn't provide all the facts necessary for the consumer to make an intelligent decision."

SHE RECOMMENDED an alternative of providing a package insert that would present the results of all the important scientific tests to date on the subject, including industry-sponsored skin painting studies and case histories as well as the National Cancer Institute animal feeding studies.

Permanent hair dyes can't be washed out like so-called semi-permanent dyes or color rinses. A person's hair remains the dyed color until it grows out or is bleached out and replaced by another permanent dye.

FDA SAID THE cancer-causing chemical or its sulphate generally is found in black, brown and ash blonde dyes and is less likely to be found in reddish or golden blonde colors.

Leslie Dach, a spokesman for the Environmental Defense Fund, said at least 400 product colors containing the suspect coal tar derivatives have been identified. The fund petitioned the FDA last October to take the action announced Wednesday.

The largest manufacturers, he said, are Clairol in the United States, a division of Bristol-Myers Co., and L'Oreal, the hair products division of Cosmair in Europe.

UNDER A 40-YEAR-OLD law, the so-called coal tar hair dyes such as those affected by the FDA proposal are specifically exempt from FDA's usual regulatory powers, although the agency does have authority to require accurate labeling, including warning labels.

The FDA has sought repeal of the exemption for years, and Congress is expected to hold hearings this month on that issue.

Under present law, consumers who buy hair color products over the counter can determine whether they contain the suspect coal tar derivative from the ingredient labeling, but no such labels are required on commercial hair coloring products used exclusively in beauty parlors.

AN FDA SPOKESMAN said the proposed warning label requirement would apply to all permanent hair dyes that contain 4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine which is also known by the chemical name 2.4 diaminoanisole.

The cosmetics industry has rejected the National Cancer Institute feeding studies as irrelevant and cites numerous other tests.

County Firms Report

Moves, New Contracts, Purchases Tallied

Beer Importer to Move

Wisdom Import Sales Co., Inc., importer, plans to open expanded headquarters in Irvine on March 1.

The 42,000-square-foot warehouse will more than double the firm's present storage capacity and increase office space to 5,000 square feet.

The company moved from Los Angeles to Irvine in 1973.

Aquatic Showroom Opens

Allan Beck, owner of Coral Reef Enterprises, has opened a showroom in the Pacific Design Center, Newport Beach. His Aquarium Design International manufactures and distributes aquarium furniture.

He works with decorators and will color-code the fish, wall units and casing to match decor. A 24-hour emergency service is available to clients, and customers may subscribe to a regular monthly maintenance service.

Fluor Subsidiary Hired

Fluor Corp., Irvine, has announced that its Fluor Utah subsidiary has been selected by the Corporacion Nacional Del Cobre de Chile (Codelco-Chile) division Chuquicamata, to perform basic and general engineering services for the expansion of the Chuquicamata Copper Concentrator in northern Chile.

The expansion, which will have an installed value of about $50 million, will increase capacity of the existing concentrating plant from 70,000 to 90,000 metric tons of ore per day. Engineering will be done at Fluor Utah's headquarters in San Mateo. Value of this phase of the project to Fluor Utah is estimated at approximately $2 million.

Arboretum Nears Completion

Arboretum, the Toman Co.'s first entry into the office construction field, is scheduled for completion and opening in February at 18002 Skypark Circle, Irvine.

The Irvine-based firm's $1 million, two story, 18,000-square-foot building uses volumetric open space planning in providing office space for individuals or small businesses and offers central telephone receptionist service, reproduction facilities, coffee-kitchens, lavatories, conference rooms and courtyards.

PacTel Reports Gains

Pacific Telephone has reported earnings per common share of 61 cents in the fourth 1977 quarter ended Nov. 30, an increase of 10 cents, or 19.6 percent, over the like period a year ago.

For the 12-month period ending the same date, earnings per common share were $2.32, up 12.6 percent over the like 1976 period.

Board Chairman Gordon L. Hough said, however, that the improved earnings are reported in the light of "regulatory and legal uncertainties which continue to beset Pacific Telephone."

Among uncertainties, he said, are rate refunds ordered last September by the California Public Utilities Commission. These have the potential of lower earnings results for the 12-month periods of 1976 and 1977 by 20 cents and 25 cents, respectively, per common share, he said.

Operating revenues for the fourth quarter of 1977 were $1,032,479,000, compared with $942,460,000 for the like period last year, and $4,034,505,000 for the 12 months ended Nov. 30, 1977, compared with $3,646,752,000 in the 1976 period.

Net income was $108,250,000 for the three months ended Nov. 30 compared with $87,902,000 for the like 1976 quarter. For the 12-month period ended Nov. 30, net income was $402,477,000, compared with $351,443,000 last year.

Operating expenses were $2.8 billion, up 10.9 percent for the past 12 months. Net plant investment during the like period increased 10.5 percent, from $8.2 billion to $9 billion.

Average common shares outstanding in the quarter ended Nov. 30 were 168,588,000, the same as in the 1976 period and the 12-month periods for 1977 and 1976.

Irvine Land Purchased

Hunsaker Development Corp., Santa Ana, has purchased seven-tenths of an acre of land at Main Street and Red Hill Avenue, Irvine, and will construct a 12,000-square-foot headquarters building on the site.

The property was purchased from Irvine Industrial Complex.

Mo-ped Firm Opens

A new company headquartered in Irvine, American Mo-ped Associates, has announced plans to market nationally the first four-stroke engine offered in the United States.

The Indian-Four will feature heavy duty hydraulic suspension, waterproof brakes and an adjustable seat with storage underneath.

Marketing Permit Granted

Newport Pharmaceuticals International, Inc., Newport Beach, has announced that its German licensee, Rohm Pharma GMBH of Darmstadt, Germany, has received approval from the German health authorities to market isoprinosine in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Approval is based upon the German government's review of both the laboratory and human clinical studies with isoprinosine. West Germany represents the third largest pharmaceutical market in the world.

Webb Awarded Contract

Del E. Webb, Corp., owner of the Newporter Inn, Newport Beach, has been awarded a $15.3 million construction contract to complete Phase II of the planned 500-room Park-Tahoe Hotel-Casino at South Lake Tahoe, Nev.

Webb previously was awarded the $8 million Phase I contract, which was completed in 1975.

Phase I involved erection of the basic 15-floor structure, while Phase II will include the completion of the building exterior as well as the basement, a portion of the public areas, the full casino and second floor of the tower. Plans also will provide enough space for surface parking of up to 1,000 cars. Phase II will be completed by July.

The Phase III and final portion of construction, which will include guest rooms, main showroom, convention area and health center, is expected to be completed by July 1979.

Newport Site Leased

The Sanborn Co., an Orange County-based advertising agency, has leased a 1,500-square-foot unit at 230 Newport Center Drive, Newport Beach, for the relocation of its company.

Tennis Class Set by SJC

Disabled Students Get Sign-up Date

A registration day has been set aside for physically disabled students who wish to attend Orange Coast College in the spring.

These students may register Wednesday, Jan. 11 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in room 105 of OCC's Counseling and Admissions Building. Appointments are not required, and parking permits will be issued by the Costa Mesa school.

Spring classes begin Feb. 6.

OCC counselors will assist students during the registration period. Students will also be able to consult with a counselor from the Department of Rehabilitation.

Disabled students unable to make the registration are advised to contact the OCC Admissions Office at 556-5735 so that other arrangements may be made.

Regular registration for spring classes runs Jan. 12 through Feb. 18.

Corridor Plan To Be Probed In Niguel

The Laguna Niguel Homeowners Association has scheduled a slate of speakers for its monthly membership meeting Monday night.

Association members will hear Environmental Management project planner John Fulton and EMA manager Robert L. Rende discuss the San Joaquin Transportation Corridor proposal along with several county consultants working on that project.

James W. Smith, the new general manager of Avco Community Developers, Inc., will address the homeowners.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at Crown Valley Elementary School, 29292 Crown Valley Parkway.

White Named Superintendent In Clemente

John White has been appointed San Clemente city water and sanitation superintendent to succeed Eugene Borawski, who retired in April.

White's appointment to the $19,680 a year position is effective Jan. 30, said Stephen Burrell, city personnel officer. He is currently a treatment plant superintendent for the city of Atwater.

A graduate of San Francisco State University, White, 25, was previously an assistant plant superintendent at Fort Bragg and worked for the city of San Francisco as an engineer.

Baha'i Chief Due in Mesa

Harold C. Jackson of the Louis Gregory Baha'i Institute in South Carolina will speak Saturday in Costa Mesa.

Jackson, the school's first dean, will talk on the subject "One Planet . . . One People, Please."

The talk will begin at 7:30 p.m. at Brentwood Savings' community room, 1640 Adams Avenue.

Certificates Needed

Laguna to Begin Licensing of Dogs

Dog licenses for 1978 will be issued by the city of Laguna Beach beginning Monday, according to animal services officials.

Due to a delay at the printers, the new dog license receipt books have not yet been delivered.

FEMALE DOGS who were spayed after Jan. 1, 1976, are eligible for a one time fee exempt license good for two years.

The free license program applies only to female dogs spayed since that date.

Fees for older spayed females is $6 per year, or $10 for two years. Unspayed females cost $12 per year, or $20 for two years for licensing and licenses for male dogs are $6 per year and $10 for two years.

DOG OWNERS should bring proof of spaying from a veterinarian as well as a rabies certificate to the cashier at City Hall to receive the new license.

Questions concerning upcoming rabies clinics should be referred to the Pet Responsibility Committee volunteer at 497-3552.

Airport Complex Filling

Tenants Announced for Phase of Irvine Project

Tenants for the recently completed Phase XI of the Airport Industrial Complex, Irvine, have been announced. Phase XI is more than 60 percent leased. Tenants are:

— Caney Exports, Ltd., of Tahlequah, Okla., and the KRC Investment Group occupy offices at 18005 Sky Park Circle with combined space of 2,500 square feet.

Kenneth R. Carpenter is manager of KRC, which is a real estate, stocks, commodities and investment organization, and is vice president of Caney Exports, which is opening a live and frozen cattle brokerage sales office in the Airport Industrial Complex.

Carpenter's father, State Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, is president of Caney Exports.

— J.P. INDUSTRIAL SUPPLY, a new company, has 2,020 square feet of space at 18103 Sky Park South. Owner Jesse Pattison said it will support manufacturers in their assembly and maintenance work, providing electrical supplies, electrical tools, plumbing fixtures and equipment and similar industrial products.

— The Great Cover Up, a store, is open at 18011 Sky Park Circle Drive. It sells paint, curtains, drapes, vinyl, tile and wood flooring and other interior coverings.

— SRW Computer Components Co., a new company manufacturing computer components of all types, occupies about 1,200 square feet of space at 18009 Sky Park Circle Drive.

— THE FEDERAL EXPRESS CORP. of Memphis, Tenn., has opened an office with 1,100 square feet of space at 18003 Sky Park Circle Drive to receive packages for air freight delivery in a door-to-door service throughout the nation.

— The western hydrocarbon processing industry office of Betz Laboratories, Inc., at 18007 Sky Park Circle Drive, is involved in water problems of oil refineries and petrochemical plants. The office was moved from Huntington Beach.

— Dexter-Rosati, Inc., a Torrance-based distributor of computer products, has 1,000 square feet of space at 18003 Sky Park Circle early for a technical headquarters supporting its dealers, mainly scattered throughout South America. The company distributes the Reality minicomputer systems manufactured by the Microdata Corp., Irvine, as well as other computer products.

— EXCELLON AUTOMATION, A division of Excellon Industries of Torrance, opened a Southern California sales and service office at 17775 Southeast Main St., with 800 square feet of space. Excellon manufactures drilling, routing and programming equipment for the printed circuit board industry.

— "The Starving Artist" studio has been opened by Mr. and Mrs. William C. Ross at 18011 Sky Park Circle, with 2,000 square feet of space.

The studio does custom framing and provides facilities where a customer may do his own framing. It also sells art supplies and paintings.

The Rosses and their associates teach painting in classes of five to 10 persons.

— "IT JUST SO HAPPENS" IS the name of a new antique shop at 18011 Sky Park Circle. Owner Patricia Lee has 2,000 square feet of space and specializes in goods from Britain.

— Headquarters for Slim Again, a weight loss program, has been established by Temeku Laboratories, Inc., in offices with 2,000 square feet of space at 17779 Main St.

The product is a soybean-based protein powder.

— Orange Turf Supply, which provides turf maintenance services and equipment, has moved from 18001 Sky Park South to 17777 Main St. Owner Michael L. Kendall said the transfer was made to increase space from 3,600 square feet to 4,750.

— THE BENTLEY NEVADA Corp. has moved from 17932 Sky Park Circle Drive, with 1,600 square feet in the Airport Industrial Complex, to larger quarters at 18003 Sky Park Circle Drive, with 3,100 square feet.

The company services equipment that it manufactures in Nevada to monitor machinery and prevent interruptions in machinery service.

— The Dahlgren Sales Co., representing sporting goods manufacturers, has moved from 17972 Sky Park Circle Drive.

— The John J. Madison Co., importer and wholesaler of South American decorative ceramic figurines, has moved from 17971 Sky Park Circle to 18103 Sky Park South in the Airport Industrial Complex, increasing his floor space from 1,600 to 2,500 square feet.

— Herbert Hawkins Realtors has moved from 17802 Sky Park Blvd., in the Airport Industrial Complex, to 18011 Sky Park Circle Drive. The move increases floor space from 700 square feet to 2,000.

Premium for Medicare Going Up 50 Cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elderly Americans will have to pay 50 cents more a month starting in July for the portion of Medicare that helps pay doctors' bills and other out-of-hospital medical expenses.

The monthly premium for Part B of Medicare will increase to $8.20 from $7.70, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced.

NEARLY ALL THE 26 million persons eligible for free hospital insurance under Part A of Medicare also voluntarily enroll in Part B, with the monthly premium deducted in most cases from their Social Security or Railroad Retirement benefits.

The monthly premium jumped from $7.20 to $7.70 last July. It has climbed steadily from $3 a month when the program began in July 1966.

However, the premium pays only a portion of the full cost of the medical insurance.

HEW SAID THAT a full premium would be $13.40 a month. The government makes up the difference from general revenues. The increases in the premium are limited to the same percentage that Social Security benefits are raised each year.

The raise in both the benefits in 1977 and in the premium in July works out to 5.9 percent.

Social Security recipients 65 or older and some disabled persons automatically are eligible for Part A of Medicare with no premium charged.

HEW ALSO ANNOUNCED that monthly premiums will rise July 1 to $63 from $54 for 21,000 persons who voluntarily enrolled in Part A. These persons must pay for the coverage like a regular insurance plan because they did not qualify for Social Security or Railroad Retirement.

The announcement of the premium increase comes on the heels of a $20 jump in the deductible amount that all Medicare beneficiaries must pay under Part A for actual hospital expenses. Starting Sunday, Medicare beneficiaries became responsible for paying the first $144 of their hospital bill, up from $124.

THE LAW REQUIRES HEW to adjust the premiums and deductibles periodically.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said, "This latest mandated increase is further evidence of the need for action on the administration's hospital cost containment bill to provide the American taxpayer and the senior citizen some relief from such sharply escalating hospital bills."

Verdict OK'd

FRESNO (AP) — A man convicted in Kern County after three mistrials of battery on a peace officer has lost his appeal. Trial errors cited in the appeal by Gary Allen Tindle were not prejudicial, the state's 5th District Court of Appeal ruled.

Elvis' Dad Shuns Birthday Tribute

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — About 10,000 Elvis Presley fans are expected in Memphis this weekend to observe what would have been the singer's 43rd birthday. But Presley's father will have no part of it.

"I am not connected in any way with what is taking place this weekend," Vernon Presley said. "I really don't know what is being planned. I probably will be unavailable this weekend."

Security officials at Graceland mansion, where Presley died Aug. 16, expect large numbers to visit the singer's gravesite Saturday and Sunday. Sunday is Presley's birthday.

Wine Festival Ends

VRSAC, Yugoslavia (AP) — Shortages of wine and pretty girls for festival queens have combined to close the 40-year-old wine festival in this vineyard area of eastern Yugoslavia, organizers announced.

They said that in recent years, most of the area's production has gone to make industrially bottled sparkling grape juice and "girls enlisting to compete in beauty contests most often were no beauties at all."

"But in good socialist style, the organizers added that beauty contests are "an obsolete, petty-bourgeois happening" anyway.

Ousted Minister Returns

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — A legal dispute over the ouster of a Baptist minister who allegedly slandered members of his church from the pulpit has been returned to the congregation for its judgment.

A Superior Court judge Wednesday lifted his order barring the Rev. Miles J. Austin from the pulpit of his Westfield church. He had been charged in a suit filed by deacons at the Bethel Baptist Church with slandering church members during sermons.

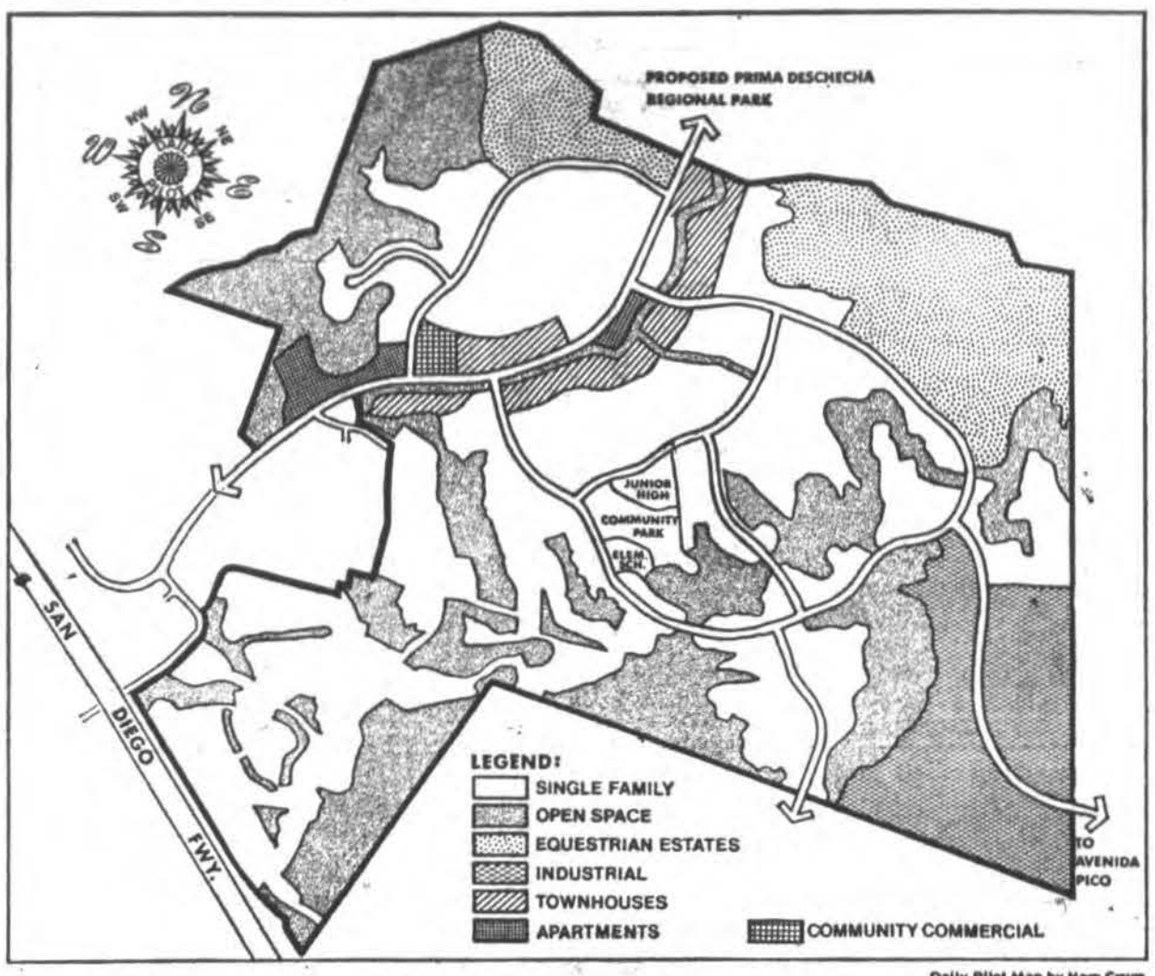

THE DEACONS also charged that Austin failed in his duties to visit the sick, counsel young people and pay his pledge of $320 to the church.

Judge Harold A. Ackerman ruled that only the congregation had a right to decide on the ouster. He ordered that a meeting of the 350-member congregation with a neutral moderator be held to decide the issue.

The congregation, in a poll last month, voted to retain the minister. That vote was not held under the terms designated by Ackerman.

ATTORNEY WALTER Cohn, who represented the congregation, said the ruling reaffirmed that members of each church in the Baptist faith, not the deacons, control operations.

The deacons claimed the minister "slandered parishioners from the pulpit" and singled out members by name for criticism.

New Clemente Homes

Initial plans for development of 2,200 acres on Forster Ranch in northeast San Clemente are before city's Planning Commission. Proposed development would involve 3,942 homes, to be built by 1984. The building in Forster Ranch, along with Visbeek and Reeves ranches, would shift San Clemente's population center from downtown section to area of Avenida Pico interchange with San Diego Freeway, said City Manager Gerald Weeks. Majority of Forster ranch land lies in unincorporated county territory, but it will be incorporated by the city piecemeal as tract maps are approved, said city planner Clay Dillman.

Rise in Demand

Power Supply Threatened?

NEW YORK (AP) — Demand for electricity rose in 1977 almost as fast as before the Arab oil embargo, industry researchers say, prompting analysts to warn that the outlook for the nation's power supply may soon become "quite threatening."

The Edison Electric Institute, a utility-industry research group, said Wednesday in its year-end report that in the year just ended electricity output for all the United States except the Northwest and Southwest grew by 6 percent, about the same as the rate of growth before the embargo.

NORTHWEST AND SOUTHWEST states, largely dependent on hydroelectric power which was hurt this year by droughts, had a rate of growth of around 1 percent.

The power situation in the Northwest was so critical this past summer that voluntary rationing was called for by local officials, and about 500 workers were laid off when several aluminum factories shut down before rains relieved one of the worst droughts in the area's history.

Peak power demand — the amount of electricity needed during the most extreme circumstances — increased 6.5 percent in 1977. Utilities must plan on supplying the peak amount, even though that means some of their facilities will be unused for much of the rest of the year.

W. DONHAM CRAWFORD, institute president, predicted that peak demand would grow an additional 6 percent in 1978.

"The anticipated continued growth of demand in the coming years strongly emphasizes the necessity to construct new generating plants . . . so they will be ready in time to meet consumer needs," he said. "Otherwise, there will be electricity shortages."

Many industry experts already have warned that rotating blackouts or government-imposed restrictions on electricity use are possible by next year in the Southeast and by 1986 in all other areas.

ON WEDNESDAY, ANALYSTS for Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York said that "unless corrective steps are taken soon, the outlook for the nation's electric power supply is quite threatening." It takes 12 years to build a nuclear power plant and 5 years to 8 years to build a conventional one.

One analyst was quoted by Morgan Guaranty as predicting a "hair-curling" power crisis by 1985.

Trojans Open Pac-8 Play

By The Associated Press

A number of questions concerning the 1977-78 Pacific-8 Conference basketball race may be answered by late Sunday afternoon.

League play begins tonight at Pullman, Wash., where Southern Cal opposes Washington State.

Friday night, UCLA plays at Washington, California plays at Oregon and Stanford plays at Oregon State.

On Saturday night, USC plays at Washington, California plays at Oregon State and Stanford is at Oregon. A regionally televised game Sunday afternoon matching UCLA and Washington State at Pullman completes the weekend's activities.

The seventh-ranked Bruins will be shooting for their 12th straight Pac-8 championship. A pair of wins on the road at the outset of league play would probably put them in the driver's seat.

UCLA, with a 9-1 record, has the best mark in the Pac-8 entering league play but the Bruins have yet to play a game outside of Pauley Pavilion.

Oregon has the second-best non-conference record at 9-3, followed by Stanford at 8-3, Washington State at 8-4, Washington at 7-4, California at 6-4 and USC and Oregon State at 6-6.

USC is trying to bounce back from a pair of horrendous conference seasons of 0-14 and 2-12. Freshmen Cliff Robinson and Purvis Miller have helped the Trojans get off to a decent start this season.

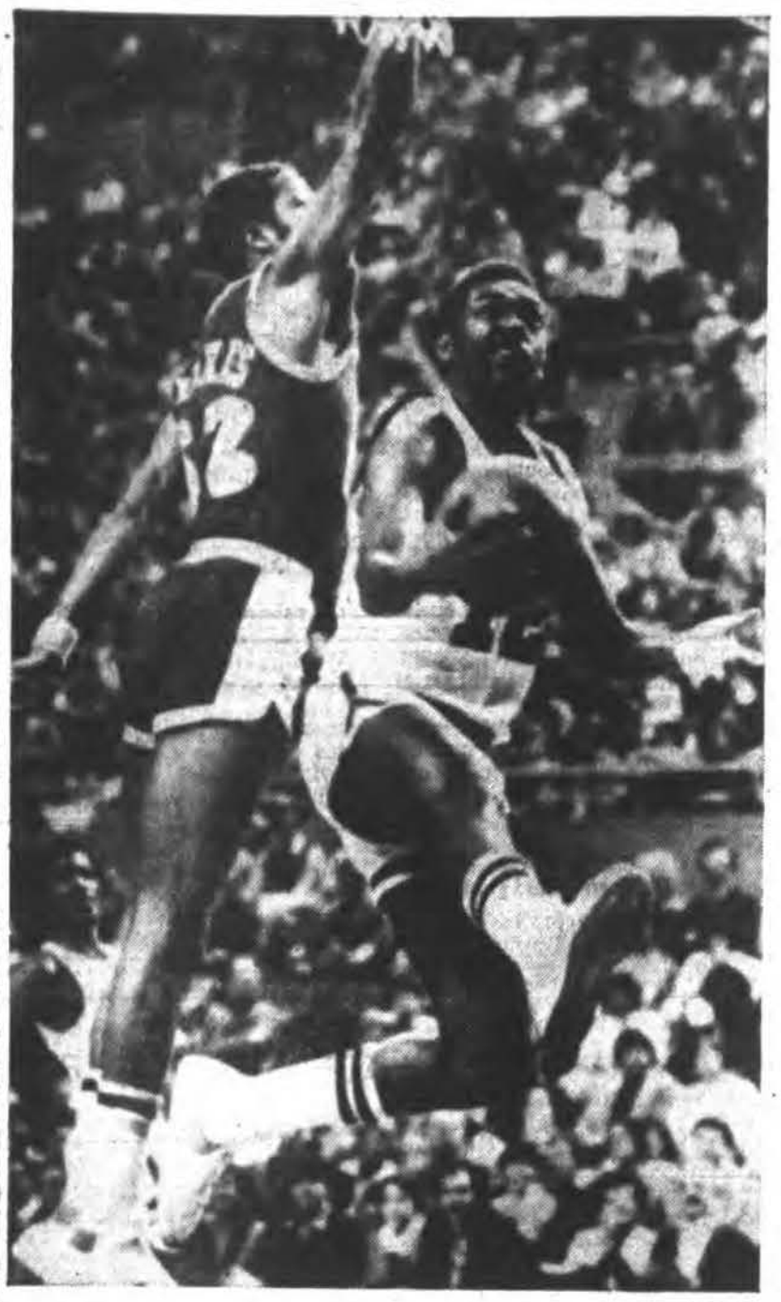

"With our team at full strength, I'm convinced we can play with anyone in the league," says USC coach Bob Boyd. "We are going to be in the thick of it, UCLA is still a slight favorite to win the conference.

"Washington State is one of the most talented teams in the conference," added Boyd of the Trojans' opponent tonight.

USC is 5-1 in home games and 1-5 on the road thus far. Guard Steve Smith, who has been sidelined because of a knee injury, has been given medical clearance to play tonight.

Washington State is led by sophomore guard Terry Kelly, who is averaging 13.6 points per game, and 7-foot-2 junior center James Donaldson, averaging 13.3 points and 11.8 rebounds.

Buffalo Triumphs

West Raps Lakers After 94-93 Loss

BUFFALO (AP) — Randy Smith and Jerry West agreed that the Los Angeles Lakers made some key mental mistakes. But Smith was a lot happier about them than West was.

After Ted McClain stole an inbounds pass with 16 seconds left, Smith drew a foul from Lou Hudson and sank both free throws with 10 seconds to play for a 94-93 Buffalo Braves' victory over Los Angeles Wednesday night.

Norm Nixon of the Lakers missed an 18-foot shot with five seconds to go that could have given his team the win.

"I have no idea what happened," Los Angeles coach West said of McClain's steal. "We should have called time out. Players have to be alert to things like that. You can't do everything from the bench."

The next target of his displeasure was Nixon's shot.

"It was taken too quickly. It was not the shot we wanted to take."

Then West generalized his criticism.

"The first three quarters we didn't expend anything. You can't walk for three quarters and expect to win a basketball game."

Smith, meanwhile, said the Lakers should have known what to expect from him.

"The same thing happened in Los Angeles when I scored to give us the lead but Tom Abernethy scored to put it in overtime (the Lakers won the game)," said Smith. "It was the same play. Lou knew exactly what to expect.

"He knew the side was clear," continued Smith. "I was supposed to mess around and shoot with four or five seconds left. The lane was wide open and that's when he pushed me.

"If that had been me, I would have let myself go, knowing with the big fella (Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) back there I wasn't going to go far,". Smith, who scored 30 points, concluded with a grin.

The victory ended a five game losing streak for the Braves and couldn't have come at a more opportune time, said coach Cotton Fitzsimmons.

"Every one is big, but this is the biggest win. We were on a five-game losing streak. We had a horrible month (3-10). This win is a little sweeter, against the Lakers, led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar," said Fitzsimmons, sounding a little like a radio announcer.

Jim McDaniels, playing in place of the injured Swen Nater, played Abdul-Jabbar to a standoff.

Chest Pains Hospitalize Hank Aaron

ATLANTA (AP) — Henry Aaron, major league baseball's all-time home run king who was hospitalized Tuesday with chest pains, remained in an Atlanta hospital today for observation.

Aaron, 43, a vice president of the Atlanta Braves, suffered the pains Tuesday while driving his son Larry to a bus station.

"I felt a pain in my legs," Aaron said from his hospital room Wednesday, "and it moved up into my chest. I decided that when you start hurting like that, the best thing to do is find somebody to do something about it."

Aaron called his doctor and was checked into Piedmont Hospital early Tuesday for extensive tests.

Aaron's physician, Dr. David Watson, said Aaron was "doing well."

He did not say when the former slugger would be released from the hospital.

"I'll be here at least through Thursday," said Aaron. "That's when the tests will be finished to see what caused the ache. They don't know the problem now; they're still checking."

Whatever the results show, Aaron says he will have to slow down.

"I'm over exhausted . . . I've been traveling too much," he said. "I've had too much responsibility."

Aaron estimated he traveled 150,000 miles last year, either as director of minor league personnel for the Braves or doing public relations work for Magnavox.

"I'd make a speech one day in California and another the next day in Denver," Aaron said. "It's tiring. But I feel all right now. I'll feel better when the tests are done."

Aaron also admitted the chest pains frightened him more than any fast ball ever did.

VILAS, BORG, CONNORS BREEZE

NEW YORK — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas beat Manuel Orantes, 6-4, 6-1 Wednesday night and Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors and Brian Gottfried also won first round matches in the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters tennis tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Borg defeated Raul Ramirez 6-2, 6-4; Connors toppled Eddie Dibbs 7-5, 6-2; and Gottfried beat Roscoe Tanner 7-5, 6-2.

Evert Woman Athlete of Year

Wade Finishes Second in Balloting

CHRIS EVERT

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert, still indisputably No. 1 in women's tennis and planning to give the other competitors a break, has been named the Associated Press female athlete of the year for the third time in four years.

The gracious 23-year-old blond from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. won 11 of 14 tournaments and 70 of 74 matches in 1977 and was ranked the No. 1 U.S. female for the fourth consecutive year.

Nadia Comaneci of Romania won the award last year for her gymnastics feats at the Olympics.

Evert, who hasn't taken off more than three weeks in a row from tennis since she graduated from high school in 1973, admitted recently that there are days when she can't stand the sight of a tennis ball.

"It used to be so easy for me to get psyched up for a match, but it's been so difficult in the last two years," she said. "Now, almost every tournament I play, I have three good matches and two lousy ones."

Her opponents might not think those two matches per tournament are lousy enough, but Evert has announced she will sit out the major circuit tournaments for January and February, at least.

The tennis queen received 110 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, compared with 43 for Virginia Wade, who upset Evert in the Wimbeldon semifinals last year.

Tennis players and golfers dominated the voting as third place went to 15-year-old court upstart Tracy Austin with 34 votes, and fourth place to LPGA money-leader Judy Rankin with 15 votes. Rankin won $122,890 on the 1977 tour.

Fifth and sixth in the AP balloting were golfers Kathy Whitworth with 12 votes, and Hollis Stacy, with 10 votes.

Sports Clipped Short

Payton, Martin Honored

NEW YORK — Rushing champion Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, whose yardage total on the ground was the third highest in National Football League history, was selected offensive player of the year Wednesday by the Associated Press.

Payton received 81 of the 84 votes. Miami quarterback Bob Griese got the other three votes.

Payton led the NFL in rushing with 1,852 yards and set a single-game rushing mark of 275 yards.

Meanwhile, Harvey Martin, the chief intimidator of the Dallas Cowboys' "Doomsday II" defense, today was selected the defensive player of the year.

Martin, a five-year defensive end out of East Texas State, narrowly edged the Denver Broncos' star defensive end, Lyle Alzado, in the voting.

Jazz Trades

NEW ORLEANS — The New Orleans Jazz have acquired guard Slick Watts from Seattle and traded forward Nate Williams to Golden State.

In return for Watts, the Jazz will give Seattle a first-round selection in the National Basketball Association's 1981 college draft.

For Williams, Golden State will give the Jazz a second-round draft choice this year, plus an undisclosed amount of money.

Teltscher Advances

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — Eliot Teltscher defeated Bob Giltinan, 6-3, 6-1 Wednesday to advance to the quarterfinals of the New Zealand Open tennis championships.

Eric Fromm also advanced to the quarterfinals by beating Chris Sylvan, 6-3, 7-5.

Onny Parun and Chris Lewis also advanced. Parun beat Dave Simmonds, 6-2, 6-4 while Lewis defeated Gary Slater, 7-5, 7-5.

In other second-round matches, Karl Meiler defeated Dale Collings, 6-2, 6-2 while Rod Frawley beat Bill Lloyd, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5.

Wade Defeated

WASHINGTON—Kathy May has pulled off the second major upset of the first $100,000 women's tennis tournament of 1978.

The 21-year-old May ousted 1977 Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, Wednesday night to reach the quarterfinals of the Washington tournament.

Billie Jean King was defeated the night before by unseeded Regina Marsikova.

In other matches Wednesday, Nancy Richey defeated Lesley Hunt 6-2, 6-2 and Virginia Ruzici stopped Pam Shriver 6-4, 7-5.

Surf Signs Renery

The California Surf pro soccer team has signed free agent Len Renery, a defensive specialist who played for the New York Cosmos, Baltimore Comets and San Diego Jaws before coming to the expansion, Anaheim-based Surf.

Renery is a 28-year-old native of England, but became a naturalized U.S. citizen last year. His signing is the second announced by the Surf. The only other player the team has under contract is goalie Dave Jokrest.

Net Classic Opens

RANCHO MIRAGE — The third annual National Collegiate Tennis Classic begins today at the Mission Hills Tennis Club.

The event has drawn entries from 16 universities — USC, UCLA, Stanford, California, Arizona State, Arizona, Alabama, San Jose State, UC Irvine, Duke, Tennessee, Oregon, Louisiana State, Southern Illinois and Wisconsin.

Rookie Stops Kings

Bedard Blanks LA, 4-0

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Jim Bedard, who posted his first National Hockey League shutout in the Washington Capitals' 4-0 victory over the Los Angeles Kings Wednesday night, remembers a more exciting game in which he performed, but not a more satisfying one.

"It wasn't the most exciting game," said Bedard, a rookie.

On TV Tonight
Channel 9 at 6

"I think I had one when I was about 14 that was a lot more hectic, but this was the most satisfying."

Bedard stopped 34 shots on his way to the shutout.

"The main thing — I think the main difference — it wasn't just the first save I had to make and that was it. I usually made one save and then the puck was gone," said Bedard.

"The defensemen were clearing the men and the puck out all night," he added. "The shots from the point I saw all night usually you only see three or four. But tonight I had no trouble seeing them."

The Kings return to action tonight, challenging the Flyers, who are 25-7-4, in Philadelphia.

Washington coach Tom McVie said his defense played a major part in the win.

"A lot of hard work and sweat went into the game," McVie said. "Defensively, with the new stand up system, it didn't look too good, but I think it got the job done. The game belongs to the players.

"We really didn't have a smooth passing game, but the defense held up," McVie added.

"The game belonged to the defense and the wingers who kept coming back. I think they played just great."

The Capitals' first three goals came on power plays as rookie defenseman Robert Picard put Washington on the scoreboard by tallying on a slap shot from the left point in the first period.

Bob Sirois' goal came from the top of the slot on a shot that appeared to flutter before it went over Kings goalie Gary Simmons' right shoulder.

POMONA — Suffering through one of their worst shooting nights of the season, the Vanguards of Southern California College (Costa Mesa) dropped a 93-75 non-conference basketball decision to Cal Poly (Pomona), here, Wednesday night.

The Vanguards, now 7-5, had 35 percent shooting percentage from the field, nearly 20 below their season average. In the first half, they clicked on only 25 percent of their shots.

Southern California led briefly at 11-10 before Cal Poly ran off 10 straight points that decided things early.

HUNTINGTON BEACH RESIDENT CHUCK STRANGE SAILS OVER 18 PARKED CARS RECENTLY AT ONTARIO.

By DAVE CUNNINGHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

After squandering an 18-point lead, Edison High of Huntington Beach lost, 66-65, in non-league basketball to visiting Kennedy High (La Palma) Wednesday night.

The only lead Kennedy ever had came with five seconds remaining in the game, when Rich Diaz swished a 20-foot jumper to give the Fighting Irish their one-point victory.

Diaz scored the last seven points of the game, and without his clutch outside shooting Edison might be 10-2 now, instead of 9-3.

Edison built its 18-point bulge in the second quarter and still led by as much as 12 early in the fourth period before Kennedy's tough man-to-man defense started to take its toll.

With 3:04 remaining the Fighting Irish had cut the lead to four, and Edison coach Don Leavey called time out to put his team into a patient, stall-type offense which would take only the sure shots.

At first, it appeared the tactic would work. Edison chewed up nearly half of the remaining time, then Glen Garrity sunk a driving layup to put Edison in front by six.

But Diaz connected on the first of his clutch shots to cut the lead to four again, and Edison committed two costly turnovers in the final 60 seconds to open the door for Kennedy.

The game-winning shot left Edison players and fans stunned; for most of the first half, Kennedy didn't look like it belonged on the same court with the talented Chargers.

Mike McCourt hit four of his first five shots and his Edison team raced to a 14-4 lead in the opening four minutes of the contest.

By the early stages of the second quarter the lead had ballooned to 28-10, but the faucet started to run cold for the Chargers after that. Numerous turnovers proved costly, and Kennedy was able to claw its way back and boost its record to 8-4.

Jumping 18 Vehicles: It's a Strange Thing

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the everyday motorist travels a mountain road, has a blowout on a dangerous curve and goes off the side of the mountain in his vehicle, he is apt to fly through the air for a considerable distance.

Such a jump would not be premeditated, however.

Chuck Strange of Huntington Beach isn't jumping off the side of mountains in his pickup truck but he is jumping over other vehicles in premeditated flight.

Strange, an egocentric on the line of motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel, has no athletic background for his specialty of jumping automobiles in his Chevy Luv truck.

He says his attraction to the death-defying jumping craze comes from a feeling of being hooked.

"I feel I am hooked on the sound of crushing metal," he says. "The sensation I get while flying through the air and not being able to see the landing ramp is something I really can't describe.

"I would imagine it's similar to being high on some type of stimulant."

Showmanship and a flair for braggadocio similar to that used by wrestlers in their heyday in the early days of television are a part of the makeup of Strange.

CHUCK STRANGE

He is accompanied by a young lady with a shapely form who verifies his every statement as gospel truth. That young lady, Sommer Shadoe, is described by Strange as his bodyguard.

Her presence and hand-in-hand walk to inspect the takeoff and landing ramps before a jump and her apparent concern for her employer's safety after a jump, add to the pageantry.

What is the sensation Strange feels when he makes a jump?

"It's similar to someone flinging you across the room like a paper airplane," he says. "On a motorcycle, you are totally aware of what is going on and you can see the landing ramp.

"In a pickup truck, you can't see anything but the hood and the sky above. It seems like you are up there forever, sometimes."

So far, in 10 jumps, he has been airborne for 35 seconds, an average of 3.5 per jump.

Hitting the landing ramp is a terrific jolt.

"I imagine it is like you taking your own vehicle and jumping off a three-story building," he says.

How did he happen to get into this field?

"I don't like bikes," he says. "I used to compete in demolition derby events and did some precision spins. I was looking for something different to identify with. I started with ramp to ground car jumps and came up with the pickup jump idea over and using ramps."

He has four trucks to carry his equipment to areas where he will perform. It is an expensive undertaking and he has destroyed several pickup jumping trucks along the way.

His current ramps cost $20,000 and he is building a new landing ramp for $15,000.

His worst accident found him breaking two ribs and injuring his back. He also broke his left heel.

Another time, he suffered a bee sting and at Ontario Motor Speedway recently, his truck hit the retaining wall after coming off the landing ramp and the left side of the vehicle was destroyed but he was uninjured.

At Ontario, he jumped 18 parked cars but says he can get as high as 40.

He has a vendetta going against Knievel.

"Wherever I go, people ask me what I think of Evel," he says. "I don't think much of him but I have no choice except to answer. As far as I'm concerned, I will slam him every chance I get.

"I have challenged him to a jumpoff on a winner-take-all basis, increasing the number of cars we will jump as we go along. I am confident I can win but he hasn't responded."

His margin for error in landing is slim. A one degree move to the side by wind can cause a two-foot change at the landing site and the ramps are only eight-feet wide.

Strange will next be flying his pickup through space in the Houston Astrodome, Jan. 13-14 and after that, it's pursuit of Knievel and a series of jumpoffs—if it can be arranged.

Costa Mesa Hosts San Clemente Five

San Clemente High's Tritons are seeking to even their South Coast League basketball mark at 2-2 tonight (7) when they invade winless Costa Mesa High.

The game is being played tonight due to the Costa Mesa Invitational wrestling tournament scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Pacing the SC attack is 6-6 guard John Carson, while Mesa, still seeking its first win in nine starts this season, got a 29-point performance from Chris Beasley Tuesday night.

Sullivan Honored

Liberty Christian (Huntington Beach) High lineman Matt Sullivan was chosen to the second team on the All-CIF eight-man football squad as chosen by the coaches.

Big Lead Vanishes

Oilers Hold Off LB Jordan, 75-74

By a Daily Pilot Writer

Huntington Beach High School pulled into a commanding 24-6 lead in the first quarter, then held on at the finish to post a 75-74 victory over visiting Long Beach Jordan High's Panthers Wednesday night in non-league basketball action in the winner's gym.

A torrid first quarter in which the Huntington Beach Oilers stole the ball seven times, three by Rico Thompson and two by Curt Steinhaus, gave the host team enough of an edge to hold on at the finish when the Panthers scored a gift basket as time ran out.

Marco Pagnanelli was the leader of the first quarter scoring drive, canning nine points. He had one basket after stealing the ball mid way through the period, then captured the final six points of the quarter.

As hot as the Oilers were (8 for 15), the opposite proved true for the Panthers who could hit on only three of 16 attempts from the floor in the same period.

Jordan put a full-court pressing defense to work in the second and third periods and used a fast-break offense to score. When the Panthers began to hit with accuracy (22 of 39) for the middle two periods, the Oilers' lead was cut to three.

With 1:11 left to play, it was 73-68 and the Oilers appeared to have the decision wrapped up when it went to 75-70 with 50 seconds left.

Pagnanelli then blocked a shot out of bounds with three seconds to go and the score was 75-72. The Oilers stood by as the ball was brought in to a player under the basket for the final score as the buzzer sounded.

As the case when one team gets off to a commanding lead, Jordan was forced to foul more frequently and the Oilers converted at the line to hold the lead all the way.

In the first period, Jordan turned the ball over 11 times and had 18 for the half. Of this number, 10 were steals by the alert Oilers defense. Three steals, two by Steinhaus and one by Pagnanelli, caused the only Panthers turnovers of the second half when they almost caught up.

Saddleback 16-1

Gauchos Blitz Harbor, 107-69

By CRAIG SHEFF
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

There's nothing like a good tongue lashing to get a basketball team back in gear. Just ask Saddleback College's Bill Mulligan.

The effervescent Gauchos coach chewed his club out good Tuesday night after it squandered a big lead before narrowly defeating Mt. San Antonio College.

And it apparently worked because the Gauchos romped to one of their easiest wins of the season Wednesday night — a 107-69 victory over visiting LA Harbor College.

The win, the Gauchos' 10th in a row, ran their season mark to 16-1 and set the stage for Saturday night's Mission Conference opener against invading San Bernardino Valley College.

"We had a bad second half Tuesday night and I chewed them out pretty good. Then we had about a 15-minute talk tonight (Wednesday). I told them I wanted them to play some defense, and to stop using gimmickry," said Mulligan.

"We played aggressively against Harbor and that was the difference. After tonight I think we're ready for conference play to begin," said the Gauchos coach.

Saddleback blew out Harbor early behind the shooting of Tom Lloy and Rich McElrath. The Gauchos, behind Lloy's 10 points, jumped to a commanding 28-11 lead and coasted the rest of the way.

Saddleback enjoyed a 54-25 halftime edge, but Harbor made a brief flurry behind the shooting of Chris Thomas to cut it to 56-34 early in the second half.

But the Gauchos didn't rattle, outscoring the Seahawks, 15-2 in the next three minutes to grab a 71-36 advantage. It was a yawner the rest of the way.

In that 15-point spree Lloy hit four buckets — three of them from the 12-16-foot range.

Saddleback's biggest lead was 99-54 with 5:25 to play.

Lloy finished with 20 points, hitting all nine of his field goal attempts. McElrath and Rodney Miller had 14 while Rick Patterson hit 12 and was praised by Mulligan for a good rebounding game.

Saddleback hit 59 percent from the field (45 of 76) while Harbor connected on 27 of 66 (40 percent).

Double Overtime

Estancia Suffers 75-74 Loop Loss

By LAURENE KEYS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Steve Trumbo sank a clutch free throw with five seconds remaining and the El Modena High (Orange) Vanguards notched a 75-74 double overtime victory over the host Estancia (Costa Mesa) Eagles in Century League opening action Wednesday night.

Trumbo, a 6-8, 220-pound senior, was the man to beat all night and in the final seconds it all came to rest with him. He scored 27 points in the game.

With 25 seconds remaining in regulation, Estancia junior Danny Maddock tied the game at 67.

The Eagles went in front by three in the first overtime. Maddock connected twice from the free throw line and 6-6 Brad Cooper added another.

But the Vanguards came right back to knot the score at 70 with three free throws.

El Modena drew first blood in the second overtime period but a bucket by Cooper tied it again at 72.

The Vanguards' Roger Conner sank his second bucket in the period and El Modena eased out front again. This time it was Estancia's scrappy 5-4 John Carrido that came to the rescue, sinking two from the line to tie the score for the 12th time in the game.

The Eagles did manage to surge ahead in the third quarter when Trumbo left the game in foul trouble with 6:28 to play.

Estancia led 50-41 at the end of the third quarter, but could not hold the lead as Trumbo came back in the fourth period.

During the third period Estancia went to the free throw line seven times and scored only once.

Doug Jardine was Estancia's leading scorer with 25 points and pulled down seven rebounds.

Irvine Dealt 88-52 Setback

A full-court press in the second quarter and some sizzling shooting in the first half propelled Saddleback (Santa Ana) High to an 88-52 non-league basketball victory over host Irvine Wednesday night.

Saddleback, leading by just two points at the end of the opening quarter, exploded for 32 points in the second frame behind a press that forced the Vaqueros into numerous turnovers. In addition, Saddleback missed just six of 29 field goal attempts in the opening half for a 79 per cent shooting performance.

Irvine's third straight loss dropped its record to 4-10.

OCC Hosts El Camino

Orange Coast College's basketball team attempts to halt a three-game losing streak tonight (7:30), hosting a talented El Camino College outfit.

Coach Tandy Gillis' OCC Pirates come into the contest with a 9-6 record, but five of the losses have been by five points or less. And the other was a nine-point setback to Riverside, a game in which OCC led most of the way.

El Camino has a 12-4 record and is the only team to defeat Saddleback this season.

Freshman Pete Neumann leads the Bucs in scoring with a 13.7 average, followed by Jon Holland (13.5), Ray Orgill (11.4) and Mark Oman (9.9).

El Camino is sparked by 6-4 sophomore Charles Trammell.

Cypress Five Tabbed

GWC Picked to Finish Fifth

Defending state JC basketball champion Cypress College is not nearly as good this season as it was in 1976-77, but the Chargers figure to have enough talent to capture the Southern Cal Conference crown once again.

The Daily Pilot rates coach Don Johnson's Cypress five as the team to beat. Conference play begins Friday night.

1. Cypress (12-4) — The Chargers have two good ones in sophomores Rory Lovell and Rick Cromwell. Cypress' patient offense figures to frustrate many of the conference teams, most of whom like to run and gun. Odds: 9-5.

2. LA Harbor (7-6) — The Seahawks have a fine coach in Jim White and a very good shooter in freshman Chris Thomas, but they will be hard-pressed to overhaul Cypress. Odds: 4-1.

3. LA Southwest (10-5) — The Cougars have been the surprise team of the SoCal circuit thus far, but they will have to get off to a fast start Friday (hosting Cypress) to be a contender. Lorenzo Gordon (6-7), Lee Emanuel (6-1) and Charles Smith (6-3) are the best of the Cougars. Odds: 5-1.

4. Santa Monica (7-8) — The Corsairs have two standouts in Matt Jordan (6-6) and Ron Phenix (6-7), but depth will be a problem. Jim Wagner is also regarded as a top JC coach and could lead SMC to a higher finish. Odds: 6-1.

5. Golden West (7-9) — Coach Dick Strieklin has one of the best players in the circuit in Todd Zirbel (6-5), but it's downhill after that. A fifth place finish could be too high for GWC. Odds: 10-1.

6. Los Angeles CC (8-6) — LACC is another team that is vastly improved, but the Cubs figure to take a beating on the boards. The best of the Cubs are Chris Adams (6-2½) and Bernard Sampson (6-2). Odds: 10-1.

7. Rio Hondo (4-7) — The Roadrunners are mediocre at best, which means they could finish at least three spots higher. Russ Zabel, a good shooter, paces Rio Hondo. Odds: 20-1.

Conference play begins Friday with Golden West hosting LA Harbor, Cypress trekking to LA Southwest and Rio Hondo visiting Santa Monica.

TV's Carl Betz Dying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Betz, a veteran television actor who starred in "Judd for the Defense" and the "Donna Reed Show," is suffering from inoperable lung cancer, a family friend said.

Betz, 57, has been hospitalized at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for the past two months.

The friend, who asked that his name not be used, said Betz has known for several months that he is dying but kept it secret so he could continue to work.

"It's terminal, but he's an extremely strong man," the friend said.

THE TALL, RUGGEDLY handsome Betz broke into show business with a summer stock company in his native Pittsburgh. After a stint in the Army, he returned to acting and made his Broadway debut in "The Long Watch."

He made a couple of stabs at film work, including "Powder River" and "Dangerous Crossing," before turning to television in the early 1950s. He worked the soap opera "Love of Life" before landing a job as the father in "The Donna Reed Show."

The popular situation comedy, also starring Shelley Fabares and Paul Peterson, ran for eight years and made Betz a nationally recognized actor. But he saw his role as something less than fulfilling, and when the show was canceled, Betz eagerly returned to the stage.

"EIGHT YEARS IS A long time," Betz said of his role as Miss Reed's second banana. "I had to do something to change the routine. The idea of doing another TV series was not uppermost in my mind."

Producer Burt Monash caught one of Betz's performances in the play "Night of the Iguana" and signed him to play his larger-than-life lawyer in the Southwest — and Betz became "Judd for the Defense."

Last year, Betz returned to the stage with the one-man show "I Shall Return," the saga of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Betz has a 20-year-old son, Richard, and a daughter, Rio, 18.

CBS Wins One In TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS hit the high point of its current television season during the week ending New Year's Day by finishing ahead of both ABC and NBC in the networks' weekly battle for the prime time viewer, A. C. Nielsen figures show.

It was the first week since the season began in September that CBS ranked No. 1 in the ratings race, and only the second time in 17 weeks that ABC wasn't first.

CBS finished the week with a 19.4 rating, which Nielsen says means in an average prime time minute during the week, 19.4 percent of the homes in the country with TV were watching CBS. ABC had a rating of 18.8, NBC 15.5.

CBS' STRENGTH WAS IN 10 of the week's top 20 programs, though ABC, as it has almost regularly for the last 10 weeks, listed the two most-watched programs — "Laverne and Shirley" and "Happy Days."

"Laverne and Shirley" has had a bigger audience than any other program eight of the last 10 weeks.

CBS' top-rated show was "60 Minutes," No. 3 with a rating of 28.2 and an estimated audience of 20.6 million homes. "Laverne and Shirley" had 24.5 million.

THE WEEK'S RATINGS DID not include CBS' National Football League playoff telecasts Dec. 26 and Jan. 1, which extended into prime time.

NBC's Saturday Night Movie, "Come Back Little Sheba," was ranked last, No. 58, for the week.

The Top 10 programs for the week:

"Laverne and Shirley," a 33.6 rating representing 24.5 million homes, and "Happy Days," 31.8 or 23.2 million, both ABC; "60 Minutes," 28.2 or 20.6 million, CBS; "Three's Company," 25.1 or 8.3 million, ABC; "Alice," 24.1 or 17.6 million, and "One Day at a Time," 22.9 or 16.7 million, both CBS; "Barney Miller," 22.5 or 16.4 million, ABC; "Barnaby Jones," 22.1 or 16.1 million, CBS; ABC Sunday Night Movie, "Serpico," and "The Carol Burnett Show," CBS, both 21.8 or 15.9 million.

THE NEXT 10 shows:

CBS Friday night Movie, "Zorro," and "Hawaii Five-O," also CBS; "Charlie's Angels," ABC; "M-A-S-H," CBS; "What's Happening," ABC; NBC Monday Night Movie, "Christmas Miracle in Caulfield, U.S.A.," and CBS Wednesday Night Movie, "Tarantulas: The Deadly Cargo," tie; "Soap," ABC, and "Lou Grant," CBS, tie; and "Welcome Back, Kotter," ABC, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC, tie.

Church Threatens Sponsor Boycott

CLEVELAND, Tenn. (AP) — The Church of God, the oldest evangelical church in the nation, is mailing more than 200 letters advising sponsors to withdraw advertising from 10 television shows or face a million-member congregation boycott.

The church surveyed more than 5,000 families last fall to find the best and worst prime-time television shows, based on their treatment of violence, sex, alcohol and drug use, profanity, and portrayal of family life.

They found the 10 worst shows, in order, to be CBS' "Maude". ABC's "Soap", CBS's "All In The Family", ABC's "Three's Company", ABC's "Baretta", CBS' "M.A.S.H.", ABC's "Redd Foxx", ABC's "Charlie's Angels", CBS' "Jeffersons" and CBS' "Kojak".

Margaret O'Brien

Ex-child Star Still Performs

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As a child star she was a moppet Sarah Bernhardt, with flashing eyes that could pour forth a torrent of tears on cue.

She played a bit part in "Babes on Broadway," then became a full-fledged MGM star at the age of 4 in the 1942 film "Journey For Margaret."

She hasn't made a movie in nearly 20 years, although she stays active in television and in the theater.

But those dark, flashing, Margaret O'Brien eyes haven't changed. They're still her dominant feature.

AT THE HEIGHT OF her fame, a time when her mother marched into Louis B. Mayer's office and wrangled $6,000 a week, toymakers brought out a Margaret O'Brien doll.

"It's a collector's item now," said Miss O'Brien. "I looked all over for one for my daughter. I finally found one that still had the name tag on it, but the dealer had just sold it.

"She agreed to sell me her personal doll for $500 and I asked for the name tag from the other doll. But the woman buying it said, 'I'm not giving up my Margaret O'Brien name tag for Margaret O'Brien or anyone else'."

In the weeks before Christmas Miss O'Brien traveled to five cities across the country to promote another doll. Holly Hobby.

"IT'S AN OLD-FASHIONED rag doll that requires children to use their imagination again," she said. "I tell children about my fantasies with dolls. I teach them to pretend, which goes back to the days before the bionic dolls that do everything for you."

She recalled that during the making of "Three Wise Fools" Lionel Barrymore made her a rag doll.

In private life she is the wife of industrialist Roy T. Thorsen and the mother of a 17-month-old daughter, Mara Tolena Thorsen. They live in suburban Ventura County, far from the Hollywood crowd.

But she does return frequently for work. Last month she taped a television salute to Elizabeth Taylor — they were in "Little Women" together — and earlier this year had a starring role in "Testimony of Two Men," a syndicated miniseries made by Universal. Two months ago she turned down a regular role in a soap opera.

SHE APPEARS REGULARLY on the stage and expects soon to revive her role in "The Tunnel of Love" at a regional theater. She starred in the role last October in North Carolina. She said she limits her stage appearances to three weeks so that she won't be away from her family too long. This eliminates her from many roles because most theaters require longer appearances, often up to six months.

Miss O'Brien says, "I don't dwell in the past. I'm more interested in what I'm doing now."

Asked if she missed being a major star, she replied, "I was little, so I didn't get all the glamor. It was easier for me to adapt. I think it was harder for the older stars for whom the studio was mother and father. In the days of contract stars the studios did everything for you.

"I think in a way it's too bad they don't have the glamor anymore. It's like a regular job now. You punch in and you punch out. The studios used to promote your name so that you remained in the limelight even when you weren't working. Now, on TV unless you're in a series nobody knows who you are."

MISS O'BRIEN SAID SHE liked combining her occasional work as an actress with her duties as a wife and mother.

"I wouldn't want to work every day," she said. "But I do like to work. I think a woman has to be active and have other interests besides her home."

Another passion she pursues is archeology, and at every opportunity she heads for Mexico to hunt for artifacts and visit the ruins.

'Goodbar' Ban Good For Movie

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The city's attempt to ban the film "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" has tripled audiences at the theater showing the R-rated film, and the manager says he may extend its run.

"We originally scheduled the picture to run until Jan. 18, but if business continues as good as it has been it will probably play longer," said Uintah Theater manager Robert Bathey.

As he spoke, pickets marched in front of the theater, carrying signs calling upon theater owners to "Stop Smut" and "Protect Children."

SCR Launches '78 In Coast Theater

The new year in Orange Coast theater gets off to an early start this weekend as South Coast Repertaoy mounts a revival of Henrik Ibsen's classic drama, "A Doll's House."

Directed by David Emmes, executive director of the 13-year-old professional company, "Doll's House" will be on the stage of SCR's downtown Costa Mesa theater through Feb. 19.

HEADING THE CAST are Anni Long as Nora and Charles Lanyer as her husband, Torvald. Other principals are Hal Landon Jr., Lee Shallat, Don Tuche and Martha McFarland, with four young SCR Conservatory members — Karen Gedissman, 9; Sean Jenan, 11; Eric Stiller, 10, and Jacqui Todaro, 8 — alternating as the Helmer children.

"A Doll's House" opens Saturday and performances will be given nightly, except Mondays, at 8 p.m. with Saturday and Sunday matinees at 3 p.m. in the Third Step Theater, 1827 Newport Blvd., Costa Mesa. Reservations 646-1363.

AT SEBASTIAN'S West Dinner Playhouse, the musical comedy "Guys and Dolls" has been extended through Feb. 19. The show features John Herzog, Jenny Quick, Michael-James Collins and Blanche Mickelson.

The Damon Runyon-inspired musical plays Tuesday through Sundays at varying curtain times in the San Clemente dinner theater, 140 Avenida Pico. Reservations 492-9950.

WINDING UP ITS engagement at the Harlequin Dinner Playhouse this weekend is the musical "She Loves Me," which gives final performances tonight through Sunday.

Curtain time is 8:15 preceded by a buffet dinner at the playhouse, 3503 S. Harbor Blvd., just north of Costa Mesa. Reservations 979-5511.

Carl Karcher

Thirty-six years ago, the president of Carl's Jr. restaurants hitched his hot dog cart to a star and made the American Dream come true.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In 1941 Carl Karcher was a 24-year-old bread salesman for the Armstrong Bakery in Los Angeles. He was looking for ways to make extra money when one of the customers on his route put up a hot dog cart for sale.

Using his car as collateral, Karcher borrowed the money and paid $326 for the cart with the red umbrella on the corner of Florence and Central Streets.

He sold hot dogs and tamales for 10 cents apiece and soda pop for a nickel. After a 16-hour shift the first day his sales amounted to a whopping $14.80.

"I never dreamt that what we have today would happen," says Karcher, now 60 and president of Carl Karcher Enterprises, Inc..

The former Ohio farm boy who never finished the eighth grade parlayed that lone hot dog cart into 214 Carl's Jrs. and Taco de Carlos restaurants that grossed $85 million last year.

THE RESTAURANTS, LOCATED throughout California, employ nearly 7,000 people. The privately-held nonfranchise company's expansion program calls for 50 new units a year and it is expected to break the $100 million mark in sales in 1978.

"Next year is going to be an exciting year," says Karcher, seated on a sofa in his spacious, wood-paneled office on the second floor of the corporate headquarters in Anaheim.

A big, quick-to-smile genial man, Karcher says, "I take great pride in saying we have never had one year fall behind the prior year."

Sliding glass doors open onto a terrace on one side of Karcher's luxurious office and picture windows command a view of the $4 million commissary and distribution center being constructed next door.

Needless to say, the man behind the now-familiar yellow Carl's Jr. star has gone far beyond his original goal of reaching $50 a day in sales.

He attributes the company's success in part to his employees and to the customers themselves.

"I GIVE CREDIT to my success, above all, to God and to my great parents," he says, adding, "we should all thank God for good health and the place we live in."

Carl Karcher is a deeply religious family man who has great faith in God, country and the free enterprise system.

There are constant reminders of the founder's beliefs throughout his office and the modern two-story building.

Displayed near his large oak-topped desk is an American flag; a bust of the Sacred Heart of Jesus rests on a bookshelf. And a life-size hand-carved statue of St. Francis of Assisi stands in an alcove at the top of the main stairway leading to the second-floor offices.

Printed on the cards stacked at the foot of the statue, and which Karcher hands out to vistors, is the prayer of St. Francis and a message from the president:

"AFTER 35 YEARS of business it is clear that only in a God-fearing nation and a free enterprise system could $326 in capital, a willingness to succeed, and a loyal family of employees, see the realization of a man's dream."

The story of how the hot dog cart grew to be a multi-million dollar enterprise never strays far from thought. The lobby is overwhelmed by mammoth black-and-white photo reproductions of the cart and the early restaurants.

Karcher, who begins every business meeting with the pledge of allegiance and a prayer, tells the story to all the new members of the company's management training program.

His address includes his success philosophy and a run-down on the company's future, noting that the new managers' individual success depends on themselves.

"You have to be full of enthusiasm," advises the president, who says he finds it exciting just to get up each morning. "You should never permit a negative thought to live in your mind for one second."

KARCHER, WHO ALSO believes there's no substitute for hard work, quit school in the eighth grade to help his father on the farm during the Depression.

He made his first trip to California in 1937 and worked briefly in his uncle's feed and seed store in Anaheim before going back to Ohio. He returned to the coast two years later, married his wife Margaret, and got a job wrapping bread at Armstrong Bakery, before working up to route salesman.

Karcher, who has a phenomenal memory, can recall all the significant dates and places in his life story. And he still has the receipt from his hot dog cart purchase 36 years ago.

"We bought and opened the cart on July 17, 1941," he says, adding the second cart on the corner of Florence and Alameda was added on May 30, 1942. The third cart came seven months later. And the first sit-down drive-in was opened in Anaheim in 1945.

Karcher doesn't view his getting into the hot dog business as much of a gamble. It was rather simple, he admits, to make a hot dog and open a bottle of pop.

"I GUESS I'M someone who likes to see progress," he says with a smile. "Running a bread route was a long day. I looked at the cart and was very impressed. I did it to get ahead."

The first Carl's Jr. opened in Anaheim in 1956, followed by a second unit in Brea. But the big push for the company, and the fast-food industry itself, was in the mid '60s.

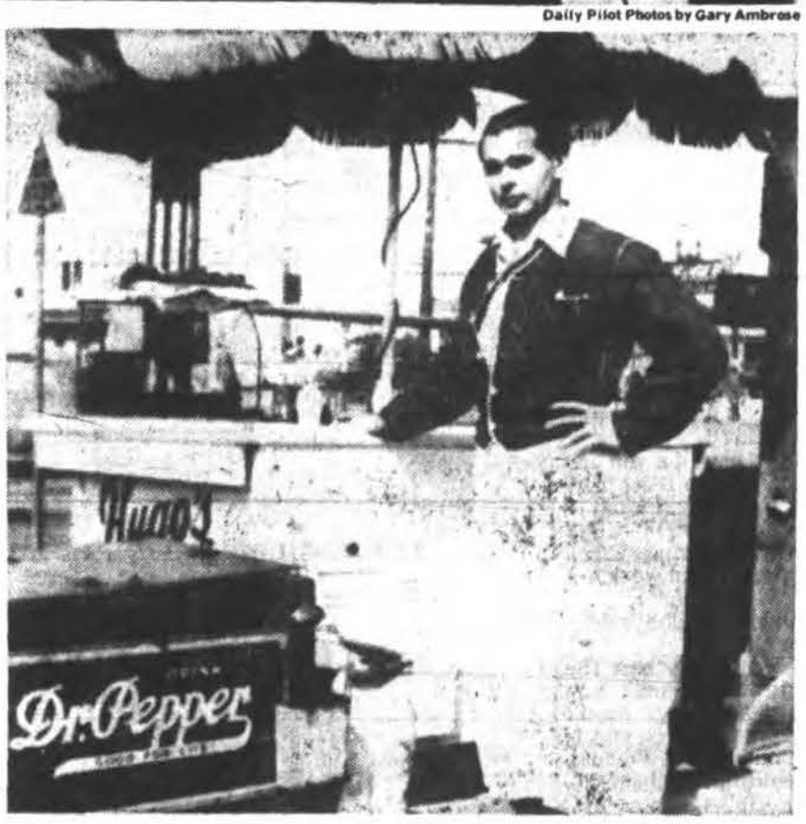

"I think it's something that really just

The Bar Scene

The people I talk to say they've NEVER met ANYONE in a bar. I always feel like saying I haven't either — at least anyone I'd want to meet again.

Solo
By Cheryl Romo

Once or twice a year, I venture out to the singles' bars to see what's new.

Before I go, I listen to my daughter's records and watch American Bandstand so I'll be with it. Then I primp for hours, squeeze my extra 10 pounds into a pair of slacks and practice small talk in front of the mirror so I won't be nervous.

But then I get to the bar, with its music blaring out the door, and some doorman wants to check my I.D. Everyone around me looks about my children's age. When you're 33 years old and you go to a place where they check everyone's identification, you get to thinking, that maybe, just maybe, you're too old for it all.

I wish I could tell you I love singles' bars. I really wish I could tell you that. To be very honest, I find the whole experience painful.

For starters, there are gorgeous women in them who have probably never known a stretchmark in their lives. And men who strut like peacocks and look like Burt Reynolds, and who seem to have nothing better to do than wax their Porsches and unbutton their shirts.

Among the beautiful people, the swirling lights and the disco sounds, there is an air of predatory expectation. There are always the standard lines: "What's your sign?" and "Do you ski?" But I heard some new ones recently: "Do you like waterbeds?" and "Are you into est?"

The biggest change I noticed was in the women. Thanks to liberation, assertion training, or whatever, women have, more often than not, become the aggressors.

Liberated females insist on being the askers instead of the askees. They are also often the buyers of drinks for men. (I heard one statuesque brunette with a hat ask a James Caan type what he was doing later that night. And he told her he'd tell her later that night.)

Games are still big (Do they ever change?) and a lot of men —

The Rev. Jacqueline Means: A year of adjustments.

The Priest

After a year of being an Episcopal priest, the Rev. Jacqueline Means finds it difficult to understand the strong reaction.

By MARY POWERS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In her first year as an Episcopal priest, the Rev. Jacqueline Means learned to handle long hours, guilt and interviews. Now she just wishes the church would learn to handle her.

Since Mrs. Means became the first regularly ordained woman Episcopal priest last Jan. 1, at least a dozen parishes have split from the 3 million-member denomination over the issue of women priests. Eight persons have left the inner-city All Saints Episcopal Church, where she serves as an associate priest. But she says her ordination also attracted a few persons to the parish.

After a year of discussing and explaining, Mrs. Means, who became Indiana's first woman Episcopal deacon three and a half years ago, said she still finds it difficult to understand the deep-seated reaction against women priests. "I've met with several bishops who oppose the ordination of women and it's my own need to say to these men that we can have differences of opinion but we can still be together in the church and make the church stronger," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Means, 41, a mother of four and a licensed practical nurse, says she's eager for the novelty of her role to wear off so she can devote more time to her job as chaplain at the Indiana Women's Prison. Next fall she's planning to take some college criminal justices courses to make her more effective at the prison. She already has helped convince local Episcopal leaders to fund a halfway house for women on

'Family-Centered' Births Increase

By BRENDAN RILEY

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — "Family-centered" childbirth, in which fathers join mothers in the hospital delivery room, accounts for a large share of deliveries in this country now, a leading proponent of the concept says.

Dr. Henry Davis says birth methods such as the Lamaze and Leboyer techniques have caught on in popularity in recent years and new studies indicate the babies are the better off for it.

Davis cites a survey showing that pre-delivery instruction in pain-relieving, relaxing breathing techniques for mothers and support "coaching" in delivery rooms by fathers are now the most popular methods with new parents.

The Lamaze method includes breathing and coaching. The Leboyer technique goes a step further with dimmed lights, a quiet atmosphere and gentle handling of babies during delivery — including no whacks on the babies' bottoms.

Davis says new studies indicate the methods, which also keep the mother and child together after birth, help establish an "identity imprint" with the infant.

Davis and his partner, Dr. William O'Shaughnessy, have been using the Leboyer method for the past several years. He says "Leboyer" babies seem more secure, "and kids have to develop a sense of security before they can develop independence."

He says the babies "are relaxed, looking around right after birth, ready to meet the world. In their early months, they seem to be very advanced motor-wise — they will try to do things like crawling and walking sooner.

"It's not that they're superior types. I think they'll just look forward to the good things. It's like the difference between optimists and pessimists," he says.

He says family-centered methods were not popular at first with many doctors or hospitals, but more and more patients asked for the techniques to be used and they are rapidly gaining acceptance in the medical world.

Davis and his wife, Joan, have 11 children — five delivered with the Lamaze method and the last two by the Leboyer method. From his own experiences and from what he sees in his patients, Davis says the methods "build closeness in couples. They want more out of childbirth than what has traditionally been offered.

"Husbands have been really enthusiastic about it," he says. "Some are hesitant at first, but after they have gone through it, they're almost more enthusiastic than the wives."

The Lamaze method is named after a French doctor, Ferdinand Lamaze, who brought to the Western world the breathing techniques which had been developed in Russia.

The Leboyer method is named after another French doctor, Frederick Leboyer, who incorporated changes such as putting the newborn baby stomach-down on the mother's abdomen to retain the prebirth curved position of the spine, and waiting a few minutes before cutting the umbilical cord.

After the cord is cut, the baby is bathed in warm water, something akin to its familiar environment inside the mother. The mother is encouraged to nurse the child within the first hour or so after birth.

Stats in Status

Erma Bombeck

It's been a long time since I worked on my status. Oh, a couple of summers ago I rolled up the car windows and pretended it was air-conditioned. And I used to sit in a public place and trace words across the pages of a book as fast as I could turn the pages and make believe I was an Evelyn Wood graduate, but nothing big.

You can imagine my surprise when I picked up the paper the other day to learn that status symbols have changed considerably. Large homes are considered tasteless. Big cars are out. Degrees and titles are tacky. Having a live-in orthodontist is unimpressive. Fat no longer means affluency and jolliness. And marrying a doctor is no longer the great American dream of maidens everywhere.

The last one was a real kick in the head. Not marry a doctor! Bite your tongue!

I asked my daughter, "Is this true? Have doctors really fallen out of favor as the nation's No. 1 most desirable mate?"

"Assuming a girl wants to get married these days," she said, "she'd be smart to go after the big money — a game show contestant. Do you have any idea how much the Secret Square is worth or what a bundle you get if you solve the $10,000 Pyramid?"

"But how do you get introduced to these people? Formally, I mean."

"Formality is out. My friend, Jan, is marrying a guy she met last week in a 'Star Wars' line."

"But does she really know him?"

"Mom! They saw the movie three times! You see, your values aren't the same as ours. Old is in. Youth is out. Poverty is beautiful. Affluency is obscene. Causes are right on. Employment is boring. Take care of your feet. Teased hair is the pits. Owning a home is time-consuming. Records last forever."

"Let me get this straight. Status to you is marrying an old game show contestant with an overbite who drives a compact and picks up candy wrappers."

"Right. By the way, do you have $10 until Saturday?"

Some status symbols never change.

HAIR BEAT
PERMANENT WAVING

Question: I have bleached hair and am thinking of getting a permanent wave. Do you recommend it?
(Mrs. S. C., Hunt. Beach)

Answer: Yes, but it depends on what salon you go to. Permanent waving on bleached hair is a touchy thing, especially where inexperienced operators are involved.

Question: Is it possible to get a touch-up and a permanent on the same day? (Mrs. R. W., Newport Beach)

Answer: Yes, it is possible if your hair is not too damaged. More conditioners will be involved if it is highly bleached rather than if it is just tinted.

Horoscope

By SYDNEY OMARR
FRIDAY, JAN. 6

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Examine spiritual values, concepts. You have a chance to rectify errors, reunite with family member, make amends for recent "slight" to loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get good idea of who cares, who couldn't care less, where you are going and how to arrive at destination.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go slow, play with time, mold it to your advantage. You are stronger than current circumstances indicate. Get organized. Know a relationship is "serious." If single, you might be making marital arrangements.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid direct confrontations. Not time to lay down gauntlet. Finish rather than initiate projects. Aries, Libra persons figure in scenario. Emphasis on routine, service, dependents and pets. One who harassed you is going to fade, and will disappear.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Physical attraction should be kept in perspective. You do make exciting, new contact. Be independent, bright, not subservient, true to principles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through on hunch; learn through process of teaching. Aquarius, Cancer persons figure prominently. Accent on legal ties, money in escrow, property, basic values. You conclude important transactions. Let go of past concepts. You gain by accepting fresh, new, vital procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Movement, travel, messages and relatives are part of your personal scenario. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently — and so does the number 3. Accent on communicating meanings where, in recent past, there was strict censorship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on collection, payment, assembling necessary data. Aquarius, Taurus and Leo persons figure in picture. You locate lost articles, gain greater insight into problems. Soon you will know that what you need for greater freedom is on the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar cycle gives strong backing for plans, programs. Circumstances veer in your favor. Be perceptive, analytical, take notes. Yes, member of opposite sex is in picture. You win favors of those who mean the most to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What you need to kmow is obtainable, once you get backstage peek. Reject surface indications. Gain confidence of family member. Be aware of budget, art objects, luxury items.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on deciding who is a friend, who is intent on using you. You gain rare insights into truth. Key is to be able to handle what is discerned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seriousness of purpose is necessary and should be advocated. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. You get surprise backing from one who pulls strings, calls signals.

Few Leave The Church

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 90 women have been ordained as Episcopal priests since church leaders voted to allow female ordination, but despite vocal opposition to the policy from some factions, relatively few church members have dropped out, according to a church survey.

The survey, based on informal questionnaires to domestic dioceses that were returned in mid-November, as well as additional reports, showed that in addition to the women ordained in the year since the ordination of women was authorized, 62 other women deacons or candidates are headed for the priesthood.

Through mid-November, 96 women had been ordained in the church, according to a report on the survey released Thursday.

About two-thirds of the women priests hold paid positions in the church or serve as ministers in secular institutions — colleges, prisons, hospitals and others. Twelve are in charge of congregations as pastors, assistant pastors or interim pastors.

The women working as chaplains in secular institutions also serve in local parishes in a variety of diocesan capacities or teaching in church schools, the survey showed.

Twenty of the ordained women are primarily in secular employment, such as college teaching, banking and graduate studies, but do Sunday assignments, filling pulpits or other parish tasks, when they can.

The church said its survey showed 13 congregations voted to leave the church and 18 voted to withhold funds from national and diocesan church programs. Ten congregations declined to allow visits by their bishops. The church has 7,192 parishes.

Diocesan bishops were found to have placed 32 priests or deacons under some form of inhibitions from functioning — suspension or facing it — for fomenting departures from the church.

The survey also showed that 3,400 members of the 2.9 million-member church decided in 1977 to leave the church because of the ordination of women, prayer book revisions or alleged "secular or humanistic" trends in the church.

parole or as an alternative to the state prison in Indianapolis.

"In some ways the prison has helped keep me out of trouble because as long as I'm working there I won't be asking for a parish of my own." As an afterthought, she noted that either the bishop or the parishioners make that decision.

Mrs. Means, a former Roman Catholic, says she's optimistic, predicting that women will become assistant Episcopal bishops within five years and that the Catholic church will be ordaining women priests within 10 years.

The Episcopal hierarchy approved the ordination of women at a September, 1976 meeting in Minneapolis, ending 200 years of male domination in the church. Mrs. Means said the decision helped reaffirm the important role women have always held in the church and family.

"Women are the ones that often get the family organized and into church on Sundays. They've always been the Sunday School teachers, the altar society and choir members," she said. "After a lifetime of seeing only men in leadership roles I guess some people just can't imagine a woman in a similar position."

About two-thirds of the 75 women who have been ordained since Mrs. Means still don't have jobs, she said, and the strain has hospitalized one woman and sent others to psychiatrists.

With no female Episcopal role model, Mrs. Means said this year she thought a lot about the Roman Catholic nuns she knew as a child.

Raised a Catholic, Mrs. Means stopped attending church after she eloped at 16 with Delton Means, a Methodist, because they were unable to reconcile their religious differences. After they were out of the church for seven years the couple decided their four children needed formal religious training. They chose St. Matthew Episcopal Church near their eastside home and the family is still active there.

The year has meant adjustments for both Mrs. Means and her family.

"A lot were adjustments that every cleric must make, getting used to the night meetings, long hours and learning not to bring all my problems home." Others, like the year-long blitz of photographers, reporters and questions, were unique to Mrs. Means.

"I had one reporter call and ask me how it felt to be splitting the Episcopal church apart. Well, I've learned not to accept the guilt implied in that question," she said. "Some people have been waiting for a long time to leave the church, and for them the ordination of women and changes in the prayer book are just excuses."

She said her own adjustment was difficult because until October she refused to acknowledge any problems. "I've always been a sensitive person, but I was surprised to find myself taking everything personally. For the first four or five months I was obsessed with defending my ordination. I began sounding like a fool.

"About October the stress finally caught up with me and for the entire month I was hospitalized. I just sat and thought." Slowly, Mrs. Means said, she learned to defend her right as a woman to make the decision she did.

"As 1976 was ending I was worried. I was worried about failing, about whether I made the right decision and about whether I was motivated for the right reasons." She said the doubts all vanished when she stepped into the church.

In Mrs. Mean's small church office there's only one clue to the attention focused on her just a year ago — a small framed reproduction of a New York Times front page that includes her picture. "National church leaders have treated me just like any other priest and I'm thankful for that.

Form Letters Still Thriving

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In spite of all your good efforts, we still received far too many seasonal form letters written under the guise of "thoughtful messages to family and close friends." (This includes anyone whose last name they can spell.)

Among all the form letters arrived something new. A fancy announcement informing us of all the deaths in the family. How tacky and tasteless can you get?

In retaliation I plan to devise, for next year, a form letter of my own which gets the message across to even the dullest clods — the idea being, if you don't care to send a personal letter, note or card, send nothing.

Here's my message for Christmas, 1978:

Dear Friend: Since hearing from you, Sister Clara Mae ran off with the milkman, and happily they got married before the baby came. Grandpa fell in a hole on his way to the outhouse and has been on crutches ever since. We finally got Uncle Joe to quit messing around. Brother Billy joined the Foreign Legion, thank the Lord. He is an idiot. We think of you often and wonder if you are dead or put away again. Write a letter if you feel like it, otherwise just leave us off your list. — Your Country Cousin.

Do you think they'll get the drift, Ann? — HOPEFUL

DEAR HOPEFUL: I doubt it, but it's worth the shot. Let me know the reaction, will you?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My best friend asked me how I would feel if she had sex with my brother. I told her she shouldn't ask me such a question because I couldn't give her an honest answer. She looked dumbfounded. I then said, "I don't think I could respect you anymore if you did such a thing." (This girl and my brother are both 16.)

Well, she ignored my advice and had sex with my brother anyway. Now I don't know what to do. I am very uncomfortable in her presence and so is my brother. She hangs around our house uninvited. Whenever she comes in, he leaves. I think she just wants to be friends with me so she can see my brother. I'd appreciate some advice from you. — MARCELLA IN SAN JUAN

DEAR MARCELLA: Cool the friendship for the time being. She is sure to get the message if you tell her you have other plans and that she can't just drop in the way she used to.

After a while, if you feel more comfortable about her, resume the friendship. If you sense she is still after your brother—chop it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and kids aren't speaking to me these days and I am not sure the dog likes me anymore either. We had a kitten who started to act wild and crazy. He tore the draperies and ruined two upholstered chairs. He seemed to be going from kittenish playfulness to getting really vicious — so much so that I was starting to worry about the safety of our youngest child.

My wife and I had a big argument over this nutty cat and the next day she had it destroyed because I raised so much hell. Now the whole family treats me like I have some loathsome disease. Can you come up with a solution? I feel like a heel. — PURRFECTLY UNWANTED caught on and made a big hit," Karcher says. "I think McDonald's with their 15 cent hamburger, back then, changed the public's lifestyle."

DEAR PURR: Go to a pet shop and buy a mild-mannered, sweet-tempered kitten. It may well be the one you had was a little goofy.

He laughed. "Everybody's going out to eat, thank God."

The fast-food industry is said to be the fastest growing industry in the United States. And while there seemingly are dozens of fast-food operations on every city block, Karcher views the competition as good.

"COMPETITION IS WHAT keeps us sharp," he says. "It keeps us on our toes." He doesn't feel the "eating out business" has reached a saturation and predicts continued growth.

"I like to think we've been a leader in this," he says, noting they were the first to have a carpeted dining room with padded booths. Food also is delivered to customers at their table.

"We've added a serve yourself salad bar, which has been very exciting," he notes. "Gee, what we're going to do next I don't know. We'll come up with something."

Karcher, who has a weekend house in the Cypress Shores section of San Clemente, lives five blocks away from his office in the same house he and his wife bought nearly 30 years ago.

He belongs to numerous charitable and community organizations and is kept busy with 12 children and 21 grandchildren. He was asked what he does in his spare time.

"My spare time—if there is such a thing—is family oriented," he says. "I've never played a game of golf in my life.

"WITH A LARGE family and a large company you're never in need of something to do. You're always on call."

All of his children worked for the company part-time while going to school and three brothers, three sons, a daughter and a son-in-law currently work for it. Karcher notes, however, that "everybody in this company has earned their way."

Corporate plans call for possible expansion into Nevada, Arizona and Texas, but the president doubts the company will go international.

"Again, who knows," he says. "I like to think as long as we have room for expansion in the United States, why look across the ocean?"

Karcher, who feels America is going through a moral decline, nevertheless has great faith in the young generation. "I think we have one of the greatest young generations coming up that this country has ever seen, despite all the criticism.

"I'm so thankful to be an American. In so many parts of Asia and Europe they don't have the opportunity to do what we can do in this country. There are still greater opportunities here."

Says the man who turned a $326 investment into a fortune: "What it really takes is that you have to have a product the public is going to buy.

"But above all else you have to be enthusiastic about it. You've got to make it happen yourself."

...Solo

and women, are still playing the old, "I'm just here to talk to my friend. Oh, this is a bar?" and "Are you a regular?" which is usually followed with "No, I never come here, this is my first time." (Slow pause.) "Didn't I see you here last night?"

I never know what to do so I try to find a corner where I'll be as inconspicuous as possible. I like to watch the dancing (I haven't learned a new dance since "The Swim" went out in '69 and I have never, ever learned how to dance slow — I lead).

Invariably, I attract the weirdos. The kind of people who sit at your table and won't leave. The kind who have just had a fight with their girlfriend and want to tell you how rotten she is.

I find myself listening to drunks because I don't have the heart to walk away and I tip the cocktail waitresses too much because I heard once they think women are lousy tippers.

Generally, I refuse to accept a drink unless I can buy the next round which means it can get expensive when you have six people squashed around the same table.

The people I talk to say they've "NEVER met ANYONE in a bar." I always feel like saying I haven't either — at least anyone I'd want to meet again.

But, all in all, going to a singles' bar is always a learning experience. And, after a couple of hours, I pack my tired body and my clothes that smell of cigarette smoke into my car and head on down the highway.

There is always a feeling of accomplishment; I've proven once again how old I am, and, as Dorothy says to Auntie Em in the "Wizard of Oz" — I always feel there's no place like home. For six months anyway.

Lock Closes

Even before Lock No. 19 near Keokuk, Iowa, on the Mississippi River closed for the winter this week, boats and barges laden with grain found the going tough. The towboat James E. Snyder smashed through ice to open the way for the last of the winter traffic along the river's northern stretches.

Pastrami Wings It to London

Quick, Casual Airline Service, 'Mistaken Identity' Mark Flight

Mulligan's Stew

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON — The Duke and Duchess of Argyle did it. Gov. Jerry Brown of California did it. Now I've done it, flown the "Brown Bagger," the no frills, pack-your-own lunch flight across the Atlantic.

But they didn't fly back on the Concorde, as I did, which was another story.

FREDDIE LAKER, a British chap who used to sweep out aircraft hangars before he rose up in the world to own his own airline, had to fight his own government for years to bring about his dream of a low-priced air shuttle service between New York and London.

His Skytrain, already dubbed the Brown Bagger by New York cabdrivers, began service late in September offering no frills flights to London at $135 (or to New York at $105 because of currency differences) and caused Pan American, TWA and other competitors to provide similar rock bottom flights. Now prices are falling and frills are being snipped from the Miami and Fort Lauderdale runs.

Tickets for the Skytrain can be bought only on the day of the flight, but the ticket office located out on Queens Boulevard in the wilds of Jimmy Breslin country gives telephone advice beginning at dawn on how many seats are still left.

I CALLED AT eight in the morning from my Connecticut hideaway and was advised by a pleasant English accent, reminiscent of Greer Garson in "Mrs. Miniver," that 310 seats remained out of 345.

When I reached the ticket window at 10:30 a.m., I handed over my passport for perusal, my credit card for payment, my suitcase for checking and, on the big board, chose seat No. 4A, which was a window in the nonsmoking section. The little charmer behind the desk told me I was passenger No. 70.

The place was empty. The whole transaction took three minutes, pretty close to an airline counter record in my two decades of flitting about the globe. She told me to be back at the same office by 9:45 p.m. to catch the last free Laker bus to the United Airlines terminal at Kennedy or else proceed there on my own.

INVESTING 50 cents in a subway ride into Manahattan, I wandered along Madison Avenue peeking into some of the specialty food shops that pack picnic baskets for the transoceanic shuttle.

For $46, one featured "a Concorde-style supersonic snack for the no-frills passenger." It included a thimbleful of caviar, roast squab in little booties and a half bottle of Moet-Chandon bubbly.

I walked over to Zeb's sandwich shop behind Grand Central Terminal and had the take-away man build me a double pastrami on rye with a side order of cole slaw, letting it be known that his handiwork would be consumed somewhere off Newfoundland.

"BIG DEAL," HE said, scowling, but he threw in a couple of dill pickle slices for the road.

The last bus to the airport evoked the last train from Berlin, piled high with duffle bags, backpacks, blanket rolls and guitars, as if the occupants, some carrying babies in pajamas, were fleeing with all their earthly impedimenta.

After passing through security, there were no further check-in procedures and the Big DC-10, arrayed throughout with nine seats across the aisle, pulled away from the gate at precisely 11 p.m.

ALREADY THERE were veteran Brown Baggers who knew enough to assert the territorial imperative. With a tough refugee mentality, they scarfed up every pillow and blanket in sight and stretched out on the empty seats for an all-night nap.

Our ranks included 258 passengers and two infants that night. I was one of three wearing a tie. As soon as the seat belt sign went off, the 10 stewardesses in tall Trilby hats rolled the drink carts down the aisles, offering liquor at 50 cents and beer for a quarter. There was no wine or champagne to set off Chef Zeb's delectation.

A cold dinner was sold in advance for $3. I asked the bearded chap across the aisle what his tray contained. "Chicken," he said, "No, wait, maybe it's shrimp." He never could decide.

FOR $2, I rented earphones for the in-flight movie, despite the jests of some students who predicted it would be an old Army V.D. film. It turned out to be Jackie Gleason in "Mr. Billions," which immediately put the whole plane to sleep, except for a crying baby and two Australians who went to work on their duty free liquor purchases.

The $2 hot breakfast, which I essayed, was a disaster of burnt sausage, a tired omelet and the usual British put-down of coffee. But the old Brown Bagger was 10 minuxes early getting into London's Gatwick Airport, and the cringing porter immediately mistook me for Gov. Brown.

"Where to, Governor," he nattered through yellowing teeth, "the taxi stand or the train to Victoria?" I took the train, of course, in the spirit of Freddie Laker's economy breakthrough.

Telephone Bills Fall

By The Associated Press

January telephone bills may be a little bit smaller.

The Internal Revenue Service says the federal excise tax on telephone service dropped from 5 percent to 4 percent on Jan. 1.

The tax on local and toll telephone calls, as well as teletypewriter services, has been dropping 1 percent per year since 1972 under federal tax law. The telephone excise tax is scheduled to be phased out completely by Jan. 1, 1982, but President Carter is proposing that it be ended late next year.

NEWS TO USE

A telephone subscriber who has combined local service and long-distance telephone costs of $10 in January will pay 40 cents in excise taxes instead of 50 cents.

METRIC'S DUE — A document that will have a major effect on this nation's future is the Metric Conversion Act, moving the country into the standards of measurement used by most of the rest of the world.

So the American National Metric Council has put out a Metric Consumer Information Kit.

The kit is available for $1 for postage and handling and includes a wallet-size conversion card and two booklets, "The Metric System Day to Day" and "A Metric Reference for Consumers."

Republic is good for the economy... Yours

Tax Shelter your income now and it will shelter you in retirement. The money you save for retirement not only helps your personal economy, but it also stimulates the general economy.

Republic puts your savings to work to create jobs with the loaning of millions of dollars for the building of homes and industry. Each dollar of your savings contributes to a healthy business climate.

Now is the time to assure your economic future. With a tax-sheltered IRA or Keogh retirement plan. You pay no income tax on the money you put into these plans, nor on the interest, until withdrawn at retirement.

With just $1500 a year in an IRA, Individual Retirement Account, your future could look like this:

After	With IRA tax-sheltered plan	Without tax-sheltered plan	Added retirement money
10 Years	23,548	15,758	7,790
20 Years	75,670	44,098	30,571
30 Years	185,653	95,067	90,586

Figures are based on a 25% income tax bracket, with funds in a 7.75% per annum, 3-year certificate account, contingent on availability. Federal regulations permit early withdrawals, subject to substantial reductions in interest earnings. (Now a non-employed spouse may open an IRA account also, if the wage-earning spouse qualifies.)

The Keogh Plan for self-employed individuals allows yearly contributions up to $7500 for even greater earnings. Start earning interest today on a retirement plan and get the tax deduction that you deserve. Call or drop by for more information.

BANK CHAIRMAN Richard Stevens

BANK PRESIDENT James Lynch

Bank to Launch Its First Branch

Irvine National Bank plans to build its first branch office near Hoag Hospital in Newport Beach.

The bank has purchases 2.2 acres of property at Superior and Placentia avenues and 15th Street and will build a 5,500-square-foot office.

The bank, headquartered at 2171 Campus Drive, Irvine, has been in operation since 1973. It has grown to more than $30 million in assets.

Richard S. Stevens is chairman and James Lynch is president. The two were erroneously represented as being affiliated with another bank in the Dec. 29 edition of the Daily Pilot.

AN INDEPENDENT bank, it features a personal savings center designed to meet the banking needs of women, divorced and widowed persons, young adults and the elderly.

The center uses volunteer services of a range of professionals who are contacted to help solve the financial and related problems of these groups.

Hike Slows

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gasoline rose more slowly in 1977 than the general cost of living, according to the Lundberg Letter, a Los Angeles-based newsletter that surveys 20,000 service stations each month.

TV Lectures

Orange Coast Slates Series

Orange Coast College will present a four-part January lecture series titled "Television — An Inner Space Adventure and Outer Space Retreat.

The series meets on successive Friday evenings, beginning Jan. 6, from 7:30 to 9:30 in OCC's Fine Arts Hall 119. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

SERIES LECTURERS MILT AND Ann-Marie McMenamin will look at television from a perspective as educators, performers, researchers and writers.

He is director of drama at Long Beach Jordan High and has been a radio-TV performer, writer, researcher and administrator, as well as a teacher for 20 years. She is a drama director at Lakewood High School and an actress, TV script researcher, choreographer, model and theater director.

THE SERIES WILL INCLUDE several guest celebrities and a network studio tour.

The opening lecture, on Jan. 6, will look at what research and legislation have to say about violence on television. The McMenamins will explain how and why programs influence the habits of children.

The Jan. 13 session will take a glimpse behind the scenes to see how television's comedies, dramas, sports, games, news and documentaries are produced and what makes them "commercial."

A LOOK AT HOW MINORITIES use TV as an instrument of social change and how screen personalities become heroes and heroines will be presented Jan. 20.

The final lecture, Jan. 27, will look at television technology and what the future holds for the industry.

For information about the series, phone 556-5880.

Police Seize Body

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N. J. (AP) — Burial services for a Morristown man were interrupted when police seized the body moments before it was to be lowered into a grave.

Police took the body to the county medical examiner for an autopsy because of suspicions that Vincent Ciraldo, 65, may have died as the result of a robbery and beating. The autopsy results disproved the report, authorities said.

A PALL BEARER SAID one of the officials who confiscated the body during services at the Holy Rood Cemetery here told the mourners, "I'm from the medical examiner's office and we need that body."

Suspicions were raised after Ciraldo, who was delirious from lack of food and suffering insulin shock, called police Friday and said he had been robbed, authorities said. Ciraldo later changed his story and said there had been no robbery. Saturday, he died of a heart attack while hospitalized.

ON TUESDAY, AT ABOUT the same time a Mass was being celebrated, a Morristown policeman heard rumors that Ciraldo died as a result of a beating. Police asked for an autopsy, and representatives of the county medical examiner rushed to the cemetery.

After the autopsy, Ciraldo's body was released by authorities and he was buried.

Fake Gun, Bomb Stirs Council

OAKLAND (AP) — "Only six more years and I can retire," sighed officer James Boyle after an irate job seeker displayed a fake bomb and gun at a City Council meeting to emphasize his desire for work.

Henry Robinson pulled the nickel-plated pistol Tuesday night, then assured council members it was "a phony gun" before making a pitch for jobs for Oakland residents.

HE THEN HELD A CLUSTER of silver cylinders bound together with tape, sending spectators scurrying for the exits. The bomb also was a fake.

"This is not a real bomb," Robinson said. "I'm tired of being broke and I want a job."

MAYOR LIONEL WILSON said he would meet with Robinson in the near future to discuss his situation.

He said he was "more worried about Officer Boyle's shooting than I was about the bomb."

Bonfa Blasts HB Council's Decision

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

City Attorney Don Bonfa accused the Huntington Beach City Council today of incompetence and hypocrisy and with meddling in the affairs of the city's legal department.

Bonfa's verbal attack on city leaders was the latest salvo in the controversy that has followed a physical altercation between Bonfa and Deputy City Attorney John O'Connor Dec. 27.

The city council said Tuesday night it wouldn't allow the use of city funds to pay legal fees that might result from the latest Bonfa-O'Connor imbroglio.

City taxpayers already have paid more than $10,000 in support of the city attorney in a previous grievance case between the two men.

Mayor Ron Pattinson contended that legal expenses in the latest flareup could cost taxpayers up to $100,000 if counsel is provided. The council indicated unanimously that it is unwilling to pick up such a tab.

Bonfa placed O'Connor on immediate suspension without pay and said he would discharge his deputy as soon as the necessary written notice is prepared.

The city council also directed City Administrator Bud Belsito to tell the city's legal staff not to assist Bonfa in the matter.

Bonfa said that he had no intention of using his staff for this purpose. But he said the city council's action represents meddling into the affairs of his department.

He said the city administrator has no authority over legal employees because in Huntington Beach the city attorney is an elected official.

"The city council is incapable and incompetent to manage any department," Bonfa charged. "They can't manage themselves. They are way over their heads."

Bonfa also claimed that the council is "very hypocritical" because it previously hired an outside counsel to defend the chief of police against a grievance by an officer.

"It cost the city more than $20,000 and I have the bills to prove it," he said.

Bonfa said that his office was willing and capable of supporting the chief but was not asked.

Bonfa also said that he has received "expressions" from

Pair Capture HB Rape Suspect

Police Laud 'Heroes'

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two young Orange Coast men who didn't hesitate to get involved are credited with saving a 16-year-old Huntington Beach girl from the violent attack of an alleged would-be rapist.

"It was beautiful work. They're heroes," says Huntington Beach police detective Art Droz of the two rescuers, Robert Maness, 23, of Huntington Beach, and Michael Spears, 24, of Costa Mesa.

He spoke of the capture last Thursday by the pair of a suspect who allegedly dragged the teenager off busy Beach Boulevard into a grassy gulch near Adams Avenue.

Lon Dean Vickery, 24, a Huntington Beach short order cook, today remained in jail custody in lieu of $10,000 bail.

He is accused of the attempted rape in a criminal complaint issued earlier this week by the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Investigators say Maness, the initial witness, and Spears to whom he cried for help, pounced on the suspect as he pinned the girl down in a field.

She was not sexually assaulted before they intervened, but her clothes had been partially torn off and she was hysterical, police said.

"They saved her a lot of anguish. . .a lot of mental torment. . .a lot of trauma. I talked to her again the other day and she seems to be doing just fine now," said Detective Droz.

The fact Maness, a Huntington Beach resident and advertising major at Golden West College is a normal, red-blooded young man may have saved the high school girl from the horror of violent rape.

"I was driving down Beach Boulevard and I noticed this girl walking alongside the road. I always look at girls," he explained rather shyly.

"Then I saw a man walking

Lightning Strikes HB Home

Lightning struck in Huntington Beach Wednesday, blowing a smoking, two-foot hole in the roof of a home as the rains came with a vengeance.

Raymond Hirko, 12, and his mother, Mrs. Cathy Hirko, were in the Andrew Hirko home at 5982 Brassie Drive when the 3:52 bolt struck, knocking out power in the house and stopping clocks.

They were uninjured, firemen said, although young Raymond, seated in front of the television set, had the daylights scared out of him when the TV screen lit up like a giant flashbulb.

Firemen from the Heil Station, just around the corner, raced to the scene and tore smouldering shingles from around the hole in the roof.

Rain so heavy at times it drummed on cars and rooftops as heavily as hail apparently caused little serious flooding in Huntington Beach or Fountain Valley.

Orange County Fire Department spokesmen likewise said they received no reports of flooding or damage to areas of the west county within their jurisdiction.

A high tide of 5.9 feet at 5:30 a.m. today coupled with storm surf cresting up to five feet was initially considered a potential flooding threat to Sunset Beach and Surfside Colony.

Seal Beach police said they had no reports at all of the tidal overflow which occasionally sloshes into the beachfront hamlets each winter.

A Fountain Valley Fire Department spokesman said flooding and traffic problems usually generated by a storm of Wednesday's magnitude were considerably less than usual in that city.

The at-times heavy downpour apparently waxed and waned sufficiently to allow adequate runoff before the next deluge.

Orange Coast Hard Hit by Heavy Storms

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot

PRESIDENT CARTER DECORATES GRAVE OF U.S. SOLDIER
At Omaha Beach, Homage and Vow to Protect Europe

Carter Promises European Freedom

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Pointing to more than two centuries of French-American partnership, dating to the American Revolution, Carter told his French audience:

"We're proud of what we've done together. We're sure our friendship will be everlasting."

Brought by bus from Germany for the occasion were troops of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division that lost 2,000 men at Omaha Beach on D-Day.

Representatives of the French armed forces joined them, as did some American Legion members, survivors of the wartime French resistance movement and a French military band.

Carter, who walked alone with Giscard to the edge of the cliff for a view of the beach at the end of the ceremony, was bundled in a short white raincoat and scarf.

Giscard d'Estaing wore a sweater under his gray suit but was otherwise unprotected from the cold. Mrs. Carter, in cloth coat and boots, carried a scarf in one hand.

The two leaders then drove from Omaha Beach to Bayeux, the first French town liberated after the D-Day landing. There a flag-waving crowd of several thousand cheered as both Carter and Giscard d'Estaing engaged in campaign-style politicking.

Special Session

BULLETIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

Gun Sales Up

Self-protection Motivation

VISTA (AP) — A rash of home invasions, rapes and shootings is bringing a run on handguns along with warnings from authorities that watch dogs and night lights are safer.

"People are creating their own panic," said sheriff's Lt. Paul Franklin.

In cities and hamlets throughout northern San Diego County, gun shops report sharply increased sales.

A year-old office of crime prevention specialists in Vista said more requests for advice have been handled this week than in the 11 months of the federal-financed pilot program.

Last week, George G. Mottino, a 68-year-old farmer, was shot to death by gunmen trying to force their way into his home. Masked gunmen have broken into several homes, raping women and four masked men broke into a Fallbrook physician's home and robbed him and guests.

Sunshine Saturday?

Showers Forecast Friday and Sunday

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Rainwatcher J. Sherman Denny of Huntington Beach reported 1.09 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.28 for the season and 6.32 for last season at this time. He said an unusually large amount, 4.03 inches, has fallen in Huntington Beach between Dec. 22 and today.

John Gietzen of the Orange County Flood Control District recorded a 24-hour total of .62 inches for Santa Ana. The season total there is 5.64 inches, compared to 4.46 last year.

At Santiago Peak on Saddleback Mountain, he said, today's tally was 1.5 inches, for a season total of 17.2 compared to 11.0 last year.

One inch of rain provides an estimated 10,000 acre feet of replenishment for the county's underground water basin, Orange County Water District officials said today.

KICKED 'CAT' RAISES STINK

DURAND, Ill. (AP) — Jack Yaun walked out to his barn in early morning dimness and saw in the doorway that same old stray cat that had been hanging around.

"Well, I up and gave it one hell of a good kick," Yaun said Wednesday.

Yaun failed to see the white stripe down the animal's back.

The skunk retaliated.

Orange Coast

Weather

Considerable cloudiness tonight becoming partly cloudy Friday. Fifty percent chance of showers tonight decreasing to 40 percent Friday. Lows tonight 46 to 50. Highs Friday 56 to 62.

Stamps Thieves' Target

Huntington Beach police said today they believe a stamp collection burglary ring has struck three times in their city and may soon hit other Orange County collectors.

Police Detective Marty O'Reilly said stamps valued at $45,000 have been taken from three Huntington Beach collectors during the past two weeks.

O'Reilly has advised all area stamp collectors to lock up their treasures because the thieves are using a mailing list of philatelist club members to select their victims.

Police believe the thieves found a stamp collectors club mailing list at the home of their first victim who lived in a mobile home park.

O'Reilly declined to identify the victims because that information would tip off other burglars as to where to find the valuable stamps, he said.

The first victim, a 72-year-old former McDonnell Douglas Company employee, told police an old mailing list of other stamp collectors was taken in the Dec. 23 burglary.

The burglary victim told police the mailing list could tip off the burglar as to where other prominent stamp collectors in the area are living.

The name and address of the second victim, a 74-year-old trailer park resident in another part of the city, was on that list.

O'Reilly said the stamp thieves struck while the victim was away from his home. As in the first theft, a door was pried open to gain entry.

In the second break in, which occurred Dec. 31, a mink coat was also taken. Despite this, O'Reilly said he believes it was the work of the same stamp burglars.

"They were more selective in the stamps they stole the second time," O'Reilly said.

The third stamp theft occurred Monday while the 41-year-old victim was away at the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

several attorneys in the city who are "outraged" by the council's action to withdraw legal support.

He said that there have been offers of free legal service.

Bonfa renewed his attack on the council by saying its action was politically inspired in order to make his office appointive instead of elective.

He also said that O'Connor was working with Bonfa's political opponent.

At Tuesday night's council meeting, attorney Gail Hutton, who plans to oppose Bonfa in the next municipal election, told officials that O'Connor was denied due process when he was suspended without pay.

She contended that O'Connor wasn't given legal notice in writing prior to the disciplinary action.

She said that the alleged failure by Bonfa to follow due process requirements "was a negligent dereliction of duty and an open invitation for more lawsuits based on the deprivation of rights of employees."

City Administrator Belsito said today he is contacting a special legal adviser to see if O'Connor's suspension without pay is justified.

He said that O'Connor has not been adversely affected yet because the next pay day is Jan. 13.

Deputy City Attorney Mark Travis also told the council Tuesday night he thought O'Connor was wronged by the suspension without pay.

He said the city's Management Employees Organization is prepared to take whatever action is needed in the matter.

that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Residents this morning were trapped in their neighborhoods of the Woodbridge, University and the Ranch developments, which became peninsula communities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive; Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

There were no serious injuries reported.

Fatal Plane Crash Blamed on Weather

By The Associated Press

Torrential rains and gale-force winds flooded streets, tore down trees and power lines and caused a fatal plane crash.

But in the Sierra, the storm brought good news, leaving behind the best snowpack in four years.

By late Wednesday evening, the storm had dropped 1.14 inches of rain on downtown Los Angeles, pushing the season total to 7.18 inches, the weather service said. That is compared with 5.30 inches last year and an average rainfall by this date of 5.02 inches.

The California Department of Transportation and Highway Patrol issued wind warnings along the winding Grapevine section of Interstate 5, with wind speeds of up to 60 mph recorded Wednesday. Despite the snow, rain and wind, few roads were reported closed Wednesday afternoon.

But CalTrans said state Route 2, the Angeles Crest Highway, from Big Pines, to the Route 39 junction had been sealed off because of heavy snow. State Route 99 between Arvin and the junction of state Route 58 in Kern County was closed because of sand on the road. Arvin was severely damaged by hurricane-force winds and blowing sand last month.

By late Wednesday afternoon, the CHP said cars were hydroplaning on most Los Angeles freeways when traveling faster than 35 mph. But speeds rarely exceeded that, since minor accidents and engine floodouts kept traffic slowed down or stopped during the evening rush hour.

Several lanes were flooded as deep as four feet on transition roads from the San Bernardino and Santa Ana freeways, as were lanes in both directions of the Golden State Freeway near Griffith Park, said the CHP.

In the eastern San Gabriel Valley city of San Dimas, mid-afternoon winds of up to 80 mph were responsible for extensive damage to buildings. Winds caused an estimated $50,000 to $100,000 damage to a furniture store after winds blew off part of its roof.

Power outages were reported in Rosemead, San Gabriel, El Monte, Sierra Madre, Monrovia, Glendora, San Dimas, LaVerne and the City of Industry.

A Whittier home suffered an estimated $17,000 damage after it reportedly was set afire by a lightning bolt Wednesday afternoon, a county fire department spokesman said.

Three persons died Wednesday after their Piper PA-22 got lost in heavy storm clouds and crashed in Cleghorn Canyon while en route from Ontario to Chico, authorities said. The single-engine plane crashed about an hour after leaving Ontario Airport, said a Federal Aviation Administration official.

In Sycamore Canyon — left denuded by last July's fire — no serious mudslides or flooding was reported, said Santa Barbara County Flood Control District officials.

Coast Patrons Rush For King Tut Ducats

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

About 45,000 Orange Coast residents flocked to six area stores this week, braving long lines and rain to buy most of the available tickets for the treasures of Tutankhamun Egyptian art exhibit in Los Angeles.

Orange Coast store managers said the culture-seeking crowds were of all ages and very well mannered as they waited to buy the tickets for the four-month exhibit opening Feb. 15 at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Store officials said most of the Tut tickets were sold Tuesday.

The Orange Coast stores were allotted between 7,000 and 9,000 tickets each.

Huntington Beach May Company and Broadway department store officials said several hundred ticket buyers waited in the rain for several hours Tuesday and Wednesday before receiving the tickets. Lines also were in evidence at Broadway, May Co. and Bullock's ticket outlets in Laguna Hills and Costa Mesa.

Store officials said that by Wednesday afternoon only "singles" and tickets for exhibit times during the week were still on sale. Most tickets for weekend exhibit times were sold during the first few hours Tuesday.

Store officials at the May Company, Broadway and Bullocks said they expected all the Egyptian exhibit ducats to be sold by today.

Officials at the Los Angeles museum expect about 1.3 million Southern Californians to view the precious artifacts.

Some three million people have seen the exhibit in Washington, D.C., Chicago and New Orleans where it closes Jan. 15.

The show also will travel to Seattle, New York and San Francisco.

Marine Held in Killings

By The Associated Press

A young Marine photographer apparently selected his victims as he went on a shooting-stabbing rampage at Camp Pendleton that left two senior co-workers dead and four others wounded.

Sgt. Earl J. Holley, 24, of Staten Island, N.Y., was arrested Wednesday, sitting with the .22-caliber automatic pistol he allegedly used to kill two senior photographers at the base audio-visual center.

"We have reason to believe he knew who the victims were and he sought them out," said Lt. Col. D.W. Brown, head of the public affairs office at the nation's largest Marine base, 25 miles north of San Diego.

Master Sgt. Daniel P. Hurley, 42, of Uniontown, Pa., and Staff Sgt. Gilbert N. Donham, 38, of Ladelle, Ark., died of multiple gunshot wounds, a Marine spokesman said.

Hurley lived in Oceanside with his Korean-born wife and five-week-old daughter, a Marine spokesman said. He was dead at the scene and Donham died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital.

Other Marines who knew Holley told reporters he felt victimized and ridiculed by other non-commissioned officers in the photography and audio-visual departments and was quoted as saying he would seek revenge.

Acquaintances said Holley had unclipped an ammunition belt and laid down his pistol, then sat on a table with his legs crossed waiting to be taken after the spree was over.

"He'd done what he had to do," one said.

A Marine account of the rampage said Holley attacked three of his victims at the center, then ran to a nearby photographic laboratory where he shot three other men.

Dollar Takes 'Sharp Rise'

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in Europe today following major U.S. government intervention on foreign exchange markets to prop the currency.

But trading was cautious, and many of the market's big operators stayed on the sidelines waiting to see whether the Carter administration would continue its support action.

The British pound was quoted at $1.88 in midafternoon, a drop of nearly 8 cents from its Wednesday close at $1.9590 and down 2 cents fromits opening today at $1.90.

rapidly behind her. It just looked funny. I pulled up at the red light and looked in the rear view mirror. I saw him grab her from behind and drag her into the field."

Maness hit the accelerator and, tires squealing, sped into an adjacent service station, yelling to bystander Spears for aid.

Spears, an Orange Coast College engineering major from Costa Mesa, ran to help as Maness confronted the suspect later alleged to be Vickery assaulting the teenager on the ground.

Neither is a physically large man, compared to the suspect.

"Everything happened so fast, it just seemed the right thing to do," says Spears. "It took both of us to get him off her and subdued. I guess we wrestled him for several minutes."

"They really did super work. It was just a lucky thing he saw what he did," said Detective Droz.

Maness is more blunt about what he and Spears did while the shaken teen-aged victim ran back to the service station to call police who found Vickery held captive inside on arrival.

Attorney Dispute Has Gone Too Far

The altercation between Huntington Beach City Attorney Don Bonfa and Deputy City Attorney John O'Connor strains the imagination.

The men have feuded for years, but the recent physical confrontation in which each claims innocence while accusing the other of assault and battery is disturbingly childish.

It is an embarrassment to the city and its residents.

The question of who attacked whom in the latest episode is now pretty well beside the point. That the dispute has been allowed to fester and escalate over the years is of more concern.

It already has cost taxpayers thousands of dollars because the city council chose to provide legal counsel for Bonfa in a grievance dispute with O'Connor. And in the ultimate ironical legal twist, the city may end up paying O'Connor's legal fees as well.

But the city council this week took action to declare enough is enough.

The council members voted to terminate legal counsel for Bonfa in the dispute. They also directed Bonfa's staff not to assist him in the matter.

The decision signals at long last that the city will not pour more money into the apparently endless struggle.

And that's good. If the two men want to pursue this ridiculous quarrel, the city wants no part of it.

We say amen.

Misguided Tax Use

Huntington Beach City Council members thought they were doing the right thing when they authorized spending up to $8,600 to help finance the All American Surfing Championships in the city.

The competition was designed to increase the standing of surfing as an amateur sport and to benefit athletes of the aquatic world.

That was why city officials say they got involved and why they committed taxpayer money.

A number of things probably should have been looked at more closely.

But the primary concern to city leaders should have been how the taxpayers' money was to be spent.

The American Surfing Association, the sponsors of the competition, financed a flight of a visitor from Honolulu with city money.

They also staged a luau with a $10 admission charge.

But not everybody had to pay. City council members and department heads were offered free, complimentary tickets to the dinner.

It is understood that many paid their own way.

But the question remains, why should city council members and department heads be given a special privilege with taxpayer money?

Still Not Equal

Mile Square Park golf course in Fountain Valley is a publicly owned course. As such, it should be open equally to all taxpaying golfers.

But an effort by Orange County supervisors to achieve that end didn't go far enough.

County officials had negotiated with course operators to end what supervisors viewed as preferential treatment offered to members of the Men's Golf Club.

That treatment allows club members to phone one hour ahead of the public to reserve early morning tee-off time for weekends. As a result some other golfers complained and county officials set about finding a solution.

The solution approved will offer all golfers a chance to call one hour early for weekend tee-off reservations — if they either join the club or pay $8 a year plus a refundable $30 deposit.

The new arrangement doesn't sound like equal treatment either. As long as Mile Square is owned by taxpayers, all golfers should be given the same opportunity to make reservations on a first-come first-served basis.

Boyd/Cat's Eyes

By L.M. BOYD

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relationship to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Was just 99 years ago that Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen brought the first bowl of goldfish into this country from Japan.

What qualifies archaeologist Iris Cornelia Love for membership in the Proper Job Club is the fact that she seven years ago discovered the whereabouts of the long lost statue of the love goddess Aphrodite. She'd put in a lot of time around the Mediterranean diggings in search of it, but that's not where she found Praxiteles' masterpiece. In the basement of the British Museum in London is where.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" All right.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middleage spread.

Fifteen percent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology, is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.

Dear Gloomy Gus

Were it only an appointive office, the problems we're now facing with the city attorney and his underlings would have been disposed of long ago.

Truck 'Crackdown' Questioned

Has the California Highway Patrol cracked down on speeding trucks? Its recent report of more than 5,000 citations having been issued to speeding truck drivers during the month of October suggests that, at long last, the complaints of motorists have seeped through to CHP Commissioner Glen Craig.

Almost from the inception of the unrealistic 55 mph speed limit, the motoring public has been pleading for protection from the behemoths of the highways which thunder down from on high on freeway travellers, tailgating and otherwise terrorizing drivers who have the temerity to stand in their way by observing the speed limit.

Last summer Craig announced a "crackdown" on the trucks and the October report tended to show it was being carried out. And, although the activity shown amounted to barely more than one truck stopped during the month by each state traffic officer, it still would be significant had the target indeed been those roaring beasts of the road about whom the public has been complaining.

BUT AN examination of the facts cast some doubt about the "crackdown." While there are only about 90,000 tractors registered in California an estimated 300,000 such units enter the state each year. These are the motorized components which pull the huge freight trailers seen rumbling up and down the freeways.

And, although it is not known how much of the time these trucks, out of state and home based, are actually on California highways, the relatively small number compared to the total of passenger cars, might make 5,000 speed citations seem a heavy enforcement effort.

However, CHP sources disclose that the count was not limited to the type of trucks which come instantly to the mind of the motorist but included a myriad of other types. There are nearly 3 million "trucks" registered in the state. These include panels, pickups and station wagons, which were not counted, although many two-axle and other small trucks were. So the total of 5,000 is no way indicative of the CHP effort against the mammoths about which the public complains.

"You're straddling the wrong camel."

IN COMPARING the CHP record on speed citations to trucks against the overall of 89,052 issued to vehicles of all types it might still seem a good performance, being more than 5 percent, especially when the number of trucks is matched against the near 12 million passenger vehicles registered.

But comparing total registrations is a false measurement. With rare exceptions passenger cars stand idle far more than they are in use and many of them never or rarely venture out on the freeways. Not so with the monster trucks whose high costs make it essential to get the highest usage possible. The only real measurement then would be a comparison of mileage travelled on state highways by trucks versus passenger cars.

One thing the report clearly revealed is that speed occupies nearly 50 percent of the emphasis of the CHP for the total number of tickets written for violations of all types was only 195,194.

ALSO misleading is the total of traffic officers on the CHP reported as 4,165. The five-day week reduces the number available for duty to about 3,000 while sick leave, courtroom time and other causes further erode the number to where there are probably no more than 2,000 reporting for duty on any given day to cover a 24-hour period. On certain holidays, when super efforts are made, the patrol may field as many as 1,000 at one time but overtime earned then reduces the CHP strength on subsequent days.

It is this force which must not only cover both sides of the state's 3,794 miles of freeway and more than 11,000 additional miles of state highway, but also thousands of miles of county roads.

Is Remedial Education Money Wasted?

WASHINGTON — Every few months from one section of the country or another comes fresh news confirming the fact that many children pass in, through and out of school without learning to read or figure.

So parents and other taxpayers demand that kids who didn't learn anything be held back, a practice that was given up some years ago when somebody noticed that the first grade at P.S. 40 had 11 six-footers in it.

Being a 14-year-old Big Stoop in a class of otherwise bright and proficient 10-year-old chums is thought to cause anxiety and inferiority feelings in the larger, laggard scholar who may then wap his little buddies around in a paroxysm of misplaced resentment.

To get around this problem it's being suggested that kids who don't even know the easier part of the multiplication table be shunted off to special classes. . .a scholastic chain gang where they will crack their rock-like heads learning that 6 x 8 equals 48. If they don't learn to read, as they probably won't, at least they will be failing out of sight. And no more diplomas for the boneheads; henceforth all they get is a certificate of attendance.

BEHIND all this concern and activity are some propositions which may or may not be true. Proposition one is that schools are to teach reading and writing; proposition two is that when they don't it's the teachers' fault and the taxpayers are getting cheated; number three is that if you don't have an abnormally depressed I.Q. you can and you must learn to read and do elementary arithmetic.

Of course, all depends on number three. We know from ourselves and our friends it doesn't follow that if you can read you can count. Some of us are whizzes at numbers and can barely read; the reverse is even more common. As for the goal of a totally literate society, while it may be possible to teach everyone but the mentally handicapped how to read, it also may be very expensive. Somewhere we hit the law of diminishing returns.

THE COST in teachers, remedial reading instructors, counselors and therapists, physical and psychological, to drive Nasty Nate and Snide Sally into learning how to read is much too expensive. The society isn't going to get its money back on that investment.

Is it necessary to teach everybody how to read and figure? What about using the millions that math instruction is going to cost us to give away hand-held calculators to all those who can't count but signify a desire to do comparison shopping at the supermarket? If there is no readily apparent reason why so much money should be spent so that everybody — literally everybody — in our society, can do long division, the need for 100 percent literacy is not apparent either.

Work is another question. It is generally agreed on the basis of the scantiest information that you can't hold down a job if you lack these two basic skills. If that's so, the reason has less to do with the work itself than with how the job requirements are set up. Why does a bus driver in an exact-change-only system have to know how to add and subtract?

Teachers who are supposed to "larn" the recalcitrant dunces don't care for proficiency exams; they prefer to speak of instructing their obtuse charges in such things as "life coping skills," an odious expression hatched in the gastrointestinal tract of a professor of ed-psych no doubt. The danger is that pupils will be made to pass an exam in this amorphous subject, and those flunking life coping will be adjudged socially incompetent at an even higher financial cost to the community.

All children must go to school. There is nothing else to be done with them once they escape infant exposures, but all children don't have to learn while they're there. For some, romping about with the coping skills teacher is the answer, while the rest of us acknowledge defeat and admit that occasionally high standards aren't the best standards.

Congressmen Preparing for Televised Sessions

To the Editor:

Many thanks for your kind remarks regarding my efforts in obtaining a one-year moratorium on the relocation of federally protected witnesses to Southern California. I am pleased by the Justice Department's decision, and I plan to watch carefully when a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducts hearings on the witness protection program sometime next year.

EARLY this month, you editorially mentioned the "salutary effect" of television coverage on the Florida state legislature and spoke of congressional debate on the subject of television and radio access to the floor of the House. On Oct. 27, the House approved by a vote of 342 to 44 House Resolution 866, which provides for television and radio coverage of floor proceedings. The cameras and cable are being installed right now, and I expect that the TV and radio networks will be taking full advantage of this progressive move by the Congress when we reconvene in January.

The American people deserve to see firsthand how their government operates. They will not be disappointed in the performance of the House, I am certain.

Reason for Doubt

To the Editor:

It is high time the citizens of Huntington Beach sat up and took notice of the kind of city attorney they have elected and are paying some $40,000 per year. Those who are "city watchers" or who have been present at more than an occasional city meeting must seriously doubt the wisdom of continuing the popular election of the city attorney given in the inept performancethe current officeholder has turned in. Perhaps it is time to permit the city council to hire a true professional to do the job — one who is answerable to the city.

The current debacle with John O'Connor is reprehensible. It tarnishes the city's image and reputation and continues what can now be considered nothing more than a personal grudge or vendetta. It is ridiculous that because Don Bonfa is elected and answerable only to the people (his name is not exactly a household word, hence removal by recall is virtually impossible), he can remain in office, use tax dollars for his defense, and oust one of the best men in the department who will have to conduct his litigation at his own expense.

Mr. Bonfa's term has been marked by poor advice, often untimely given, unseemly behavior, and pursuit of self-serving interests at the expense of the taxpayers. As he is fond of stating, he is answerable only to the people, the few who vote. Let's give him a loud and clear response in April!

Facts Muddled

To the Editor:

I wonder if today's schooling is responsible for the inaccuracy of today's newspaper reporters.

Twenty-five years ago any third grade student knew that it took about 12 blocks to make a mile. There was a plane crash 2,300 feet from Meadowlark Airport. One newspaper reporter stated it was one mile, another news reporter stated two miles and the third reporter stated three miles. How could any reporter translate one block into 36 blocks?

A REPORTER from another paper did a nostalgic article on the airport. He stated it consisted of 80 acres when in fact it is 49 acres. This reporter stated that the airport didn't cost the city a dime. The city is being sued for $5 million by a pilot. The city taxpayers paid over $1,200 to bury electrical wires on Heil Street because airplanes were cutting them. The taxpayers pay for all the fire department calls for wrecks and for police. The city has to pay for higher liability insurance because of the airport.

I have a feeling that these reporters just grab information from the nearest person standing next to them without judging facts for themselves.

50 Birds Killed By Slick

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A mysterious oil slick has killed about 50 birds, mostly sea ducks, and harmed about 25 others in San Diego Bay, the state Game and Fish Department says.

The Coast Guard Marine Safety office said patrol boats dispatched after the dead birds were discovered found "a light sheen" of oil on the water on the Coronado side of the bay.

OFFICIALS said the source of the oil was undetermined but no spills had been reported.

They speculated that oil from street surfaces may have been washed into the bay by heavy rain. But a Coast Guard spokesman said it was "hard to believe this would be enough to kill the birds."

FRANK TODD, curator of birds at Sea World, said a light, high-grade diesel oil was responsible for the deaths. He noted the birds "displayed all the symptoms of such a spill."

The injured birds were taken to Sea World after Project Wildlife volunteers washed off the slick and placed them in heating pads.

Todd said the creatures will remain at Sea World for several weeks until they recover.

North Pounded by Rain

By The Associated Press

More drought-defying rain and snow were forecast for Northern California today in a one-day follow-up to the powerful storm that slammed into the state with howling winds and gushing showers.

In nearly all districts of the top half of the state showers were predicted into the night. Travelers warnings were issued for blowing snow in the Sierra, expected to descend to 3,500 feet at times. Chains were required on most mountain routes.

PARTS OF THE BAY Area reported thunder, lightning and hail during Wednesday's storm. Some areas reported winds of 40 miles an hour.

The National Weather Service found another wet weather system stationed off the Oregon Coast, suggesting even more precipitation may be on the way beyond the forecast period.

Wednesday's showers dropped rivers of water onto the land. One thunderstorm dumped an inch of rain on Oakland International Airport between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

MARIN COUNTY reported the heaviest rainfall, ranging up to 1½ inches by late afternoon.

Rain-slick roads caused many accidents, including a whopper of a 22-car pileup on Highway 17 between Los Gatos and Santa Cruz just before dawn. Traffic was backed up for an hour and a half.

All the precipitation activity is buttressing notions that the California drought is getting a good working over.

"THERE IS AN AIR of optimism here, but we're trying to be realistic," said Bill Clark Wednesday at the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento.

Clark added the drought is not over, despite the precipitation. Major reservoirs are still very low and rain is needed this month and in February. Of critical importance in gauging the situation will be the depth of the Sierra snowpack next month.

3 Prized Redwoods Lost to Vandalism

PIERCY (AP) — Three of California's prized ancient redwood trees will fall today, the victims of vandalism.

The three giant trees, each reaching some 100 yards above the ground and measuring more than six feet in diameter, were hacked at the base with a chainsaw.

One tree was cut all the way around the base, with only a 2-foot core remaining. The others were slashed randomly with a series of cuts.

JIM HIBBERT, manager of state park lands in the Piercy area, said the trees stood in a grove of old redwoods, ranging in age from 1,500 to 2,000 years. The grove, in the Smithe Redwoods State Reserve, is in northern Mendocino County, some 200 miles north of San Francisco.

One of the trees was more than six feet in diameter and two were some 11 feet across.

The grove is just some 100 feet off California Highway 101.

THE GROVE WAS popular with tourists. Two of the stricken trees had walk-through tunnels carved at the base and were popular settings for photographs.

Hibbert said the damage was irreversible and the trees would be downed today by a private contractor. He said the highway would be closed to traffic for two or three hours.

Despite high winds and the severe damage, the trees were not in danger of falling over and did not pose an immediate threat to traffic, Hibbert said.

THE TREES WERE struck some time between Monday afternoon and Tuesday, he said.

The state parks department is investigating the vandalism and will seek felony criminal charges should anyone be arrested, according to department spokeswoman Gene Cone.

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office was investigating the case, but had no suspects or motive for the vandalism.

Disney World Expansion Set

BURBANK (AP) — Walt Disney Productions has unveiled plans for a major addition to its Walt Disney World complex in Florida.

The project, to be called The Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow (EPCOT), "will be devoted to the advancement of international understanding and the solution of the problems of people everywhere through the communication of ideas," the company said in its 1977 annual report.

Disney said the EPCOT Center would have two major areas, Future World and World Showcase. The company made no estimate of when the new center would be completed.

FUTURE WORLD will include a major introductory theme show called Spaceship Earth, Disney said, accompanied by what the company called a "global marketplace of new ideas" called the Communicore.

Also planned are pavilions dealing with Energy, Life and Health, The Sea, The Land, Transportation and Space.

Dog Ban Delayed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A ban on dogs at most beaches in San Diego would cost $100,000 annually, the City Council has been told.

Beach patrols and communications gear are needed.

A final vote on the proposed ordinance was delayed Wednesday.

State Senate

$150 Tax Cut Gets Support

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A plan to give four million California homeowners property tax cuts of $150 or more appears to be gaining support in the state Senate.

But there was still no decision Wednesday on the plan for across-the-board tax cuts — roughly the same amount for both rich and poor homeowners. Another Democratic caucus was scheduled for today to decide whether to offer the plan to the floor.

STATE

The plan faces a rival bill giving the biggest tax break to poor renters and homeowners.

Woman Dies in Ill-fated Leap

LONG BEACH (AP) — A 22-year-old woman bled to death Wednesday after severing her jugular vein when she crashed through a window to escape a roaring apartment fire that killed Angel Palanco, 2, who was left in her care, police said.

The woman, identified as Paula Archuleta, managed to save her year-old daughter, Angelica, by handing her to a neighbor through a small opening in the ground-floor window before taking her ill-fated leap, fire officials said.

High Court Gets Hearst Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's federal bank robbery conviction, upheld by an appellate court, now heads for the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to reconsider its Nov. 2, 1977, ruling upholding the guilty verdict.

Pipeline Abandonment Opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city attorney's office has formally contested Southern California Gas Co.'s application for state permission to abandon a natural gas pipeline and lease it to Standard Oil of Ohio to transport Alaskan crude oil to Texas.

City Attorney Burt Pines' motion opposing the pipeline abandonment was filed Wednesday at a state Public Utilities Commission hearing into the utility's request to abandon a 120-mile stretch of pipeline running from near Blythe to Moreno, Calif.

Arts Council Director Quits

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Clark Mitze, executive director of the California Arts Council is leaving his job in a conflict over the allocation of grant funds.

Council Chairman Peter Coyote of San Francisco said Wednesday the conflict is between the establishment art forms such as opera, symphony and ballet, and the art forms of a number of minority cultures.

Plans for HB Wedding Ballooning

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Love has ballooned between Pam Dixon and Rick Wingo and they're certain to be high as a kite on their wedding day Saturday, when all the world is invited to witness their aerial marriage over Huntington Beach.

Wingo, 22, of Santa Ana, and his bride-to-be, 18, of Orange, will be wed in a hot air balloon hovering 50 to 100 feet over the oil city's Huntington Center.

THE VAST MAJORITY of the public wedding party which turns out for the 11 a.m. rites must remain ground-bound, however, due to space limitations.

Wingo, the future Mrs. Wingo, Pastor Don Gess, of Huntington Beach's Central Baptist Temple, and balloonist Capt. Michael Caldwell all will be squeezed into the crowded gondola.

Once the big gas bag goes up to the strains of "Here Comes The Bride," (or is it "There Goes The Bride"?), the wedding ceremony will be under way, according to organizers.

ONCE THE BALLOON returns from the dizzying heights overlooking Beach Boulevard and the San Diego Freeway to the more down-to-earth aspects of holy matrimony, a reception will be held.

The public is invited to join the newlyweds and their entourage for a 1 p.m. champagne and wedding cake reception in the center of the shopping mall.

Huntington Center Merchants' Association members have laid in a big stock of the bubbly stuff for the festive occasion and attendants will be pouring as long as it lasts.

THE AIRBORNE wedding chapel takes off from the parking lot near Gibraltar Savings and Loan Association, which wanted to do something different to mark the opening of its new office there.

Somebody thought of Gene's, a bridal shop, and wondered if they knew of any upcoming wedding clients who might want to carry the marriage experience to new heights.

The future Mr. and Mrs. Wingo decided it sounded like fun.

THE YOUNG couple, employed at an industrial plant, will be the third to be married aloft aboard Capt. Caldwell's balloon, which is operated by Aerostatic Rainbow Wagons of Solana Beach.

Union Leader To Pay Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administrator of an Ohio Teamsters union health and welfare fund must pay back $560,000 that the Labor Department said he overcharged the fund in violation of the 1974 federal pension law.

The order to repay the money was part of a consent order announced by the department settling the government's suit against the administrator and trustees of the Ohio Highway Drivers' Welfare Fund.

UNDER THE ORDER FILED in U.S. District Court in Dayton, the administrator, Robert C. Knee Jr., will resign as administrator and sever all relations with the plan.

The order also provides that the fund's six trustees must resign by the end of 1978.

One trustee, William Presser of Cleveland, was forced by the government to resign in 1976 as a trustee of the Teamsters Chicago-based Central States Pension Fund, a separate plan under investigation for alleged mismanagement and ties to organized crime.

THE LABOR DEPARTMENT alleged that fees paid Knee, a Dayton attorney, for administering the Ohio fund "were far greater than the value of the services which Knee actually provided the plan."

Knee received $878,915 in 1974 and $627,746 in 1975 from the fund, set up by trucking companies in the state and by the Ohio Conference of Teamsters. It provides dental, surgical and other medical benefits to about 27,000 Ohio truck drivers and their dependents.

Knee's father, Robert C. Knee Sr., administered the fund in earlier years.

MARK GERTNER, A TOLEDO attorney representing the fund and Knee, issued a statement saying the defendants "did no wrongdoing" and agreed to the consent order to avoid litigation with the government.

Three of the fund's six trustees represent management and three represent the union. Two management trustees — Daniel Gunn of Akron and Walter Brewster — already have resigned, leaving only Robert F. Todd of Columbus, who is expected to step down soon. In addition to Presser, the other union trustees are James M. Feltis of Springfield and Robert Cassidy of Canton.

THE LABOR DEPARTMENT began its investigation of the fund in May 1976 following queries from The Associated Press concerning the administrative fees. Independent pension experts told the AP the fees paid Knee were far in excess of those paid administrators of similar pension and welfare plans.

Under terms of the court order, Knee must repay $560,000 to the fund by Jan. 31 and resign as administrator by Feb. 28. He also is barred from association with two other Ohio Teamster plans he administered.

ALSO, THE WELFARE FUND must sever its relations with its present consulting and accounting firms and Knee's former law firm. "The trustees must undertake a comprehensive review of administrative procedures designed to assure compliance with the pension law in the future," the Labor Department said.

Assistant Labor Secretary Francis X. Burkhardt said the court order "fully accomplishes the department's purpose of protecting the interests of plan participants and beneficiaries."

Loan for Embezzler

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A 19-year-old woman from suburban Colonie has been sentenced to two years probation for embezzling money from the bank where she worked.

And where will the confessed embezzler get the money to repay the bank? From a loan at the First National Bank of Scotia, where the embezzlement occurred.

U.S. District Judge James Foley said he found the arrangement unusual, but accepted it. Wendy Westfall had pleaded guilty to taking $2,150 from the bank between February and August 1976.

She is to pay back the bank in monthly, $61 installments for four years. That comes to $2,928, including interest.

Brown Calls Legislative Tax Session

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

In a wide-ranging address to a joint session of the Legislature, Brown also said he will support "substantial increases" in state funds for mental hospitals and community care programs. But he did not spell out specifics.

The Democratic governor also called for abolition of the business inventory tax, long sought by the business community.

He also said he will ask the Legislature again this year to appropriate funds for new state prisons. A similar Brown request was denied last year.

But Brown said in his "State-of-the State" message that property taxes are "first on the list" of challenges facing California in 1978.

"Homeowners and renters want relief. The rapid economic growth has driven up assessments," Brown said.

"Before this month is out, you should put on my desk a billion dollar property tax relief program."

Brown asked for a tax relief bill containing no increases in other state taxes, and said it should include "stringent controls" on local government spending.

He ordered the special session convened 1½ hours after the conclusion of his speech.

Brown did not give reasons for convening a special session when the Legislature is already convened in its regular session. But that is a parliamentary maneuver that can get around delays required under regular house rules without going to Republicans to get a two-thirds majority.

Bills passed in the regular session don't take effect until Jan. 1, 1979. But a bill passed in a special session takes effect 90 days after that session is adjourned.

Brown's desire for quick action on property tax relief is clearly fueled by a voters' tax initiative on the June ballot which would cut local property taxes by about two-thirds.

The measure, known as the Jarvis Initiative, would cut revenues for cities, counties and local schools by about $7 billion.

Showers Continue Locally

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds

CULVER DRIVE IN IRVINE WASHES OUT OVER SWOLLEN FLOOD CONTROL CHANNEL
Maintenance Workmen Inspect Damage Near Main Street; Culver Was Closed

Coast Highly Damaged

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Residents this morning were trapped in their neighborhoods of the Woodbridge, University and the Ranch developments, which became peninsula communities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street

Teacher Suit Proposed in Saddleback

Saddleback Valley Unified School District Trustee William Kohler wants the district to sue teachers for the cost of last year's strike.

Kohler proposed Wednesday that trustees find out how much the strike cost and bring a suit against the teachers for that amount. The trustees did not discuss his proposal but Kohler said later that he hopes they will consider it during their next meeting.

He explained that the Pasadena school system is suing its teachers for the $330,000 cost of a strike in its schools. Since the courts have said this could be done and the state Supreme Court has denied the teachers' appeal, he said, similar action now is open to other school districts.

He said the court's action now can be considered the law so strikes are illegal.

Legion Chief Sees 'Death' Of Canal Pact

Robert Charles Smith, national commander of the American Legion, predicted Wednesday night in Newport Beach that a wave of protest from "the people" will kill the new Panama Canal treaty.

Smith spoke to a crowd of about 150 Orange Coast Legionnaires and their wives during a dinner sponsored by Newport Harbor Post 291.

He said ratification of the treaty, which would phase out U.S. control of the canal and Canal Zone, is going to be the most pressing issue facing the 95th Congress which reconvenes next week. (Related story, A4.)

The Legion, nationwide has launched a campaign in opposition to the treaty in which "the rank and file members and their friends are going to be sending their input to their congressmen and senators," he said in an interview prior to his speech.

He believes there is great opposition to the treaty among the American people, but because of apathy, that opposition might not be expressed.

Smith said the Legion can provide the means for the public to express its views on the treaty.

"Complacency of the American people is the biggest problem of the United States at this time," he commented. "I'd like to see a resurgence of activity. I hope it won't take another Pearl Harbor to wake 'em up."

Dollar Takes 'Sharp Rise'

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in Europe today following major U.S. government intervention on foreign exchange markets to prop the currency.

But trading was cautious, and many of the market's big operators stayed on the sidelines waiting to see whether the Carter administration would continue its support action.

The British pound was quoted at $1.88 in midafternoon, a drop of nearly 8 cents from its Wednesday close at $1.9590 and down 2 cents fromits opening today at $1.90.

Two young Orange Coast men who didn't hesitate to get involved are credited with saving a 16-year-old Huntington Beach girl from the violent attack of an alleged would-be rapist.

"It was beautiful work. They're heroes," says Huntington Beach police detective Art Droz of the two rescuers, Robert Maness, 23, of Huntington Beach, and Michael Spears, 24, of Costa Mesa.

He spoke of the capture last Thursday by the pair of a suspect who allegedly dragged the teenager off busy Beach Boulevard into a grassy gulch near Adams Avenue.

Lon Dean Vickery, 24, a Huntington Beach short order cook, today remained in jail custody in lieu of $10,000 bail.

He is accused of the attempted rape in a criminal complaint issued earlier this week by the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Investigators say Maness, the initial witness, and Spears to whom he cried for help, pounced on the suspect as he pinned the girl down in a field.

She was not sexually assaulted before they intervened, but her

Fatal Plane Crash Blamed on Weather

By The Associated Press

Torrential rains and gale-force winds flooded streets, tore down trees and power lines and caused a fatal plane crash.

But in the Sierra, the storm brought good news, leaving behind the best snowpack in four years.

By late Wednesday evening, the storm had dropped 1.14 inches of rain on downtown Los Angeles, pushing the season total to 7.18 inches, the weather service said. That is compared with 5.30 inches last year and an average rainfall by this date of 5.02 inches.

The California Department of Transportation and Highway Patrol issued wind warnings along the winding Grapevine section of Interstate 5, with wind speeds of up to 60 mph recorded Wednesday. Despite the snow, rain and wind, few roads were reported closed Wednesday afternoon.

But CalTrans said state Route 2, the Angeles Crest Highway, from Big Pines, to the Route 39 junction had been sealed off because of heavy snow. State Route 99 between Arvin and the junction of state Route 58 in Kern County was closed because of sand on the road. Arvin was severely damaged by hurricane-force winds and blowing sand last month.

By late Wednesday afternoon, the CHP said cars were hydroplaning on most Los Angeles freeways when traveling faster than 35 mph. But speeds rarely exceeded that, since minor accidents and engine floodouts kept traffic slowed down or stopped during the evening rush hour.

Several lanes were flooded as deep as four feet on transition roads from the San Bernardino and Santa Ana freeways, as were lanes in both directions of the Golden State Freeway near Griffith Park, said the CHP.

In the eastern San Gabriel Valley city of San Dimas, mid-afternoon winds of up to 80 mph were responsible for extensive damage to buildings. Winds caused an estimated $50,000 to $100,000 damage to a furniture store after winds blew off part of

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Pendleton Marine Held In 2 Killings

By The Associated Press

A young Marine photographer apparently selected his victims as he went on a shooting-stabbing rampage at Camp Pendleton that left two senior co-workers dead and four others wounded.

Sgt. Earl J. Holley, 24, of Staten Island, N.Y., was arrested Wednesday, sitting with the .22-caliber automatic pistol he allegedly used to kill two senior photographers at the base audio-visual center.

"We have reason to believe he knew who the victims were and he sought them out," said Lt. Col. D.W. Brown, head of the public affairs office at the nation's largest Marine base, 25 miles north of San Diego.

Master Sgt. Daniel P. Hurley, 42, of Uniontown, Pa., and Staff Sgt. Gilbert N. Donham, 38, of Ladelle, Ark., died of multiple gunshot wounds, a Marine spokesman said.

Hurley lived in Oceanside with his Korean-born wife and five-week-old daughter, a Marine spokesman said. He was dead at the scene and Donham died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital.

Other Marines who knew Holley told reporters he felt victimized and ridiculed by other non-commissioned officers in the photography and audio-visual departments and was quoted as saying he would seek revenge.

$4,900 Loot Taken in Irvine Theft

Burglars broke into a home office and an electronics distributing warehouse in Irvine, taking $4,900 in goods in the two crimes reported Tuesday.

Barbara A. Carr, 40, of 4022 Escudero Drive, told police someone broke into her home office and took an adding machine, a calculator, an electric typewriter and a vacuum cleaner. She valued the loss at $1,250.

Burglars stole $3,654 worth of office supplies and electronic equipment from Graymark Enterprises offices and warehouse at 1751 McGaw Ave., company officers said.

Taken were calculators, an alarm clock, a microwave oven, a cassette recorder, an electric typewriter, a radio telephone and an oscilloscope.

Farmers Happy

'Berry Good' Storm Hailed

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

While rains that fell Wednesday and early Thursday are causing some harvesting problems for Orange County farmers, most concede that the much-needed water is doing much more good than harm.

A county agriculture commission spokesman said early today that farmers in the Irvine Ranch area are having some difficulty harvesting cauliflower, celery and broccoli because of mud but that the rains are doing the "strawberries nothing but good."

He said strawberries grown on small acreages throughout the county are not scheduled for harvesting until late March through June. "This rain will leach the root structure and do wonders for the crop," he added.

Fred Keller, Irvine Company's agriculture vice president, said the inch of rain that fell across the company ranch has slowed down cauliflower and celery harvesting and has halted work in broccoli fields.

"We can't get the tractors in," he said, adding that the company's avocado harvest also has been temporarily stopped because of the rain.

However, Keller was happy about the condition of Irvine Co. grazing land. Late last month he had predicted the firm would import hay to feed its 1,000 head of cattle.

He indicated this morning that grasslands are now in good grazing condition.

A Rancho Mission Viejo spokesman said this morning that the latest storm had dropped approximately 1.25 inches of rain on the ranch's 40,000 acres of grazing land.

The county's southernmost ranch is running only 600 head of cattle on its range this year. Gil Aguirre, vice president for ranch operations, said last month that his company is stocking no range beef cattle this year because of drought conditions. Normally, he said, the ranch runs up to 4,000 head of cattle during the winter months.

its roof.

Power outages were reported in Roseméad, San Gabriel, El Monte, Sierra Madre, Monrovia, Glendora, San Dimas, LaVerne and the City of Industry.

A Whittier home suffered an estimated $17,000 damage after it reportedly was set afire by a lightning bolt Wednesday afternoon, a county fire department spokesman said.

Three persons died Wednesday after their Piper PA-22 got lost in heavy storm clouds and crashed in Cleghorn Canyon while en route from Ontario to Chico, authorities said. The single-engine plane crashed about an hour after leaving Ontario Airport, said a Federal Aviation Administration official.

In Sycamore Canyon — left denuded by last July's fire — no serious mudslides or flooding was reported, said Santa Barbara County Flood Control District officials. They noted that following last week's rains, the newly planted canyon region appeared in good shape, with plants sprouting on the scorched ground.

"The ground just seems to be soaking up the rain like a sponge," one official said. "It's kind of surprising."

But in Oceanside near San Diego, five homes on Roberta Lane were reported flooded, with as much as half a foot of mud covering their floors. Residents said a hill behind the homes had been graded by a developer, so when the rains came they washed part of the hill down into the houses below.

A train which runs daily between Escondido and Oceanside was halted by the rains Wednesday about three miles outside of Oceanside.

of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Rainwatcher J. Sherman Denny of Huntington Beach reported 1.09 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.28 for the season and 6.32 for last season at this time. He said an unusually large amount, 4.03 inches, has fallen in Huntington Beach between Dec. 22 and today.

John Gietzen of the Orange County Flood Control District recorded a 24-hour total of .62 inches for Santa Ana. The season total there is 5.64 inches, compared to 4.46 last year.

At Santiago Peak on Saddleback Mountain, he said, today's tally was 1.5 inches, for a season total of 17.2 compared to 11.0 last year.

One inch of rain provides an estimated 10,000 acre feet of replenishment for the county's underground water basin, Orange County Water District officials said today.

to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive; Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

There were no serious injuries reported.

Damage in Saddleback Valley areas was reported slight.

T.J. Meadows, Orange County Water Works District 4 general manager, said rain waters in the San Juan and Trabuco creeks would substantially add to underground water basins.

There were minor mud problems on the Crown Valley and Oso parkways.

clothes had been partially torn off and she was hysterical, police said.

"They saved her a lot of anguish. . .a lot of mental torment. . .a lot of trauma. I talked to her again the other day and she seems to be doing just fine now," said Detective Droz.

The fact Maness, a Huntington Beach resident and advertising major at Golden West College is a normal, red-blooded young man may have saved the high school girl from the horror of violent rape.

"I was driving down Beach Boulevard and I noticed this girl walking alongside the road. I always look at girls," he explained rather shyly.

"Then I saw a man walking rapidly behind her. It just looked funny. I pulled up at the red light and looked in the rear view mirror. I saw him grab her from behind and drag her into the field."

Maness hit the accelerator and, tires squealing, sped into an adjacent service station, yelling to bystander Spears for aid.

Spears, an Orange Coast College engineering major from Costa Mesa, ran to help as Maness confronted the suspect later alleged to be Vickery assaulting the teenager on the ground.

Neither is a physically large man, compared to the suspect.

"Everything happened so fast, it just seemed the right thing to do," says Spears. "It took both of us to get him off her and subdued. I guess we wrestled him for several minutes."

"They really did super work. It was just a lucky thing he saw what he did," said Detective Droz.

Maness is more blunt about what he and Spears did while the shaken teen-aged victim ran back to the service station to call police who found Vickery held captive inside on arrival.

"People bitch about crime, but they don't seem willing to do anything about it," he said.

"I think it's time the public wasn't afraid to get involved."

A 40-year-old man was killed Wednesday night in Orange when he was struck by one car and then run over by a second auto, police reported. They identified the victim as Joseph Ernesto Garcia of Orange.

Clash Erupts Over Beach Craft Shows

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Brass beds on the beach, merchants' fears of competition and a beef between the chamber of commerce and the Laguna Craft Guild sparked an hour and a half debate in council chambers Wednesday night.

In the end, the council voted to allow three craft shows on Main Beach Park this year — but left it up to the chamber and the craft guild to iron out their differences.

The Laguna Craft Guild, which has conducted craft sales in the city for the past decade, asked the City Council for permission to hold eight of the shows this year on the park sidewalks.

But chamber of commerce officials opposed the Sunday craft show dates, claiming the Main Beach Park area should not be used for commercial activities.

The chamber was joined by several merchants who claimed eight shows would create competition from craftsmen who do not pay rent on business buildings or taxes.

Other opponents to the shows criticized the merchandise offered for sale, with one woman saying brass beds strewn on the park, "do not enhance the image of Laguna Beach."

But craft guild president Tom Leslie said his group requested the eight Sunday dates to replace dates on the Festival of Arts ground during the chamber-sponsored Winter Festival.

The craft guild, he said, had a falling out with the chamber last year over fees charged the guild and individual craftsmen. He said the craft guild wanted to get out on its own.

But councilmen appeared more concerned about patching up differences between the two local groups, with Mayor Brand asking Leslie, "Why can't the chamber and guild get along?"

Chamber general manager Frank Buck said last year's Winter Festival went in the red $700, and said the guild still owes the chamber $1,000 in exhibitor fees.

But Leslie said his group did not do that well in sales at the festival last year, "and we just didn't have the $1,000. We are broke. When we get the rest of the money, we'll pay back the chamber."

That, he said, is why the craft

Brown Orders Special Session

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

In a wide-ranging address to a joint session of the Legislature, Brown also said he will support "substantial increases" in state funds for mental hospitals and community care programs. But he did not spell out specifics.

The Democratic governor also called for abolition of the business inventory tax, long sought by the business community.

He also said he will ask the Legislature again this year to appropriate funds for new state prisons. A similar Brown request was denied last year.

But Brown said in his "State-of-the State" message that property taxes are "first on the list" of challenges facing California in 1978.

"Homeowners and renters want relief. The rapid economic growth has driven up assessments," Brown said.

"Before this month is out, you should put on my desk a billion dollar property tax relief program."

Brown asked for a tax relief bill containing no increases in other state taxes, and said it should include "stringent controls" on local government spending.

Laguna Merchants Fight Flood With Sandbags

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Residents this morning were trapped in their neighborhoods of the Woodbridge, University and the Ranch developments, which became peninsula communities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive;

Sunshine Saturday?

Showers Forecast Friday and Sunday

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

HB Council Lashed by Attorney

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

City Attorney Don Bonfa accused the Huntington Beach City Council today of incompetence and hypocrisy and with meddling in the affairs of the city's legal department

Bonfa's verbal attack on city leaders was the latest salvo in the controversy that has followed a physical altercation between Bonfa and Deputy City Attorney John O'Connor Dec. 27.

The city council said Tuesday night it wouldn't allow the use of city funds to pay legal fees that might result from the latest Bonfa-O'Connor imbroglio.

City taxpayers already have paid more than $10,000 in support of the city attorney in a previous grievance case between the two men.

Mayor Ron Pattinson contended that legal expenses in the latest flareup could cost taxpayers up to $100,000 if counsel is provided. The council indicated unanimously that it is unwilling to pick up such a tab.

GROUP PUSHES RECALL EFFORT

Based on results of a recent phone survey, San Clemente Homeowners' Association has decided to continue its efforts to initiate a recall of Mayor Donna Wilkinson and Councilman William Walker.

Of those polled, 73 percent supported recall, 20.5 percent opposed it and 6.5 percent were undecided. See story Page A13.

"We have reason to believe he knew who the victims were and he sought them out," said Lt. Col. D.W. Brown, head of the public affairs office at the nation's largest Marine base, 25 miles north of San Diego.

Hurley lived in Oceanside with his Korean-born wife and five-week-old daughter, a Marine spokesman said. He was dead at the scene and Donham died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital.

Other Marines who knew Holley told reporters he felt victimized and ridiculed by other non-commissioned officers in the photography and audio-visual departments and was quoted as saying he would seek revenge.

Acquaintances said Holley had unclipped an ammunition belt and laid down his pistol, then sat on a table with his legs crossed waiting to be taken after the spree was over.

"He'd done what he had to do," one said.

Trio Held On County Theft Rap

Three men arrested on the roof of a Laguna Niguel gun shop early this morning have been booked into Orange County Jail for commercial burglary of firearms.

Sheriff's deputies, responding to a silent burglar alarm at 1:35 a.m., heard noises on the roof of Saddleback Valley Gun Center, 27601 Forbes Road, and called for reinforcements, a sheriff's watch commander said.

Deputies surrounded the shop while two others, armed with shotguns, climbed the building's fire ladder to confront the suspects beside a roof opening, the watch commander said.

Arrested and booked later were Clarence M. Gammage, 23, of Camp Pendleton, Elston D. Gammage, 21, of Los Angeles and Floyd A. Hopgood, 21, of Camp Pendleton.

Deputies said the three surrendered without resistance, denying they had anything to do with the 21 new rifles, shotguns and pistols tied in a bundle near roof's edge.

The store's roof vent had been pried off with an ax and a rope ladder dropped inside the store, deputies reported. The guns apparently had been tied together inside the shop and pulled to the roof with a rope, the watch commander said.

At Omaha Beach

Carter Vows Europe Safety

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Pointing to more than two centuries of French-American partnership, dating to the American Revolution, Carter told his French audience:

"We're proud of what we've done together. We're sure our friendship will be everlasting."

Brought by bus from Germany for the occasion were troops of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division that lost 2,000 men at Omaha Beach on D-Day.

Dollar Takes 'Sharp Rise'

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in Europe today following major U.S. government intervention on foreign exchange markets to prop the currency.

But trading was cautious, and many of the market's big operators stayed on the sidelines waiting to see whether the Carter administration would continue its support action.

The British pound was quoted at $1.88 in midafternoon, a drop of nearly 8 cents from its Wednesday close at $1.9590 and down 2 cents fromits opening today at $1.90.

El Morro Trailer Gutted

County firemen from Laguna Hills and Emerald Bay worked 30 minutes to extinguish a stubborn fire in a mobile home Wednesday afternoon at El Morro Mobile Home Park. The home, which was vacant at the time of the 3:15 p.m. blaze, is owned by Paul D. Sullivan. Cause of the blaze, which did $13,000 damage to the structure, is under investigation, county fire officials said today.

$105,000 Fund Studied

By ANNE COOPER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The $105,000 made from the sale of property adjacent to Dana Hills High School for a county street right-of-way will be earmarked for the high school, but the school board wants a say on how it's spent.

Capistrano Unified School District trustees voted unanimously Tuesday to accept the county's offer of $105,000 for 1.6 acres. The land will be used for part of the Stonehill Drive extension.

Superintendent Jerome Thornsley recommended to the school board Tuesday that the funds be turned over to Dana Hills administrators and community, to be used at their discretion.

Trustees have said at previous school board meetings that they are looking for a way to fund seats and lighting for the Dana Hills stadium. San Clemente High currently has the only stadium with lights and seating, used by the three district high schools.

Capistrano Valley High in Mission Viejo has had $359,250 set aside from gift monies for a second fully equipped stadium in the district. Funding came from the Mission Viejo Company, which requested that the money be used at a Mission Viejo school. Dana Hills, an older school than Capistrano Valley, is located in Dana Point.

"The administration and support groups at Dana Hills have strong feelings about priorities for the spending of the funds which will accrue to the district with the sale of the Stonehill access property," Thornsley said.

"My recommendation is to give the discretionary choice to the school," he said, "but that is a matter of philosophy.

"I have great confidence in the Dana Hills administrators and parents," said trustee William Thompson of Mission Viejo. "This is really rather a modest sum. I don't have any qualms whatsoever about letting them decide how to spend it.

"As an elected school board trustee, I feel it is my responsibility how district funds are spent," said Edward Westberg of San Clemente. "This is a sale of property paid for by taxpayers from throughout the district.

"I have a fear," Thompson said, "that through a lack of understanding on the part of the board, we might not allow the funds to be spent as parents and administrators wish. This is a two-headed sword."

The amended motion unanimously approved by trustees provides that the $105,000 from the land sale will be earmarked for Dana Hills High School. The school staff will present a recommendation for its expenditure to the district school board.

"I want to offer some assurance that unless their recommendation is way out in left field, we will accept it," said Thompson.

Brown said Holley had sought private talks with his superior officers shortly before Christmas in which he complained of dissatisfaction with his job after being transferred from photography to the audio-visual supply room.

"Specifically, he pressed some grievances toward more senior men" in the photo departments, Brown said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

A Marine account of the rampage said Holley attacked three of his victims at the center, then ran to a nearby photographic laboratory where he shot three other men.

"When he came into the first building, he shot one man and ignored two others, then went to a supply room and stabbed two men, ignoring several other workers — a man and a woman," Brown said.

Holley then went to the photo lab where he opened fire on three non-commissioned officers, again selecting them out of a crowd, the colonel said.

Laguna Girls Injured in Mo-ped Crash

Two sisters on a mo-ped bike were dumped to the pavement near Laguna Beach High School this morning, but both were treated and later released from South Coast Community hospital.

Laguna Beach police officer Terry McAdam said a small sedan, driven by student Tori Lea Peckham, 17, of 31862 Sunset Ave., South Laguna, collided with the mo-ped, spilling its riders onto St. Ann's Drive near Park Avenue.

Sisters Mary Anne Widen, 17, driver of the mo-ped and Lisa Marie Widen, 15, both of 1313 Terrace Way, were treated at the scene for cuts and bruises and transported to the hospital following the 8 a.m. crash.

RAINS DAMAGING. . .

Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

There were no serious injuries reported.

Damage in Saddleback Valley areas was reported slight.

There were minor mud problems on the Crown Valley and Oso parkways. County road department crews were shoveling mud off roads in the Silverado Canyon area, where mud reportedly formed a natural dam across Silverado Creek, causing flooding.

T.J. Meadows, Orange County Water Works District 4 general manager, said rain waters in the San Juan and Trabuco creeks would substantially add to underground water basins.

In Huntington Beach, a home in the north part of the city was struck by lightning which burned a hole through the roof but was quickly doused by firemen stationed just around the corner.

Damage in Newport Beach was slight although city officials said streets in low-lying Balboa Peninsula and Balboa Island remained flooded hours after the storm passed.

Much of Costa Mesa was turned to an asphalt-bottomed sea as many gutterless roads were transformed to channels complete with flooded cars and floating garbage cans on State Avenue near Wilson Street.

A section of 19th Street was wholly under water; Costa Mesa police detoured traffic onto smaller downtown area roads.

Costa Mesa City Hall employees reported about an inch of rain — on the second floor — because drain pipes couldn't handle the fast-falling rain. Firemen drained the backwash with water pumps, confining damage to a soggy carpet.

In San Clemente there was slippage of bluffs along Pacific Coast Highway, one lane of which was closed because of mudslides, from Estacion north to Camino San Clemente.

Firemen in Laguna Beach helped downtown merchants pile sandbags in front of their stores to prevent flooding; it worked, according to reports.

Several small mudslides were reported in that city, one in the 800 block of Bluebird.

its roof.

Power outages were reported in Rosemead, San Gabriel, El Monte, Sierra Madre, Monrovia, Glendora, San Dimas, LaVerne and the City of Industry.

A Whittier home suffered an estimated $17,000 damage after it reportedly was set afire by a lightning bolt Wednesday afternoon, a county fire department spokesman said.

Three persons died Wednesday after their Piper PA-22 got lost in heavy storm clouds and crashed in Cleghorn Canyon while en route from Ontario to Chico, authorities said. The single-engine plane crashed about an hour after leaving Ontario Airport, said a Federal Aviation Administration official.

In Sycamore Canyon — left denuded by last July's fire — no serious mudslides or flooding was reported, said Santa Barbara County Flood Control District officials. They noted that following last week's rains, the newly planted canyon region appeared in good shape, with plants sprouting on the scorched ground.

"The ground just seems to be soaking up the rain like a sponge," one official said. "It's kind of surprising."

But in Oceanside near San Diego, five homes on Roberta Lane were reported flooded, with as much as half a foot of mud covering their floors.

1 Candidate Rejected in Laguna Race

A check with the county Registrar of Voters shows that petitions from 11 of the 12 Laguna Beach council candidates qualify them for the March 7 election.

But the petition of taxi driver Tom Adams was disqualified, according to City Clerk Verna Rollinger, who said the former candidate did not have the required 20 signatures of qualified registered city voters.

Mrs. Rollinger said the order in which candidates will appear on the city ballot has also been determined, as the result of an impartial lottery.

Laguna Beach candidates, in order of appearance on the ballot include:

guild needs eight days to conduct their shows.

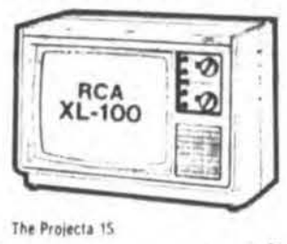

Councilmen voted to allow three days of craft shows at Main Beach Park without specifying which dates the guild may use. That is to be determined in a meeting between the chamber, craft guild and city officials.

The council did not preclude the possibility that the guild may have other craft shows — but stipulated that Main Beach Park is off-limits for future shows, indicating that the group might use Forest Avenue, the festival grounds or a site in the southern portion of town.

Cities' Elections May Bring Change

The county's three most southerly cities — Laguna Beach, San Clemente and San Juan Capistrano — face March 7 city council elections in which new majorities are possible and that might mean major changes of direction in those municipalities.

Laguna Beach has 11 non-incumbent candidates vying with Councilwoman Phyllis Sweeney for three contested city council seats. Mrs. Sweeney has said she almost didn't run for re-election, but changed her mind claiming she sees no candidates who would continue the current city council's policies, which she describes as protecting the city's scenic beauty and unique population mix.

In San Clemente, Councilman Tony DiGiovanni faces 13 non-incumbent candidates in the race for three city council seats. DiGiovanni, the only Democrat on the city council, has said his Republican friends tell him he is more conservative than any of his fellow councilmen.

The present city council has taken a traditionally conservative stance on many issues, fighting state and federal "interference" in what city councilmen say is city business — even when their position has meant turning down tempting federal funds.

Ten candidates are running for San Juan's three contested city council seats, including incumbent John Sweeney.

A new alliance is possible on San Juan's city council, which has split 3-2 with the majority favoring growth management and agricultural preservation measures. A new slate of councilmen might reverse much of what the current city council has hailed as progress.

The large number of residents in the three cities who have gone through the filing procedure to become candidates reflects high interest in the March elections.

Changes in government, when they come, aren't always for the better, but their possibility nearly always makes for exciting elections.

Preparing for Growth

San Clemente's population will shift dramatically in the coming decade as the Forster, Reeves and Visbeek Ranches in northeastern San Clemente are built out in thousands of new homes.

Grading already is under way on the Forster Ranch, located east of the San Diego Freeway and south of the Estrella (previously) Shorecliffs golf course.

By 1984, 3,942 new homes are to be built on 2,170 acres there — all that remains of the great ranch which once spread from El Toro to Oceanside.

A great deal of planning has gone into another area which was once part of the Forster Ranch — Mission Viejo. But San Clemente's acres of new homes will not be a planned community like Mission Viejo; they will be part of the city of San Clemente.

While it can be argued that public facilities and services should be centrally located, relocating them as the population shifts will be no advantage if it leaves a depressed downtown area.

Conscientious monitoring of new housing projects by San Clemente citizens may help the city avoid growing pains experienced by other Orange County cities.

Boyd/Cat's Eyes

By L.M. BOYD

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relationship to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Was just 99 years ago that Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen brought the first bowl of goldfish into this country from Japan.

Q. "What's the most popular new car color now?"
A. Blue. With white second. Then silver.

Four out of five of the people in Canada who speak French speak only French.

Reports of child abuse jump considerably during the winter months, sad to report.

What qualifies archaeologist Iris Cornelia Love for membership in the Proper Job Club is the fact that she seven years ago discovered the whereabouts of the long lost statue of the love goddess Aphrodite. She'd put in a lot of time around the Mediterranean diggings in search of it, but that's not where she found Praxiteles' masterpiece. In the basement of the British Museum in London is where.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" All right.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middleage spread.

Fifteen percent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology, is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.

Truck 'Crackdown' Questioned

Has the California Highway Patrol cracked down on speeding trucks? Its recent report of more than 5,000 citations having been issued to speeding truck drivers during the month of October suggests that, at long last, the complaints of motorists have seeped through to CHP Commissioner Glen Craig.

Almost from the inception of the unrealistic 55 mph speed limit, the motoring public has been pleading for protection from the behemoths of the highways which thunder down from on high on freeway travellers, tailgating and otherwise terrorizing drivers who have the temerity to stand in their way by observing the speed limit.

Last summer Craig announced a "crackdown" on the trucks and the October report tended to show it was being carried out. And, although the activity shown amounted to barely more than one truck stopped during the month by each state traffic officer, it still would be significant had the target indeed been those roaring beasts of the road about whom the public has been complaining.

BUT AN examination of the facts cast some doubt about the "crackdown." While there are only about 90,000 tractors registered in California an estimated 300,000 such units enter the state each year. These are the motorized components which pull the huge freight trailers seen rumbling up and down the freeways.

And, although it is not known how much of the time these trucks, out of state and home based, are actually on California highways, the relatively small number compared to the total of passenger cars, might make 5,000 speed citations seem a heavy enforcement effort.

However, CHP sources disclose that the count was not limited to the type of trucks which come instantly to the mind of the motorist but included a myriad of other types. There are nearly 3 million "trucks" registered in the state. These include panels, pickups and station wagons, which were not counted, although many two-axle and other small trucks were. So the total of 5,000 is no way indicative of the CHP effort against the mammoths about which the public complains.

"You're straddling the wrong camel."

IN COMPARING the CHP record on speed citations to trucks against the overall of 89,052 issued to vehicles of all types it might still seem a good performance, being more than 5 percent, especially when the number of trucks is matched against the near 12 million passenger vehicles registered.

But comparing total registrations is a false measurement. With rare exceptions passenger cars stand idle far more than they are in use and many of them never or rarely venture out on the freeways. Not so with the monster trucks whose high costs make it essential to get the highest usage possible. The only real measurement then would be a comparison of mileage travelled on state highways by trucks versus passenger cars.

One thing the report clearly revealed is that speed occupies nearly 50 percent of the emphasis of the CHP for the total number of tickets written for violations of all types was only 195,194.

ALSO misleading is the total of traffic officers on the CHP, reported as 4,165. The five-day week reduces the number available for duty to about 3,000 while sick leave, courtroom time and other causes further erode the number to where there are probably no more than 2,000 reporting for duty on any given day to cover a 24-hour period. On certain holidays, when super efforts are made, the patrol may field as many as 1,000 at one time but overtime earned then reduces the CHP strength on subsequent days.

It is this force which must not only cover both sides of the state's 3,794 miles of freeway and more than 11,000 additional miles of state highway, but also thousands of miles of county roads.

Is Remedial Education Money Wasted?

WASHINGTON — Every few months from one section of the country or another comes fresh news confirming the fact that many children pass in, through and out of school without learning to read or figure.

So parents and other taxpayers demand that kids who didn't learn anything be held back, a practice that was given up some years ago when somebody noticed that the first grade at P.S. 40 had 11 six-footers in it.

Being a 14-year-old Big Stoop in a class of otherwise bright and proficient 10-year-old chums is thought to cause anxiety and inferiority feelings in the larger, laggard scholar who may then wap his little buddies around in a paroxysm of misplaced resentment.

To get around this problem it's being suggested that kids who don't even know the easier part of the multiplication table be shunted off to special classes. . .a scholastic chain gang where they will crack their rock-like heads learning that 6 x 8 equals 48. If they don't learn to read, as they probably won't, at least they will be failing out of sight. And no more diplomas for the boneheads; henceforth all they get is a certificate of attendance.

BEHIND all this concern and activity are some propositions which may or may not be true. Proposition one is that schools are to teach reading and writing; proposition two is that when they don't it's the teachers' fault and the taxpayers are getting cheated; number three is that if you don't have an abnormally depressed I.Q. you can and you must learn to read and do elementary arithmetic.

Of course, all depends on number three. We know from ourselves and our friends it doesn't follow that if you can read you can count. Some of us are whizzes at numbers and can barely read; the reverse is even more common. As for the goal of a totally literate society, while it may be possible to teach everyone but the mentally handicapped how to read, it also may be very expensive. Somewhere we hit the law of diminishing returns.

THE COST in teachers, remedial reading instructors, counselors and therapists, physical and psychological, to drive Nasty Nate and Snide Sally into learning how to read is much too expensive. The society isn't going to get its money back on that investment.

Is it necessary to teach everybody how to read and figure? What about using the millions that math instruction is going to cost us to give away hand-held calculators to all those who can't count but signify a desire to do comparison shopping at the supermarket? If there is no readily apparent reason why so much money should be spent so that everybody — literally everybody — in our society, can do long division, the need for 100 percent literacy is not apparent either.

Work is another question. It is generally agreed on the basis of the scantiest information that you can't hold down a job if you lack these two basic skills. If that's so, the reason has less to do with the work itself than with how the job requirements are set up. Why does a bus driver in an exact-change-only system have to know how to add and subtract?

Teachers who are supposed to "larn" the recalcitrant dunces don't care for proficiency exams; they prefer to speak of instructing their obtuse charges in such things as "life coping skills," an odious expression hatched in the gastrointestinal tract of a professor of ed-psych no doubt. The danger is that pupils will be made to pass an exam in this amorphous subject, and those flunking life coping will be adjudged socially incompetent at an even higher financial cost to the community.

All children must go to school. There is nothing else to be done with them once they escape infant exposures, but all children don't have to learn while they're there. For some, romping about with the coping skills teacher is the answer, while the rest of us acknowledge defeat and admit that occasionally high standards aren't the best standards.

Congressmen Preparing for Televised Sessions

To the Editor:

Many thanks for your kind remarks regarding my efforts in obtaining a one-year moratorium on the relocation of federally protected witnesses to Southern California. I am pleased by the Justice Department's decision, and I plan to watch carefully when a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducts hearings on the witness protection program sometime next year.

EARLY this month, you editorially mentioned the "salutary effect" of television coverage on the Florida state legislature and spoke of congressional debate on the subject of television and radio access to the floor of the House. On Oct. 27, the House approved by a vote of 342 to 44 House Resolution 866, which provides for television and radio coverage of floor proceedings. The cameras and cable are being installed right now, and I expect that the TV and radio networks will be taking full advantage of this progressive move by the Congress when we reconvene in January.

The American people deserve to see firsthand how their government operates. They will not be disappointed in the performance of the House, I am certain.

MARK W. HANNAFORD

Lovely Indeed

To the Editor:

I read your editorial entitled "A Lovely Present," (about the Festival of Lights boat parade) and indeed it was. I am an expatriate, newly arrived from the vast wasteland of the northeast, a place founded by the Dutch in 1623 and called Manhattan.

I used to enjoy New York City during Christmas. It was also a fairyland and sparkled — Fifth Avenue, Park Avenue, the lights, the stores, Radio City, and the people — even amidst the hustle, bustle, pushing and shoving there was the friendliness of Christmas.

But the Festival of Lights boat parade was absolutely lovely. I enjoyed this Christmas in Southern California and love my new home. Thank you, Southland.

ROBERT GORDON

Meddling Lesson

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "Campus Meddling," Dec. 20, shows how far government strings twist. Private Hillsdale College, that has never taken government funds, is being harassed for having students that do.

The students may be getting them as veterans, for disability pay, pensions or any other individual reason. But if they choose to use them for education instead of clothes, vacations or beer, HEW, the Health, Education and Welfare Department, says the educators are the recipients of the federal aid and so are subject to their government control.

It is a good warning, to keep hand off government strings, that the cities should heed. To touch those strings, no matter how lightly, is to be entangled in government's mystic maze.

GOLDIE JOSEPH

Too Casual?

To the Editor:

It occurred to me today that perhaps some of us are responsible for the ugly treatment some men are bestowing upon us. How long have we women (I was once) been so casual with our bodies and ourselves? How long have we chased after men and willingly encouraged an affair?

I am shocked always by the women here who dress so lewdly. Is it an accident or unconscious copying of others? Or is it a call out to men. It may be ignorance that makes a girl or woman dress so immodestly. Or is it a bold statement of her desire? A desire to be loved.

How many women think they can have love if a man physically loves them or is attracted to them? Finally, is it a bold negating of long-standing values naturally attached to women such as modesty, sweetness, humility, quietness and consideration?

Women will have to examine their everyday actions and dressing. It seems to me that men are still the same: a woman attracts them. Women are lucky. Let us enjoy the role, but be aware of what it entails.

50 Birds Killed By Slick

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A mysterious oil slick has killed about 50 birds, mostly sea ducks, and harmed about 25 others in San Diego Bay, the state Game and Fish Department says.

The Coast Guard Marine Safety office said patrol boats dispatched after the dead birds were discovered found "a light sheen" of oil on the water on the Coronado side of the bay.

OFFICIALS said the source of the oil was undetermined but no spills had been reported.

They speculated that oil from street surfaces may have been washed into the bay by heavy rain. But a Coast Guard spokesman said it was "hard to believe this would be enough to kill the birds."

FRANK TODD, curator of birds at Sea World, said a light, high-grade diesel oil was responsible for the deaths. He noted the birds "displayed all the symptoms of such a spill."

The injured birds were taken to Sea World after Project Wildlife volunteers washed off the slick and placed them in heating pads.

Todd said the creatures will remain at Sea World for several weeks until they recover.

Disney World Expansion Set

BURBANK (AP) — Walt Disney Productions has unveiled plans for a major addition to its Walt Disney World complex in Florida.

The project, to be called The Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow (EPCOT), "will be devoted to the advancement of international understanding and the solution of the problems of people everywhere through the communication of ideas," the company said in its 1977 annual report.

Disney said the EPCOT Center would have two major areas, Future World and World Showcase. The company made no estimate of when the new center would be completed.

FUTURE WORLD will include a major introductory theme show called Spaceship Earth, Disney said, accompanied by what the company called a "global marketplace of new ideas" called the Communicore.

Also planned are pavilions dealing with Energy, Life and Health, The Sea, The Land, Transportation and Space.

North Pounded by Rain

By The Associated Press

More drought-defying rain and snow were forecast for Northern California today in a one-day follow-up to the powerful storm that slammed into the state with howling winds and gushing showers.

In nearly all districts of the top half of the state showers were predicted into the night. Travelers warnings were issued for blowing snow in the Sierra, expected to descend to 3,500 feet at times. Chains were required on most mountain routes.

PARTS OF THE BAY Area reported thunder, lightning and hail during Wednesday's storm. Some areas reported winds of 40 miles an hour.

The National Weather Service found another wet weather system stationed off the Oregon Coast, suggesting even more precipitation may be on the way beyond the forecast period.

Wednesday's showers dropped rivers of water onto the land. One thunderstorm dumped an inch of rain on Oakland International Airport between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

MARIN COUNTY reported the heaviest rainfall, ranging up to 1½ inches by late afternoon.

Rain-slick roads caused many accidents, including a whopper of a 22-car pileup on Highway 17 between Los Gatos and Santa Cruz just before dawn. Traffic was backed up for an hour and a half.

All the precipitation activity is buttressing notions that the California drought is getting a good working over.

"THERE IS AN AIR of optimism here, but we're trying to be realistic," said Bill Clark Wednesday at the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento.

Clark added the drought is not over, despite the precipitation. Major reservoirs are still very low and rain is needed this month and in February. Of critical importance in gauging the situation will be the depth of the Sierra snowpack next month.

3 Prized Redwoods Lost to Vandalism

PIERCY (AP) — Three of California's prized ancient redwood trees will fall today, the victims of vandalism.

The three giant trees, each reaching some 100 yards above the ground and measuring more than six feet in diameter, were hacked at the base with a chainsaw.

One tree was cut all the way around the base, with only a 2-foot core remaining. The others were slashed randomly with a series of cuts.

JIM HIBBERT, manager of state park lands in the Piercy area, said the trees stood in a grove of old redwoods, ranging in age from 1,500 to 2,000 years. The grove, in the Smithe Redwoods State Reserve, is in northern Mendocino County, some 200 miles north of San Francisco.

One of the trees was more than six feet in diameter and two were some 11 feet across.

The grove is just some 100 feet off California Highway 101.

THE GROVE WAS popular with tourists. Two of the stricken trees had walk-through tunnels carved at the base and were popular settings for photographs.

Hibbert said the damage was irreversible and the trees would be downed today by a private contractor. He said the highway would be closed to traffic for two or three hours.

Despite high winds and the severe damage, the trees were not in danger of falling over and did not pose an immediate threat to traffic, Hibbert said.

THE TREES WERE struck some time between Monday afternoon and Tuesday, he said.

The state parks department is investigating the vandalism and will seek felony criminal charges should anyone be arrested, according to department spokeswoman Gene Cone.

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office was investigating the case, but had no suspects or motive for the vandalism.

Dog Ban Delayed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A ban on dogs at most beaches in San Diego would cost $100,000 annually, the City Council has been told.

Beach patrols and communications gear are needed.

A final vote on the proposed ordinance was delayed Wednesday.

State Senate

$150 Tax Cut Gets Support

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A plan to give four million California homeowners property tax cuts of $150 or more appears to be gaining support in the state Senate.

But there was still no decision Wednesday on the plan for across-the-board tax cuts — roughly the same amount for both rich and poor homeowners. Another Democratic caucus was scheduled for today to decide whether to offer the plan to the floor.

STATE

The plan faces a rival bill giving the biggest tax break to poor renters and homeowners.

Woman Dies in Ill-fated Leap

LONG BEACH (AP) — A 22-year-old woman bled to death Wednesday after severing her jugular vein when she crashed through a window to escape a roaring apartment fire that killed Angel Palanco, 2, who was left in her care, police said.

The woman, identified as Paula Archuleta, managed to save her year-old daughter, Angelica, by handing her to a neighbor through a small opening in the ground-floor window before taking her ill-fated leap, fire officials said.

High Court Gets Hearst Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's federal bank robbery conviction, upheld by an appellate court, now heads for the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to reconsider its Nov. 2, 1977, ruling upholding the guilty verdict.

Pipeline Abandonment Opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city attorney's office has formally contested Southern California Gas Co.'s application for state permission to abandon a natural gas pipeline and lease it to Standard Oil of Ohio to transport Alaskan crude oil to Texas.

City Attorney Burt Pines' motion opposing the pipeline abandonment was filed Wednesday at a state Public Utilities Commission hearing into the utility's request to abandon a 120-mile stretch of pipeline running from near Blythe to Moreno, Calif.

Arts Council Director Quits

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Clark Mitze, executive director of the California Arts Council is leaving his job in a conflict over the allocation of grant funds.

Council Chairman Peter Coyote of San Francisco said Wednesday the conflict is between the establishment art forms such as opera, symphony and ballet, and the art forms of a number of minority cultures.

Brown Calls Legislative Tax Session

$1 Billion Relief Bill Tops Agenda

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

In a wide-ranging address to a joint session of the Legislature, Brown also said he will support "substantial increases" in state funds for mental hospitals and community care programs. But he did not spell out specifics.

The Democratic governor also called for abolition of the business inventory tax, long sought by the business community.

He also said he will ask the Legislature again this year to appropriate funds for new state prisons. A similar Brown request was denied last year.

But Brown said in his "State-of-the State" message that property taxes are "first on the list" of challenges facing California in 1978.

"Homeowners and renters want relief. The rapid economic growth has driven up assessments," Brown said.

"Before this month is out, you should put on my desk a billion dollar property tax relief program."

Brown asked for a tax relief bill containing no increases in other state taxes, and said it should include "stringent controls" on local government spending.

He ordered the special session convened 1½ hours after the conclusion of his speech.

Brown did not give reasons for convening a special session when the Legislature is already convened in its regular session. But that is a parliamentary maneuver that can get around delays required under regular house rules without going to Republicans to get a two-thirds majority.

Bills passed in the regular session don't take effect until Jan. 1, 1979. But a bill passed in a special session takes effect 90 days after that session is adjourned.

Brown's desire for quick action on property tax relief is clearly fueled by a voters' tax initiative on the June ballot which would cut local property taxes by about two-thirds.

The measure, known as the Jarvis Initiative, would cut revenues for cities, counties and local schools by about $7 billion.

Brown's fourth annual address to the Legislature was a few seconds short of 10 minutes long, which continued Brown's tradition of brief formal speeches.

In that time, Brown touched briefly on a wide range of issues. But he gave details of few items.

Brown described 1977 as "a good year" in which California enjoyed "an economic boom unparallelled in the nation.

"This is California — a good environment, a healthy economy and a commitment" to social justice.

Brown said in addition to requesting funds to build new prisons, his administration will also be cracking down on prison gangs.

Reaction to the speech was predictable. Democrats praised it and Republicans were generally critical.

Student Pair Capture Rape Suspect

'They're Heroes' Says Police Detective

HE GOT INVOLVED
Huntington Beach's Maness

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two young Orange Coast men who didn't hesitate to get involved are credited with saving a 16-year-old Huntington Beach girl from the violent attack of an alleged would-be rapist.

"It was beautiful work They're heroes," says Huntington Beach police detective Art Droz of the two rescuers, Robert Maness, 23, of Huntington Beach, and Michael Spears, 24, of Costa Mesa

He spoke of the capture last Thursday by the pair of a suspect who allegedly dragged the teenager off busy Beach Boulevard into a grassy gulch near Adams Avenue

Lon Dean Vickery, 24, a Huntington Beach short order cook, today remained in jail custody in lieu of $10,000 bail

He is accused of the attempted rape in a criminal complaint issued earlier this week by the Orange County District Attorney's Office

Investigators say Maness, the initial witness, and Spears to whom he cried for help, pounced on the suspect as he pinned the girl down in a field

She was not sexually assaulted before they intervened, but her clothes had been partially torn off and she was hysterical, police said

"They saved her a lot of anguish a lot of mental torment. a lot of trauma. I talked to her again the other day and she seems to be doing just fine now," said Detective Droz.

The fact Maness, a Huntington Beach resident and advertising major at Golden West College is a normal, red-blooded young man may have saved the high school girl from the horror of violent rape.

"I was driving down Beach Boulevard and I noticed this girl walking alongside the road. I always look at girls," he explained rather shyly.

"Then I saw a man walking rapidly behind her. It just looked funny. I pulled up at the red light and looked in the rear view mirror. I saw him grab her from behind and drag her into the field."

Maness hit the accelerator and, tires squealing, sped into an adjacent service station, yelling to bystander Spears for aid.

Spears, an Orange Coast College engineering major from Costa Mesa, ran to help as Maness confronted the suspect later alleged to be Vickery assaulting the teenager on the ground.

Neither is a physically large man, compared to the suspect.

"Everything happened so fast, it just seemed the right thing to do," says Spears. "It took both of us to get him off her and subdued. I guess we wrestled him for several minutes."

"They really did super work. It was just a lucky thing he saw what he did," said Detective Droz.

Maness is more blunt about what he and Spears did while the shaken teen-aged victim ran back to the service station to call police who found Vickery held captive inside on arrival.

"People bitch about crime, but they don't seem willing to do anything about it," he said.

"I think it's time the public wasn't afraid to get involved."

Hail, Floods, Lightning Reported

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Showers Forecast Friday and Sunday

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy

People's Protest

Legion Chief Sees Canal Pact 'Death'

Robert Charles Smith, national commander of the American Legion, predicted Wednesday night in Newport Beach that a wave of protest from "the people" will kill the new Panama Canal treaty.

Smith spoke to a crowd of about 150 Orange Coast Legionnaires and their wives during a dinner sponsored by Newport Harbor Post 291.

He said ratification of the treaty, which would phase out U.S. control of the canal and Canal Zone, is going to be the most pressing issue facing the 95th Congress which reconvenes next week. (Related story, A4.)

The Legion, nationwide has launched a campaign in opposition to the treaty in which "the rank and file members and their friends are going to be sending their input to their congressmen and senators," he said in an interview prior to his speech.

He believes there is great opposition to the treaty among the American people, but because of apathy, that opposition might not be expressed.

Smith said the Legion can provide the means for the public to express its views on the treaty.

"Complacency of the American people is the biggest problem of the United States at this time," he commented.

Dollar Takes 'Sharp Rise'

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in Europe today following major U.S. government intervention on foreign exchange markets to prop the currency.

But trading was cautious, and many of the market's big operators stayed on the sidelines waiting to see whether the Carter administration would continue its support action.

The British pound was quoted at $1.88 in midafternoon, a drop of nearly 8 cents from its Wednesday close at $1.9590 and down 2 cents from its opening today at $1.90.

Carter Promises European Freedom

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

KICKED 'CAT' RAISES STINK

DURAND, Ill. (AP) — Jack Yaun walked out to his barn in early morning dimness and saw in the doorway that same old stray cat that had been hanging around.

"Well, I up and gave it one hell of a good kick," Yaun said Wednesday.

Yaun failed to see the white stripe down the animal's back.

The skunk retaliated.

Farmers Happy

'Berry Good' Storm Hailed

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

While rains that fell Wednesday and early Thursday are causing some harvesting problems for Orange County farmers, most concede that the much-needed water is doing much more good than harm.

A county agriculture commission spokesman said early today that farmers in the Irvine Ranch area are having some difficulty harvesting cauliflower, celery and broccoli because of mud but that the rains are doing the "strawberries nothing but good."

He said strawberries grown on small acreages throughout the county are not scheduled for harvesting until late March through June. "This rain will leach the root structure and do wonders for the crop," he added.

Fred Keller, Irvine Company's agriculture vice president, said the inch of rain that fell across the company ranch has slowed down cauliflower and celery harvesting and has halted work in broccoli fields.

"We can't get the tractors in," he said, adding that the company's avocado harvest also has been temporarily stopped because of the rain.

However, Keller was happy about the condition of Irvine Co. grazing land. Late last month he had predicted the firm would import hay to feed its 1,000 head of cattle.

He indicated this morning that grasslands are now in good grazing condition.

A Rancho Mission Viejo spokesman said this morning that the latest storm had dropped approximately 1.25 inches of rain on the ranch's 40,000 acres of grazing land.

The county's southernmost ranch is running only 600 head of cattle on its range this year. Gil Aguirre, vice president for ranch operations, said last month that his company is stocking no range beef cattle this year because of drought conditions. Normally, he said, the ranch runs up to 4,000 head of cattle during the winter months.

downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Rainwatcher J. Sherman Denny of Huntington Beach reported 1.09 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.28 for the season and 6.32 for last season at this time. He said an unusually large amount, 4.03 inches, has fallen in Huntington Beach between Dec. 22 and today.

munities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive; Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

In Huntington Beach, a home in the north part of the city was struck by lightning which burned a hole through the roof but was quickly doused by firemen stationed just around the corner.

Damage in Newport Beach was slight although city officials said streets in low-lying Balboa Peninsula and Balboa Island remained flooded hours after the storm passed.

Much of Costa Mesa was turned to an asphalt-bottomed sea as many gutterless roads were transformed to channels complete with flooded cars and floating garbage cans on State Avenue near Wilson Street.

A section of 19th Street was wholly under water; Costa Mesa police detoured traffic onto smaller downtown area roads.

Costa Mesa City Hall employees reported about an inch of rain — on the second floor — because drain pipes couldn't handle the fast-falling rain. Firemen drained the backwash with water pumps, confining damage to a soggy carpet.

In San Clemente there was slippage of bluffs along Pacific Coast Highway, one lane of which was closed because of mudslides, from Estacion north to Camino San Clemente.

Firemen in Laguna Beach helped downtown merchants pile sandbags in front of their stores to prevent flooding; it worked, according to reports.

Several small mudslides were reported in that city, one in the 800 block of Bluebird.

Southern California Edison Co. reported power blackouts Wednesday afternoon, and early today, in Fountain Valley, Newport Beach, Costa Mesa and Irvine.

In Fountain Valley, an underground cable failed at 2 a.m. today, affecting 80 customers in the area of San Lorenzo west of Euclid Street. Power was expected to be restored this morning.

The Newport-Costa Mesa area was hit with a brief power outage at the onset of the storm at noon Wednesday. About 1,950 homes on 16th and 17th streets between Newport Boulevard and Westcliff Drive were without electricity for 25 minutes after a palm frond was blown by winds into a high voltage line.

KING TUT FANS LINE UP FOR TICKETS AT COSTA MESA'S SOUTH COAST PLAZA
Ducats for Egyptian Art Show in Los Angeles Go Fast on Orange Coast

Crowds Hit by Tutmania

By RAYMOND ESTRADA JR.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

About 45,000 Orange Coast residents flocked to six area stores this week, braving long lines and rain to buy most of the available tickets for the treasures of Tutankhamun Egyptian art exhibit in Los Angeles.

Orange Coast store managers said the culture-seeking crowds were of all ages and very well mannered as they waited to buy the tickets for the four-month exhibit opening Feb. 15 at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Store officials said most of the Tut tickets were sold Tuesday.

The Orange Coast stores were allotted between 7,000 and 9,000 tickets each.

Huntington Beach May Company and Broadway department store officials said several hundred ticket buyers waited in the rain for several hours Tuesday and Wednesday before receiving the tickets. Lines also were in evidence at Broadway, May Co. and Bullock's ticket outlets in Laguna Hills and Costa Mesa.

Store officials said that by Wednesday afternoon only "singles" and tickets for exhibit times during the week were still on sale. Most tickets for weekend exhibit times were sold during the first few hours Tuesday.

Store officials at the May Company, Broadway and Bullocks said they expected all the Egyptian exhibit ducats to be sold by today.

Officials at the Los Angeles museum expect about 1.3 million Southern Californians to view the precious artifacts.

Some three million people have seen the exhibit in Washington, D.C., Chicago and New Orleans where it closes Jan. 15.

The show also will travel to Seattle, New York and San Francisco.

Stamp Burglaries Told

Huntington Reports $45,000 in Theft Losses

Huntington Beach police said today they believe a stamp collection burglary ring has struck three times in their city and may soon hit other Orange County collectors.

Police Detective Marty O'Reilly said stamps valued at $45,000 have been taken from three Huntington Beach collectors during the past two weeks.

O'Reilly has advised all area stamp collectors to lock up their treasures because the thieves are using a mailing list of philatelist club members to select their victims.

Police believe the thieves found a stamp collectors club mailing list at the home of their first victim who lived in a mobile home park.

O'Reilly declined to identify the victims because that information would tip off other burglars as to where to find the valuable stamps, he said.

The first victim, a 72-year-old former McDonnell Douglas Company employee, told police an old mailing list of other stamp collectors was taken in the Dec. 23 burglary.

The burglary victim told police the mailing list could tip off the burglar as to where other prominent stamp collectors in the area are living.

The name and address of the second victim, a 74-year-old trailer park resident in another part of the city, was on that list.

O'Reilly said the stamp thieves struck while the victim was away from his home. As in the first theft, a door was pried open to gain entry.

In the second break in, which occurred Dec. 31, a mink coat was also taken. Despite this, O'Reilly said he believes it was the work of the same stamp burglars.

"They were more selective in the stamps they stole the second time," O'Reilly said.

The third stamp theft occurred Monday while the 41-year-old victim was away at the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

NB Doctor Eyes Governor's Post

Dr. Eugene Atherton, the Newport Beach physician known for his authorship of environmentally oriented initiative campaigns, will be seeking the Democratic nomination for governor.

Atherton has until Feb. 23, to get the signatures of 10,000 registered Democrats in order to qualify as a candidate for the June primary election.

Otherwise, a spokesman for the Orange County Registrar of Voters said, he will have to pay a $982 filing fee to get his name on the Democratic ballot in June.

Atherton's last try for elective office came in 1976 when he ran against Tom Riley for the Fifth District seat on the county Board of Supervisors. He finished a distant third to Riley and Max Binswanger.

Atherton, who has associated himself with a variety of causes generally aimed at protecting the county's natural environment, has written a handful of initiative peititions which have been presented to Orange Coast area voters in the past two years.

One, which qualified in Newport Beach and was enacted by the city council, calls for the dedication of five acres of park land per 1,000 residents of new developments. The city previously required two acres per 1,000 people.

A similar measure also authored by Atherton has qualified for the March ballot in San Clemente.

In Newport Beach, Atherton is currently working on a petition requiring dedication of access to bluff tops alongside the Newport Bay or the ocean.

He is also circulating another petition he wrote which calls for a county ordinance requiring increased park land dedication from developers and would provide incentives for low-cost housing.

Teacher Suit Proposed in Saddleback

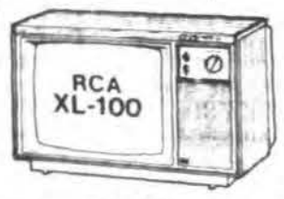

Saddleback Valley Unified School District Trustee William Kohler wants the district to sue teachers for the cost of last year's strike.

Kohler proposed Wednesday that trustees find out how much the strike cost and bring a suit against the teachers for that amount. The trustees did not discuss his proposal but Kohler said later that he hopes they will consider it during their next meeting.

He explained that the Pasadena school system is suing its teachers for the $330,000 cost of a strike in its schools. Since the courts have said this could be done and the state Supreme Court has denied the teachers' appeal, he said, similar action now is open to other school districts.

He said the court's action now can be considered the law so strikes are illegal. In the past, teachers have contended that their strikes are not covered by the law because they're not specifically mentioned in the law.

Time to Throw Hats in the Ring

One week from today, filing will open for residents of Newport Beach who want to run for the four city council seats which will be the subject of the April 11 municipal election.

To qualify for the city council, a candidate must be a registered voter residing in his own district among the four under contention this year — the first, third, fourth or sixth.

The first district takes in the Peninsula and Lido Isle; the third is Newport Heights, Bayshores and Linda Isle; the fourth covers the Baycrest-Mariners-Dover Shores area and includes The Bluffs; the sixth takes in Irvine Terrace and old Corona del Mar.

Filing opens Jan. 12 and closes Feb. 2 except in districts where the incumbent does not file. In those districts, filing will remain open another five days.

There is no cost to file, although candidates will be charged if they choose to have a statement printed along with the sample ballot.

This year, there is a new regulation which allows candidates to withdraw their filing before the Feb. 2 deadline if they decide not to run.

Of course, we'd rather see people throwing their hats into the ring, instead of pulling them out. This year promises to be an interesting year for city government since two of the incumbents — Trudi Rogers in the first district and Mayor Milan Dostal in the fourth — have indicated they will not run.

Those who would have their city government do more — or less — with its tax money ought to be willing to run for city council.

Real Energy Waste

In quiet contemplation fostered by remarks that the Festival of Lights was a frightful waste of energy, we came to the conclusion that the Christmas boat parade around Newport Harbor used a drop of energy when compared to the waste caused by traffic congestion on the Upper Bay bridge.

As often as four times a day during the work week, motorists are stalled on Pacific Coast Highway from the bridge back to Jamboree Road and the amount of gasoline wasted and smog contributed by those idling engines is staggering.

Even more distressing is the fact that it will continue for nearly two more years until the new seven-lane bridge is built. Officials at CalTrans say their original estimate of completion by the end of 1979 has been moved back to fall of 1980, and that date could change — for the worse — a few more times.

School Sessions Stall

Following a narrow Tuesday night vote, it appears that a citizens' advisory committee appointed by the Newport-Mesa School District has had enough public heat and is fleeing the fiery subject of school closures.

The committee's decision was a classic non-decision: a declaration that no more recommendations would be made to school trustees on elementary school closures for two years.

While this certainly eases the minds of parents whose students attend Victoria, California or Mesa Verde schools in Costa Mesa, a major question remains unanswered.

Can the district afford to wait two years before it closes more schools because of what appears to be an irreversible declining enrollment situation and the adverse effects of the Serrano decision?

Well, the citizens' advisory committee, which had taken firm stands in the past, has decided to tackle budget cuts and leave the tougher and more sensitive task to school trustees.

Trustees conceivably could reject this non-recommendation and tell the committee to get back to its assignment, or perhaps appoint a new committee.

At any rate, the committee has apparently choked on a crucial issue. At least the committee action serves as a lesson as to what can happen to a group when faced with an unpopular decision.

Truck 'Crackdown' Questioned

Has the California Highway Patrol cracked down on speeding trucks? Its recent report of more than 5,000 citations having been issued to speeding truck drivers during the month of October suggests that, at long last, the complaints of motorists have seeped through to CHP Commissioner Glen Craig.

Almost from the inception of the unrealistic 55 mph speed limit, the motoring public has been pleading for protection from the behemoths of the highways which thunder down from on high on freeway travellers, tailgating and otherwise terrorizing drivers who have the temerity to stand in their way by observing the speed limit.

Last summer Craig announced a "crackdown" on the trucks and the October report tended to show it was being carried out. And, although the activity shown amounted to barely more than one truck stopped during the month by each state traffic officer, it still would be significant had the target indeed been those roaring beasts of the road about whom the public has been complaining.

BUT AN examination of the facts cast some doubt about the "crackdown." While there are only about 90,000 tractors registered in California an estimated 300,000 such units enter the state each year. These are the motorized components which pull the huge freight trailers seen rumbling up and down the freeways.

And, although it is not known how much of the time these trucks, out of state and home based, are actually on California highways, the relatively small number compared to the total of passenger cars, might make 5,000 speed citations seem a heavy enforcement effort.

However, CHP sources disclose that the count was not limited to the type of trucks which come instantly to the mind of the motorist but included a myriad of other types. There are nearly 3 million "trucks" registered in the state. These include panels, pickups and station wagons, which were not counted, although many two-axle and other small trucks were. So the total of 5,000 is no way indicative of the CHP effort against the mammoths about which the public complains.

"You're straddling the wrong camel."

IN COMPARING the CHP record on speed citations to trucks against the overall of 89,052 issued to vehicles of all types it might still seem a good performance, being more than 5 percent, especially when the number of trucks is matched against the near 12 million passenger vehicles registered.

But comparing total registrations is a false measurement. With rare exceptions passenger cars stand idle far more than they are in use and many of them never or rarely venture out on the freeways. Not so with the monster trucks whose high costs make it essential to get the highest usage possible. The only real measurement then would be a comparison of mileage travelled on state highways by trucks versus passenger cars.

One thing the report clearly revealed is that speed occupies nearly 50 percent of the emphasis of the CHP for the total number of tickets written for violations of all types was only 195,194.

ALSO misleading is the total of traffic officers on the CHP, reported as 4,165. The five-day week reduces the number available for duty to about 3,000 while sick leave, courtroom time and other causes further erode the number to where there are probably no more than 2,000 reporting for duty on any given day to cover a 24-hour period. On certain holidays, when super efforts are made, the patrol may field as many as 1,000 at one time but overtime earned then reduces the CHP strength on subsequent days.

It is this force which must not only cover both sides of the state's 3,794 miles of freeway and more than 11,000 additional miles of state highway, but also thousands of miles of county roads.

Is Remedial Education Money Wasted?

WASHINGTON — Every few months from one section of the country or another comes fresh news confirming the fact that many children pass in, through and out of school without learning to read or figure.

So parents and other taxpayers demand that kids who didn't learn anything be held back, a practice that was given up some years ago when somebody noticed that the first grade at P.S. 40 had 11 six-footers in it.

Being a 14-year-old Big Stoop in a class of otherwise bright and proficient 10-year-old chums is thought to cause anxiety and inferiority feelings in the larger, laggard scholar who may then wap his little buddies around in a paroxysm of misplaced resentment.

To get around this problem it's being suggested that kids who don't even know the easier part of the multiplication table be shunted off to special classes. . .a scholastic chain gang where they will crack their rock-like heads learning that 6 x 8 equals 48. If they don't learn to read, as they probably won't, at least they will be failing out of sight. And no more diplomas for the boneheads; henceforth all they get is a certificate of attendance.

BEHIND all this concern and activity are some propositions which may or may not be true. Proposition one is that schools are to teach reading and writing; proposition two is that when they don't it's the teachers' fault and the taxpayers are getting cheated; number three is that if you don't have an abnormally depressed I.Q. you can and you must learn to read and do elementary arithmetic.

Of course, all depends on number three. We know from ourselves and our friends it doesn't follow that if you can read you can count. Some of us are whizzes at numbers and can barely read; the reverse is even more common. As for the goal of a totally literate society, while it may be possible to teach everyone but the mentally handicapped how to read, it also may be very expensive. Somewhere we hit the law of diminishing returns.

THE COST in teachers, remedial reading instructors, counselors and therapists, physical and psychological, to drive Nasty Nate and Snide Sally into learning how to read is much too expensive. The society isn't going to get its money back on that investment.

Is it necessary to teach everybody how to read and figure? What about using the millions that math instruction is going to cost us to give away hand-held calculators to all those who can't count but signify a desire to do comparison shopping at the supermarket? If there is no readily apparent reason why so much money should be spent so that everybody — literally everybody — in our society, can do long division, the need for 100 percent literacy is not apparent either.

Work is another question. It is generally agreed on the basis of the scantiest information that you can't hold down a job if you lack these two basic skills. If that's so, the reason has less to do with the work itself than with how the job requirements are set up. Why does a bus driver in an exact-change-only system have to know how to add and subtract?

Teachers who are supposed to "larn" the recalcitrant dunces don't care for proficiency exams; they prefer to speak of instructing their obtuse charges in such things as "life coping skills," an odious expression hatched in the gastrointestinal tract of a professor of ed-psych no doubt. The danger is that pupils will be made to pass an exam in this amorphous subject, and those flunking life coping will be adjudged socially incompetent at an even higher financial cost to the community.

All children must go to school. There is nothing else to be done with them once they escape infant exposures, but all children don't have to learn while they're there. For some, romping about with the coping skills teacher is the answer, while the rest of us acknowledge defeat and admit that occasionally high standards aren't the best standards.

Boyd/Cat's Eyes

By L.M. BOYD

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relationship to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Was just 99 years ago that Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen brought the first bowl of goldfish into this country from Japan.

What qualifies archaeologist Iris Cornelia Love for membership in the Proper Job Club is the fact that she seven years ago discovered the whereabouts of the long lost statue of the love goddess Aphrodite. She'd put in a lot of time around the Mediterranean diggings in search of it, but that's not where she found Praxiteles' masterpiece. In the basement of the British Museum in London is where.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" All right.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middleage spread.

Fifteen percent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology, is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.

Congressmen Preparing for Televised Sessions

To the Editor:

Many thanks for your kind remarks regarding my efforts in obtaining a one-year moratorium on the relocation of federally protected witnesses to Southern California. I am pleased by the Justice Department's decision, and I plan to watch carefully when a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducts hearings on the witness protection program sometime next year.

EARLY this month, you editorially mentioned the "salutary effect" of television coverage on the Florida state legislature and spoke of congressional debate on the subject of television and radio access to the floor of the House. On Oct. 27, the House approved by a vote of 342 to 44 House Resolution 866, which provides for television and radio coverage of floor proceedings. The cameras and cable are being installed right now, and I expect that the TV and radio networks will be taking full advantage of this progressive move by the Congress when we reconvene in January.

The American people deserve to see firsthand how their government operates. They will not be disappointed in the performance of the House, I am certain.

Lovely Indeed

To the Editor:

I read your editorial entitled "A Lovely Present," (about the Festival of Lights boat parade) and indeed it was. I am an expatriate, newly arrived from the vast wasteland of the northeast, a place founded by the Dutch in 1623 and called Manhattan.

I used to enjoy New York City during Christmas. It was also a fairyland and sparkled — Fifth Avenue, Park Avenue, the lights, the stores, Radio City, and the people — even amidst the hustle, bustle, pushing and shoving there was the friendliness of Christmas.

But the Festival of Lights boat parade was absolutely lovely. I enjoyed this Christmas in Southern California and love my new home. Thank you, Southland.

ROBERT GORDON

Meddling Lesson

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "Campus Meddling," Dec. 20, shows how far government strings twist. Private Hillsdale College, that has never taken government funds, is being harassed for having students that do.

The students may be getting them as veterans, for disability pay, pensions or any other individual reason. But if they choose to use them for education instead of clothes, vacations or beer, HEW, the Health, Education and Welfare Department, says the educators are the recipients of the federal aid and so are subject to their government control.

It is a good warning, to keep hand off government strings, that the cities should heed. To touch those strings, no matter how lightly, is to be entangled in government's mystic maze.

Parking Needed

To the Editor:

Four months ago some committees in Cliff Haven and Newport Heights prevailed upon the city council to provide a second bike trail on Riverside Avenue, eliminating the green zone front parking in obvious disregard for the pressing need for all possible post office access sorely needed by some 2,800 box holders and 1,200 daily customers at the post office.

On Jan. 9 members of the public can make themselves heard at a city council hearing in person or by petition. Petitions requesting restoration of green zone parking in front of the post office are available to those concerned. By calling 642-3200 they can sign.

Your assistance to bring this situation to public attention will be most appreciated.

Saddleback Schools to Sue Teachers?

By LAURIE KASPER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Saddleback Valley Unified School District Trustee William Kohler wants the district to sue teachers for the cost of last year's strike.

Kohler proposed Wednesday that trustees find out how much the strike cost and bring a suit against the teachers for that amount. The trustees did not discuss his proposal but Kohler said later that he hopes they will consider it during their next meeting.

He explained that the Pasadena school system is suing its teachers for the $330,000 cost of a strike in its schools. Since the courts have said this could be done and the state Supreme Court has denied the teachers' appeal, he said, similar action now is open to other school districts.

He said the court's action now can be considered the law so strikes are illegal. In the past, teachers have contended that their strikes are not covered by the law because they're not specifically mentioned in the law.

Although Pasadena's teachers are expected to appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court, Kohler predicted this effort will fail.

A little more than half of the Saddleback district's 700 teachers walked out of their classrooms for four days in May when they failed to reach an agreement on an employment contract with the district.

No one has ever discussed what the strike, which required the hiring of substitutes, cost the district.

But Kohler said the collective bargaining required by law cost the district $45,000. In addition, he said, the district lost "a lot of money you can't really pinpoint." Primarily, he said, this resulted from administrators being away from their regular jobs.

The trustee said he believes enough of the other trustees will support his proposal to bring the suit.

This morning, however, none of the other trustees contacted by the Daily Pilot would commit themselves to it.

Loa Young, the board president who levied sharp criticism against teachers after the strike, said it is too soon to talk of an

Brown Orders Special Session

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr today ordered a special session of the California Legislature on property taxes and asked the lawmakers to send him a $1 billion tax relief bill by the end of this month.

In a wide-ranging address to a joint session of the Legislature, Brown also said he will support "substantial increases" in state funds for mental hospitals and community care programs. But he did not spell out specifics.

The Democratic governor also called for abolition of the business inventory tax, long sought by the business community.

He also said he will ask the Legislature again this year to appropriate funds for new state prisons. A similar Brown request was denied last year.

But Brown said in his "State-of-the State" message that property taxes are "first on the list" of challenges facing California in 1978.

"Homeowners and renters want relief. The rapid economic growth has driven up assessments," Brown said.

"Before this month is out, you should put on my desk a billion dollar property tax relief program."

Brown asked for a tax relief bill containing no increases in other state taxes, and said it should include "stringent con-

Laguna Merchants Fight Flood With Sandbags

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wednesday's rainstorm battered South Orange County and flooded streets in throbbing waves of heavy downpours that:

—Hurled lightning into a Huntington Beach home with such force that firemen at a nearby station reported being jarred from their beds.

—Flooded Costa Mesa City Hall.

—Send bluffs slipping onto Pacific Coast Highway in San Clemente.

—Pelted parts of Laguna Niguel and Irvine with hail.

—Forced flood-fearing Laguna Beach merchants out into the onslaught to pile sandbags in front of their stores.

In Irvine the situation seemed worst. The city was pelted by afternoon hail the size of BB shot that caused drivers on Campus Drive and other streets to stop their cars; some car engines were dead.

Residents this morning were trapped in their neighborhoods of the Woodbridge, University and the Ranch developments, which became peninsula communities surrounded on three sides by flooded streets.

Irvine police dispatchers and records clerks were busy answering telephone calls from residents asking how to get out. Traffic was routed north along one of the few unflooded sections of Culver Drive, to the Santa Ana Freeway, east to the Laguna Freeway then south to the San Diego Freeway.

Police officers stood at flooded major intersections to dissuade motorists from trying the underwater roads.

City maintenance crews worked through the night shoring up undermined sections of roads, with the worst road destruction on Culver Drive, where at one point, at the San Diego Creek Bridge, nearly a full lane was washed out.

Closed roads today included Culver Drive from Main Street to Barranca Road and from Bryan to Irvine Boulevard; Jeffrey Road from the San Diego Freeway to Irvine Center Drive;

Sunshine Saturday?

Showers Forecast Friday and Sunday

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Water, water everywhere, and more to come — but maybe some sunshine this weekend, predicts the National Weather Service.

The forecast is for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight, 40 percent Friday and clearing on Saturday, with a slight chance of showers again Sunday.

Weather specialist Don DePauw said the unusually heavy rainfall Wednesday was due to thunderstorm type cumulonimbus clouds, which, he said, are unusual for Southern California.

DePauw said Wednesday's conditions are what is known as a squall line, a fairly unusual weather condition in Southern California. It occurs just ahead of a weather front where cold and warm air collide.

A squall line results in severe weather, including heavy downpours like the one that swamped the Orange Coast late Wednesday afternoon.

DePauw said high temperatures tonight and Friday will be in the low 60s and lows will be about 49 degrees.

The squall line resulted in a circumstance also unusual for Orange County — more than an inch of rain in many places during a 24-hour period.

Officials at the Moulton Niguel Treatment Plant in Laguna Niguel this morning reported a rainfall of 1.13 inches for the past 24 hours. The season total is 6.78 inches, up from 3.58 inches last year at this time.

In addition, about 30 seconds of hail fell on the Laguna Niguel area at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, observers say.

At Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Charles Lewis reported figures of 1.50 inches for the past 24 hours, 6.36 inches for the season and 3.76 inches for last season at this time.

Bill Shields of Laguna Beach Hardware noted a 24-hour total of .44 inches, for a season total of 5.16 inches compared to 4.29 last year.

Snowpack Shapes Up

Plane Crashes in Storm

By The Associated Press

Torrential rains and gale-force winds flooded streets, tore down trees and power lines and caused a fatal plane crash.

But in the Sierra, the storm brought good news, leaving behind the best snowpack in four years.

By late Wednesday evening, the storm had dropped 1.14 inches of rain on downtown Los Angeles, pushing the season total to 7.18 inches, the weather service said. That is compared with 5.30 inches last year and an average rainfall by this date of 5.02 inches.

The California Department of Transportation and Highway Patrol issued wind warnings along the winding Grapevine section of Interstate 5, with wind speeds of up to 60 mph recorded Wednesday. Despite the snow, rain and wind, few roads were reported closed Wednesday afternoon.

But CalTrans said state Route 2, the Angeles Crest Highway, from Big Pines, to the Route 39 junction had been sealed off because of heavy snow. State Route 99 between Arvin and the junction of state Route 58 in Kern County was closed because of sand on the road. Arvin was severely damaged by hurricane-force winds and blowing sand last month.

By late Wednesday afternoon, the CHP said cars were hydroplaning on most Los Angeles freeways when traveling faster than 35 mph. But speeds rarely exceeded that, since minor accidents and engine floodouts kept traffic slowed down or stopped during the evening rush hour.

Several lanes were flooded as deep as four feet on transition roads from the San Bernardino and Santa Ana freeways, as were lanes in both directions of the Golden State Freeway near Griffith Park, said the CHP.

In the eastern San Gabriel Valley city of San Dimas, mid-afternoon winds of up to 80 mph were responsible for extensive damage to buildings. Winds caused an estimated $50,000 to $100,000 damage to a furniture store after winds blew off part of

European Freedom Promised

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day Allied landings of June 6, 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Gun Sales Up

Self-protection Motivation

VISTA (AP) — A rash of home invasions, rapes and shootings is bringing a run on handguns along with warnings from authorities that watch dogs and night lights are safer.

"People are creating their own panic," said sheriff's Lt. Paul Franklin.

In cities and hamlets throughout northern San Diego County, gun shops report sharply increased sales.

A year-old office of crime prevention specialists in Vista said more requests for advice have been handled this week than in the 11 months of the federal-financed pilot program.

Last week, George G. Mottino, a 68-year-old farmer, was shot to death by gunmen trying to force their way into his home. Masked gunmen have broken into several homes, raping women and four masked men broke into a Fallbrook physician's home and robbed him and guests.

Pair Seize Suspect In Rape Attempt

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two young Orange Coast men who didn't hesitate to get involved are credited with saving a 16-year-old Huntington Beach girl from the violent attack of an alleged would-be rapist.

"It was beautiful work. They're heroes," says Huntington Beach police detective Art Droz of the two rescuers, Robert Maness, 23, of Huntington Beach, and Michael Spears, 24, of Costa Mesa.

He spoke of the capture last Thursday by the pair of a suspect who allegedly dragged the teenager off busy Beach Boulevard into a grassy gulch near Adams Avenue.

Lon Dean Vickery, 24, a Huntington Beach short order cook, today remained in jail custody in lieu of $10,000 bail.

He is accused of the attempted rape in a criminal complaint issued earlier this week by the Orange County District Attorney's Office.

Investigators say Maness, the initial witness, and Spears to whom he cried for help, pounced on the suspect as he pinned the girl down in a field.

She was not sexually assaulted before they intervened, but her clothes had been partially torn off and she was hysterical, police said.

"They saved her a lot of anguish. . .a lot of mental torment. . .a lot of trauma. I talked to her again the other day and she seems to be doing just fine now," said Detective Droz.

The fact Maness, a Huntington Beach resident and advertising major at Golden West College is a normal, red-blooded young man may have saved the high school girl from the horror of violent rape.

"I was driving down Beach Boulevard and I noticed this girl walking alongside the road. I always look at girls," he explained rather shyly.

"Then I saw a man walking rapidly behind her. It just looked funny. I pulled up at the red light and looked in the rear view mirror. I saw him grab her from School Location Backed

By ANNE COOPER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The $105,000 made from the sale of property adjacent to Dana Hills High School for a county street right-of-way will be earmarked for the high school, but the school board wants a say on how it's spent.

Capistrano Unified School District trustees voted unanimously Tuesday to accept the county's offer of $105,000 for 1.6 acres. The land will be used for part of the Stonehill Drive extension.

Superintendent Jerome Thornsley recommended to the school board Tuesday that the funds be turned over to Dana Hills administrators and community, to be used at their discretion.

Trustees have said at previous school board meetings that they are looking for a way to fund seats and lighting for the Dana Hills stadium. San Clemente High currently has the only stadium with lights and seating, used by the three district high schools.

Capistrano Valley High in Mission Viejo has had $359,250 set aside from gift monies for a second fully equipped stadium in the district. Funding came from the Mission Viejo Company, which requested that the money be used at a Mission Viejo school. Dana Hills, an older school than Capistrano Valley, is located in Dana Point.

"The administration and support groups at Dana Hills have strong feelings about priorities for the spending of the funds which will accrue to the district with the sale of the Stonehill access property," Thornsley said.

"My recommendation is to give the discretionary choice to the school," he said, "but that is a matter of philosophy.

"I have great confidence in the Dana Hills administrators and parents," said trustee William Thompson of Mission Viejo. "This is really rather a modest sum. I don't have any qualms whatsoever about letting them decide how to spend it.

"As an elected school board trustee, I feel it is my responsibility how district funds are spent," said Edward Westberg of San Clemente. "This is a sale of property paid for by taxpayers from throughout the district.

"I have a fear," Thompson said, "that through a lack of understanding on the part of the board, we might not allow the funds to be spent as parents and administrators wish. This is a two-headed sword."

behind and drag her into the field."

Maness hit the accelerator and, tires squealing, sped into an adjacent service station, yelling to bystander Spears for aid.

Spears, an Orange Coast College engineering major from Costa Mesa, ran to help as Maness confronted the suspect later alleged to be Vickery assaulting the teenager on the ground.

Neither is a physically large man, compared to the suspect.

"Everything happened so fast, it just seemed the right thing to do;" says Spears. "It took both of us to get him off her and subdued. I guess we wrestled him for several minutes."

"They really did super work. It was just a lucky thing he saw what he did," said Detective Droz.

Maness is more blunt about what he and Spears did while the shaken teen-aged victim ran back to the service station to call police who found Vickery held captive inside on arrival.

Farmers Happy

Strawberries Get Extra Rain Boost

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

While rains that fell Wednesday and early Thursday are causing some harvesting problems for Orange County farmers, most concede that the much-needed water is doing much more good than harm.

A county agriculture commission spokesman said early today that farmers in the Irvine Ranch area are having some difficulty harvesting cauliflower, celery and broccoli because of mud but that the rains are doing the "strawberries nothing but good."

He said strawberries grown on small acreages throughout the county are not scheduled for harvesting until late March through June. "This rain will leach the root structure and do wonders for the crop," he added.

Fred Keller, Irvine Company's agriculture vice president, said the inch of rain that fell across the company ranch has slowed down cauliflower and celery harvesting and has halted work in broccoli fields.

"We can't get the tractors in," he said, adding that the company's avocado harvest also has been temporarily stopped because of the rain.

However, Keller was happy about the condition of Irvine Co. grazing land. Late last month he had predicted the firm would import hay to feed its 1,000 head of cattle.

He indicated this morning that grasslands are now in good grazing condition.

A Rancho Mission Viejo spokesman said this morning that the latest storm had dropped approximately 1.25 inches of rain on the ranch's 40,000 acres of grazing land.

The county's southernmost ranch is running only 600 head of cattle on its range this year. Gil Aguirre, vice president for ranch operations, said last month that his company is stocking no range beef cattle this year because of drought conditions. Normally, he said, the ranch runs up to 4,000 head of cattle during the winter months.

He ordered the special session convened 1½ hours after the conclusion of his speech.

Brown did not give reasons for convening a special session when the Legislature is already convened in its regular session. But that is a parliamentary maneuver that can get around delays required under regular house rules without going to Republicans to get a two-thirds majority.

Bills passed in the regular session don't take effect until Jan. 1, 1979. But a bill passed in a special session takes effect 90 days after that session is adjourned.

Brown's desire for quick action on property tax relief is clearly fueled by a voters' tax initiative on the June ballot which would cut local property taxes by about two-thirds.

The measure, known as the Jarvis Initiative, would cut revenues for cities, counties and local schools by about $7 billion.

Barranca Road from Culver Drive to Jeffrey Road; and all of Ridgeline Drive, which was covered in mudslides.

Police estimated Ridgeline would not be fully cleared of debris for a month, though city public works said the road would be passable by late today, barring more rain.

Parts of Culver were expected to stay closed for a week for repair.

The police department reported that a majority of its communications lines were put out of commission by rainwater seeping through the roof, though emergency lines remained open.

Roof rainspouts couldn't handle the loads and water backed over floodproof copings.

Firemen and Pacific Telephone laborers worked four to five hours to keep the remaining lines open and restore the doused ones.

Phone panels were dried with hot compressed air blowers; some had to be hand-dried by towel.

Throughout the county, there were numerous traffic accidents caused by slick or flooded streets and low visibility through the drenching downpours which came in waves.

There were no serious injuries reported.

Damage in Saddleback Valley areas was reported slight.

T.J. Meadows, Orange County Water Works District 4 general manager, said rain waters in the San Juan and Trabuco creeks would substantially add to underground water basins.

its roof.

Power outages were reported in Rosemead, San Gabriel, El Monte, Sierra Madre, Monrovia, Glendora, San Dimas, LaVerne and the City of Industry.

A Whittier home suffered an estimated $17,000 damage after it reportedly was set afire by a lightning bolt Wednesday afternoon, a county fire department spokesman said.

Three persons died Wednesday after their Piper PA-22 got lost in heavy storm clouds and crashed in Cleghorn Canyon while en route from Ontario to Chico, authorities said. The single-engine plane crashed about an hour after leaving Ontario Airport, said a Federal Aviation Administration official.

In Sycamore Canyon — left denuded by last July's fire — no serious mudslides or flooding was reported, said Santa Barbara County Flood Control District officials. They noted that following last week's rains, the newly planted canyon region appeared in good shape, with plants sprouting on the scorched ground.

"The ground just seems to be soaking up the rain like a sponge," one official said. "It's kind of surprising."

But in Oceanside near San Diego, five homes on Roberta Lane were reported flooded, with as much as half a foot of mud covering their floors. Residents said a hill behind the homes had been graded by a developer, so when the rains came they washed part of the hill down into the houses below.

A train which runs daily between Escondido and Oceanside was halted by the rains Wednesday about three miles outside of Oceanside.

The engineer reportedly stopped the train about 4 p.m. after he couldn't back up and couldn't go forward because the roadbed under the tracks had been washed out. The train was expected to roll again sometime today.

Extensive flooding was reported in many parts of Oceanside. The Fire Department had to borrow sand bags from nearby Camp Pendleton to shore up creekbeds.

A Thrifty drug store in Oceanside reportedly suffered a partial collapse of the roof after a ceiling drain clogged.

HB Attorney Raps Council

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

City Attorney Don Bonfa accused the Huntington Beach City Council today of incompetence and hypocrisy and with meddling in the affairs of the city's legal department.

Bonfa's verbal attack on city leaders was the latest salvo in the controversy that has followed a physical altercation between Bonfa and Deputy City Attorney John O'Connor Dec. 27.

The city council said Tuesday night it wouldn't allow the use of city funds to pay legal fees that might result from the latest Bonfa-O'Connor imbroglio.

City taxpayers already have paid more than $10,000 in support of the city attorney in a previous grievance case between the two men.

Mayor Ron Pattinson contended that legal expenses in the latest flareup could cost taxpayers up to $100,000 if counsel is provided. The council indicated unanimously that it is unwilling to pick up such a tab.

Bonfa placed O'Connor on immediate suspension without pay and said he would discharge his deputy as soon as the necessary written notice is prepared.

The city council also directed City Administrator Bud Belsito to tell the city's legal staff not to assist Bonfa in the matter.

Bonfa said that he had no intention of using his staff for this purpose. But he said the city council's action represents meddling into the affairs of his department.

He said the city administrator has no authority over legal employees because in Huntington Beach the city attorney is an elected official.

"The city council is incapable and incompetent to manage any department," Bonfa charged. "They can't manage themselves. They are way over their heads."

Bonfa also claimed that the council is "very hypocritical" because it previously hired an outside counsel to defend the chief of police against a grievance by an officer.

"It cost the city more than $20,000 and I have the bills to prove it," he said.

actual suit. However, she said, "It's something that will have to be investigated thoroughly."

Not to be open and not to obtain information on the proposal would be irresponsible, she said.

"I haven't even thought about it," said Trustee Mary Phillips.

Trustee George Henry said he would not support a lawsuit against the teachers at this time. Although he doesn't agree with strikes, he said, "to go back now and open another wound, in my opinion, would be a wrong move for this board or any board."

Trustee Carole Neustadt could not be reached for comment.

KICKED 'CAT' RAISES STINK

DURAND, Ill. (AP) — Jack Yaun walked out to his barn in early morning dimness and saw in the doorway that same old stray cat that had been hanging around.

"Well, I up and gave it one hell of a good kick," Yaun said Wednesday.

Yaun failed to see the white stripe down the animal's back.

The skunk retaliated.

Pendleton Marine Held In 2 Killings

By The Associated Press

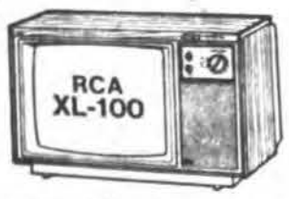

A young Marine photographer apparently selected his victims as he went on a shooting-stabbing rampage at Camp Pendleton that left two senior co-workers dead and four others wounded.

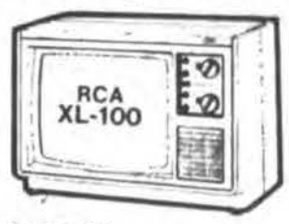

Sgt. Earl J. Holley, 24, of Staten Island, N.Y., was arrested Wednesday, sitting with the .22-caliber automatic pistol he allegedly used to kill two senior photographers at the base audio-visual center.

"We have reason to believe he knew who the victims were and he sought them out," said Lt. Col. D.W. Brown, head of the public affairs office at the nation's largest Marine base, 25 miles north of San Diego.

Master Sgt. Daniel P. Hurley, 42, of Uniontown, Pa., and Staff Sgt. Gilbert N. Donham, 38, of Ladelle, Ark., died of multiple gunshot wounds, a Marine spokesman said.

MAC Candidates Deserve Attention

As the names settled after Tuesday's filing deadline for the Mission Viejo Municipal Advisory Council's March elections, eight candidates remained as contenders for three positions.

Six of those remaining candidates will be battling for two four-year terms in the March 7 election. The other two on the ballot seek the open two-year term.

That's not too bad a showing of interest in a board that — although technically powerless — carries substantial weight with county supervisors over decisions affecting the area.

Considering the potential influence of MAC, even more candidates would have been welcome.

The MAC was created by a vote of the people. Residents presumably were concerned about their fate in a county governmental mechanism where they could have little impact as "unincorporated territory."

Unfortunately, interest in having an impact in local affairs has apparently diminished over the years since the MAC's inception.

We'd like to see more interest in the MAC. Perhaps a lively campaign by the candidates who have made their services available will stimulate others to show greater participation in helping govern the rapidly growing community.

City Finding Its Feet

The year 1977 marked the city of Irvine's sixth year of incorporation. In many ways it was a very good year for Orange County's newest municipality.

The year brought an end to a 2½ year dispute over what responsibilities new industry bears toward absorbing some of the burden of finding housing for its workers, cutting into the percentage who must, by necessity, be commuter employees.

Although the settlement of the Orange County Fair Housing lawsuit out of the courts resulted in relatively few housing units, the Irvine Company showed a willingness to cooperate.

It was an important achievement, and demonstrated the ability of the city to function independently of the Irvine Company by separate negotiation.

The company built the town, and the new city is only now finding its own feet, taking the tentative steps toward an inevitable independence from the fixed planning goals of a corporate mentality.

And independent the city must strive to be, if it ever is to reach its own maturity, and be a city of its own aims.

Voters Need Issues

Nine candidates for two seats on the city council of a town of 45,000 persons may seem a slim number of Irvine citizens interested in the job. Some call it political apathy.

To Irvine voters who have to weed the list to just two, nine may seem a passel indeed.

Actually, we think it's a good number; large enough that some diversity in approach to local government may sneak in; small enough to fit a medium-sized room for some medium-sized discussion of the local issues.

The issues so far in the fledgling campaigns have yet to be defined. The new campaign reform ordinance, custom-hewn by the present council for this election, setting contribution limits, is certain to be one.

As the first — and no doubt especially the last — reports of contributions and expenditures are made, one candidate or another — perhaps all of them — will denounce this one's spending, or that one's gift.

But who gives what to whom should not be the only issue of the campaign. Property taxes, zoning, industrial growth, conservation of usable open spaces and other issues demand debate.

Voters deserve an array of issues clearly defined in well-planned community forums that are more than opportunities for candidates to plant a few friends among the audience to ask a few friendly, well-rehearsed questions.

Truck 'Crackdown' Questioned

Has the California Highway Patrol cracked down on speeding trucks? Its recent report of more than 5,000 citations having been issued to speeding truck drivers during the month of October suggests that, at long last, the complaints of motorists have seeped through to CHP Commissioner Glen Craig.

Almost from the inception of the unrealistic 55 mph speed limit, the motoring public has been pleading for protection from the behemoths of the highways which thunder down from on high on freeway travellers, tailgating and otherwise terrorizing drivers who have the temerity to stand in their way by observing the speed limit.

Last summer Craig announced a "crackdown" on the trucks and the October report tended to show it was being carried out. And, although the activity shown amounted to barely more than one truck stopped during the month by each state traffic officer, it still would be significant had the target indeed been those roaring beasts of the road about whom the public has been complaining.

BUT AN examination of the facts cast some doubt about the "crackdown." While there are only about 90,000 tractors registered in California an estimated 300,000 such units enter the state each year. These are the motorized components which pull the huge freight trailers seen rumbling up and down the freeways.

And, although it is not known how much of the time these trucks, out of state and home based, are actually on California highways, the relatively small number compared to the total of passenger cars, might make 5,000 speed citations seem a heavy enforcement effort.

However, CHP sources disclose that the count was not limited to the type of trucks which come instantly to the mind of the motorist but included a myriad of other types. There are nearly 3 million "trucks" registered in the state. These include panels, pickups and station wagons, which were not counted, although many two-axle and other small trucks were. So the total of 5,000 is no way indicative of the CHP effort against the mammoths about which the public complains.

"You're straddling the wrong camel."

IN COMPARING the CHP record on speed citations to trucks against the overall of 89,052 issued to vehicles of all types it might still seem a good performance, being more than 5 percent, especially when the number of trucks is matched against the near 12 million passenger vehicles registered.

But comparing total registrations is a false measurement. With rare exceptions passenger cars stand idle far more than they are in use and many of them never or rarely venture out on the freeways. Not so with the monster trucks whose high costs make it essential to get the highest usage possible. The only real measurement then would be a comparison of mileage travelled on state highways by trucks versus passenger cars.

One thing the report clearly revealed is that speed occupies nearly 50 percent of the emphasis of the CHP for the total number of tickets written for violations of all types was only 195,194.

ALSO misleading is the total of traffic officers on the CHP, reported as 4,165. The five-day week reduces the number available for duty to about 3,000 while sick leave, courtroom time and other causes further erode the number to where there are probably no more than 2,000 reporting for duty on any given day to cover a 24-hour period. On certain holidays, when super efforts are made, the patrol may field as many as 1,000 at one time but overtime earned then reduces the CHP strength on subsequent days.

It is this force which must not only cover both sides of the state's 3,794 miles of freeway and more than 11,000 additional miles of state highway, but also thousands of miles of county roads.

Is Remedial Education Money Wasted?

WASHINGTON — Every few months from one section of the country or another comes fresh news confirming the fact that many children pass in, through and out of school without learning to read or figure.

So parents and other taxpayers demand that kids who didn't learn anything be held back, a practice that was given up some years ago when somebody noticed that the first grade at P.S. 40 had 11 six-footers in it.

Being a 14-year-old Big Stoop in a class of otherwise bright and proficient 10-year-old chums is thought to cause anxiety and inferiority feelings in the larger, laggard scholar who may then wap his little buddies around in a paroxysm of misplaced resentment.

To get around this problem it's being suggested that kids who don't even know the easier part of the multiplication table be shunted off to special classes. r .a scholastic chain gang where they will crack their rock-like heads learning that 6 x 8 equals 48. If they don't learn to read, as they probably won't, at least they will be failing out of sight. And no more diplomas for the boneheads; henceforth all they get is a certificate of attendance.

BEHIND all this concern and activity are some propositions which may or may not be true. Proposition one is that schools are to teach reading and writing; proposition two is that when they don't it's the teachers' fault and the taxpayers are getting cheated; number three is that if you don't have an abnormally depressed I.Q. you can and you must learn to read and do elementary arithmetic.

Of course, all depends on number three. We know from ourselves and our friends it doesn't follow that if you can read you can count. Some of us are whizzes at numbers and can barely read; the reverse is even more common. As for the goal of a totally literate society, while it may be possible to teach everyone but the mentally handicapped how to read, it also may be very expensive. Somewhere we hit the law of diminishing returns.

THE COST in teachers, remedial reading instructors, counselors and therapists, physical and psychological, to drive Nasty Nate and Snide Sally into learning how to read is much too expensive. The society isn't going to get its money back on that investment.

Is it necessary to teach everybody how to read and figure? What about using the millions that math instruction is going to cost us to give away hand-held calculators to all those who can't count but signify a desire to do comparison shopping at the supermarket? If there is no readily apparent reason why so much money should be spent so that everybody — literally everybody — in our society, can do long division, the need for 100 percent literacy is not apparent either.

Work is another question. It is generally agreed on the basis of the scantiest information that you can't hold down a job if you lack these two basic skills. If that's so, the reason has less to do with the work itself than with how the job requirements are set up. Why does a bus driver in an exact-change-only system have to know how to add and subtract?

Teachers who are supposed to "larn" the recalcitrant dunces don't care for proficiency exams; they prefer to speak of instructing their obtuse charges in such things as "life coping skills," an odious expression hatched in the gastrointestinal tract of a professor of ed-psych no doubt. The danger is that pupils will be made to pass an exam in this amorphous subject, and those flunking life coping will be adjudged socially incompetent at an even higher financial cost to the community.

All children must go to school. There is nothing else to be done with them once they escape infant exposures, but all children don't have to learn while they're there. For some, romping about with the coping skills teacher is the answer, while the rest of us acknowledge defeat and admit that occasionally high standards aren't the best standards.

Boyd/Cat's Eyes

By L.M. BOYD

History records that certain ancient Turks claimed they could tell the time of day by looking into a cat's eyes. Might be something to it. Believe I recall having read somewhere that the pupils in a cat's eyes contract and expand predictably in relationship to the whereabouts of the sun. Will research this further. Stand by.

Was just 99 years ago that Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen brought the first bowl of goldfish into this country from Japan.

What qualifies archaeologist Iris Cornelia Love for membership in the Proper Job Club is the fact that she seven years ago discovered the whereabouts of the long lost statue of the love goddess Aphrodite. She'd put in a lot of time around the Mediterranean diggings in search of it, but that's not where she found Praxiteles' masterpiece. In the basement of the British Museum in London is where.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" All right.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middleagespread.

Fifteen percent of the people in this country provide all the food, goods and services for the entire population. Or so say the statisticians. Interesting, if true. And if true, it's quite a measure of U.S. technology. Is it not? But what are those other 17 out of 20 people doing, meantime, pray? This can get pretty deep. Time for a nap.

Congressmen Preparing for Televised Sessions

To the Editor:

Many thanks for your kind remarks regarding my efforts in obtaining a one-year moratorium on the relocation of federally protected witnesses to Southern California. I am pleased by the Justice Department's decision, and I plan to watch carefully when a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducts hearings on the witness protection program sometime next year.

EARLY this month, you editorially mentioned the "salutary effect" of television coverage on the Florida state legislature and spoke of congressional debate on the subject of television and radio access to the floor of the House. On Oct. 27, the House approved by a vote of 342 to 44 House Resolution 866, which provides for television and radio coverage of floor proceedings. The cameras and cable are being installed right now, and I expect that the TV and radio networks will be taking full advantage of this progressive move by the Congress when we reconvene in January.

The American people deserve to see firsthand how their government operates. They will not be disappointed in the performance of the House, I am certain.

MARK W. HANNAFORD
Member of Congress

Lovely Indeed

To the Editor:

I read your editorial entitled "A Lovely Present," (about the Festival of Lights boat parade) and indeed it was. I am an expatriate, newly arrived from the vast wasteland of the northeast, a place founded by the Dutch in 1623 and called Manhattan.

I used to enjoy New York City during Christmas. It was also a fairyland and sparkled — Fifth Avenue, Park Avenue, the lights, the stores, Radio City, and the people — even amidst the hustle, bustle, pushing and shoving there was the friendliness of Christmas.

But the Festival of Lights boat parade was absolutely lovely. I enjoyed this Christmas in Southern California and love my new home. Thank you, Southland.

ROBERT GORDON

Meddling Lesson

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "Campus Meddling," Dec. 20, shows how far government strings twist. Private Hillsdale College, that has never taken government funds, is being harassed for having students that do.

The students may be getting them as veterans, for disability pay, pensions or any other individual reason. But if they choose to use them for education instead of clothes, vacations or beer, HEW, the Health, Education and Welfare Department, says the educators are the recipients of the federal aid and so are subject to their government control.

It is a good warning, to keep hand off government strings, that the cities should heed. To touch those strings, no matter how lightly, is to be entangled in government's mystic maze.

GOLDIE JOSEPH

Too Casual?

To the Editor:

It occurred to me today that perhaps some of us are responsible for the ugly treatment some men are bestowing upon us. How long have we women (I was once) been so casual with our bodies and ourselves? How long have we chased after men and willingly encouraged an affair?

I am shocked always by the women here who dress so lewdly. Is it an accident or unconscious copying of others? Or is it a call out to men. It may be ignorance that makes a girl or woman dress so immodestly. Or is it a bold statement of her desire? A desire to be loved.

How many women think they can have love if a man physically loves them or is attracted to them? Finally, is it a bold negating of long-standing values naturally attached to women such as modesty, sweetness, humility, quietness and consideration?

Women will have to examine their everyday actions and dressing. It seems to me that men are still the same: a woman attracts them. Women are lucky. Let us enjoy the role, but be aware of what it entails.

50 Birds Killed By Slick

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A mysterious oil slick has killed about 50 birds, mostly sea ducks, and harmed about 25 others in San Diego Bay, the state Game and Fish Department says.

The Coast Guard Marine Safety office said patrol boats dispatched after the dead birds were discovered found "a light sheen" of oil on the water on the Coronado side of the bay.

OFFICIALS said the source of the oil was undetermined but no spills had been reported.

They speculated that oil from street surfaces may have been washed into the bay by heavy rain. But a Coast Guard spokesman said it was "hard to believe this would be enough to kill the birds."

FRANK TODD, curator of birds at Sea World, said a light, high-grade diesel oil was responsible for the deaths. He noted the birds "displayed all the symptoms of such a spill."

The injured birds were taken to Sea World after Project Wildlife volunteers washed off the slick and placed them in heating pads.

Todd said the creatures will remain at Sea World for several weeks until they recover.

Stuntman Evel Knievel talks with limousine chauffeurs he hired to take work furlough prisoners to and from their jobs Wednesday in Los Angeles. The livery service upset the sheriff's department, and Knievel has decided to call a halt to it.

North Pounded by Rain

By The Associated Press

More drought-defying rain and snow were forecast for Northern California today in a one-day follow-up to the powerful storm that slammed into the state with howling winds and gushing showers.

In nearly all districts of the top half of the state showers were predicted into the night. Travelers warnings were issued for blowing snow in the Sierra, expected to descend to 3,500 feet at times. Chains were required on most mountain routes.

PARTS OF THE BAY Area reported thunder, lightning and hail during Wednesday's storm. Some areas reported winds of 40 miles an hour.

The National Weather Service found another wet weather system stationed off the Oregon Coast, suggesting even more precipitation may be on the way beyond the forecast period.

Wednesday's showers dropped rivers of water onto the land. One thunderstorm dumped an inch of rain on Oakland International Airport between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

MARIN COUNTY reported the heaviest rainfall, ranging up to 1½ inches by late afternoon.

Rain-slick roads caused many accidents, including a whopper of a 22-car pileup on Highway 17 between Los Gatos and Santa Cruz just before dawn. Traffic was backed up for an hour and a half.

All the precipitation activity is buttressing notions that the California drought is getting a good working over.

"THERE IS AN AIR of optimism here, but we're trying to be realistic," said Bill Clark Wednesday at the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento.

Clark added the drought is not over, despite the precipitation. Major reservoirs are still very low and rain is needed this month and in February. Of critical importance in gauging the situation will be the depth of the Sierra snowpack next month.

3 Prized Redwoods Lost to Vandalism

PIERCY (AP) — Three of California's prized ancient redwood trees will fall today, the victims of vandalism.

The three giant trees, each reaching some 100 yards above the ground and measuring more than six feet in diameter, were hacked at the base with a chainsaw.

One tree was cut all the way around the base, with only a 2-foot core remaining. The others were slashed randomly with a series of cuts.

JIM HIBBERT, manager of state park lands in the Piercy area, said the trees stood in a grove of old redwoods, ranging in age from 1,500 to 2,000 years. The grove, in the Smithe Redwoods State Reserve, is in northern Mendocino County, some 200 miles north of San Francisco.

One of the trees was more than six feet in diameter and two were some 11 feet across.

The grove is just some 100 feet off California Highway 101.

THE GROVE WAS popular with tourists. Two of the stricken trees had walk-through tunnels carved at the base and were popular settings for photographs.

Hibbert said the damage was irreversible and the trees would be downed today by a private contractor. He said the highway would be closed to traffic for two or three hours.

Despite high winds and the severe damage, the trees were not in danger of falling over and did not pose an immediate threat to traffic, Hibbert said.

THE TREES WERE struck some time between Monday afternoon and Tuesday, he said.

The state parks department is investigating the vandalism and will seek felony criminal charges should anyone be arrested, according to department spokeswoman Gene Cone.

The Mendocino County Sheriff's Office was investigating the case, but had no suspects or motive for the vandalism.

Disney World Expansion Set

BURBANK (AP) — Walt Disney Productions has unveiled plans for a major addition to its Walt Disney World complex in Florida.

The project, to be called The Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow (EPCOT), "will be devoted to the advancement of international understanding and the solution of the problems of people everywhere through the communication of ideas," the company said in its 1977 annual report.

Disney said the EPCOT Center would have two major areas, Future World and World Showcase. The company made no estimate of when the new center would be completed.

FUTURE WORLD will include a major introductory theme show called Spaceship Earth, Disney said, accompanied by what the company called a "global marketplace of new ideas" called the Communicore.

Also planned are pavilions dealing with Energy, Life and Health, The Sea, The Land, Transportation and Space.

Dog Ban Delayed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A ban on dogs at most beaches in San Diego would cost $100,000 annually, the City Council has been told.

Beach patrols and communications gear are needed.

A final vote on the proposed ordinance was delayed Wednesday.

$150 Tax Cut Gets Support

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A plan to give four million California homeowners property tax cuts of $150 or more appears to be gaining support in the state Senate.

But there was still no decision Wednesday on the plan for across-the-board tax cuts — roughly the same amount for both rich and poor homeowners. Another Democratic caucus was scheduled for today to decide whether to offer the plan to the floor.

STATE

The plan faces a rival bill giving the biggest tax break to poor renters and homeowners.

Woman Dies in Ill-fated Leap

LONG BEACH (AP) — A 22-year-old woman bled to death Wednesday after severing her jugular vein when she crashed through a window to escape a roaring apartment fire that killed Angel Palanco, 2, who was left in her care, police said.

The woman, identified as Paula Archuleta, managed to save her year-old daughter, Angelica, by handing her to a neighbor through a small opening in the ground-floor window before taking her ill-fated leap, fire officials said.

High Court Gets Hearst Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's federal bank robbery conviction, upheld by an appellate court, now heads for the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to reconsider its Nov. 2, 1977, ruling upholding the guilty verdict.

Pipeline Abandonment Opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city attorney's office has formally contested Southern California Gas Co.'s application for state permission to abandon a natural gas pipeline and lease it to Standard Oil of Ohio to transport Alaskan crude oil to Texas.

City Attorney Burt Pines' motion opposing the pipeline abandonment was filed Wednesday at a state Public Utilities Commission hearing into the utility's request to abandon a 120-mile stretch of pipeline running from near Blythe to Moreno, Calif.

Arts Council Director Quits

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Clark Mitze, executive director of the California Arts Council is leaving his job in a conflict over the allocation of grant funds.

Council Chairman Peter Coyote of San Francisco said Wednesday the conflict is between the establishment art forms such as opera, symphony and ballet, and the art forms of a number of minority cultures.

TV Lectures

Orange Coast Slates Series

Orange Coast College will present a four-part January lecture series titled "Television — An Inner Space Adventure and Outer Space Retreat.

The series meets on successive Friday evenings, beginning Jan. 6, from 7:30 to 9:30 in OCC's Fine Arts Hall 119. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

SERIES LECTURERS MILT AND Ann-Marie McMenamin will look at television from a perspective as educators, performers, researchers and writers.

He is director of drama at Long Beach Jordan High and has been a radio-TV performer, writer, researcher and administrator, as well as a teacher for 20 years. She is a drama director at Lakewood High School and an actress, TV script researcher, choreographer, model and theater director.

THE SERIES WILL INCLUDE several guest celebrities and a network studio tour.

The opening lecture, on Jan. 6, will look at what research and legislation have to say about violence on television. The McMenamins will explain how and why programs influence the habits of children.

The Jan. 13 session will take a glimpse behind the scenes to see how television's comedies, dramas, sports, games, news and documentaries are produced and what makes them "commercial."

A LOOK AT HOW MINORITIES use TV as an instrument of social change and how screen personalities become heroes and heroines will be presented Jan. 20.

The final lecture, Jan. 27, will look at television technology and what the future holds for the industry.

For information about the series, phone 556-5880.

Police Seize Body

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N. J. (AP) — Burial services for a Morristown man were interrupted when police seized the body moments before it was to be lowered into a grave.

Police took the body to the county medical examiner for an autopsy because of suspicions that Vincent Ciraldo, 65, may have died as the result of a robbery and beating. The autopsy results disproved the report, authorities said.

A PALL BEARER SAID one of the officials who confiscated the body during services at the Holy Rood Cemetery here told the mourners, "I'm from the medical examiner's office and we need that body."

Suspicions were raised after Ciraldo, who was delirious from lack of food and suffering insulin shock, called police Friday and said he had been robbed, authorities said. Ciraldo later changed his story and said there had been no robbery. Saturday, he died of a heart attack while hospitalized.

ON TUESDAY, AT ABOUT the same time a Mass was being celebrated, a Morristown policeman heard rumors that Ciraldo died as a result of a beating. Police asked for an autopsy, and representatives of the county medical examiner rushed to the cemetery.

After the autopsy, Ciraldo's body was released by authorities and he was buried.

Fake Gun, Bomb Stirs Council

OAKLAND (AP) — "Only six more years and I can retire," sighed officer James Boyle after an irate job seeker displayed a fake bomb and gun at a City Council meeting to emphasize his desire for work.

Henry Robinson pulled the nickel-plated pistol Tuesday night, then assured council members it was "a phony gun" before making a pitch for jobs for Oakland residents.

HE THEN HELD A CLUSTER of silver cylinders bound together with tape, sending spectators scurrying for the exits. The bomb also was a fake.

"This is not a real bomb," Robinson said. "I'm tired of being broke and I want a job."

MAYOR LIONEL WILSON said he would meet with Robinson in the near future to discuss his situation.

He said he was "more worried about Officer Boyle's shooting than I was about the bomb."
