TERRORISTS CONTINUE SHOOTING IN ITALY

Moro's Family Bitter

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services will be held according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. The day of the funeral was not announced.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was

PICKETS MARCH OUTSIDE EDISON COMPANY POWER PLANT IN HUNTINGTON BEACH
Electricity Still On, But Talks Are Off; Key Issue Is What Constitutes a Weekend

SS Catalina Steals Away In Darkness

The S.S. Catalina slipped out of Newport Harbor under cover of darkness late Tuesday night. Its whereabouts today and its destination remained a mystery.

"It's gone, thank God," said Dave Harshbarger, director of marine safety for the City of Newport Beach.

Harshbarger said boat show promoter Duncan McIntosh arranged for the 301-foot "Great White Steamer" to be towed out of Newport Harbor at 11 p.m. Tuesday. He said he believes the ship, in its heyday the chief means of transporting tourists from the mainland to Avalon on Catalina Island, was headed for San Diego.

But San Diego harbor authorities said they know nothing about the Catalina's impending arrival there.

McIntosh, who brought the ship to Newport Harbor April 25 as an attraction at his boat show, couldn't be reached for comment.

The Coast Guard said it doesn't have any idea where the Catalina is.

And the ship's owner, Hyman Singer of Beverly Hills, wasn't talking. He is embroiled in a dispute with the City of Los Angeles over $30,000 in docking and towing fees officials claim he owes that city for berthing the big vessel.

Workers on Strike At Edison Plants

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Power station workers went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today at Southern California Edison plants in Huntington Beach and San Onofre and at eight other locations in Southern California.

Nearly 1,100 members of the Utility Workers Union of America, Local 246, voted to take to the picket lines at all sites after overwhelmingly rejecting the company's "last offer" Monday. It is the first such strike against Edison since 1953.

A union spokesman said that picketing which began at 12:01 a.m. would continue on an around the clock.

A last-ditch effort to avert the strike failed when talks broke down Tuesday. Edison had previously terminated the contract with the union effective at midnight Tuesday.

Bob Hull, a spokesman for Edison, said that supervisory personnel are taking the place of the striking union members who maintain and repair power units.

He said that he is confident that the company can continue to produce electricity at normal capacity "as long as it is necessary."

An Edison official that said that about 1,500 construction workers on a $2.4 billion expansion project at the San Onofre nuclear plant have apparently honored picket lines and didn't go to work at 9 a.m.

The workers are employed by the Bechtel Power Company and other sub-contractors. They are represented by various other unions working on plants Numbers 2 and 3.

An Edison official said the company is exploring ways to get the construction workers back on the job. About 3,000 employees in all work on the expansion project.

Young 'Nazi' Held in Killing

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A 15-year-old self-proclaimed Nazi has pleaded no contest to murdering a classmate after being taunted for his beliefs.

Roger Needham of Lansing, a frail-looking boy, wore a Nazi party emblem on his jacket when he entered his plea. He will remain in the Ingham County jail until June 5, when Circuit Judge Donald Owens will decide where he is to go for detention and psychological treatment.

Needham, son of a Cooley Law School professor, suffers from a rare form of mental illness that made him "a true paranoiac" according to a psychiatrist's report.

ROME STREET HONORS MARTYRS

ROME (AP) — Via Mario Fani, the tree-shaded street where the Red Brigades kidnapped Aldo Moro and killed his five bodyguards March 16, was renamed by the city today the "Street of the March 16 Martyrs."

Mario Fani was an educator.

Royal Divorce

Princess Meg, Mate to Split

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their mariage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remarriage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to comment about Lord Snowdon."

Lord Snowdon has been linked by gossip columnists to assistant movie producer Luey Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

HB Girl, 19, Held on Two Robbery Counts

A 19-year-old Huntington Beach girl who allegedly used a toy gun to hold up a Costa Mesa liquor store Tuesday night was apprehended by police after a patrolman spotted her running from the store.

In custody today at Orange County Jail on suspicion of armed robbery is Donna Von Sprecken, of 17301 Keelson Lane, Huntington Beach. She is being held in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Police said she is a suspect in the May 5 robbery of a Costa Mesa liquor store on 19th Street in which a young woman escaped with about $100.

Police said a woman matching the description of the suspect in the earlier hold up entered Fischer's Liquor, 3135 Harbor Blvd., at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and asked for a pack of cigarettes.

As the clerk reached for the cigarettes, the young woman allegedly revealed a realistic-looking toy revolver and demanded cash.

The clerk complied, handing over an unknown amount of money before the woman fled on foot, according to Costa Mesa police Detective Gerry Thompson.

The woman was spotted running from the store by Patrolman Jeff Clark, who captured her.

Carter to Concede?

20 More Warplanes to Pacify Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet officers are recommending that President Carter promise 20 additional F-15 jet fighters to Israel in an effort to win congressional approval of the sale of warplanes to Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, a White House source said today.

The recommendation by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown would bring to 110 the number of jet fighters promised Israel in the arms sale controversy.

The source said Carter will not change the terms of the proposed sale of 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel and 50 F-5s to Egypt by 1983, but would promise to sell Israel the additional planes after that.

Administration officials believe Carter's concession will pick up enough votes to win a go-ahead for the sale from the House International Relations Committee.

Congress has until May 28 to veto part or all of the sale. If the House committee defeats veto resolutions against the sales, it would be impossible for the full Congress to act on them and the sales would go through.

The 20 additional sophisticated swing-wing F-15s for Israel, in addition to the 15 already planned by Carter and the 25 F-15s Israel already is buying, would give the Israelis the same number as the Saudis.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in testimony to the House committee repeated today his proposal that the additional planes be sold to Israel by 1983 at the same time the original planes are being sold to Israel, the Saudis and to Egypt.

But administration sources say the additional planes could not be manufactured and delivered to Israel that fast.

Meanwhile, Brown sent members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a draft letter spelling out Saudi Arabian assurances that its warplanes would not be used against Israel.

Brown's letter reportedly said the Saudis agreed among other things that they would take planes only with defensive missiles that cannot be used against ground troops.

The Saudis also have agreed to station their jet fighters far from Israel's borders and not to buy planes from other countries during the time the American planes are being delivered.

Anti-gay Initiative Fight Due

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A statewide campaign has been launched to combat an anti-homosexual teacher initiative, with organizers calling the measure insidious, dangerous and undemocratic.

The Bay Area Committee Against the Briggs Initiative — a coalition of politicians, educators and community leaders — went public in a Tuesday news conference.

The target of the campaign is the anti-gay proposal spearheaded by Sen. John Briggs of Fullerton, a Republican candidate for governor. It would allow school boards to fire or refuse to hire teachers and school employees who are avowed homosexuals or publicly support gay lifestyles.

"It's an attempt to play upon fear and prejudice and find false scapegoats for real problems in the educational system," said Sally Gearhart, a San Francisco State University professor and avowed lesbian.

"More than gay rights are involved," said James Ballard, president of the American Federation of Teachers Local 61. He said several teachers' unions and other AFL-CIO affiliates would offer financial support to the coalition.

Harvey Milk, who became the first proclaimed homosexual elected to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, last year, urged more gays to speak out and tell others "it's my rights you're taking away . . . we have to let everyone know who we are."

The committee boasted several letters of support, including statements from Mayor George Moscone, Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., and Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco.

In a statement read at the news conference, author and pediatrician Benjamin Spock said the initiative would "teach children to fear homosexuals, which would be as bad for children as teaching them to be afraid of any group or category of people."

Killer Faces Life Sentence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ramon Salcido, convicted Killer of a San Francisco policeman, will be sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole after a jury deadlocked over his penalty.

The automatic life sentence is required under California law when a jury can't decide whether to impose the death penalty in a first degree murder of a police officer.

Superior Court Judge Claude D. Perasso discharged the jury Tuesday after it was unable to agree on six ballots in two days deliberation. The final two written ballots were split 8-4 in favor of life imprisonment, the jurors reported.

North State Temps Drop

By The Associated Press

Temperatures will continue to drop today in parts of Northern California as winds pick up and scattered thundershowers threaten mountain areas.

The National Weather Service predicted gusts of up to 30 mph in the Stockton and San Francisco Bay areas. A small-craft advisory was issued.

A slight chance of afternoon and evening showers or scattered thunderstorms was predicted for the Sierra, the Mount Shasta area and the northeast corner of the state.

A spokesman for the Utility Workers Union said that members are adamantly opposed to the rotating work schedule which has been a chief stumbling block in negotiations since last October.

Edison is seeking to implement a schedule in which union members would work weekends on a rotating schedule without receiving overtime pay.

Pickets also were posted at two Long Beach plants, Ormond Beach, Mojave, El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Oxnard and Mandalay (near Ventura.)

There are 125 members of the striking employees at San Onofre and 66 at Huntington Beach.

The facility in Huntington Beach has a capacity of producing 990 megawatts of electricity and can serve a population of about 750,000.

Man Booked In 3 Rapes

OXNARD (AP) — Police have booked a 27-year-old Ventura man for investigation of three kidnapping-rapes at knifepoint, all occurring within less than two hours.

Oxnard officers said Michael Linley was arrested late Monday night while driving a station wagon that reportedly matched the description of the vehicle used in the rapes.

The victims were described as an 11-year-old girl, seized Monday night outside her home; a 15-year-old girl, walking near the beach in the Channel Islands area; and a 17-year-old girl, grabbed from behind in an alley near her home.

Man Survives Leap

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Eric Ferrier, 29, survived a 115-foot fall after jumping from the Mississippi River Bridge over Interstate 10 Tuesday, police said. They said Ferrier landed on a soft, muddy bank. He was reported in serious condition at Methodist Hospital.

Jet Skier Facing Hit, Run Charge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man riding backwards on a mini-motorboat called a Jet Ski mowed down a man in a rowboat on Mission Bay and authorities are seeking a waterborne hit-and-run driver.

City lifeguard Don Ashton put it this way:

Rower Mike Daly was paddling along Tuesday when the Jet Ski rider, unable to see because he was riding the craft backwards, cruised over Daly's boat. The mishap did about $100 damage to the boat and inflicted minor injuries to Daly.

After stopping to help right the boat and get Daly to shore, the skier got back on his machine and roared away, thus leaving the scene of an accident, presumably a violation of the state penal code.

"There is a very good possibility" a hit-and-run charge will be filed as a result from the accident, Ashton said, noting Daly got the Jet Ski's registration number and gave it to authorities.

Tainted Pot Probe Slated

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Despite advice against it, San Diego County will investigate on its own whether Mexican marijuana sprayed with the toxic defoliant paraquat poses a health hazard to smokers.

The Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 Tuesday, ordering county health officials to report back within a week.

Earlier, Dr. John Philp, county health director, advised the county to take no action on the matter.

'No Questions'

Burglary Suspect's Only 6

WAYLAND, Mich. (AP) — Police say they cannot question their prime suspect in a nearly year-long string of Allegany County burglaries. She is only 6 years old.

"Because of the youngster's age, we can't talk to her," reported state police Sgt. James Mayo of the Wayland post. "We can't even see her. At her age, she can't even be held responsible."

But an investigation is moving along while the girl is in the custody of her parents.

The series of burglaries in the area around the girl's home just outside Wayland stopped Monday.

"She was caught twice in the same home, and the family decided to notify authorities," Mayo said Tuesday.

The sergeant said the girl allegedly began her criminal career last summer, when she was 5, "and had numerous burglaries to her credit."

The child has been caught before, Mayo said.

"The people would feel sorry for her and would not turn her in if she returned the stolen goods. It's hard to think of a 6-year-old as a hard-core criminal."

The first-grader usually entered homes through unlocked windows and left the same way, Mayo said.

"We were able to pin this down from the testimony of one woman who saw an open window and a stool pushed against it with one little footprint on the stool."

No details were given on the value of the items she took or what she did with them.

But most of the loot was small, Mayo said.

"The best information we have at this point is that she'd take small things like pliers. In one instance, she took a cake and ate it."

PRINCESS MARGARET, LORD SNOWDEN TO DIVORCE
After Stormy Marriage, a Rift in Royal Family

DIVORCE PLANNED. . .

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm. Critics, including Church of England clerics, said the affair was damaging to the image of the royal family, and some said Llewellyn was distracting Margaret from her royal duties.

It was disclosed last month that Margaret intended to continue her public life, and the implication was she would not see Llewellyn so often, at least not publicly.

In the mid-50s, Margaret suffered her first disappointment in love. She was forced under pressure to abandon her relationship with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend because he was a divorced man.

Her intention to divorce Lord Snowdon was announced eight days before the Church of England is expected to change its rules and allow divorced persons to remarry in church. The church currently allows only a service of blessing.

The change will remove a serious obstacle to the remarriage of members of the royal family.

Because the queen is officially the temporal head of the Church of England, the church prohibition was one reason royal observers believed Margaret and Snowdon would never divorce despite their legal separation.

Margaret's uncle, the uncrowned King Edward VIII, abdicated in 1936 because he wanted to marry the divorced American Wallis Warfield Simpson. There was violent opposition from the Church of England and the British government of the day.

MORO. . .

Curacio and 14 other Red Brigades members are on trial in Turin on sedition charges.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

In a spontaneous burst of emotion, millions of Italians poured out of factories, shops, offices and schools Tuesday to demonstrate against terrorism after Moro's body — chained and riddled with 11 bullets — was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome.

More than 100,000 people crowded Milan's Piazza del Duomo. More than 30,000 marched around the Colosseum in Rome, carrying hastily-fashioned white banners for the Christian Democrats and red for the Communists along with black-framed portraits of the 61-year-old former premier.

The nation's unions called a two-hour general strike today so workers could attend mass meetings against terrorism. Student demonstrations also were scheduled, and some student groups "excommunicated" the Red Brigades from the anti-government movement.

Pope Paul VI said Moro's assassination is "a bloody mark which dishonors our country." He told children who just received their First Communion and others gathered in St. Peter's Basilica today, "This crime has shocked every honest person in the world, the whole of society."

Actor Urges Reform Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Robertson, whose missing $10,000 check sparked an investigation into corruption in the movie industry, urged his fellow actors Tuesday to dare to speak out on wrongdoing in Hollywood.

"It is truth, no matter how difficult, that will arrest corporate crime in our industry and set us free," Robertson told about 400 members of the New York Screen Actors Guild at their annual meeing.

In a question session, the actor suggested that a board of experts study the industry and recommend reforms.

418 N-M Employees To Get Pink Slips

Newport-Mesa Unified School District trustees unanimously ordered notices of dismissal mailed to 58 teachers and 360 non-teaching employees Tuesday because of declining enrollment in Harbor Area schools.

"It's a terrible action we have to take," said school board President Donald Smallwood, following a verbal protest by Don Kimble, president of the Newport-Mesa Education Association (NMEA), which represents the district 1,200-plus teachers.

"We have looked, we have listened, we have tried," said Smallwood. "There is not any among us (trustees) that has any sense that this is a good deal."

Trustee Carol Martin stressed that the cutbacks aren't related to the possible passage of the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative.

The dismissal notices, to be in the hands of teachers by Monday, are due to steady declines in enrollment, about 2,800 students over the past two years, district officials said.

NMEA chief Kimble asked, "Why not take advantage of the decline and reduce class size? You should consider people first and things second in your budget priorities."

Unlike the action to mail dismissal notices to teachers, the school board's decision to send similar notices to 360 classified (non-teaching) employees does not mean that all 360 will be without jobs next year.

District officials estimate that, actually, about 150 classified employees won't be rehired.

The district has released a list of non-teaching employees with the least seniority in their respective jobs, including 205 instructional aides, 86 teachers' aides and 56 noon supervisors.

Re-employment for next school year will be based on seniority and any retirements that may occur in the meantime.

District officials said the cutbacks are necessary to avoid overstaffing.

In addition to the cutbacks in teaching and classified personnel, Superintendent John Nicoll said, there will be five fewer administrators next year.

The dismissal notices to 58 teachers are firm. The action climaxed a two-month series of public hearings and the district's filing of necessary legal documents.

Kimble noted that the 58 teachers account for about 30 full-time positions, adding that the district already has decided not to rehire an additional 55 teachers working under 10-month temporary contracts.

He said the district should have made more extensive cutbacks in administrative staff and that the teachers would be willing to work with reduced supplies.

"The cuts are not in the best interest of the district and the students we serve," said Kimble.

Princess Meg's Life Often Controversial

LONDON (AP) — From her impetuous childhood through her precocious teen-age years to her stormy middle age, Britain's Princess Margaret swirled through life trailing controversy over her men and her deportment.

The announcement today from Buckingham Palace that she and husband Antony Armstrong-Jones would seek a divorce after nearly two years of separation was only the latest episode in a life that seemed the very stuff of novels

MARGARET WAS BORN IN August 1930, and made her first public appearance at the age of 6 at her father's coronation. Since then, she has been continually in the public eye — often with heavy consequences for her private life.

She was a lively child, known to cartwheel down Buckingham Palace halls, defy orders and make scenes.

"My first memory," she said, "is half-falling out of my pram baby carriage. A great to-do. I imagine I must have wanted to be noticed."

She was a capable horsewoman, spoke a number of languages, and loved piano. Both Margaret and her older sister, later Queen Elizabeth II, were proficient swimmers.

BUT WHEN THEY WERE awarded a lifesaving certificate together, Margaret became so angry she picked up her sister's dog, threw it into Buckingham Palace's lake, and then, clad in her best party dress, jumped in to rescue the drenches animal.

"Margaret always wants what I want," her sister once said.

"When my sister and I were growing up," explained Margaret, "she was made out to be the goody-goody one. That was boring so the press tried to make out I was wicked as hell."

Margaret blossomed into a precocious teen-ager and jet-setter, a beautiful young woman with violet eyes, brown hair and flawless skin. She was surrounded by the British press and idolized by the royalty-loving public during the austere post-World War II years.

"THE PLEASURE-SEEKING PRINCESS," headline writers called her.

She was always off to nightclubs trailing dukes, guard officers and other eligible young men. There were pictures of her smoking in public. Her elegant cigarette holders became famous.

In her mid-20s, her ill-fated romance with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend brought her widespread sympathy: Townsend, a Battle of Britain hero, was equerry to Margaret's father King George VI. But the dashing fighter ace had been

County paramedics and Marine Corps Search and Rescue teamed up Tuesday to rush a rattlesnake-bite victim by helicopter to Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo, from Santiago Peak in Cleveland National Forest.

It was an effort expected to be repeated several times this year, county officials agree, because 1978 is expected to be a dangerous rattlesnake season.

Tuesday's victim, Helmar Tschugg, 36, of 129 Avenida Mariposa, San Clemente, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital intensive care unit.

Villa Park-based paramedics said Tschugg and a companion were in the Cleveland National Forest hiking when a snake struck him on the right ankle.

The two walked a half hour to the peak to contact electronics technicians who service relay equipment there. They, paramedics said, called the County Fire Department.

Tschugg was the second rattler victim treated at Mission

Irvine Council OKs Suit Against IRWD

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A constitutional test will be made of the legality of landowner dominance of the Irvine Ranch Water District board of directors after the Irvine City Council voted Tuesday to file lawsuit against the district in Superior Court.

The vote to sue the district, and try to stop a scheduled landowner election June 19 that would authorize the district to issue $1 billion in bonds for water and sewer projects, was unanimous.

The council directed Roger Grable, assistant city attorney, to file suit challenging the proposed bond authorization on two grounds.

First, the council alleged the IRWD failed to comply with requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act, because no environmental impact report was prepared to analyze impacts of the drawing-board projects the bonds would finance.

Second, the council declared the IRWD board of directors, to which only two of its seven members are publicly elected, is unconstitutionally composed, in violation of the one man, one vote principle.

Mesa Heists

Female Suspect Held in Robberies

A 19-year-old Huntington Beach girl who allegedly used a toy gun to hold up a Costa Mesa liquor store Tuesday night was apprehended by police after a patrolman spotted her running from the store.

In custody today at Orange County Jail on suspicion of armed robbery is Donna Von Sprecken of 17301 Keelson Lane, Huntington Beach. She is being held in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Police said she is a suspect in the May 5 robbery of a Costa Mesa liquor store on 19th Street in which a young woman escaped with about $100.

Police said a woman matching the description of the suspect in the earlier hold up entered Fischer's Liquor, 3135 Harbor Blvd., at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and asked for a pack of cigarettes.

As the clerk reached for the cigarettes, the young woman allegedly revealed a realistic-looking toy revolver and demanded cash.

The clerk complied, handing over an unknown amount of money before the woman fled on foot, according to Costa Mesa police Detective Gerry Thompson.

The woman was spotted running from the store by Patrolman Jeff Clark, who captured her.

Planners Deadlocked On Freeze

The Costa Mesa Planning Commission has deadlocked on setting new development standards for a north city area that is currently under a four-month development freeze.

A trio of 2-2 votes during Monday night's planning commission meetings means the zoning fate of the area will be up to the City Council.

Involved is the area between Baker Street on the south, Paularino Avenue on the north, Jeffrey Drive on the west and just short of Bristol Street on the east.

Reacting to intense "development pressures" on the area, the city planning staff won council approval for a development freeze on the area until a traffic circulation plan and new development standards are worked out.

The area currently is a mixture of light commercial and residential development, but is zoned for high density in the city's general plan.

The Planning Commission was asked to consider three alternatives. One was simply to leave the area as it is.

The other two alternatives involved added high density development, with or without the extension of Randolph Street across Baker into the area for a linkup at Paularino and Platte Drive.

Each alternative ended with a split vote among the commissioners. Commissioner Dick Carstensen abstained from all three votes because he has property interests in the area involved.

The matter will go to the City Council June 5.

Educator's Award

McNally Principal Coleman Surprised

It was a perfect setup that lured Jack Coleman, popular principal of McNally Continuation High School in Costa Mesa, to Tuesday night's meeting of Newport-Mesa school trustees.

He received a phone call Tuesday morning from Bailey Daugherty, principal of Silverado Continuation School in the Saddleback Unified District.

Coleman was told that McNally's director of student activities, Dorothy Hauser, was to receive the second annual Orange County Administrators' award for "Continuation Educator of the Year."

So naturally, Coleman made arrangements to have many of Mrs. Hauser's fellow teachers and students in attendance. Coleman also kicked in $10 for a bouquet to present to her.

"I kept wondering why she wasn't talking to me at the meeting," Coleman said today.

Most likely, Mrs. Hauser was trying to supress the laughter that broke out when Daugherty announced that Coleman was the award winner.

"That's the damnedest trick I ever heard of," Coleman told trustees. "If I'd have known I would have dressed up," said Coleman, who was wearing a blue leisure suit minus tie.

"We thought you were," quipped one trustee.

Daugherty said the award to Coleman would have been presented in February but was delayed until the district worked out a final decision on the relocation of the downtown Costa Mesa facility.

The continuation school will be moving to Monte Vista Elementary School site in Costa Mesa at the start of the 1979 school year.

The award is now in Coleman's hands as the best continuation school educator in the county.

And yes, he got back the $10 he donated for Mrs. Hauser's flowers.

WATER DISTRICT SUIT...

are elected by landowner vote. Within the district, the Irvine Company owns more than 90 percent of the undeveloped land. The election amounts to an appointment of directors by the company.

The council action came after a one-hour session that was closed to the public.

Councilman Larry Agran made the motion to sue.

"It's largely a question," he said in an interview today "of whether you can undertake a project of such large proportions without the appropriate environmental impact studies, and without giving the citizens of our city a proper opportunity to fully consider such a massive undertaking.

"The second issue is a question of whether such an undemocratically constituted board constitutionally has the authority to commit the city, for decades into the future, on the question of water policy."

"Underlying the whole case," Agran added, is the far more fundamental question of who controls developmental policy in the city of Irvine.

"Will developmental policy be fashioned by duly elected representatives — through our general plan adopted by the City Council — or will it be dictated by the actions of an undemocratically and unconstitutionally constituted water board?"

Councilman David Sills, also contacted today, concurred.

"The IRWD," he said, "is one of the last vestiges of land baron rule in the West.

"Next month, one man — the president of the Irvine Company — will cast over 90 percent of the votes to authorize a $1 billion dollar public bond issue.

"We are simply asking the court to give the other residents in the community an equal voice in their affairs."

Lansing Eberling, president of the IRWD board, said today he was "disappointed" by the council action.

"I thought we were communicating with them," he said. "I also thought that adding two new members on the board who were publicly elected was the beginning of a board more publicly represented."

The board plans an eventual transition of power by adding new, publicly elected members as water use figures demonstrate that residents are using more water than landowners.

"The idea of transition," Eberling said, "serves the needs of all the parties. I think it's a fair way of doing it."

Eberling said water use projections indicate there will be a public majority on the board about 1984.

He said the board position on the environmental issue is that impact reports are not needed until actual projects are proposed for building.

Eberling has called an emergency session of the water board for 2 p.m. Saturday to discuss the city lawsuit. The session will be closed to the public, under provisions of the Brown Act which allow public bodies to meet secretly to discuss litigation.

Terror Mounts in Italy

Executive Shot as Moro Death Protests Rise

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services were held today according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. About 400 persons attended the service.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged away in chains.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

In a spontaneous burst of emotion, millions of Italians poured out of factories, shops, offices and schools Tuesday to demonstrate against terrorism after Moro's body — chained and riddled with 11 bullets — was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome.

More than 100,000 people crowded Milan's Piazza del Duomo. More than 30,000 marched around the Colosseum in Rome, carrying hastily-fashioned white banners for the Christian Democrats and red for the Communists along with black-framed portraits of the 61-year-old former premier.

The nation's unions called a two-hour general strike today so workers could attend mass meetings against terrorism. Student demonstrations also were scheduled, and some student groups "excommunicated" the Red Brigades from the anti-government movement.

Pope Paul VI said Moro's assassination is "a bloody mark which dishonors our country." He told children who just received their First Communion and others gathered in St. Peter's Basilica today, "This crime has shocked every honest person in the world, the whole of society."

'Baby Minnows' Too

Fish Fry Invites Beauty Contestants

Babes and babies alike are being sought to strut their stuff before judges at the Costa Mesa-Newport Harbor Lions Club annual Fish Fry and Carnival June 2-4 at Lions Park in Costa Mesa.

Applications are now open for would-be claimants to the "Miss Mermaid/Miss Costa Mesa" and "Baby Minnow" thrones.

Unmarried young women between 17 and 22 years old are eligible to compete in the 1978 Fish Fry Beauty Contest. Residents of all Orange and Los Angeles County cities are eligible for the "Miss Mermaid" honor. If the winner lives or works in Costa Mesa, she also will be crowned "Miss Costa Mesa."

Applications for the beauty contest can be picked up at City Hall, the Chamber of Commerce or Brecht Orchid Gardens in Costa Mesa. More information is available at 548-1316.

There also will be two "Baby Minnows" selected at this year's festivities. The baby contest is open to kids in two categories — between six months and one year old and between 13 months and 2 years old.

Parents can register their babies at Cal's Cameras, 1770 Newport Blvd, Costa Mesa. Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. June 1.

PUBLIC PRINCESS...

divorced, and that brought family and church pressure that eventually forced the princess to renounce him.

Four and a half years later, in May 1960, she married globe-trotting photographer Armstrong-Jones — later elevated to the peerage as Lord Snowdon — after a secret love affair. Millions watched their wedding ceremony at Westminster Abbey or on television.

THEIR OFTEN ROCKY MARRIAGE enthralled Britons but effectively ended 16 years and two children later with a separation.

"I don't see myself marrying again," the Princess said in 1977. "It would probably be too much of a bore."

Her latest man, and suitably her latest scandal, was Roddy Llewellyn, a socialite and former hippie turned aspiring supper-club crooner.

Margaret came in for sharp criticism in Parliament, in public and among Church of England clerics for her friendship with Llewellyn, with whom she frequently was seen and in whose company she took vacations on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

It was announced last month that Margaret would continue her public life — the implication being that she would not see Llewellyn as often at least in public — and the Buckingham Palace announcement today said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm. Critics, including Church of England clerics, said the affair was damaging to the image of the royal family, and some said Llewellyn was distracting Margaret from her royal duties.

It was disclosed last month that Margaret intended to continue her public life, and the implication was she would not see Llewellyn so often, at least not publicly.

In the mid-50s, Margaret suffered her first disappointment in love. She was forced under pressure to abandon her relationship with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend because he was a divorced man.

Her intention to divorce Lord Snowdon was announced eight days before the Church of England is expected to change its rules and allow divorced persons to remarry in church. The church currently allows only a service of blessing.

The change will remove a serious obstacle to the remarriage of members of the royal family.

Because the queen is officially the temporal head of the Church of England, the church prohibition was one reason royal observers believed Margaret and Snowdon would never divorce despite their legal separation.

Margaret's uncle, the uncrowned King Edward VIII, abdicated in 1936 because he wanted to marry the divorced American Wallis Warfield Simpson. There was violent opposition from the Church of England and the British government of the day.

County OKs Noise Gear For Airport

Orange County Airport will be getting $199,579 worth of new noise monitoring equipment, supervisors decided Tuesday.

The board also will decide next month whether to spend another $61,650 to expand the monitoring system to El Toro Marine Corps Air Station as well.

A contract for the monitoring equipment was awarded to Tracor Inc. the low of two bidders for the noise systems.

Supervisors decided last year to replace the existing noise monitoring equipment. The new system will be financed with airport revenue and a $65,593 state grant.

A report to supervisors said installing the noise monitors around El Toro could help in land use planning for areas impacted by high jet noise levels.

However, expanding the system could force the hiring of additional county employes, the report said.

Nude Bathers Arrested in South Laguna

Orange County Sheriff's officers moved in on nude bathers Tuesday and jailed three allegedly naked beach-goers who reportedly offended other sun seekers on the 9th Street beach in South Laguna.

Booked into the county jail on charges of public nudity were Richard Thomas Colbert, 26, of 2510 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach and two transients: Bruce Donald Sutherland, 24, and Diana Deedee Bicknell, 18.

Deputies also issued a citation to a woman who allegedly was found lying nude on the sand near the point of the three arrests.

She was identified as Gwendolyn Ann Jones, 25, of 31667 3rd St., South Laguna.

Edison Workers Vote to Picket

Trash Refund?

County Areas May Benefit

About 30,000 residents of unincorporated Orange County will get a refund or credit for trash collection fees paid during the three-week strike, if Supervisor Ralph Clark has his way.

Clark's fellow supervisors Tuesday agreed to have county officials negotiate with trash haulers for either a refund or credit for fees paid while workers weren't collecting refuse.

Clark said the county can force the refunds or credits through haulers' performance bonds. He also suggested city officials might follow the county's lead and seek similar refunds for residents.

In other action Tuesday, supervisors closed the Huntington Beach trash transfer station to the public except for its periodic weekend opening.

The station had been available for residents weekdays during the strike. But it now will be reserved for use by commercial haulers only except for its regular noon to 3:30 p.m. opening the second and fourth Saturdays of each month.

Power Cutback Not Due

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Power station workers went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today at Southern California Edison plants in Huntington Beach and San Onofre and at eight other locations in Southern California.

Nearly 1,100 members of the Utility Workers Union of America, Local 246, voted to take to the picket lines at all sites after overwhelmingly rejecting the company's "last offer" Monday. It is the first such strike against Edison since 1953.

A union spokesman said that picketing which began at 12:01 a.m. would continue on an around the clock.

A last-ditch effort to avert the strike failed when talks broke down Tuesday. Edison had previously terminated the contract with the union effective at midnight Tuesday.

Bob Hull, a spokesman for Edison, said that supervisory personnel are taking the place of the striking union members who maintain and repair power units.

He said that he is confident that the company can continue to produce electricity at normal capacity "as long as it is necessary."

An Edison official that said that about 1,500 construction workers on a $2.4 billion expansion project at the San Onofre nuclear plant have apparently honored picket lines and didn't go to work at 9 a.m.

The workers are employed by the Bechtel Power Company and other sub-contractors. They are represented by various other unions working on plants Numbers 2 and 3.

An Edison official said the company is exploring ways to get the construction workers back on the job. About 3,000 employees in all work on the expansion project.

A spokesman for the Utility Workers Union said that members are adamantly opposed to the rotating work schedule which has been a chief stumbling block in negotiations since last October.

Edison is seeking to implement a schedule in which union members would work weekends on a rotating schedule without receiving overtime pay.

Pickets also were posted at two Long Beach plants, Ormond Beach, Mojave, El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Oxnard and Mandalay (near Ventura.)

There are 125 members of the striking employees at San Onofre and 66 at Huntington Beach.

The facility in Huntington Beach has a capacity of producing 990 megawatts of electricity and can serve a population of about 750,000.

Carter Urged to OK More Israeli Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet officers are recommending that President Carter promise 20 additional F-15 jet fighters to Israel in an effort to win congressional approval of the sale of warplanes to Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, a White House source said today.

The recommendation by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown would bring to 110 the number of jet fighters promised Israel in the arms sale controversy.

The source said Carter will not change the terms of the proposed sale of 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel and 50 F-5s to Egypt by 1983, but would promise to sell Israel the additional planes after that.

Administration officials believe Carter's concession will pick up enough votes to win a go-ahead for the sale from the House International Relations Committee.

Congress has until May 28 to veto part or all of the sale. If the House committee defeats veto resolutions against the sales, it would be impossible for the full Congress to act on them and the sales would go through.

The 20 additional sophisticated swing-wing F-15s for Israel, in addition to the 15 already planned by Carter and the 25 F-15s Israel already is buying, would give the Israelis the same number as the Saudis.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in testimony to the House committee repeated today his proposal that the additional planes be sold to Israel by 1983 at the same time the original planes are being sold to Israel, the Saudis and to Egypt

But administration sources say the additional planes could not be manufactured and delivered to Israel that fast.

Meanwhile, Brown sent members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a draft letter spelling out Saudi Arabian assurances that its warplanes would not be used against Israel.

Brown's letter reportedly said the Saudis agreed among other things that they would take planes only with defensive missiles that cannot be used against ground troops.

The Saudis also have agreed to station their jet fighters far from Israel's borders and not to buy planes from other countries during the time the American planes are being delivered.

Diver Killed By Octopus

TOKYO (AP) — Police found the body of Yuki Otaka, a 34-year-old postal clerk and amateur diver, in 15 feet of water. On his back was an empty tank that had held enough oxygen for an hour.

Fifteen feet away was a six-foot octopus dead from cuts by Otaka's knife. The police said there were no wounds or bruises on the diver's body.

They believed his oxygen ran out while he was fighting the octopus and he suffocated.

Jarvis Measure Studied

Panel Says Price Tag Too High for Reform

Passage of Proposition 13 would cut property taxes without reducing the size of government or the total tax bill paid by Orange Countians, county supervisors were told Tuesday.

That was the assessment offered by the 19-member Citizens Direction Finding Commission (CDFC) after reviewing the Jarvis-Gann property tax limitation initiative.

Janice Hall, an Anaheim insurance representative and commission chairwoman, said the measure would achieve property tax reform but at too high a price tag.

Mrs. Hall and fellow commissioners predicted the measure would lead to higher state income and sales taxes as well as a loss of local control over local government.

Proposition 13 would limit property taxes to 1 percent of a property's 1975-76 value and clamp a two percent per year ceiling on increases. Properties would be reassessed at full value, however, whenever sold.

The CDFC, in a report to supervisors, contended the measure would penalize families forced to move often since they would face tax increases each time they purchased a new home.

As a result, the report said, owners of identical property could have tax bills that vary.

In addition, they criticized the initiative as leading to a shift in tax burdens from business to individuals and offering no relief for renters.

Mrs. Hall told supervisors the critique was not intended as an endorsement for or against the measure but to let residents know of some of the initiative's consequences.

The commission was created by supervisors to advise them on matters affecting local government.

Five members are appointed by supervisors, five by the League of Citizens and nine by the commission.

Also, Frederick M. Lang, a South Laguna landscape architect; Sheila Malakoff, a Huntington Beach consultant; Richard Spooner, a Newport Beach attorney, and Shirley Commons, a Huntington Beach realtor.

Supervisor Philip Anthony said the idea behind his proposed legislation would be to lessen the immediate impact of Jarvis on local government while forcing the state to contend with the long-standing school finance question.

Westminster Victim

Arraignment Due In Double Slaying

Prosecutors were pondering today whether or not to ask for the death penalty in the double slaying in Long Beach of a Westminster market owner and his clerk during a $150 robbery

Court arraignment was scheduled for the adult suspect in the case, Charles A. Mosley, 23, of Compton. His alleged accomplice is a 17-year-old juvenile.

Victims in the double shooting were Parshotambhi Patel, 47, the store owner from Westminster, and his clerk, Jaroon Direjit, 33, of Long Beach.

Patel, of 15952 Diamond St., and Direjit were forced to kneel on the floor behind the store counter in their final seconds of life.

One shot was fired into Patel's brain; one into Direjit's and several more shots were then fired into the second victim's back, investigators say.

Police claim the suspects, both from Compton, were recorded on a remote control security camera snapping shots each two to three seconds intervals.

The actual shooting of the kneeling men is not seen on film, according to police, but the looting of the cash register is.

A third unidentified employee of the 7-Eleven Market owned by India-born Patel, was also cowering in a storeroom unseen during the killings and robbery and will be a witness.

He called police when the armed robbery team fled and Mosley and his teen-aged companion were arrested within five minutes about two miles north of the blood-spattered Long Beach Boulevard grocery.

Investigators allege that a .22 caliber revolver and money were confiscated from Mosley and his associate, who are held without bail, the younger male charged as a juvenile.

Campaign Effort To Be Investigated

Orange County's new Fair Campaign Practices Commission will hold a hearing next Tuesday on the first complaint to come its way.

Truman T. Legg, an administrator in the county clerk's office and one of six candidates for clerk-recorder, told commissioners this week he suspects an opponent of using misleading information in a campaign brochure.

Legg alleged candidate Marshall Norris, a deputy clerk, used misleading information concerning his education and background.

Commissioners agreed to invite Norris to reply to Legg's complaint at a 7 p.m. hearing next Tuesday at the county Registrar of Voters office, McFadden and Grand Avenues, Santa Ana.

Commission Chairman William Thom told Legg the commission has no power to stop distribution of any campaign literature

The commission, created by supervisors to oversee campaigns of county government officeseekers, can hold hearings on complaints and make public findings of any wrong-doing.

County Board Backs Prop. 8

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The county Board of Supervisors has voted 3-2 to oppose Proposition 13 — the Jarvis-Gann initiative — and support a rival measure — Proposition 8 — in the June 6 primary.

The propositions are designed to reduce property taxes by approximately 50 percent and 31 percent, respectively.

Supervisor Ed Edelman, an outspoken opponent of Proposition 13 and other critics of the initiative, contend the measure would deprive Los Angeles County of about $738 million in revenue and the state of about $7 billion.

Riley Offers Cats Help

Adoption of Unaltered Adults Proposed

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Supervisor Thomas Riley has a suggestion of his own for improving conditions at the county animal shelter.

He wants to make it possible for families to adopt or reclaim unaltered adult cats so the animals won't have to be destroyed.

Riley's proposal comes on the heels of a decision by the board of supervisors Tuesday to change the way county officials destroy 30,000 unwanted pets at the shelter each year.

The board followed Supervisor Philip Anthony's recommendation to close down decompression chambers at the shelter for at least the next year and destroy unwanted pets by injection instead.

Anthony called the injections "unquestionably humane," but labeled the chamber "absolutely inhumane."

Anthony's proposal was supported by more than 50 citizens in the supervisors' hearing room Tuesday and drew no objections.

However, Supervisor Ralph Diedrich abstained from voting until county officials return with a plan for implementing the new animal euthanasia system.

Riley had planned to offer his proposal on cats at Tuesday's meeting as well, but waited to give County Counsel Adrian Kuyper time to review it.

Riley said it was "a deep concern for humane treatment of animals" that led to his objection to a county policy that prohibits release of adult cats from the shelter unless they have been spayed or neutered.

"Basically, this policy requires the destruction of all adult cats which are impounded at the shelter," Riley said.

Yet, he continued, county officials may release both dogs and kittens at the shelter once owners or adopting families put up a spay or neuter deposit.

That deposit is returned once proof of neutering is shown.

Riley said a literal interpretation of state law prohibits release of cats unless they are neutered.

However, he said, most other cities and counties have interpreted the law so that adult cats can be released to owners or new homes, then altered later on.

TAKE INVENTORY
of your home's valuables

It's not a pleasant thing to think about, but if you were to suddenly lose your valuable jewelry and other important possessions through theft or fire, would you be able to furnish your insurance company or police with a complete listing of your losses?

It's a good idea to get an up-to-date, qualified appraisal of your valuables, and to make up an inventory list. The best kind of inventory is kept in a simple card file. Use 6x8 cards, so there's room to attach photographs of your valuable objects to each card, along with description and value. Also list when and where the object was acquired. Family pieces should get special attention. There should be a written record of second, third and fourth generation items. All important pieces should be appraised by a qualified professional your insurance company will accept.

Add more than just the obvious things to your inventory. Include objects that do not "stand out" in the household, but which have some intrinsic value to you. Keep a copy of the inventory outside your home, in a safe deposit box or with an attorney.

Upstaging Candidates

RICKY TICKY POLITIX: You can almost work up a measure of pity for candidates seeking election in our upcoming June primary. They seem to be drawing scant attention in the public prints.

Instead, the greater volume of public political ink and radio and television time seems to be devoted to a man named Howard Jarvis.

Mr. Jarvis isn't running for any public office.

JARVIS

He is, however, a central figure in the June election as co-author of the Jarvis-Gann property tax limitation initiative which will appear as Proposition 13 on the ballot.

EVEN THOSE CITIZENS who only follow politics in the margins have heard about Proposition 13 by now. You may not know who seeks the state Senate seat in your region but it's become increasingly difficult to ignore Number 13.

In event you have been absent from our sector of the globe in recent times, you should know that Proposition 13, if adopted by the voters, would limit property taxes to one percent of the market value of real estate. It would further limit property value increases placed on real estate to two percent per year.

SUMNER

This drastic cutback has drawn strong criticism from public school people and city and county officials, whose operations would suffer heavy cash loses if Proposition 13 becomes law.

As for Howard Jarvis, he seems to be putting in considerable time in our coastal region in campaigning for his measure. He must figure our area is a lush hunting ground for votes.

In two of his most recent appearances, Mr. Jarvis has found his principal antagonist in debate in the form of Orange County Superior Court Judge Bruce Sumner, who resides in Laguna Beach.

SUMNER AND JARVIS went at each other for an hour on Channel 50 television the other night and clashed again later in a Laguna debate where Sumner had an ally in Laguna schools chief Bob Sanchis.

There is an enormous difference in the style and approach of the two men as they debate the pros and cons of the initiative.

Jarvis, in promoting passage, leans heavily on the glittering generality. He talks about "peeling the fat" off of government and how there is enough cash surplus in Sacramento "to float California on $100 bills."

JUDGE SUMNER, IN urging rejection of Proposition 13, gets to specifics on how the initiative would, in his view, hamstring local government and school boards and surrender tax revenue control to Sacramento. Sumner's most telling argument notes that under Proposition 13, local governments must get a two-thirds vote of all their registered voters to pass any new tax revenue proposal. And of course, it's virtually impossible to even get two-thirds of the voters to the polls.

So the debate rages on over Proposition 13.

You may never hear from any candidates. They may not get their names in print until the ballots are issued.

1976 AMC Cars Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency ordered American Motors Corp. today to recall virtually all its 1976-model automobiles because the vehicles spew excessive amounts of nitrogen oxide pollution into the air.

The unprecedented recall order involves about 270,000 Hornets, Gremlins, Pacers and Matadors, the EPA said. Only those 1976 autos manufactured for sale in California, whose air pollution standards are stricter than the federal rules, are currently exempt.

BUT THE 21,741 California-market cars are under investigation for possible recall because of the same problem, the EPA said.

In addition, the agency said it was recalling 40,000 1975 and 1976 model Jeeps and Post Office dispatcher trucks made by AMC because of the same problem.

The EPA's order was the first recall ever by the agency to involve virtually the entire production of a single automaker in a model year.

THE PROBLEM WITH these vehicles is a faulty joint in the emission control system that frequently has broken, causing high levels of nitrogen oxide exhausts, said EPA Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum.

"This pollutant can contribute to breathing illnesses, chest pains and bronchitis in children. It helps form smog, that all-too-familiar source of headaches, smarting eyes and coughing among city residents," she told reporters.

"If the public health threat from air pollution is to be abated, it is crucial that cars meet the emission standards set by Congress."

THE EPA SAID the recall was prompted by an inadequately brazed joint in the back-pressure sensor, which impairs the ability of the air pollution control system to reduce emissions of nitrogen oxides.

Ford Motor Co. recently was ordered to recall 640,000 vehicles for a similar defect. The EPA said both Ford and American Motors purchased the defective parts from the Eaton Corp. of Battle Creek, Mich.

The EPA said the part costs $20 but gave no immediate estimate of the total cost of the recall, saying only about half the cars recalled are normally brought in for repairs by their owners.

THE GOVERNMENT'S action was seen as part of a new get-tough attitude by the EPA toward possible violations of air quality standards.

Ex-envoy's Wife Dies In Suicide

MOSCOW (AP) — Leongina Shevchenko, the wife of the Soviet U.N. diplomat who refused to return home from the United States, committed suicide, her son said today.

Gennady Shevchenko told Western reporters by telephone from the family's Moscow apartment he could give no details about his mother's death Monday "but I confirm that she committed suicide."

EARLIER THE SON, like his father a diplomat in the Soviet foreign service, told reporters who telephoned him his mother had died of a heart attack.

"I just did not want to say immediately that she had committed suicide," he said in a subsequent call.

Soviet sources with good official contacts made the first disclosure of the suicide, saying Mrs. Shevchenko died from an overdose of sleeping pills and that her body was found in a closet of the family apartment where she had been living with her 16-year-old daughter since her return from New York in April.

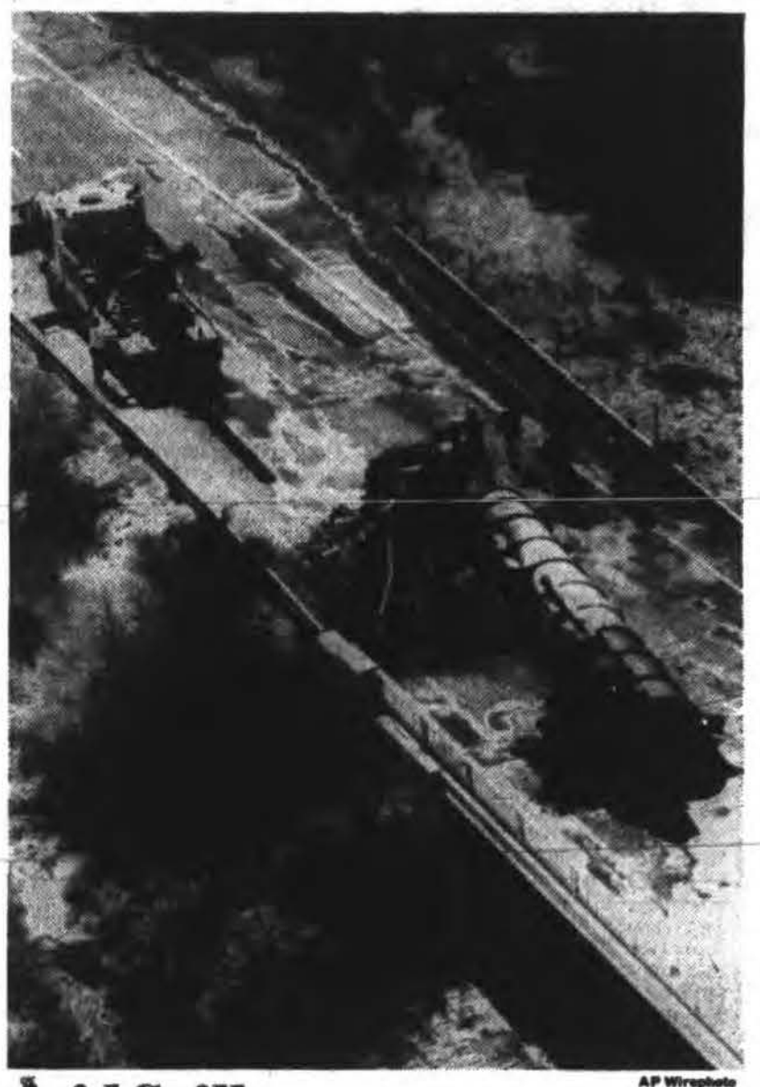

ARKADY SHEVCHENKO, the top-ranking Soviet citizen on the staff of the United Nations, left his post as undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs on April 5 because of "differences with his government," a U.N. spokesman said.

Informed sources said he refused to obey an order from the Soviet government to return home, and his wife went without him, taking their daughter, after a violent argument.

The Soviet government blamed the Ukrainian-born diplomat's defiance on a "frameup" by U.S. intelligence agents, but the U.S. government said it had nothing to do with his actions.

SOVIET DIPLOMATS at the United Nations circulated stories at the time that Shevchenko was having an affair with an American woman and also had a drinking problem. There was also speculation that he was a secret American agent and had been found out.

Mrs. Shevchenko told reporters on her return that her husband's action was a "crude provocation" by American authorities and that he would never have wanted to stay in the United States.

Wichita's Gay Rights Law Loses

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — In a resounding "mandate for righteousness," Wichita voters told homosexuals to keep their lifestyle to themselves and repealed a gay rights ordinance by a 5-to-1 margin.

"People are saying loud and clear to the nation that America does not feel that pro-homosexual legislation brought under the civil rights issue is legitimate," said the Rev. Ron Adrian, a Baptist minister who led the group that forced the referendum. "I think God's using this vote to openly rebuke the pro-homosexual forces."

THE VOTE IN favor of repeal was 47,246, and 10,005 supported retention of the seven-month-old ordinance, which prohibited discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodation because of "sexual or affectional preferences." (Related story Page A5.)

Similar ordinances were repealed in Miami last June and in St. Paul, Minn., on April 25. A referendum is scheduled later this month in Eugene, Ore., on a gay rights ordinance there.

The 83-to-17 percent victory margin came in one of Wichita's largest election turnouts, with 44 percent of the city's 128,888 registered voters casting ballots. Both supporters and opponents of the ordinance had expected repeal but the margin of defeat surprised all.

ADRIAN, WHO HAD predicted a 2-to-1 defeat, said he foresaw no backlash against the gay community due to the vote.

"I think homosexuals will be just as welcome in Wichita tomorrow as they ever have been here," he said.

'Perfect' Air Crash Puzzles Authorities

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Federal officials have begun their investigation to learn why a National Airlines jetliner, in no apparent trouble, made a "perfect landing" into Escambia Bay, instead of on the runway three miles ahead.

Flight 193 crashed into the fog-shrouded waters late Monday with 58 people aboard. Three of the 52 passengers drowned.

Investigators say they have no immediate indication why the three-engine jet wasn't at the prescribed altitude of 1,250 feet when it hit the water.

"There were no changes in pitch or power," said Jim King, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. "It was in stable position. Once they went in, many of the people on board just thought it was a particularly hard landing."

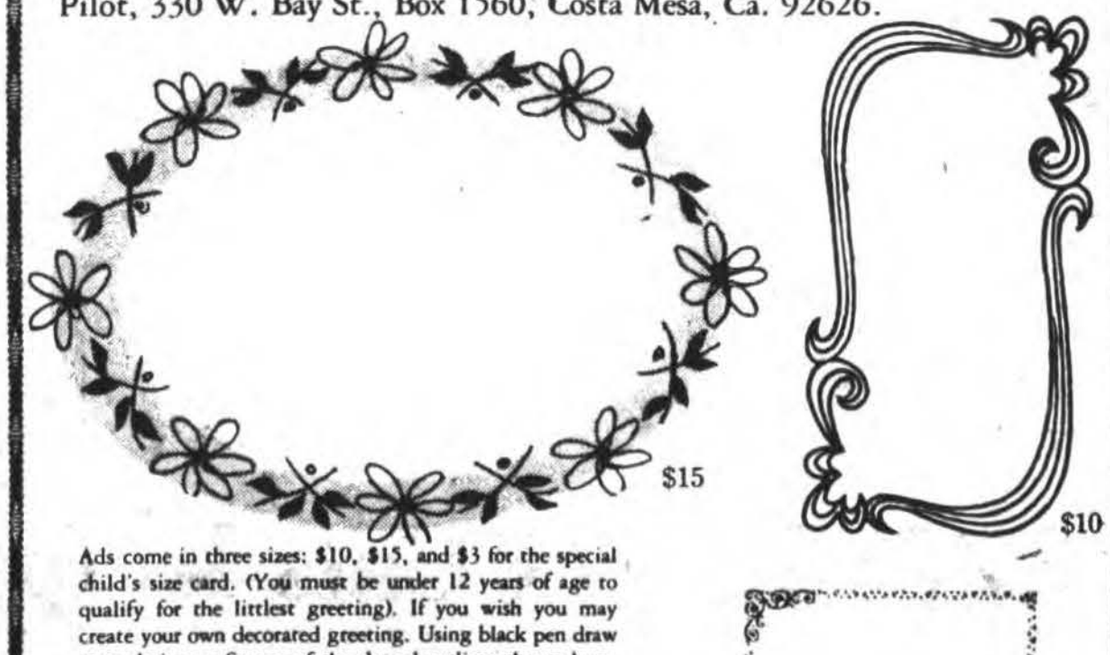

Tugboat operator Glenn McDonald of Gulf Breeze told investigators the plane "appeared to be making a perfect landing — into the water," King said. McDonald and crewman Bill Kenney became heroes when they pushed a construction barge next to the plane, then pulled scores of passengers to safety.

U.S. Summary

A high pressure system stretching across most of the Mississippi Valley to the Rockies kept most of the nation dry this morning.

The only precipitation came in the form of scattered showers over the mountains of Idaho and Montana and in Utah, Nevada and the Pacific Northwest. The showers were the result of a Pacific cold front.

Little change was expected today in the precipitation pattern, with scattered showers forecast from the upper Ohio Valley into northern Maine, in Florida and from northern Nevada across Idaho and western Montana.

Clear skies covered an area from Tennessee and the lower half of the Mississippi Valley westward over the South and central Rockies.

Temperatures along the East Coast, ahead of the high pressure system were generally mild. Readings in the 50s dominated New England with temperatures in the 70s reaching from Georgia and Florida through the Gulf Coast region to Texas.

Bay Area Gays on March

1,000 Protest Repeal of Wichita Rights Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,000 chanting San Franciscans, many of them homosexuals, marched through city streets in protest just hours after voters in Wichita, Kan. repealed a gay rights ordinance. (Related stories, A4, A12)

The protest Tuesday night was peaceful, police said.

"WE HAD WORD there would be a protest as soon as the Wichita vote started coming through," said Officer Elsen Broich.

The march appeared to be a combination protest over the Wichita vote and a statewide initiative that, if approved by voters in November, would let school districts fire or refuse to hire avowed homosexuals or those who support gay lifestyles.

THE MARCHERS, swelling to number about 1,000 by 11 p.m., chanted "Wichita means fight back," "Civil rights or civil war," and other slogans as they strode 10 and 15 abreast from Castro Street down busy Market Street, then up Polk Street and over to Union Square. Castro and Polk streets are predominantly gay neighborhoods.

Earlier in the day, a Wichita ordinance barring discrimination against homosexuals was overwhelmingly repealed by a more than 4-1 margin. Two weeks ago, when a similar ordinance was overturned in St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco homosexuals staged a similar but smaller march, police said.

A city ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals was just recently approved here by the board of supervisors, without controversy. There has been no move to repeal that ordinance.

Smog Stations Hit For 'Deficiencies'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A California auditor general's report says nearly two-thirds of the state's auto smog inspection stations are deficient, and official lamp and brake stations are hardly ever inspected.

The report, out Tuesday, recommended that the Bureau of Automotive Repair increase its staff to take care of the problems.

BUT CONSUMER Affairs Director Richard Spohn, whose department administers the bureau, said the report contained "numerous false statements, half-truths and distortions."

The bureau also licenses most auto repair shops and mediates consumer complaints. Some of its operations are paid by license and registration fees.

Deficiencies cited by the report included failure to have proper tools for inspection and engine tune-ups, failure to employ a licensed pollution device installer, and failure to keep up with the latest pollution control technology.

Porn Films Jail Pair

IMPERIAL BEACH (AP) — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for investigation of making pornographic films involving young boys after police confiscated more than 100 sex-oriented films and slides at his apartment, officers said.

Bail for Archie Murray, 39, a fourth-grade teacher at Westview Elementary School, was set Tuesday at $4,250, Imperial Beach police said.

Richard Rollings, 18, a security guard identified as Murray's roommate, also was arrested Monday when police armed with a search warrant arrived.

Jarvis Drops Libel Claim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis says he'll dismiss his $800,000 libel claim filed against the Grossmont High School District over a story printed in a student newspaper.

The story appeared March 10 in the Granite Hills High School Clarion and was written by 16-year-old Brad Teaby. It tried to explain the controversial property tax limitation initiative on the June 6 ballot.

But part of Teaby's story alleged Jarvis and Gann were "prominent real estate owners" who stood to reap "several million dollars" in tax savings if the proposition passed.

15 Escape Air Crash

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Twelve passengers and three crew members walked away from a twin-engined transport plane that skidded an estimated 1,500 feet on its belly, an official reports.

STATE

The accident shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday involved an executive-type turbo-prop plane of the Santa Barbara-based Apollo Airways.

The executive director of the airport, James Ellingsworth, said "It did leave the ground by about 20 feet when, for some reason, the pilot aborted. He set it down on its belly and it slid probably 1,500 feet." He said he didn't see any obvious injuries.

Dinner Swells Fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has pulled off the most lucrative fund raiser ever staged by a Democratic gubernatorial incumbent, convincing 1,000 people to contribute more than $300,000 toward his reelection campaign.

After all the bills are paid, the $250-per-plate dinner Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel will have netted Brown between $210,000 and $250,000, said campaign manager Gray Davis.

Brown has collected $700,000 so far, Davis said, and hopes to stretch that to at least $1 million before the June 6 primary, in which he is unopposed.

Drink Draws Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Woodland Hills restaurant where television actor Dan Haggerty was burned by a flaming drink has been fined $1,500 for fire code violations.

Representatives of The Red Onion pleaded no contest to two charges of serving a flaming drink and one charge of over-crowding before Municipal Court Judge David Kennick Tuesday.

One of the flaming drink violations occurred Nov. 19, 1977, the same night Haggerty, who portrays Grizzly Adams, was burned. However, Los Angeles Fire Department Inspector Gene Lindley said none of the charges related to the Haggerty incident.

Gates Makes Apology

Gates delivered the prepared apology Tuesday shortly after Chicano groups gathered outside police headquarters at Parker Center.

Cities Must Shun Freeway Dispute

Not quite a decade ago, the cities of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa found themselves on opposing sides in a dispute over the construction of the Pacific Coast Freeway.

Both cities wanted the freeway built, but Newport Beach residents, who were faced with having the roadway in their city, said it belonged in Costa Mesa. Their neighbors in Costa Mesa didn't agree.

That dispute died along with the freeway in the early '70s, but the specter of it remains and could haunt the current efforts on the Costa Mesa Freeway.

Costa Mesans are working diligently to get CalTrans to make a commitment on completion of the Route 55 freeway through their city to its end at the Newport Beach city line.

Newport officials are having some reservations about the traffic the route could dump onto already overcrowded city streets.

These officials seem to be saying Costa Mesa is going to have to make some street improvements to keep through traffic out of their city as the price for Newport Beach's support of the project.

Costa Mesans seem amenable as long as Newport chips in to pay for the project which would aid the beach city although the work would not be in Newport.

The cities need to work together. The 141,000 residents of both communities don't deserve another Pacific Coast Freeway debacle.

A Practical Approach

The Costa Mesa Police Department, its Youth Service Program and the community at large have proved that progressive programs can often be achieved by taking steps backward.

The new Community Restitution Program is just that, a return to the old-fashioned concept of working to correct misdeeds that have caused a financial burden to victims of juvenile crimes.

Considering that juvenile crime continues to rise (an estimated 10 percent last year), the program seems a worthy alternative to the taxpayer-funded juvenile court system.

If a youngster (aged 10 to 17) causes property damage or commits some other crime where damage does not exceed $400, admission of guilt and a willingness to work may qualify the offender for the program.

Everyone, it seems, stands to benefit. Early patterns of criminal behavior could be reduced by a bit of sweat and strain through a job (which can be kept after the debt is repaid) or volunteer work in the community.

And the victim, so often reluctant to use the courts to reclaim damages, will benefit more directly through the signed contract agreement for repayment. If the young offender fails to fulfill his or her contract, the police department can send the case to juvenile court.

It's all very simple, and that's one of the program's most outstanding features. Other cities would do well to follow in Costa Mesa's footsteps.

Commendable Spirit

It could have been Costa Messy were it not for the pioneer spirit shown by so many residents during the apparently ended trash strike.

We had neighborhoods getting together to organize trips to the county dump, constant updates from the city Sanitation District, and even a few "phantom" garbagemen who picked up where the strikers left off.

It was also encouraging to note that violence did not spill into Costa Mesa during the strike. The residents took it upon themselves to pick up the slack, and although there were a few isolated sorespots, a potential health hazard was never a real factor.

While another strike would be inconvenient, it's good to know the city can weather it.

Three partners put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. How big the goldfish grows depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish therein while a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed those fish secrete a growth-inhibiting substance. Presumably, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

Real Estate Bubble Can Burst

The incapacity of the administration to come up with an anti-inflation policy that a reasonable person can trust will stimulate the flight of depositors from savings banks and other thrift institutions.

Ten years ago rampant corrosive inflation was such an unfamiliar experience that people kept their savings in cash and allowed their purchasing power to be corroded.

After a decade of dedicated inflationists in Congress and the White House, people have come to understand that they're being robbed when the savings and loan association pays 6.5 percent while the government destroys the value of money at the rate of 8 percent and then has the gall to tax the interest from the savings account. People have been taught by politicians that only children save; put it into the bank and the guys in Washington'll steal it.

Thus more and more millions of us are learning that you never lend money, you borrow it. Borrow money today and, with Jimmy Carter in the White House, you'll be able to repay the loan six years from now at 60-cents on the dollar. Solvency is for suckers.

IN THEIR determination to never a lender but a borrower be, many people are going into debt buying real estate. Their reasoning is plausible. In the last few years, through inflation and recession, residential real estate values have held up very well. Stocks and bonds have been a disaster; gold has only made money for a few shrewdies; antiques, jewelry, art and objets d'art, like rare stamps and oriental rugs, demand specialized knowledge, and anyway, you can take a bad beating, even if you've made a good buy, in the event you have to sell in a hurry.

Real estate, especially homes, has had the best track record. They're easy to sell compared to some of the things mentioned above, and the price on residential housing has not only kept pace with inflation, but far outdistanced it. That's why you hear of more and more people refinancing the homes they themselves live in so they can realize the enhanced value of their property immediately. Many of them are taking the money they're getting from refinancing their homes and buying other properties, not to live in but as an investment.

THE DIFFICULTY with that is that rents haven't kept up with housing prices. People are paying $100,000 for the house which sold for $75,000 three years ago in expectation that in three or four years they'll be able to sell for $140,000. In the meantime, they must rent it and a lot of them are discovering the rental price won't even pay the monthly mortgage installment, much less taxes and upkeep.

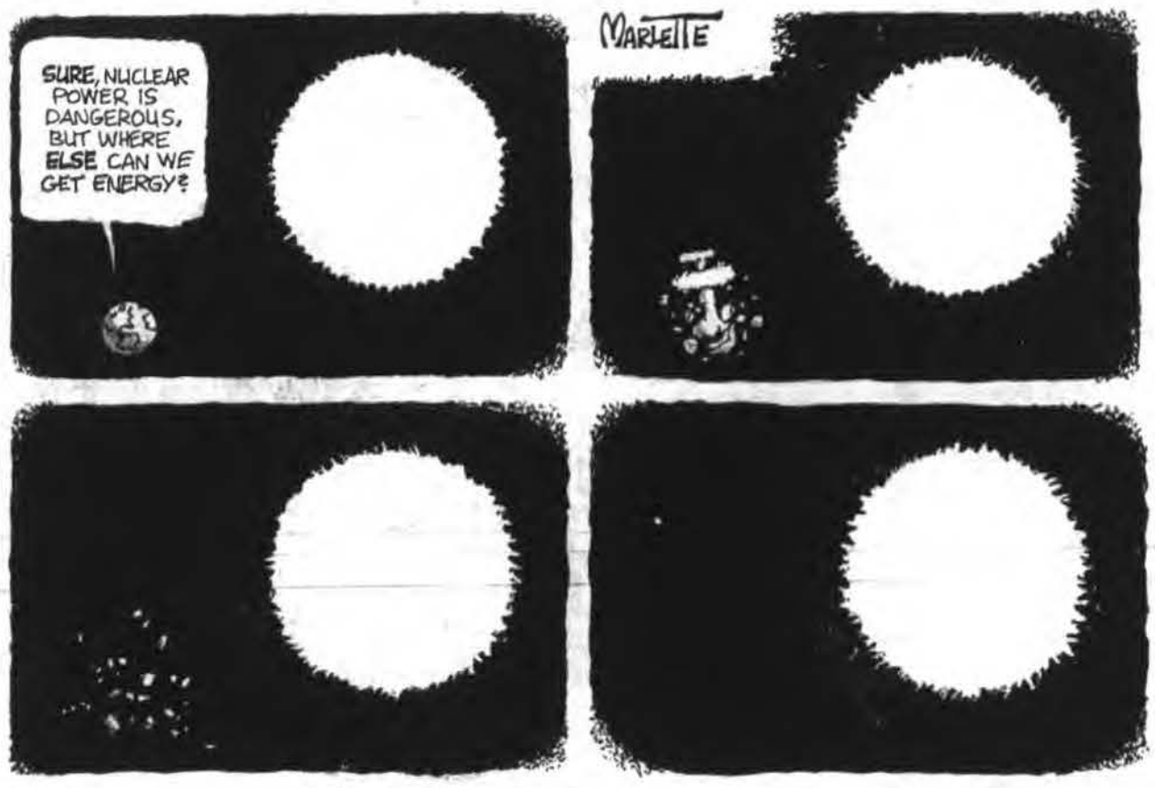

In the banking business they call people who're paying out two or three hundred dollars a month now in hopes of realizing a $40,000 profit down the road "overexposed." Everything depends on the market in residential real estate holding up and there's no guarantee of that. In fact, the signs indicate this is a poor time to buy residential real estate for any purpose other than living in it.

In many parts of the country, residential real estate prices are being driven up not by potential occupiers but by people hoping to sell later at a profit. They're going up so fast it looks like a buyers' panic is on, with people's business judgment swept away by an hysterical conviction that if they don't buy now and buy at almost any price, they'll lose the opportunity of a lifetime.

IF YOU really think real estate prices will continue to shoot up indefinitely with no relationship to the price of other goods and services, then this is the moment to buy at any price. In the real world such a situation is unlikely so that the danger grows that a bad collapse is coming in a couple of years, a collapse which will find many innocent, hard-working people badly dumped on.

The last recession saw that happen with certain kinds of real estate. Second or vacation home prices were murdered as was the office-building segment of the real estate industry. Residential real estate, of course, did well, but that was last time, when prices weren't climbing at the disconcerting rates they are now.

In times like these, remember the new adage, don't seek shelter against inflation where too many others are already huddled.

A Time to Think About World Hunger

To the Editor:

Everyone who has ever heard a baby cry knows that feeding a hungry child is the most natural thing in the world, yet each year 20 million deaths occur from starvation and diseases related to malnutrition.

Since November, 1977, more than 100,000 people across the nation have made a personal commitment to look within themselves to discover what they as individuals can do to end death by starvation in the world within 20 years. These individuals, with their ranks expanding every day, have aligned themselves in the Hunger Project.

THE IDEA of the hunger project is to utilize the power of the individual to create a context . . . something that no organization or government can do. In simple terms, creating a context involves willing something to manifest and then personally committing yourself to make this happen.

The thousands of individuals already enrolled in the Hunger Project have all personally committed themselves to end hunger in 20 years. Individuals across the country have been creating their own forms of participation to make this happen.

For example, the governor of New York declared the month of May as a time for the state of New York to become aware of the problem. In Washington D.C., May 14 has been declared a day of awareness of world hunger. The Laguna Beach Hunger Project weekend of May 13-14 includes a beach run on Main Beach at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Entry fee is $5.

The Best

To the Editor:

I think I've read everything that's been written on Jarvis-Gann in the last six months. Last night's (May 4) Pilot editorial was the best I've seen! Bravo.

JEAN HARMON

Cut Deadwood

To the Editor:

The increasing almost hysterical outcries by Governor Brown and other politicians on Prop. 13, gives some clue as to their fear that this balloting in June will find the voters solidly giving the Jarvis-Gann measure their support, for a leaner, more efficient government.

Governor Brown's statements about "taking some $8 million 'out of circulation' will cause disaster and unemployment" are fear tactics obviously unsupported by economics. He should know better.

By removing the surplus tax revenues and cutting into the fat public trough to the tune of $8 billion (most now say $7 billion) will be putting money into circulation, and where it can do some productive work.

We have yet to see our tax money work productively. If some of the inefficient workers on the public payroll are lopped off, it will be for beneficial purposes, while the overburdened home owner has some relief.

Public borrowing on the bond market will be affected and the big banks like the Bank of America may not like Prop. 13 for that reason. But public bonds are borrowing by the government and should be also slowed down.

IT SEEMS useless to threaten that our schools will be affected, when they are so inefficient in educating our youngsters now, perhaps clearing out some of the deadwood may result in the hope that the students can at least be educated to read and write before graduating from high school.

As soon as it becomes less onerous to build and maintain houses and apartments, with less tax burden, more shelters will be built and the simple supply at the marketplace will bring down the rentals and thus benefit renters under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

America was built on the free marketplace enterprise economy, not by the politicians making new and more restrictive, more involved laws to restrict free enterprise.

The Jarvis-Gann initiative is a simple direct method of making the Legislature and the administration more efficient and responsive to the people whom they should be serving, and cut out the deadwood in the operation of the public machinery.

LADISLAW REDAY

Lower Rents

To the Editor:

Jarvis says landlords will lower rents if Prop. 13 passes.

How can he speak for everyone?

I've kept rents on my triplex $50 lower than others in the area for several years. I live in fear of rent controls — getting caught with my rents down. This property is all I have.

I cannot lower rents to please Jarvis the way owners of big rents and commercial properties can. Such landlords are the only ones who would profit by Prop. 13.

G. A. ANDERSON

Appreciate

To the Editor:

For some time now, demands have been placed on government to provide more services to citizens, the results of which do not always meet expectations and objectives. It is, therefore, continually refreshing to see a large group of citizens donate their time in an endeavor that meets its objectives.

I AM referring to those unselfish men and women who coach, manage, and in other ways make the community youth athletic programs a success.

I have three daughters who participate in bobby sox softball. The lessons learned, friendships made, skills developed, and time constructively utilized have made my daughters better individuals. For this, my wife and I are truly appreciative.

MR. & MRS. HARRY BUDDS

Not Justice

To the Editor:

Recently read a newspaper story about the California judge who had seen fit to place an injunction against a mother and father, preventing them from coming within speaking distance of their daughter, or even speaking one word to her.

Grotesquely, he had on several occasions seen fit to place them in jail when they had greeted their daughter peaceably in a public place. Is that really what jails are for?

Such an injunction would appear to be a pitiful violation of civil, moral and human rights.

FEW fair-minded people could say that reconciliation is not hampered by such a cruel and unusual injunction of the civil court, for does not reconciliation come from communication, even if it is but the sight of a once beloved parent—now fallen from our grace?

Denying a mother or father their civil right to move peaceably and freely about in public, in order to deny them a glimpse of their own daughter, also denies the child that glimpse of parental agony, which might be the ultimate salvation of both.

What good is served by such a flawed decree, which offers only stumbling blocks to contriteness and reconciliation?

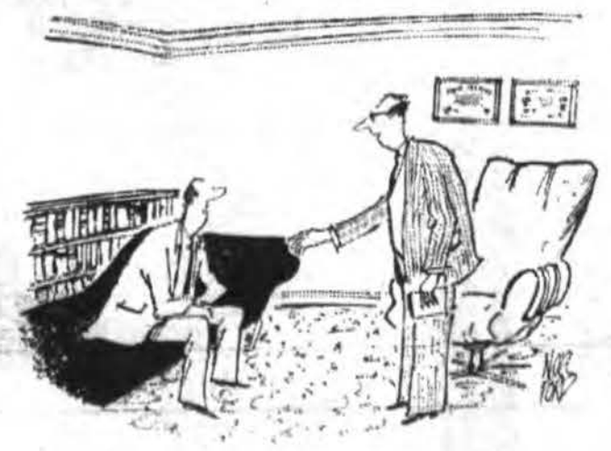

One can see the agony, but not the justice, nor the wisdom.

"Mommy! PJ talked to a stranger! Do you want to scold him or shall I do it?"

3 Officials Recalled Over Housing Issues

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Three city commissioners who supported efforts to provide housing for the poor and elderly in this affluent Detroit suburb have been recalled by voters.

"In leaving on this type of issue, my conscience doesn't bother me," said commissioner Ann Dropiewski after the special election. "I'm very comfortable about what I did and I wouldn't do it any differently."

MRS. DROPIEWSKI and the other defeated commissioners, Patricia Watt and Dorothy Conrad, walked out of Monday night's regular commission meeting when the results were announced.

Under city law, the remaining four commissioners will appoint temporary replacements who will serve until the Aug. 8 primary.

About 34 percent of the city's 14,937 registered voters cast ballots. The turnout was less than in last month's special election when voters defeated the controversial housing plan and recalled three other commissioners who had backed the proposal.

THE OFTEN BITTER recall drive began last fall when opponents of the housing plan demanded that the city not renew its contract with a local church group to build state-subsidized housing for the poor and elderly.

City commissioners put the issue on the ballot but renewed their contract with the church group. Critics then began circulating recall petitions, charging that the commissioners ignored citizens' wishes in trying to push the housing plan through.

"DEMOCRACY HAS BEEN restored to Birmingham," said Nancy Elby, a leader of the recall drive. "The people have spoken."

Complete, but unofficial results showed Mrs. Conrad was defeated on a vote of 3,257 to 1,749; Mrs. Dropiewski, 3,049 to 1,866, and Mrs. Watt, 2,889 to 2,006.

"We saw a need for housing for a segment of the community and we stood for that need," Mrs. Conrad said. "We supported that need and for that we've been recalled . . . There's no bitterness. You take your chances — that's politics."

Dad Nixed On Taking Kid's Cash

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The New Hampshire Supreme Court says a man does not have the right to withdraw money from his child's bank account for his own use if he no longer lives with the child.

The court, in a unanimous decision Tuesday, upheld a Superior Court ruling denying a divorced man access to his two daughters' savings.

The judges said a parent's right to earnings of a child is not absolute "and continues only so long as the parent retains custody and continues to support his minor children."

Company Likes Protected Ideas

DEAR PAT: I have an idea for a new product that I would like to submit to Johnson & Johnson. I thought of this years ago when my children were growing up, but I didn't know how to go about presenting my idea to this company. Will you look into it for me?

C.L., Downey

AYS contacted Thomas J. Murphy, director of outside suggestions for Johnson & Johnson. He mailed a "Policies Concerning Suggested Ideas" brochure to you, which outlines his company's conditions of submission. Another helpful booklet, "Submitting An Idea," by the American Bar Association, was included.

The ABA booklet contains general information helpful to all persons who have new product ideas. It explains why most companies ask you to agree to certain ground rules before an idea will be considered, and it explains steps you can take to protect your idea. Copies are available for 25 cents from: Circulation Department, American Bar Association, 1155 E. 60th St., Chicago, Ill. 60637.

Pennies' Jingle Won't Be Heard

DEAR PAT: I ordered 50 gold-plated state commemorative pennies from American Consumer Inc. My $14.95 check was cashed in February, and I haven't had any notice that my order would be delayed. It just hasn't come. I heard unfavorable things about this company after I sent away for the pennies. Have I been had?

M.B., Huntington Beach

Not this time. AYS contacted American Consumer, and a refund will be issued to you. The pennies you ordered are no longer available. Delayed or undelivered merchandise is a frequent complaint about this firm, which has been involved in legal actions with several states, including California. Sudden depletion of stock with inadequate followup on refunds also has been a common problem of AYS readers.

L.C., Huntington Beach, who ordered merchandise in December, will be contacted regarding her undelivered order. The porcelain bells she wanted also are out of stock. A refund or replacement with similar bells will be arranged, according to her preference.

Antacids Upset Antibiotic Action

DEAR PAT: Can antacid products react with antibiotic drugs and make them ineffective?

A warning is required on any antacid that might interact with other drugs. For example, any product that contains aluminum must warn consumers not to take it while using a prescription drug containing any form of tetracycline. Aluminum can reduce the effectiveness of tetracycline by preventing or reducing its absorption in the bloodstream. Label directions for use also must include recommended time interval dosage, age group dosage, if appropriate, and be followed by "or as directed by a physician."

The type, amount and mixtures of antacid ingredients are set by FDA regulations. The label must tell in clear, simple terms what the product is intended to do and it must include warnings on overuse. Products that contain certain ingredients also must carry warnings for the benefit of people who have certain dietary or medical problems. Read antacid product label carefully and do not use a combination product unless you have both a headache and upset stomach.

Back Bay Ecology Eyed

OCC Team Studies Cats' Effect on Rodents

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Studying the ecology of Upper Newport Bay isn't usually a source of embarrassment to scientists.

But Orange Coast College instructor Don Baud admits his research project has caused some red faces among his four student assistants.

That's because they have to knock on doors in homes around the bay and ask for samples of kitty litter.

"THE HOMEOWNERS think they're crazy," said Baud, who is studying the effects of cats on the bay rodent population for his masters thesis at Cal State Fullerton.

Part of the study involves dissolving the samples in acid. The acid gets rid of all but tiny rodent bones, permitting researchers to determine what rodents have eaten.

BAUD EXPLAINED that there are four common types of small rodents in the Back Bay. They are the house mouse, the deer mouse, the California vole and the Western harvest mouse, of which one subspecies may be endangered.

Baud said he's checking to see whether or not the cats, both tame and wild, attack mostly the more expendable house mice or the native rodents.

"Possibly the cats have a positive effect if they eat more house mice," Baud said. "If they're eating more of the others, maybe something should be done to keep them out."

HE NOTED that other effects of cats, such as disturbing birds, are not included in his studies, nor are the effects of dogs.

"I haven't seen any dogs catch mice yet," Baud said.

Actually, he said, well-fed Newport Beach cats don't seem to be eating many either, judging by the results of the four-week-old study.

BAUD SAID HE has yet to find a mouse jawbone in the cat leavings. His next step, he said, will be to place kitty boxes around the Back Bay in the hopes that formerly tame cats now living there will make use of them.

He said he's also seeking state Department of Fish and Game permission to live trap rodents.

THAT PROCEDURE, which he said doesn't injure the animals, would be used to estimate the ratio of the different species. All trapped rodents would be released after they are identified, Baud said.

Baud, who is interested in teaching or working in the national park system after he receives his M.A., said he'll provide the results of his cat-rodent study to the Department of Fish and Game, and hopes to publish them in an ecology journal.

Repair Ordered On Courthouse

Final repairs totaling $182,000 were ordered for the once-sinking West Orange County Municipal Courthouse by county supervisors Tuesday.

The non-structural work will include jacking up the slab in some areas to level the floor as well as cosmetic repairs to walls.

The work will be financed by bonds from the Orange County-Westminster Civic Center Authority.

More than a year ago the county completed a $783,800 repair job on the Westminster building to correct damage caused when the facility began to sink into a bog below the ground.

Liability Reversal Sought

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a bill relieving bar owners and party hosts from liability for damages caused by their drunken patrons or guests.

The bill, SB 1645, would reverse court rulings that say anyone who served alcoholic beverages to an obviously intoxicated person can be sued for damages that the drinker causes in a traffic accident.

It was sent to the Senate floor Tuesday on a 5-2 vote, the bare majority needed.

Police Tipped 200 Times

But Silver-haired Bomb Bandit's at Large

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Suspicious shopkeepers and public-spirited neighbors have supplied police with tips on about 200 little old ladies the past six weeks, but the silver-haired bandit who twice held up a Newton bank is still at large.

For a while, edgy bank tellers waited apprehensively for the round-faced little woman to march in again, threaten to blow everyone up and then demand more money.

HER LAST ROBBERY was a month and a half ago.

"I think she probably went into retirement," said detective Charles Feeley. "When you're batting 1,000, you don't want to take a chance of dropping down to 666."

The one-woman crime wave started St. Patrick's Day when a woman wearing a knitted hat and carrying a plastic ice cream bag strolled to the middle window of the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Co. in Newton, an affluent suburb west of Boston.

SHE HANDED THE teller a note saying she had a bomb and wanted money. The teller gave her $200 in $20 bills. The woman turned and went out the side door.

On March 28, she was back. The modus operandi, as policy say, was similar. She wore a hat, this time a wide-brimmed rain hat, carried a white shopping bag, went to the same teller and delivered a bomb note demanding $200. She took the money and zipped out the side door again.

"Every bank in the city is attuned to this and on the lookout," said Feeley. "It's a sensitive thing to them, and it's a sensitive thing to us."

WIDELY CIRCULATED bank camera pictures show a plain, round-faced woman, who is matronly, possibly 60 years old with a deeply veined complexion and, all in all, rather ordinary looking.

"Everybody thinks he knows her," Feeley says.

People report they have spotted her in the supermarket, at the office or living down the street.

"We've identified a couple of hundred little old ladies, and none of them really looked like the pictures," Feeley said.

EITHER THE NOSE or the chin or some other facial feature turns out to be wrong. But the tips still come in.

"Anytime anybody sees a little old lady with a knit hat or a rain hat, we send men into the area to look around," Feeley says.

Reagan: Yes On Prop. 13

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — A former California governor says he is going to vote for the controversial Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative in June because the present system is "unbalanced and unfair and an outmoded form of taxation."

Speaking to 1,000 high school students here, former Gov. Ronald Reagan said he decided to back Proposition 13 although "the measure has some flaws and some complications," which he did not describe.

Gay Market

Entrepreneurs Cashing In

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Entrepreneurs are cashing in on this city's big gay population through coupon booklets offering discounts at businesses owned by homosexuals or employing large numbers of them.

One hundred businesses — from baths to bars, restaurants to remodelers and hotels to hair stylists — paid for advertisements in the $12.95 booklet. It offers discounts of up to 20 percent.

SO FAR, SOME 2,000 booklets have been sold from a first-run printing of 10,000 a few weeks ago, said promoter Jim Hoffman, 32.

"It's too early to tell if it will be a fabulous success or just another curiosity," he said. "But it's beginning to snowball."

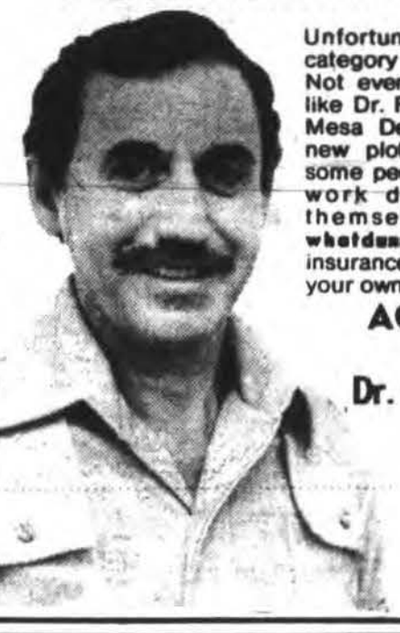

He estimated the city's homosexuals spend some $1.4 billion a year. They are believed to number one of every seven of the city's 650,000 residents, although some estimates are higher.

ONE ENTREPRENEUR WHO CREDITS the booklet with a boom in his business is auto mechanic Bob Senter, who paid $100 for his ad.

"It's the best thing that ever happened to my business," he said, noting that he's booked up for three weeks in advance.

He said the sexual preferences of his customers are of no concern to him.

"If it doesn't affect their carburetors, I don't care what they do in bed," he said.

Anxiety a Cause of Hyperventilation

By DR. STEINCROHN

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was sure I was having a heart attack. While shopping the other day I got a sudden pain in my chest and had trouble filling my lungs with air. So I got myself off in a corner of the supermarket and began taking deep breaths, lifting up my chest as far as it would go to fill my lungs.

After a few minutes I felt worse. I began to perspire My heart felt as if it were running away with itself. I had palpitations. I felt dizzy and faint. Someone came along, saw I was distressed, and helped me and my groceries into my car. After resting a while, I felt less faint. I was able to drive home.

I've had quite a few of these attacks. I've been told they are due to nervousness. I've borrowed some tranquilizers from a friend, but they don't seem to help. I suppose the next step is a visit to a doctor? Yes? — Mrs. H.

COMMENT: First, one don't:

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Never borrow pills from a friend — especially tranquilizers. You know the old story — often, the underlying cause is anxiety. The patient breathes deeply and often. Sometimes the patient doesn't realize he or she is breathing rapidly.

All the while losing too much carbon dioxide and upsetting the body chemistry. This produces the symptoms you have been having.

YES, I SUGGEST THAT you see your doctor. He will prescribe treatment for your anxiety. He will also teach you how to breathe, using your diaphragm rather than lifting your chest high to breathe.

As children, many of us were taught to fill our lungs by lifting the chest rather than learning diaphragmatic breathing. Until you can control your attacks of hyperventilation, your doctor may ask you to keep a brown paper bag with you to rebreathe into. This helps restore the carbon dioxide-oxygen balance in the blood and terminates the attack more quickly.

ANIMAL CONTROL OFFICER DEBBIE MOSER HOLDS FLAPPING CAPTIVE IN IRVINE Barn Owl Which Went Hunting Humans Taken Into Custody by Authorities

Irvine Predator Held

Barn Owl Captured After Attacks on People

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A young barn owl, whose mother apparently hadn't taught it the niceties of planned community living went hunting Irvine residents this week.

The residents complained to authorities from the safety of their Willow area houses.

The owl was captured by animal services officers and handed over to a veterinarian who plans to teach it to hunt smaller prey, then release it.

DEBBIE MOSER, WHO grabbed the owl from a net on which it alighted, said it began stalking people Monday night.

One man called to complain the owl was attacking him every time he tried to get out of the house on Fireside Circle.

Miss Moser said she explained she would have to wait till morning to try to capture the bird, because owls see a lot better in the dark than animal control services officers do.

AT 5:30 A.M. TUESDAY, police received a call from another resident nearby, on Walnut Avenue.

"There's a big owl on top of my roof," the man said. "He won't let me out!"

Miss Moser sped to his rescue. She spotted the owl in a tree.

"First we tried to coax it out of the tree," she reported. "It didn't work. We took a fishing net, and taped it to the end of a broomstick, climbed a ways, and were going to try to throw the net over him.

"BUT THE OWL JUMPED right onto the net. As (a helper) lowered it down, I grabbed it."

The barn owl went to University Park Veterinary Hospital, where Dr. Kent Walker examined the bird, pronounced it fit but possibly confused about diet matters, and vowed to set it straight then free..

Rental Bill Killed

Age Bias Ban Defeated by Panel

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A bill that would ban age discrimination by landlords has died in a Senate committee, despite pleas for support from parents and senior citizens groups.

The measure, SB 1688 by Sen. David Roberti, D-Los Angeles, fell four votes short of passage Tuesday on a 2-4 roll call in the 11-member Senate Governmental Organization Committee.

IT WAS THE second time this year an age-related rental bill was killed in the Senate. A more limited bill dealing with rental discrimination against persons with children died on the Senate floor in January.

With some exceptions, SB 1988 would make it illegal for a landlord to refuse to rent to individuals or families on the basis of the renters' ages. Violations would carry a minimum fine of $500.

The bill would not apply to owners of nursing homes or senior citizen facilities, mobile-home parks or college residence halls.

AN AIDE, MICHAEL Woo, said Roberti might seek to revive the bill but had not made up his mind.

Bill supporters said the ability of landlords to pick and choose tenants on the basis of age worked a hardship against senior citizens, young adults, minority groups and families with children.

"There is a myth going around that senior citizens are regarded as ideal tenants. That's not true," said Roberti, adding that there was a tendency to divide young and old into rental "ghettos."

"ONE HAS A RIGHT to choose his neighbors," he said. "But that right is limited to not denying another person the right to housing."

Dora Ashford, director of the Fair Housing for Children Coalition, contended that allowing landlords not to rent to persons with children acted as a form of "defacto discrimination against minorities and women."

Sixty-two percent of female renters, 41 percent of black renters and 54 percent of Spanish surname renters have minor children, she said.

BUT DOUG GILES, a lobbyist for the California Association of Realtors, said persons who do not want to live in apartments that allowed children or with persons of a different age should have that right.

"There are residential properties which serve only special age groups or families without children and hundreds of thousands of Clifornians seek those facilities," he contended.

SEN. MILTON MARKS, a supporter of the bill, attempted before the vote to keep the bill alive by having it referred to the Local Government Committee, which he chairs and which approved the narrower bill.

His motion failed on a 5-4 vote, one short of the six aye votes needed for approval.

Serrano PTO Plans Potluck

A potluck dinner, hosted by the Serrano Student Teacher Parent Organization, is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the intermediate school, 24662 Jeronimo Road, El Toro.

Gues speaker is Mission Viejo High School math teacher Michael Nardozza. He will share his experiences of a year-long hike over the Pacific Crest Trail.

Taking a sabbatical from teaching, Nardoza hiked 2,800 miles from Mexico to the Canadian border.

Meadowlark Song Recalls Boyhood

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SHIMMERING GREEN weeping willows and towering sycamores stood sentinal over the bubbly, stone-strewn creek beds of boyhood, where a native rainbow trout lurked and you could still smell the real world.

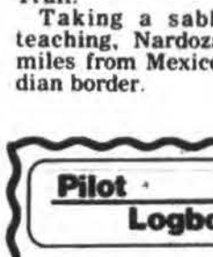

An uncommonly heard meadowlark's familiar "whip-whip-whiddly-wheep" in the midst of Orange County suburbia reminded me just the other day.

One remembers that sweet, strange song from years ago, when it echoed between the high forest walls of Lopez Canyon on the opening day of trout season.

THE RISING SUN would splash the far fortress-like green mountainside and one could still taste the strong 4:30 a.m. coffee, riding out two-lane potholed Edna Road in San Luis Obispo County.

Wild mustard higher than a small boy's eye told the world it was a glorious spring when a fishing rod was a wonder to hold in your hands.

Splashing, spritzing crystal waters of Lopez Creek made a mad dash toward the sea through a gauntlet of gravel, pebbles and rock. And if we got there early enough on opening day, we could hear the shrieks of nighthawks going home from the hunt.

VINSEL

Red-winged blackbirds presided at fence post podiums beside the road and bob-o-links made their own melodic dawn speeches.

YOU COULD CATCH the smell of bacon frying somewhere nearby as we waded through poison oak, hoping for a wicker creel full of rainbows, maybe 12 to 14 inchers, nestled in leaves of cool, crisp ferns.

Now, you find them in plastic foam trays under see-through plastic film at super markets.

We'd start at the WPA Bridge by the gravelworks, then move on up Lopez Canyon to fish in front of a little cabin where Pop's old work buddy Harry lived in bashful bachelorhood with a couple of devoted hounddogs.

Born in Brooklyn, Harry got as far away from civilization as he could. He drove his jeep 20 miles each way to work.

He was bound to the ground, deep back there in Lopez Canyon, but he owned a Piper Cub he kept at county airport, a magic place leased by the Hoover Brothers and where my scout master was operations manager.

I DON'T KNOW whatever happened to Harry and his dogs, but they don't live in Lopez Canyon anymore. The dairy where he and Pop were mechanics and drew paychecks is now a complex of artsy, craftsy boutiques. They call it the e Cremery, and somebody probably has Boston ferns hanging in Pop's old workshop.

He is at I.O.O.F. Cemetery just off south Marsh Street but at least within listening distance of a busy truck stop and a running stream.

When I heard the meadowlark the other day and noticed that brilliant, vibrant yellow wild mustard in this lush new springtime, I remembered those fishing days of yesteryear.

STATE AND COUNTY authorities have damned Lopez Creek now and buried a boy's childhood landmarks under thousands of acre-feet of water, murdering a bit of magic that can never be again.

The meadowlarks and I would just say: Damn Them. . .
But what earthly good could it do?

Jarvis Measure Debated

Mesa Mayor, Real Estate Man Trade Views

Costa Mesa Mayor Ed McFarland has declared that the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative "would defraud the a people" and do nothing to help those it says it will.

Joining in a spirited debate on Proposition 13, Orange County administrative aide Paul Raver, a Costa Mesa resident, told a group of west side homeowners that they might as well forget about the development of Fairview Regional Park if the Jarvis initiative passes.

BUT COSTA Mesa real estate man Don Bull, like Raver, a former city council candidate, countered: "I don't think it's going to hurt the city that bad."

Bull suggested that the city make up for reduced revenues by charging for ser vices such as fire calls for home flooding and increasing the costs for recreation programs.

The effect of the passage of the Jarvis initiative on the Newport-Mesa Unified School District was much on the minds of the 35 Mesa West Homeowners Association members who turned out for the debate at Rea Middle School in Costa Mesa.

DISTRICT SCHOOL Superintendent John Nicoll said the loss of $18 million in property tax revenues to school would have a significant effect."

He said the district's Community Service Tax would be wiped out, therefore canceling the use of district facilities for community groups and some after-school athletics.

Mayor McFarland said he backs the Behr Bill, Proposition 8 on the June 6 primary ballot.

He said the Behr bill would provide financial relief to renters and senior citizens, provisions not provided for in the Jarvis initiative.

McFARLAND SAID passage of Proposition 13 would cripple the downtown redevelopment agency, increase big government at the expense of city rule and create "a tremendous windfall" for businesses.

McFarland's comments drew criticism from Virgil Elkins, Orange County chairman of the pro-Jarvis United Organization of Taxpayers.

Elkins said "It's about time people put the government under control." He cited what he said was a 161 percent rise in the state budget and a 121 percent hike in property taxes over the past two years.

Following a presentation by county employee Raver, Elkins charged that county government is being run by "a bunch of Vietnamese and illegal aliens running up and down the halls trying to look busy."

RAVER EXPLAINED that the Jarvis initiative would cut the county's current $163.2 million slice of property tax revenues down to $68 million. The county's overall budget for '78 was $544.2 million.

This would mean cutbacks in county fire personnel, county-run libraries (two in Costa Mesa) and the probable demise of approved plans to develop Fairview Regional Park on Costa Mesa's west side, Raver said.

The elimination of the 260-acre recreational facility would stem from a more than $10 million cut in the county's $14.7 million harbors, beaches and parks fund, said Raver.

Rounding out the pro-Jarvis side was Irvine resident John Sherwood who contended the state constitution assures adequate funding of schools

Changes in Jail

OC Sheriff Gates To Appeal Order

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Sheriff Brad Gates said that he intends to appeal part of a federal court order calling for immediate changes in the operation of the Santa Ana County Jail.

Gates said adherence to all the directives issued by Judge William P. Gray would cost county taxpayers at least $300,000 for alterations he feels are unnecessary.

GATES SAID the county has already incurred legal costs of $200,000 in fighting the federal lawsuit.

"I think the public in Orange County expects me to resist this kind of financial burden," Gates said. "We will be filing an appeal immediately."

Gates condemned criticism of the county jail and its officers as unjustified "and I believe the public agrees with me on that point. We've been letting minority areas of the community come in and dictate to us and this is the cause of many of our problems," the sheriff said.

GATES SAID he intends to file a counter suit against the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), the organization which took legal action on behalf of six jail inmates nearly three years ago.

"Only 10 of the original 195 areas of complaint in the lawsuit were left when the judge made his ruling," Gates said. "To me, that is a sure indication of the strength of the allegations that were made against us."

Gates said the ACLU suit cost county taxpayers $200,000 in legal expenses. "Our legal action will be aimed at getting it, or most of it, back," he said.

JUDGE GRAY'S order calls for jail authorities to allow inmates more time to eat meals, increased communication with visitors more and better sleeping areas and better access to magazines and newspapers.

Gates noted today that every allegation of brutality by jail officers had been struck down by Judge Gray.

He said the judge similarly rejected charges of improper and insufficient medical treatment at the jail.

Judge Gray issued his list of 10 directives after touring the county jail and talking and eating with inmates.

Bicycle Rodeo Set for Kids

Saddleback Valley boys and girls, age 7 to 10, are invited to attend a bicycle rodeo Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Mission Viejo High School parking lot.

Events include an obstacle course and driving contests. A bike safety check will be made and bike safety will be taught, spokesman Dave McKay said.

The rodeo is sponsored by Boy Scout Troup 728.

New Zip Codes Effective in Mission Viejo

Four zip codes for the Mission Viejo community are officially effective, says Elmer Meis of the Mission Viejo Post office.

The codes are:

— 29691 — Persons residing west of Marguerite Parkway to the San Diego Freeway, down to just south of Avery Parkway.

— 92692 — Persons living east of Marguerite.

— 92690 — Persons using a post office box at the Mission Viejo facility, 28081 Marguerite Parkway.

— 92693 — Persons using a post office box at the San Juan Capistrano office.

MISSION VIEJO'S former zip, 92675, now is the mailing code for the city of San Juan Capistrano, Meis said.

According to Meis, the Snta Ana main office is set up for the new codes, but has yet to set up machines to handle them.

ONCE THE MACHINES are set up, which Meis said should be any time, incorrect zips will definitelys low down deliveries.

Additional information is available by calling the Mission Viejo facility, 495-5020 or the Santa Ana office, 836-2513.

'Hand Gun' OK In Newport — Surfing Style

After they were convinced that the event wasn't exactly what it sounded like, Newport Beach City Councilmen approved a permit for body surfing and hand gun contest.

Councilmen, slightly taken aback by the request, were relieved to find out that a hand gun, in this case, is not a weapon, but, rather, the latest thing in surfing.

It's a foot-long plastic device held in the hand which gives body surfers more mobility in riding a wave.

The contest, sponsored by the manufacturers of the hand gun, will be held July 29 and 30 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 18th Street.

Contest organizers needed council approval to get the standard surfing regulations waived for their event.

Councilman Don Strauss asked organizers, "Have you considered any other name than 'hand gun'?"

Toll Fee Remains

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Golden Gate Bridge commuters will continue paying a $1 toll for the time being after a court order that tolls be cut in half starting today was appealed Tuesday.

Viejo's Greenbelt

MAC to Discuss Jarvis 'Impact'

Potential plant loss through reduced maintenance of Mission viejo's greenbelts, parks and median strips should the Jarvis-Gann property tax limitation initiative pass will be discussed Thursday by Municipal Advisory Council members.

County officials have told MAC members the controversial initiative's passage June 6 could spell disaster for the area's open spaces and parks.

That's because, county officials said, there wouldn't be enough money available for upkeep of existing greenbelt and park areas.

MAC members will hear reports from Dave King and Joe Cardello of the county's Environmental Management Agency. Tony Bonacorsi and Vince Esposito of the Mission Viejo Company will also present information on plant life in the event of reduced upkeep.

The 7:30 p.m. study session will take place at MAC offices, 27021 La Paz Rd., Suite 2K.

MV Burglar Gets $2,221 in Loot

Property valued at $2,221 was taken from a Mission Viejo home by a burglar who lifted the window off its track to gain entry.

Orange County sheriff's officers said jewelry, a television set and cameras were taken from the home of retiree Richard Carl Oppenheimer, 61, of 26652 Via del Sol. The victim was away on vacation at the time.

THUNDEROUS CLAPS SHAKE, RATTLE AND ROLL ALONG ORANGE COAST
Jessica and David MacFarland Protect Ears From Noise

Booms Finally Cease

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ellen Seth White dreamed of the day when the sonic booms, or earth tremors or whatever they were, would stop, and now they have, at least temporarily.

And furthermore, there is an explanation for the thunderous claps that shook, rattled and rolled the Orange Coast recently for a period of nearly a month.

NAVY SHIPS MANEUVERING off San Clemente Island and firing cannonades from their guns — complicated by freak atmospheric conditions — were to blame, authorities say

"That's all it was," says Dr. Jack Ryan, of Cal State Fullerton's Department of Earth Sciences.

Navy officials confirmed that exercises were being conducted during the period in which a few of the concussions knocked pictures on walls askew and made window panes wiggle.

The worst shocks made some small children cry and Mrs. White, a southeast Huntington Beach woman, swears that one of them bent her aluminum kitchen window frame so it won't open.

"MY HUSBAND BOB WAS sitting at the table having coffee one morning and he liked to've jumped into the kitchen sink," declares Mrs. White.

The Whites live near Banning Avenue and Magnolia Street, at 20701 Hula Circle, near the beach.

Caltech seismologists who denied the shocks could be caused by earthquake activity said they received reports from as far inland as Riverside, but said most came from the Orange Coast.

"It just got worse and worse," Mrs. White said at the time

THE HOUSEWIFE IS STILL mad about her bent patio-view window, which she can't open to get the breeze.

She says it's a wonder the glass didn't shatter.

"I'll give you $10 if you can open it," she said.

Dr. Ryan explains it is nothing to be alarmed about, adding that shock waves from the guns often richochet off dense atmosphere and back to earth this time of year.

He, however, may live inland.

Company Reports Gains

Net income of Rossmoor Corp., Laguna Hills, increased to $750,000, or 23 cents a share, for the second quarter ended March 31, with $226,000 or 7 cents for the like quarter of fiscal 1977.

This brought net income for the six months to $1,954,000 or 60 cents a share, on revenues of $22.8 million, compared with $722,000 or 22 cents on revenues of $14.6 million for the corresponding period of fiscal 1977.

SECOND-QUARTER revenues increased to $10.1 million from $5.9 million, up 71 percent from the like quarter a year earlier, due to the delivery of 165 residential units during the quarter compared with 69 a year earlier.

Ross W. Cortese, chairman of the board, said profit margines improved during the second quarter as revenues increased faster than fixed costs.

AT LAGUNA Hills Leisure World, the company's primary operation, 119 units were delivered during the second quarter, compared with 65 in the like quarter of 1977. Deliveries at the company's joint venture condominium project in Palm Springs totaled 46, compared with four a year earlier.

Workshops Set For Businesses

More than 1,600 people have attended small-business workshops offered as part of the Saddleback College Forums for Learning program. Those who haven't will get another opportunity this month.

Two workshops co-sponsored by the college, the Service Corps of Retired Executives and the U.S. Small Business Administration will take place Saturday and May 20.

THE INITIAL SESSION IS a "pre-business seminar" dealing with the elements necessary for planning a small business. It will run from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in room 313 of the science and mathematics building.

The program on May 20, "Start Your Own Business," will take place in the same room and include an evaluation of current trends affecting small businesses and methods of sharpening awareness of small business opportunities.

The pre-business workshop costs $10 a person or $17 a couple by pre-registration of $12 and $24 at the door. The other session costs $15 a person or $25 a couple by pre-registration and $17 and $34 at the door.

ADVANCE REGISTRATION FOR either or both events may be accomplished in Building Q on the Saddleback lower campus. Mail-in registration must be accompanied by a check or money order covering the fees and a note indicating which session is desired.

The Community Services registration office is located at 28000 Marguerite Parkway, Mission Viejo.

Serrano Group Plans Art Sale

An art show and auction have been scheduled Saturday for the benefit of the Serrano Intermediate School Music Boosters' Association at the Lake Forest Sun and Sail Club, 24752 Toledo Way, El Toro.

Custom-framed works of art by contemporary American and European artists, as well as works of such masters as Chagall, Picasso, Miro, Dali and Calder, will be on exhibit at 7 p.m. with the auction beginning at 8, club secretary Flo Gundersen said.

The event features a no-host bar with refreshments for a donation of $1.50 per person.

Proceeds will be used to buy uniforms for members of the school band, Ms. Gundersen said.

Anxiety a Cause of Hyperventilation

By DR. STEINCROHN

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was sure I was having a heart attack. While shopping the other day I got a sudden pain in my chest and had trouble filling my lungs with air. So I got myself off in a corner of the supermarket and began taking deep breaths, lifting up my chest as far as it would go to fill my lungs.

After a few minutes I felt worse. I began to perspire My heart felt as if it were running away with itself. I had palpitations. I felt dizzy and faint. Someone came along, saw I was distressed, and helped me and my groceries into my car. After resting a while, I felt less faint. I was able to drive home.

I've had quite a few of these attacks. I've been told they are due to nervousness. I've borrowed some tranquilizers from a friend, but they don't seem to help. I suppose the next step is a visit to a doctor? Yes? — Mrs. H.

COMMENT: First, one don't:

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Never borrow pills from a friend — especially tranquilizers. You know the old story — often, the underlying cause is anxiety. The patient breathes deeply and often. Sometimes the patient doesn't realize he or she is breathing rapidly.

All the while losing too much carbon dioxide and upsetting the body chemistry. This produces the symptoms you have been having.

YES, I SUGGEST THAT you see your doctor. He will prescribe treatment for your anxiety. He will also teach you how to breathe, using your diaphragm rather than lifting your chest high to breathe.

As children, many of us were taught to fill our lungs by lifting the chest rather than learning diaphragmatic breathing. Until you can control your attacks of hyperventilation, your doctor may ask you to keep a brown paper bag with you to rebreathe into. This helps restore the carbon dioxide-oxygen balance in the blood and terminates the attack more quickly.

Jack of All Trades, Master of None?

UCI's Decathlete Rejects Typecast

Daily Pilot Photos by Richard Koehler

VERSATILE MAURICIO BARDALES THROWS THE JAVELIN.

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A virtual one-man track and field team, Mauricio Bardales would like to dispel the notion that a decathlete is, as the saying goes, "A jack of all trades, master of none."

"That makes me mad," seethes the compact UC Irvine senior, his Nicaraguan temper ignited. "I feel if I could concentrate on any one event, I could be one of the best in the United States."

After a quick pause, he relaxes somewhat into his normal peaceful mood. "I'd have to exclude the shot put," he says, glancing at his legs. "I just don't have the size."

At 5-8 and 170 pounds, Bardales doesn't strike you as being an athlete who can excel at everything from jumping to javelin throwing and sprinting to middle distance running. But he is on a pace that, stretched over three years, makes him a good bet to reach his goals — an Olympic medal and a world record.

Currently ranked fourth in the nation, Bardales will be the favorite to capture the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. decathlon title when the conference meet begins Friday in Fresno. Yet, only four years ago, the chances of finding him competing in any collegiate track and field event, let alone 10, seemed slim at best.

Indeed, it wasn't just because of his size that few colleges took Bardales seriously as a track athlete. His high school times in the 440 (50.2) and 880 (1:56.5) were considered only marginal. His potential, he was told, was limited.

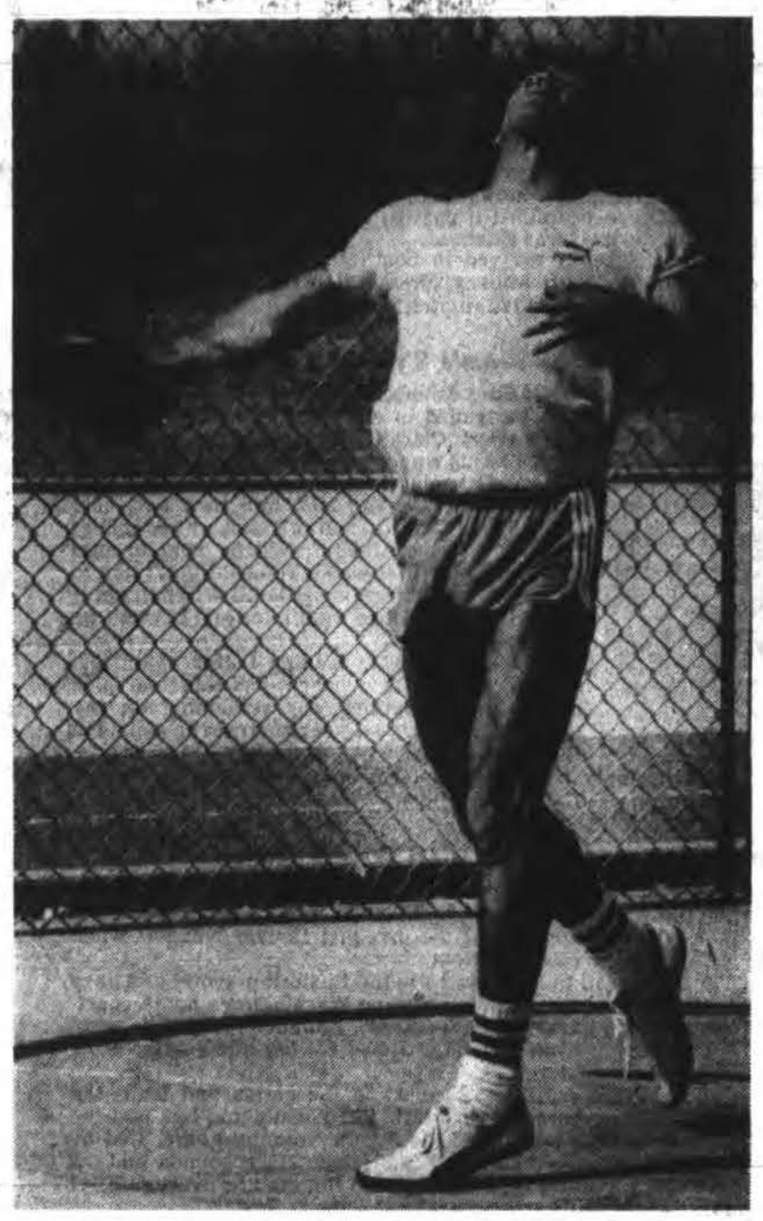

Four years later, the average athlete that nobody wanted is now one of the nation's fastest rising decathletes. As a freshman, his best score was 6,352. A year later, it was up to 6,985 and in the 1977 NCAA Division II championships, he scored 7,621.

In the NCAA Division I finals, he finished a surprising third and in the process set an NCAA decathlon record in the javelin with a toss of 239-4.

Not surprisingly, Bardales, still young for a world class decathlete at 22, set some lofty goals for this season. "81 or 82 hundred is definitely within my reach," he says. "I'd be one of the youngest guys to do that."

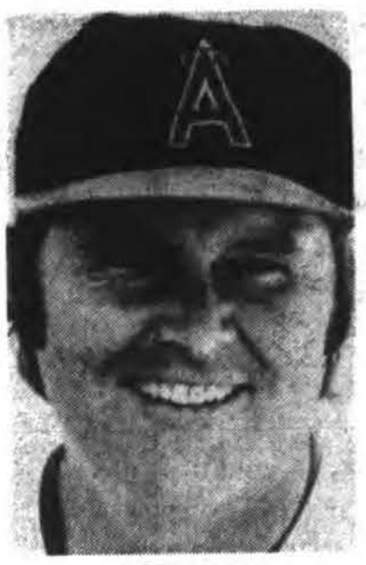

Though he has competed in just two decathlons in the last half year, he is closing in on the 8,000-point plateau. In December, he scored 7,641 on a dirt track in Glendale and

SUNS STAR DAVIS NBA TOP ROOKIE

RON FAIRLY

PHOENIX (AP) — Forward Walter Davis of the Phoenix Suns was named National Basketball Association Rookie of the Year Tuesday.

Davis won the honor over Marques Johnson of the Milwaukee Bucks, Bernard King of the New Jersey Nets, Jack Skima of the Seattle SuperSonics and Norm Nixon of the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I tried to think about it as little as possible, but it was awfully hard," Davis said of the battle with Johnson for the honor. "Marques is a great player, and there are probably three or four other guys who deserve the award as much as I do."

Davis averaged 24.2 points per game.

It's Fairly Clear

No Rocking Chair for Angel

DETROIT — Ron Fairly refuses to be shoved into a rocking chair.

The veteran first baseman-outfielder, who turns 40 in July, continues to rock opposing pitchers. And he doesn't mind rocking the boat a little, either, over the prospects of being a part-time player.

Fairly made it fairly clear Tuesday night that he wants — and perhaps deserves — to play every day, as he drove in three runs with three singles to lead the California Angels past the Detroit Tigers, 7-5.

IT WAS THE ANGELS' fourth consecutive triumph.

"I played in 135 games last year and I could have played in 10 more," Fairly said. "And I could do it again easily this year. I can't get tired playing this game. I didn't in 18 years and I can't see why I should now."

Fairly, acquired in a December trade from Toronto, has been platooned at first base with right-handed hitting Ron Jackson.

"I'D LIKE TO CHANGE that thinking," Fairly said of the platoon setup, although admitting that Jackson also deserves a regular spot.

Jackson is batting .349 and has driven in 13 runs in 19 games. Fairly, on the 1977 American League All-Star team, is batting .304 and has 11 RBI in 16 games.

The left-handed swinger walked in the opening inning, flied out to the warning track in right field in the third, singled in a run in the fifth, singled in a run in the sixth off starter Jim Slaton, then broke a 5-5 deadlock with an RBI single in the eighth off Steve Foucault.

THE LAST HIT MADE a winner out of Dave LaRoche, 3-0, in relief of Detroiter Frank Tanana — who was five years old when Fairly broke into the major leagues with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1958.

Tanana looked like he'd become the majors' first six-game winner until Detroit rallied for three runs in the seventh to tie it 5-5.

"I'd much rather have a save, no question about it," said LaRoche. "That's why I feel I didn't do my job today."

Don Baylor opened the scoring with his ninth homer to lead off the fourth — breaking a string of 23 scoreless innings by Tiger pitchers.

The Angels are idle tonight and resume the two-game series with Detroit Thursday. The scheduling quirk is because Detroit has arranged for an exhibition benefit against the Cincinnati Reds tonight.

Jokerst No Joke For Surf

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Staging its most prolific offensive display of the season, the California Surf vaulted into first place in the American Conference Western Division standings in the North American Soccer League with a 3-0 victory over the Tampa Bay Rowdies Tuesday night at Anaheim Stadium.

The smallest crowd of the home season, 9,591, sat in on the affair.

Dave Jokerst set a club record for shutouts in a career. It was his ninth and fourth of the current campaign for the Surf which had not scored more than two goals in any of the eight previous games.

"It meant a lot to me to get the shutout tonight," Jokerst said after the game. "I knew I was tied for the club record and with John Jackson coming in this week, I wanted it very much."

Jackson, the NASL's third leading goalkeeper last year for the team in St. Louis, spent the English season at Orient and helped his club to the semifinals of the English F.A. Cup. He arrives Thursday.

Dodgers Win, 3-1

Forster Finding Niche in LA Pen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Terry Forster was just a king in a bullpen full of aces last year in Pittsburgh, recording just one save all season.

But since joining the Los Angeles Dodgers, Forster has four saves in five weeks, despite being out two weeks with a hand ailment.

His latest save preserved Doug Rau's fifth victory without a loss Tuesday night in a 3-1 victory over St. Louis, and Forster predicts the best is yet to come.

"My hand is still a little puffed up," said lefthander Forster, "I don't really have my good fastball. I'm not yet side-arming guys and I don't have whip in my arm. But I will."

Forster was American League fireman of the year in 1974. He joined Pittsburgh in 1977 when he played out his option before signing with the Dodgers last winter. The Pirates got excellent relief work from Rich Gossage and Kent Tekulve while Forster worked through some arm problems.

Forster relieved Rau in the eighth inning with one out and two Cardinal runners in scoring position. Lou Brock was at third after a double and Garry Templeton followed with another double on a play where Brock had to hold at second waiting for the ball to stop bouncing around the infield.

Keith Hernandez, who started the night hitting .340, was the next hitter.

"He was the man I knew I had to get," said Forster, and he got Hernandez to strike out. The next batter was Ted Simmons, batting .469 against left-handed pitching.

"I'm no Einstein. But I ain't no dummy either," Forster said. He gave Simmons nothing to hit, finally walking him to fill the bases. He finally worked out of the problem by getting Jerry Morales to ground into a force play.

Fitzsimmons New Kansas City Coach

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Kings, as expected, introduced Cotton Fitzsimmons as head coach of the National Basketball Association team to a news conference today.

Fitzsimmons, a native Missourian who coached the Buffalo Braves this past season, said he will "do everything in my power to bring Kansas City a winning team."

Lonely Cheering Section

Volleyball doesn't always draw as well as some other high school sports, even if it's the CIF playoffs. Lonely Stephanie Berg and Mary Dale cheer Estancia to victory in Tuesday night's match. To be fair, it should be noted that this represented just one side of the gym. The other side had a much larger rooting section. See other photos, story Page B2.

For Surf Foe

Disneyland Trip Was the Clincher

The promise of a good soccer match wasn't enough to lure the Stuttgart soccer team from Germany for an exhibition with the California Surf, but when they threw in a trip to Disneyland . . . well, that was the clincher.

Stuttgart will play the Surf Friday night at Anaheim Stadium.

Originally the Surf had arranged to play the exhibition against Dusseldorf, but that team cancelled so Surf general manager Paul Deese started negotiations with Stuttgart.

When Deese promised a visit to Disneyland for the German contingent, the deal was finalized.

Stuttgart's team arrived in Southern California today, will spend Thursday with Mickey Mouse, Goofy and friends at the Magic Kingdom then play the match Friday.

Twins Won't Trade Carew

Rod Carew, the six-time American League batting champion who says he wants to be traded to a contending team, won't be leaving the Minnesota Twins if Clark Griffith, the club's vice president, has his way.

ROD CAREW

"We're going to make every effort to make a deal with him and sign him to a new contract," said Griffith, son of Twins owner Calvin Griffith. "I'm confident we'll be able to sign him, hopefully in the near future. I don't like to go ahead with things unsettled. I'd like to get it settled earlier rather than later and it won't be a trade."

Carew, the AL's leading batter again this season with a .378 average, has this year plus next season's option year remaining on the three-year, $200,000-a-year contract he signed in 1976.

He reportedly wants a long-term contract in the free-agent market for an estimated $2.5 million.

Bullets Try to Wrap It Up

The Philadelphia 76ers will be facing elimination at home against the Washington Bullets while the Seattle SuperSonics try to break a 1-1 deadlock against the invading Denver Nuggets when the NBA playoffs resume tonight.

The 76ers trail the Bullets 3-1 in the Eastern playoffs and have to win three straight, including one on Washington's home court. In tonight's fifth game at the Spectrum, Philadelphia will be seeking more scoring from superstar Julius Erving along with better defense and rebounding.

Erving is averaging 15.8 points in the series and leads the 76ers in shooting percentage (44.6). But Washington has had the rebounding edge, shutting off the Sixers' running game. Led by Elvin Hayes, who is averaging 26.3 points, 16 rebounds and 3.3 blocked shots a game in the series, the Bullets are averaging 117 points.

In Seattle, the SuperSonics are confident after splitting the opening Western playoff games in Denver. The Sonics have won 17 straight at home, including five in the playoffs. Seattle is coming off a 121-111 victory over the Nuggets Sunday.

Borg Gains WCT Semifinals

DALLAS — Steady Bjorn Borg, seeking his second World Championship of Tennis title, diffused Dick Stockton's powerful serve-and-volley game with an array of rumbling shots from the baseline Tuesday night for an easy 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-0 quarterfinal victory.

BJORN BORG

The 21-year-old Swede totally dominated the mistake-ridden Stockton after the first set, breaking Stockton's service eight of nine times and winning 12 straight games at one point.

Borg won the WCT crown in 1976 after two consecutive years as runnerup. He sat out the WCT tour last year, however, because of a contract dispute.

Borg advances to Friday's semifinals and will meet the winner of tonight's match between Raul Ramirez and Vitas Gerulaitis.

Estancia Sweeps Error-plagued FV

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Combining their quickness with well-timed placements and the ability to be in the right place at the right time, the Estancia High Eagles swept past visiting Fountain Valley in straight sets Tuesday night to advance to the second round of the CIF volleyball playoffs Friday night.

Coach Mike Pomeroy's Eagles, co-champs in the Orange County League, qualified for a shot at South Coast League runnerup San Clemente Friday after nailing error-plagued Fountain Valley, 15-10, 15-11, 15-9.

Only in the final set did Fountain Valley manage to gain a slim lead, moving to a 5-2 advantage. But returns into the net, errors and a couple of nice efforts by Estancia's Tim Krohnfeldt quickly erased the final doubt as the Eagles breezed.

Fountain Valley entered with 6-6 Dave Greenleaf and three other starters in the 6-3 range towering over its foe. But Estancia, with hustle and timing, made short work of the Sunset League representative at the net.

Jeff Gasper's hitting, the finesse of Shan Askin, and the overall play of Craig Keup, Kirk Stafford and Kent Smith made it look easy.

After the 15-10 opener, the Eagles jumped to a 10-1 lead to virtually put Fountain Valley out of it in the second set.

In all, it took but 76 minutes to eliminate Fountain Valley, a team which boasted a three-set triumph over La Quinta High earlier in non-league action.

La Quinta and Estancia tied for the Orange County League crown and their two tussles proved each the equal of the other — thus the Barons seemed to have the upper hand coming in to the contest.

However, it was Estancia which held all the aces, getting the right combinations when it needed it, plus a helping hand from Fountain Valley, which hurt itself with some spotty play.

Volleyball Teams Breeze Past Foes

In routine fashion, sometimes to the point of boredom, Orange Coast area high school volleyball demonstrated its superiority Tuesday night in the first round of the CIF playoffs.

In straight sets, Laguna Beach, San Clemente, University and Huntington Beach ripped the opposition, to breeze into the second round of the eliminations Friday night.

Only seniorless Irvine High was unsuccessful, dropping a 3-1 decision at South Pasadena.

Laguna Beach trampled Temple City, blanking the visitors in the second game with Randy Smith and Kip Engen leading the way, in addition to Eric Clark's outstanding job as an outside hitter. The Artists, defending CIF champions and South Coast League champions, will travel to San Marcos (Santa Barbara) High Friday night.

San Clemente destroyed inexperienced Workman High (City of Industry) Junior outside hitter Tony McGraw and sophomore setter Dean Karnazes sparkled for the Tritons in their tuneup for Estancia High Friday at San Clemente with a 7 o'clock start.

Cesar Manapsal showed some fine passing and defense in University's laugher at Los Altos (Hacienda Heights), while Huntington Beach dealt host Riverside Poly a quick exit from the playoffs behind Tom Pestolesi.

Pestolesi led an attack in the second game at the net with several blocks as the Oilers scored a 15-0 decision with only two rotations during the issue.

Huntington Beach, with the victory, qualifies for a home encounter Friday night against Loyola (Los Angeles) High, which drew a bye.

University, meanwhile, meets Dos Pueblos (Goleta) Friday at University High at 7 p.m. and idle Newport Harbor, Sunset League champion, will play host to South Pasadena.

The Newport-South Pasadena clash will be Thursday night at 7:30.

UCI Nine Tumbles, 9-6

LOS ANGELES—UC Irvine's baseball team, which has had trouble holding leads all year long, blew another one here Tuesday.

The Anteaters jumped out to a 5-0 lead after half an inning but eventually lost, 9-6, to Cal State Los Angeles when the Diablos bunched five hits in a four-run uprising in the sixth inning.

Doug Chard drilled a three-run double to highlight UCI's first inning outburst. Mike Hirano had two hits for the Anteaters, now 16-25 on the season and 10-14-1 in Southern California Baseball Assn. play.

UCI hosts Cal State Fullerton Friday afternoon (2:30).

Saturday the Anteaters end their season with a noon doubleheader at Fullerton.

SoCal Enters NAIA Playoffs

LA MIRADA—Southern California College of Costa Mesa begins quest of an NAIA District 3 baseball championship against Cal State Dominguez Hills Thursday (11:30) in action at Biola College here.

In the second game of the district tournament Thursday, perennial champion La Verne College will face Azusa-Pacific at 3 o'clock.

Losers return to action Friday at 11:30 in the double-loss elimination affair. Winners meet at 3 with the finals Saturday. SoCal finished the regular season with a 30-17 record, 16-6 in conference. Dominguez Hills is 30-19 and 19-3.

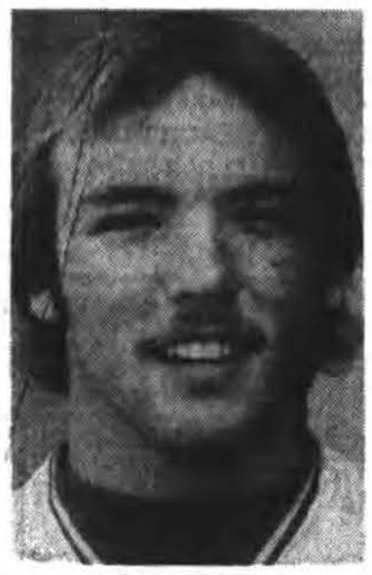

SoCal coach Doug Adams says he will send Bill Riddell to the mound against Dominguez Hills. Riddell has been the ace of the SCC staff this season.

SoCal and Dominguez Hills split a doubleheader Saturday to complete regular season play.

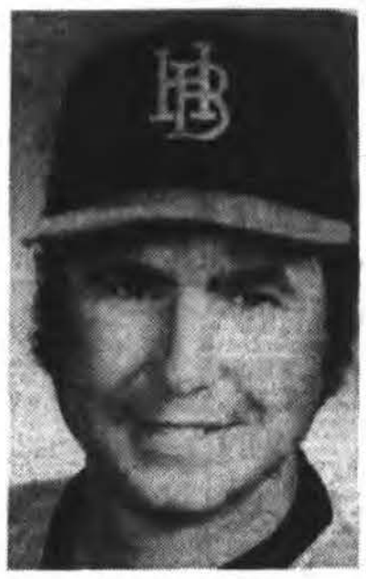

"They have excellent pitching and hit well," Adams says of Dominguez Hills. "They have three pitchers, one a left-hander and the other two are right-handed. I'm not sure which one will start against us."

Roy Ferguson, an outfielder for Dominguez Hills, led the district in base hits with 73 this season.

In Friday's game, Kent Miyashiro or Butch Ward will get the starting nod from Adams.

KEVIN ROMINE
Player of the Year

DON TERRANOVE
Coach of the Year

FV's Romine Tops All-Sunset Team

Huntington Beach High's Oilers, with a half dozen picks on the two teams, dominates the All-Sunset League baseball selections chosen by the Daily Pilot.

Player of the year laurels, however, go to Fountain Valley junior Kevin Romine, a superb outfielder who proved nearly impossible to get out at the plate.

Romine batted .523 with 23 hits in 44 official appearances at the plate. He slammed a bases-loaded homer in one game, was three-for-four twice, four-for-four on another occasion and three-for-three in another game.

Additionally, Romine was the core of Fountain Valley's defense in the outfield, and along with catcher Mike Empting, led the Barons to their frenzied finish to tie for the crown.

Coach of the Year honors go Huntington Beach's Don Terranove, in a landslide. The Oiler coach took a junior-dominated team considered a year away from making a serious run for the championship and turned it into the team to beat by mid-season.

All-Century Nine Picked

Estancia High's Eagles picked up a pair of all-league selections on the All-Century League baseball team as chosen by the circuit's coaches with catcher Dave Pisarski and the versatile Bob Braunsdorf honored.

Player of the year is pitcher Dave Leeper, who dazzled the opposition with a 1.37 ERA and an 8-1 record as he led the Villa Park Spartans to the title.

Coach of the year honors are shared by Villa Park's Dave Ochoa and Bill Ross of Santa Ana High

Oranges Dealt Loss; Evert Falls

Ross Case and Mona Guerrant played key roles in a doubles sweep by the San Diego Friars in a 30-25 World Team Tennis Victory over the Anaheim Oranges Tuesday night at Anaheim Convention Center.

San Diego improved its first place record in the WTT West Division to 5-3, while the Oranges dropped to 3-8 and a fourth place standing in the Eastern Division.

Francoise Durr was a surprise opener in the Anaheim lineup in women's singles, after San Diego's Kerry Reid had scored some easy victories over the Oranges' Rosie Casals in previous matches. The move paid off, as Durr edged Reid 7-6, winning the tiebreaker 5-4.

Anaheim also won the men's singles in a duel of player coaches, with Cliff Drysdale over Rod Laver 7-6, including a 5-4 tiebreaker.

But the doubles combinations of the Friars dominated all three sets. Guerrant and Case won the mixed doubles 6-4. Guerrant and Reid won the women's doubles 6-3. And Case and Laver captured the men's singles 6-4.

Meanwhile, Indiana's Diane Fromholtz defeated Los Angeles' Chris Evert 6-2 in women's singles as the Loves beat the Strings in overtime 23-20 in a WTT match in Indianapolis.

The Loves took the overtime period, a continuation of the mixed doubles' match, 1-0.

Indiana's Geoff Masters and Tanya Harford had lost to Bob Carmichael and Anne Kiyomura 6-2 in the regular mixed doubles match. But Masters and Harford recovered to end the match, by winning the first game of overtime.

In men's doubles, Alan Stone and Masters downed Carmichael and Ashok Amritraj of the Kings 6-2.

UCI'S MAURICIO BARDALES EYES THE POLE VAULT.

UC IRVINE'S BARDALES . . .

Bardales is the first to admit a decathlon isn't for everybody. "It tears your body down," he says. "By Thursday, my body is kaput. But any decathlete trying to get up in the rankings should spend no less than four hours training per day."

Competition is divided into two days. On the first, decathletes run the 100, long jump, put the shot, high jump and finish with the 400. On the second day, the schedule has the 110 high hurdles, discus throw, pole vault, javelin throw and the 1,500 run.

WORKOUTS AND MEETS, Bardales points out, are equally tough, both physically and psychologically.

"Physically, you've got to call on your body to perform on the optimum level," he says. "It quickly becomes tiring, especially if the high jump or pole vault takes 12 attempts.

"Psychologically, it's handling the pain, getting yourself up for every meet, thinking what you're going to do. You have to change your perspective 10 times and you have to let your mind take control of your body.

"It's a constant thinking process when you're competing."

Oddly enough, Bardales disagrees with those decathletes who feel theirs is the toughest competition around. "I don't think it is," he says. "A marathon might be. Plus, I've run some half miles that were really tough."

Just as UCI was his second choice as a school, so was the decathlon his second pick as an event. Both switches were out of necessity.

BEING TURNED DOWN completely by UCLA, the first school of his choice, only helped to strengthen his determination. Thus, when he enrolled at UCI after hitch-hiking from Los Angeles and parking himself on the steps to the admissions office, he was ready and eager to do whatever was necessary to become a top notch middle distance runner.

Only things didn't turn out as planned. For one, UCI had landed Steve Scott, who eventually evolved into America's top miler. Second, Bardales got bored with just running, especially when it conflicted with a hobby of his—weight lifting.

"My second choice of schools was UCI because of Bill Toomey, but I wasn't sure if I wanted to compete in the decathlon," Bardales recalls. "I had thoughts but I didn't think of it seriously.

"When I started running the half, I got tired of constantly running. Plus I heard heavy weight lifting was bad for running and I like weight lifting. I wanted to switch events so I took up the decathlon."

TOOMEY, WHO WAS UCI'S head coach until 1976, seemed the perfect tutor since he had won the decathlon in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City. Though Bardales now trains under Toomey's brother, Jim, it is obvious where his inspiration comes from.

"I trained a month for my first decathlon and I did poorly, scoring just 5,110 points," Bardales says. "But Bill Toomey told me on his first one he scored 5,100 points and that was when he was 22.

"He wanted a world record so bad that he kept doing de-

Canadiens Await Foe In Finals

From AP Dispatches

Montreal's Canadiens are already in, and their opponent in the upcoming Stanley Cup championship series may be the Boston Bruins, who took a commanding 3-1 lead in their semifinal series with the Philadelphia Flyers Tuesday.

Toronto was eliminated from the race for the National Hockey League's most coveted trophy when Montreal scored a 2-0 victory Tuesday in Toronto. Boston stopped host Philadelphia 4-2 Tuesday.

Toronto coach Roger Neilson accepted the elimination of his Maple Leafs with reluctant resignation.

"NOBODY LIKES TO lose," Neilson said. "But if you have to, I'd rather lose to a great team like the Canadiens. They're well-balanced and extremely well-coached.

"I can't see anyone beating them — this year anyway."

The mighty Canadiens had no trouble with a tired Leafs' club, as goaltender Ken Dryden turned aside 23 shots — none of them difficult — to record his 10th career playoff shutout in 90 appearances.

MEANWHILE BOSTON defenseman Brad Park says the Bruins ought to thank teammate John Wensink for their victory over Philadelphia.

Wensink played 26 seconds of the first period — sitting 10 minutes in the penalty box — while Boston was building a 2-0 lead. Wensink had a fight with Bill Barber and then Rick LaPointe.

"The Wensink fights really gave us a start," Park insisted. "What should I say? He outpointed Barber and made us aware that the Flyers weren't going to run us out of the building."

Maybe Park was right, that Wensink did start the adrenalin running for the Bruins before 17,077 hostile fans

Anteaters Sign Cager

UC Irvine basketball coach Tim Tift announced Tuesday he has signed San Jose City College product Victor Conyers to a national letter of intent.

Conyers is a 6-7 forward who averaged 18.3 points per game and 10.5 rebounds last season while earning All-Golden Gate Conference honors. In one game last year Conyers scored 52 points.

Conyers becomes the third Bay Area player signed by Tift in a span of 10 days. Last week, Tift landed a pair of highly regarded Oakland prep guards, 6-4 Robbie Beal and 6-0 Louis Bremond.

Beal, an honorable mention All-American, averaged 23.2 points at Bishop O'Dowd High while Bremond, an All-Northern California selection, averaged 17 points and 7.2 assists for St. Joseph High.

Saddleback Host Girls' Cage Event

The first state junior college basketball tournament for women, which had been threatened because of a pending lawsuit, will get under way as planned Thursday at Saddleback College.

The opening day schedule has MiraCosta meeting Fresno at 2:30, followed by a 4:30 game between Hancock and Cypress, a 6:30 clash between Fullerton and Marin and an 8:30 encounter between San Mateo and Los Angeles Valley.

Feather River College, an undefeated small division team, had filed a lawsuit against the large schools tournament seeking admission.

But Wednesday, after lawyers from both sides failed to reach a compromise after two hours of negotiations in Sacramento, the presiding judge refused to sign a temporary injunction halting the tourney.

Softball Tourney Set for GWC

Undefeated Cerritos College and host Golden West will be on a collision course if first-round pairings in the Southern California junior college sectional softball playoffs go as scheduled Thursday.

Cerritos meets Pasadena and Golden West faces San Bernardino at 10 Thursday morning in opening action. The winners meet on the GWC field at 7 in what could be a prelu de to the championship finals on Saturday.

Both teams have outstanding pitching with Cerritos' Tippy Borrego boastinq a 0.09 ERA and Golden West's Kathi Rosenbery a 0.22 mark. Each school captured a conference championship, Cerritos winning the South Coast crown and GWC the Southern California California title.

Cerritos has been rated No. 1 in the state most of the year and breezed to a 28-0 record, 20 of the wins coming in conference play. Golden West had a 10-0 conference record and was 26-5-2 overall.

Rosenbery had three no-hitters but seldom plays when she isn't pitching. Borrego, on the other hand, plays in the outfield when not pitching and had a .333 batting average including four doubles, three triple and a home run.

Thursday's Schedule

10 a.m. (Game 1)—Cerritos vs. Pasadena; (Game 2)—Golden West vs. San Bernardino.

GWC Captures Finale, 8-7

LOS ANGELES—Golden West College built a 7-0 lead with daring base running but needed four consecutive walks in the eighth inning to score what proved to be the winning run in Tuesday's 8-7 Southern California Conference baseball finale over LA Southwest College.

The Rustlers finished second in the conference standings at 16-8 and were 24-11 overall.

Leadoff batter John Moses started a four-run first inning when he singled, stole second and scored on Steve Nemeth's single. After a wild pickoff throw, Nemeth scored on a ground out by Russ Penfold. Frank Meraz was safe on an error and Rick Clark followed with his second homer of the year.

In the second inning, Dan Jackson singled, stole second and scored on Nemeth's second RBI single. In the fifth, the Rustlers scored twice as Moses legged out an infield single, stole a pair of bases and scored on a single by Doug Mansolino who later tallied on a ground out.

Stars' Tryouts Set

Open tryouts for the Orange County Stars pro volleyball team are scheduled tonight between 7-8 o'clock at Fountain Valley High's gym.

Anyone is eligible to try out. Player-coach Dodge Parker says the Stars are still looking to complete their roster with a fourth hitter.

JOKERST...

is coming?

"It's been a situation I am very familiar with in the past and it will be John's (Sewell) decision which one of us plays."

Sewell was happy with the offense.

"We got two goals in the first half for the first time this year and that's very encouraging," Sewell said. "With another game together, the offense is coming around.

"We used more width out there tonight and we weren't blocking the middle up as much as we did before.

"Our forwards haven't been getting enough chances to score but tonight they showed they can do it. Our forwards were very pleased with the service they got tonight."

The Surf picked up the maximum of nine points with the victory to move into the top spot with 48 and a 6-3 record.

The first goal came at 22:42 when Ray Evans placed a penalty kick in front of Dan Counce who scored his third goal of the season. At 36:45, Manuel Cuenca took a perfect pass from Al Trost for the second score.

Steve Moyers scored the final goal with 7:30 left when he sent a header into the corner of the net after a long pass from Chris Dangerfield.

For Trost, the assist was his 21st and placed him second on the club career list in this department.

Friday night the Surf plays an international game at Anaheim Stadium against Stuttgart, Germany starting at 7:30. Three Surf players are not expected to see action, however, including captain Peter Wall who suffered an ankle injury Tuesday night.

He joins George Graham and Malcolm Lord on the injured list. Graham and Lord did not play Tuesday and Sewell said it is doubtful if any of the three will play Friday.

UC IRVINE'S BARDALES...

cathlons every weekend until he broke it. That was 8,417 at the age of 29. If he could have pole vaulted better, he'd still have the world record."

Perhaps it is for this reason Bardales has spent extra time working on the pole vault, where he has a best of 15-6. His best high school vault was a paltry 9-6.

"They stuck me in the pole vault some times but we didn't have a pit so when we came to a meet that was our practice and competition," Bardales says.

His most polished event is the javelin, his easiest is the 400 and his most dreaded is the 1,500. If he were to equal his lifetime bests in each of the events, he would score 8,300 points.

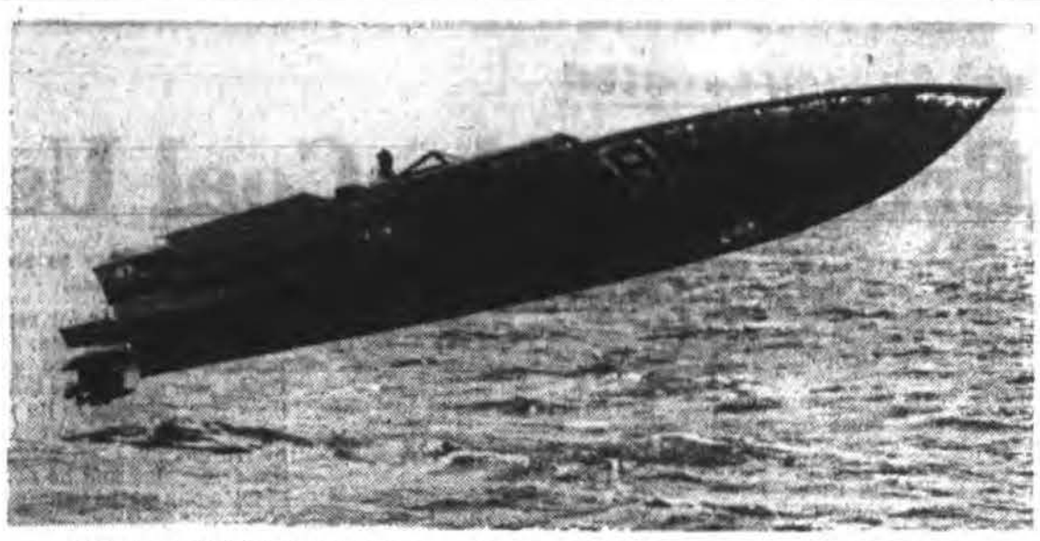

After graduation, Bardales plans on training at UCI for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow. He has his sights set on scoring 8,500 points next year and, eventually, 9,000.

"I'd like to be the first over 9,000," he says. "I'd like a record that will be significant and take a long time to break. The Olympics are a stepping stone for future things. If I can go there and do good, that would be just a quarter of my ambitions for the future.

"Right now, the decathlon is my thing. Once I'm finished with it, I hope to leave it."

There's another side of Bardales that few people see. An intense, yet quiet, young man, he would like to exploit his success as an athlete but not in the normal sense. Rather than trying to see what he can gain, he thinks in terms of what he can give.

"Eventually, I'd like to open a probation camp for kids," says the social science major. "I'm looking forward to doing something like that. That's my major ambition. If you have a name, that helps."

GRANDPA NORKSKOG PILOTS BOAT TO NEW PACIFIC OFFSHORE RECORD

A Speed Record at 65

Bob Nordskog of Van Nuys celebrated his 65th birthday Sunday by smashing a 12-year-old record for a run from San Francisco to Marina del Rey in his 39-foot, 850 horsepower boat.

NORDSKOG MADE THE run in seven hours and three minutes to break the old mark of 11.6 hours set in 1966. The old record was established on a run from Marina del Rey to San Francisco.

Nordskog averaged 55 miles per hour during the 400 mile dash which was sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association.

"THERE WERE NO PROBLEMS with the exception of a little rough water between Monterey and Point Concepcion, but we expected that," said Nordskog.

Well wishers at California Yacht Club greeted him with champagne and sang "Happy Birthday as Nordskog pulled his turbo-charged craft into the slip.

Six Challenge for Cup

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Six foreign yacht clubs, including one representing England's return to competition, have challenged the New York Yacht Club for the America's Cup.

The club's America's Cup Committee, which met Monday in New York, released the list of challengers for the 1980 races in a statement drafted by a New York City public relations firm.

CHALLENGES ACCEPTED BY the committee came from:

— Yacht Club d'Hyeres of France,
— Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron of Australia,
— Royal Perth Yacht Squadron of Western Australia,
— Royal Yacht Club of Gothenburg, Sweden,
— Royal Southern Yacht Club of England, and — Societe des Regats Rochellaises of France.

COMMODORE HENRY H. Anderson Jr of the NYYC said the list of foreign challengers is the largest in the cup's 127-year history, breaking the 1977 record of four.

"Obviously we've got a lot to learn about who some of these people are," Anderson said. "But we're pleased. This will be the most challengers ever."

Last summer, Baron Marcel Bich brought two yachts over from Yacht Club d'Hyeres and the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron again sent veteran campaigner Gretel II to Newport.

THE ROYAL GOTHENBURG Yacht Club of Sweden will be returning for a second time with Sverige, a computer-designed 12-meter that lost in the foreign finals to Australia in 1977.

Royal Perth made its first challenge in 1974 with Southern Cross. Alan Bond backed the Southern Cross effort but abandoned Royal Perth for the Sun City Yacht Club and the yacht Australia last year.

The Royal Southern Yacht Club, which is making its first challenge, will represent the return of Britain's effort to capture the America's Cup. The last time England was represented was in 1964.

THE SOCIETE DES REGATS Rochellaises, which bought 195 defender Columbia from the Sverige syndicate last year, is entirely new to America's Cup competition but will challenge in 1980.

Last week, 1967 and 1970 defender Intrepid was returned to Rhode Island where Bich intends to use the wood-hulled yacht as a trial horse for his two 12-meters.

Rich, who made his fortune with ballpoint pens, stored France I and France II in Barrington, R.I., over the winter and is expected to have a newer 12-meter ready for 1980.

THE DEADLINE FOR entering challenges for the next America's Cup competition was April 18. However, the cup committee decided to wait until after its May 8 meeting to announce the challengers.

The America's Cup was awarded to the New York Yacht Club in 1851 after the schooner America defeated a fleet of British vessels. Since then, American yachts have defended the cup 23 times.

Last summer, Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner sailed Courageous to a four-race shutout against Australia.

Macho Racers Battle Winds

Four classes of dinghies braved strong winds Saturday and Sunday in the Los Angeles Yacht Club's Macho Regatta.

Winds in the outer breakwater area whistled up to 18-24 knots resulting in 15 capsizings. All of the capsized boats were righted and finished the races in which they were involved. Results:

Fuel Agency Created

Brown Backs Coal Use

PASADENA (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. says he supports the development of coal-fired power plants in California as long as the environment is protected.

Saying "this is an immediate challenge that must be met," the governor announced Tuesday the creation of a new agency, the California Clean Fuels Coordinating Council, to oversee the sometimes conflicting actions of boards that control power sources.

He said the new agency will be responsible "to quickly resolve problems of air pollution," associated with electricity production

THE NEW AGENCY, Brown said, will coordinate activities of the state's Public Utilities Commission, Energy Commission, Air Resources Board, Water Resources Control Board, Solid Waste Management Board and the state's Washington, D.C., office.

TAKING STOCK

Brown said the use of coal presents environmental problems but added that he felt those could be resolved.

"As far as state government is concerned, our official policy is one of encouragement, of working with the private sector and with universities and the federal government to bring about a coal technology which is compatible with the quality of life in California."

No-fault Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel has cleared for floor action a bill establishing a nationwide system of no-fault automobile insurance, a proposal sought by consumer groups for a decade.

The Commerce Committee voted 9-7 Tuesday to send the bill to the full Senate.

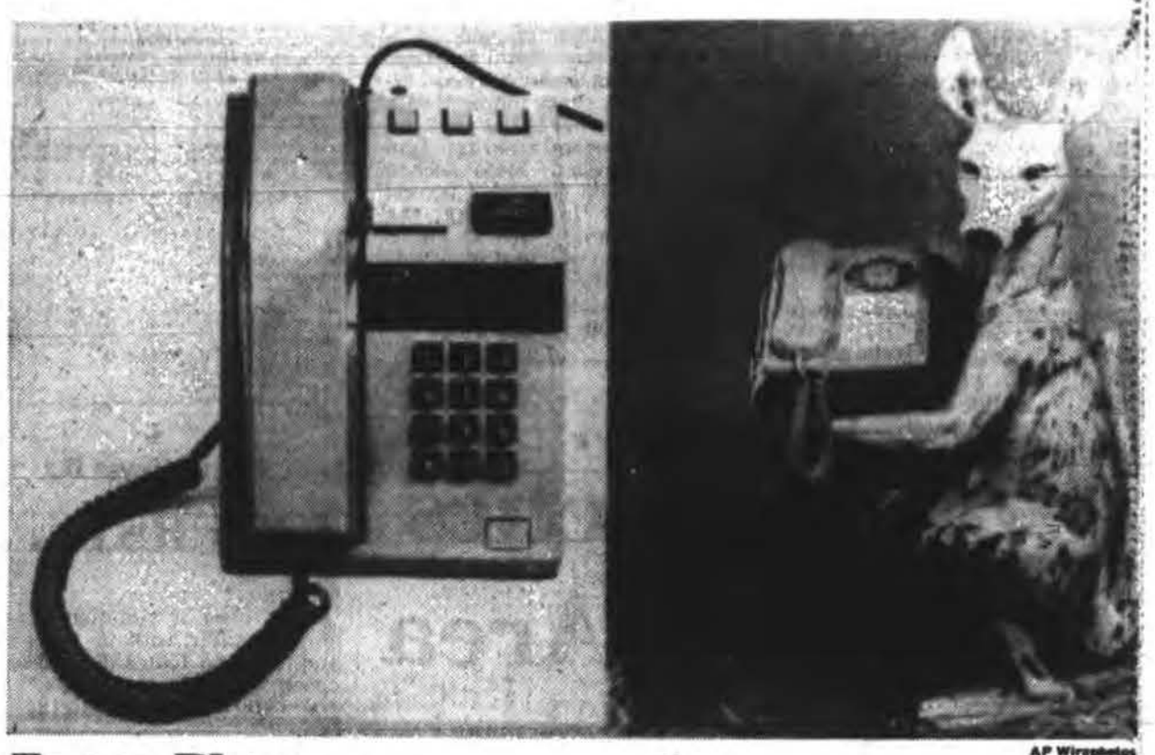

The crucial vote for reporting the bill came from Sen. John A. Durkin, D-N.H., who said he would vote against the bill on the floor if it remains in its present form. A series of amendments by Durkin had been defeated by the committee and he promised to try again on the Senate floor.

Durkin said the committee-passed version would result in "windfall profits for the big insurance companies" while failing to provide sufficient safeguards for consumers.

1st Class Break Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air travelers who go first class will find lower fares later this month.

The Civil Aeronautics Board has approved reductions of 13 to 20 percent in domestic first-class fares, effective May 19.

Fancy Phones

New regulations by the Federal Communications Commission allowing customers to buy their own phones have spawned designs such as these. At right is a kangaroo model by Northern Telecom Inc. At left is an ITT clock phone. Under the regulations, customer-bought phones may be plugged into standardized jacks installed by phone companies.

Comsat Rates Decreased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has approved an agreement settling the 13-year-old Comsat rate dispute and said the public should be the eventual beneficiary of lowered rates and refunds in the settlement.

The agreement calls for the Communications Satellite Corp. to refund about $100 million to its customers and to file rates that will reduce its charges to its customers by 48.5 percent.

COMSAT ITSELF does not provide service to the public but serves carriers that do. Among its major customers are the television networks and the Department of Defense.

In general, the agreement modifies the base on which Comsat can calculate its rates. It was approved Tuesday.

The case began in 1965. David Irwin, an official of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau, called it "one of the most tortured cases that has ever been before the commission." The record includes 20,000 pages of hearings.

AFTER SOME questions about details, the commission approved the agreement unanimously. Commissioner Abbott Washburn commented: "I'd like to compliment everybody concerned with this that we bring this to a conclusion after 13 years."

The commission emphasized its intention to require that Comsat's customers make the ultimate user the beneficiary of the refunds and reduction in rates.

Bored Workers Need a Voice

By SYLVIA PORTER

A high proportion of the more than 93 million jobholders in the United States is deeply discontended.

Despite the fringe benefits, pay hikes, company attempts to provide an atmosphere of "team effort," they feel restless, even alienated. The "extras" become meaningless when the job is boring, frustrating, without real value.

WHY? BECAUSE MOST WORKERS have so little to say. They sense that their opinions and recommendations are not welcomed or respected by management, so they lose interest in work.

An old cartoon gets to the heart of this problem. It shows a company president seated behind his desk, talking to an employee. The caption says, "We do live in a democracy, Perkins, but here we operate under an authoritarian regime."

The problem involves more than unhappy workers. It spreads to the fundamental issue of increasing productivity — an essential to curbing inflation and promoting economic stability. Discontented employees can be a drain on the efficient running of any business; people are a successful organization's most important asset as well as the largest single budgetary expense of most businesses. The goal is to make the cost pay off.

What, then, might be an answer?

GIVING EMPLOYEES MORE PARTICIPATION in management decisions may be the key.

U.S. industry is moving too slowly toward this goal, said the late Dr. Alfred J. Marrow, former president of the National Academy of Professional Psychologists and a pioneer in social and industrial psychology.

In Europe, what Marrow called "participative management" has been widely used for many years. But in our country, "though the people who head organizations recognized that the present work force is better educated, more affluent and brings to the job greater expectations for advancement, they have affected only minor changes in their authoritarian managerial practices." Among basic guides:

— AN EMPLOYEE SHOULD NOT be asked to participate when his or her suggestions will not influence the decision. Token participation is destructive. The objective is to assure you the right of an effective role in the decision-making process.

In inviting expression of opinion, bosses run the risk of hearing things they might not want to hear. If top management is surprised by employee opinions, there has been a barrier to communication. Management must be prepared to respond, to give and to take.

— The value of employee opinions can be rated only by how well-informed employees are. When employees are invited to make decisions they develop an "ego-investment" in making it work.

— EMPLOYES SHOULD TRY TO develop a better attitude toward employers. This will happen as supervisors concentrate not on "controlling" employees, but on understanding what motivates them and in watching their performance.

Market Steadies After Dow Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a tiny gain today, steadying after the pullback of the last two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 7.02 points Monday and Tuesday, was up 0.09 to 822.16.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 7-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was no special news to account for the upswing. They said the market seemed to benefit from "catchup" buying by traders who had been waiting for a dip after last month's sharp rally to increase their holdings.

NBC Can't Roll on 'Wheels' Alone

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC scored with the first chapter of "Wheels," a miniseries based on the novel by Arthur Hailey, but it was the network's only entry among the week's 20 most-watched shows, A. C. Nielsen Company figures show.

ABC, meanwhile, was first again in the standings.

NBC won the ratings race two weeks ago with its "Holocaust" miniseries, but "Wheels" — the first episode Sunday night was No. 6 for the week ending May 7 — was far less controversial and received relatively little advance attention.

ABC's "THREE'S Company" was the week's most-watched show, as it had been often during the fall and winter, followed by two CBS programs, "M-A-S-H" and "One Day at a Time." Another ABC program, "Laverne and Shirley," ranked first by Nielsen for the fall-winter season, had the same rating as "One Day at a Time" but claimed a smaller share of the audience watching at the time it was shown.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 28.7. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 28.7 percent saw at least part of the program.

ABC claimed five of the week's 10 top-rated shows — and 12 of the first 20. CBS had seven of the top 20. The configuration contributed to a rating for the week for ABC of 18.4. CBS was second at 17.3 and NBC third at 15.5.

THE NETWORKS SAY that means in an average prime-time minute, 18.4 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

CBS and ABC had two shows at the bottom of the list of 66. ABC's "Mel and Susan Show" was No. 62, NBC's "Hanna-Barbera Happy Hour" No. 63, "Sugar Time" on ABC No. 64 and two CBS programs, "The Rita Moreno Show" and "CBS Reports" 65th and 66th.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"THREE'S COMPANY," with a 28.7 rating representing 20.9 million homes, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 28.4 or 20.7 milliou, CBS; "One Day at a Time," CBS, and "Laverne and Shirley," ABC, both 26.7 or 19.5 million; "Happy Days," 23.8 or 17.4 million, ABC; Big Event, "Wheels," Part I, 23.2 or 16.9 million, NBC; "60 Minutes," 22.6 or 16.5 million, CBS; "Charlie's Angels," 22.5 or 16.3 million, and "Love Boat," 22.3 or 16.3 million, both ABC, and "Lou Grant," 22.1 or 16.1 million, CBS.

The next 10 shows:

"Fantasy Island," "Carter Country" and "The Phenomenon of Benji," all ABC; "Elvis in Concert," CBS; "What's Happening," ABC; "All in the Family" and "Hawaii Five-O," both CBS, and "Barney Miller," "Battle of the Network Stars" and "Starsky and Hutch," all ABC.

Esther Rolle Rejoins Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Esther Rolle will return to the CBS comedy "Good Times" in the fall after a year's absence.

The show dropped in the ratings after Miss Rolle quit the show, leaving the children without parents. Earlier, John Amos had left the show.

During past year Miss Rolle starred in Broadway in "Macbeth" and just finished the CBS movie "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings." She will also star in a movie for NBC, "The Summer of My German Soldier."

'Bud and Lou' TV Film Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harvey Korman will play Bud Abbott and Buddy Hackett will be Lou Costello in the NBC movie about the famous comedy team, "Bud and Lou."

Red Button will portray Eddie Sherman, the comedy team's manager in the two-hour film.

George Lefferts based his script on Bob Thomas' book about the off-camera feuding between the two comedians.

Dream Realized?

Didi Conn stars as a hash house cashier from Cleveland who wins a trip to New Orleans in the TV movie "Murder at the Mardi Gras" tonight at 9 on CBS, Channel 2.

New Concerts Planned

TOM BARLEY
Music Box

It does the saddened music writer's heart good in these waning weeks of the 1977-78 season to see those dedicated music lovers who are already planning for the next season.

A round of applause, if you will, for the dedicated volunteers of the Harbor Area Community Concerts Association whose five-day membership drive begins next Monday.

Working under the presidency of Gloria Patrona of Westminster, they already have three concerts lined up for the 1978-79 season: the very popular Odessa Balalaikas, who brought the house down on their last visit to the Orange Coast, pianist David Lauren and harpist Susann McDonald.

BUT, AS PUBLICITY chairman Marilyn Kunde reminds the column, it takes a substantial numb of memberships to provide the nationwide community concerts organization with the funds that make it possible to send such top flight artists to the Orange Coast.

This writer never tires of pointing out what a marvelous bargain these community concerts memberships are.

You get all the concerts scheduled for your own local group and you can travel around and take in concerts in many other communities who subscribe to the same plan.

IN ALL FAIRNESS, of course, organizers in other communities must insist that their own members be seated first before visitors can be accommodated.

Frankly, looking at that cost again, it's hard to see how they can do it year after year. Student tickets $6, adults $12 and family memberships for $30; it just has to be the biggest musical bargain around and this writer always has a well used community concerts card tucked away in his wallet.

Again, the more members these volunteers can drum up, the better artists we will see in our part of the world.

THESE SPLENDID VOLUNTEERS have always had the strong support of this column and always will have. But memberships provide the grist for the mill and that's where you, gentle reader, come in.

Call Marilyn Kunde at 894-8531 or Marge Palmer at 548-4739. Remember, it's never too early to plan for our next season of music.

'Apocalypse' Previewed in SF

By ROGER CELS
The Hollywood Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO — Francis Coppola's unveiling of his "Apocalypse Now" for around 300 invited exhibitors appeared to leave most decidedly unimpressed.

The curtain closed on the 135-minute screening, which was barred to the press but to which this reporter gained entry, without applause or any other noticeable reaction save a few muffled comments.

Those exhibitors questioned after the screening expressed reservations concerning the outlook for the film, one referring to it as a "white elephant."

Special effects will no doubt be the selling point of "Apocalypse," and while it appears the effects will indeed be astounding, the film goes well beyond the bounds of expensive tricks. The photography and effects were first rate, and the mood and tone were established and held with a gripping intensity, even in the rough-cut version.

"METAMORPHOSES" at once the complete opposite and logical successor to 'Fantasia'." — Media Scene Magazine

Sex Movie Director Critizes Rating System

By JEAN-CLAUDE BOUIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Unless they were accompanied by parent or guardian, the child stars in several of French director Louis Malle's films couldn't just walk in to the theater where they appeared on the screen. Malle's first film in America — "Pretty Baby," starring Brooke Shields — is no exception.

Shields, who turned 12 during the shooting of this film, plays the child of a prostitute who grows up in a brothel in Storyville, the New Orleans red-light district. The film — set in 1917, when the bordellos were closed down by the Navy — also stars Keith Carradine and Susan Sarandon.

IT IS RATED R, WHICH means restricted: "under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian," according to the industry code. The film has been banned in parts of Canada.

The star in "Murmur of the Heart," which won Malle an Oscar nomination for best screenplay in 1973, is a 14-year-old. It's the story about a boy who sleeps with his mother.

"He couldn't see the movie in France," Malle said in an interview. "It was forbidden to people under 18, and I think I had the same problem with 'Zazie Dans le Metro,'" his third film (1960). It was adapted from Raymond Quenau's best selling comic novel about the adventures of a precocious 11-year-old visiting her transvestite uncle in Paris.

"IT'S HAPPENED TO ME several times and I think it's very hypocritical, but what can I do about censorship," said Malle, who admitted that "Pretty Baby" — which has no explicit sex scenes — deals with a touchy subject. He said, however, that he believes the ratings system for movies is "ridiculous" when "violence is very, very heavy on American TV."

Malle said he would not hesitate to show his children his films. "My experience with children, and I've been dealing with a number of them in all these recent films, is that they know a lot more about everything than adults want them to know.

"People asked me: 'how can you direct Brooke Shields to do things she doesn't know everything about?' I'm sorry, she knows everything about it. Especially children today, 12, 13, . . . with TV, sexual education now largely provided in schools, they know everything."

MALLE, 46, HAS TWO children, aged 3 and 6. "I'm not married, no, but I have two children. I was married, a long time ago, but I've been divorced since 1968.

"I spend a lot of time with my children. . . . And if I spend the summer working here, I'll have them with me, so that I'll spend time with them," said Malle, whose next film takes place in New York.

"I'd like to do a very ironic film, which would have the appearances of a comedy," he said of the as-yet untitled project for Paramount.

Malle has never avoided taboo subjects. His "Lacombe, Lucien," which received the Oscar nomination for best foreign film in 1974, deals with the long-suppressed topic of the involvement of ordinary French citizens in Nazi collaboration during the World War II. The title character is 17.

STAR, DIRECTOR OF 'PRETTY BABY'
Keith Carradine Watches Louis Malle

He feels a personal attachment to "Lacombe, Lucien" because he was 11 in 1944 and, "it was a very traumatic experience for a child to deal with what was going on in France in 1944."

IN HIS HOTEL SUITE, Malle spoke in lightly accented English about why he concentrates on adolescence in his films.

"It's a moment of rebellion, and it's very creative in a lot of ways. It's a moment of lucidity and you're also afraid and you're insecure and it's a key moment and I'm really interested in that period in the life of anybody."

Malle said he had an easy childhood because he came from a wealthy background, but that he went through a stage of rebellion from age 11 to 17.

"It's probably the most traumatic moment in a lifetime, when you're just about to enter the world of adults, and you start finding out about hypocrisy and the lies, and start reconsidering all that you have been taught all those years."

Travolta Signed For Third Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Travolta will star in "American Gigolo," his third major film for Paramount.

He was nominated for an Academy Award as best actor for "Saturday Night Fever" and is in the upcoming "Grease."

In the new movie he plays a Los Angeles gigolo simultaneously falling in love and being framed for murder.

Slave-trading Movie Slated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — 'Ashanti," a story of modern-day slave trading in Africa and the Mideast, has begun filming in Kenya and Israel.

It stars Michael Caine, Omar Sharif, Peter Ustinov, Rex Harrison, Telly Savalas and Beverly Todd.

Sharif plays a nomad who teams up with Caine to track down a ruthless slave trader played by Ustinov, who has kidnaped his wife, played by Miss Todd.

Savalas is a mercenary helicopter pilot and Harrison is a representative of an underground antislavery organization.

Photog Film Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martin Elfand's first independent production under his own banner, T2 Productions, will be "Double Exposure."

Dick Richards will direct the film, a love story about a New York photographer. Elfand previously produced "Dog Day Afternoon" and "Kansas City Bomber."

On Mother's Day, treat Mom to flowers and a nice, tasty dessert.

All for Mom

At whatever meal you hold your Mother's Day celebration, finish it off with a dessert that any mother would be proud to serve.

Made with natural ingredients such as yogurt, cottage cheese and fresh fruit juices, the Citrus Yogurt Cheesecake is a dessert even diet-conscious moms will be able to enjoy.

Whether Mom makes it herself or you do it for her, a food preparation machine cuts preparation time to a minimum by chopping the nuts for the crust and blending the ingredients for the filling to a smooth, creamy consistency.

The delightful dessert that results should provide a pleasing accompaniment for any meal.

Citrus Yogurt Cheesecake.

CITRUS YOGURT CHEESECAKE

10 graham crackers, shredded
¾ cup pecans or walnuts, finely chopped
2 tablespoons sugar
⅓ cup butter or margarine, melted
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
2 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
Peel of 1 orange, finely chopped
Peel of 1 lemon, finely chopped
Juice of 1 orange
Juice of 1 lemon
12 ounces creamed cottage cheese
1 carton (8 ounces) lemon yogurt
Orange and lemon slices, if desired

Heat oven to 350 degrees

Mix graham crackers, nuts, 2 tablespoons sugar and the butter. Press mixture firmly in bottom and 1 inch up side of 8-inch springform pan. Bake until golden, about 10 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

Sprinkle gelatin over 2 tablespoons cold water; set aside. Place egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, the citrus peel and juices in top of double boiler. Cook over simmering water, stirring constantly, until thickened; remove from heat and stir in gelatin until dissolved. Combine egg mixture, cottage cheese and yogurt; blend until smooth.

Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Fold into cheese mixture. Pour mixture into crust. Refrigerate until firm, at least 4 hours. Garnish with lemon and orange slices. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Do It Yourself

What could make Mom happier on her day than to have dinner prepared by Dad and the kids? A quiet Sunday dinner at home can be much more relaxing than the confusion of an over-crowded restaurant. So here's a no-fuss meal to help make that possible. Best of all, the kids can help prepare a foolproof dinner that everyone, especially Mom, will enjoy.

Try Magical Mushroom Pot Roast. Simply put a boneless chuck roast in a casserole or baking pan — no browning necessary. Then let the children mix together an envelope of mushroom gravy mix, water, and lemon juice to pour over the meat.

Since it's not necessary to turn, stir, or watch this pot roast as it bakes, you can take Mom for a short drive, or a walk around the neighborhood to enjoy the spring flowers. As if by magic, you'll return to a tender, nicely-browned roast, with plenty of mushroom gravy, ready-made for you in the pan. For an appealing salad, you can prepare a Sunburst Corn Relish Mold the night before. Lemon gelatin, enhanced with mayonnaise and zesty prepared yellow mustard, accent whole kernel corn. What a surprising twist for corn.

Round out this family dinner with green beans, rolls and butter, and strawberry sundaes. Who knows, Dad may receive the best compliment of all from Mom when she asks him for the recipe for this carefree meal.

MAGICAL MUSHROOM POT ROAST

1 boneless chuck roast, 3 to 4 pounds
1 cup water
1 envelope (¾-oz.) mushroom gravy mix
¼ cup chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon garlic salt

Arrange meat in shallow baking pan or casserole. Stir together water, contents of gravy mix envelope, pimiento, lemon juice, and garlic salt; pour over meat. Cover with foil. Bake in 350° oven 2 to 3 hours, or until tender. Slice meat and serve with the pan gravy. 6 to 8 servings.

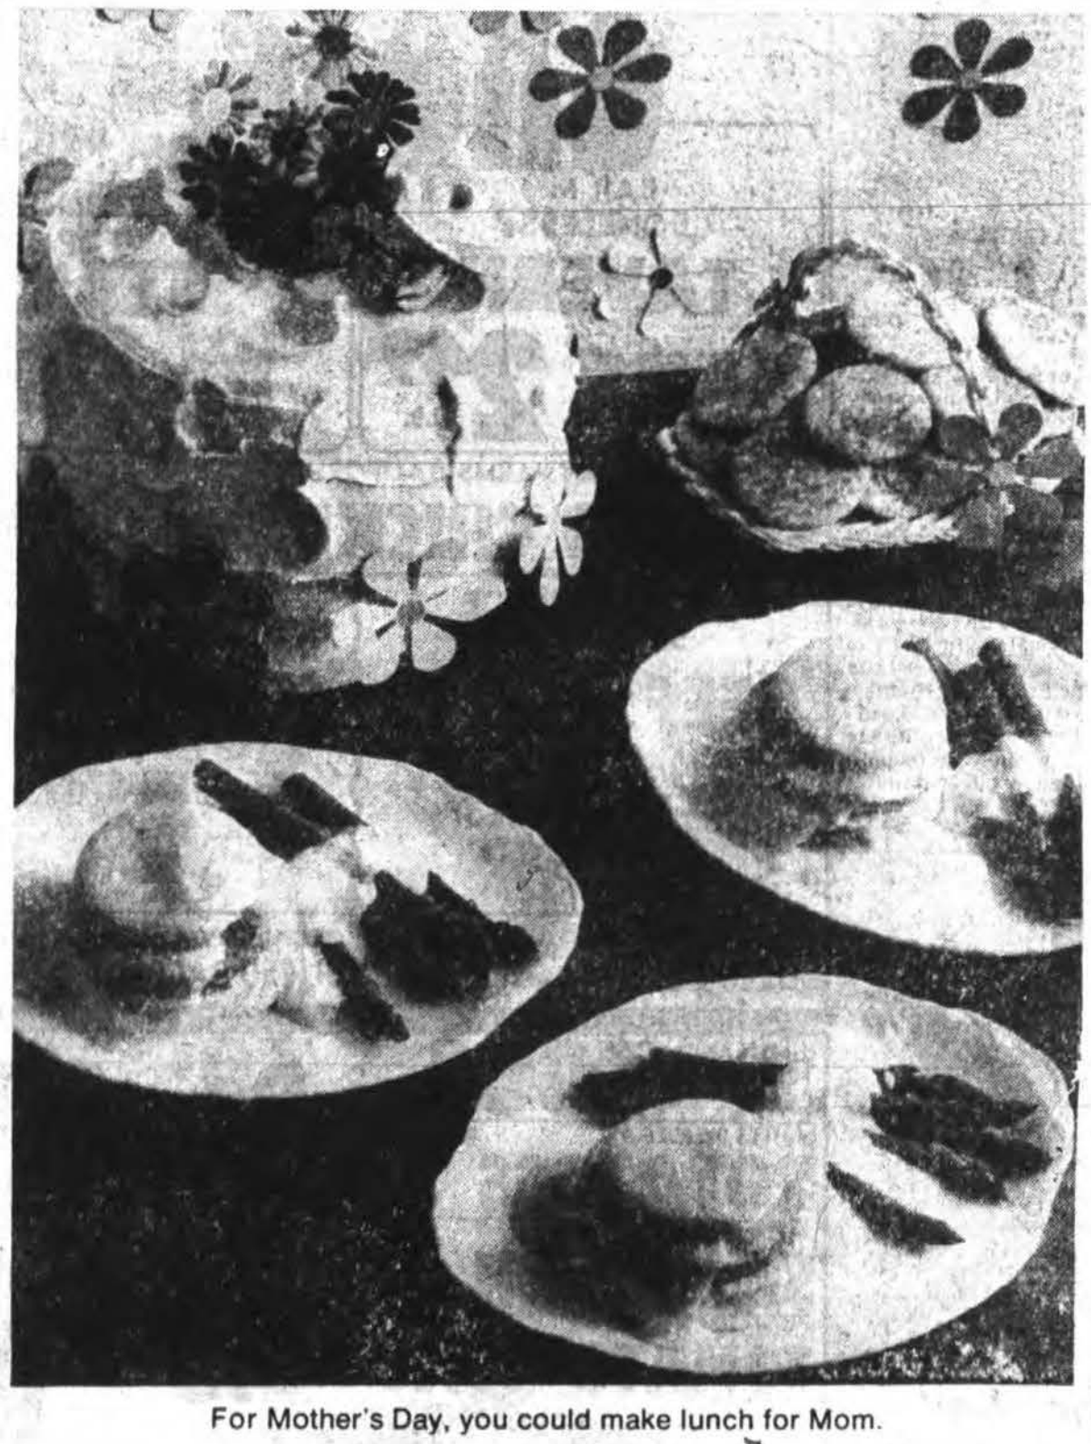

SUNBURST CORN RELISH SALAD

1 package (3-oz.) lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
½ cup cold water
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons prepared yellow mustard
1 can (12-oz.) whole kernel corn, drained

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in cold water; chill until partially set. Beat in mayonnaise and mustard; stir in corn. Pour into greased 1½-quart mold. Chill until set. 4 to 6 servings.

Magical Mushroom Pot Roast.

For Mother's Day, you could make lunch for Mom.

A Special Meal

Lunch for Mother's Day should be as lovely as a spring garden. And it can be if you serve Eggs Benedict with Welsh Rarebit Sauce and fresh asparagus.

A Mother's Day Cake and cookies make a perfect dessert for your spring lunch, especially when the cake is blossoming with paper spring flowers. To decorate your cake this way, place a small doily over the hole of the cake and stick the stems of the flowers through the holes in the doily. Before serving the cake, the doily and flowers can be removed.

EGGS RAREBIT STYLE

2 English Muffins, halved and toasted
4 slices Canadian Bacon
4 eggs, poached
Welsh Rarebit Sauce (recipe follows)

Put toasted English Muffin halves on plates, top with bacon and eggs, and ladle rarebit over all. Serves 4.

WELSH RAREBIT SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
½ cup flat beer
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 pound sharp cheddar cheese, grated

In the top of a double boiler, slowly melt butter. Add beer, salt, mustard and Worcestershire sauce. Heat until hot (not boiling). Gradually add cheese and mix with a wire whisk until cheese is melted. Ladle over eggs immediately.

Best Buys

The bleak vegetable situation of last week is looking brighter now. Volume has increased for some commodities causing prices to drop. While the industry has not returned to normal, the situation, at least temporarily, is improved.

VEGETABLES

All indications point to a dramatic reduction this week in the price of iceberg and other lettuces, because of greater volume from Salinas. More shippers are beginning to harvest mature heads. Volume is still not back to normal and prices will not be as low as a year ago, but the overall situation is improved.

Weather has stabilized allowing crops to mature properly. Should the weather remain moderate, the total situation will gradually return to normal. If excessive warm weather develops, then heads will mature rapidly and another gap will develop.

The prospect for the next month is a gradual return to normal with some peaks and valleys until mid June.

Cauliflower is looking much better. The price has come down while supplies increase. Broccoli is also lower but quality is marginal.

An over supply of tomatoes has caused prices to drop. Quality on the large tomatoes is average, but the cherry tomatoes are good. Squash is arriving from both Coachella Valley and San Diego. Quality and price vary, depending on the growing area. The Imperial Valley is shipping bell peppers. Quality is only average. Florida and Texas should start shipping this week, so look for improved quality.

Most stores are carrying quality corn from both Florida and the Coachella Valley. As the volume from Coachella increases next week, prices should come down.

White rose potatoes from Bakersfield continue to improve in quality. Supplies are good. There is little change in the asparagus situation. Quality and supplies remain good.

The best buys this week are radishes and green onions. Radish quality is excellent, while the green onions are improving in quality daily.

FRUIT

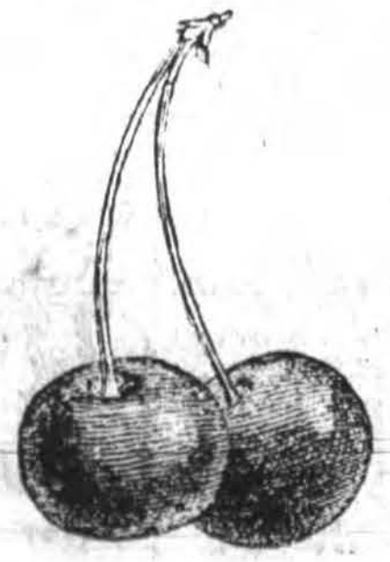

May should be an excellent month for strawberries. With the days getting warmer and drier, quality keeps improving. Prices should hold steady.

Apple supplies coming from storage are diminishing. Red and golden delicious apples continue to be the major varieties available. This situation will continue until the end of May when Granny Smith apples from New Zealand arrive.

A disease problem with the Mexican cantaloupe has hindered supplies. They are shipping only about 20 percent of their usual volume. This shortage will cause prices to climb. A good substitute is the cranshaw melon. The eating quality is good and supplies are plentiful.

The first shipments of peaches are available along with a few California cherries.

The rest of the fruit situation remains the same.

Prepare Interesting Food for Bland Diets

Special Diets
By June Roth

If someone in your family is suffering from a chronic ulcer, you may be struggling to prepare interesting food for the bland diet the doctor usually prescribes for this condition.

The major points to keep in mind for the bland diet is to keep the portions small and to increase the number of meals served a day. Serve all food at warm temperature, rather than very hot or very cold. All pits, skins, and seeds should be removed and the patient should be reminded to eat slowly and chew well.

Heretofore, ulcer patients drank whole milk between meals, but the current thinking is to serve skim milk drinks to avoid the extra cholesterol. Fruit juice may be served but should be sipped during the meal after some of the food has been eaten.

Avoid fried foods, breads with seeds, coarse grains in bread and cereals, and fried potatoes, potato chips, and whole-grain rice. Instead, serve white toast, saltines, zweiback, cooked enriched fine white cereals, corn and rice flakes, and puffed rice cereal. Also serve boiled or baked (no skin) mashed potatoes, barley, pasta, and white rice.

Sponge cake or angel food cake are good choices for dessert, as are plain sugar wafers, custard, fruit-flavored gelatin, and plain puddings (except chocolate). Avoid desserts prepared with chocolate, coconut, nuts, or dried fruit.

Pepper can be an irritant to the tender area but there are several herbs, such as oregano, basil, rosemary, marjoram, thyme, and tarragon that can perk up the flavor of bland diet cooking. You may also use salt, cinnamon, paprika, vanilla extract, and lemon juice for taste enhancers. Avoid all condiments, salad dressings, cloves, garlic, ginger, mint, fresh parsley, spices with seeds, jams and preserves.

The whole family will enjoy these recipes that have been devised to meet the needs of the person on a bland diet. For severe cases, the doctor may suggest that all vegetables be pureed for a limited time and that animal protein be limited to finely minced chicken or white fish. Ask to be sure.

CARROT SOUFFLE

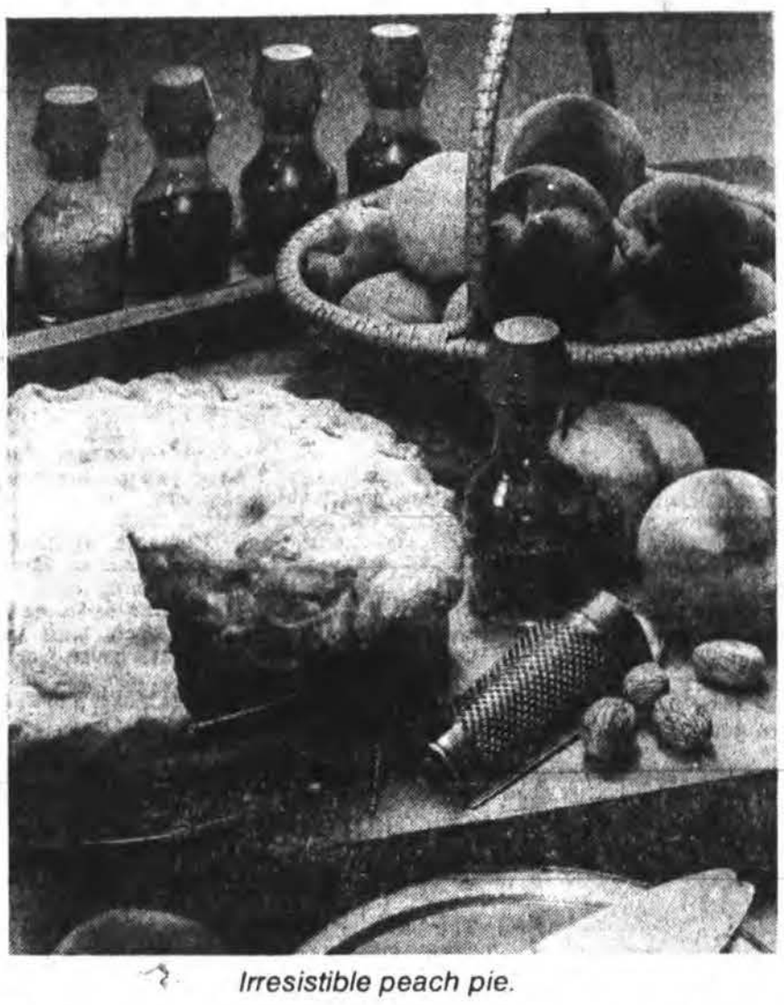

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk
3 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup cooked pureed carrots

Preheat oven to 350° F. Melt butter in a saucepan; add flour and stir until thick and bubbly. Remove from heat; gradually stir in milk until smooth. Return to heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened. Remove from heat. Beat together the egg yolks and salt; stir into milk mixture. Add pureed carrots. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold into carrot mixture. Spoon into a well-buttered 1-quart ring mold. Set mold into a pan with 1-inch of hot water covering bottom. Place in oven and bake for 35 minutes, or until firm. Loosen edges and turn out onto platter. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

BAKED CHICKEN AND PEACHES

1 broiler chicken, cut in serving pieces
1 tablespoon flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 can (16-ounce) peach halves with syrup
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Preheat oven to 350° F. Place chicken pieces in a flat baking dish. Combine flour and salt; sprinkle over chicken. Dot chicken with butter. Bake for 30 minutes. Place peach halves around chicken parts; spoon some of the syrup over chicken and peaches. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Return to oven for an additional 20 to 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Irresistible peach pie.

Just Peachy Pie

While most Americans could undoubtedly win any international pie-eating contest without undue effort, the pie-eatingest places in America must surely have been the oldtime farm communities during the harvesting of grains.

Twice a day the hungry crews were served by the women folks, all kinds of tempting dishes, with pies in variety as the finishing touch. There would be apple pies, peach pies, pear pies, plum pies, grape pies, lemon pies and banana pies. The rivalry among the hostesses of the neighborhood was intense.

OLD FASHIONED SPICED PEACH PIE

Pastry for two crust 9-inch pie
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
6 cups sliced peeled peaches (6 or 7 peaches)
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 cup heavy cream

On a lightly floured board roll half of the pastry to fit the bottom of a 9-inch pie pan; line pie pan with pastry; reserve remaining pastry for later use. In a large bowl combine sugar, flour, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Add peaches; stir until coated. Spoon into lined pastry shell. Mix together egg and cream; pour over peaches. Roll remaining pastry to cover pie; place over peaches; flute edges to seal; prick top of pastry to let steam escape. Bake in a preheated hot oven (425 F.) for 15 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to moderate (350 F.) and bake until pie is golden, about 30 minutes. Serve warm.

SPICED STREUSEL PEAR PIE

Pastry for one crust 9-inch pie
1 cup plus 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour, divided
½ cup firmly-packed light brown sugar
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons apple pie spice
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
5 medium pears, peeled and sliced (about 6 cups)

On a lightly floured board roll pastry to fit the bottom of a 9-inch pie pan; line pie pan with pastry; set aside. In a medium bowl combine 1 cup of the flour with brown sugar. Add butter; cut in with a pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Cover and refrigerate. In a large bowl combine remaining 3 tablespoons flour with sugar, apple pie spice, salt and lemon juice. Add pears; stir until coated. Spoon into lined pastry shell. Sprinkle with refrigerated flour mixture. Bake in a preheated hot oven (400 F.) for 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to moderate (350 F.) and bake until golden, about 30 minutes longer.

Schirmer's THURINGER SAUSAGE

Smoked naturally–the Old Fashioned way...

A gourmet will tell you what makes real Thuringer Sausage . . . strictly the finest in meats and spices. Tropical beef ring for a dressy dinner.

Try Tropical Beef Ring

Ground beef, favored for its economy and versatility, makes showy company fare in Tropical Beef Ring. The center of this savory meat loaf is filled with a crunchy fruit and vegetable medley.

While the beef ring is in the oven, prepare a smooth glaze combining brown sugar, ginger and cornstarch with syrup drained from pineapple chunks. And when the meat loaf is done, lightly saute drained pineapple chunks with slices of green pepper and sliced onion. To serve, fill the center of the unmolded beef ring with the sauteed vegetables, and spoon pineapple glaze over all. A garnish of tomato wedges and parsley add to the colorful appeal of this company dish.

The California Beef Council reminds us that for nutritive value and economical meal planning, ground beef is hard to beat. Providing high quality protein, a generous portion of iron and substantial amounts of B vitamins, its contribution to a well-balanced diet makes it an exceptionally good value at the meat counter.

With barbecue season upon us, ground beef becomes the backyard chef's favorite for juicy burgers, kabobs, skillet dishes and other over-the-coals specialties. For homemakers who want to keep summer kitchen time to a minimum, opting instead to enjoy outdoor activities, ground beef offers quick preparation of numerous entrees, casseroles and sandwiches that family or guests will enjoy.

TROPICAL BEEF RING

2 pounds lean ground beef
1 cup cracker crumbs
½ cup finely chopped onion
2 eggs, beaten
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 can (20 oz.) pineapple chunks
⅓ cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon ginger
4 tablespoons butter, divided
1 green pepper, sliced
1 cup sliced onion
Tomato wedges and parsley, for garnish

Combine ground beef, cracker crumbs, onion, eggs, salt and pepper. Mix well and pat into a 4-cup ring mold. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. In saucepan, combine brown sugar, cornstarch and ginger. Add 2 tablespoons butter and reserved pineapple syrup. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. When beef ring is done, saute green pepper and onion in remaining 2 tablespoons butter for 3 or 4 minutes. Add pineapple and heat through. Unmold beef ring and fill center with pineapple mixture. Spoon pineapple glaze over all. Makes 6 servings.

That Special Someone

Individual meat loaves for dinner for two.

Having that special someone to dinner that you want to impress but empty pockets save you from going the filet mignon route?

Ground beef is your answer.

There's no doubt about it. Even with the price of food inching up in 1978, ground beef is and probably will always be a boon to the homemaker who is watching the food budget. And, since larger savings can usually be obtained on larger packages of this product, it's a good idea to buy in quantity and package the meat at home for your individual serving needs.

To give ground beef the creative "oomph" it needs for an impressive dinner, try Individual Wellington Loaves. It is three notches above a standard meat loaf because it wraps the scaled-down loaves in a convenient pastry crust. And, the meat loaf is extra delicious — the secret is a tangy seasoning of ketchup and horseradish and a rich wine sauce.

Since cleaning up leftovers can ruin an interesting after dinner conversation, this recipe serves two — and only two.

INDIVIDUAL WELLINGTON LOAVES

½ lb. extra lean ground beef
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 egg, separated
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
1 cup tomato ketchup
1 pie crust stick
Wine Sauce (recipe follows)

Combine in a medium bowl, ground beef, bread crumbs, egg yolk, horseradish, salt, monosodium glutamate and ¼ cup ketchup. Shape mixture into 2 rectangular loaves. Bake on rack in shallow baking pan at 400° 15 minutes. Cool on rack 5 to 10 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare pie crust stick according to package directions. Roll into 2 rectangles, large enough to wrap around loaves; place loaves in center of each pastry. Wrap pastry around, overlapping edges on bottom. Trim off excess pastry at ends. Moisten edges and pinch together to seal. Make decorative cutouts from excess pastry and arrange on top of each loaf. Place on ungreased baking pan. Brush entire surface with egg white mixed with a little water. Bake at 400° 20 minutes longer. Serve with Wine Sauce. Makes 2 servings.

Wine Sauce: Combine remaining ketchup, ¼ cup wine, and ½ teaspoon crushed tarragon. Simmer over low heat about 10 minutes.

Chops for Quality

Farmer's Pork Chops takes advantage of the quality, inexpensive pork you'll find in the market now.

FARMER'S PORK CHOPS

6 lean pork chops, cut 1-inch thick
¼ cup flour
2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons caraway seeds
3 tablespoons pure vegetable oil
1 large knockwurst, thinly sliced
1 cup chopped celery
1 onion, chopped
2 sweet pickles, diced
1 (6-oz.) can tomato paste
1 (10½-oz.) can beef broth
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 large potatoes, peeled and sliced

Trim fat from chops; coat with mixture of flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon caraway seeds. In large skillet, brown chops on both sides in oil; remove chops and drain fat. To skillet add knockwurst, celery, onion and pickles; sprinkle with pepper and remaining salt and caraway seeds. Return chops to skillet. In a bowl, combine tomato paste, beef broth and water. Arrange potatoes over meat; pour tomato paste mixture over all. Simmer, covered, 35 to 45 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

American Dishes From the British

Scotch eggs are easy to fix and eat.

The English have been called the "Invisible Immigrants." Unlike many others who flocked to America's shores during the 1800's the British were not set apart by language or looks. They were assimilated into the mainstream of the new country with relative ease. These new Americans from the British Isles brought with them many celebrated favorite foods.

Today, some of these foods are considered American dishes — roast beef, fish 'n chips, and pot pies, to name a few. Others remain highly regional and nationalistic in character, their history and lore a part of ethnic America. Cornish pasties are one such dish.

A pasty is a whole meal wrapped in pastry. It was brought to the United States by immigrants from the Cornwall region of Southwest England. The Cornishmen came to work in the copper mines of Michigan's Upper Peninsula and the lead mines of Wisconsin's Mineral Point area. Before the age of the lunch pail, the miners carried their pasties to work in a cotton pouch called a crib bag. The miner reheated his pasty on a shovel held over the candle he wore on his hat.

Canadian bacon is another food of English origin, which has an interesting history. It seems England imported bacon from Canada when pork was scarce in Britain. Bacon, as Americans know it, is taken from the side of pork. Canadian-style bacon is taken from the lean, center portion of the loin or back. Although the imported bacon from Canada closely resembled English "back bacon" it still retained its own unique flavor. So, the English called it "Canadian Bacon" and the name remains to this day.

The history of Scotch Eggs is rather a mystery. It is thought by some, that the Scotchish farmers wrapped scrapple around hard cooked eggs and carried their lunch to the fields. Without plates or utensils the farmers found Scotch Eggs an easy meal to eat.

CORNISH PASTIES

1 tube (1 lb.) ground pork sausage
2 (9-inch) frozen deep-dish pie shells
1 small onion, chopped
1 can (1 lb.) sliced white potatoes, diced
1 can (8¼ oz.) sliced carrots, diced
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook sausage over medium heat about 12 minutes, stirring and separating sausage as it cooks. Remove pie shells from aluminum pans and thaw 10 minutes; flatten pastry. Repair cracks and tears by moistening area with small amount of water and pressing together. Drain sausage and combine with potatoes, onion, carrots and pepper. Spoon sausage mixture on half of each pie shell. Fold pastry over filling, sealing edges together by pressing with a fork. Using a large turner, place pasties on a shallow baking pan and bake in 400°F. oven for 30 minutes until golden brown. Makes 2 pasties, 4 servings.

SCOTCH EGGS

1 tube (1 lb.) ground pork sausage
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 eggs, slightly beaten
6 hard-cooked eggs
1 egg, slightly beaten
⅓ cup cornmeal
Hollandaise or white sauce with parsley

In a large bowl, combine pork sausage, bread crumbs and 2 beaten eggs. On waxed paper divide pork sausage mixture into 6 equal portions and flatten into round ¾-inch thick patties. Shape sausage around hard cooked egg; smooth surfaces until there are no cracks. Coat the sausage ball with slightly beaten egg and roll in cornmeal. Cover and chill. Bake on shallow pan in a 450°F. oven 20 minutes. Serve warm with Hollandaise or white sauce with parsley. Makes 6 Scotch Eggs.

Ignore Well-Meaning Friends, and Relatives

Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Do you have any of these "Weight Problems?"

The ones we're speaking of aren't medical afflictions but people afflictions . . . those seemingly well-meaning friends and relatives who do or say the wrong thing — usually in the guise of helping — thereby making your diet doubly difficult.

WEIGHT PROBLEM No. 1: THE CALORIE COP — knows the calorie count of everything and doesn't wait to be asked to tell it. Buys you diet books, tears out newspaper articles and sticks inspirational cartoons on your refrigerator. Officiates at your weigh-in, phones the doctor to make your appointments, drives you to the diet clinic and leads you by the hand through the supermarket diet foots.

The Weightwatchdog does such a good job of running your diet that there's nothing left for you to do except scheme for a junkfood jailbreak. Your self-appointed conscience probably means well, but the message implicit in his or her methods is that you are a spineless softy who couldn't possibly cope alone.

Trouble is, you might begin to believe it. Or, if you have any spunk at all, you might put on a potato chip protest.

But that spites only you. Better to tell the Calorie Cop to turn in his or her badge.

WEIGHT PROBLEM No. 2: THE LOVE SHYLOCK — quite literally, this one demands a "pound of flesh" as the price of respect or affection. Things are just peachy so long as you toe the caloric straight-and-narrow, but any dietary indiscretion on your part is interpreted by the Love Shylock as a personal affront. With or without so many words, the Shylock's message is:

"You are unacceptable. So, if you want to be my friend (lover, mate, child, parent) you'd better shape up" Or: "That piece of cake is evidence that you have no regard for my feelings. You know how it distresses me to see you put on weight."

Love Shylocks are so self-centered that they cannot understand that your food problem is strictly personal, and has nothing to do with them. Sometimes the Love Shylock's methods work, but the relationship is a sick one. The only person really to please with weight loss is yourself.

WEIGHT PROBLEM No. 3: THE AMATEUR SHRINK — without a fee, without a couch, license or degree — without even being asked — this person does volunteer casework among the hungry, sharing his or her remarkable insights into the Real Meaning of your meals.

Milkshakes are withheld Mother Love; hot dogs are phallic symbols, birthday cake is fear of aging, a cheese omelet is your repressed maternal instinct . . . every food is fraught with Freudian flavor. Sign yourself out of Dr. Fraud's mental hospital before you begin to believe it. Ask him or her: "Why are you doing this? Why do you feel this need to turn other people into mental cases? Physician, heal thyself."

WEIGHT PROBLEM No. 4: THE GLOATER — can stuff herself silly and never gain an ounce, but never without an audience, preferably a dieter whose stomach is rumbling with hunger. The Gloater never, never lets you forget your affliction and her good fortune, even though she sounds so sympathetic:

"Listen, I KNOW exactly what you're going through. I have the SAME problem, only in reverse. That darling size 6 bikini I bought last week in the discount sample shop is slipping off my hips already.

"I'll have to stuff all week on pizza to wear it this weekend. By the way, are you coming with us, or couldn't you find a bathing suit in the Stout Shoppe?" Believe it or not, that kind of "sympathy" is thinly veiled envy over some aspect of your life that's working better than hers. Or his. Gloaters can be both sexes.

WEIGHT PROBLEM No. 5: THE GOODIE GODMOTHER (FATHER) — also a sympathetic soul. By magic, manages to turn everything into a "special occasion" that takes the calories out of fattening foods.

"Just this once" is his or her charmed incantation, holding out that calorie poisoned apple strudel. He or she KNOWS how hard you've been trying, how well you've done with your diet, how close you are to your goal, and God knows one little banana split couldn't hurt, it's mostly fruit.

"And, besides, it's my birthday, and I ordered it just for you, and wouldn't it be a shame to waste it what with all the starving children in India. You really wouldn't make me eat alone now, would you? My feelings will be hurt." Just as you suspected, the GG is really the Wicked Witch, waiting to devour you with sympathy. This person is the worst of the lot, not at all sympathetic or interested in your welfare. The last thing he/she wants is your success. Here's how the Goodie Godmother/father really sees your relationship: "I'm okay. But you're a poor fat slob who's lucky I bother with you at all. Now, don't go and change things."

Fad Diets Can Be Hazardous to Your Health

By DOROTHY WENCK
Orange County Home Advisor

Q&A

Man does not live by bread alone — nor by diets of nothing but liquid protein, recent evidence indicates.

As a result of the deaths of 16 women, all of whom were using the liquid protein fasting diet, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) initiated a study in which rats were fed nothing but liquid protein.

Preliminary results of the study show that of 200 obese rats, only 5% survived after being on the liquid protein diet a month. The surviving rats were all male — females seem to be more susceptible to whatever is harmful in this diet.

The liquid protein diet was developed as a method for severely obese individuals to lose weight under close medical supervision. It was never meant to be used as it has been — as a fad weight diet by people not under a doctor's care.

The diet is actually a fast, calling for the elimination of food for one or more months. In place of food, dieters are given a 300 calorie formula known as predigested liquid protein.

The liquid protein is usually made from collagen, a fibrous protein derived from animal bones, hides, and connective tissue. The collagen is hydrolized — or broken down into simpler substances known as amino acids (the reason for the term predigested) — into a gelatin type liquid. Minerals and vitamins are added.

Unlike other animal protein, collagen is not a complete protein. It is low in certain essential amino acids which our bodies must get from foods in order to build body protein. But this does not necessarily explain why some people died on the diet. (FDA has received unconfirmed reports of 58 deaths associated with use of the liquid protein.)

The FDA-sponsored study in which the rats died when fed nothing but liquid protein is just one of a number of "sole food" experimental diets that have been fed to laboratory animals.

The results all show that single food diets are hazardous, if not deadly.

In one study, young rats were divided into nine groups of six rats each, and each group was fed just one food: commercial dog food, whole pasteurized milk, hamburger, nonfat dry milk, enriched white bread, enriched breakfast cereal, frozen french fried potatoes, frozen orange juice concentrate, or fresh spinach.

Growth and health of the rats was measured over a 13-week period.

The only group of rats that did well was the one receiving the commercial dog food, which is formulated to provide all the nutrients needed by a dog — or rat. None of the others grew well.

None of the rats fed spinach survived more than three days. Those eating whole milk were closest in growth to the dog food group, but were pale and anemic. All the rats in the groups fed whole milk, white bread, and french fries survived.

Just one rat each survived the 13 weeks from the orange juice and hamburger groups. The hamburger-fed rats showed weight gain at first but then became severely paralyzed.

Two of the six animals fed nonfat dry milk died, all became blind with cataracts; one of the breakfast cereal rats died. All the animals fed white bread, breakfast cereal, french fried potatoes, and orange juice showed loss of hair and none gained much weight.

The results of this study do not show that you will get cataracts if you use nonfat dry milk, become paralyzed if you eat hamburger, or lose your hair if you eat white bread, breakfast cereal, french fries, or orange juice.

What they do tell you is that a one food diet is unhealthy. No one food has all the nutrients we need. And if the one food has a substance that might be harmful, we're much more likely to be harmed by it when we eat a large amount of nothing but that food.

Nutrients work together in our bodies, and we need to eat a wide variety of foods to supply sufficient quantities of all the different nutrients.

Fad diets based on one or just a few foods can be hazardous to our health.

Q. I was checking the nutritional value of frozen peas and dried peas and found that the cooked dried peas have half again as much protein and nearly twice as much starch as cooked frozen peas, and almost twice the calories. Why this difference?

A. Peas grown for freezing are picked when they're still immature — before the protein and starch are completely formed. Peas used for drying are allowed to grow until they are mature — and then the protein and starch are fully developed in them. Different varieties of peas are grown for these two purposes, each having slightly different protein and starch composition.

Also, after dried peas are cooked, they contain only 70% water, while cooked frozen peas have 82% water. A higher percentage of water means a lower percentage of protein, starch, and calories will be found in the frozen peas.

Q. When, oh when, is the price of lettuce and other fresh vegetables going to come down?

A. The outlook for the next few weeks is not too good. Lettuce prices are expected to be three times higher than normal due to lack of supplies. Predictions on when we'll get price relief for fresh salad vegetables vary. Some say the shortages may continue through June. During May the supplies and prices of all lettuce are expected to fluctuate due to erratic planting schedules. Supplies may be temporarily good with shortages in between. The problems are due to the rain which disrupted the growers' planting schedules and which damaged lettuce just due to mature.

Meanwhile, find ways to substitute less expensive vegetables and fruits for salad vegetables. Use more canned or frozen vegetables — green beans, broccoli, carrots, peas — which can be made into salads, rather than served hot. Serve more fruit salad.

Q. What happened to the artichokes this year? The price has been so high.

A. Artichoke growers report that their plants, adversely affected by excessive rains early in the season and heavy rains recently, just have not been able to provide the usual bumper crop this spring. Harvesting has been slow, supplies limited, and that's what's causing the high prices.

A Festive Peanut Fluff

There are 200 ways to use peanut butter in a new cookbook which has clearly been written for people with a passionate interest in the spread.

The author is William I. Kaufman and the new book (his 92nd cookbook) is the Peanut Butter Cookbook. A lifelong peanut butter fan, Kaufman has collected peanut and peanut butter recipes from all over the world for this book.

AUTUMN FESTIVAL FLUFF

1-½ cups graham cracker crumbs
½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
½ cup crunchy peanut butter
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
⅓ cup crunchy peanut butter
1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese
¾ cup granulated sugar
2 cups (1 pint) heavy cream, whipped
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) pie-sliced apples, drained
Ground cinnamon

Combine the crumbs, brown sugar, ½ cup of peanut butter, and the butter. Mix until crumbly. In another bowl, combine the confectioners' sugar and ⅓ cup of peanut butter. Mix until crumbly. Mash the cream cheese and beat in the granulated sugar gradually until the mixture is very soft and creamy. Fold in the whipped cream. Sprinkle two-thirds of the graham crumb mixture over the bottom of a 9 x 13-inch pan. Press crumbs into place evenly. Spoon half of the cheese mixture over the crumbs. Carefully spread cheese into an even layer. Place apple slices evenly over the cheese. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Sprinkle two-thirds of the confectioners' sugar mixture over the apples. Top with the remaining cheese mixture, spreading cheese evenly over crumbs. Top with the remaining graham cracker crumbs and remaining confectioners' sugar mixture. Cover pan with foil and chill for 24 hours before serving. Cut into squares to serve.

CHICKEN DJAKARTA

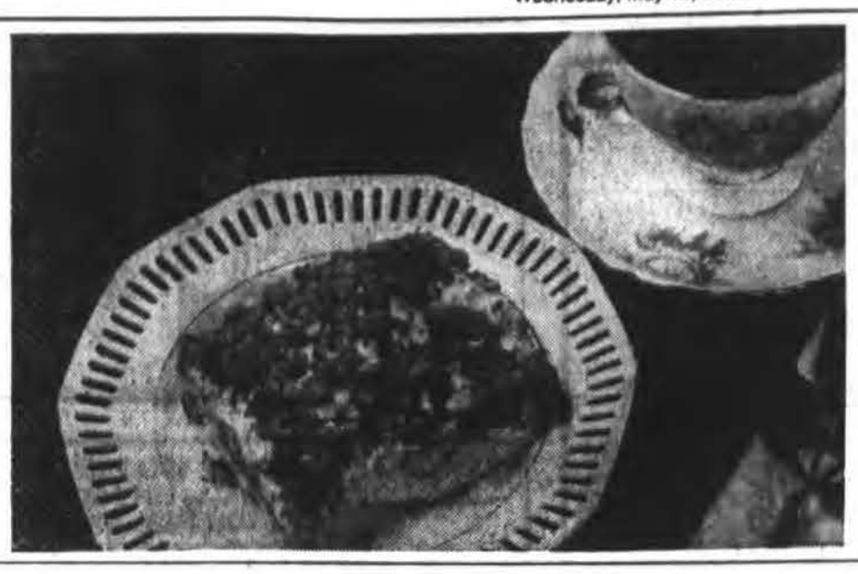

½ cup minced onions
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon dried ground chili pepper
½ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon peanut oil
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 2-½-pound broiler-fryers cut into eighths

Combine the onions with the garlic, chili pepper, peanut butter and salt. Saute in the peanut oil for 4 minutes. Add the soy sauce, water and lemon juice. Cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Cool. Marinate chicken in sauce for 1 hour. Broil the chicken for about 30 minutes 4 to 6 inches from source of heat. Turn the chicken frequently (every 2 to 3 minutes) and brush each time with the marinade. Heat remaining marinade and serve as a sauce for the cooked chicken. Makes 8 servings.

SOUTHERN SWEET POTATO PEANUT BUTTER CASSEROLE

6 sweet potatoes, cooked, peeled and mashed
½ teaspoon ground mace
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ cup smooth peanut butter
3 navel oranges
¼ cup dry breadcrumbs
⅓ cup salted peanuts

Mix the mashed sweet potatoes, mace, brown sugar, half of the melted butter and the peanut butter until smooth and well blended. With a sharp knife, slice and peel the white membrane from the oranges. Cut the oranges into ½-inch-thick crosswise slices. Layer the sweet potato mixture and orange slices in a greased 2-quart casserole, ending with the orange slices. Mix the breadcrumbs and peanuts with the remaining melted butter and spoon over the top. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350 F°) for 25 to 30 minutes or until piping hot. Makes 8 servings.

Festive fluff uses peanut butter as a base for dessert.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS CALLING FOR BIDS

School District: NEWPORT-MESA UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT

Bid Deadline: 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the 25th day of May, 1978

Place of Bid Receipt: 1857 Placentia Street, Costa Mesa, CA 92627

Project Identification Name: SOUND SYSTEM FOR ESTANCIA HIGH SCHOOL GYMNASIUM

Place Plans are on file: 1857 Placentia Street, Costa Mesa, CA 92627

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the above-named School District of Orange County, California, acting by and through its Governing Board, hereinafter referred to as "DISTRICT," will receive up to, but not later than the above-stated time, sealed bids for the award of a contract for the above project.

Bids shall be received in the place identified above, and shall be opened and publicly read aloud at the above-stated time and place.

There will be a N/A deposit required for each set of bid documents to guarantee the return in good condition within N/A days after the bid opening date.

Each bid must conform and be responsive to the contract documents.

Each bid shall be accompanied by the security referred to in the contract documents and by the list of proposed subcontractors.

The DISTRICT reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bids or in the bidding.

The DISTRICT has obtained from the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the contract. These rates are on file at the DISTRICT office located at 1857 Placentia St., Costa Mesa, CA 92627. Copies may be obtained on request. A copy of these rates shall be posted at the job site.

The foregoing schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight (8) hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one-half.

It shall be mandatory upon the CONTRACTOR to whom the contract is awarded, and upon any subcontractor under him, to pay not less than the said specified rates to all workmen employed by them in the execution of the contract.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) days after the date set for the opening of bids.

A payment bond and a performance bond will be required prior to execution of the contract. The payment bond shall be in the form set forth in the contract documents.

CASE NUMBER: 36-28-12

NOTICE! You have been sued. The court may decide against you without your being heard unless you respond within 30 days. Read the information below.

AVISO! Usted ha sido demandado. El Tribunal puede decidir contra Ud. sin audiencia a menos que Ud. responda dentro de 30 dias. Lea la informacion que sigue.

1. TO THE DEFENDANT: A civil complaint has been filed by the plaintiff against you. (See footnote*)

a. If you wish to defend this lawsuit, you must, within 30 days after this summons is served on you, file with this court a written pleading in response to the complaint. (If a Justice Court, you must file with the court a written pleading or cause an oral pleading to be entered in the docket) Unless you do so, your default will be entered upon application of the plaintiff, and this court may enter a judgment against you for the relief demanded in the complaint, which could result in garnishment of wages, taking of money or property or other relief requested in the complaint.

b. If you wish to seek the advice of an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be filed on time.

Students Design Fashions

Designs by Saddleback College students were featured at the annual open house of the school's Home Economics Department. Spinning and weaving demonstrations and fashion shows of original student apparel designs were among the activities.

Above, left, is Denise Fales, modeling a polyester draw-string dress. At right is Vivian Chade, wearing a gauzy outfit of Guatemalan fabric.

In addition to clothing exhibits, the open house included basket weaving, ice sculpture and make-up demonstrations, plus interior design projects, puppet and slide shows, art exhibits and displays on food and nutrition.

Horoscope

THURSDAY, MAY 11
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Home, security, warmth, knowledge that you are loved — these are emphasized. Taurus, Cancer, Libra persons figure prominently. Remove safety hazards, make abode more beautiful, harmonious and safer, too. Bring priorities into focus. Take nothing for granted. Check lease, bill-of-sale.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check data. Get appraisal, especially in connection with land, property. Element of illusion, rumor or deception could be present. Relatives, calls, short journeys, visits are part of scenario. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number 7.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Strong money position indicated. Emotional responses also are accented. Nothing is halfway — there are pressures, added responsibilities. You win, gain prestige and, most important more self-esteem. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently — so does the number 8.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cycle at peak — know it and lead the way. Be a self-starter, take initiative. Highlight bright colors, personal appearances, direct and original approach. Trust your own judgment, intuition. Aries could come into your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain hint from Cancer message. Shake off suspicions, fears — be direct, independent, display sense of showmanship.and creativity. Welcome chance for new start in new direction. Aquarius and another Leo are part of your scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on desire, romance, friendship, result of business transaction. Cancer, Aquarius persons are in picture. Rise above petty differences, red tape. Wish is fulfilled if you share knowledge. You gain through teaching process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Reach high, don't sell yourself short — one in authority is impressed, will back you. Diversify, make inquiries, display versatility, fitness and sense of humor. Stick with number 3. Enlarge horizons because you're going places!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What appears a trap could become an escape hatch. Know it and be optimistic. Accent on travel, meaningful spiritual experience. You will be capable of putting pieces together and coming up with complete story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Time moves, illustrate meanings, realize you are capable of capturing the public imagination. Appeal quotient now is sky-high; know it and act as if aware of it. Deep feelings are evident where members of opposite sex are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on public relations, getting point across and still retaining allies. Home, marriage, detecting subtle hints, signals are on agenda. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure prominently. You feel much better as result of legal decision.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't fool yourself by staying too long at the fair. Be truthful with yourself concerning losing proposition, business, personal — or both. Spotlight on health, work, getting some dependents to be more self-reliant — and dependable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It's all or nothing — you have plunged into situation and you can win. If you retreat, you survive at a price. Accent on variety, young persons, gambling and love. Stick with number 8 and Capricorn.

If May 11 is your birthday you are intuitive, have delicate digestive system, are a natural teacher and you draw to you Aquarius, Cancer and Capricorn persons. December will be an outstanding month for you in 1978. The year features marriage. If already married, there could be an addition to your family. You travel, express, create, make changes and feel happy to be alive

Reading Isn't Everything

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you ran a letter from a woman whose husband can't read. It was signed, "In A Dither." That letter brought back some childhood memories.

My father couldn't read either but Mom covered for him to keep us kids from finding out. She used to say, "Don't you kids mess up the paper. Your father hasn't read it yet."

Mom would often get out our favorite nursery rhymes and ask Dad to "read" them to us. She knew he had them all memorized.

Once we saw Mom sign Dad's salary check. (He couldn't even write his name!) When she spotted us watching, she said, "Your father hurt his hand and can't write very well today."

By the time I was a teen-ager I caught on. I asked Mom one day, "Mom, Dad can't read, can he?" Her answer was," "No, he can't. But don't tell the others kids. And don't let your father know you know." She then explained that Dad could do a lot of other things — like carve wood. (Oh, how I remember the beautiful table and chairs he made, and the cabinets, and the little doll house with tiny dishes and dolls with shoes — all carved out of wood!)

Mom told me, "Your dad is the best mechanic in the country. He can fix the smallest wristwatch or the largest piece of construction equipment there is. And there is no one better at math. He can figure numbers in his head faster than any adding machine."

Mom then told me how she had tried to teach Dad to read when they were first married. He just couldn't learn, and he cried with shame. I was unable to hold the tears back when she was telling me the story. I kept thinking of my dad, that big, strong man, crying over a little book.

He has been dead more than 20 years, but I remember so well how he always said, "Time will show we have a genius in the family." I can't help but think Dad knew he was married to one. — NAME WITHHELD BY REQUEST

DEAR NAME: I'm sure your poignant letter brought tears to many eyes. Mine included. Thank you so much for writing.

Sunday Scones

Perk up a continental breakfast or morning tea with these bread offerings from the British Isles.

SUNDAY TEA SCONES

2 cups flour
3 tablespoons sugar or honey
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 eggs
½ cup heavy or whipping cream
¼ cup currants

In large bowl combine flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut butter in chunks. With fingers, rub butter into flour mixture until it is in tiny, crumbly bits. Beat eggs with cream. Reserve 1 tablespoon egg mixture to use as a glaze. Use fork to stir remaining egg mixture and currants into flour mixture. Stir just until a dough forms. Turn out dough onto a floured surface. Knead just until well mixed — 10 to 15 turns. Roll or pat dough to ½-inch thickness. With a biscuit cutter, cut out dough into 2-inch circles. Place about ½ inch apart on a greased baking sheet. Brush tops with reserved egg mixture. Bake at 425 F. for about 15 minutes, until tops of scones are golden. Serve hot. Makes about 1 dozen.

LOOK FOR THE LITTLE THINGS
. . . . In this big home! A 5 bdrm wood and glass two story featuring brand new construction with old world craftsmanship. Incredible views from all 3700 sq. ft. of living, but really, it's the little things that count: solid oak cabinets, circulating hot water systems, wide hallways and floor safe in master suite. This is an exciting home with subtle quality. Open daily at 460 Mendoza Terrace in Corona del Mar. Presented at $375,000.

Tell Mom You Love Her

This Mother's Day send Mom a greeting all the world can share on Sunday, May 14th.

Express your love in a Daily Pilot Mother's Day Greeting.

It's easy. Write your message to fit one of our three convenient sizes and bring it to any Daily Pilot office prior to noon May 12th. Or, you may mail a clipping of the border with your message and payment to Daily Pilot, 330 W. Bay St., Box 1560, Costa Mesa, Ca. 92626.

Ads come in three sizes: $10, $15, and $3 for the special child's size card. (You must be under 12 years of age to qualify for the littlest greeting). If you wish you may create your own decorated greeting. Using black pen draw your design to fit one of the dotted outlines shown here. You may fill the entire space. Only words and lines drawn within the dotted line will appear in your completed Mother's Day ad.

If you want help composing a suitable greeting or have any questions call 642-5678. A friendly Daily Pilot ad-viser will be glad to help you. And, if you like you can charge your Mother's Day ad. Your credit is good with us, or you may use your Master Charge or BankAmericard.

PRINCESS MARGARET, LORD SNOWDEN TO DIVORCE
After Stormy Marriage, a Rift in Royal Family

Princess Margaret, Snowdon to Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their marriage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remarriage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to comment about Lord Snowdon."

Lord Snowdon has been linked by gossip columnists to assistant movie producer Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

Layoff Notice To Be Sent to Valley Aides

Fountain Valley (elementary) School District trustees agreed Tuesday to send 205 possible lay off notices to all but 20 of the district's part-time teacher aides

The exact number of aides to be laid off will be determined by individual school principals when their plans are completed just before the start of classes in the fall, officials said

The school board's action shocked about 20 aides who attended a special trustee meeting Tuesday.

"Most of the aides I know are going to file for unemployment," said Dorothy Brandt, a Fountain Valley parent who is also an aide at Fulton Elementary School.

Mrs. Brandt said about 80 percent of the teacher aides in the Fountain Valley School District are also parents of youngsters who attend school there.

Assistant Superintendent Jack Mahnken said that not all or even half of the district's 225 part-time aides will be laid off. He would not estimate the number at this time.

Mahnken said the ai. cutbacks will be based on seniority rights determined by the number of hours worked.

Some aides work between two and six hours per day, officials indicated.

Superintendent Bill Plaster said the district will rely more heavily on volunteers to handle duties formerly given to teacher aides.

The school board decided not to cut the six bilingual and 14 orthopedic aides employed by the district.

Seitz Wins Election in Seal Beach

Harold K. Seitz won a place on the Seal Beach City Council Tuesday, defeating incumbent Thomas C. Blackman 837-729 in a runoff election for the third district seat.

Seitz is a laboratory supervisor for the Los Angeles County Sanitation District. Blackman, who had been serving as the city's mayor, is a teacher.

Tuesday's runoff election was scheduled after none of the three candidates in the regular election in March was able to collect a clear majority in the third district race.

Power Cutback Not Due

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Power station workers went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today at Southern California Edison plants in Huntington Beach and San Onofre and at eight other locations in Southern California.

Nearly 1,100 members of the Utility Workers Union of America, Local 246, voted to take to the picket lines at all sites after overwhelmingly rejecting the company's "last offer" Monday. It is the first such strike against Edison since 1953.

A union spokesman said that picketing which began at 12:01 a.m. would continue on an around the clock.

A last-ditch effort to avert the strike failed when talks broke down Tuesday. Edison had previously terminated the contract with the union effective at midnight Tuesday.

Bob Hull, a spokesman for Edison, said that supervisory personnel are taking the place of the striking union members who maintain and repair power units.

He said that he is confident that the company can continue to produce electricity at normal capacity "as long as it is necessary."

An Edison official that said that about 1,500 construction workers on a $2.4 billion expansion project at the San Onofre nuclear plant have apparently honored picket lines and didn't go to work at 9 a.m.

The workers are employed by the Bechtel Power Company and other sub-contractors. They are represented by various other unions working on plants Numbers 2 and 3.

An Edison official said the company is exploring ways to get the construction workers back on the job. About 3,000 employees in all work on the expansion project.

Young 'Nazi' Held in Killing

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A 15-year-old self-proclaimed Nazi has pleaded no contest to murdering a classmate after being taunted for his beliefs.

Roger Needham of Lansing, a frail-looking boy, wore a Nazi party emblem on his jacket when he entered his plea. He will remain in the Ingham County jail until June 5, when Circuit Judge Donald Owens will decide where he is to go for detention and psychological treatment.

Needham, son of a Cooley Law School professor, suffers from a rare form of mental illness that made him "a true paranoiac" according to a psychiatrist's report.

Rapist of Girl, 7, Sought by HB Cops

Huntington Beach police are still searching for a thin, middle-aged man who raped a 7-year-old girl at an elementary school April 30.

The girl was riding her bicycle at Crest View Elementary School, in Huntington Beach when she was attacked that Sunday.

Police said the man grabbed the child and pulled her behind a classroom wing. The attacker fled in a white and shiny green sedan.

The suspect was described as a Caucasian in his 40's with black hair, graying at the temples. He is six feet tall and wore sunglasses, a green shirt with a white collar and light trousers at the time of the attack, police said.

Police have released a drawing of the suspect and have asked anyone who might have information about the case to call Detective Art Droz at 536-5963.

Terror Mounts in Italy

Executive Shot as Moro Death Protests Rise

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services will be held according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. The day of the funeral was not announced.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged away in chains.

Curacio and 14 other Red Brigades members are on trial in Turin on sedition charges.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

In a spontaneous burst of emotion, millions of Italians poured out of factories, shops, offices and schools Tuesday to demonstrate against terrorism after Moro's body — chained and riddled with 11 bullets — was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome.

More than 100,000 people crowded Milan's Piazza del Duomo. More than 30,000 marched around the Colosseum in Rome, carrying hastily-fashioned white banners for the Christian Democrats and red for the Communists along with black-framed portraits of the 61-year-old former premier.

The nation's unions called a two-hour general strike today so workers could attend mass meetings against terrorism. Student demonstrations also were scheduled, and some student groups "excommunicated" the Red Brigades from the anti-government movement.

Pope Paul VI said Moro's assassination is "a bloody mark which dishonors our country." He told children who just received their First Communion and others gathered in St. Peter's Basilica today, "This crime has shocked every honest person in the world, the whole of society."

7 Finalists Picked for HB Trustee Post

Members of a selection panel have identified seven finalists as candidates for a vacant seat on the Huntington Beach Union High School District Board of Trustees.

Steve Smith, spokesman for the five-member panel, told the four remaining school board members Tuesday that the seven finalists, chosen from a list of 40 applicants, will be interviewed publicly Friday night.

The public interviews will take place at 7 o'clock at Huntington Beach High School, 1905 Main St., Smith said.

The school board plans to consider the panel's nomination for the appointed post at a 10:30 a.m. meeting Saturday at the district offices, 5201 Bolsa Ave., Huntington Beach.

The school board vacancy was created last month by former trustee Don MacAllister's resignation after he was elected to the Huntington Beach City Council.

The seven finalists for the trustee post are:

— Victor F. Johnson, 9147 El Azul Circle, Fountain Valley, a special projects official with a Los Angeles medical firm;

— Lucila Ochoa Laing, 5471 Shrewsbury Lane, Westminster, currently serving on the Orange County Grand Jury;

— Brian Lake, 8464 El Arroyo Circle, Huntington Beach, general manager of Huntington Seacliff;

— Alex Logan, 19682 Sacramento Lane, Huntington Beach, a private attorney and a former deputy district attorney;

— Andrew J. Masley, 16561 Wanderer Lane, Huntington Beach, director of scientific research at McDonnell Douglas in Huntington Beach;

— Cynthia Royce Shofer, 8501 Martinique Drive, Huntington

Trail of Controversy

Meg's Life 'Like a Novel'

LONDON (AP) — From her impetuous childhood through her precocious teen-age years to her stormy middle age, Britain's Princess Margaret swirled through life trailing controversy over her men and her deportment.

The announcement today from Buckingham Palace that she and husband Antony Armstrong-Jones would seek a divorce after nearly two years of separation was only the latest episode in a life that seemed the very stuff of novels.

MARGARET WAS BORN IN August 1930, and made her first public appearance at the age of 6 at her father's coronation. Since then, she has been continually in the public eye — often with heavy consequences for her private life.

She was a lively child, known to cartwheel down Buckingham Palace halls, defy orders and make scenes.

"My first memory," she said, "is half-falling out of my pram baby carriage. A great to-do. I imagine I must have wanted to be noticed."

She was a capable horsewoman, spoke a number of languages, and loved piano. Both Margaret and her older sister, later Queen Elizabeth II, were proficient swimmers.

BUT WHEN THEY WERE awarded a lifesaving certificate together, Margaret became so angry she picked up her sister's dog, threw it into Buckingham Palace's lake, and then, clad in her best party dress, jumped in to rescue the drenches animal.

"Margaret always wants what I want," her sister once said.

"When my sister and I were growing up," explained Margaret, "she was made out to be the goody-goody one. That was boring so the press tried to make out I was wicked as hell."

Margaret blossomed into a precocious teen-ager and jet-setter, a beautiful young woman with violet eyes, brown hair and flawless skin. She was surrounded by the British press and idolized by the royalty-loving public during the austere post-World War II years.

"THE PLEASURE-SEEKING PRINCESS," headline writers called her.

She was always off to nightclubs trailing dukes, guard officers and other eligible young men. There were pictures of her smoking in public. Her elegant cigarette holders became famous.

In her mid-20s, her ill-fated romance with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend brought her widespread sympathy: Townsend, a Battle of Britain hero, was equerry to Margaret's father King George VI. But the dashing fighter ace had been divorced, and that brought family and church pressure that eventually forced the princess to renounce him.

Four and a half years later, in May 1960, she married globe-trotting photographer Armstrong-Jones -- later elevated to the peerage as Lord Snowdon — after a secret love affair. Millions watched their wedding ceremony at Westminster Abbey or on television.

THEIR OFTEN ROCKY MARRIAGE enthralled Britons but effectively ended 16 years and two children later with a separation.

"I don't see myself marrying again," the Princess said in 1977. "It would probably be too much of a bore."

Her latest man, and suitably her latest scandal, was Roddy Llewellyn, a socialite and former hippie turned aspiring supper-club crooner.

Margaret came in for sharp criticism in Parliament, in public and among Church of England clerics for her friendship with Llewellyn, with whom she frequently was seen and in whose company she took vacations on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

It was announced last month that Margaret would continue her public life — the implication being that she would not see Llewellyn as often at least in public — and the Buckingham Palace announcement today said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

Carter Urged to OK More Israeli Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet officers are recommending that President Carter promise 20 additional F-15 jet fighters to Israel in an effort to win congressional approval of the sale of warplanes to Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, a White House source said today.

The recommendation by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown would bring to 110 the number of jet fighters promised Israel in the arms sale controversy.

The source said Carter will not change the terms of the proposed sale of 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel and 50 F-5s to Egypt by 1983, but would promise to sell Israel the additional planes after that.

Administration officials believe Carter's concession will pick up enough votes to win a go-ahead for the sale from the House International Relations Committee.

Congress has until May 28 to veto part or all of the sale. If the House committee defeats veto resolutions against the sales, it would be impossible for the full Congress to act on them and the sales would go through.

The 20 additional sophisticated swing-wing F-15s for Israel, in addition to the 15 already planned by Carter and the 25 F-15s Israel already is buying, would give the Israelis the same number as the Saudis.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in testimony to the House committee repeated today his proposal that the additional planes be sold to Israel by 1983 at the same time the original planes are being sold to Israel, the Saudis and to Egypt.

But administration sources say the additional planes could not be manufactured and delivered to Israel that fast.

Meanwhile, Brown sent members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a draft letter spelling out Saudi Arabian assurances that its warplanes would not be used against Israel.

Brown's letter reportedly said the Saudis agreed among other things that they would take planes only with defensive missiles that cannot be used against ground troops.

The Saudis also have agreed to station their jet fighters far from Israel's borders and not to buy planes from other countries during the time the American planes are being delivered.

SUCCUMBS AT 64
V. I. "Bill" Mahaffey

Mahaffey Honored in Last Rites

Memorial funeral services have been held for Huntington Beach's V.I. "Bill" Mahaffey, operator of the Mahaffey Machine Company and a well-known local churchman and Boy Scout leader.

Death came to Mr. Mahaffey April 28 at Palm Harbor General Hospital following a long illness.

Known for affecting a jaunty black string tie like a Kentucky colonel, Mr. Mahaffey was 64 and still actively operating his firm until a few months before his death.

The company at 2316 Delaware St. was founded shortly after he moved to Huntington Beach in 1957 and deals in custom machining and fabricating.

A member of the Community Bible Church, where memorial rites were held, Mr. Mahaffey was also active with Boy Scout Troop 1 for years as a trustee and for a time as assistant scoutmaster.

He was also a member of the Christian Businessmen's Committee International.

During much of its earlier years, the family firm was engaged in work for the bustling petroleum industry but was capable of a wide variety of machining work.

"People used to say if you want it done right, take it to Bill Mahaffey," says one of his surviving sons, Dan.

Survivors include his wife of 34 years, Dorothy; sons Daniel, Patrick and Robert; a daughter, Patricia; sisters Marie, Clara and Dorothy; plus brothers Jack, Raymond and Harold.

The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society's Orange County unit in Mr. Mahaffey's name.

Drug Agent Plans Talk At FV School

A federal agent is set as the featured speaker at a Thursday night drug and alcohol abuse prevention forum at Fountain Valley High School for adults only.

The forum will be held at 7 o'clock in the high school choral room, 17816 Bushard St.

Hugh Shanahan, Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory agent, will show films for parents on PCP, or "angel dust," and what should be done if drugs are found at home.

Fountain Valley police will also be present to answer questions about the various types of drugs and their effects.

Young Artists To Be Judged For Festival

Judging of Orange County school children's art will be held this weekend to select art that will be exhibited this summer at the Laguna Beach Festival of Arts Junior Art Gallery.

Children from kindergarten to high school throughout Orange County are participating in the annual school art competition, and a selected group of 150 award-winning works will be displayed at the Festival of Arts.

Chairman for the junior art exhibit at the Festival is Marge Skelton of Laguna Beach. The Junior Art Gallery will be located in the lower portion of the Forum Theater on the festival grounds during the 43rd season, which runs from July 11 to Aug. 27 this year.

Tainted Pot Probe Slated

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Despite advice against it, San Diego County will investigate on its own whether Mexican marijuana sprayed with the toxic defoliant paraquat poses a health hazard to smokers.

The Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 Tuesday, ordering county health officials to report back within a week.

Earlier, Dr. John Philp, county health director, advised the county to take no action on the matter.

Woman Held in Robbery

A 19-year-old Huntington Beach girl who allegedly used a toy gun to hold up a Costa Mesa liquor store Tuesday night was apprehended by police after a patrolman spotted her running from the store.

In custody today at Orange County Jail on suspicion of armed robbery is Donna Von Sprecken, of 17301 Keelson Lane, Huntington Beach. She is being held in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Police said she is a suspect in the May 5 robbery of a Costa Mesa liquor store on 19th Street in which a young woman escaped with about $100.

Police said a woman matching the description of the suspect in the earlier hold up entered Fischer's Liquor, 3135 Harbor Blvd., at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and asked for a pack of cigarettes.

As the clerk reached for the cigarettes, the young woman allegedly revealed a realistic-looking toy revolver and demanded cash.

The clerk complied, handing over an unknown amount of money before the woman fled on foot, according to Costa Mesa police Detective Gerry Thompson.

The woman was spotted running from the store by Patrolman Jeff Clark, who captured her.

A spokesman for the Utility Workers Union said that members are adamantly opposed to the rotating work schedule which has been a chief stumbling block in negotiations since last October.

Edison is seeking to implement a schedule in which union members would work weekends on a rotating schedule without receiving overtime pay.

Pickets also were posted at two Long Beach plants, Ormond Beach, Mojave, El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Oxnard and Mandalay (near Ventura.)

There are 125 members of the striking employees at San Onofre and 66 at Huntington Beach.

The facility in Huntington Beach has a capacity of producing 990 megawatts of electricity and can serve a population of about 750,000.

Bribe Plan Probed

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal grand jury is investigating whether the Ford Motor Co. bribed Indonesian officials to obtain a $30 million contract for a satellite communications system for that country in 1975, the New York Times reported today.

Campaign Effort To Be Investigated

Orange County's new Fair Campaign Practices Commission will hold a hearing next Tuesday on the first complaint to come its way.

Truman T. Legg, an administrator in the county clerk's office and one of six candidates for clerk-recorder, told commissioners this week he suspects an opponent of using misleading information in a campaign brochure.

Legg alleged candidate Marshall Norris, a deputy clerk, used misleading information concerning his education and background.

Commissioners agreed to invite Norris to reply to Legg's complaint at a 7 p.m. hearing next Tuesday at the county Registrar of Voters office, McFadden and Grand Avenues, Santa Ana.

Commission Chairman William Thom told Legg the commission has no power to stop distribution of any campaign literature

The commission, created by supervisors to oversee campaigns of county government officeseekers, can hold hearings on complaints and make public findings of any wrong-doing.

Two Face Murder Charge

Prosecutors were pondering today whether or not to ask for the death penalty in the double slaying in Long Beach of a Westminster market owner and his clerk during a $150 robbery.

Court arraignment was scheduled for the adult suspect in the case, Charles A. Mosley, 23, of Compton. His alleged accomplice is a 17-year-old juvenile.

Victims in the double shooting were Parshotambhi Patel, 47, the store owner from Westminster, and his clerk, Jaroon Direjit, 33, of Long Beach.

Patel, of 15952 Diamond St., and Direjit were forced to kneel on the floor behind the store counter in their final seconds of life.

One shot was fired into Patel's brain; one into Direjit's and several more shots were then fired into the second victim's back, investigators say.

Police claim the suspects, both from Compton, were recorded on a remote control security camera snapping shots each two to three seconds intervals.

The actual shooting of the kneeling men is not seen on film, according to police, but the looting of the cash register is.

A third unidentified employee of the 7-Eleven Market owned by India-born Patel, was also cowering in a storeroom unseen during the killings and robbery and will be a witness.

He called police when the armed robbery team fled and Mosley and his teen-aged companion were arrested within five minutes about two miles north of the blood-spattered Long Beach Boulevard grocery.

Investigators allege that a .22 caliber revolver and money were confiscated from Mosley and his associate, who are held without bail, the younger male charged as a juvenile.

Council Sets an Unwise Precedent

Now matter how large or small, redevelopment always has been a controversial item in Huntington Beach.

The most recent redevelopment plan for a 15-acre shopping center at Golden West Street and Warner Avenue is no exception.

The plan has been in the works for several years and the City Council (then including four members no longer serving) signed an agreement to participate in redevelopment with the center's developer last year.

A representative of the developer says that because of the city commitment, the company has already spent more than $1 million on the project.

However last week, the reorganized City Council voted to scuttle the center as planned by rejecting a zoning change for the area to commercial use.

The split decision was based chiefly on complaints by businessmen in the immediate vicinity that the area is already over-commercialized. There also were concerns about sewage and traffic problems.

The zoning denial was taken despite advice that the city faces possible legal action because of the alleged commitment.

The majority of the council said that businesses other than the planned supermarket and super drugstore should be studied.

One wonders if the new City Council majority wasn't feeling its Cheerios in demonstrating its independence by vetoing the zoning.

One must also ask if the city is embarking on a precedent that it might be wise to avoid in restricting competition in a commercial area.

School Cutbacks

Fountain Valley (elementary) School District officials will face another crowd of angry parents and teachers Thursday night.

For the past three months, the school board has been confronted with the same group of irate citizens upset over proposed program cutbacks.

Final board action on the cuts is expected Thursday.

Some parents and teachers argue that the proposed cutbacks would destroy programs like music, Mentally Gifted Minors and the so-called Learning Center concept.

School officials contend that these programs will remain but only be altered.

Officials say the cuts are necessary to have teachers spend more time in the classroom and less time on administrative and special program duties.

The district also hopes to save funds by eliminating extra salaries paid to teachers who hold these part-time posts along with their regular classroom duties.

Some teachers receive an extra 10 percent boost in their regular salary for taking on these extra duties.

It's easy to see why teachers are up in arms over the proposed cuts that would hurt them in the wallet.

Of course, much of the rhetoric against the cutback plan centers around how great these special programs are and what a loss they would be for students if the board cuts them.

No matter what decision the board makes, someone is going to be unhappy. All that remains to be seen is how unhappy some people might get.

New Colonia Delay

The slow-moving bureaucracy involved with bringing the first sidewalks, gutters and curbs to Fountain Valley's Colonia Juarez area appears to be stalled again.

This time the delay is blamed on a cement shortage.

City officials say work on the long-promised street improvements is due to begin this week.

We have heard this before.

The resentment and distrust for government already prevalent in the predominantly Mexican-American area is fueled by this latest in a long series of delays.

It is a fact that the city has taken a greater interest this year in trying to speed the work along.

But let's face it, the people of the Colonia have not seen one stone turned and still have to let their children walk to school on muddy paths.

Thank goodness the rainy season is over.

Whatever the reason, the city should try to head off any more delays. This project should get top priority.

After all, Colonia Juarez, located just a block from city hall, is an area almost three times as old as the City of Fountain Valley.

Boyd/Partners

By L.M. BOYD

Three partners put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. When all three were in town, they decided, each would be a vice president. But when any one of them was out on a sales trip, that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiation.

Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by somebody unknown to said victim. You see what this means, don't you? You're a lot safer hanging around with strangers.

In the North Temperate zone, the average person weighs more in September and less in February than in any other months, report the science boys.

Takes only .002 — that's two one-thousandths — of a second to pop a balloon.

How big the goldfish grows depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish therein while a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed those fish secrete a growth-inhibiting substance. Presumably, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

Real Estate Bubble Can Burst

The incapacity of the administration to come up with an anti-inflation policy that a reasonable person can trust will stimulate the flight of depositors from savings banks and other thrift institutions.

Ten years ago rampant corrosive inflation was such an unfamiliar experience that people kept their savings in cash and allowed their purchasing power to be corroded.

After a decade of dedicated inflationists in Congress and the White House, people have come to understand that they're being robbed when the savings and loan association pays 6.5 percent while the government destroys the value of money at the rate of 8 percent and then has the gall to tax the interest from the savings account. People have been taught by politicians that only children save; put it into the bank and the guys in Washington'll steal it.

Thus more and more millions of us are learning that you never lend money, you borrow it. Borrow money today and, with Jimmy Carter in the White House, you'll be able to repay the loan six years from now at 60-cents on the dollar. Solvency is for suckers.

IN THEIR determination to never a lender but a borrower be, many people are going into debt buying real estate. Their reasoning is plausible. In the last few years, through inflation and recession, residential real estate values have held up very well. Stocks and bonds have been a disaster; gold has only made money for a few shrewdies; antiques, jewelry, art and objets d'art, like rare stamps and oriental rugs, demand specialized knowledge, and anyway, you can take a bad beating, even if you've made a good buy, in the event you have to sell in a hurry.

Real estate, especially homes, has had the best track record. They're easy to sell compared to some of the things mentioned above, and the price on residential housing has not only kept pace with inflation, but far outdistanced it. That's why you hear of more and more people refinancing the homes they themselves live in so they can realize the enhanced value of their property immediately. Many of them are taking the money they're getting from refinancing their homes and buying other properties, not to live in but as an investment.

THE DIFFICULTY with that is that rents haven't kept up with housing prices. People are paying $100,000 for the house which sold for $75,000 three years ago in expectation that in three or four years they'll be able to sell for $140,000. In the meantime, they must rent it and a lot of them are discovering the rental price won't even pay the monthly mortgage installment, much less taxes and upkeep.

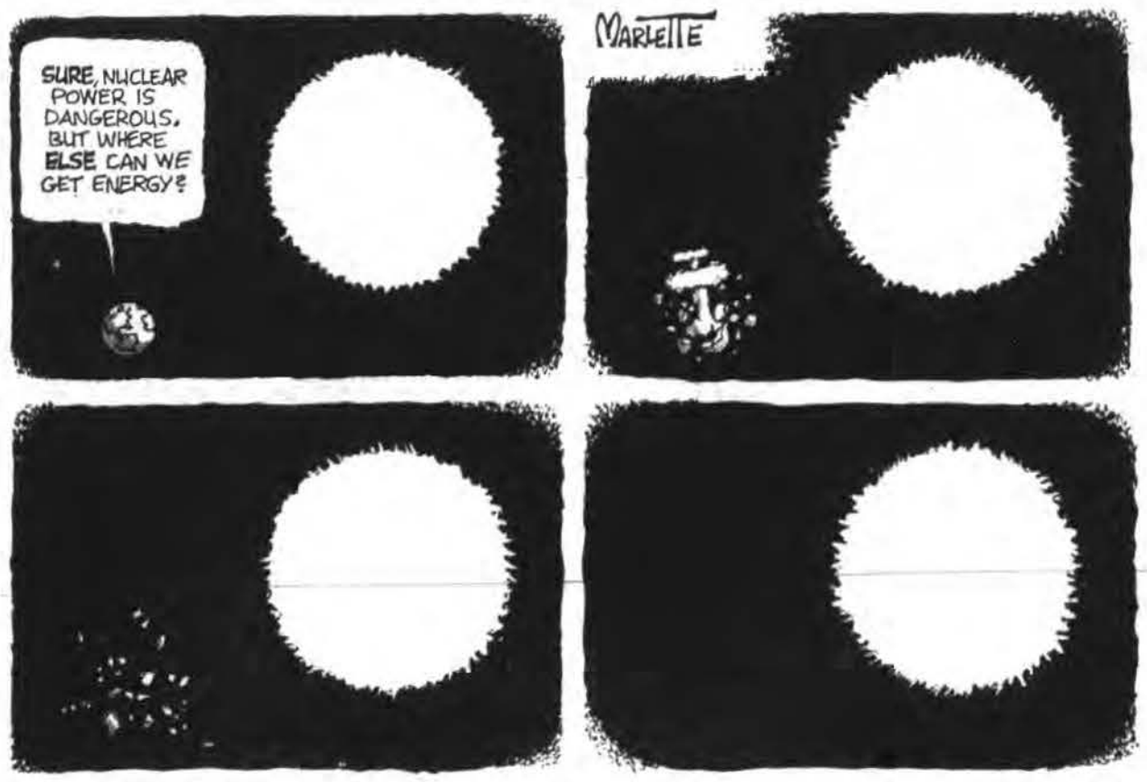

In the banking business they call people who're paying out two or three hundred dollars a month now in hopes of realizing a $40,000 profit down the road "overexposed." Everything depends on the market in residential real estate holding up and there's no guarantee of that. In fact, the signs indicate this is a poor time to buy residential real estate for any purpose other than living in it.

In many parts of the country, residential real estate prices are being driven up not by potential occupiers but by people hoping to sell later at a profit. They're going up so fast it looks like a buyers' panic is on, with people's business judgment swept away by an hysterical conviction that if they don't buy now and buy at almost any price, they'll lose the opportunity of a lifetime.

IF YOU really think real estate prices will continue to shoot up indefinitely with no relationship to the price of other goods and services, then this is the moment to buy at any price. In the real world such a situation is unlikely so that the danger grows that a bad collapse is coming in a couple of years, a collapse which will find many innocent, hard-working people badly dumped on.

The last recession saw that happen with certain kinds of real estate. Second or vacation home prices were murdered as was the office-building segment of the real estate industry. Residential real estate, of course, did well, but that was last time, when prices weren't climbing at the disconcerting rates they are now.

In times like these, remember the new adage, don't seek shelter against inflation where too many others are already huddled.

A Time to Think About World Hunger

To the Editor:

Everyone who has ever heard a baby cry knows that feeding a hungry child is the most natural thing in the world, yet each year 20 million deaths occur from starvation and diseases related to malnutrition.

Since November, 1977, more than 100,000 people across the nation have made a personal commitment to look within themselves to discover what they as individuals can do to end death by starvation in the world within 20 years. These individuals, with their ranks expanding every day, have aligned themselves in the Hunger Project.

THE IDEA of the hunger project is to utilize the power of the individual to create a context . . . something that no organization or government can do. In simple terms, creating a context involves willing something to manifest and then personally committing yourself to make this happen.

The thousands of individuals already enrolled in the Hunger Project have all personally committed themselves to end hunger in 20 years. Individuals across the country have been creating their own forms of participation to make this happen.

For example, the governor of New York declared the month of May as a time for the state of New York to become aware of the problem. In Washington D.C., May 14 has been declared a day of awareness of world hunger. The Laguna Beach Hunger Project weekend of May 13-14 includes a beach run on Main Beach at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Entry fee is $5.

Cut Deadwood

To the Editor:

The increasing almost hysterical outcries by Governor Brown and other politicians on Prop. 13, gives some clue as to their fear that this balloting in June will find the voters solidly giving the Jarvis-Gann measure their support, for a leaner, more efficient government.

Governor Brown's statements about "taking some $8 million 'out of circulation' will cause disaster and unemployment" are fear tactics obviously unsupported by economics. He should know better.

By removing the surplus tax revenues and cutting into the fat public trough to the tune of $8 billion (most now say $7 billion) will be putting money into circulation, and where it can do some productive work.

We have yet to see our tax money work productively. If some of the inefficient workers on the public payroll are lopped off, it will be for beneficial purposes, while the overburdened home owner has some relief.

Public borrowing on the bond market will be affected and the big banks like the Bank of America may not like Prop. 13 for that reason. But public bonds are borrowing by the government and should be also slowed down.

IT SEEMS useless to threaten that our schools will be affected, when they are so inefficient in educating our youngsters now, perhaps clearing out some of the deadwood may result in the hope that the students can at least be educated to read and write before graduating from high school.

As soon as it becomes less onerous to build and maintain houses and apartments, with less tax burden, more shelters will be built and the simple supply at the marketplace will bring down the rentals and thus benefit renters under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

America was built on the free marketplace enterprise economy, not by the politicians making new and more restrictive, more involved laws to restrict free enterprise.

The Jarvis-Gann initiative is a simple direct method of making the Legislature and the administration more efficient and responsive to the people whom they should be serving, and cut out the deadwood in the operation of the public machinery.

Lower Rents

To the Editor:

Jarvis says landlords will lower rents if Prop. 13 passes.

How can he speak for everyone?

I've kept rents on my triplex $50 lower than others in the area for several years. I live in fear of rent controls — getting caught with my rents down. This property is all I have.

I cannot lower rents to please Jarvis the way owners of big rents and commercial properties can. Such landlords are the only ones who would profit by Prop. 13.

Appreciate

To the Editor:

For some time now, demands have been placed on government to provide more services to citizens, the results of which do not always meet expectations and objectives. It is, therefore, continually refreshing to see a large group of citizens donate their time in an endeavor that meets its objectives.

I AM referring to those unselfish men and women who coach, manage, and in other ways make the community youth athletic programs a success.

I have three daughters who participate in bobby sox softball. The lessons learned, friendships made, skills developed, and time constructively utilized have made my daughters better individuals. For this, my wife and I are truly appreciative.

Thomas Fan

To the Editor:

I enjoyed your favorable editorial on John Thomas. If Thomas seems to come on like "gang busters" it is because many citizens are leaning on him to rectify all the past Huntington Beach City Councils' wrong decisions.

The past city council was arrogant, they didn't have one ounce of compassion for the small weak people. They didn't care about those protesting plane crashes on their land. They didn't care about the 200 people who signed a petition asking that a garden nursery stop spraying poisons into their homes and pools. They didn't care about the victims of their "top of the pier plan" or the "save Bolsa Chica" group.

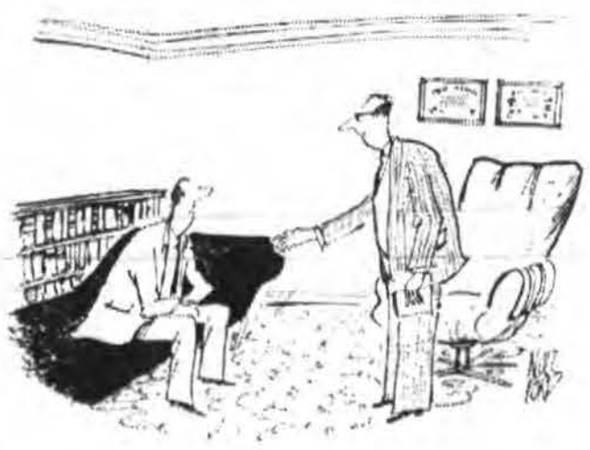

THE STRONG could get away with anything, the weak with nothing.

This is the first time in my life I worked for political candidates and didn't even ask what political party they belonged to. I think that the new council will give everyone an even break, for the most part. I have my doubts about a couple of the old members though.

Bay Area Gays on March

1,000 Protest Repeal of Wichita Rights Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,000 chanting San Franciscans, many of them homosexuals, marched through city streets in protest just hours after voters in Wichita, Kan. repealed a gay rights ordinance. (Related stories, A4, A12)

The protest Tuesday night was peaceful, police said.

"WE HAD WORD there would be a protest as soon as the Wichita vote started coming through," said Officer Elsen Broich.

The march appeared to be a combination protest over the Wichita vote and a statewide initiative that, if approved by voters in November, would let school districts fire or refuse to hire avowed homosexuals or those who support gay lifestyles.

THE MARCHERS, swelling to number about 1,000 by 11 p.m., chanted "Wichita means fight back," "Civil rights or civil war," and other slogans as they strode 10 and 15 abreast from Castro Street down busy Market Street, then up Polk Street and over to Union Square. Castro and Polk streets are predominantly gay neighborhoods.

Earlier in the day, a Wichita ordinance barring discrimination against homosexuals was overwhelmingly repealed by a more than 4-1 margin. Two weeks ago, when a similar ordinance was overturned in St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco homosexuals staged a similar but smaller march, police said.

A city ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals was just recently approved here by the board of supervisors, without controversy. There has been no move to repeal that ordinance.

Smog Stations Hit For 'Deficiencies'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A California auditor general's report says nearly two-thirds of the state's auto smog inspection stations are deficient, and official lamp and brake stations are hardly ever inspected.

The report, out Tuesday, recommended that the Bureau of Automotive Repair increase its staff to take care of the problems.

BUT CONSUMER Affairs Director Richard Spohn, whose department administers the bureau, said the report contained "numerous false statements, half-truths and distortions."

The bureau also licenses most auto repair shops and mediates consumer complaints. Some of its operations are paid by license and registration fees.

Deficiencies cited by the report included failure to have proper tools for inspection and engine tune-ups, failure to employ a licensed pollution device installer, and failure to keep up with the latest pollution control technology.

Porn Films Jail Pair

IMPERIAL BEACH (AP) — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for investigation of making pornographic films involving young boys after police confiscated more than 100 sex-oriented films and slides at his apartment, officers said.

Bail for Archie Murray, 39, a fourth-grade teacher at Westview Elementary School, was set Tuesday at $4,250, Imperial Beach police said.

Richard Rollings, 18, a security guard identified as Murray's roommate, also was arrested Monday when police armed with a search warrant arrived.

Jarvis Drops Libel Claim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis says he'll dismiss his $800,000 libel claim filed against the Grossmont High School District over a story printed in a student newspaper.

The story appeared March 10 in the Granite Hills High School Clarion and was written by 16-year-old Brad Teaby. It tried to explain the controversial property tax limitation initiative on the June 6 ballot.

But part of Teaby's story alleged Jarvis and Gann were "prominent real estate owners" who stood to reap "several million dollars" in tax savings if the proposition passed.

15 Escape Air Crash

The accident shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday involved an executive-type turbo-prop plane of the Santa Barbara-based Apollo Airways.

The executive director of the airport, James Ellingsworth, said "It did leave the ground by about 20 feet when, for some reason, the pilot aborted. He set it down on its belly and it slid probably 1,500 feet." He said he didn't see any obvious injuries.

Dinner Swells Fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has pulled off the most lucrative fund raiser ever staged by a Democratic gubernatorial incumbent, convincing 1,000 people to contribute more than $300,000 toward his reelection campaign.

After all the bills are paid, the $250-per-plate dinner Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel will have netted Brown between $210,000 and $250,000, said campaign manager Gray Davis.

Brown has collected $700,000 so far, Davis said, and hopes to stretch that to at least $1 million before the June 6 primary, in which he is unopposed.

Drink Draws Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Woodland Hills restaurant where television actor Dan Haggerty was burned by a flaming drink has been fined $1,500 for fire code violations.

Representatives of The Red Onion pleaded no contest to two charges of serving a flaming drink and one charge of over-crowding before Municipal Court Judge David Kennick Tuesday.

One of the flaming drink violations occurred Nov. 19, 1977, the same night Haggerty, who portrays Grizzly Adams, was burned. However, Los Angeles Fire Department Inspector Gene Lindley said none of the charges related to the Haggerty incident.

Princess, Lord Snowdon to Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their mariage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remarriage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to comment about Lord Snowdon."

Lord Snowdon has been linked by gossip columnists to assistant movie producer Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

Edison Workers Vote to Picket

Onofre Hit by Strike

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Power station workers went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today at Southern California Edison plants in Huntington Beach and San Onofre and at eight other locations in Southern California.

Nearly 1,100 members of the Utility Workers Union of America, Local 246, voted to take to the picket lines at all sites after overwhelmingly rejecting the company's "last offer" Monday. It is the first such strike against Edison since 1953.

A union spokesman said that picketing which began at 12:01 a.m. would continue on an around the clock.

A last-ditch effort to avert the strike failed when talks broke down Tuesday. Edison had previously terminated the contract with the union effective at midnight Tuesday.

Bob Hull, a spokesman for Edison, said that supervisory personnel are taking the place of the striking union members who maintain and repair power units.

He said that he is confident that the company can continue to produce electricity at normal capacity "as long as it is necessary."

An Edison official that said that about 1,500 construction workers on a $2.4 billion expansion project at the San Onofre nuclear plant have apparently honored picket lines and didn't go to work at 9 a.m.

The workers are employed by the Bechtel Power Company and other sub-contractors. They are represented by various other unions working on plants Numbers 2 and 3.

An Edison official said the company is exploring ways to get the construction workers back on the job. About 3,000 employees in all work on the expansion project.

A spokesman for the Utility Workers Union said that members are adamantly opposed to the rotating work schedule which has been a chief stumbling block in negotiations since last October.

Edison is seeking to implement a schedule in which union members would work weekends on a rotating schedule without receiving overtime pay.

Pickets also were posted at two Long Beach plants, Ormond Beach, Mojave, El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Oxnard and

Gann Claim

Too Few Know Of Tax Effort?

By ANNE COOPER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Ignorance on the part of a substantial portion of the state's voters may kill chances for passage of the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative on June 6, according to the measure's co-author Paul Gann.

Gann told a Laguna Beach Chamber of Commerce audience this morning that a recent survey showed 23 percent of California voters still do not know what the initiative is.

"That's what will hurt us at the polls," he said. "An uninformed voter usually votes 'no'."

Gann, a real estate salesman, told the Chamber of Commerce breakfast meeting of about 150 people that supporters of the Jarvis-Gann initiative have established a statewide telephone network to talk person-to-person with voters who may have questions about the ballot measure.

Joking about the "help" the initiative's supporters have received from government officials, Gann said the proposition's wording on the ballot authorized by the Secretary of State, is likely to cause confusion

"It sounds from the ballot wording as if your taxes will go up 2 percent a year," he said. "Of course that isn't true."

In truth, he said, the measure, if approved, would allow county assessors to increase an assessment by no more than two percent over the basic 1975-76 assessment.

A home assessed at $100,000 in 1975-76 would cost its owner $1,000 (one percent) in property taxes the first year if Proposition 13 passes, Gann said.

The most the county assessor could raise the assessment the following year would be two percent, bringing the assessment to $102,000 and taxes to $1,020.

"Most of us can live with a $20

One Hurt In Laguna Car Crash

A Laguna Beach woman was seriously injured Tuesday night when her car struck two other vehicles as she apparently tried to retrieve a purse that had slipped from the seat.

Julie A. Bushard, 36, of 58 Lagunita Place remains in stable condition in the intensive care unit at South Coast Community Hospital following the 9 p.m. crash at South Coast Highway and Oak Street.

Police said the woman apparently reached for her purse which had fallen off the seat when she entered the southbound lanes of Coast Highway.

Her car allegedly sideswiped a car driven by William Renwich, 27, of 1205 Miramar St. before colliding head-on with another car driven by Michael M. Greene, 32761 Mediterranean Drive, Laguna Niguel.

The woman was treated by paramedics at the scene and rushed to South Coast Community Hospital where she remained in surgery through much of the night.

Greene was treated at the scene for minor hurts and released, police said.

OFFICIALS HURRY SNAKEBITE VICTIM FROM MARINE HELICOPTER TO HOSPITAL
Helmar Tschugg of San Clemente Was Struck While Hiking on Santiago Peak

OC Warned of Rattlers

San Clemente Bite Victim 'Satisfactory'

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

County paramedics and Marine Corps Search and Rescue teamed up Tuesday to rush a rattlesnake-bite victim by helicopter to Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo, from Santiago Peak in Cleveland National Forest.

It was an effort expected to be repeated several times this year, county officials agree, because 1978 is expected to be a dangerous rattlesnake season.

Tuesday's victim, Helmar Tschugg, 36, of 129 Avenida Mariposa, San Clemente, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital intensive care unit.

Villa Park-based paramedics said Tschugg and a companion were in the Cleveland National Forest hiking when a snake struck him on the right ankle.

The two walked a half hour to the peak to contact electronics technicians who service relay equipment there. They, paramedics said, called the County Fire Department.

Tschugg was the second rattler victim treated at Mission Community Hospital Tuesday. Four-year-old Aaron Johnson of Mission Viejo was bitten when he stuck his hand down a gopher hole, officials said. He is reported in good condition.

That's not too unusual.

"From one end of this county to the other, we are turning up rattlesnakes," said Joe Oliver, Orange County's chief animal control officer.

Oliver's training officer, Dick Robillard, said several factors contribute to the increased snake activity — a larger adult population, construction in areas formerly inhabited by snakes and drenching rain that flooded holes and burrows in more remote canyon areas.

Oliver said his department normally receives about one or two snake calls weekly at this time of year. This year, though, he is getting about 10 a week.

Robillard said about 30 to 40 percent of the calls result in finding rattlesnakes. They are decapitated on the spot. Harmless reptiles, he said, are relocated to remote areas.

Areas expected to be most snake infested this summer — and especially this fall — are the developing south-county neighborhoods and Anaheim Hills.

While the snake problem will be difficult this summer, animal control officers said, it will be worse this fall when thirsty snakes seek out water in backyards and swimming pools.

"All I can add at this point,"

Bulldozer Cuts Off Phones in Clemente

About 9,000 San Clemente residents were without telephone service late Tuesday after two phone cables were cut by a bulldozer grading a new road on the Reeves Ranch.

Robert Gannon of the Pacific Telephone Company said today that one cable cut connected all of San Clemente with "the outside world." The second cable provided telephone service within the city.

Gannon met with city police and fire officials after the problem was detected about 3:30 p.m. to arrange for an alternate emergency communications system, he said.

A local radio station broadcast bulletins every 15 minutes to alert residents that emergencies would have to be reported in person to city hall, as telephones were not operating.

Service was restored to most of the city overnight, but the Shorecliffs area of north San Clemente was not expected to have phone service until about noon today, Gannon said.

Police, fire and county sheriff personnel went door to door in Shorecliffs neighborhoods Tuesday to inform residents of the telephone blackout.

The police department added extra patrol units to respond to emergencies, but encountered no trouble through the night, a spokesman said.

"Fortunately there were no emergencies. the police and firemen weren't able to handle," said Gannon. "It was just like the 1976 fire — they were right there for the people who needed them."

Gannon said the contractor whose bulldozer severed the cables will be billed for repair costs.

increase on our tax bills," he said.

"The way the system operates now, if a neighbor sells his home for $150,000, all the other homes in the neighborhood are suddenly assessed at $150,000," said Gann.

"That leaves a homeowner the choice of selling his home or staying and letting the state sell it for him," he said.

"Proposition 13 won't solve all our property tax problems," he said. "But let's put it in. Then, if there are inequities, we can clean them up."

Gann said reports that he and Howard Jarvis will save great sums of money on their own property taxes are greatly exaggerated. Each of them owns only his home, Gann said.

"I only wish I were the wealthy property owner I've been made out to be," he said. "Actually, I'm a real estate salesman who never made it to broker. I haven't had a paycheck since December, 1973."

Gann said a "no" vote on Proposition 13 will "rubber stamp" government spending.

"In fact," he said, "some of our local officials may go right into outer space"

Actor Urges Reform Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Robertson, whose missing $10,000 check sparked an investigation into corruption in the movie industry, urged his fellow actors Tuesday to dare to speak out on wrongdoing in Hollywood.

"It is truth, no matter how difficult, that will arrest corporate crime in our industry and set us free," Robertson told about 400 members of the New York Screen Actors Guild at their annual meeing.

DIVORCE. . .

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm. Critics, including Church of England clerics, said the affair was damaging to the image of the royal family, and some said Llewellyn was distracting Margaret from her royal duties.

It was disclosed last month that Margaret intended to continue her public life, and the implication was she would not see Llewellyn so often, at least not publicly.

In the mid-50s, Margaret suffered her first disappointment in love. She was forced under pressure to abandon her relationship with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend because he was a divorced man.

Her intention to divorce Lord Snowdon was announced eight days before the Church of England is expected to change its rules and allow divorced persons to remarry in church. The change will remove a serious obstacle to the remarriage of members of the royal family.

Because the queen is officially the temporal head of the Church of England, the church prohibition was one reason royal observers believed Margaret and Snowdon would never divorce despite their legal separation.

Executive Shot

Terror Still Plagues Italy

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services will be held according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. The day of the funeral was not announced.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged away in chains.

Curacio and 14 other Red Brigades members are on trial in Turin on sedition charges.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

North State Temps Drop

By The Associated Press

Temperatures will continue to drop today in parts of Northern California as winds pick up and scattered thundershowers threaten mountain areas.

The National Weather Service predicted gusts of up to 30 mph in the Stockton and San Francisco Bay areas. A small-craft advisory was issued.

A slight chance of afternoon and evening showers or scattered thunderstorms was predicted for the Sierra, the Mount Shasta area and the northeast corner of the state.

Niguel Park Plans Given County Okay

Plans for a one-acre Laguna Niguel Park which will include a lookout area over the Aliso Valley were approved unanimously by Orange County supervisors Tuesday.

Ridgeview Park, off Ridgeview Drive near Highlands Avenue, would contain a tot lot and multi-use area in addition to the view area, a report to supervisors said.

Park construction has been estimated at $46,000 and yearly maintenance would cost $2,400.

Supervisors authorized the preparation of construction documents which later would be used to seek bids for the project.

Taking Laguna's Problems to Top

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Freshman Laguna Beach councilman Kelly Boyd took on Governor Brown in a verbal exchange in San Diego last week, and, according to news reports and testimony from fellow councilmen, the Laguna official came out on top.

Brown spoke to delegates to a League of California Cities meeting for new council members and mayors Thursday evening at the Sheraton Hotel on Harbor Island.

After his remarks, he said he would take questions from the new city officials in the audience.

BOYD

Councilman Howard Dawson helped Boyd scribble out some rough notes, and the young Laguna councilman rose to his feet to address the governor.

HE COMPLAINED TO BROWN that Laguna Beach picks up the $350,000 annual cleaning bill for its beaches, which are used by people outside of the Art Colony.

"I told him the State Coastal Commission requires us to provide public access to our beaches, which Laguna Beach has done willingly," Boyd said in an interview following the convention.

"But I told him it costs us $350,000 a year with no relief at all from the state. I told him we need relief for our parking problems caused by providing public beach access."

Boyd said the governor was less than candid in his replies, which prompted the councilman to interrupt Brown.

"HE TOLD US HE DIDN'T realize Laguna had this problem, but I told him it wasn't only Laguna Beach, it's beach cities up and down the coast."

Brown is quoted in a San Diego Union story following the confrontation as calling Boyd's request ridiculous, especially if the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative is approved.

"We are talking about a tax revolt," the Union article quoted the governor. "There's no way you're going to get more money."

"Then why don't you repeal the coastal commission and let us run our own cities," Boyd responded hotly.

THAT REMARK DREW APPLAUSE from other council members, the Union article said.

The governor replied that a majority of the people of California enacted Prop. 20, which created the State Coastal Commission.

Repeal, he said, would be unlikely.

But before Boyd sat down, Brown turned to Richard Silberman of San Diego, his executive assistant, and ordered him to "write that down."

BOYD SAID HE AND Mayor McDowell were later invited to Sacramento to discuss beach access and state funding of coastal city problems sometime later this month.

Meanwhile, the freshman council member is doing his homework, seeking out complaints from other beach cities to take to the governor.

"I want to have information from other cities when we go up there," he said. "My main concern is turning the cities back over to us."

Improvement Courses

College Class Fee Eyed in Saddleback

Saddleback College classes — currently offered to district residents at no charge — could have fees attached to them next year under guidelines proposed by Trustee Robert Price.

Residents can be charged for classes which are not taken for credit toward receiving a college degree, Price said.

The classes he believes the district could begin charging students to attend are "self improvement courses" such as tennis, arts and crafts and recreation.

"It's kind of shifting more things into the community services area," Price said today. "The community is apparently willing to pay a minimal fee for worthwhile classes so we could move some of our existing courses into that area."

Price said his suggestion was prompted by concern over possible budget cutbacks as a result of diminishing district revenues should the Jarvis-Gann amendment be approved by voters.

"Right now, tennis is free because it's in the curriculum for creditation," Price explained. "If we shift it into community services, we might be able to break even on the cost of the course through charging fees."

And that would ease the burden on tax revenues necessary to run regular college degree programs, Price said.

"The next year for the college will be a test of survival," the trustee said. "Even though we are not in as bad shape as some districts, it will be a severe and austere period."

Price also is proposing to "immediately curtail all plans to operate a north campus for the 1978-79 school year."

And he suggests that college officials figure next year's budget funding levels at a rate less than the existing tax rate and assessed valuation increase estimates.

That means a potential reduction of almost $2 million in the college's 1978-79 budget.

"That keeps us with pretty much the same program we have operating now," Price said. He indicated the cutback would also protect the district from cutbacks as a result of the Behr bill.

Trustees are scheduled to discuss Price's suggested guidelines and next year's budget at a special meeting Monday.

The session will begin at 3 p.m. in the Library/ Classroom complex, 28000 Marguerite Parkway, Room 105, in Mission Viejo.

Fire Road Fills Longtime Need

City Council approval of a fire road linking the Top of the World fire station with the Arch Beach Heights community was a good move for several reasons.

The Arch Beach Heights area has long been vulnerable to disaster by fire, and a blaze that gutted three homes and damaged a fourth earlier this month only accented that vulnerability.

So it came as no surprise that hillside residents endorsed the program outlined by Laguna Beach council members last week.

What made the fire access road palatable to residents of the two communities was inclusion of gates at both ends of the narrow roadway and a promise that the road would be restricted to police, fire, ambulance and paramedic use — and would only be used in case of emergency.

Fears of an expanded public access route were softened by councilmen, who indicated such a move would be unlikely during their tenure.

However, the City Attorney warned that the current council cannot stop future city councils from changing that road designation.

It will be up to hillside residents opposed to through traffic between their communities to make their feelings on the subject known to future city fathers.

ID Overdone

Laguna Beach Councilwoman Sally Bellerue is badgering her fellow council members for accepting some pretty impressive identification badges last week.

The gold and chrome trinkets are inscribed with the words, "Laguna Beach Councilman," but the fact that her badge doesn't say "Councilwoman," is not what bothers the council member.

She thinks the badges might promote a pompous attitude among her peers, adding that they "set the council apart from the rest of the citizens."

Mrs. Bellerue also said she is confused as to the purpose of the official looking ID badges. She suggests that perhaps they are to be displayed to peace officers in case a council person is pulled over while rushing to a meeting, or such.

While it is highly unlikely any Laguna Beach official would use the badge to curry favor, the shiny baubles do appear a bit ridiculous.

The nearly $140 cost of the five council medallions could have purchased an awful lot of business cards which would have served the same purpose.

A bit more modestly, perhaps.

The People's Business

Terming it a "cheap shot," two city officials have taken issue with a Daily Pilot editorial which questioned the San Juan Capistrano City Council for meeting in secret session.

The council considered an airport land-use issue in closed executive session last month, because local pilots were threatening a lawsuit to keep the strip open, according to City Attorney James Okazaki.

Under the Ralph M. Brown Act — state law stipulating open deliberation by elected officials -- the council is forbidden to discuss such threats or possible action regarding such threats in secret.

But Okazaki disagrees, claiming attorney-client relationships involved are in complete accord with state Attorney General guidelines allowing closed discussions.

According to a 1960 opinion of the Attorney General (36 Ops. Att. Gen. 175) an agency can hold executive sessions with its legal counsel to discuss actual litigation, but when legal counsel is sought as to legal implications of a matter under discussion, the attorney-client privilege does not apply, and the discussion must be held in public.

The key is "actual litigation."

No one had filed suit or paid a filing fee in an effort to keep the airport open. The councilmen acknowledge this. Pilots had only suggested that such a suit might be forthcoming.

The question: How far can the attorney-client relationship be stretched to discuss controversial issues in private?

What will be the next legal guise or threatened suit that sends city officials scurrying behind closed doors to avoid public scrutiny?

"Cheap" or not, as charged by Okazaki and Councilman James Thorpe, the Daily Pilot will continue to fire questioning salvos at public groups that fail to meet openly while talking about the people's business.

Boyd/Partners

By L.M. BOYD

Three partners put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. When all three were in town, they decided, each would be a vice president. But when any one of them was out on a sales trip, that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiation. Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by somebody unknown to said victim. You see what this means, don't you? You're a lot safer hanging around with strangers.

In the North Temperate zone, the average person weighs more in September and less in February than in any other months, report the science boys.

How big the goldfish grows depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish therein while a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed those fish secrete a growth-inhibiting substance. Presumably, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

Real Estate Bubble Can Burst

The incapacity of the administration to come up with an anti-inflation policy that a reasonable person can trust will stimulate the flight of depositors from savings banks and other thrift institutions.

Ten years ago rampant corrosive inflation was such an unfamiliar experience that people kept their savings in cash and allowed their purchasing power to be corroded.

After a decade of dedicated inflationists in Congress and the White House, people have come to understand that they're being robbed when the savings and loan association pays 6.5 percent while the government destroys the value of money at the rate of 8 percent and then has the gall to tax the interest from the savings account. People have been taught by politicians that only children save; put it into the bank and the guys in Washington'll steal it.

Thus more and more millions of us are learning that you never lend money, you borrow it. Borrow money today and, with Jimmy Carter in the White House, you'll be able to repay the loan six years from now at 60-cents on the dollar. Solvency is for suckers.

IN THEIR determination to never a lender but a borrower be, many people are going into debt buying real estate. Their reasoning is plausible. In the last few years, through inflation and recession, residential real estate values have held up very well. Stocks and bonds have been a disaster; gold has only made money for a few shrewdies; antiques, jewelry, art and objets d'art, like rare stamps and oriental rugs, demand specialized knowledge, and anyway, you can take a bad beating, even if you've made a good buy, in the event you have to sell in a hurry.

Real estate, especially homes, has had the best track record. They're easy to sell compared to some of the things mentioned above, and the price on residential housing has not only kept pace with inflation, but far outdistanced it. That's why you hear of more and more people refinancing the homes they themselves live in so they can realize the enhanced value of their property immediately. Many of them are taking the money they're getting from refinancing their homes and buying other properties, not to live in but as an investment.

THE DIFFICULTY with that is that rents haven't kept up with housing prices. People are paying $100,000 for the house which sold for $75,000 three years ago in expectation that in three or four years they'll be able to sell for $140,000. In the meantime, they must rent it and a lot of them are discovering the rental price won't even pay the monthly mortgage installment, much less taxes and upkeep.

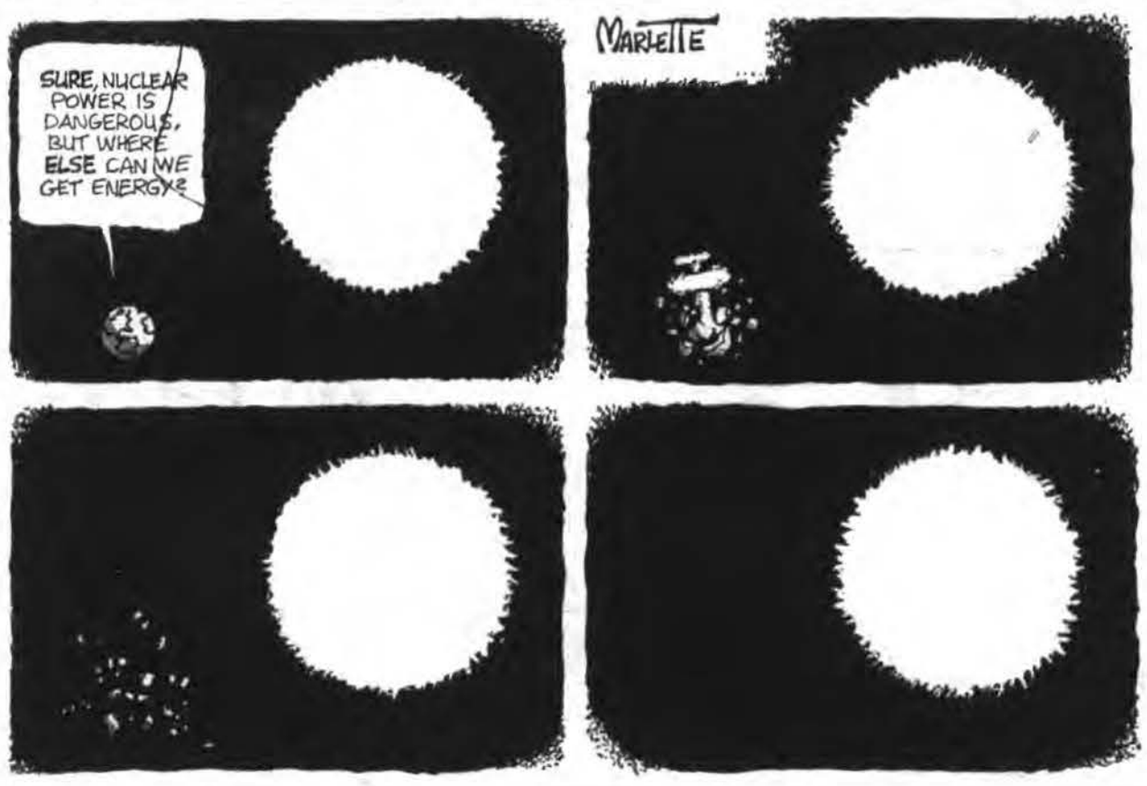

In the banking business they call people who're paying out two or three hundred dollars a month now in hopes of realizing a $40,000 profit down the road "overexposed." Everything depends on the market in residential real estate holding up and there's no guarantee of that. In fact, the signs indicate this is a poor time to buy residential real estate for any purpose other than living in it.

In many parts of the country, residential real estate prices are being driven up not by potential occupiers but by people hoping to sell later at a profit. They're going up so fast it looks like a buyers' panic is on, with people's business judgment swept away by an hysterical conviction that if they don't buy now and buy at almost any price, they'll lose the opportunity of a lifetime.

IF YOU really think real estate prices will continue to shoot up indefinitely with no relationship to the price of other goods and services, then this is the moment to buy at any price. In the real world such a situation is unlikely so that the danger grows that a bad collapse is coming in a couple of years, a collapse which will find many innocent, hard-working people badly dumped on.

The last recession saw that happen with certain kinds of real estate. Second or vacation home prices were murdered as was the office-building segment of the real estate industry. Residential real estate, of course, did well, but that was last time, when prices weren't climbing at the disconcerting rates they are now.

In times like these, remember the new adage, don't seek shelter against inflation where too many others are already huddled.

A Time to Think About World Hunger

To the Editor:

Everyone who has ever heard a baby cry knows that feeding a hungry child is the most natural thing in the world, yet each year 20 million deaths occur from starvation and diseases related to malnutrition.

Since November, 1977, more than 100,000 people across the nation have made a personal commitment to look within themselves to discover what they as individuals can do to end death by starvation in the world within 20 years. These individuals, with their ranks expanding every day, have aligned themselves in the Hunger Project.

THE IDEA of the hunger project is to utilize the power of the individual to create a context . . . something that no organization or government can do. In simple terms, creating a context involves willing something to manifest and then personally committing yourself to make this happen.

The thousands of individuals already enrolled in the Hunger Project have all personally committed themselves to end hunger in 20 years. Individuals across the country have been creating their own forms of participation to make this happen.

For example, the governor of New York declared the month of May as a time for the state of New York to become aware of the problem. In Washington D.C., May 14 has been declared a day of awareness of world hunger. The Laguna Beach Hunger Project weekend of May 13-14 includes a beach run on Main Beach at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Entry fee is $5.

TERESA EDWARDS

Grateful

To the Editor:

You may feel this letter is a bit biased, but I feel compelled to have my say. I work as a bus driver for the city of Laguna Beach. Consequently I get to observe the way our city crew operates and the caliber of work done.

In the past four months I have been witness to two crises: The rains and subsequent flooding and this trash strike. On both occasions I have seen men in all kinds of positions don work boots, hard hats and gloves to assist the residents of Laguna. I know of officers who waded in thigh-high boots in water and mud to help evacuate people from endangered homes. I know of firemen who stayed up all night answering sandbagging and pumping calls. I saw supervisors work the night through; everyone pitched in and worked all day and well into the night.

None of these acts was in their "job description." No one had to help. They have wives and children at home but yet they worked their tails off.

NOW WE have a trash strike and what is happening? Bins are being provided for the residents in various locations. Men are going out of their own departments and hauling trash all over the place. Regular trash truck drivers are training men to pick up trash, and the results? Trash, in spite of the hostility and shots fired, is still being picked up. No one is holding a threat over their heads to make them do it — quite the opposite. These men care.

The city employees (and even non-employees) are keeping our city beautiful and I think it's high time we let them know how grateful we are. I am darn proud to say I work for the city of Laguna and consider myself blessed to be able to work with men and women of this caliber. To every one of you, from firemen to sewer department, I think you're tops and all deserve a medal. I hope you get back a little of what you've sown. I appreciate you and commend you for your fine example of loyalty.

The Best

To the Editor:

I think I've read everything that's been written on Jarvis-Gann in the last six months. Last night's (May 4) Pilot editorial was the best I've seen! Bravo.

JEAN HARMON

Biased

To the Editor:

A more biased editorial (May 4) I have ever heard. First, the homeowners, millions of them, are voting "Yes" on Prop. 13 to save their homes from governmental spending and that is no pipe dream.

THE STATE has $8 billion out of income taxes to help the schools. As for the inventory tax, only Ronald Reagan helped business on that. Democrats always voted against a reduction until it was politically expedient to set a Behr Trap for the voters.

For once the people should win. A majority voted for the death penalty; a politician denied them. A majority wanted to keep the Panama Canal; the two elected Senators denied them. In reference to the two bond issues, they were not for essential needs. For once, we would like to win.

CARL C. KLASS

Unhappy Namesake

To the Editor:

My name is John Manfredi, a rather uncommon name in these parts until last week. Since then, however, it appears that there are at least two of the same name around.

One John Manfredi is involved in a law suit filed by San Clemente Mayor Bill Walker and councilwoman Donna Wilkinson. The other John Manfredi is me, owner of Trotter Sign Company and a member of the San Clemente Chamber of Commerce.

I would like very much to make it clear that there are two Manfredis and would like to help your readers distinguish between the two. Unfortunately, I don't know the other Manfredi nor do I know what he looks like. However, I will describe myself and give your readers my background. I hope the other does the same.

I AM MALE, white, 5'8" tall, weighing 180 pounds, not counting my black moustache. I am 38 years old. One may readily recognize me by the standard work clothes I generally wear. These clothes are necessary because as owner of Trotter Sign Company, I design the signs, layout the lettering, do some installing and repair, and sweep the floor after everyone has gone home. (I do not do windows!)

The fact that my company occasionally does work for Mr. Bill Walker and his firm, and that I also support him, Donna Wilkinson and Roy Hamm adds nothing to my appearance, but, I feel, does point to good judgment.

Therefore, I would appreciate if your readers ever see or meet the above described John Manfredi on the street, in a restaurant, or at a job site, please wave or say hello. If not, and if this mistaken identity continues, I may be forced to change my name to John Smith.

Sex Attitudes

To the Editor:

In his diatribe against the homophile (Mailbox, May 3), the good George W. Kent overlooks evidence that he should be aware of or within availability to as a University of California, Irvine, professor of Comparative Cultures.

According to the Sex Information & Education Council of the United States, one of the nation's most respected authorities on the subject of sex: "Anthropological studies show that in cultures that tolerate homosexual activity all men participate in it as well as in heterosexual activity. In fact, the evidence from comparative zoology suggests that sexual attraction to both sexes is the norm and that exclusive heterosexuality is culturally imposed."

Dr. Wainwright Churchill, Director of the Philadelphia Mental Health Clinic's Psychoanalysis Department states that "in complete contrast to the attitude of Western civilization after the rise of Christianity, the pagans believed that sexual passion enobled every relationship (and) . . . beauty . . . was surrounded by an aura of religious awe. The young of both sexes were encouraged to cultivate whatever natural beauty they had through excercise, sports and gymnastics (and) the human body was revered as the most beautiful of all nature's creations.

"THESE attitudes were partly responsible for the pagan attitude toward homosexuality. It was not felt that sexual feelings would spoil a friendship nor that they were reserved for only . . . procreativity nor was it felt that masculine beauty should be appreciated only by women and feminine beauty only by men.

"The sexes were not polarized in the pagan mind. (They) believed that all human beings possessed both feminine and masculine attributes . . . that man, in his original form, was a bisexual creature.

"If exclusive heterosexuality was rare among them, so was exclusive homosexuality. People were not expected to choose between two mutually exclusive ways of loving."

1,000 Protest Repeal of Wichita Rights Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,000 chanting San Franciscans, many of them homosexuals, marched through city streets in protest just hours after voters in Wichita, Kan. repealed a gay rights ordinance. (Related stories, A4, A12)

The protest Tuesday night was peaceful, police said.

"WE HAD WORD there would be a protest as soon as the Wichita vote started coming through," said Officer Elsen Broich.

The march appeared to be a combination protest over the Wichita vote and a statewide initiative that, if approved by voters in November, would let school districts fire or refuse to hire avowed homosexuals or those who support gay lifestyles.

THE MARCHERS, swelling to number about 1,000 by 11 p.m., chanted "Wichita means fight back," "Civil rights or civil war," and other slogans as they strode 10 and 15 abreast from Castro Street down busy Market Street, then up Polk Street and over to Union Square. Castro and Polk streets are predominantly gay neighborhoods.

Earlier in the day, a Wichita ordinance barring discrimination against homosexuals was overwhelmingly repealed by a more than 4-1 margin. Two weeks ago, when a similar ordinance was overturned in St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco homosexuals staged a similar but smaller march, police said.

A city ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals was just recently approved here by the board of supervisors, without controversy. There has been no move to repeal that ordinance.

Smog Stations Hit For 'Deficiencies'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A California auditor general's report says nearly two-thirds of the state's auto smog inspection stations are deficient, and official lamp and brake stations are hardly ever inspected.

The report, out Tuesday, recommended that the Bureau of Automotive Repair increase its staff to take care of the problems.

BUT CONSUMER Affairs Director Richard Spohn, whose department administers the bureau, said the report contained "numerous false statements, half-truths and distortions."

The bureau also licenses most auto repair shops and mediates consumer complaints. Some of its operations are paid by license and registration fees.

Deficiencies cited by the report included failure to have proper tools for inspection and engine tune-ups, failure to employ a licensed pollution device installer, and failure to keep up with the latest pollution control technology.

Porn Films Jail Pair

IMPERIAL BEACH (AP) — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for investigation of making pornographic films involving young boys after police confiscated more than 100 sex-oriented films and slides at his apartment, officers said.

Bail for Archie Murray, 39, a fourth-grade teacher at Westview Elementary School, was set Tuesday at $4,250, Imperial Beach police said.

Richard Rollings, 18, a security guard identified as Murray's roommate, also was arrested Monday when police armed with a search warrant arrived.

Jarvis Drops Libel Claim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis says he'll dismiss his $800,000 libel claim filed against the Grossmont High School District over a story printed in a student newspaper.

The story appeared March 10 in the Granite Hills High School Clarion and was written by 16-year-old Brad Teaby. It tried to explain the controversial property tax limitation initiative on the June 6 ballot.

But part of Teaby's story alleged Jarvis and Gann were "prominent real estate owners" who stood to reap "several million dollars" in tax savings if the proposition passed.

15 Escape Air Crash

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Twelve passengers and three crew members walked away from a twin-engined transport plane that skidded an estimated 1,500 feet on its belly, an official reports.

STATE

The accident shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday involved an executive-type turbo-prop plane of the Santa Barbara-based Apollo Airways.

The executive director of the airport, James Ellingsworth, said "It did leave the ground by about 20 feet when, for some reason, the pilot aborted. He set it down on its belly and it slid probably 1,500 feet." He said he didn't see any obvious injuries.

Dinner Swells Fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has pulled off the most lucrative fund raiser ever staged by a Democratic gubernatorial incumbent, convincing 1,000 people to contribute more than $300,000 toward his reelection campaign.

After all the bills are paid, the $250-per-plate dinner Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel will have netted Brown between $210,000 and $250,000, said campaign manager Gray Davis.

Brown has collected $700,000 so far, Davis said, and hopes to stretch that to at least $1 million before the June 6 primary, in which he is unopposed.

Drink Draws Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Woodland Hills restaurant where television actor Dan Haggerty was burned by a flaming drink has been fined $1,500 for fire code violations.

Representatives of The Red Onion pleaded no contest to two charges of serving a flaming drink and one charge of over-crowding before Municipal Court Judge David Kennick Tuesday.

One of the flaming drink violations occurred Nov. 19, 1977, the same night Haggerty, who portrays Grizzly Adams, was burned. However, Los Angeles Fire Department Inspector Gene Lindley said none of the charges related to the Haggerty incident.

Gates Makes Apology

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police Chief Daryl Gates has made a public apology for making a statement last week in which he called Latino police officers "lazy" and "unmotivated."

Gates delivered the prepared apology Tuesday shortly after Chicano groups gathered outside police headquarters at Parker Center.

Princess, Lord Snowdon to Divorce

PRINCESS MARGARET, LORD SNOWDEN TO DIVORCE
After Stormy Marriage, a Rift in the Royal Family

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their mariage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remarriage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to

Princess' Career Often Controversial

LONDON (AP) — From her impetuous childhood through her precocious teen-age years to her stormy middle age, Britain's Princess Margaret swirled through life trailing controversy over her men and her deportment.

The announcement today from Buckingham Palace that she and husband Antony Armstrong-Jones would seek a divorce after nearly two years of separation was only the latest episode in a life that seemed the very stuff of novels.

MARGARET WAS BORN IN August 1930, and made her first public appearance at the age of 6 at her father's coronation. Since then, she has been continually in the public eye — often with heavy consequences for her private life.

She was a lively child, known to cartwheel down Buckingham Palace halls, defy orders and make scenes.

"My first memory," she said, "is half-falling out of my pram baby carriage. A great to-do. I imagine I must have wanted to be noticed."

She was a capable horsewoman, spoke a number of languages, and loved piano. Both Margaret and her older sister, later Queen Elizabeth II, were proficient swimmers.

BUT WHEN THEY WERE awarded a lifesaving certificate together, Margaret became so angry she picked up her sister's dog, threw it into Buckingham Palace's lake, and then, clad in her best party dress, jumped in to rescue the drenches animal.

"Margaret always wants what I want," her sister once said.

"When my sister and I were growing up," explained Margaret, "she was made out to be the goody-goody one. That was boring so the press tried to make out I was wicked as hell."

Margaret blossomed into a precocious teen-ager and jet-setter, a beautiful young woman with violet eyes, brown hair and flawless skin. She was surrounded by the British press and idolized by the royalty-loving public during the austere post World War II years.

"THE PLEASURE-SEEKING PRINCESS," headline writers called her.

She was always off to nightclubs trailing dukes, guard officers and other eligible young men. There were pictures of her smoking in public. Her elegant cigarette holders became famous.

In her mid-20s, her ill-fated romance with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend brought her widespread sympathy: Townsend, a Battle of Britain hero, was equerry to Margaret's father King George VI. But the dashing fighter ace had been divorced, and that brought family and church pressure that eventually forced the princess to renounce him.

Four and a half years later, in May 1960, she married globe-trotting photographer Armstrong-Jones — later elevated to the peerage as Lord Snowdon — after a secret love affair. Millions watched their wedding ceremony at Westminster Abbey or on television.

THEIR OFTEN ROCKY MARRIAGE enthralled Britons but effectively ended 16 years and two children later with a separation.

"I don't see myself marrying again," the Princess said in 1977. "It would probably be too much of a bore."

Her latest man, and suitably her latest scandal, was Roddy Llewellyn, a socialite and former hippie turned aspiring supper-club crooner.

Margaret came in for sharp criticism in Parliament, in public

Steaming Out

SS Catalina Heads South

A Long Beach towing firm confirmed today that the S.S. Catalina, which slipped out of Newport Harbor late Tuesday night, is headed for San Diego.

A spokesman for Jones Tug and Barge said the 301-foot "Great White Steamer" was to arrive in San Diego this afternoon.

But the U.S. Coast Guard in San Diego said they haven't heard a word from the ship, which left Newport Harbor a day after its docking permit expired.

Port of San Diego authorities said they'd also had no contact with the ship, which Newport Beach authorities said has permission to use a San Diego berth for 60 days.

The vessel was brought to Newport April 25 for a boat show.

"It's gone, thank God," said Dave Harshbarger, Newport Beach's director of marine safety.

He said boat show promoter Duncan McIntosh arranged for the boat to be towed out of the harbor at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Hyman Singer of Beverly Hills, the ship's owner, is embroiled in a dispute with the City of Los Angeles over $30,000 in docking and towing fees officials claim he owes that city for berthing the big vessel.

In its heyday, the Catalina was the chief means of transporting tourists from the mainland to Avalon on Catalina Island.

Irvine to File Lawsuit Against Water District

Legality Test Planned

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A constitutional test will be made of the legality of landowner dominance of the Irvine Ranch Water District board of directors after the Irvine City Council voted Tuesday to file lawsuit against the district in Superior Court.

The vote to sue the district, and try to stop a scheduled landowner election June 19 that would authorize the district to issue $1 billion in bonds for water and sewer projects, was unanimous.

The council directed Roger Grable, assistant city attorney, to file suit challenging the proposed bond authorization on two grounds.

First, the council alleged the IRWD failed to comply with requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act, because no environmental impact report was prepared to analyze impacts of the drawing-board projects the bonds would finance.

Second, the council declared the IRWD board of directors, to which only two of its seven members are publicly elected, is unconstitutionally composed, in violation of the one man, one vote principle.

Five of the IRWD directors are elected by landowner vote. Within the district, the Irvine Company owns more than 90 percent of the undeveloped land. The election amounts to an ap-

OFFICIALS HURRY SNAKEBITE VICTIM FROM MARINE HELICOPTER TO HOSPITAL
Helmar Tschugg of San Clemente Was Struck While Hiking on Santiago Peak

Snake Victim Rescue Sets Pace for Year

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

County paramedics and Marine Corps Search and Rescue teamed up Tuesday to rush a rattlesnake-bite victim by helicopter to Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo, from Santiago Peak in Cleveland National Forest.

It was an effort expected to be repeated several times this year, county officials agree, because 1978 is expected to be a dangerous rattlesnake season.

Tuesday's victim, Helmar Tschugg, 36, of 129 Avenida Mariposa, San Clemente, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital intensive care unit.

Villa Park-based paramedics said Tschugg and a companion were in the Cleveland National Forest hiking when a snake struck him on the right ankle.

The two walked a half hour to the peak to contact electronics technicians who service relay equipment there. They, paramedics said, called the County Fire Department.

Tschugg was the second rattler victim treated at Mission Community Hospital Tuesday. Four-year-old Aaron Johnson of Mission Viejo was bitten when he stuck his hand down a gopher

Non-teaching Pact Slated for Hearing

A public hearing on a proposal for a new working contract for 600 non-teaching employees of the Irvine Unified School District is scheduled at 7:30 tonight.

The board of education meets at Venado Middle School, 4 Deerfield Ave., in the music room.

The employee group is asking for a salary increase of about seven percent. The school board, in a counter-proposal, left open the question of salary, pending the outcome of the June 6 primary election and the vote on the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative.

If the measure passes, district officials estimate school revenues would be cut some 46 percent.

Other negotiating points of the employee group proposal include formation of an agency (union) shop. Employees would be required to pay dues, or if they preferred otherwise, to pay an equivalent amount into scholarship funds.

Employees also are asking that arbitration of employee-employer disputes be binding

Salaries for the non-teaching, classified employees currently range from $563 a month for a food service worker, to a senior construction engineer's high pay of $1,648 a month.

Another Shot As Terrorism Shakes Italy

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services will be held according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. The day of the funeral was not announced.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

ROME STREET HONORS MARTYRS

ROME (AP) — Via Mario Fani, the tree-shaded street where the Red Brigades kidnapped Aldo Moro and killed his five bodyguards March 16, was renamed by the city today the "Street of the March 16 Martyrs."

Mario Fani was an educator.

County OKs Noise Gear For Airport

Orange County Airport will be getting $199,579 worth of new noise monitoring equipment, supervisors decided Tuesday.

The board also will decide next month whether to spend another $61,650 to expand the monitoring system to El Toro Marine Corps Air Station as well.

A contract for the monitoring equipment was awarded to Tracor Inc. the low of two bidders for the noise systems.

Supervisors decided last year to replace the existing noise monitoring equipment. The new system will be financed with airport revenue and a $65,593 state grant.

A report to supervisors said installing the noise monitors around El Toro could help in land use planning for areas impacted by high jet noise levels.

However, expanding the system could force the hiring of additional county employes, the report said.

North State Temps Drop

By The Associated Press

Temperatures will continue to drop today in parts of Northern California as winds pick up and scattered thundershowers threaten mountain areas.

The National Weather Service predicted gusts of up to 30 mph in the Stockton and San Francisco Bay areas. A small-craft advisory was issued.

A slight chance of afternoon and evening showers or scattered thunderstorms was predicted for the Sierra, the Mount Shasta area and the northeast corner of the state.

Class Fees Mulled

Budget Sparks Saddleback Concern

Saddleback College classes — currently offered to district residents at no charge — could have fees attached to them next year under guidelines proposed by Trustee Robert Price.

Residents can be charged for classes which are not taken for credit toward receiving a college degree, Price said.

The classes he believes the district could begin charging students to attend are "self improvement courses" such as tennis, arts and crafts and recreation.

"It's kind of shifting more things into the community services area," Price said today. "The community is apparently willing to pay a minimal fee for worthwhile classes so we could move some of our existing courses into that area."

Price said his suggestion was prompted by concern over possible budget cutbacks as a result of diminishing district revenues should the Jarvis-Gann amendment be approved by voters.

"Right now, tennis is free because it's in the curriculum for creditation," Price explained. "If we shift it into community services, we might be able to break even on the cost of the course through charging fees."

And that would ease the burden on tax revenues necessary to run regular college degree programs, Price said.

"The next year for the college will be a test of survival," the trustee said. "Even though we are not in as bad shape as some districts, it will be a severe and austere period."

Price also is proposing to "immediately curtail all plans to operate a north campus for the 1978-79 school year."

And he suggests that college officials figure next year's budget funding levels at a rate less than the existing tax rate and assessed valuation increase estimates.

That means a potential reduction of almost $2 million in the college's 1978-79 budget.

"That keeps us with pretty much the same program we have operating now," Price said. He indicated the cutback would also protect the district from cutbacks as a result of the Behr bill.

Trustees are scheduled to discuss Price's suggested guidelines and next year's budget at a special meeting Monday.

The session will begin at 3 p.m. in the Library/ Classroom complex, 28000 Marguerite Parkway, Room 105, in Mission Viejo.

hole, officials said. He is reported in good condition.

That's not too unusual.

"From one end of this county to the other, we are turning up rattlesnakes," said Joe Oliver, Orange County's chief animal control officer.

Oliver's training officer, Dick Robillard, said several factors contribute to the increased snake activity — a larger adult population, construction in areas formerly inhabited by snakes and drenching rain that flooded holes and burrows in more remote canyon areas.

Oliver said his department normally receives about one or two snake calls weekly at this time of year. This year, though, he is getting about 10 a week.

Robillard said about 30 to 40 percent of the calls result in finding rattlesnakes. They are decapitated on the spot. Harmless reptiles, he said, are relocated to remote areas.

Areas expected to be most snake infested this summer — and especially this fall — are the developing south-county neighborhoods and Anaheim Hills.

While the snake problem will be difficult this summer, animal control officers said, it will be worse this fall when thirsty snakes seek out water in backyards and swimming pools.

"All I can add at this point," said Robillard, "is that we seem to have a bumper crop of adult rattlesnakes this year."

And they could, he speculated, turn up near south-county beaches fed by streams that have washed the snakes toward the ocean during heavy rains

DIVORCE AGREEMENT. . .

comment about Lord Snowdon."

Lord Snowdon has been linked by gossip columnists to assistant movie producer Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm. Critics, including Church of England clerics, said the affair was damaging to the image of the royal family, and some said Llewellyn was distracting Margaret from her royal duties.

It was disclosed last month that Margaret intended to continue her public life, and the implication was she would not see Llewellyn so often, at least not publicly.

In the mid-50s, Margaret suffered her first disappointment in love. She was forced under pressure to abandon her relationship with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend because he was a divorced man.

Her intention to divorce Lord Snowdon was announced eight days before the Church of England is expected to change its rules and allow divorced persons to remarry in church. The church currently allows only a service of blessing.

The change will remove a serious obstacle to the remarriage of members of the royal family.

Because the queen is officially the temporal head of the Church of England, the church prohibition was one reason royal observers believed Margaret and Snowdon would never divorce despite their legal separation.

Margaret's uncle, the uncrowned King Edward VIII, abdicated in 1936 because he wanted to marry the divorced American Wallis Warfield Simpson. There was violent opposition from the Church of England and the British government of the day.

and among Church of England clerics for her friendship with Llewellyn, with whom she frequently was seen and in whose company she took vacations on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

It was announced last month that Margaret would continue her public life — the implication being that she would not see Llewellyn as often at least in public — and the Buckingham Palace announcement today said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

Young Artists To Be Judged For Festival

Judging of Orange County school children's art will be held this weekend to select art that will be exhibited this summer at the Laguna Beach Festival of Arts Junior Art Gallery.

Children from kindergarten to high school throughout Orange County are participating in the annual school art competition, and a selected group of 150 award-winning works will be displayed at the Festival of Arts.

Chairman for the junior art exhibit at the Festival is Marge Skelton of Laguna Beach. The Junior Art Gallery will be located in the lower portion of the Forum Theater on the festival grounds during the 43rd season, which runs from July 11 to Aug. 27 this year.

Women Take Over Newspaper Office

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — It could be a dormitory, with clothing, guitars and books lying around, but the 50 women in the four rooms are a force of occupation, not residence.

For 10 days, the women have barricaded themselves in the basement office of the Daily Collegian, the 20,000-circulation student newspaper of the University of Massachusetts, protesting what they claim is a lack of women's news.

Their barricade is made of desks, chairs and couches, which double as beds.

They take sponge baths in two adjacent bathrooms, using soap, towels, toothbrushes and toothpaste smuggled in by sympathizers. Supporters have also brought in food and hot plates.

"It's been very encouraging," said one sophomore demonstrator. "The spirit is very high. I personally knew almost none of the women here and I've gotten very close to all of them."

The object of their ire, the "male-dominated" staff of the Collegian, continues to publish, but in abbreviated editions put together in temporary quarters about a five-minute walk from the barricaded office in the Campus Center Complex. A security guard sits outside the new office.

Final exams begin in less than two weeks and the paper is scheduled to shut down next week for summer vacation. Some protesters leave briefly each day to attend classes, but say they will stay in the office into the summer to press their demands.

Those demands are for one full page of women's news each day, with its content edited independently of the rest of the newspaper, and a women's department editor selected by the campus women's community, not the newspaper staff.

Associate editor Beth Segers opposes the protest: "If the women had looked at who actually puts out the paper each night they'd see that 50 percent of the news editors are women, all of the copy editors are women and three out of five issue editors are women."

Jet Skier Facing Hit, Run Charge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man riding backwards on a mini-motorboat called a Jet Ski mowed down a man in a rowboat on Mission Bay and authorities are seeking a waterborne hit-and-run driver.

City lifeguard Don Ashton put it this way:

Rower Mike Daly was paddling along Tuesday when the Jet Ski rider, unable to see because he was riding the craft backwards, cruised over Daly's boat. The mishap did about $100 damage to the boat and inflicted minor injuries to Daly.

After stopping to help right the boat and get Daly to shore, the skier got back on his machine and roared away, thus leaving the scene of an accident, presumably a violation of the state penal code.

"There is a very good possibility" a hit-and-run charge will be filed as a result from the accident, Ashton said, noting Daly got the Jet Ski's registration number and gave it to authorities.

WATER DISTRICT SUIT. . .

pointment of directors by the company.

The council action came after a one-hour session that was closed to the public.

Councilman Larry Agran made the motion to sue.

"It's largely a question," he said in an interview today "of whether you can undertake a project of such large proportions without the appropriate environmental impact studies, and without giving the citizens of our city a proper opportunity to fully consider such a massive undertaking.

"The second issue is a question of whether such an undemocratically constituted board constitutionally has the authority to commit the city, for decades into the future, on the question of water policy."

"Underlying the whole case," Agran added, is the far more fundamental question of who controls developmental policy in the city of Irvine.

"Will developmental policy be fashioned by duly elected representatives — through our general plan adopted by the City Council — or will it be dictated by the actions of an undemocratically and unconstitutionally constituted water board?"

Councilman David Silis, also contacted today, concurred. "The IRWD," he said, "is one of the last vestiges of land baron rule in the West.

"Next month, one man — the president of the Irvine Company — will cast over 90 percent of the votes to authorize a $1 billion dollar public bond issue.

"We are simply asking the court to give the other residents in the community an equal voice in their affairs."

Lansing Eberling, president of the IRWD board, said today he was "disappointed" by the council action.

"I thought we were communicating with them," he said. "I also thought that adding two new members on the board who were publicly elected was the beginning of a board more publicly represented."

The board plans an eventual transition of power by adding new, publicly elected members as water use figures demonstrate that residents are using more water than landowners.

"The idea of transition," Eberling said, "serves the needs of all the parties. I think it's a fair way of doing it."

Eberling said water use projections indicate there will be a public majority on the board about 1984.

He said the board position on the environmental issue is that impact reports are not needed until actual projects are proposed for building.

Eberling has called an emergency session of the water board for 2 p.m. Saturday to discuss the city lawsuit. The session will be closed to the public, under provisions of the Brown Act which allow public bodies to meet secretly to discuss litigation.

Actor Urges Reform Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Robertson, whose missing $10,000 check sparked an investigation into corruption in the movie industry, urged his fellow actors Tuesday to dare to speak out on wrongdoing in Hollywood.

"It is truth, no matter how difficult, that will arrest corporate crime in our industry and set us free," Robertson told about 400 members of the New York Screen Actors Guild.

NB to Detail Traffic Phasing Policy

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport Beach's newly enacted traffic phasing policy produced a lot of unanswered questions and city officials were huddling today to try to work out the answers.

City councilmen approved the measure Monday. It will limit building of those projects that won't increase traffic congestion on major city streets.

Local developers aren't happy about the policy. They say it amounts to a moratorium on building in Newport Beach.

"It kind of makes the game not worth playing," said Kevin Hanson of Emkay Development Company.

The policy was taken from a proposed initiative measure being circulated by a group known as the Legal Environmental Analysis Fund (LEAF). Members of LEAF are pleased about the council action.

Jean Watt, organizer of LEAF and president of Stop Polluting Our Newport (SPON), said the passage of the policy and the statement by Mayor Paul Ryckoff that he would seek an identical city ordinance, takes the pressure off her group's petition effort.

She said the petition work would continue while her organizations evaluate the City Council's efforts.

"We'll have to wait and see what happens with the ordinance," she said.

Ryckoff said his policy and the pending ordinance will be copies of LEAF's initiative which prohibits the issuing of a building permit for any project of 10 or more residential units or 10,000 square feet of commercial or industrial space.

(An average Newport Beach restaurant, or dinner house, is about 10,000 square feet.)

Exceptions to the prohibition can be granted only if the project does not add more than one percent to the traffic on congested roadways, or if its benefits to the community outweigh its traffic impact.

City Traffic Engineer Bill Darnell is charged with identifying the congested roadways using criteria set forth in the policy and he is responsible for figuring out how much traffic a proposed project would produce.

City Manager Robert Wynn said the purpose of today's

PRINCESS MARGARET, LORD SNOWDEN TO DIVORCE
After Stormy Marriage, a Rift in the Royal Family

Princess Margaret, Snowdon to Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their mariage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remar riage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to comment about Lord Snowdon."

Princess Meg's Life Often Controversial

LONDON (AP) — From her impetuous childhood through her precocious teen-age years to her stormy middle age, Britain's Princess Margaret swirled through life trailing controversy over her men and her deportment.

The announcement today from Buckingham Palace that she and husband Antony Armstrong-Jones would seek a divorce after nearly two years of separation was only the latest episode in a life that seemed the very stuff of novels.

MARGARET WAS BORN IN August 1930, and made her first public appearance at the age of 6 at her father's coronation. Since then, she has been continually in the public eye — often with heavy consequences for her private life.

She was a lively child, known to cartwheel down Buckingham Palace halls, defy orders and make scenes

"My first memory," she said, "is half-falling out of my pram baby carriage. A great to-do. I imagine I must have wanted to be noticed."

She was a capable horsewoman, spoke a number of languages, and loved piano. Both Margaret and her older sister, later Queen Elizabeth II, were proficient swimmers.

BUT WHEN THEY WERE awarded a lifesaving certificate together, Margaret became so angry she picked up her sister's dog, threw it into Buckingham Palace's lake, and then, clad in her best party dress, jumped in to rescue the drenches animal.

"Margaret always wants what I want," her sister once said.

"When my sister and I were growing up," explained Margaret, "she was made out to be the goody-goody one. That was boring so the press tried to make out I was wicked as hell."

Margaret blossomed into a precocious teen-ager and jet-setter, a beautiful young woman with violet eyes, brown hair and flawless skin. She was surrounded by the British press and idolized by the royalty-loving public during the austere post-World War II years

"THE PLEASURE-SEEKING PRINCESS," headline writers called her.

She was always off to nightclubs trailing dukes, guard officers and other eligible young men. There were pictures of her smoking in public. Her elegant cigarette holders became famous.

418 N-M Employees To Get Pink Slips

Trustees' Decision Painful

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Newport-Mesa Unified School District trustees unanimously ordered notices of dismissal mailed to 58 teachers and 360 non-teaching employees Tuesday because of declining enrollment in Harbor Area schools.

"It's a terrible action we have to take," said school board President Donald Smallwood, following a verbal protest by Don Kimble, president of the Newport-Mesa Education Association (NMEA), which represents the district 1,200-plus teachers.

'We have looked, we have listened, we have tried," said Smallwood. "There is not any among us (trustees) that has any sense that this is a good deal."

Trustee Carol Martin stressed that the cutbacks aren't related to the possible passage of the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative.

The dismissal notices, to be in the hands of teachers by Monday, are due to steady declines in enrollment, about 2,800 students over the past two years, district officials said.

NMEA chief Kimble asked, "Why not take advantage of the decline and reduce class size? You should consider people first and things second in your budget priorities. '

Unlike the action to mail dismissal notices to teachers, the school board's decision to send similar notices to 360 classified (non-teaching) employees does not mean that all 360 will be without jobs next year.

District officials estimate that, actually, about 150 classified employees won't be rehired.

The district has released a list of non-teaching employees with the least seniority in their respective jobs, including 205 instructional aides, 86 teachers' aides and 56 noon supervisors.

Re-employment for next school year will be based on seniority and any retirements that may occur in the meantime.

District officials said the cutbacks are necessary to avoid

County paramedics and Marine Corps Search and Rescue teamed up Tuesday to rush a rattlesnake-bite victim by helicopter to Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo, from Santiago Peak in Cleveland National Forest.

It was an effort expected to be repeated several times this year, county officials agree, because 1978 is expected to be a dangerous rattlesnake season.

Tuesday's victim, Helmar Tschugg, 36, of 129 Avenida Mariposa, San Clemente, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital intensive care unit.

Irvine Council OKs Suit Against IRWD

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A constitutional test will be made of the legality of landowner dominance of the Irvine Ranch Water District board of directors after the Irvine City Council voted Tuesday to file lawsuit against the district in Superior Court.

The vote to sue the district, and try to stop a scheduled landowner election June 19 that would authorize the district to issue $1 billion in bonds for water and sewer projects, was unanimous.

The council directed Roger Grable, assistant city attorney, to file suit challenging the proposed bond authorization on two grounds.

First, the council alleged the IRWD failed to comply with requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act, because no environmental impact report was prepared to analyze impacts of the drawing-board projects the bonds would finance.

Second, the council declared the IRWD board of directors, to which only two of its seven members are publicly elected, is unconstitutionally composed, in violation of the one man, one vote principle.

Five of the IRWD directors are elected by landowner vote. Within the district, the Irvine Company owns more than 90 percent of the undeveloped land. The election amounts to an appointment of directors by the company.

The council action came after a one-hour session that was closed to the public.

Councilman Larry Agran made the motion to sue.

"It's largely a question," he said in an interview today "of whether you can undertake a project of such large proportions without the appropriate environmental impact studies, and without giving the citizens of our city a proper opportunity to fully consider such a massive un-

Steaming Out

SS Catalina Heads South

A Long Beach towing firm confirmed today that the S.S. Catalina, which slipped out of Newport Harbor late Tuesday night, is headed for San Diego.

A spokesman for Jones Tug and Barge said the 301-foot "Great White Steamer" was to arrive in San Diego this afternoon.

But the U.S. Coast Guard in San Diego said they haven't heard a word from the ship, which left Newport Harbor a day after its docking permit expired.

Port of San Diego authorities said they'd also had no contact with the ship, which Newport Beach authorities said has permission to use a San Diego berth for 60 days

The vessel was brought to Newport April 25 for a boat show.

"It's gone, thank God," said Dave Harshbarger, Newport Beach's director of marine safety.

He said boat show promoter Duncan McIntosh arranged for the boat to be towed out of the harbor at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Hyman Singer of Beverly Hills, the ship's owner, is embroiled in a dispute with the City of Los Angeles over $30,000 in docking and towing fees officials claim he owes that city for berthing the big vessel.

In its heyday, the Catalina was the chief means of transporting tourists from the mainland to Avalon on Catalina Island

Educator's Award

McNally Principal Coleman Surprised

It was a perfect setup that lured Jack Coleman, popular principal of McNally Continuation High School in Costa Mesa, to Tuesday night's meeting of Newport-Mesa school trustees.

He received a phone call Tuesday morning from Bailey Daugherty, principal of Silverado Continuation School in the Saddleback Unified District.

Coleman was told that McNally's director of student activities, Dorothy Hauser, was to receive the second annual Orange County Administrators' award for "Continuation Educator of the Year."

So naturally, Coleman made arrangements to have many of Mrs. Hauser's fellow teachers and students in attendance. Coleman also kicked in $10 for a bouquet to present to her.

"I kept wondering why she wasn't talking to me at the meeting," Coleman said today.

Most likely, Mrs. Hauser was trying to supress the laughter that broke out when Daugherty announced that Coleman was the award winner.

"That's the damnedest trick I ever heard of," Coleman told trustees. "If I'd have known I would have dressed up," said Coleman, who was wearing a blue leisure suit minus tie.

"We thought you were," quipped one trustee.

Daugherty said the award to Coleman would have been presented in February but was delayed until the district worked out a final decision on the relocation of the downtown Costa Mesa facility.

The continuation school will be moving to Monte Vista Elementary School site in Costa Mesa at the start of the 1979 school year.

The award is now in Coleman's hands as the best continuation school educator in the county.

And yes, he got back the $10 he donated for Mrs. Hauser's flowers.

Beacon Bay Lease

Negotiations To Reopen?

Newport Beach city councilmen are laying the groundwork for the renegotiation of the Beacon Bay lease. Two committees have been established to work on the complicated problem.

The lease for the 72-home waterfront development expires at the end of 1987 and councilmen are eager to get a better price for the property that now pays them a meager $9,726 a year.

Renegotiation has been stymied because about 20 of the homes occupy land designated as tidelands and state law prohibits permanent residences on tidelands.

A bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Ron Cordova, D-El Toro, will remove that obstacle if the city can acquire some land to add to the Upper Bay Ecological Preserve.

One of the committees appointed Monday by Mayor Paul Ryckoff will work on that acquisition. Its members are Mayor Pro Tem Ray Williams, a former president of the Friends of Newport Bay, which aided in state purchase of the Upper Bay, and Jackie Heather, whose council district encompasses much of the Upper Bay.

The second committee, consisting of Ryckoff and Councilman Paul Hummel, will begin meeting with Beacon Bay homeowners to discuss the lease itself.

The homeowners hold individual subleases granted by the master lessee, the J. A. Beek Company. Representatives of the Beek firm also will be involved in the negotiations.

The value to be earned from the new lease has not been set, according to City Manager Robert Wynn who told councilmen there has been no recent appraisal of the property.

"Our last appraisal was made 10 years ago and the staff's only position at present is to get fair market value," he said.

Terror Mounts in Italy

Executive Shot as Moro Death Protests Rise

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services were held today according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. About 400 persons attended the service.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged away in chains.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

In a spontaneous burst of emotion, millions of Italians poured out of factories, shops, offices and schools Tuesday to demonstrate against terrorism after Moro's body — chained and riddled with 11 bullets — was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome.

dertaking.

"The second issue is a question of whether such an undemocratically constituted board constitutionally has the authority to commit the city, for decades into the future, on the question of water policy."

"Underlying the whole case," Agran added, is the far more fundamental question of who controls developmental policy in the city of Irvine.

"Will developmental policy be fashioned by duly elected representatives — through our general plan adopted by the City Council — or will it be dictated by the actions of an undemocratically and unconstitutionally constituted water board?"

Councilman David Sills, also contacted today, concurred. "The IRWD," he said, "is one of the last vestiges of land baron rule in the West.

"Next month, one man — the president of the Irvine Company — will cast over 90 percent of the votes to authorize a $1 billion dollar public bond issue.

"We are simply asking the court to give the other residents in the community an equal voice in their affairs."

Lansing Eberling, president of the IRWD board, said today he was "disappointed" by the council action.

"I thought we were communicating with them," he said. "I also thought that adding two new members on the board who were publicly elected was the beginning of a board more publicly represented."

The board plans an eventual transition of power by adding new, publicly elected members as water use figures demonstrate that residents are using more water than landowners.

"The idea of transition," Eberling said, "serves the needs of all the parties. I think it's a fair way of doing it."

POLICY DETAILED. . .

meeting was to work out the details of Darnell's assignment and to address conflicts created by projects that are about to receive building permits, or projects that have permits but are not yet under construction.

Meanwhile, the fate of another new proposal, called the road tax plan, remained in doubt. The proposal was first brought to the City Council Monday.

The plan, which had the backing of developers, called for increasing the financial contributions to road construction in the city. As proposed, the funds could be used to make improvements not necessarily directly related to development, but ones seen as necessary to relieve congestion.

At least two of the city's biggest developers, Emkay and the Irvine Company, remained cautiously optimistic that the plan still could be workable.

Robert Shelton, speaking for Irvine Company President Peter Kremer, said the institution of the traffic phasing policy was "very negative and a deep disappointment to us. There was no expression of encouragement at all to the development community to go forward with the road tax plan."

But like Hanson at Emkay, he said his firm would continue to work with city staff members on the road tax proposal.

One LEAF member who backed the traffic phasing policy said positive programs, such as the road tax plan, now should receive more emphasis.

"We're euphoric about it," said Ed Siebal, a Balboa Island attorney, "but we need to deal even-handedly with the whole community.

"The responsibility is now in our camp to move in a positive direction."

Siebal, who helped write the LEAF initiative, said he will be working with the city attorney's staff to draw up Ryckoff's proposed ordinance.

He said he will also be pushing for "solutions to the problems that produced the need for the policy."

He suggested an informal committee to study the road tax plan, improved bus service, park and ride service and other citywide transportation plans.

PUBLIC PRINCESS. . .

In her mid-20s, her ill-fated romance with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend brought her widespread sympathy: Townsend, a Battle of Britain hero, was equerry to Margaret's father King George VI. But the dashing fighter ace had been divorced, and that brought family and church pressure that eventually forced the princess to renounce him.

Four and a half years later, in May 1960, she married globe-trotting photographer Armstrong-Jones — later elevated to the peerage as Lord Snowdon — after a secret love affair. Millions watched their wedding ceremony at Westminster Abbey or on television.

THEIR OFTEN ROCKY MARRIAGE enthralled Britons but effectively ended 16 years and two children later with a separation.

"I don't see myself marrying again," the Princess said in 1977. "It would probably be too much of a bore."

Her latest man, and suitably her latest scandal, was Roddy Llewellyn, a socialite and former hippie turned aspiring supper-club crooner.

Margaret came in for sharp criticism in Parliament, in public and among Church of England clerics for her friendship with Llewellyn, with whom she frequently was seen and in whose company she took vacations on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

It was announced last month that Margaret would continue her public life — the implication being that she would not see Llewellyn as often at least in public — and the Buckingham Palace announcement today said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

movie producer Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm.

overstaffing.

In addition to the cutbacks in teaching and classified personnel, Superintendent John Nicoll said, there will be five fewer administrators next year.

The dismissal notices to 58 teachers are firm. The action climaxed a two-month series of public hearings and the district's filing of necessary legal documents.

Kimble noted that the 58 teachers account for about 30 full-time positions, adding that the district already has decided not to rehire an additional 55 teachers working under 10-month temporary contracts.

He said the district should have made more extensive cutbacks in administrative staff and that the teachers would be willing to work with reduced supplies.

"The cuts are not in the best interest of the district and the students we serve," said Kimble.

District officials estimate that the cutbacks will save the district $1.7 million in teacher salaries and $690,000 in classified salaries.

Teachers who do not receive the dismissal notices are assured of jobs next year despite the potential passage of the Jarvis-Gann initiative (Proposition 13), trustees said.

Traffic Phasing Hits Developers

It didn't take long for the honeymoon to end in Newport Beach.

Monday, less than a month after the new council was elected and Paul Ryckoff was chosen as mayor, city council members enacted what they describe as a traffic phasing policy. Developers and the city's major land owners say it amounted to a moratorium.

Three of the newly elected council members — the so-called new and green slate of Evelyn Hart, Paul Hummel and Donald Strauss — joined Ryckoff and Ray Williams in voting for the restrictive measure. They made it clear they will follow Monday's action — institution of a policy not bearing the weight of law — with an ordinance containing the same provisions.

The move came as a blow to developers who had been working on reducing future building as part of the drawn-out general plan review and who backed a new plan to pay road development money to the city in advance of construction to finance additions to the city's circulation system.

The passage of the policy was also clearly support for the anti-growth faction. It will save them the time and effort of circulating their initiative petition from which the policy and the pending ordinance are copied.

So much for the spirit of moderation that got so much attention during the campaign.

Avoid Freeway Fight

Not quite a decade ago, the cities of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa found themselves on opposing sides in a dispute over the construction of the Pacific Coast Freeway.

Both cities wanted the freeway built, but Newport Beach residents, who were faced with having the roadway in their city, said it belonged in Costa Mesa. Their neighbors in Costa Mesa didn't agree.

That dispute died along with the freeway in the early '70s, but the specter of it remains and could haunt the current efforts on the Costa Mesa Freeway.

Costa Mesans are working diligently to get CalTrans to make a commitment on completion of the Route 55 freeway through their city to its end at the Newport Beach city line.

Newport officials are having some reservations about the traffic the route could dump onto already overcrowded city streets.

These officials seem to be saying Costa Mesa is going to have to make some street improvements to keep through traffic out of their city as the price for Newport Beach's support of the project.

Costa Mesans seem amenable as long as Newport chips in to pay for the project which would aid the beach city although the work would not be in Newport.

The cities need to work together. The 141,000 residents of both communities don't deserve another Pacific Coast Freeway debacle.

Arts for Everyone

Saturday marks the opening day of Newport Beach's week-long City Arts Festival, an event planned to provide a little something for everyone.

The festival has grown considerably since the days when it used to be a two-day display of paintings on the lawn outside city hall.

This year, the city is co-sponsoring the event with the help of Coastline Community College and the Fashion Island Merchants Association.

The point of Newport Beach's festival is not to copy Laguna Beach's summertime event, but to provide a setting where residents and artists from a variety of fields can interact with one another. It includes not only the visual arts but film and the performing arts as well.

The events themselves will take place throughout the city in locations ranging from the Corona del Mar senior citizens center, to the streets of Balboa Island, to the waters of the bay to Fashion Island.

The city's recently converted Performing Arts Center — it used to be known as the Praise Ye the Lord Church — will be involved in presentation of a children's theater production.

This year's festival promises to be the best yet. It would be a shame for residents not to take advantage of it.

Real Estate Bubble Can Burst

The incapacity of the administration to come up with an anti-inflation policy that a reasonable person can trust will stimulate the flight of depositors from savings banks and other thrift institutions.

Ten years ago rampant corrosive inflation was such an unfamiliar experience that people kept their savings in cash and allowed their purchasing power to be corroded.

After a decade of dedicated inflationists in Congress and the White House, people have come to understand that they're being robbed when the savings and loan association pays 6.5 percent while the government destroys the value of money at the rate of 8 percent and then has the gall to tax the interest from the savings account. People have been taught by politicians that only children save; put it into the bank and the guys in Washington'll steal it.

Thus more and more millions of us are learning that you never lend money, you borrow it. Borrow money today and, with Jimmy Carter in the White House, you'll be able to repay the loan six years from now at 60-cents on the dollar. Solvency is for suckers.

IN THEIR determination to never a lender but a borrower be, many people are going into debt buying real estate. Their reasoning is plausible. In the last few years, through inflation and recession, residential real estate values have held up very well. Stocks and bonds have been a disaster; gold has only made money for a few shrewdies; antiques, jewelry, art and objets d'art, like rare stamps and oriental rugs, demand specialized knowledge, and anyway, you can take a bad beating, even if you've made a good buy, in the event you have to sell in a hurry.

Real estate, especially homes, has had the best track record. They're easy to sell compared to some of the things mentioned above, and the price on residential housing has not only kept pace with inflation, but far outdistanced it. That's why you hear of more and more people refinancing the homes they themselves live in so they can realize the enhanced value of their property immediately. Many of them are taking the money they're getting from refinancing their homes and buying other properties, not to live in but as an investment.

THE DIFFICULTY with that is that rents haven't kept up with housing prices. People are paying $100,000 for the house which sold for $75,000 three years ago in expectation that in three or four years they'll be able to sell for $140,000. In the meantime, they must rent it and a lot of them are discovering the rental price won't even pay the monthly mortgage installment, much less taxes and upkeep.

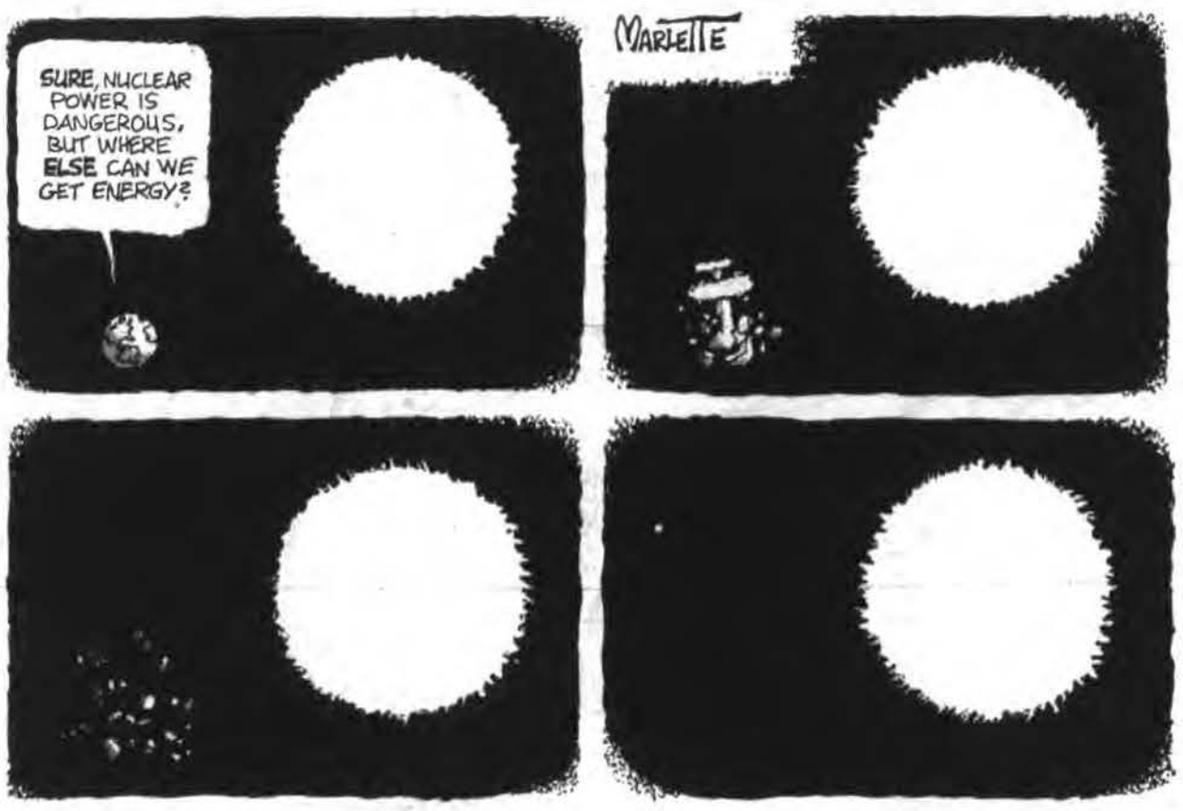

In the banking business they call people who're paying out two or three hundred dollars a month now in hopes of realizing a $40,000 profit down the road "overexposed." Everything depends on the market in residential real estate holding up and there's no guarantee of that. In fact, the signs indicate this is a poor time to buy residential real estate for any purpose other than living in it.

In many parts of the country, residential real estate prices are being driven up not by potential occupiers but by people hoping to sell later at a profit. They're going up so fast it looks like a buyers' panic is on, with people's business judgment swept away by an hysterical conviction that if they don't buy now and buy at almost any price, they'll lose the opportunity of a lifetime.

IF YOU really think real estate prices will continue to shoot up indefinitely with no relationship to the price of other goods and services, then this is the moment to buy at any price. In the real world such a situation is unlikely so that the danger grows that a bad collapse is coming in a couple of years, a collapse which will find many innocent, hard-working people badly dumped on.

The last recession saw that happen with certain kinds of real estate. Second or vacation home prices were murdered as was the office-building segment of the real estate industry. Residential real estate, of course, did well, but that was last time, when prices weren't climbing at the disconcerting rates they are now.

In times like these, remember the new adage, don't seek shelter against inflation where too many others are already huddled.

A Time to Think About World Hunger

To the Editor:

Everyone who has ever heard a baby cry knows that feeding a hungry child is the most natural thing in the world, yet each year 20 million deaths occur from starvation and diseases related to malnutrition.

Since November, 1977, more than 100,000 people across the nation have made a personal commitment to look within themselves to discover what they as individuals can do to end death by starvation in the world within 20 years. These individuals, with their ranks expanding every day, have aligned themselves in the Hunger Project.

THE IDEA of the hunger project is to utilize the power of the individual to create a context . . . something that no organization or government can do. In simple terms, creating a context involves willing something to manifest and then personally committing yourself to make this happen.

The thousands of individuals already enrolled in the Hunger Project have all personally committed themselves to end hunger in 20 years. Individuals across the country have been creating their own forms of participation to make this happen.

For example, the governor of New York declared the month of May as a time for the state of New York to become aware of the problem. In Washington D.C., May 14 has been declared a day of awareness of world hunger. The Laguna Beach Hunger Project weekend of May 13-14 includes a beach run on Main Beach at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Entry fee is $5.

I think I've read everything that's been written on Jarvis-Gann in the last six months. Last night's (May 4) Pilot editorial was the best I've seen! Bravo.

JEAN HARMON

Cut Deadwood

To the Editor:

The increasing almost hysterical outeries by Governor Brown and other politicians on Prop. 13, gives some clue as to their fear that this balloting in June will find the voters solidly giving the Jarvis-Gann measure their support, for a leaner, more efficient government.

Governor Brown's statements about "taking some $8 million 'out of circulation' will cause disaster and unemployment" are fear tactics obviously unsupported by economics. He should know better.

By removing the surplus tax revenues and cutting into the fat public trough to the tune of $8 billion (most now say $7 billion) will be putting money into circulation, and where it can do some productive work.

We have yet to see our tax money work productively. If some of the inefficient workers on the public payroll are lopped off, it will be for beneficial purposes, while the overburdened home owner has some relief.

Public borrowing on the bond market will be affected and the big banks like the Bank of America may not like Prop. 13 for that reason. But public bonds are borrowing by the government and should be also slowed down.

IT SEEMS useless to threaten that our schools will be affected, when they are so inefficient in educating our youngsters now, perhaps clearing out some of the deadwood may result in the hope that the students can at least be educated to read and write before graduating from high school.

As soon as it becomes less onerous to build and maintain houses and apartments, with less tax burden, more shelters will be built and the simple supply at the marketplace will bring down the rentals and thus benefit renters under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

America was built on the free marketplace enterprise economy, not by the politicians making new and more restrictive, more involved laws to restrict free enterprise.

The Jarvis-Gann initiative is a simple direct method of making the Legislature and the administration more efficient and responsive to the people whom they should be serving, and cut out the deadwood in the operation of the public machinery.

Lower Rents

To the Editor:

Jarvis says landlords will lower rents if Prop. 13 passes.

How can he speak for everyone?

I've kept rents on my triplex $50 lower than others in the area for several years. I live in fear of rent controls — getting caught with my rents down. This property is all I have.

I cannot lower rents to please Jarvis the way owners of big rents and commercial properties can. Such landlords are the only ones who would profit by Prop. 13.

Hooray!

To the Editor:

Hooray for Mayor Paul Ryckoff's proposal to limit new development in the city of Newport Beach to those that will not further deteriorate our present disastrous traffic situation. I only recently moved here, but all of us moved here because it is a nice place to live and raise children.

Were the growth of the city left to land developers' decisions, we'd all be climbing over each other in our Mercedes and Sevilles. Let's stop long enough to catch our breath and see where we're going.

R. G. SMITH

Not Justice

To the Editor:

Recently read a newspaper story about the California judge who had seen fit to place an injunction against a mother and father, preventing them from coming within speaking distance of their daughter, or even speaking one word to her.

Grotesquely, he had on several occasions seen fit to place them in jail when they had greeted their daughter peaceably in a public place. Is that really what jails are for?

Such an injunction would appear to be a pitiful violation of civil, moral and human rights.

FEW fair-minded people could say that reconciliation is not hampered by such a cruel and unusual injunction of the civil court, for does not reconciliation come from communication, even if it is but the sight of a once beloved parent—now fallen from our grace?

Denying a mother or father their civil right to move peaceably and freely about in public, in order to deny them a glimpse of their own daughter, also denies the child that glimpse of parental agony, which might be the ultimate salvation of both.

What good is served by such a flawed decree, which offers only stumbling blocks to contriteness and reconciliation?

One can see the agony, but not the justice, nor the wisdom.

Boyd/Partners

By L.M. BOYD

Three partners put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. When all three were in town, they decided, each would be a vice president. But when any one of them was out on a sales trip, that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiation.

Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

A cat in Fairbanks, Alaska, licked its paws — it shouldn't have — and when it put them on the cold cold ground, they froze there, stuck solid. A fireman freed the critter.

How big the goldfish grows depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish therein while a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed those fish secrete a growth-inhibiting substance. Presumably, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

Bay Area Gays on March

1,000 Protest Repeal of Wichita Rights Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,000 chanting San Franciscans, many of them homosexuals, marched through city streets in protest just hours after voters in Wichita, Kan. repealed a gay rights ordinance. (Related stories, A4, A12)

The protest Tuesday night was peaceful, police said.

"WE HAD WORD there would be a protest as soon as the Wichita vote started coming through," said Officer Elsen Broich.

The march appeared to be a combination protest over the Wichita vote and a statewide initiative that, if approved by voters in November, would let school districts fire or refuse to hire avowed homosexuals or those who support gay lifestyles.

THE MARCHERS, swelling to number about 1,000 by 11 p.m., chanted "Wichita means fight back," "Civil rights or civil war," and other slogans as they strode 10 and 15 abreast from Castro Street down busy Market Street, then up Polk Street and over to Union Square. Castro and Polk streets are predominantly gay neighborhoods.

Earlier in the day, a Wichita ordinance barring discrimination against homosexuals was overwhelmingly repealed by a more than 4-1 margin. Two weeks ago, when a similar ordinance was overturned in St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco homosexuals staged a similar but smaller march, police said.

A city ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals was just recently approved here by the board of supervisors, without controversy. There has been no move to repeal that ordinance.

Smog Stations Hit For 'Deficiencies'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A California auditor general's report says nearly two-thirds of the state's auto smog inspection stations are deficient, and official lamp and brake stations are hardly ever inspected.

The report, out Tuesday, recommended that the Bureau of Automotive Repair increase its staff to take care of the problems.

BUT CONSUMER Affairs Director Richard Spohn, whose department administers the bureau, said the report contained "numerous false statements, half-truths and distortions."

The bureau also licenses most auto repair shops and mediates consumer complaints. Some of its operations are paid by license and registration fees.

Deficiencies cited by the report included failure to have proper tools for inspection and engine tune-ups, failure to employ a licensed pollution device installer, and failure to keep up with the latest pollution control technology.

Porn Films Jail Pair

IMPERIAL BEACH (AP) — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for investigation of making pornographic films involving young boys after police confiscated more than 100 sex-oriented films and slides at his apartment, officers said.

Bail for Archie Murray, 39, a fourth-grade teacher at Westview Elementary School, was set Tuesday at $4,250, Imperial Beach police said.

Richard Rollings, 18, a security guard identified as Murray's roommate, also was arrested Monday when police armed with a search warrant arrived.

Jarvis Drops Libel Claim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis says he'll dismiss his $800,000 libel claim filed against the Grossmont High School District over a story printed in a student newspaper.

The story appeared March 10 in the Granite Hills High School Clarion and was written by 16-year-old Brad Teaby. It tried to explain the controversial property tax limitation initiative on the June 6 ballot.

But part of Teaby's story alleged Jarvis and Gann were "prominent real estate owners" who stood to reap "several million dollars" in tax savings if the proposition passed.

The executive director of the airport, James Ellingsworth, said "It did leave the ground by about 20 feet when, for some reason, the pilot aborted. He set it down on its belly and it slid probably 1,500 feet." He said he didn't see any obvious injuries.

Dinner Swells Fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has pulled off the most lucrative fund raiser ever staged by a Democratic gubernatorial incumbent, convincing 1,000 people to contribute more than $300,000 toward his reelection campaign.

After all the bills are paid, the $250-per-plate dinner Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel will have netted Brown between $210,000 and $250,000, said campaign manager Gray Davis.

Brown has collected $700,000 so far, Davis said, and hopes to stretch that to at least $1 million before the June 6 primary, in which he is unopposed.

Drink Draws Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Woodland Hills restaurant where television actor Dan Haggerty was burned by a flaming drink has been fined $1,500 for fire code violations.

Representatives of The Red Onion pleaded no contest to two charges of serving a flaming drink and one charge of over-crowding before Municipal Court Judge David Kennick Tuesday.

One of the flaming drink violations occurred Nov. 19, 1977, the same night Haggerty, who portrays Grizzly Adams, was burned. However, Los Angeles Fire Department Inspector Gene Lindley said none of the charges related to the Haggerty incident.

Princess, Lord Snowdon to Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon have agreed to a divorce, Buckingham Palace announced today.

An official statement announcing the impending end of the stormy marriage said:

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their mariage should formally be ended. Accordingly her ryoal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, separated from her photographer husband March 16, 1976, after 16 years of marriage.

The 47-year-old princess and Lord Snowdon, 48, have two children — David Vicount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14. A spokesman at Kensington Palace, Margaret's home, said the princess would continue to have custody of the couple-s two children, but Snowdon will have access.

The spokesman said the princess had "no plans for remarriage."

Margaret has drawn criticism in recent months for her friendship with 30-year-old socialite Roddy Llewellyn.

She is in King Edward VII Hospital in London suffering from suspected gastroenteritis. The Kensington Palace spokesman said Margaret was "making progress . . . The result of tests taken by the doctors will not be known until Friday."

He said he had no knowledge of Lord Snowdon's plans.

"We are not in a position to comment about Lord Snowdon."

Lord Snowdon has been linked by gossip columnists to assistant movie producer Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee.

The last member of the British royal family to be involved in divorce proceedings was the Earl of Harewood, the queen's cousin, who divorced 11 years ago.

The spokesman said the divorce proceedings were under way and the princess will be represented by the queen's lawyer, Matthew Farrer.

The queen has been kept informed of the situation but her constitutional consent is not necessary.

Edison Workers Vote to Picket

Onofre Hit by Strike

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Power station workers went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today at Southern California Edison plants in Huntington Beach and San Onofre and at eight other locations in Southern California.

Nearly 1,100 members of the Utility Workers Union of America, Local 246, voted to take to the picket lines at all sites after overwhelmingly rejecting the company's "last offer" Monday. It is the first such strike against Edison since 1953.

A union spokesman said that picketing which began at 12:01 a.m. would continue on an around the clock.

A last-ditch effort to avert the strike failed when talks broke down Tuesday. Edison had previously terminated the contract with the union effective at midnight Tuesday.

Bob Hull, a spokesman for Edison, said that supervisory personnel are taking the place of the striking union members who maintain and repair power units.

He said that he is confident that the company can continue to produce electricity at normal capacity "as long as it is necessary."

An Edison official that said that about 1,500 construction workers on a $2.4 billion expansion project at the San Onofre nuclear plant have apparently honored picket lines and didn't go to work at 9 a.m.

The workers are employed by the Bechtel Power Company and other sub-contractors. They are represented by various other unions working on plants Numbers 2 and 3.

An Edison official said the company is exploring ways to get the construction workers back on the job. About 3,000 employees in all work on the expansion project.

A spokesman for the Utility Workers Union said that members are adamantly opposed to the rotating work schedule which has been a chief stumbling block in negotiations since last October.

Edison is seeking to imple-

Welte's Letter Ruled 'Public'

By WILLIAM HODGE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Contents of a letter that prompted Saddleback Valley Unified School District trustees to call for an audit remains secret despite legal advice that the document is public.

A deputy county counsel's opinion that the letter to the board from the district superintendent is public has not satisfied the board majority. They want a legal opinion in writing.

Trustees cited the letter — received from suspended Supt. Richard Welte in closed session — as their reason for asking that an audit be done months ahead of the district's annual audit.

They have refused to discuss the letter's contents.

But Deputy County Counsel Edward Duran said today he had the letter read to him and could see no reason for its confidentiality.

"From what they read to me it didn't sound as though there was anything in the letter that would be confidential," Duran said.

Duran asked school officials to mail him a copy of the letter so he could examine it to make sure it should not be kept secret.

District officials, however, have asked for a formal written opinion on whether the letter can be released. That process will take several days, Duran said.

Concern over the letter's status as a public document apparently springs from its being marked "confidential" by Welte.

"They (school officials) said because it was marked confidential they weren't sure it could be released," Duran said. "You can stamp anything confidential but when you're dealing with a public agency the document is public unless it's covered by the education code."

Duran was surprised when district officials requested a formal written legal opinion.

"My understanding was it would just be an oral opinion," he said. "It's kind of ridiculous but we'll give them a written opinion if they want one."

Duran said school officials are

Terrorism Continues In Italy

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists shot a Milan industrial executive in the legs today, keeping up the war on the Italian establishment despite nationwide revulsion at the Red Brigades' murder of Aldo Moro.

Officials of the Christian Democrat Party announced, meanwhile, that a state funeral will be conducted — without Moro's body — in the Basilica of St. John Lateran on Saturday.

They said private funeral services will be held according to the family's wishes at Torrita Tiberina, 30 miles north of Rome. The day of the funeral was not announced.

After the body of the former premier was discovered Tuesday, the Moro family, embittered over the government's refusal to negotiate the kidnappers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, asked that there be no state funeral, national mourning or any ceremonies.

In one of the numerous letters he wrote during his captivity, Moro criticized his party's adamant stand and told its leaders to stay away from his funeral.

The victim of the Milan "kneecapping" was Franco Giacomazzi, an executive of the state-owned Montedison chemical industry. Police said three men and a woman gunned him down and fled.

Such attacks are a favorite tactic of the Red Brigades, and Giacomazzi was the fifth person kneecapped in northern Italy in five days.

The ultra-leftist terrorists were expected to follow up the murder of Moro with attacks on more political leaders, and the newspaper Corriere della Sera said police protection of likely targets had been intensified.

The founder of the Red Brigades, Renato Curacio, shouted in a Turin courtroom today that the assassination of Moro was "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was

Helmar Tschugg of San Clemente Was Struck While Hiking on Santiago Peak

OC Warned of Rattlers

San Clemente Bite Victim 'Satisfactory'

By JERRY CLAUSEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

County paramedics and Marine Corps Search and Rescue teamed up Tuesday to rush a rattlesnake-bite victim by helicopter to Mission Community Hospital, Mission Viejo, from Santiago Peak in Cleveland National Forest.

It was an effort expected to be repeated several times this year, county officials agree, because 1978 is expected to be a dangerous rattlesnake season.

Tuesday's victim, Helmar Tschugg, 36, of 129 Avenida Mariposa, San Clemente, was reported in satisfactory condition in the hospital intensive care unit.

Villa Park-based paramedics said Tschugg and a companion were in the Cleveland National Forest hiking when a snake struck him on the right ankle.

The two walked a half hour to the peak to contact electronics technicians who service relay equipment there. They, paramedics said, called the County Fire Department.

Tschugg was the second rattler victim treated at Mission Community Hospital Tuesday. Four-year-old Aaron Johnson of Mission Viejo was bitten when he stuck his hand down a gopher hole, officials said. He is reported in good condition.

That's not too unusual.

"From one end of this county to the other, we are turning up rattlesnakes," said Joe Oliver, Orange County's chief animal control officer.

Oliver's training officer, Dick Robillard, said several factors contribute to the increased snake activity — a larger adult population, construction in areas formerly inhabited by snakes and drenching rain that flooded holes and burrows in more remote canyon areas.

Oliver said his department normally receives about one or two snake calls weekly at this time of year. This year, though, he is getting about 10 a week.

Robillard said about 30 to 40 percent of the calls result in finding rattlesnakes. They are decapitated on the spot. Harmless reptiles, he said, are relocated to remote areas.

Areas expected to be most snake infested this summer — and especially this fall — are the developing south-county neighborhoods and Anaheim Hills.

While the snake problem will be difficult this summer, animal control officers said, it will be worse this fall when thirsty snakes seek out water in backyards and swimming pools.

Saddleback College

Class Fees Pondered

Saddleback College classes — currently offered to district residents at no charge — could have fees attached to them next year under guidelines proposed by Trustee Robert Price.

Residents can be charged for classes which are not taken for credit toward receiving a college degree, Price said.

The classes he believes the district could begin charging students to attend are "self improvement courses" such as tennis, arts and crafts and recreation.

"It's kind of shifting more things into the community services area," Price said today. "The community is apparently willing to pay a minimal fee for worthwhile classes so we could move some of our existing courses into that area."

Price said his suggestion was prompted by concern over possible budget cutbacks as a result of diminishing district revenues should the Jarvis-Gann amendment be approved by voters.

"Right now, tennis is free because it's in the curriculum for creditation," Price explained. "If we shift it into community services, we might be able to break even on the cost of the course through charging fees."

And that would ease the burden on tax revenues necessary to run regular college degree programs, Price said.

"The next year for the college will be a test of survival," the trustee said. "Even though we are not in as bad shape as some districts, it will be a severe and austere period."

Price also is proposing to "immediately curtail all plans to operate a north campus for the 1978-79 school year."

And he suggests that college officials figure next year's budget funding levels at a rate less than the existing tax rate and assessed valuation increase estimates.

That means a potential reduction of almost $2 million in the college's 1978-79 budget.

Steaming Out

SS Catalina Heads South

A Long Beach towing firm confirmed today that the S.S. Catalina, which slipped out of Newport Harbor late Tuesday night, is headed for San Diego.

A spokesman for Jones Tug and Barge said the 301-foot "Great White Steamer" was to arrive in San Diego this afternoon.

But the U.S. Coast Guard in San Diego said they haven't heard a word from the ship, which left Newport Harbor a day after its docking permit expired.

Port of San Diego authorities said they'd also had no contact with the ship, which Newport Beach authorities said has permission to use a San Diego berth for 60 days.

The vessel was brought to Newport April 25 for a boat show.

"It's gone, thank God," said Dave Harshbarger, Newport Beach's director of marine safety.

He said boat show promoter Duncan McIntosh arranged for the boat to be towed out of the harbor at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Hyman Singer of Beverly Hills, the ship's owner, is embroiled in a dispute with the City of Los Angeles over $30,000 in docking and towing fees officials claim he owes that city for berthing the big vessel.

In its heyday, the Catalina was the chief means of transporting tourists from the mainland to Avalon on Catalina Island.

Stereo, TV Set Stolen in Viejo

Stereo equipment and a television set with a joint value of $970 were carried off by a burglar who forced his way into a Mission Viejo home.

Orange County sheriff's officers said the intruder twisted off the front door knob to gain entry to the home of service station operator Carl Ray Motley, 38, of 27381 Tossamar Drive.

Fighter Boost To Israel?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet officers are recommending that President Carter promise 20 additional F-15 jet fighters to Israel in an effort to win congressional approval of the sale of warplanes to Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, a White House source said today.

The recommendation by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown would bring to 110 the number of jet fighters promised Israel in the arms sale controversy.

The source said Carter will not change the terms of the proposed sale of 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel and 50 F-5s to Egypt by 1983, but would promise to sell Israel the additional planes after that.

Administration officials believe Carter's concession will pick up enough votes to win a go-ahead for the sale from the House International Relations Committee.

Congress has until May 28 to veto part or all of the sale. If the House committee defeats veto resolutions against the sales, it would be impossible for the full Congress to act on them and the sales would go through.

The 20 additional sophisticated swing-wing F-15s for Israel, in addition to the 15 already planned by Carter and the 25 F-15s Israel already is buying, would give the Israelis the same number as the Saudis.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in testimony to the House committee repeated today his proposal that the additional planes be sold to Israel by 1983 at the same time the original planes are being sold to Israel, the Saudis and to Egypt.

But administration sources say the additional planes could not be manufactured and delivered to Israel that fast.

Meanwhile, Brown sent members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a draft letter spelling out Saudi Arabian assurances that its warplanes would not be used against Israel.

Brown's letter reportedly said the Saudis agreed among other things that they would take planes only with defensive missiles that cannot be used against ground troops.

The Saudis also have agreed to station their jet fighters far from Israel's borders and not to buy planes from other countries during the time the American planes are being delivered

PRINCESS MARGARET, LORD SNOWDEN TO DIVORCE
After Stormy Marriage, a Rift in the Royal Family

DIVORCE AGREEMENT. . .

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings," the spokesman said. "The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce."

The 1960 marriage of the effervescemt 29-year-old princess and globe-trotting photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones — raised to the peerage of the Earl of Snowdon in 1961 — was a glamorous match that caught the fancy of romantics throughout the world.

But as the years passed, it became clear the relationship was wearing thin. Even before their formal split in 1976, she began to be seen with Llewellyn, a brewery heir who aspires to become a night club singer.

The two took frequent vacations together on the Caribbean island of Mustique and often spent weekends together on Llewellyn's Wiltshire farm. Critics, including Church of England clerics, said the affair was damaging to the image of the royal family, and some said Llewellyn was distracting Margaret from her royal duties.

It was disclosed last month that Margaret intended to continue her public life, and the implication was she would not see Llewellyn so often, at least not publicly.

In the mid-50s, Margaret suffered her first disappointment in love. She was forced under pressure to abandon her relationship with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend because he was a divorced man.

Her intention to divorce Lord Snowdon was announced eight days before the Church of England is expected to change its rules and allow divorced persons to remarry in church. The church currently allows only a service of blessing.

The change will remove a serious obstacle to the remarriage of members of the royal family.

Because the queen is officially the temporal head of the Church of England, the church prohibition was one reason royal observers believed Margaret and Snowdon would never divorce despite their legal separation.

Margaret's uncle, the uncrowned King Edward VIII, abdicated in 1936 because he wanted to marry the divorced American Wallis Warfield Simpson. There was violent opposition from the Church of England and the British government of the day.

Princess' Career Often Controversial

LONDON (AP) — From her impetuous childhood through her precocious teen-age years to her stormy middle age, Britain's Princess Margaret swirled through life trailing controversy over her men and her deportment.

The announcement today from Buckingham Palace that she and husband Antony Armstrong-Jones would seek a divorce after nearly two years of separation was only the latest episode in a life that seemed the very stuff of novels.

MARGARET WAS BORN IN August 1930, and made her first public appearance at the age of 6 at her father's coronation. Since then, she has been continually in the public eye — often with heavy consequences for her private life.

She was a lively child, known to cartwheel down Buckingham Palace halls, defy orders and make scenes.

"My first memory," she said, "is half-falling out of my pram baby carriage. A great to-do. I imagine I must have wanted to be noticed."

She was a capable horsewoman, spoke a number of languages, and loved piano. Both Margaret and her older sister, later Queen Elizabeth II, were proficient swimmers.

BUT WHEN THEY WERE awarded a lifesaving certificate together, Margaret became so angry she picked up her sister's dog, threw it into Buckingham Palace's lake, and then, clad in her best party dress, jumped in to rescue the drenches animal.

"Margaret always wants what I want," her sister once said.

"When my sister and I were growing up," explained Margaret, "she was made out to be the goody-goody one. That was boring so the press tried to make out I was wicked as hell."

Margaret blossomed into a precocious teen-ager and jet-setter, a beautiful young woman with violet eyes, brown hair and flawless skin. She was surrounded by the British press and idolized by the royalty-loving public during the austere post-World War II years.

"THE PLEASURE-SEEKING PRINCESS," headline writers called her.

She was always off to nightclubs trailing dukes, guard officers and other eligible young men. There were pictures of her smoking in public. Her elegant cigarette holders became famous.

In her mid-20s, her ill-fated romance with Royal Air Force Group Capt. Peter Townsend brought her widespread sympathy: Townsend, a Battle of Britain hero, was equerry to Margaret's father King George VI. But the dashing fighter ace had been divorced, and that brought family and church pressure that eventually forced the princess to renounce him.

Four and a half years later, in May 1960, she married globe-trotting photographer Armstrong-Jones — later elevated to the peerage as Lord Snowdon — after a secret love affair. Millions watched their wedding ceremony at Westminster Abbey or on television.

THEIR OFTEN ROCKY MARRIAGE enthralled Britons but effectively ended 16 years and two children later with a separation.

"I don't see myself marrying again," the Princess said in 1977 "It would probably be too much of a bore."

Her latest man, and suitably her latest scandal, was Roddy Llewellyn, a socialite and former hippie turned aspiring supper-club crooner.

Margaret came in for sharp criticism in Parliament, in public and among Church of England clerics for her friendship with Llewellyn, with whom she frequently was seen and in whose company she took vacations on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

It was announced last month that Margaret would continue her public life — the implication being that she would not see Llewellyn as often at least in public — and the Buckingham Palace announcement today said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

Suit Tests Legality

Irvine Ranch District to Be Served

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A constitutional test will be made of the legality of landowner dominance of the Irvine Ranch Water District board of directors after the Irvine City Council voted Tuesday to file lawsuit against the district in Superior Court.

The vote to sue the district, and try to stop a scheduled landowner election June 19 that would authorize the district to issue $1 billion in bonds for water and sewer projects, was unanimous.

The council directed Roger Grable, assistant city attorney, to file suit challenging the proposed bond authorization on two grounds.

First, the council alleged the IRWD failed to comply with requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act, because no environmental impact report was prepared to analyze impacts of the drawing-board projects the bonds would finance.

Second, the council declared the IRWD board of directors, to which only two of its seven members are publicly elected, is unconstitutionally composed, in violation of the one man, one vote principle.

Five of the IRWD directors are elected by landowner vote. Within the district, the Irvine Company owns more than 90 percent of the undeveloped land. The election amounts to an appointment of directors by the company.

The council action came after a one-hour session that was closed to the public.

Councilman Larry Agran made the motion to sue.

"It's largely a question," he said in an interview today "of whether you can undertake a project of such large proportions without the appropriate environmental impact studies, and without giving the citizens of our city a proper opportunity to fully consider such a massive undertaking.

"The second issue is a question of whether such an undemocratically constituted board constitutionally has the authority to commit the city, for decades into the future, on the question of water policy."

"Underlying the whole case," Agran added, is the far more fundamental question of who controls developmental policy in the city of Irvine.

"Will developmental policy be fashioned by duly elected representatives — through our general plan adopted by the City Council — or will it be dictated by the actions of an undemocratically and unconstitutionally constituted water board?"

Councilman David Sills, also contacted today, concurred.

"The IRWD," he said, "is one of the last vestiges of land baron rule in the West.

"Next month, one man — the president of the Irvine Company — will cast over 90 percent of the votes to authorize a $1 billion dollar public bond issue.

"We are simply asking the court to give the other residents in the community an equal voice in their affairs."

Lansing Eberling, president of the IRWD board, said today he was "disappointed" by the council action.

"I thought we were communicating with them," he said. "I also thought that adding two new members on the board who were publicly elected was the beginning of a board more publicly represented."

The board plans an eventual transition of power by adding new, publicly elected members as water use figures demonstrate that residents are using more water than landowners.

"The idea of transition," Eberling said, "serves the needs of all the parties. I think it's a fair way of doing it."

Eberling said water use projections indicate there will be a public majority on the board about 1984.

He said the board position on the environmental issue is that impact reports are not needed until actual projects are proposed for building.

Eberling has called an emergency session of the water board for 2 p.m. Saturday to discuss the city lawsuit. The session will be closed to the public, under provisions of the Brown Act which allow public bodies to meet secretly to discuss litigation.

dragged away in chains.

Authorities in Rome announced that 24 of the 26 persons arrested May 8 in a police dragnet for suspects in the Moro kidnapping had been released for lack of evidence. They had been held on charges of subversive association.

Moro's murder strengthened the alliance between Moro's Christian Democratic Party and the Communists and promised election gains to the government party.

In a spontaneous burst of emotion, millions of Italians poured out of factories, shops, offices and schools Tuesday to demonstrate against terrorism after Moro's body — chained and riddled with 11 bullets — was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome.

More than 100,000 people crowded Milan's Piazza del Duomo. More than 30,000 marched around the Colosseum in Rome, carrying hastily-fashioned white banners for the Christian Democrats and red for the Communists along with black-framed portraits of the 61-year-old former premier.

The nation's unions called a two-hour general strike today so workers could attend mass meetings against terrorism. Student demonstrations also were scheduled, and some student groups "excommunicated" the Red Brigades from the anti-government movement.

"That keeps us with pretty much the same program we have operating now," Price said. He indicated the cutback would also protect the district from cutbacks as a result of the Behr bill.

Trustees are scheduled to discuss Price's suggested guidelines and next year's budget at a special meeting Monday.

The session will begin at 3 p.m. in the Library/ Classroom complex, 28000 Marguerite Parkway, Room 105, in Mission Viejo.

Jarvis Measure Studied

Panel Says Price Tag Too High for Reform

Passage of Proposition 13 would cut property taxes without reducing the size of government or the total tax bill paid by Orange Countians, county supervisors were told Tuesday.

That was the assessment offered by the 19-member Citizens Direction Finding Commission (CDFC) after reviewing the Jarvis-Gann property tax limitation initiative.

Janice Hall, an Anaheim insurance representative and commission chairwoman, said the measure would achieve property tax reform but at too high a price tag.

Mrs. Hall and fellow commissioners predicted the measure would lead to higher state income and sales taxes as well as a loss of local control over local government.

Proposition 13 would limit property taxes to 1 percent of a property's 1975-76 value and clamp a two percent per year ceiling on increases. Properties would be reassessed at full value, however, whenever sold.

The CDFC, in a report to supervisors, contended the measure would penalize families forced to move often since they would face tax increases each time they purchased a new home.

As a result, the report said, owners of identical property could have tax bills that vary.

In addition, they criticized the initiative as leading to a shift in tax burdens from business to individuals and offering no relief for renters.

Mrs. Hall told supervisors the critique was not intended as an endorsement for or against the measure but to let residents know of some of the initiative's consequences.

The commission was created by supervisors to advise them on matters affecting local government.

Five members are appointed by supervisors, five by the League of Citizens and nine by the commission.

Orange Coast members include Dr. Richard N. Baisden, dean of UC Irvine extension; Michael C. Gering; Newport Beach attorney, Dr. Henry Kaufman; Huntington Beach optometrist, and Jerry King, planner from Corona del Mar.

Also, Frederick M. Lang, a South Laguna landscape architect; Sheila Malakoff, a Huntington Beach consultant; Richard Spooner, a Newport Beach attorney, and Shirley Commons, a Huntington Beach realtor.

Other commissioners include attorneys, housewives, a civic volunteer, a consultant and an insurance broker.

In another matter relating to the Jarvis initiative, supervisors voted 3-2 Tuesday to study legislation that could pass the cost of public education on to the state should the initiative be approved by California voters.

Supervisor Philip Anthony said the idea behind his proposed legislation would be to lessen the immediate impact of Jarvis on local government while forcing the state to contend with the long-standing school finance question.

Supervisors Thomas Riley and Ralph Clark joined with Anthony in calling for the study of such legislation.

But Supervisors Ralph Diedrich and Laurence Schmit were opposed saying they don't favor the idea of state control of local school districts.

Trash Refund?

County Areas May Benefit

About 30,000 residents of unincorporated Orange County will get a refund or credit for trash collection fees paid during the three-week strike, if Supervisor Ralph Clark has his way.

Clark's fellow supervisors Tuesday agreed to have county officials negotiate with trash haulers for either a refund or credit for fees paid while workers weren't collecting refuse

Clark said the county can force the refunds or credits through haulers' performance bonds. He also suggested city officials might follow the county's lead and seek similar refunds for residents.

In other action Tuesday, supervisors closed the Huntington Beach trash transfer station to the public except for its periodic weekend opening.

The station had been available for residents weekdays during the strike. But it now will be reserved for use by commercial haulers only except for its regular noon to 3:30 p.m. opening the second and fourth Saturdays of each month.

Campus Protest

Women Take Over Newspaper Office

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — It could be a dormitory, with clothing, guitars and books lying around, but the 50 women in the four rooms are a force of occupation, not residence.

For 10 days, the women have barricaded themselves in the basement office of the Daily Collegian, the 20,000-circulation student newspaper of the University of Massachusetts, protesting what they claim is a lack of women's news.

Their barricade is made of desks, chairs and couches, which double as beds.

They take sponge baths in two adjacent bathrooms, using soap, towels, toothbrushes and toothpaste smuggled in by sympathizers. Supporters have also brought in food and hot plates.

"It's been very encouraging," said one sophomore demonstrator. "The spirit is very high. I personally knew almost none of the women here and I've gotten very close to all of them."

The object of their ire, the "male-dominated" staff of the Collegian, continues to publish, but in abbreviated editions put together in temporary quarters about a five-minute walk from the barricaded office in the Campus Center Complex. A security guard sits outside the new office.

Final exams begin in less than two weeks and the paper is scheduled to shut down next week for summer vacation. Some protesters leave briefly each day to attend classes, but say they will stay in the office into the summer to press their demands.

Those demands are for one full page of women's news each day, with its content edited independently of the rest of the newspaper, and a women's department editor selected by the campus women's community, not the newspaper staff.

Associate editor Beth Segers opposes the protest: "If the women had looked at who actually puts out the paper each night they'd see that 50 percent of the news editors are women, all of the copy editors are women and three out of five issue editors are women."

But Julie Melrose, leader of the protesters and women's editor of the Collegian, said she had been frustrated in getting articles on women's issues printed. For example, she said, two articles related to birth control for women — smoking and the pill — were submitted but never used.

The Daily Collegian has called the administration "irresponsible" for allowing the protesters to bar access to files and equipment.

William Field, dean of students at the Amherst campus, said the UMass student judiciary system was considering holding suspension hearings for the protesters.

Diver Killed By Octopus

TOKYO (AP) — Police found the body of Yuki Otaka, a 34-year-old postal clerk and amateur diver, in 15 feet of water. On his back was an empty tank that had held enough oxygen for an hour.

Fifteen feet away was a six-foot octopus dead from cuts by Otaka's knife. The police said there were no wounds or bruises on the diver's body.

They believed his oxygen ran out while he was fighting the octopus and he suffocated.

Rape Prison Terms Backed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — After testimony from three women who said they were victims of rape, the Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a bill requiring prison terms for anyone convicted of forcible rape.

SB 1479 by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, was sent to the Senate floor Tuesday on a 7-1 vote.

One of the three women, Carolyn Scherman, testified, "I don't feel safe. I feel as if there are rapists walking the streets wherever I turn."

County OKs Noise Gear For Airport

Orange County Airport will be getting $199,579 worth of new noise monitoring equipment, supervisors decided Tuesday.

The board also will decide next month whether to spend another $61,650 to expand the monitoring system to El Toro Marine Corps Air Station as well.

A contract for the monitoring equipment was awarded to Tracor Inc. the low of two bidders for the noise systems.

Supervisors decided last year to replace the existing noise monitoring equipment. The new system will be financed with airport revenue and a $65,593 state grant.

A report to supervisors said installing the noise monitors around El Toro could help in land use planning for areas impacted by high jet noise levels.

However, expanding the system could force the hiring of additional county employes, the report said.

Cat Help Offered By Riley

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange County Supervisor Thomas Riley has a suggestion of his own for improving conditions at the county animal shelter.

He wants to make it possible for families to adopt or reclaim unaltered adult cats so the animals won't have to be destroyed.

Riley's proposal comes on the heels of a decision by the board of supervisors Tuesday to change the way county officials destroy 30,000 unwanted pets at the shelter each year.

The board followed Supervisor Philip Anthony's recommendation to close down decompression chambers at the shelter for at least the next year and destroy unwanted pets by injection instead.

Anthony called the injections "unquestionably humane," but labeled the chamber "absolutely inhumane."

Anthony's proposal was supported by more than 50 citizens in the supervisors' hearing room Tuesday and drew no objections.

However, Supervisor Ralph Diedrich abstained from voting until county officials return with a plan for implementing the new animal euthanasia system.

Riley had planned to offer his proposal on cats at Tuesday's meeting as well, but waited to give County Counsel Adrian Kuyper time to review it.

Riley said it was "a deep concern for humane treatment of animals" that led to his objection to a county policy that prohibits release of adult cats from the shelter unless they have been spayed or neutered.

"Basically, this policy requires the destruction of all adult cats which are impounded at the shelter," Riley said.

Yet, he continued, county officials may release both dogs and kittens at the shelter once owners or adopting families put up a spay or neuter deposit.

That deposit is returned once proof of neutering is shown.

Riley said a literal interpretation of state law prohibits release of cats unless they are neutered.

However, he said, most other cities and counties have interpreted the law so that adult cats can be released to owners or new homes, then altered later on.

Nude Bathers Arrested in South Laguna

Orange County Sheriff's officers moved in on nude bathers Tuesday and jailed three allegedly naked beach-goers who reportedly offended other sun seekers on the 9th Street beach in South Laguna.

Booked into the county jail on charges of public nudity were Richard Thomas Colbert, 26, of 2510 S. Coast Highway, Laguna Beach and two transients: Bruce Donald Sutherland, 24, and Diana Deedee Bicknell, 18.

Deputies also issued a citation to a woman who allegedly was found lying nude on the sand near the point of the three arrests.

She was identified as Gwendolyn Ann Jones, 25, of 31667 3rd St., South Laguna.

Nuclear Device Tested in Desert

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An underground nuclear test was detonated beneath the southern Nevada desert today, moved two hours ahead of its originally scheduled time by a weather front approaching the Nevada Test Site.

The weapons-related test, code-named "Transom," was conducted at 8 a.m. in the Yucca Flat area of the desert test range some 90 miles northwest of here, said spokesman Dave Jackson of the Department of Energy.

The shot, with a yield estimated at between 20,000 and 150,000 tons of TNT, apparently was not felt in Las Vegas.

Tests at the upper end of the yield range generally can be felt in many areas of the city, especially in the high-rise hotels along the Strip and in the downtown Casino Center.

"We've conducted a number of tests out there that we felt might be felt in town," Jackson said, adding that the DOE generally announces such tests beforehand.

The test, conducted by the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory of New Mexico, apparently caused little motion at the DOE control point at the sprawling test range, Jackson said.

Jackson said there was no reported radiation leak.

Jackson said the shot originally was set for 10 a.m. but was moved up due to the weather front moving in from the Pacific Coast. He said the front probably would pass through northern Nevada but might have delayed the test if it had been fired at the original time.

Weather conditions play an important role in the underground test programs. Shots generally will be postponed if prevailing winds — which could carry any potential radiation leak — are blowing toward inhabited areas.

TAKE INVENTORY
of your home's valuables

It's not a pleasant thing to think about, but if you were to suddenly lose your valuable jewelry and other important possessions through theft or fire, would you be able to furnish your insurance company or police with a complete listing of your losses?

It's a good idea to get an up-to-date, qualified appraisal of your valuables, and to make up an inventory list. The best kind of inventory is kept in a simple card file. Use 6x8 cards, so there's room to attach photographs of your valuable objects to each card, along with description and value. Also list when and where the object was acquired. Family pieces should get special attention. There should be a written record of second, third and fourth generation items. All important pieces should be appraised by a qualified professional your insurance company will accept.

Add more than just the obvious things to your inventory. Include objects that do not "stand out" in the household, but which have some intrinsic value to you. Keep a copy of the inventory outside your home, in a safe deposit box or with an attorney.

Upstaging Candidates

RICKY TICKY POLITIX: You can almost work up a measure of pity for candidates seeking election in our upcoming June primary. They seem to be drawing scant attention in the public prints.

Instead, the greater volume of public political ink and radio and television time seems to be devoted to a man named Howard Jarvis.

Mr. Jarvis isn't running for any public office.

JARVIS

He is, however, a central figure in the June election as co-author of the Jarvis-Gann property tax limitation initiative which will appear as Proposition 13 on the ballot.

EVEN THOSE CITIZENS who only follow politics in the margins have heard about Proposition 13 by now. You may not know who seeks the state Senate seat in your region but it's become increasingly difficult to ignore Number 13.

In event you have been absent from our sector of the globe in recent times, you should know that Proposition 13, if adopted by the voters, would limit property taxes to one percent of the market value of real estate. It would further limit property value increases placed on real estate to two percent per year.

SUMNER

This drastic cutback has drawn strong criticism from public school people and city and county officials, whose operations would suffer heavy cash loses if Proposition 13 becomes law.

As for Howard Jarvis, he seems to be putting in considerable time in our coastal region in campaigning for his measure. He must figure our area is a lush hunting ground for votes.

In two of his most recent appearances, Mr. Jarvis has found his principal antagonist in debate in the form of Orange County Superior Court Judge Bruce Sumner, who resides in Laguna Beach.

SUMNER AND JARVIS went at each other for an hour on Channel 50 television the other night and clashed again later in a Laguna debate where Sumner had an ally in Laguna schools chief Bob Sanchis.

There is an enormous difference in the style and approach of the two men as they debate the pros and cons of the initiative.

Jarvis, in promoting passage, leans heavily on the glittering generality. He talks about "peeling the fat" off of government and how there is enough cash surplus in Sacramento "to float California on $100 bills."

JUDGE SUMNER, IN urging rejection of Proposition 13, gets to specifics on how the initiative would, in his view, hamstring local government and school boards and surrender tax revenue control to Sacramento. Sumner's most telling argument notes that under Proposition 13, local governments must get a two-thirds vote of all their registered voters to pass any new tax revenue proposal. And of course, it's virtually impossible to even get two-thirds of the voters to the polls.

So the debate rages on over Proposition 13.

You may never hear from any candidates. They may not get their names in print until the ballots are issued.

1976 AMC Cars Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency ordered American Motors Corp. today to recall virtually all its 1976-model automobiles because the vehicles spew excessive amounts of nitrogen oxide pollution into the air.

The unprecedented recall order involves about 270,000 Hornets, Gremlins, Pacers and Matadors, the EPA said. Only those 1976 autos manufactured for sale in California, whose air pollution standards are stricter than the federal rules, are currently exempt.

BUT THE 21,741 California-market cars are under investigation for possible recall because of the same problem, the EPA said.

In addition, the agency said it was recalling 40,000 1975 and 1976 model Jeeps and Post Office dispatcher trucks made by AMC because of the same problem.

The EPA's order was the first recall ever by the agency to involve virtually the entire production of a single automaker in a model year.

THE PROBLEM WITH these vehicles is a faulty joint in the emission control system that frequently has broken, causing high levels of nitrogen oxide exhausts, said EPA Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum.

"This pollutant can contribute to breathing illnesses, chest pains and bronchitis in children. It helps form smog, that all-too-familiar source of headaches, smarting eyes and coughing among city residents," she told reporters.

"If the public health threat from air pollution is to be abated, it is crucial that cars meet the emission standards set by Congress."

THE EPA SAID the recall was prompted by an inadequately brazed joint in the back-pressure sensor, which impairs the ability of the air pollution control system to reduce emissions of nitrogen oxides.

Ford Motor Co. recently was ordered to recall 640,000 vehicles for a similar defect. The EPA said both Ford and American Motors purchased the defective parts from the Eaton Corp. of Battle Creek, Mich.

The EPA said the part costs $20 but gave no immediate estimate of the total cost of the recall, saying only about half the cars recalled are normally brought in for repairs by their owners.

THE GOVERNMENT'S action was seen as part of a new get-tough attitude by the EPA toward possible violations of air quality standards.

Ex-envoy's Wife Dies In Suicide

MOSCOW (AP) — Leongina Shevchenko, the wife of the Soviet U.N. diplomat who refused to return home from the United States, committed suicide, her son said today.

Gennady Shevchenko told Western reporters by telephone from the family's Moscow apartment he could give no details about his mother's death Monday "but I confirm that she committed suicide."

EARLIER THE SON, like his father a diplomat in the Soviet foreign service, told reporters who telephoned him his mother had died of a heart attack.

"I just did not want to say immediately that she had committed suicide," he said in a subsequent call.

Soviet sources with good official contacts made the first disclosure of the suicide, saying Mrs. Shevchenko died from an overdose of sleeping pills and that her body was found in a closet of the family apartment where she had been living with her 16-year-old daughter since her return from New York in April.

ARKADY SHEVCHENKO, the top-ranking Soviet citizen on the staff of the United Nations, left his post as undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs on April 5 because of "differences with his government," a U.N. spokesman said.

Informed sources said he refused to obey an order from the Soviet government to return home, and his wife went without him, taking their daughter, after a violent argument.

The Soviet government blamed the Ukrainian-born diplomat's defiance on a "frameup" by U.S. intelligence agents, but the U.S. government said it had nothing to do with his actions.

SOVIET DIPLOMATS at the United Nations circulated stories at the time that Shevchenko was having an affair with an American woman and also had a drinking problem. There was also speculation that he was a secret American agent and had been found out.

Mrs. Shevchenko told reporters on her return that her husband's action was a "crude provocation" by American authorities and that he would never have wanted to stay in the United States.

Wichita's Gay Rights Law Loses

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — In a resounding "mandate for righteousness," Wichita voters told homosexuals to keep their lifestyle to themselves and repealed a gay rights ordinance by a 5-to-1 margin.

"People are saying loud and clear to the nation that America does not feel that pro-homosexual legislation brought under the civil rights issue is legitimate," said the Rev. Ron Adrian, a Baptist minister who led the group that forced the referendum. "I think God's using this vote to openly rebuke the pro-homosexual forces."

THE VOTE IN favor of repeal was 47,246, and 10,005 supported retention of the seven-month-old ordinance, which prohibited discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodation because of "sexual or affectional preferences." (Related story Page A5.)

Similar ordinances were repealed in Miami last June and in St. Paul, Minn., on April 25. A referendum is scheduled later this month in Eugene, Ore., on a gay rights ordinance there.

The 83-to-17 percent victory margin came in one of Wichita's largest election turnouts, with 44 percent of the city's 128,888 registered voters casting ballots. Both supporters and opponents of the ordinance had expected repeal but the margin of defeat surprised all.

ADRIAN, WHO HAD predicted a 2-to-1 defeat, said he foresaw no backlash against the gay community due to the vote.

"I think homosexuals will be just as welcome in Wichita tomorrow as they ever have been here," he said.

'Perfect' Air Crash Puzzles Authorities

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Federal officials have begun their investigation to learn why a National Airlines jetliner, in no apparent trouble, made a "perfect landing" into Escambia Bay, instead of on the runway three miles ahead.

Flight 193 crashed into the fog-shrouded waters late Monday with 58 people aboard. Three of the 52 passengers drowned.

Investigators say they have no immediate indication why the three-engine jet wasn't at the prescribed altitude of 1,250 feet when it hit the water.

"There were no changes in pitch or power," said Jim King, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. "It was in stable position. Once they went in, many of the people on board just thought it was a particularly hard landing."

Tugboat operator Glenn McDonald of Gulf Breeze told investigators the plane "appeared to be making a perfect landing — into the water," King said. McDonald and crewman Bill Kenney became heroes when they pushed a construction barge next to the plane, then pulled scores of passengers to safety.

U.S. Summary

A high pressure system stretching across most of the Mississippi Valley to the Rockies kept most of the nation dry this morning.

The only precipitation came in the form of scattered showers over the mountains of Idaho and Montana and in Utah, Nevada and the Pacific Northwest. The showers were the result of a Pacific cold front.

Little change was expected today in the precipitation pattern, with scattered showers forecast from the upper Ohio Valley into northern Maine, in Florida and from northern Nevada across Idaho and western Montana.

Clear skies covered an area from Tennessee and the lower half of the Mississippi Valley westward over the South and central Rockies.

Temperatures along the East Coast, ahead of the high pressure system were generally mild. Readings in the 50s dominated New England with temperatures in the 70s reaching from Georgia and Florida through the Gulf Coast region to Texas.

School Audit Call Points Up Secrecy

Last week, Saddleback Valley Unified School District trustees called for an audit of the district — at the end of a regular school board meeting.

Trustees offered no reason for their demand of a full audit months before the regular annual district audit is due.

The only comment made was reference to a letter received in executive session from suspended Supt. Richard Welte.

Several trustees cited the letter as reason for the audit but refused to divulge its contents, saying the letter was marked confidential.

But Deputy County Counsel Edward Duran said this week he could see no reason for not releasing the letter to the public. His opinion was based on a conversation with acting Supt. Donald Ames over the content of Welte's letter.

But following the conversation, Ames sent a formal letter to Duran asking for another opinion, apparently at the behest of Board President George Henry.

Now, Henry says trustees will not discuss — or officially call for — an audit until the next board meeting May 17. But trustees specifically called for an audit last week.

And, once again, the public is left out in the cold as to a reason for the expenditure of public funds to pay for the audit.

Trustees also have refused to reveal their problems with Supt. Welte other than characterizing the split as a "conflict."

The same philosophy of secrecy is dominating the discussion of an expensive audit.

The Saddleback district has shown an alarming tendency to control the flow of information during its latest round of political and philosophical crisis.

And the real loser in the situation can only be the public — which pays for the schools to operate — and the children — who are supposed to benefit from the schools' operation.

Solar Energy Step

Last week, El Camino Real School in Irvine flipped on the switch to its new solar heating and cooling system.

The $428,000 device, funded largely by the federal Energy Research and Development Administration, takes up most of the school's roof with banks of glass collector tubes.

It will both heat and cool the school, automatically switching on the auxiliary electrical system if there isn't enough sun power.

The project is aimed at stimulating private firms to install similar systems in their buildings, thus saving fossil fuels.

The school was selected for the project in nationwide competition. Trustees of the Irvine Unified School District deserve praise for their decision to pursue the project to its completion.

And staff at the school should also be commended for involving students by teaching about solar energy and even training some youngsters as tour guides for visitors to the project.

No Apathy Here

When Laurie Kahn screamed for help as she ran from an attacker in her Mission Viejo home, she got it.

Sheriff's deputies credited a number of her New Castille Homes neighbors — including two women — with chasing down and subduing her alleged assailant when he ran from her home.

Laurie's lip reportedly was cut when a man knocked on her door, forced his way inside, demanded money and took $64. She apparently was otherwise unharmed possibly because of the response by neighbors who still care.

A deputy noted that the incident reflected a zeal for neighborhood awareness, something his department would like to see a lot more of.

A fine tribute, indeed, at a time often marked with apathy and unconcern.

Boyd/Partners

By L.M. BOYD

Three partners put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. When all three were in town, they decided, each would be a vice president. But when any one of them was out on a sales trip, that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiation. Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by somebody unknown to said victim. You see what this means, don't you? You're a lot safer hanging around with strangers.

How big the goldfish grows depends on how big its bowl is, that you know. But the question arises as to just why a small bowl tends to stunt the fish therein while a big pond lets them get larger. It's now believed those fish secrete a growth-inhibiting substance. Presumably, its potency is affected directly by how concentrated it is, highly so in a small volume of water, less so the larger the volume of water.

Real Estate Bubble Can Burst

The incapacity of the administration to come up with an anti-inflation policy that a reasonable person can trust will stimulate the flight of depositors from savings banks and other thrift institutions.

Ten years ago rampant corrosive inflation was such an unfamiliar experience that people kept their savings in cash and allowed their purchasing power to be corroded.

After a decade of dedicated inflationists in Congress and the White House, people have come to understand that they're being robbed when the savings and loan association pays 6.5 percent while the government destroys the value of money at the rate of 8 percent and then has the gall to tax the interest from the savings account. People have been taught by politicians that only children save; put it into the bank and the guys in Washington'll steal it.

Thus more and more millions of us are learning that you never lend money, you borrow it. Borrow money today and, with Jimmy Carter in the White House, you'll be able to repay the loan six years from now at 60-cents on the dollar. Solvency is for suckers.

IN THEIR determination to never a lender but a borrower be, many people are going into debt buying real estate. Their reasoning is plausible. In the last few years, through inflation and recession, residential real estate values have held up very well. Stocks and bonds have been a disaster; gold has only made money for a few shrewdies; antiques, jewelry, art and objets d'art, like rare stamps and oriental rugs, demand specialized knowledge, and anyway, you can take a bad beating, even if you've made a good buy, in the event you have to sell in a hurry.

Real estate, especially homes, has had the best track record. They're easy to sell compared to some of the things mentioned above, and the price on residential housing has not only kept pace with inflation, but far outdistanced it. That's why you hear of more and more people refinancing the homes they themselves live in so they can realize the enhanced value of their property immediately. Many of them are taking the money they're getting from refinancing their homes and buying other properties, not to live in but as an investment.

THE DIFFICULTY with that is that rents haven't kept up with housing prices. People are paying $100,000 for the house which sold for $75,000 three years ago in expectation that in three or four years they'll be able to sell for $140,000. In the meantime, they must rent it and a lot of them are discovering the rental price won't even pay the monthly mortgage installment, much less taxes and upkeep.

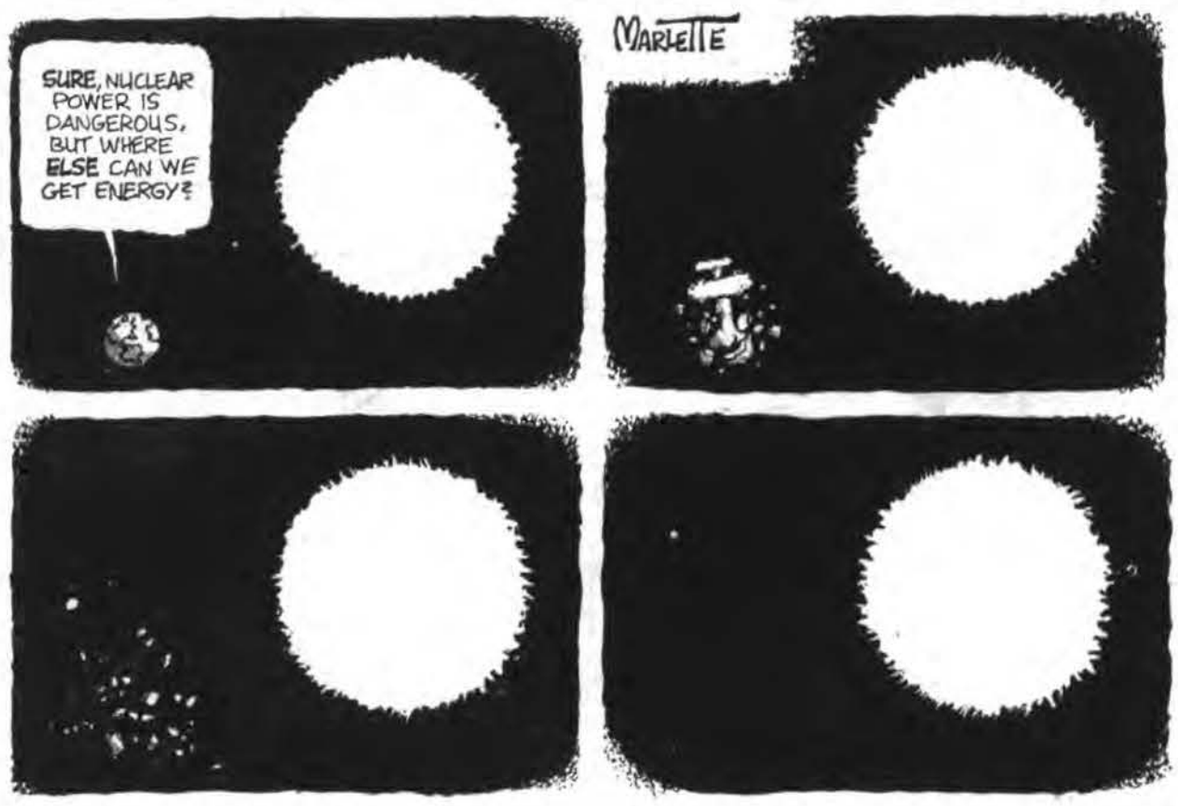

In the banking business they call people who're paying out two or three hundred dollars a month now in hopes of realizing a $40,000 profit down the road "overexposed." Everything depends on the market in residential real estate holding up and there's no guarantee of that. In fact, the signs indicate this is a poor time to buy residential real estate for any purpose other than living in it.

In many parts of the country, residential real estate prices are being driven up not by potential occupiers but by people hoping to sell later at a profit. They're going up so fast it looks like a buyers' panic is on, with people's business judgment swept away by an hysterical conviction that if they don't buy now and buy at almost any price, they'll lose the opportunity of a lifetime.

IF YOU really think real estate prices will continue to shoot up indefinitely with no relationship to the price of other goods and services, then this is the moment to buy at any price. In the real world such a situation is unlikely so that the danger grows that a bad collapse is coming in a couple of years, a collapse which will find many innocent, hard-working people badly dumped on.

The last recession saw that happen with certain kinds of real estate. Second or vacation home prices were murdered as was the office-building segment of the real estate industry. Residential real estate, of course, did well, but that was last time, when prices weren't climbing at the disconcerting rates they are now.

In times like these, remember the new adage, don't seek shelter against inflation where too many others are already huddled.

A Time to Think About World Hunger

To the Editor:

Everyone who has ever heard a baby cry knows that feeding a hungry child is the most natural thing in the world, yet each year 20 million deaths occur from starvation and diseases related to malnutrition.

Since November, 1977, more than 100,000 people across the nation have made a personal commitment to look within themselves to discover what they as individuals can do to end death by starvation in the world within 20 years. These individuals, with their ranks expanding every day, have aligned themselves in the Hunger Project.

THE IDEA of the hunger project is to utilize the power of the individual to create a context . . . something that no organization or government can do. In simple terms, creating a context involves willing something to manifest and then personally committing yourself to make this happen.

The thousands of individuals already enrolled in the Hunger Project have all personally committed themselves to end hunger in 20 years. Individuals across the country have been creating their own forms of participation to make this happen.

For example, the governor of New York declared the month of May as a time for the state of New York to become aware of the problem. In Washington D.C., May 14 has been declared a day of awareness of world hunger. The Laguna Beach Hunger Project weekend of May 13-14 includes a beach run on Main Beach at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Entry fee is $5.

I think I've read everything that's been written on Jarvis-Gann in the last six months. Last night's (May 4) Pilot editorial was the best I've seen! Bravo.

Cut Deadwood

To the Editor:

The increasing almost hysterical outcries by Governor Brown and other politicians on Prop. 13, gives some clue as to their fear that this balloting in June will find the voters solidly giving the Jarvis-Gann measure their support, for a leaner, more efficient government.

Governor Brown's statements about "taking some $8 million 'out of circulation' will cause disaster and unemployment" are fear tactics obviously unsupported by economics. He should know better.

By removing the surplus tax revenues and cutting into the fat public trough to the tune of $8 billion (most now say $7 billion) will be putting money into circulation, and where it can do some productive work.

We have yet to see our tax money work productively. If some of the inefficient workers on the public payroll are lopped off, it will be for beneficial purposes, while the overburdened home owner has some relief.

Public borrowing on the bond market will be affected and the big banks like the Bank of America may not like Prop. 13 for that reason. But public bonds are borrowing by the government and should be also slowed down.

IT SEEMS useless to threaten that our schools will be affected, when they are so inefficient in educating our youngsters now, perhaps clearing out some of the deadwood may result in the hope that the students can at least be educated to read and write before graduating from high school.

As soon as it becomes less onerous to build and maintain houses and apartments, with less tax burden, more shelters will be built and the simple supply at the marketplace will bring down the rentals and thus benefit renters under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

America was built on the free marketplace enterprise economy, not by the politicians making new and more restrictive, more involved laws to restrict free enterprise.

The Jarvis-Gann initiative is a simple direct method of making the Legislature and the administration more efficient and responsive to the people whom they should be serving, and cut out the deadwood in the operation of the public machinery.

Lower Rents

To the Editor:

Jarvis says landlords will lower rents if Prop. 13 passes.

How can he speak for everyone?

I've kept rents on my triplex $50 lower than others in the area for several years. I live in fear of rent controls — getting caught with my rents down. This property is all I have.

I cannot lower rents to please Jarvis the way owners of big rents and commercial properties can. Such landlords are the only ones who would profit by Prop. 13.

Unhappy Namesake

To the Editor:

My name is John Manfredi, a rather uncommon name in these parts until last week. Since then, however, it appears that there are at least two of the same name around.

One John Manfredi is involved in a law suit filed by San Clemente Mayor Bill Walker and councilwoman Donna Wilkinson. The other John Manfredi is me, owner of Trotter Sign Company and a member of the San Clemente Chamber of Commerce.

I would like very much to make it clear that there are two Manfredis and would like to help your readers distinguish between the two. Unfortunately, I don't know the other Manfredi nor do I know what he looks like. However, I will describe myself and give your readers my background. I hope the other does the same.

I AM MALE, white, 5'8" tall, weighing 180 pounds, not counting my black moustache. I am 38 years old. One may readily recognize me by the standard work clothes I generally wear. These clothes are necessary because as owner of Trotter Sign Company, I design the signs, layout the lettering, do some installing and repair, and sweep the floor after everyone has gone home. (I do not do windows!)

The fact that my company occasionally does work for Mr. Bill Walker and his firm, and that I also support him, Donna Wilkinson and Roy Hamm adds nothing to my appearance, but, I feel, does point to good judgment.

Therefore, I would appreciate if your readers ever see or meet the above described John Manfredi on the street, in a restaurant, or at a job site, please wave or say hello. If not, and if this mistaken identity continues, I may be forced to change my name to John Smith.

Sex Attitudes

To the Editor:

In his diatribe against the homophile (Mailbox, May 3), the good George W. Kent overlooks evidence that he should be aware of or within availability to as a University of California, Irvine, professor of Comparative Cultures.

According to the Sex Information & Education Council of the United States, one of the nation's most respected authorities on the subject of sex: "Anthropological studies show that in cultures that tolerate homosexual activity all men participate in it as well as in heterosexual activity. In fact, the evidence from comparative zoology suggests that sexual attraction to both sexes is the norm and that exclusive heterosexuality is culturally imposed."

Dr. Wainwright Churchill, Director of the Philadelphia Mental Health Clinic's Psychoanalysis Department states that "in complete contrast to the attitude of Western civilization after the rise of Christianity, the pagans believed that sexual passion enobled every relationship (and) . . . beauty . . . was surrounded by an aura of religious awe. The young of both sexes were encouraged to cultivate whatever natural beauty they had through excercise, sports and gymnastics (and) the human body was revered as the most beautiful of all nature's creations.

"THESE attitudes were partly responsible for the pagan attitude toward homosexuality. It was not felt that sexual feelings would spoil a friendship nor that they were reserved for only . . . procreativity nor was it felt that masculine beauty should be appreciated only by women and feminine beauty only by men.

"The sexes were not polarized in the pagan mind. (They) believed that all human beings possessed both feminine and masculine attributes . . . that man, in his original form, was a bisexual creature.

"If exclusive heterosexuality was rare among them, so was exclusive homosexuality. People were not expected to choose between two mutually exclusive ways of loving."

Bay Area Gays on March

1,000 Protest Repeal of Wichita Rights Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 1,000 chanting San Franciscans, many of them homosexuals, marched through city streets in protest just hours after voters in Wichita, Kan. repealed a gay rights ordinance. (Related stories, A4, A12)

The protest Tuesday night was peaceful, police said.

"WE HAD WORD there would be a protest as soon as the Wichita vote started coming through," said Officer Elsen Broich.

The march appeared to be a combination protest over the Wichita vote and a statewide initiative that, if approved by voters in November, would let school districts fire or refuse to hire avowed homosexuals or those who support gay lifestyles.

THE MARCHERS, swelling to number about 1,000 by 11 p.m., chanted "Wichita means fight back," "Civil rights or civil war," and other slogans as they strode 10 and 15 abreast from Castro Street down busy Market Street, then up Polk Street and over to Union Square. Castro and Polk streets are predominantly gay neighborhoods.

Earlier in the day, a Wichita ordinance barring discrimination against homosexuals was overwhelmingly repealed by a more than 4-1 margin. Two weeks ago, when a similar ordinance was overturned in St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco homosexuals staged a similar but smaller march, police said.

A city ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals was just recently approved here by the board of supervisors, without controversy. There has been no move to repeal that ordinance.

Smog Stations Hit For 'Deficiencies'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A California auditor general's report says nearly two-thirds of the state's auto smog inspection stations are deficient, and official lamp and brake stations are hardly ever inspected.

The report, out Tuesday, recommended that the Bureau of Automotive Repair increase its staff to take care of the problems.

BUT CONSUMER Affairs Director Richard Spohn, whose department administers the bureau, said the report contained "numerous false statements, half-truths and distortions."

The bureau also licenses most auto repair shops and mediates consumer complaints. Some of its operations are paid by license and registration fees.

Deficiencies cited by the report included failure to have proper tools for inspection and engine tune-ups, failure to employ a licensed pollution device installer, and failure to keep up with the latest pollution control technology.

Porn Films Jail Pair

IMPERIAL BEACH (AP) — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for investigation of making pornographic films involving young boys after police confiscated more than 100 sex-oriented films and slides at his apartment, officers said.

Bail for Archie Murray, 39, a fourth-grade teacher at Westview Elementary School, was set Tuesday at $4,250, Imperial Beach police said.

Richard Rollings, 18, a security guard identified as Murray's roommate, also was arrested Monday when police armed with a search warrant arrived.

Jarvis Drops Libel Claim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis says he'll dismiss his $800,000 libel claim filed against the Grossmont High School District over a story printed in a student newspaper.

The story appeared March 10 in the Granite Hills High School Clarion and was written by 16-year-old Brad Teaby. It tried to explain the controversial property tax limitation initiative on the June 6 ballot.

But part of Teaby's story alleged Jarvis and Gann were "prominent real estate owners" who stood to reap "several million dollars" in tax savings if the proposition passed.

15 Escape Air Crash

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Twelve passengers and three crew members walked away from a twin-engined transport plane that skidded an estimated 1,500 feet on its belly, an official reports.

STATE

The accident shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday involved an executive-type turbo-prop plane of the Santa Barbara-based Apollo Airways.

The executive director of the airport, James Ellingsworth, said "It did leave the ground by about 20 feet when, for some reason, the pilot aborted. He set it down on its belly and it slid probably 1,500 feet." He said he didn't see any obvious injuries.

Dinner Swells Fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has pulled off the most lucrative fund raiser ever staged by a Democratic gubernatorial incumbent, convincing 1,000 people to contribute more than $300,000 toward his reelection campaign.

After all the bills are paid, the $250-per-plate dinner Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel will have netted Brown between $210,000 and $250,000, said campaign manager Gray Davis.

Brown has collected $700,000 so far, Davis said, and hopes to stretch that to at least $1 million before the June 6 primary, in which he is unopposed.

Drink Draws Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Woodland Hills restaurant where television actor Dan Haggerty was burned by a flaming drink has been fined $1,500 for fire code violations.

Representatives of The Red Onion pleaded no contest to two charges of serving a flaming drink and one charge of over-crowding before Municipal Court Judge David Kennick Tuesday.

One of the flaming drink violations occurred Nov. 19, 1977, the same night Haggerty, who portrays Grizzly Adams, was burned. However, Los Angeles Fire Department Inspector Gene Lindley said none of the charges related to the Haggerty incident.

Gates Makes Apology

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police Chief Daryl Gates has made a public apology for making a statement last week in which he called Latino police officers "lazy" and "unmotivated."

Gates delivered the prepared apology Tuesday shortly after Chicano groups gathered outside police headquarters at Parker Center.

TUBE TOPPERS

KTLA (5) 8:00 — "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" Jane Fonda gives one of her best performances in this drama about marathon dancing with Michael Sarrazin and Oscar winner Gig Young from 1969.

CBS (2) 9:00 — "Murder at the Mardi Gras." A new TV movie set in New Orleans with Didi Conn and David Groh as tourists who find romance and danger.

NBC (4) 9:00 — Dean Martin Roast. Jimmy Stewart is tonight's roastee with guest stars Orson Welles, Milton Berle, Janet Leigh, June Allyson, Mickey Rooney, Lucille Ball, Rich Little and others.

NBC Can't Roll on 'Wheels' Alone

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC scored with the first chapter of "Wheels," a miniseries based on the novel by Arthur Hailey, but it was the network's only entry among the week's 20 most-watched shows, A. C. Nielsen Company figures show.

ABC, meanwhile, was first again in the standings.

NBC won the ratings race two weeks ago with its "Holocaust" miniseries, but "Wheels" — the first episode Sunday night was No. 6 for the week ending May 7 — was far less controversial and received relatively little advance attention.

ABC's "THREE'S Company" was the week's most-watched show, as it had been often during the fall and winter, followed by two CBS programs, "M-A-S-H" and "One Day at a Time." Another ABC program, "Laverne and Shirley," ranked first by Nielsen for the fall-winter season, had the same rating as "One Day at a Time" but claimed a smaller share of the audience watching at the time it was shown.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 28.7. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 28.7 percent saw at least part of the program.

ABC claimed five of the week's 10 top-rated shows — and 12 of the first 20. CBS had seven of the top 20. The configuration contributed to a rating for the week for ABC of 18.4. CBS was second at 17.3 and NBC third at 15.5.

THE NETWORKS SAY that means in an average prime-time minute, 18.4 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

CBS and ABC had two shows at the bottom of the list of 66. ABC's "Mel and Susan Show" was No. 62, NBC's "Hanna-Barbera Happy Hour" No. 63, "Sugar Time" on ABC No. 64 and two CBS programs, "The Rita Moreno Show" and "CBS Reports" 65th and 66th.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"THREE'S COMPANY," with a 28.7 rating representing 20.9 million homes, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 28.4 or 20.7 milliou, CBS; "One Day at a Time," CBS, and "Laverne and Shirley," ABC, both 26.7 or 19.5 million; "Happy Days," 23.8 or 17.4 million, ABC; Big Event, "Wheels," Part I, 23.2 or 16.9 million, NBC; "60 Minutes," 22.6 or 16.5 million, CBS; "Charlie's Angels," 22.5 or 16.3 million, and "Love Boat," 22.3 or 16.3 million, both ABC, and "Lou Grant," 22.1 or 16.1 million, CBS.

The next 10 shows: "Fantasy Island," "Carter Country" and "The Phenomenon of Benji," all ABC; "Elvis in Concert," CBS; "What's Happening," ABC; "All in the Family" and "Hawaii Five-O," both CBS, and "Barney Miller," "Battle of the Network Stars" and "Starsky and Hutch," all ABC.

Esther Rolle Rejoins Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Esther Rolle will return to the CBS comedy "Good Times" in the fall after a year's absence.

The show dropped in the ratings after Miss Rolle quit the show, leaving the children without parents. Earlier, John Amos had left the show.

During past year Miss Rolle starred in Broadway in "Macbeth" and just finished the CBS movie "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings." She will also star in a movie for NBC, "The Summer of My German Soldier."

'Bud and Lou' TV Film Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harvey Korman will play Bud Abbott and Buddy Hackett will be Lou Costello in the NBC movie about the famous comedy team, "Bud and Lou."

Red Button will portray Eddie Sherman, the comedy team's manager in the two-hour film.

George Lefferts based his script on Bob Thomas' book about the off-camera feuding between the two comedians.

Dream Realized?

Didi Conn stars as a hash house cashier from Cleveland who wins a trip to New Orleans in the TV movie "Murder at the Mardi Gras" tonight at 9 on CBS, Channel 2.
