Humor Cause of UCI Action

By PHILIP ROSMARIN

Editors of the UC Irvine student newspaper, the New U, have charged that once again the contents of their journal have caused it to wind up at the city dump.

They claim that up to 5,000 copies of this week's edition were consigned to the ash can by students who objected to the content of an advertisement carried in a humor supplement.

Last January, editors said 3,000 newspapers were junked by a few students who reacted to a story with photographs of a wet T-shirt contest designed to allow young women to show off their breasts.

The ad in Tuesday's edition was for a magazine, "The Jew You" and touted article titles implying that Jews are usurers, enjoy killing Arabs, and have big noses.

Besides the ad, an article also contained in the humor supplement refers to Jews as "a group of noisy (and pretty damn rude) people."

Hijacker Grabbed; LA Hostage Freed

BULLETIN

A man demanding $200,000 ransom and transportation to Cuba was taken into custody this morning after he hijacked a plane in Arizona.

His remaining hostage, Mary Ellen Paul of Los Angeles, was released unharmed.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man armed with a knife and demanding $200,000 and transportation to Havana hijacked a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner on a flight from Phoenix to Tucson Friday, the airline said.

The plane was Flight 62, which originated in Los Angeles and was bound for Miami. It had left Phoenix at 9:15 a.m. local time and arrived at Tucson at 9:40 a.m.

The plane landed at Tucson International Airport, and everyone but a female flight attendant and the hijacker got off unharmed, according to Continental spokesman Jack Gregor in Los Angeles. The plane had carried 89 passengers.

"Everybody is safely off the aircraft, including the cockpit crew, except for one flight attendant," Gregor said. "She is being held hostage."

FBI agents were lying underneath the tail of the plane attempting to negotiate with the hijacker, who Gregor said was dressed in a business suit and had boarded the flight in Los Angeles.

Continental spokesman John Clayton said he was "under the impression that he was using a knife."

A reporter for the Tucson Citizen said the pilot and co-pilot fled through the cockpit windows.

Frantic Pleas Ignored

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked."

Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today.

"The highway was busy at the time because it was when everyone was going in to town and

China Drawback Disputed by Viets

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — China declared today that all its troops have withdrawn from Vietnam, ending a nearly month-long invasion, but Vietnam-dominated country to the west, accused Peking of crossing its border.

Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua told reporters in Peking today that all Chinese troops have pulled out of Vietnam, Japan's Kyodo News Service reported in Tokyo.

The dispatch from the Chinese capital said Huang also called on Vietnam to hold a meeting of deputy foreign ministers of China and Vietnam as soon as possible.

But he did not say if Chinese troops had pulled out of areas in which Vietnam claimed the Chinese put up new boundary markers.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted four members of former Gov. Ray Blanton's administration, alleging thousands of dollars and expensive gifts changed hands in a four-year scheme that allowed Tennessee convicts to buy their freedom.

A Nashville lawyer and a former Democratic Party committeeman also were indicted Thursday by the panel, which has been investigating allegations of a clemency-for-cash operation since May 1978.

Blanton, who testified before the grand jury in December, was told he was one of those being investigated. However, he was not accused of any wrongdoing in the 49-page indictment.

"It's kind of ironic that some of the groups that were upset were the Jewish students, the gay community and the Christian community.

"Some of the most outlandish humor about them were written by people who come from those backgrounds.

Lottery Set for Non-existent Church

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A self-described minister who received his credentials by mail order is hiring area children to sell lottery tickets to benefit the expansion of a church that doesn't exist, Irvine police said Thursday.

A drawing is supposed to be held at "St. John's Church," in the ministry of the Universal Life Church, at noon on Saturday at 23331 El Toro Road in El Toro.

If someone shows up for it, police detective Paul Jessup said, he'll be disappointed.

There is no church at the address. There is, however, a professional office building there, and among the tenants is an answering service which the "minister" used.

He is no longer a client, and officials of the service assure callers they had never planned to host a lottery and don't engage in any business other than answering telephones and recording messages for clients.

The Universal Life Church is a nondenominational organization based in Modesto that, for a fee, will mail to anyone credentials showing he is a minister of the church.

Police are withholding the name of the man until they are able to build a case against him.

They have gone public with the investigation in hopes of turning up victims who purchased lottery tickets.

Police believe the tickets were sold from November of last year up until this month.

An unknown number of children were used to solicit door-to-door in neighborhoods in Irvine, and possibly Costa Mesa and Orange, where police say the man is known to have operated before.

Tickets sold for $1 each. The children were paid 25 cents for each ticket they sold. Thousands of tickets were distributed.

Printed on the tickets was:

"Support Your Local Church For the Expansion of St. John's Church."

The lottery offered a $1,000 cash first prize and other prizes of $300, $200 and $100.

Tickets were about the size of an index card, were blue in color, and had four-digit numbers printed on them.

Residents who bought the tickets, or whose children were duped into selling them, Jessup said, may contact him at 754-3718.

Jessup said police learned of the matter when the mother of one of the children who sold tickets thought the procedure odd, checked with a friend in El Toro, and discovered there was no such church.

Police said there was one statement printed on the tickets that seemed genuine.

It said, "Winner need not be present."

Mesa Cops Recover $7,000; Two Held

Two people were arrested and nearly $7,000 in stolen antique merchandise was recovered Thursday by Costa Mesa police.

Detective Dave Hayes said the recovered items were stolen from the Harvest, a store specializing in antique merchandise. The store is located at 2664 Newport Blvd.

Taken into custody by police were Costa Mesa residents William Branco of 2668 Newport Blvd. and Angie Masten of 2975 Babb St. Brnco was booked on two counts of burglary and two counts of possession of stolen property; Ms. Babb was booked on one burglary count and two counts of possession of stolen property.

Hayes said all the merchandise taken from The Harvest in two separate burglaries — one in January and another last weekend — had been recovered by police.

According to police reports, the store was burglarized late Saturday night and Sunday when it was closed. In all, about $5,000 in merchandise was taken. The other $2,000 in merchandise was reported missing in the January burglary.

The owner of the store, Helga Harvest, told police he had no theft insurance and would go out of business unless the merchandise was recovered.

Acting on a tip, Hayes said officers went to the homes of Branco and Ms. Babb Thursday, where they found much of the missing antique loot.

The detective said the suspects offered no resistance.

The stolen merchandise included mugs, dishes, baskets and other kitchen utensils, all imported from Europe.

Arraignment for the pair is scheduled for Monday.

Marvin Attorneys Told to Wind Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin's lawyers are under orders to rest their case today, and Michelle Triola Marvin's attorney says rebuttal testimony will attempt to show "what a loving, caring, giving lady she was."

Marvin's lawyers were told by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall on Thursday that they were being held to an earlier promise that they would end their case today.

"The court believes ample leeway has been given to all counsel to proceed with their case," said Marshall.

Marvin's presentation was to conclude with some final details of the actor's finances during the six years he and Miss Marvin lived together.

Testimony has shown Marvin earned $3.6 million during that period. Miss Marvin is suing for half.

The defense team, claiming the actor owes Miss Marvin nothing, presented 36 witnesses in some four weeks of testimony to prove that point.

Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, said he would call 18 to 20 witnesses in a rebuttal case expected to run through next week.

"These witnesses will refute every single point these people brought up," Marvin said.

The last witness to testify Thursday angered Miss Marvin, who shouted out in court: "They're lying. I don't even know her!"

West Bank Woes

Discord Snags Peace Effort

By The Associated Press

A faction in the Israeli Cabinet is demanding that the government commit itself to stepped-up Jewish settlement in the West Bank of the Jordan River and continued Israeli security control of the area, it was learned today.

The discord apparently is one reason Menachem Begin has postponed for 24 hours the Cabinet's consideration of the full Egyptian-Israeli treaty, originally scheduled for Sunday.

A Begin spokesman said the delay resulted from the prime minister's illness: He has been ordered to bed because of a cold.

But it also will give Begin time to try to head off a clash over the demands of a three-man National Religious Party faction in the 17-member Cabinet.

In Egypt, meanwhile, President Anwar Sadat declared today that the "real test" of the peace process will come after the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, when the two countries open negotiations on establishing self-rule for the Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, another Israeli-occupied territory.

"I know Begin will be raising hell as he always does, but, my God, I shall be raising hell for him also," Sadat said at an impromptu news conference in his home village.

The White House announced that a U.S. delegation, including President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Carter's son Chip, is heading for the Mideast today in an attempt to persuade Arab leaders to change their minds and support the proposed Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The delegation will meet with leaders of two moderate Arab states, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, whose support is considered crucial to future success of the U.S.-sponsored peace drive.

The Camp David accords call for Jordanian participation in the West Bank-Gaza negotiations, but Jordan has refused to accept the invitation, making it more likely that only Egypt, Israel and the United States will negotiate self-rule arrangements for the Palestinians.

David Glass, a National Religious Party member of the Israeli Parliament, told The Associated Press that the NRP's demands in the Cabinet are not being presented as an ultimatum as the Cabinet prepares to debate the treaty.

coming out from work," Mayberry said.

Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville, just north of Franklin.

"The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said. "They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help."

The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman.

Partygoers Robbed of $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

"I think they were wild enough to shoot us," said Mrs. Mortimer Fleishhacker, who lost several rings to the robbers.

She and the other guests were forced to lie on the floor of the sprawling, one-story home as they were robbed.

At least one woman standing amid the deviled eggs, rolled-up cheese and German wine hors d'ouevres managed to slip a valuable diamond ring into her bodice, unseen by the robbers, police said.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

Patrolman John Stumpf said two young men knocked at the door of hostess Mary Anders' home at 6:20 p.m., about 20 minutes after the party started, and identified themselves as police officers.

They pushed their way past a maid who realized her error and tried to close the door against them.

As one of the robbers held a .38 caliber revolver to the maid's head, the well-heeled guests were ordered to lie face down on the floor, police said.

Police said Mrs. Anders reported she received a phone call about 6 p.m. from a young woman who asked about the party and was told it was invitation only. Police believe the caller may have been working with the robbers.

Another guest who accompanied Mrs. Fleishhacker to the party, Elizabeth Grossman, said she pleaded with the holdup men that she couldn't get a diamond ring off her finger because she had not had it off in years. She said the two called her a vile name and she managed to wrench it off.

Pay Pact Nixed

Teachers Declare Impasse

Negotiations between teachers and the Newport-Mesa Unified School District have reached an impasse, with the organization representing employees rejecting a five percent salary increase.

District Superintendent John Nicoll said the two sides broke off bargaining late Wednesday afternoon. The teachers, represented by the Newport-Mesa Education Association, are expected to ask for a state mediator to enter the stalled talks.

Teacher negotiators had turned down a 3.5 percent salary offer last week. They are standing firm on a demand for the district to fund a bonus for teachers with 15 years of service. The district claims it cannot afford it.

"We maintain that this is a priority issue and we will continue to fight for it," a statement by teachers says.

Nicoll said the district's latest offer would have provided for a top salary of $21,924 for the 322 teachers at the top of the pay schedule. The offer also would have provided for an average boost of $950 annually for all teachers, retroactive to July 1, 1978.

The declaration of impasse by the Newport-Mesa Education Association now goes to the state Public Employment Relations Board, which is expected to refer the matter to the state Conciliation Service.

ANDY ANDREWS SHOWS HOW TO FLUSH NEWPORT BAY
He Wants To Try His Idea But Officials Are Cautious

Straight Flush Beats Full Bay

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Ottie "Andy" Andrews was a little boy growing up in Massachusetts, he started "playing around" to see how tidal currents could be harnessed.

His initial experiments washed out a yacht club dock and tore out a couple hundred feet of river banks.

Now Andrews thinks he has a way that kind of energy could be put to work cleaning out the silt that's clogging Newport Bay.

He likes to call his proposed project the "Self Cleaning Bay."

Andrews, currently a Long Beach resident, has been studying Newport's siltation problems since retiring as a gas truck driver 10 years ago.

He figures it would cost a minimum of $4 million to dredge the silt out of the Upper Bay alone, not to mention the ongoing costs of preventing another build up.

"Why not put nature to work to clean it out?" he asks.

Andrews, who describes himself as an inventor, has designed a combined wave pump and tidal gate structure that he says would be the solution to the siltation problem.

What he'd like to do is cut a channel from the beach at 43rd Street to Balboa Boulevard, with an eight foot underground pipe connecting the channel to the bay behind Newport Island. That's the wave pump.

Then, he'd string a series of water barriers between islands in the Upper Bay to make a loop-shaped channel. That chan-

Ray Resco Arrested In Court

Raymond Resco, who missed his Orange County Superior Court murder trial Thursday because, he said, he feared for his life, showed up in court this morning and was promptly arrested on burglary charges.

Resco's attorney, Thomas Crosby, and prosecutor Jay Moseley had just completed final arguments in Resco's murder case when Newport Beach police officer Al Epstein showed up in court with a warrant for the burglary arrest.

Resco was quickly taken into custody by a courtroom bailiff on suspicion of three counts each of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Epstein declined to elaborate on the burglary charges. Bail was set at $60,000.

But, according to other Newport Beach police sources, the charges stem from a series of Santa Ana burglaries in which stereo equipment, electric guitars and amplifiers were taken.

Police allege the items were found in the Newport Crest condominium that Resco vacated last weekend.

Crosby said he would attempt to have his client arraigned on the burglary charges today and to get him free on bail.

Moments before Resco's arrest today Moseley had complained that he didn't have the murder defendant's current address.

But Crosby suggested such information be related outside open court "because of the problems of yesterday."

Resco, one of seven persons charged with the October, 1977, slaying of Fountain Valley drug dealer Stephen Bovan claimed Thursday that an unknown assailant tried to shoot him Wednesday night hours before his scheduled court appearance.

Judge Robert Kneeland, who is hearing arguments in the murder case, issued a warrant for Resco's arrest Thursday, but

Finish Eyed

Bushmills Racer Determined

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Last year, Rocky Aoki started all eight offshore power boat races on the Grand Prix circuit.

He never finished any of them.

This year's season opens Saturday with the Bushmills Grand Prix off the Orange Coast and Aoki is determined it'll be different.

He has a new boat and a new engine. "I'm an innovator," he said. He also recognizes the old racing dictum that you can't win the race unless you finish it.

The 40-year-old restaurant chain owner jokes about last year's failures, but they obviously are a sore point with him.

So his innovations for this year are centered on the idea of not only being fast but having a boat that is less likely to break down mid-race. Those breakdowns cost him the 1977 and 1978 Bushmills after he won the 1976 race.

This year, he and his crew will be going out in a wooden hulled catamaran, the only one on the circuit.

Wood is faster and the catamaran design has some aerodynamic design advantages, he said. The boat is powered by a Chrysler engine that Aoki hopes will prove to be more durable over the 180-mile course.

The new outfit cost him $800,000 which he spent without hesitation.

"Winning is everything," he explained. "Coming in second is the same as coming in last."

Aoki, who made his mark in the business world as the owner of the Benihana restaurant and hotel chain, says he took up power boat racing to escape

Airliner Hijacker Captured

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man demanding $200,000 and transportation to Havana hijacked a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner on a flight from Phoenix to Tucson today, the airline said. He was taken into custody later at the airport.

The plane landed at Tucson International Airport, and everyone but a female flight attendant and the hijacker got off the plane unharmed, according to Continental spokesman Jack Gregor in Los Angeles.

The flight attendant, identified as Mary Ellen Paul, of Los Angeles, was later freed unharmed, and authorities said the hijacker was taken into custory.

The plane had carrie 89 passengers.

Gregor said an FBI age . n. d boarded the plane at the a .rport.

A reporter at the airport said he saw a man in an orange vest stand on the roof of a police car at the nose of the plane and pull himself up through the cockpit window.

There were reports the hijacker was armed with a knife, but Continental said it could not confirm that.

The FBI identified the suspect as John Carleton Kivlen, 52, of San Rafael.

N-M Trustees To Interview 5 Candidates

Officials of the Newport Mesa School District have received 10 applications from persons interested in being appointed to a seat on the district's Board of Trustees.

The board is scheduled to meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Harper Community Center in Costa Mesa to interview five of the candidates.

Trustees will pick one of the 10 hopefuls at their next regular board meeting, Tuesday, March 27. Whoever is chosen will replace trustee Duke O'Brien, who has resigned from the panel effective March 31.

The ten applicants for the job are William Bandaruk, a consulting engineer; Christopher Creely, a bookstore owner; Robert De Berry, a school administrator in Santa Ana; Karen McGlinn, who is active in PTA and civic affairs; Michael McLaughlin, an attorney; Janet Pelichowski, a parent and volunteer; K. Paul Raver, a county official; Conrad Trigilio, a district circulation manager for the Daily Pilot; Jerome Vandewalle, a mechanical engineer, and Richmond Westlake, a student at Cal State Fullerton majoring in public administration.

Whoever the board appoints will serve out O'Brien's term, which expires Nov. 30.

Party Hit For $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

'I think they were wild enough to shoot us," said Mrs. Mortimer Fleishhacker, who lost several rings to the robbers.

She and the other guests were forced to lie on the floor of the sprawling, one-story home as they were robbed.

At least one woman standing amid the deviled eggs, rolled-up cheese and German wine hors d'ouevres managed to slip a valuable diamond ring into her bodice, unseen by the robbers, police said.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor — may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

Patrolman John Stumpf said two young men knocked at the door of hostess Mary Anders' home at 6:20 p.m., about 20 minutes after the party started, and identified themselves as police officers.

They pushed their way past a maid who realized her error and tried to close the door against them.

Dying Woman Ignored by Commuters

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked."

Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today.

"The highway was busy at the time because it was when everyone was going in to town and coming out from work," Mayberry said.

"At first, when I was nearing the area, I thought the report was a joke. Traffic was like normal — busy. But once I got near the car, I could see her.

"Others must have seen her, too. Just was no one stopped. They slowed down and looked but no one stopped. People acted like nothing was going on."

Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville just north of Franklin.

"The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said. "They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help."

The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman.

"I think she had been there 10 or 15 minutes before I got there," Mayberry said. "I think if somebody had gotten to her sooner, she might have had a chance."

nel would have tidal gates at the two bottom ends.

Here's how it works.

The wave pump is based on the venturi principle of increasing the velocity of waves that would hit the channel by constricting its size.

He estimates 100,000 gallons a minute could be pumped through the channel and pipe during a day of two-foot surf, even when the tide is falling.

That water, when combined with the channelization of the Upper Bay barriers and gates would flush the silt out of the Upper Bay and Lower Bay and take it out to sea.

Andrews, who's trying to interest the state Department of Fish and Game and the county Environmental Management Agency in his plan, concedes that he's got no idea how much it would cost.

"But it'd be cheaper in the long run than having to keep dredging the bay out or letting it die," he observes.

To illustrate his point, Andrews has been hauling a model of his tide gates and wave pump around with him and with the aid of a garden hose and some food coloring he'll demonstrate his theory to anyone who's interested.

George Osborne, head of the county's EMA, says he's reserving judgment of the proposal until a working model of the bay is built.

"You really can't predict how it would work from the demonstration I saw," he commented.

Aside from the engineering and construction problems that Andrews' plan entails, Osborne brought up one other potential road block:

"The prospect of getting all the permits you'd need from all the agencies involved — well it's practically overwhelming," he said.

Andrews says he'll keep trying to get people interested in his idea. He figures the bay has about 12 years before the silt kills the marine life, plants and birds that live here now.

"This had been a dream of mine since I was a kid, to clean up a bay like this. Right now all I want is for some agency to be interested enough to let me build a working model," he said.

said today, "I don't think we particularly wanted to promote ethnic humor; most of it had to do with belief rather than ethnicity.

"It's kind of ironic that some of the groups that were upset were the Jewish students, the gay community and the Christian community.

"Some of the most outlandish humor about them were written by people who come from those backgrounds.

"No one was trying to offend the Jewish students, and I'm sorry that they were offended."

Clucas said he is trying to hang onto his post as editor until the end of June, when a new one is scheduled to be named.

"This is just supposed to be an educational opportunity anyway," Clucas said. "Boy, am I getting an education."

Nurse Fights Rape Attempt In Newport

A vacationing student nurse told Newport Beach police a man tried to rape her while she was at the beach at Balboa this week

The 21-year-old Montana resident reported the incident Thursday. She said it happened at about noon Wednesday, but she was too upset to report it.

According to the police report the man sat down and chatted with the woman and attacked her while she got up to leave.

She said she fought him off when he said he was going to rape her and she ran for help to a group of people about 100 yards away.

She said her assailant had brown hair and eyes, was dressed in cut off jeans and had a bicycle with him on the beach.

Law Exempts Valley Farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston introduced legislation Thursday to exempt the farms of California's Imperial Valley from federal reclamation law acreage limits.

On another matter, the California Democrat told a news conference he was shelving another bill which would have authorized some $240 million in child care assistance to working parents over two years.

Whale Watch Group Fears Boat Races

Members of Whale Watch, a Newport Beach-based organization, said today they are concerned about collisions Saturday between boat racers and migrating California gray whales.

The 180-mile Bushmills Grand Prix is slated along the Orange Coast from Seal Beach to Dana Point and Mike Hickey, a Whale Watch spokesman, said the course is in the whales' migration path.

"There are at least 25 whales a day coming through here," he said.

Hickey's organization has asked the Pacific Offshore Power Boat Racing Association, organizers of the race, to warn drivers of the hazard, a precaution that has been taken each year since the race started in 1976.

A race spokesman said that there have been no problems with whales and racers during any previous Bushmills Grand Prix races off the Orange Coast.

However, Hickey said his group will be on the course Saturday morning prior to the start of the race to scout whales.

"We'll be in contact with the Coast Guard and the race committee," he said. "If we find any whales that might be a hazard, we'll be able to warn the committee."

business headaches.

He pursues his racing hobby with the same intensity that he runs his international corporation. A quiet man, he means it when he says winning is everything.

There was the race last year in San Francisco, for instance. It was so rough that his navigator opened a gash on his chin when his face smashed into the dash board and also managed to break his ankle.

Ocean racers stand, using their legs to cushion the blows their boats take. The broken ankle was obviously a painful hindrance. So Aoki slowed the boat and he and the throttle man put the navigator in the water for a committee-boat to come fetch.

It turned out to be a useless move, they were unable to finish the race because the boat later cracked in half in the rough water.

Aoki may face a similar problem Saturday, only this time it may be his crew who'll be putting him over the side.

Last October he dislocated his knee in a crash during a closed course race in a small one-man boat. The knee was repaired in surgery, but he says he hasn't got full use of it yet.

So his new boat has a seat in it to protect his knee. "This is a test race for me as well as the boat," he said.

He may be leaving business pressures behind but he's trading them in for worries about his engine, his knee, the boat and the weather.

If it gets too rough, the wooden hull can crack open like an egg hitting concrete.

He's riding atop 300 gallons of high octane aviation fuel and fire is a very real danger. It happened three times last year.

Then there's the wind that could pick his catamaran up and flip it over.

But it's all worth it to Aoki. He might win and that possibility "makes you forget about everything — even the chance you might be killed.

"You know you could die but when you get out there, all you think about is winning that race," he said.

Mesa Cops Recover $7,000; Two Held

Two people were arrested and nearly $7,000 in stolen antique merchandise was recovered Thursday by Costa Mesa police.

Detective Dave Hayes said the recovered items were stolen from the Harvest, a store specializing in antique merchandise. The store is located at 2664 Newport Blvd.

Taken into custody by police were Costa Mesa residents William Branco of 2668 Newport Blvd. and Angie Masten of 2975 Babb St. Brnco was booked on two counts of burglary and two counts of possession of stolen property. Ms. Babb was booked on one burglary count and two counts of possession of stolen property.

Hayes said all the merchandise taken from The Harvest in two separate burglaries — one in January and another last weekend — had been recovered by police.

According to police reports, the store was burglarized late Saturday night and Sunday when it was closed. In all, about $5,000 in merchandise was taken. The other $2,000 in merchandise was reported missing in the January burglary.

The owner of the store, Helga Harvest, told police he had no theft insurance and would go out of business unless the merchandise was recovered.

Acting on a tip, Hayes said officers went to the homes of Branco and Ms. Babb Thursday, where they found much of the missing antique loot.

The detective said the suspects offered no resistance.

The stolen merchandise included mugs, dishes, baskets and other kitchen utensils, all imported from Europe.

College Employees Get Pay Increases

Coast Community College District employees have been granted an average four percent salary increase.

Granted by trustees Wednesday night, the increases are retroactive beginning Feb. 1 for the district's 700 faculty members and beginning March 1 for classified employees and management.

The increases raise the average faculty member's salary to about $22,880 annually, compared with the previous $22,000, a spokesman said.

Chancellor Norman E. Watson's previous $54,451 salary moves upward to $56,629, the spokesman said.

The increases, granted after discussion with employee bargaining units, follow the state Supreme Court's ruling that wage freezes on government employees imposed because of tax cuts brought about by Proposition 13 are unconstitutional.

Wages for government workers throughout the state had been frozen since last summer.

Lump-sum payments for the retroactive portions of the raise agreement are expected to show up on employees' paychecks sometime within the next four to six weeks, the spokesman said.

The raises are the first since July, 1977. Raises normally are granted in July but were withheld in 1978 because of the state-imposed wage freeze.

Negotiations for more raises will begin this summer, a spokesman said.

College Land Swap Rapped by Students

Agriculture students are protesting plans to trade seven acres of Coast Community College District land for property in Fountain Valley to be used for an administration center.

Spokesmen for about 16 protesting students told college trustees Wednesday that the college property on Adams Street in Costa Mesa is used to grow feed for Orange Coast College livestock.

They contend that giving the seven acres for five acres owned by Garden Grove physician Maxwell Roston is an unfair exchange and would further decrease diminishing open land at the Orange Coast College campus in Costa Mesa.

The Fountain Valley property on Euclid Street at Warner Avenue would be used for construction of Coastline College's administrative headquarters.

RESCO. . .

ordered it held on the assurance from Resco's attorney that his client would appear in court today.

According to Resco, the shooting occurred about midnight when he and his wife were leaving their Fountain Valley apartment to go to an all-night restaurant.

He contended several shots were fired from an auto before it pulled away.

He said he and his wife got in their car and "kept on driving" without returning to their home.

Fountain Valley police had said the only shooting incident reported to them was about a mile from Resco's apartment near Slater Avenue and Ward Street, but turned out to be a false report.

Resco's attorney, Thomas Crosby, had told Judge Kneeland Thursday his client was in hiding in fear of his life.

Both Resco and his co-defendant and brother-in-law Anthony Marone Jr., 24, of Huntington Beach have waived their right to a jury trial on the murder charge.

Police have charged that the two and Jerry Peter Fiori, also of Huntington Beach, killed Bovan to fulfill a $25,000 murder contract issued by some Newport Beach businessmen with ties to the Hare Krishna religious sect.

Fiori, the admitted trigger man, already has been convicted of second degree murder and is serving nine years in prison.

In arguing his case against Resco today prosecutor Jay Moseley contended the defendant took part in the slaying and deserves a second degree murder conviction.

He argued that Resco accompanied Marone Jr. and Fiori to the place where Bovan was shot.

And it was Resco, Moseley said, who "threw the gun into the Back Bay to help conceal the murder."

However, Crosby argued that the most his client could possibly be convicted of is "accessory after the fact of murder" for his disposal of the gun.

On Thursday Kneeland listened to arguments in Marone Jr.'s trial and is expected to rule later.

Return Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The return of a U.S. Marine from Vietnam is being delayed by the Vietnamese government because of a misunderstanding over whether the United States regards him as a war prisoner, U.S. officials say. But the officials, who asked not to be identified, said they expect the conflict to be resolved quickly and that Pfc. Robert Garwood, 33, will be allowed to leave Vietnam in a few days.

Will St. Paddy's Be Peaceful Day?

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

FAITH AND BEGORRA, for on this Saturday's a day when Seal Beach police wish everyone was Italian or imagined themselves to be. Then a quiet St. Patrick's Day would be assumed.

"We're going to handle it just like we did last year," says Police Chief Ed Cibbarelli, whose men encountered relatively little 1978 revelry of the law-breaking variety.

CHIEF CIBBARELLI

SEAL BEACH IN YEARS past, a picturesque seaside hamlet boasting two classic pubs in the same 100 block of Main Street — Clancy's and the Irisher-by-the-Sea — has been shamed by a bit of March 17 turmoil.

One recent Saint Paddy's Day, a full-scale riot erupted, leading to a call for help from numerous other Orange County law enforcement agencies. But conditions are considered appreciably mellowed now.

No one has even advanced any specific theory for selection of Seal Beach in previous years by those who are Irish or wish they were on that day and worked up real Irish thirsts.

CHIEF CIBBARELLI suggests that this year, sheer urban sprawl and commercial development in the surrounding area may lessen St. Patrick's day fervor on his town's Main Street even more.

Relatively few problems were encountered at all last year, when Seal Beach police literally marked March 17 off the calendar and just looked south and whistled until March 18 came around, as the saying goes.

They ignored St. Paddy's Day, in short and nothing much happened.

Chief Cibbarelli notes that many larger restaurants and watering holes such as those in Marina Village across the San Gabriel River in Long Beach are absorbing many celebrants.

JONGRY JOSE'S, a Mexican restaurant in Marina Village, wished it was Irish so much last March 17 that the staff served green margarita cocktails.

"But I don't know what's planned this year," says a spokesman who identified herself only as Dana.

Celebration of the day Himself drove all the snakes out of the Emerald Isle is definitely on schedule, however, on the Orange County side, at Clancy's and the Irisher.

"WE'RE NOT REALLY planning anything special, just our decorations," says bartender Ann "The Widow Finnegan" Cooper, for 17 years now a serving wench at the Irisher.

She blames Seal Beach's finest for the last real March 17 unpleasantness on Main Street, a donnybrook estimated to involve up to 5,000 people which left various shop windows shattered.

"The last St. Patrick's Day riot was agitated by the police. And now they are frightened," declared Mrs. Cooper.

Her counterpart down the street at Clancy's and a former waitress at the Irisher, Ruth Hollingsworth, anticipates a typical Irish crowd will be toasting its patron saint there.

POLICE ON PREVIOUS St. Patrick's Days following the historic Main Street melee that tarnished the day for all asked both the Irish pubs to keep their doors closed or at least shut down early.

Restraint finally paid off for all concerned in 1978, says Mrs. Hollingsworth.

"It was just normal. We even stayed open until closing time," she declares.

Cardiac Patients Probed

By REBECCA HELM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Testimony on the treatment of patients suffering cardiac arrest was to continue today in a state medical board hearing for an Orange County plastic surgeon accused of gross negligence.

The accusations against Dr. Ralph Small of Santa Ana were lodged by the state Board of Medical Quality Assurance after Small's patient, Kim Plock, died Nov. 27 following breast implant surgery.

Small's hearing in Santa Ana is expected to continue about one month.

Mrs. Plock, the 33-year-old mother of three, died five days after she went into cardiac arrest while undergoing surgery at Small's Santa Ana office, according to the allegations.

The 29-year-old surgeon faces similar charges in connection with another woman patient who allegedly suffered serious infection following thigh lift surgery.

The hearing could result in revocation of Small's license to practice medicine. An Orange County Superior Court order has temporarily suspended his practice.

Today, State Deputy Attorney General David Chandler, representing the medical board, was to continue questioning Dr. Richard L. Koons on the follow-up treatment required for someone suffering a heart attack.

Koons is the interim chairman of the Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center Department of Anesthesiology.

Thursday afternoon, Leonard Case, a vocational nurse on duty during Mrs. Plock's surgery, testified that although the patient went into cardiac arrest around 10 a.m., she was not taken to a hospital until 7 o'clock that evening because of her unstable condition.

In testimony following that of the technician, Koons discussed the importance of immediate follow-up treatment of a heart attack patient by cardiac specialists.

"The damage that can occur to a patient from the efforts of resuscitation must be assessed immediately because it can negate resuscitation," Koons said.

County Knife Death Probed

Officers were withholding the identity of the 20-year-old dead man pending notification of relatives. They said today they have not yet established a motive for the slaying.

A woman who lived with the stabbing victim told officers she returned to her home in the 100 block of South Birch Street after midnight Thursday morning and found the man dead.

Santa Ana police were continuing their investigation today into the fatal stabbing of a man found dead early Thursday in his Santa Ana home.

Sweepstakes Winner Free for St. Pat's Day

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Frank McNulty, who went to jail for 49 months rather than share his $128,410 Irish Sweepstakes winnings with the government, walked out of prison today, just in time to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

THE STUBBORN IRISHMAN has been in jail since February 1974, serving the first 44 months on tax evasion charges and the last five months after Judge Alfonso Zirpoli found him in contempt of court.

The judge lifted that indeterminate contempt sentence Tuesday, saying it was obvious keeping McNulty in jail would not persuade him to pay the more than $70,000 he owes in taxes and penalties.

McNulty, 67, made what he hopes will be his last appearance in federal court Thursday at a hearing at which the government asked that a receiver be named to take control of his assets.

District Judge Zirpoli — hinting he didn't think too much of the idea — took the matter under submission.

His attorneys, Jim Larson and Rex Clack, said McNulty has not been well, is tired and plans to go off some place for a few days to "breathe free, fresh air for the first time in years."

McNULTY, HOWEVER, WILL not be totally free. He still owes the taxes and will be on parole until Aug. 3.

McNulty's money has been in the bank of the Isle of Jersey in the English Channel since June of 1973 and has grown to about $140,000 in that time.

'Typical' Quakes Shake Southland

JOSHUA TREE (AP) — Five earthquakes rocked a large part of Southern California, alarming residents and causing some damage, but scientists called the temblors part of a "typical swarm."

Authorities said no injuries or deaths were reported in the Thursday afternoon quakes, which ranged from 4.1 to 5.2 on the Richter scale.

"That area is known for its swarms," said California Institute of Technology seismology laboratory spokesman Dennis Meredith. The temblor series was centered near this isolated desert town, about 130 miles east of Los Angeles.

"They get a swarm of that size about every 10 years," Meredith said of the desert area. "They are calling it a typical Southern California swarm and it will last a day or two."

The temblors were followed by countless small aftershocks, scientists at Cal Tech in Pasadena said. All were centered 13 miles north-northwest of Joshua Tree.

The quakes, scientists added, were apparently unrelated to the severe quakes that rocked Mexico on Wednesday.

Damage was reported at stores in the tiny hamlet of Landers, nearly on top of the epicenter, and at Yucca Valley, about five miles from Joshua Tree.

'Sex Doctor' Hospitalized

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An anesthesiologist accused by authorities of sexual perversion with female patients during surgery was rushed to a hospital shortly after a newspaper carried a story about his case.

The state Board of Medical Quality Assurance says it is seeking to revoke the license of the anesthesiologist, Dr. William Miofsky, 46, of Sacramento. It filed a formal complaint against him one week ago.

On Thursday, the Sacramento Bee carried a page-one story on the board's investigation. Miofsky, who is married and has children, was admitted hours later to Mercy San Juan Hospital.

Waddill Trial Recessed

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The murder retrial of Dr. William Waddill stood in recess for the weekend today after jurors heard conflicting testimony Thursday from a key prosecution witness.

Dr. Ronald Cornelsen, under questioning by defense attorney Charles Weedman, refused to budge from his contention that he saw Waddill's hand press down on the throat of the baby Waddill is accused of strangling.

But he couldn't recall whether he had told police the two-pound, 15-ounce infant known as Baby Girl Weaver was "alive, crying, breathing and moving independently," words attributed to Cornelsen in a police report.

"That could be the police interpretation of what I said," Cornelsen testified, denying he had used the word "crying" at all to police.

In addition, Cornelsen had offered different testimony in the retrial about where he stood in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery when he purportedly saw Waddill choking the infant.

When Weedman produced a diagram from the first trial showing Cornelsen viewing Waddill from another angle, the silver-haired pediatrician contended his latest drawing is more accurate "as best I can remember."

Waddill, a 43-year-old Huntington Harbour physician, is accused of strangling the infant after she allegedly survived a saline abortion performed on an 18-year-old unwed mother.

Waddill has contended the infant never was alive when he examined her in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery two years ago.

His first murder trial ended last May when jurors said they were deadlocked 7-5 in favor of acquittal following 16 weeks of testimony and 11 days of deliberations.

Cornelsen also testified Thursday that hospital gossip led him to believe that a resuscitation team had partially revived the alleged abortion survivor before he and Waddill arrived at the hospital.

Earlier court testimony, however, had indicated no such revival occurred.

Weedman also asked Cornelsen if he reported Waddill to authorities because he feared for his own responsibility in failing to stop what he believed was an act of murder.

Throwing a Trial

YA'LL COME TO THE PARTY: We get all kinds of invitations here at the newspaper. Fancy engraved notices may urge us to some politico's fund-raiser cocktail bash at $25 per drink. Or we may get the less formal invite to a ribbon-cutting for the corner taco stand.

Never before, however, have I viewed a formal invitation — all printed up — to somebody's court trial.

This happened only this week. One of our staff writers got the written invitation to the upcoming Harbor Judicial District trial of one Jane D. McLaughlin of Costa Mesa.

JANE McLAUGHLIN

YOU SUSPECT THAT few people who are in peril of a $500 fine or six months in the county clanger send out invitations to the ceremonies.

I don't know what kind of party you'd call this. A Slammer Shindig? A Jailhouse Jump? Who knows?

Anyway, the printed invitation urges, "You are cordially invited to attend the trial of Jane D. McLaughlin on Tuesday, March 20, 1979, at nine o'clock a.m."

IT DEVELOPS THAT Miss McLaughlin, 31, is something of a special case. Since last May, she's been in a running feud with Costa Mesa City Hall. She claims she doesn't need a business license to operate her Morningside Printing firm out on Mesa Verde Drive East.

That license demand would infringe upon her rights, she declares.

So it is that the city attorney's office is hauling her into court. She tried to get the jurisdiction switched to federal court, apparently as a constitutional issue, but this maneuver has been frustrated.

Miss McLaughlin seems to have some other strong feelings about the role of government in her life. Like with paper money. She doesn't believe in it. She keeps her books balanced in gold grains.

BUT I DIGRESS. Back to the courthouse invitation. Miss McLaughlin says she's sent the missive to all the people who have supported her during her lengthy clash with the powers at City Hall.

It goes on to note, "I'm requesting your presence because I believe that you'll have a good effect on the jury.

"In addition, I'm quite confident that you'll enjoy the presentation of my case and the testimony of the witnesses should prove entertaining."

The printed invite even includes a map so you can find your way to the party house out on Jamboree Road.

Better leave your noisemakers and funny paper hats at home.

Gas Price Soaring

Nigeria Seeks Big Oil Fee Hike

By The Associated Press

If Nigeria acts on its announced desire to raise crude oil prices by 17 percent on April 1 it could trigger similar action by other oil producers and increase U.S. gasoline prices an additional three cents, analysts say.

The African nation's statement Thursday came as a survey by the Lundberg Letter, an oil industry publication, reported that gasoline prices at full-service stations rose about 2 cents a gallon nationwide since February. That is nearly twice the rise from January to February.

A GALLON OF UNLEADED gasoline in Chicago, for example, increased from 82.19 cents to 84.36 cents.

The Lundberg Letter attributed the rise to the Iranian oil production slowdown and the Energy Department's decision earlier this month to let oil companies pass through refining costs on certain gasolines.

Nigeria supplies about 6.1 percent of the 18.7 million barrels of oil used daily by the United States — an import figure exceeded only by Saudi Arabia.

The increase would be far larger than the 3.9 percent boost originally scheduled for April 1 by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Moreover, it would nearly double price boosts already announced by OPEC nations reacting to tightened supplies caused by Iran's problems.

Analysts said Nigeria's new price by itself might not raise consumer prices, but if other oil producers match the boost, gasoline prices could rise by 3 cents a gallon.

The only other OPEC nation to suggest such a big price rise is Algeria, which is threatening a 25 percent increase.

OPEC had scheduled a total increase of 14.5 percent this year in the basic price of crude oil. The first increase, of 5 percent, raised the price to $13.35 Jan. 1. Other increases were scheduled quarterly.

Speculation abounded that OPEC nations would decide March 26 to set base prices at a level reflecting 9 percent increases announced by most countries recently.

But Nigeria's warning that it wants to raise the per-barrel price by $2.50—from $14.80 to $17.30 — no matter what OPEC does, may alter other OPEC members' thinking, analysts said.

Meanwhile, a group of Japanese trading companies announced in Tokyo Thursday that the National Iranian Oil Co. agreed to sell them about 500,000 barrels of crude oil a day under a long-term contract. The Japanese didn't say how much they were paying for it.

IT WAS BELIEVED to be the first long-term contract signed by the revolutionary regime, which renewed oil exports March 5 after a shutdown since December due to strikes against the shah.

Meanwhile, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo. said today that closing nuclear power plants along the Eastern Seaboard to study their earthquake resistance may have been a rash move since the region "is not exactly an earthquake zone."

Estimates are that it could take 100,000 barrels of oil a day — or more — to replace the generating capacity lost by closing the plants.

'FATHER' OF EUROPE
Statesman Jean Monnet

Political Economist, Monnet, Dies

PARIS (AP) — Jean Monnet, the foremost advocate of European unity and the inspiration and driving force behind the European Common Market, died today at his home near Montford l'Amaury, sources at the headquarters of the European Community reported. He was 90.

Monnet, a self-described political economist, was the key figure in the drive to bind the free European nations economically and politically, but during his long career he constantly shunned the limelight.

His first major step toward European unity was a six-nation pool of coal and steel resources, formally presented in 1950. Seven years later it became known as the European Economic Community.

Monnet was never a member of a government, but was, as author Theodore H. White called him, "a broker of ideas." He brought statesmen together by demonstrating how his ideas were in the interest of those concerned, persisting where leaders resisted or hesitated.

THE DAPPER, dynamic Frenchman, described by the late President Kennedy as a "statesman of the world," never had a university education. Owner of a prosperous cognac business, he was independently wealthy and took on a job only as long as he felt he was doing something useful to mankind.

Iranian Trial Halted

Khomeini Seeks New Executions Rulings

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today ordered the Islamic court trying former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida to halt its proceedings until new rules can be drawn up for the revolutionary tribunals that have sent at least 62 men before firing squads in little more than a month.

There was no immediate explanation for the decision, but the move appeared to represent a victory for Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan who has threatened to resign if such "inhuman and irreligious" proceedings continued.

KHOMEINI'S decision was read over Tehran Radio, and shortly afterward a spokesman for the ayatollah said Bazargan and two Cabinet ministers had traveled to the holy city of Qom on Thursday night for consultations with the Moslem leader.

Although there was no immediate confirmation, it appeared certain that Bazargan's trip to Khomeini's residence 100 miles south of Tehran was made primarily to protest the Hoveida trial and the repercussions it might have on the country.

Khomeini's revolutionary committee opened Hoveida's trial Thursday to an invited audience after the execution of at least 62 men convicted in secret since Khomeini's forces took power Feb. 12.

Selected Iranian reporters were invited along with some 200 relatives of demonstrators killed by Shah Mohammed RZA Pahlavi's police. The reporters said the trial began about 2 a.m. in a makeshift courtroom in Tehran's Qasr Prison.

The trial was in recess today for the Moslem Sabbath and was scheduled to resume Saturday.

Some of the reporters present said the 57-year-old Hoveida, who was prime minister from 1963 to 1977, was groggy from medication and wearing a black ski parka as he was led before the court. He sat with his head bowed and hands folded as the prosecutor read 16 charges against him, including spying for the United States, and demanded the death penalty.

Hoveida denied any wrongdoing and declared: "I could be in New York at the moment or in other countries walking freely. I had the opportunity, but why am I here? I had the chance to leave the country before my arrest."

He was also accused of smuggling heroin, revolting against Iran by forming cabinets on the order of the United States, interfering in elections and allowing foreign exploitation of Iran's resources.

The prosecutor alleged Hoveida suppressed the shah's opposition, "entering into a battle against God and his emissaries," but Hoveida denied that, too.

HOVEIDA WAS arrested by the shah last November for alleged corruption and misappropriation of funds in an apparent move to ease growing opposition to the monarch. But he was freed when the shah left Iran and he surrendered to the revolutionary government when it took power.

Attempt to Ban Kids TV Ads Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A constitutional law professor said today the Federal Trade Commission is "proceeding with peril into dangerous and ill-charted waters," with its proposal to ban television advertising directed at young children.

Charles Alan Wright, who represented former President Nixon in court when the Watergate scandal unfolded, said the proposed ban "would lead the commission across the line into areas where the First Amendment bars it from going."

Wright, a University of Texas law professor, testified for General Mills, one of the companies that would be affected by the proposal.

He said U.S. Supreme Court decisions on freedom of speech show "government may discourage the use of the disfavored product by taxing it, or may even ban its sales altogether, but the First Amendment disables government from achieving its goals by restricting the free flow of truthful information."

He said the FTC staff's justification for the ban is "an overly simplified view of the constitutional area. The staff seemed to feel that the commission could do almost anything it wanted to do in almost any area."

Wright said a finding that certain commercials are false would mean that there is no constitutional problem in banning them. "But simply pinning the label 'deceptive' on them is not enough," he argued.

Citing a 1976 decision striking down a Virginia ban on price advertising of prescription drugs and subseqeuent decisions elaborating on that decision, Wright said:

"The Commission now has a special responsibility to take the First Amendment into account in its deliberations and to exercise care that its orders do not intrude upon constitutional protections."

FTC staffers have contended the agency has authority to issue the ban because children are involved and because the ban is directed at broadcast media rather than print media.

SAINT PETER 'KNOWS' RIGHTS

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's teachers haven't been at all shy about letting state legislators know their feelings concerning proposed pay raises in the budget now under consideration.

One irate teacher vented her wrath Thursday on Sen. Beverly Langford, D-Calhoun, saying, "I wouldn't vote for you if you were St. Peter."

Langford replied: "Ma'am, if I were St. Peter, you wouldn't be in my district."

U.S. Summary

Thundershowers dampened the West and parts of Texas today with lighter showers extending from central Texas and Louisiana into eastern Kansas and southwestern Missouri.

Occasional snow showers reached from western Montana into eastern Washington state and a few snow flurries lingered along the southern shore of Lake Ontario.

A travel advisory was posted for the Tahoe Valley of western Nevada as gusty winds and occasional snow swirled through the area.

Parts of the Northeast braced for more snow as flurries were expected from western New England across northern New York state.

Mild weather prevailed over the northern half of the Plains and across the upper half of the Rockies but cool or cold temperatures were found in most other sections of the country.

California

The chance of showers from a weak Pacific storm system was expected to taper off this evening, leaving partly cloudy skies over Southern California for the weekend.

Rain from the storm was so light that only traces could be reported in most locations early today. Long Beach reported .08 of an inch and .05 of an inch fell at Los Angeles International.

The chill from the storm, however, may be enough to put a damper on plans for Sunday's test flight of a space shuttle in the upper desert, where National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials fear that near-freezing mercury readings may damage delicate instrumentation aboard the craft.

Forecasters estimated the chance of showers in the metropolitan area at 60 percent tonight, tapering off to 30 percent on Saturday.

Low temperatures in the Los Angeles area are expected to be in the low 50s tonight, with highs Saturday in the low 60s.

Southern California mountain areas are expected to have showers and some traces of snow from the current storm according to NWS, which predicted highs in the mountains Saturday to be in the 30s and low 40s, with overnight lows of 28 to 34.

$10,000 to Dymally

Brown Aide Tells Loan

SACRAMENTO (AP) — One of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s top aides says he arranged a $10,000 contribution to Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally last November from Las Vegas casino operator Allen Glick, whom federal authorities accuse of underworld ties.

State Finance Director Richard Silberman made the statement Thursday in response to a question about Glick. He said he called Glick on the telephone in the final weeks of last fall's campaign and arranged the contribution.

THE MONEY HAD BEEN reported when Dymally's campaign records were filed, but Silberman's role was not made public at the time.

Brown said Thursday he hadn't known at the time that Silberman was asking Glick for money.

Glick, 37, a San Diego financier, heads the Argent Corp., which owns the Stardust and Fremont hotels in Las Vegas.

LAST JULY, FEDERAL attorneys filed documents with the U.S. District Court in Las Vegas saying the company was really owned by a man named Anthony Spilotro, identified in the documents as the Nevada agent of the Chicago crime syndicate.

Silberman said the contribution was one of 100 to 200 he helped arrange at the end of the campaign, when Brown's campaign gave or arranged about $100,000 in donations to Dymally's financially strapped effort. Dymally was defeated for reelection by Republican Mike Curb.

SILBERMAN SAID THAT after Dymally told Brown, his Democratic running mate, that he needed money, Silberman asked political fundraisers he knew to provide names of people who might be willing to contribute. He said one fundraiser, whom he declined to identify, supplied a list that included Glick's name.

"I called an individual who was on that list, and he suggested to me that Mr. Glick might be willing to make a contribution. I passed that information along" to Dymally's campaign, Silberman said.

He also said that after one of his aides had made a preliminary call, he spoke to Glick directly by telephone. "I then arranged to have the contribution made directly to the Dymally campaign," Silberman said.

BROWN, ASKED ABOUT the subject Thursday, said he had known Silberman had collected a list of possible business contributors, but hadn't known their names.

"I knew Silberman was making calls to a list of businessmen he obtained," Brown said when asked if he knew Glick's name was on the list. "I was not familiar with the names on the list. I knew there was a broad cross-section of people."

Brown also said, "I would like to talk to him (Silberman) about it."

Silberman, a San Diego banker and a founder of the Jack-in-the-Box food chain, is probably the most powerful official below the governor in the Brown administration. His department handles the state budget and all legislation involving spending of taxes, and he also has been a liaison between Brown and the business community.

Court Nixes Laetrile Use

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cancer victims who would turn to Laetrile have lost in California's highest court, but not without a sympathetic dissent from the court's highest justice.

The state Supreme Court Thursday upheld, 5-2, a law barring the sale and use of the controversial drug that believers say helps cure cancer.

BUT CHIEF JUSTICE Rose Bird, herself a victim of cancer, dissented and said anyone dying of cancer has the right to choose treatment.

"Cancer is a disease with potentially fatal consequences; this makes the choice of treatment one of the more important decisions a person may ever make, touching immediately on his or her being," Justice Bird wrote in her dissent.

SHE SAID MANY cancer victims have rejected surgery, chemotherapy or radiation therapy and chosen Laetrile rather than risk "disfigurement, debilitation and accelerated death."

Justice Bird was operated on for cancer some years ago and twice in recent months has had to be hospitalized for further treatment; once for removal of a cancerous growth.

The court's ruling concluded that the right to use unproven drugs is not covered by the constitutional right to privacy. Instead, it said, the state has a legitimate interest in the health and safety of its citizens and can properly bar the sale and use of the drug.

Mutilation

Suspect Denies Act

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I don't have enough guts to cut someone's arms off," Lawrence Singleton said in a tape-recorded statement played to jurors Thursday in his trial on charges of raping and mutilating a 15-year-old runaway.

The 51-year-old merchant seaman told police in Sparks, Nev., in the interview after his arrest Oct. 9 that he was drunk and unconscious when the victim, Mary Bell Vincent of Las Vegas, left his van, which was being driven by another hitchhiker.

"I SWEAR ON A BIBLE that I didn't cut that girl's arms off," said Singleton, who is being tried on charges of mayhem, kidnapping, attempted murder and other sexual offenses against Miss Vincent.

The girl was found, nude and with both arms hacked off below the elbows by ax blows, wandering along a road near Modesto, Calif., last Sept. 30. Singleton was arrested nine days later at the home of his ex-wife in Sparks.

THE TRIAL BEFORE Judge Earl Maas Jr. was moved here from Modesto because of extensive pretrial news coverage in Northern California.

The nine-man, three-woman Superior court jury heard the recording of Sparks Police Sgt. Terry Rusk's grilling Singleton about Miss Vincent's mutilation.

"Why would this girl lie, say that you did it when someone else did?" Rusk asked. "I, I, I don't know," was Singleton's stammered reply. "I could never raise an arm to anybody."

Auto Smog Tests Set

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Department of Motor Vehicles warns that anyone in the South Coast Air Basin who transfers title to an automobile will need an extra $11 beginning Monday.

Monday is the first day of the new required vehicle smog inspection program. The inspections are to be made at one of 17 computerized inspection stations — not the service stations which formerly handled smog inspections.

Exempt from the requirement are motorcycles, trucks larger than three-quarter ton, vehicles sold to members of the imediate family, and vehicles older than the 1954 model year.

Tax Measure Backed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California Assembly gave speedy approval to a bill to save homeowners and businesses $75 million in property taxes.

STATE

It happened Thursday when, with only brief debate, the members voted 77-0 on AB 156 by Assemblyman Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, sending it to the Senate.

The bill would undo the move by county assessors who raised 1975 property assessments after voter approval of Proposition 13 last June made 1975 the base year for current and future assessments.

Slayer Gets 51 Years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lionel Raymond Williams, the man convicted of murdering actor Sal Mineo, has been given the maximum sentence by a judge who said he should be in prison "for as long as the law allows."

Williams, who was convicted of 10 robberies in addition to the 1976 Mineo murder, was ordered Thursday to serve the 11 sentences consecutively, a total of 51 years to life in prison.

Phone Refunds Halted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal court judge has stayed — at least temporarily — a Public Utilities Commission order requiring two telephone companies to issue refunds to customers that would average $30 to $40.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi issued a temporary restraining order Thursday after Pacific Telephone Co. and General Telephone Co. filed suit seeking to block enforcement of the PUC ruling that the firms must make about $400 million worth of refunds.

Takasugi scheduled further arguments on the restraining order for March 26.

Panel Member Resigns

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Alan Pasternak, the only member of the state Energy Commission to oppose its nuclear moratorium, announced his resignation today and said the commission should be abolished.

Pasternak said his resignation is effective June 30. A former chemical engineer on nonnuclear projects at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, he was appointed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to a five-year term in January 1975.

Aliso Viejo Plan Needs Second Look

County supervisors next week will consider changing the county's land use plan to accommodate the proposed Aliso Viejo development in south Orange County.

Rather than approve the land planning change, supervisors should send the proposal back to the county Planning Commission for a second look.

The first time around, the commission recommended that the supervisors approve changes needed to accommodate the massive Aliso Viejo development.

Aliso Viejo, of course, is not just another proposal to build a tract of homes.

It is a plan to someday build 20,000 residences on what was once the Moulton Ranch in the coastal hills surrounded by Laguna Beach, South Laguna, Laguna Hills and Laguna Niguel.

Under the plan already endorsed by the Planning Commission, those 20,000 residences would someday be home to 60,000 persons. And those residents along with a number of shopping centers as well as an industrial tract would be built on roughly half Aliso Viejo's 6,623 acres.

Existing land use plans would limit the number of homes to be built to roughly 10,000 and keep about another 1,700 acres out of development.

But Aliso Viejo backers were able somehow to trade an agreement on so-called affordable housing for higher density and less open land.

On balance, it would appear that Aliso Viejo promoters received far more than they gave. It would also appear there are too many unanswered questions, especially about traffic circulation, for county supervisors to approve the land use change needed to usher in such a grandiose development.

Boon for Incumbents

The idea of financing presidential campaigns with a $1 check-off from income tax has not proved popular with taxpayers. Only 28 percent have authorized the transfer of $1 of their tax to the campaign funds.

Now there is a bill in Congress, HR 1, that would extend public financing to congressional campaigns by matching, from tax funds, 40 percent of the amount collected in private contributions.

To qualify for the tax funds, candidates would have to limit their campaign spending to $150,000, plus 30 percent for fund-raising and mailing costs. Those agreeing to the ceiling would be entitled to up to $60,000 in matching tax money.

The theory behind all this is to curb so-called special interest campaign contributions.

That sounds like a worthwhile goal. But in practice the procedure would set up identical spending limits for incumbents and challengers. This would give incumbents an enormous advantage

To offset an incumbent's access to free mailing, travel, printing, office and staff assistance — all paid for by taxpayers — a challenger inevitably must spend more during a campaign to gain public recognition.

Apart from perpetuating incumbents in office, public campaign financing could be enormously expensive. If two qualified candidates for each House race each received $60,000, the cost to the taxpayers would exceed $52 million for a biennial election.

Further, subsidized campaigns deny freedom of choice by distributing tax dollars at random to all campaigners. Some taxpayers are not interested in supporting any political campaigns. The rest should have the right to support candidates of their own choice.

In a 1978 poll, 67 percent of those questioned disapproved of public financing for congressional elections. That should be some sort of a message to the incumbent congressmen as they try to hustle HR 1 into law before the next election.

Protection Backfires

A fact of modern life long obvious to senior citizens has at last been recognized by the medical profession.

A team of doctors specializing in geriatric care has concluded that child-proof drug containers "can be a direct threat to the life of an elderly patient."

The doctors said 60 percent of the elderly people they questioned reported having trouble opening and closing the trick bottle caps, designed to protect tots from accidental poisoning.

In case of a medical emergency, inability to get at medication quickly could indeed be life-threatening. And even apart from emergencies, arthritis sufferers and those with poor eyesight can have problems with the child-proof caps.

The doctors urged fellow physicians and pharmacists to remind elderly patients that easy-opening containers can be supplied upon request — a fact two-thirds of those interviewed did not know.

There's no doubt the safety containers have saved children's lives. But consideration for the elderly should be equally important.

Connally Challenges Reagan

INDIANAPOLIS — If Ronald Reagan ends up dissipating a seemingly insurmountable lead for the Republican presidential nomination, the decline may have started at the Midwest Republican Conference here when an absent Reagan left the stage open for a rampaging John B. Connally.

Reagan's professed inability, because of "previously scheduled commitments," to make the Indianapolis date set six months ago did not sit well with Midwestern Republican leaders. They suspect Reagan's absence was an intentional message that he holds himself aloof from lesser presidential hopefuls who turn up for such "cattle shows" or "beauty contests."

Since their suspicions are well grounded, events here provide two political truths: first, Reagan is not an incumbent with a claim on the nomination, and he will campaign as one at his own risk; second, with an unexpectedly sudden surge, Connally has bounded out of the pack to become Reagan's principal challenger.

That second truth, which began emerging during Connally's recent visit to Washington, was confirmed as 500 Republican leaders listened patiently here for four hours to six presidential aspirants. Connally was unquestionably the class of the field — by an even wider margin than his top ranking in the CBS poll of Republicans here.

THE FORMER Democrat governor of Texas is not long on the conservative rhetoric usually needed to titillate Republican audiences, but his ardent flag-waving was infectious. He roused the conference by promising to "rebuild a pride in ourselves," adding that the U.S. has been "pushed around by third-rate countries" and "the world perceives us as weak and vacillating and indecisive." His biggest response came after his prescription for riotous Iranian students here: "Send 'em home, right quick."

When Connally hit his high notes to heavy applause, Reagan operatives in the audience admitted he was strong in the Midwest — but second to their man Reagan, of course. Consequently, they gulped when the CBS poll of those attending showed Connally a clear winner in all four categories: best speaker; most agreeable on the issues; best chance to win; personal choice.

Over cocktails in the party suites that night, Reagan operatives labored to soften the poll's impact. They contended Connally's staff probably organized the vote, which was palpably untrue. They claimed tried-and-true conservatives would never associate themselves in any venture sponsored by CBS, which was truer but not decisive.

ACTUALLY, it was Reagan's absence that generated some votes for Connally. There was grumbling that a paid, non-political speech to a business investment seminar in Miami was the conflict in Reagan's schedule keeping him from Indianapolis. That stirred recollections by party leaders of past Reagan appearances — just in time for his speech with no room left for small talk.

Reagan is considered remote; Connally is still an LBJ sound-alike to Republican faithful and a big government adherent of state capitalism to conservatives. Yet, these views are fading and are less threatening to Connally than concerns about the ethics of the man indicted — then exonerated — in the Watergate milk-fund scandal.

The Republican national committeewoman from one big Great Lakes state told us "there's a lot of skeletons in Connally's closet." The state chairman of one small prairie state was more blunt: "I think he's a crook. I know he beat the rap, but I still think he's a crook."

Countering this is Connally's command presence. "He really looks like a president," was the common description here. The strongman image is particularly relevant against the backdrop of President Carter's failing leadership as registered in polls. With Republicans coming to regard Sen. Edward M. Kennedy as the probable Democratic nominee, many believe only Connally can defeat him.

REAGAN insiders respond that most party leaders enraptured by Connally here last weekend opposed Reagan in 1976. Support of the whole Indiana Republican hierarchy for Gerald Ford did not prevent a primary sweep here by Reagan. "Our strength is at the grass roots, not with people who spend their time at political conferences," one Reagan lieutenant told us from Los Angeles.

But the conservative grass roots are divided this time between Reagan, Rep. Philip Crane and — if he runs — Rep. Jack Kemp. That's why one experienced Midwestern operative of Reagan tried hard to get him here. "I tried," he explained to us, "but I couldn't get anywhere." The decision was made by the Reagan high command, some of whom were scarcely aware anything at all was happening in Indianapolis. That ignorance lends even more significance to Connally's mini-triumph.

Hunters' 'Hit List' Targets Rare Species

WASHINGTON — Like the legendary officer who set out to save a Vietnamese village by destroying it, the Safari Club International wants to save 39 endangered species of African and Asian wildlife by slaughtering some of them for trophies.

Last August, the Arizona-based club submitted a proposed yearly shopping list of 1,120 rare animals to the Fish and Wildlife Service, which grants exceptions to the ban on such hunting under the Endangered Species Act. The club recently withdrew the application on the grounds that the proposal was never approved by its board of directors.

That's just as well, because the club probably would have been subjected to a Justice Department investigation challenging some of the claims it made.

AT ONE POINT in the permit application the club said that it had the approval of various foreign countries to hunt the animals. But the New York Zoological Society noted that at least five animals on the club's intended list were fully protected by the host nations.

For example, the club asked permission to kill 10 orangutans yearly. But the Zoological Society noted that "in the last decade no permits have been issued for the legal hunting-killing of wild organgutans" in the only three countries where the valued animal is found.

The club's application also cited the "well recognized principle that regulated sport hunting is a valuable tool for scientific research and provides critical incentive for propagation and hence survival of the species."

THE ORWELLIAN logic here is that if an animal has some economic value — like bringing in revenue through the sale of licenses to trophy hunters — the host country will be encouraged to set up an efficient conservation program for the species.

Some environmental groups are unimpressed with the Safari Club's reasoning. While hunting is a legitimate conservation tool for overpopulated animal species, they argue that this is not the case with endangered species.

Besides the orangutans, the club's proposed hit list included 100 cheetahs, five gorillas, 40 jaguars, 25 tigers, 100 mountain zebras and 100 snow leopards.

"IN ALL CASES," say experts with the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, "there is data available to demonstrate the taking of these animals as trophy material is illogical, ill conceived and not justifiable."

The New York Zoological Society also noted that some of the club's targets "are so critically endangered that killing any of the specimens would constitute a severe threat to the survival of the wild population."

Steinbeck's Advice on How to Write a Book

As happens, I get letters from people who tell me they have a book in them. As have not we all? I have never doubted anyone, no matter how boring or how fatuous his approach, who said his life was a novel. He usually adds, "If only I knew how to get it out of me."

And there are more formal requests from people, usually young, who are wrestling with the problems of getting a book out of themselves. They want real guidance: how to create a structure, what hours might be best for the creative afflatus to be beckoned in, how many hours of writing a day before one goes dry, etc. etc.

In a way, I'm the worst person in the world to ask for this kind of advice. I've never written a book. I once edited one which I would have been better off writing, and three books have been published which had been culled from my writings for this newspaper.

I AM JUST not a book writer by temperament. I'm a journalist, a blurter. I like to write for assured, definite and early publication. I have a rabbity mind, and like to jump from subject to subject, without worrying about the higher concerns of form, suspense and cumulative effect.

Yet I have it in the back of my head that I shall write one book, and only one, before being carted to the knackers. It will not be long. It will be loosely autobiographical in form. The book will be an attempt to describe to my grandchildren, on the assumption that they will be interested, just where I came from, and who and what I think I am as of the moment of writing. I even have a rather smashing title for this unwritten opus, which indeed I am keeping to myself.

BUT BACK to those requests on how to write a book. Perhaps this column will be an answer to the questions. It will at least be as close to an answer as I can give.

Though I have never written a book, I have had a lifelong interest in the writing of English, and even at one point taught English composition for a year. I have read most of the handbooks on composition and style — from Fowler to Strunk to Quiller-Couch to E. M. Forster on the writing of novels. I read a great deal and I read critically. I think I could have been a pretty good editor of books or of magazine pieces if I had so been placed.

AND OF ALL the things I have read about writing a book the best advice I ever found came from the pen of John Steinbeck. Steinbeck was the good friend of the marvelous radio comic Fred Allen. Allen was a wordsmith of almost as much pith and consequence as Steinbeck. He read thousands of joke books in his line of work, incorporated them all into his personality, and could be impromptu funny-bitter on just about any subject presented to him, or on almost any item on the front page of the New York Times.

But Allen, whose real name was Sullivan, was a basically unschooled Boston mick. He got the idea he wanted to write a book about himself and asked his friend for "some rudimentary suggestions" on how to write a book.

THIS IS WHAT John Steinbeck told Fred Allen. "Don't start by trying to make the book chronological. Just take a period. Then try to remember it so clearly that you can see things: what colors and how warm or cold and how you got there. Then try to remember people. And then just tell what happened. It is important to tell what people looked like, how they walked, what they wore, what they ate.

"Put it all in. Don't try to organize it. And put in all the details you can remember. You will find that in a very short time things will begin coming back to you, you thought you had forgotten. Do it for very short periods at first but kind of think of it when you aren't doing it.

"Don't think back over what you have done. Don't think of literary form. Let it get out as it wants to. Overtell it in the matter of detail — cutting comes later. The form will develop in the telling. Don't make the telling follow a form."

'No Escape' If Draft Revived

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

When and if the administration decides that a return to the military draft is necessary, the White House will propose a system of universal service for young men, without student deferments or other escape routes.

That is President Carter's attitude, shaped in part by personal experience. His son, Jack, gave up a student deferment to volunteer for military service.

"HE DID SO BECAUSE HE didn't think it was right for him to avoid the draft simply because he had the money and the educational background to stay in college," Carter recalled "So he went to Vietnam."

There is no such proposal in the works. Civilian leaders of the military insist there is no need to revive the draft that lapsed five years ago.

Nor have the president and his advisers decided whether any new selective service system should apply to women as well as to men.

NEWS ANALYSIS

Carter has said that any new registration system should include women as well as men. But he also said that he does not foresee the induction of women or a return to the draft.

Registration would at least give what is now a skeleton Selective Service System a list of names and addresses to be used for military callups in case of war

CARTER HAS ASKED CONGRESS for a $5 million appropriation to improve the current standby Selective Service System.

The pressure for a revived draft was increased Tuesday when Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, the Army chief of staff, urged Congress to reinstate it this year. Rogers proposed that up to 100,000 men be drafted under a lottery system to spend six months in military training and six years in the Army's ready reserve.

Rogers said the volunteer Army is falling short of its recruiting goals, and the reserves are 500,000 soldiers short of their authorized strength.

ROGERS' CIVILIAN BOSS, Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, disagreed, saying there is no need for any draft now. Alexander said it would be "unnecessary, unfair and counterproductive to the best interests of the Army."

There are bills in the House and Senate to go to a registration system that would identify prospects for induction in an emergency. There also is a House bill to set up a limited draft.

None of the proposals is likely to get very far unless the administration decides that the Pentagon needs a return to the draft.

NEVERTHELESS, THE DRAFT IS emerging as a political issue, one Carter hardly needs in the year before he seeks his second term.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a likely challenger for the Democratic nomination, suggests a system of national service "that would allow alternatives, whether it be Peace Corps, a civilian conservation corps, as well as the traditional service in the military."

John B. Connally, seeking the Republican presidential nomination, advocates a return to the draft.

PUBLIC OPINION IS CLOSELY divided on the question. An Associated Press-NBC News Poll showed 49 percent of the people questioned support reinstatement of the draft, 43 percent oppose it and the rest weren't sure.

That poll was conducted Feb. 5-6 among 1,600 adult Americans.

The people most likely to be affected directly were overwhelmingly opposed to a new draft. Americans aged 18 to 28 opposed the draft 62 percent to 33 percent.

Those young Americans are potential voters in 1980. If they are also potential draftees, they could be a troublesome bloc for Carter.

Reagan Leading In State

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Although the presidential primary in California is more than a year away, former Gov. Ronald Reagan holds a commanding lead among state GOP voters for the Republican presidential nomination, according to the California Poll.

With former President Ford out of the race, Reagan's margin is even wider.

IF THE primary were held today, a sampling of California Republicans indicated 44 percent would vote for Reagan while 27 percent would vote for Ford, according to the poll, which was released Thursday.

A dozen other people frequently mentioned as potential candidates trailed far behind.

If Ford does not enter the state's primary, 54 percent of the sampled voters indicated they would vote for Reagan. The next highest margin was 12 percent who said they would vote for Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker.

"THESE EARLY standings are by no means a forecast of the outcome," said pollster Mervin Field.

"An early lead in public visibility is no guarantee of victory in any election and especially not in a presidential sweepstakes featuring about 32 state primaries."

Reagan is considered virtually certain to seek the nomination. Ford has not indicated whether he will run. Reagan easily defeated Ford in the California GOP primary in 1976.

The poll was conducted with 331 Republican voters.

High and Mighty Bill?

By O.C. HUSTINGS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Assemblyman Paul Priolo, R-Malibu, is trying to get the name of Los Angeles International Airport changed to John Wayne International Airport, but he's never mentioned his plan to the movie star.

Priolo, minority leader of the Assembly, invited fellow legislators Monday to join in authoring a resolution seeking the change from the Los Angeles Board of Airport Commissioners.

AN AIDE, JOHN KEARN, acknowledged that Priolo, who's "only met the actor a couple of times very briefly," was acting on the spur of the moment and has yet to contact Wayne at his Newport Beach home.

Kearn said Priolo got his idea from a newspaper column.

"We've gotten a mixed reaction. Some people really, really like it and some people really, really don't," Kearn said.

Among those who remain undecided on the proposal, he said, is Assemblywoman Marian Bergeson, R-Newport Beach, in whose district the movie star lives.

BUT KEARN NOTED THAT Curtis Tucker, D-Los Angeles, whose district includes the airport, has joined the list of co-authors.

"We hope we're not causing Mr. Wayne any embarrassment," he added.

A spokesman for the movie star said he's had no reaction to Priolo's plan since he hasn't been informed about it.

ASSEMBLYMAN DENNIS Mangers, D-Huntington Beach, has introduced a bill he says gives school districts three choices in meeting the educational needs of students who speak little or no English.

Mangers introduced the legislation, AB800, last week. He said his goal is to help districts speed up the process of developing English language skills among these students so they can become a part of the educational mainstream more quickly.

Under Mangers' bill, the districts would have the option of putting students in a program that offers intensive instruction in English skills, but does not require the instructors to have special state teaching credentials; putting the students in a program where they would be tested at least once every two years so bilingual instruction would be ended once proficiency in English had been achieved, or developing individual learning programs for students not enrolled in either of the first two programs.

Curbs OK For Drug Materials

Shops selling drug-related paraphernalia in Garden Grove will have to keep it out of the hands and even the sight of minors or face up to $500 in fines and six months in jail, the city attorney's office said.

Under a law that went into effect Thursday said city attorney spokesman Mark Travis, paraphernalia shops will have to find more discreet ways of displaying such drug-related items as water pipes, roach clips and bongs or carburetors, which are tubes for smoking marijuana.

Travis said Garden Grove's law is modeled on one in effect in Lakewood in Los Angeles.

Bilingual Class Set For Cons

A new educational program to be offered in English and Spanish to Orange County Jail inmates was endorsed Tuesday by county supervisors.

The board approved Sheriff Brad Gates' request to buy $25,248 worth of videotape equipment and offer courses to prepare inmates to take exams that would qualify them for high school graduation certificates.

The courses would be offered to both male and female prisoners, a report to supervisors said.

The $25,248 worth of equipment will be purchased with a federal grant, the report said.

South Coast Plaza Expansion Set

Twin 13-story office buildings, 200 to 400 more hotel rooms, a 28,000-square-foot addition to the mall and many new restaurants and shops are in store at South Coast Plaza in Costa Mesa.

Rich Foster, manager of administration and operations for the 200-acre commercial development, told the Costa Mesa Rotary Club this week sales totaled more than $200 million in 1978. He said that made South Coast Plaza one of the half-dozen top shopping centers in the country

THE COMPLEX CONSISTS OF three parts, Foster said. These are the mall at 3333 Bristol St., the village at Sunflower and Bear streets, and the town center on Bristol Street across from the mall.

The first phase of the mall opened 12 years ago with some 80 stores. Today there are 180, and another department store — Saks Fifth Avenue — is scheduled to open this fall, Foster said.

The oldest section of the mall is undergoing a facelift to the tune of about $1 million, Foster said.

THE LOWER FLOOR OF Joseph Magnin's by the Carousel Court will be remodeled into five or six small shops and an elevator will be installed.

There'll be a number of new restaurants and clothing shops in the mall as older stores give up their leases, Foster said. A wine shop and a record store also are planned.

The 14-acre village across Sunflower Street from the mall isn't scheduled for major changes, Foster said, but there will be a few new shops and restaurants. The village includes 70 stores and $12 millio in sales in 1977, he said.

THE BIGGEST CHANGES WILL be in the town center area, Foster said.

There, a 350,000-square-foot office building adjacent to South Coast Repertory, which opened its new theater in November, will be in business in July and already is 80 percent leased, Foster said.

Among the tenants will be Imperial Bank, CalFed Savings and Loan, a restaurant, TransAmerica Corp., and several law and accounting firms.

THE BUILDING IS A joint venture between the Segerstrom family, owners of most of the land in South Coast Plaza, and Prudential Life Insurance, Foster said.

Proposed for an adjacent vacant plot are twin 13-story office buildings with completion targeted for 1980-81, and a new wing of the South Coast Plaza Hotel with 200 to 400 rooms and more banquet facilities.

The town center area will be linked with the mall, Foster said.

"WE'RE WORKING ON THE possibility of a pedestrian bridge that will span from the hotel to the mall," he said.

In connection with the bridge, which it is hoped can be built by late 1981, 28,000 square feet of offices, and, along with shops a parking structure, are planned for what is now parking area between Bristol Street and Joseph Magnin's, Foster said.

Completing the complex will be the proposed extension of Anton Boulevard, the short street on which the hotel is located, at right angles to connect with Sunflower Street, Foster said.

FOSTER ALSO TOUCHED ON some of the problems the center's marketing and administrative staff must overcome to keep the plaza successful.

One is traffic. An estimated 25,000 workers could be accommodated in proposed new development, and Foster said it is hoped the Anton Boulevard extension will have direct freeway access.

Parking is another problem, as excess space dwindles.

ONE METHOD THAT HELPED last holiday season, Foster said, is encouraging employees to park at an off-site lot and be bused in. Parking structures on the site also help, he said.

The major challenge is making sure there are enough customers to keep the mammoth complex busy.

That hasn't been a problem so far, with some half a million people a week passing through during the Christmas season last year, Foster said.

BUT TO HELP DRAW more customers, the plaza has been advertising outside Orange County, he said.

The result shown in several surveys was that, in the past several years, customers from outside the county increased from almost none to 14 percent.

And that equals the number of customers South Coast Plaza draws from its chief target area Foster said: 14 percent of its clients live in Costa Mesa.

Huntington Scouts Go on 50-mile Marathon

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Their feet won't let members of Huntington Beach Boy Scout Troop 488 forget their weekend stroll.

After all, it's not everyday you get a group together for a 50-mile hike along beaches and city streets and manage to complete the trek in less than 21 hours.

SCOUTMASTER STEVE Taylor, 30, of Huntington Beach, says there was a method behind his marathon madness

Scout troops that pound out 50 miles in 24 hours are eligible for a national scouting award in honor of football great Amos Alonzo Stagg, said a weary Taylor

So, with a few nine-mile hikes under their dogs for training, 16 young troops and two adults gathered at 4:30 in the morning last weekend at their church in Westminster

"I WORK IN construction and in about 45 minutes it started hurting me," said Taylor

The packs's circuitous route took them from Westminster to the shoreline and back, with a number of backtracking loops to pile up the miles.

The first dropout came at 15 miles, prompting encouragement for a good try and a van ride home from Ed Scott, who provided shuttle and makeshift paramedic service for the troop.

When it was all over, just before midnight Saturday, seven of the 16 scouts who started qualified as survivors. Taylor and the other walking adult, Gerald Stickel, both made it.

"THEY WERE ALL pretty numb," said Scott, "it was like they didn't know what was going on. The morale was good though," he added. "It was neat to watch."

Neat to watch, perhaps, but one of the kids who made it said the simple act of stepping up onto a curb was a painful process toward the end.

Other reactions from the 12- to 14-year-olds ran from from "stiff" to "rough...I guess."

"THEY'VE ALL GOT a few blisters," Taylor said this week, "but it's nothing serious."

Would he do it again? "Probably next year when I get another group of boys...unfortunately," Taylor said, laughing.

Most of the boys will be moving on to a scouting adventure program, but they will leave behind a gold medallion commerating their feat for the next troop.

THEY ALSO WILL keep in close contact with each other because all who took part are members of the Church of Latter Day Saints in Westminster

And yes, despite a strenuous Saturday on the road, all the hikers were at church together on Sunday.

Sun Program Set At Orange Coast

The latest findings about the interior and surface of the sun will be discussed during the second production in Orange Coast College's series.

Entitled "Helios," the programs will be held March 23,24,30 and 31 and April 6, 7, 20, 21, 27 and 28. All performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. in the college's planetarium in Costa Mesa.

Tickets for the show are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Tickets must be purchased at the door.

Lecturers for the presentations will be OCC astronomy instructors Steve Lattanzio and Joel Levine.

Silverado Canyon Land Owner Sued

Orange County government officials have filed a second lawsuit against a Silverado Canyon property owner who allegedly built his home without required county permits.

The suit, filed this week in Orange County Superior Court, seeks an order requiring landowner Edward T. Navickis to obtain building, inspection and grading permits for his property at 14366 Ladd Canyon Road.

In addition, county officials want Navickis ordered to remove a bridge he allegedly built without a permit over a Silverado Creek tributary.

Deputy County Counsel Richard Oviedo contends the alleged illegal grading and bridge installation could impact creek drainage and create flooding for downstream homeowners.

Navickis allegedly constructed his own home and two others on the property without first seeking county approvals.

A hearing on the county's suit has been set for April 13 before Judge Robert H. Green.

Lectures Set On Marriage

A three-part leture series on open marriage will begin from 7:30 to 9:30 tonight in the science hall at Orange Coast College, 2701 Fairview Road, Costa Mesa.

The series cost $5, or $2.50 per for a single session. Tickets may be purchased at the college's Administration Building from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Mondays through Fridays or on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

More information is available at 556-5880.

Insecticide Safe?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturer of one of the world's largest-selling insecticides says it is safe under normal conditions despite a National Cancer Institute finding that it causes cancer in animals. The institute said Thursday that toxaphene, one of the most widely used agricultural pesticides, causes cancer in mice and possibly in rats, as indicated previously in preliminary studies.

Catering Class

He Throws Bashes for Stars

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — There are several ways to throw a party. You can scribble BYOB on your invitations, put out some bread and cold cuts and hope for the best.

Or you can toss fiscal caution to the winds, mortgage your home and call in the experts. Robert Leberman is ready when you are.

As chairman of Casserole Catering, the granddaddy of Southern California caterers and the largest of the breed, Leberman's been responsible for some of the ritziest bashes in town for 33 years.

AND IF HOLLYWOOD is the entertainment center of the world, Leberman is a strong contender for the title of the entertainer's entertainer.

He's catered for everyone from Tiny Tim — "a bug on cleanliness. . .he only ate organic foods served only on sterilized plates and only by one man" — to Marlon Brando, who ordered a dinner for six in his Japanese-style home. "It was the first time the staff had ever served a meal in stocking feet."

In the 1960s, Casserole also played housemother to the Beatles whenever they dropped into town. Leberman discloses that the Fab Four just loved a hamburger concoction that included Coke and cornflakes.

IT WAS DUBBED the Beatleburger, Leberman says, and "I still have the letter authorizing exclusive use of the name." He's not sure why the Beatleburger has never seen the light of day: "I never tasted it."

You don't have to be famous to call in Casserole — just rich, Leberman, a patrician-looking white haired man in his 60s, makes no secret of the fact that his favorite clients are those who care enough to serve the very best and can afford to do so.

"A CUSTOM COUTURIER gets $1,400 for a garment, so why shouldn't a custom caterer charge $1,400 for a dinner party?" he asks.

Actually, $1,400 is small potatoes for a firm that specializes in such corporate bashes as an Arabian Nights extravaganza that ABC threw for National Football League executives or a gargantuan cocktail party for $25,000 at the opening of an Orange County fashion center.

Affairs of these size require the logistical planning of military actions, with Leberman as quartermaster extraordinaire.

HE CAN TELL you how much ice you need to serve drinks for 10,000 (10,000 pounds, a pound a person) or how much those paper-thin slices of smoked salmon cost the generous host ($1.87½ a slice, including Casserole's markup).

Casserole, which started in 1946 delivering home meals more on the level of Chicken Delight than Escoffier, pioneered what Leberman calls public relations entertaining in the early 1950s.

But while the big party remains Casserole's bread and butter, there is nothing too miniscule for its services — if the price is right.

Beatlemania Lives On

Second Generation of Fans Keeps Legend Alive

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen years after they were introduced to America on the Ed Sullivan show, 10 years after they last entered a recording studio together, the Beatles are still big business.

It's not exactly that the Beatles need it. The four members of the group that revolutionized music in the 1960s — Paul McCartney, John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — made millions in the first flush of success and now have separate, successful careers.

BUT NOW THEIR work together is making loads of money for other people.

Their label, Capitol Records, reports that the group's records still sell millions of copies a year.

"Beatlemania," a stage show using Beatle look and sound-alikes, is doing well on Broadway and on a nationwide tour. And Beatle memorabilia is highly prized by collectors and commands impressive prices.

THE BEATLE boom is not just attributable to nostalgia. Many of the fans are teen-agers, some of whom weren't born when the group's long hair shocked the nation in 1964.

At a recent gathering of Beatle fans in New York at the fifth annual Beatlefest, half the crowd appeared to be younger than the Beatle legend.

"This is weird — I really feel old," said said fan Walter Winnick. Winnick is 23.

"HALF THE CROWD is adults and half the crowd is teen-agers. They're second-generation Beatle fans," said Mark Lapidos, organizer of the New York Beatlefest and similar events in Chicago and Los Angeles.

Lapidos won't say how much he makes from organizing Beatlefests, but it's enough to allow him and his wife, Carol, to make a living doing it full time.

Lapidos put together his first New York Beatlefest in 1974, and they've played to capacity crowds ever since. With a minimum of advertising, this one drew more than 6,000 Beatlemaniacs at an average price of $8 a head.

AND THAT WAS just where their spending began. Inside, there were four large meeting rooms and a huge ballroom full of Beatles' films, artwork by fans, guest speakers and a flea market, the latter the event's most popular area.

There, devotees of the four Liverpudlians could buy anything from buttons to trading cards to records to movies — all at impressive prices.

A copy of the rare "Yesterday . . . And Today" album with the rare cover showing the Beatles holding what appear to be dead babies can fetch $250 — 50 times what it cost new. Reproductions of the cover photograph were selling for $3 each and were available on T-shirts and posters.

BOB IULIUCCI, selling films and videotapes of old Beatle performances, said business was "great." Iuliucci also would not say what his annual income from Beatle memorabilia was, but he would admit to it being "in five figures."

Iuliucci got into the Beatle business three years ago by combining two hobbies, Beatle music and film. He travels the country selling his wares to Beatle fans.

"In Houston I sold over $300 worth of films to a woman who didn't even own a projector," he said. "She just wanted the films."

FOR THE MOST hardcore Beatle fans, Beatlefeast is heaven. And the fans react to the goings-on with fervor reminiscent of the height of Beatlemania in 1964; girls still scream when their favorite Beatle's face appears during one of the endless string of movies being shown. And Beatle sound-alike contests are perennial favorites.

The less devoted partake of more moderate celebrations. The "Beatlemania" stage show is scoffed at by a lot of Beatle fans who resent the slick presentation of ersatz Beatles, but it's heading for its third year on Broadway.

Carter OK On Loans?

ATLANTA (AP) — An audit by the company responsible for monitoring loans to the Carter family's peanut warehouse has found no irregularities, says Charles Kirbo, the trustee for President Carter's business interests.

Kirbo made the statement in denying a Washington Post report concerning alleged irregularities involving the loans. He said the company "found nothing which supports any of the allegations made by The Washington Post."

The Post article, printed Sunday, quoted a former warehouseman, Jimmy Hayes, as saying he and Billy Carter, the president's brother, misled the National Bank of Georgia about the amount of peanuts stored in the Plains, Ga., warehouse as collateral for loans.

3 of 4 New Cars Recalled

DEAR PAT: Can you find out how many cars were recalled last year compared to 1977? I'd also like to know which cars were involved in major recalls last year.

F.B., Newport Beach

More than 9 million motor vehicles and 14.6 million tires were recalled for safety defects in 1978, indicating a drop from the record 12.9 million vehicles recalled in 1977, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. However, the millions of tires being recalled by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. constitute the largest single tire recall in history.

NHTSA reports that 58 recall campaigns, involving 4.7 million vehicles, were influenced by government actions or investigations, as was the Firestone recall.

The largest single vehicle recall in 1978 was conducted by Ford Motor Co., involving 1.5 million 1971-76 Pinto and Bobcat cars that had potentially unsafe fuel tanks. Also, General Motors recalled 320,000 subcompact Chevettes for a gas tank problem and 265,000 Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick models for defective rear axles. Finally, Chrysler Corp. recalled 1.1 million Aspen and Volare models to correct steering defects.

In addition to the car and tire recalls, there were 850,000 units of motor vehicle equipment recalled under NHTSA regulations.

Agency Checks Solar Woes

DEAR READERS: The Department of Consumer Affairs now has a Solar Insulation Unit to check into various aspects of the solar energy and insulation fields. The focus of the unit is the development of a solar insulation telephone complaint service.

The staff is available to take consumer complaints, mediate, and assist with problem resolution. The unit also is evaluating solar and insulation advertisements for fraudulent representations.

Several consumer protection pamphlets are available from the unit. They are: Consumer Guidelines for Buying Solar Energy Equipment; Solar Advertising Guidelines; and Sample Warranties for Solar Energy Equipment.

To receive copies of these pamphlets, register complaints, or for more information, telephone the unit toll-free at (800) 952-5567, or write to: Solar Insulation Unit, Department of Consumer Affairs, 1020 N St., Room A547-F, Sacramento, Calif. 95814.

'The Journey #5' by Joan Brown was purchased in 1978. The artist has been labeled an 'unconventional realist,' says Betty Turnbull, curator of exhibitions and collections.

Shopping List

It's a list of art work, and the Acquisition Council of the Newport Harbor Art Museum uses it to decide which works to buy.

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They have a well-worn shopping list and what seems like a lot of money to spend, but the Acquisition Council of the Newport Harbor Art Museum has to watch its p's and q's.

Forty thousand dollars doesn't go a long way when you're talking about art.

The council now is going through the process of deciding what to purchase with monies from the National Endowment for the Arts, which it is hoped will be matched with an equal amount from the upcoming Le Grand Casino benefit.

The museum is fortunate to get its third NEA grant in three years, according to Betty Turnbull, curator of exhibitons and collections.

Last year the council voted to purchase seven works by artists Billy Al Bengston, Joan Brown, Ron Davis, John Okulick, Nathan Oliveira, Bruce Richards and Ed Ruscha for a total cost of $40,500.

These names may not be household words but if the judgment of the council is correct, they will become more familiar over the years.

TO MAKE UP the shopping list, the council looks at "what is needed in the permanent collection to make a good, solid representation of what we feel belongs in contemporary art," Mrs. Turnbull said.

The NEA grant stipulates that works by living artists be purchased. Newport Harbor has chosen to concentrate on "California art of our time" for its choices.

When the process of selection begins, a packet of historical information is assembled for each artist on the list. The packets are sent to the members of the Acquisition Council and then a vote takes place.

"They (council members) are fully informed. Most are collectors anyway," Mrs. Turnbull said.

Out of all the people wielding brushes in California today, how does the museum decide which artists to put on the list?

"It's our business to know," Mrs. Turnbull said. "We read, go to artists' studios, visit San Francisco and the East Coast and are in constant contact with the galleries. It keeps us hopping.

"WE PROPOSE people who have established a reputation," she added. "They

In 1978, the art museum acquired 'Gentle Deception' by John Okulick. He made his first artistic strides in the early '70s, working in his industrial complex studio in Costa Mesa.

Child Abuse

Professionals say that a number of things cause father-daughter incest in the home.

By CHERYL ROMO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Many professionals who specialize in the area of child abuse feel there are several things which encourage father-daughter incest in the home. Among them are:

- The family may be in the lower socio-economic level, living in overcrowded conditions, and may be either geographically or socially isolated.
- The father may be an alcoholic.
- The father and mother have a bad relationship.
- The daughter is attractive and the center of attention in the household. In her mother's absence she has been elevated to the status of "little mother" and cares for both her father and any younger siblings.
- The father wants to keep his family together and doesn't want to go outside the home to satisfy his sexual needs.
- Subconsciously, or consciously, the mother coerces the father into action.

Although the conditions may vary, according to Santa Ana psychologists Jose La Calle, Ph.D. and Trula Michaels La Calle, Ph.D., the combination of these factors is a significant contributor to the estimated 30,000 to 60,000 children who are sexually abused by a parent each year in the United States.

The Drs. La Calle, a husband and wife team specializing is family therapy, recently discussed the growing problem of sexual child abuse at a seminar in Santa Ana sponsored by the Orange County Mental Health Association.

After such an abuse is exposed, said the psychologists, intensive family therapy — during which time the father lives apart from the rest of the family — may preserve the unit.

THE DESTRUCTION OF the family, say the Drs. La Calle, is more psychologically damaging than the physical abuse the child has received.

Dr. Jose La Calle, who initially treats the male in the triad as part of the team approach, gave his explanation as to why the abusing fathers approach their daughters.

"There are many theories about why a father would want to have sex with his own flesh," he said.

"I must put this simply: there is a male in the house with sexual needs and there is a wife in the house who doesn't want to respond to these needs.

"And there is this young girl in the house becoming more desirable. When the sexual need in the male becomes stronger (than the taboo), there is incest."

The wife in such cases, he said, tolerates the incest with little or no protest and exhibits "great displays of denial."

"The wife does not want to recognize what has been going on between her daughter and husband," he said, explaining the mother usually takes a defensive position to protect herself and often, when the incest is made public, accuses the girl of encouraging her father.

Jack Fuller started out to be an architect, but now he's a successful clothing designer.

Fashion Career

The 33-year-old designer travels the country to find out what his customers want.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When fashion designer Jack Fuller was a teen-ager in Vidalia, Ga., in the early '60s, he thought he was going to set the world on fire with his architectural skills.

But he soon realized the difficulty in fanning that particular ambition into the white heat of reality. Instead, at the age of 15, he moved to New York City to enroll in fashion design school.

"I thought I'd try something more simple and glamorous," he says, laughing: "But I found this wasn't easy either."

Jack Fuller sits back and smiles. He has a right to. At the age of 33, he may not be setting the world on fire with his architectural skills.

But he is beginning to create combustion with his fashion designs, which since last fall are under his own label, Jack Fuller Ltd.

THE NEW YORK-BASED designer was in Newport Beach recently for a showing of his spring collection at Bullock's Wilshire in Fashion Island. The visit was part of a week-long trip to Los Angeles and San Francisco stores.

Daily Pilot Photos by Patrick O'Donnell

'My clothes have always been body conscious,' says Jack Fuller of his slim-down and close-to-the-body look such as these two styles.

"I love it," he says of his fashion career. "It's fun, especially this part of it: meeting customers and finding out what their needs are."

Fuller's spring line of dresses and "suit looks" is marked by a definite sensuous flair. His basic fabric is rayon crepe, which lends itself to a feminine look, he says.

"We try to keep it that way," Fuller explains. "We use softer fabrics, even with the jacket look that normally would have a harder edge."

In describing his designs, he says, he always refers to "simplicity and just honest clothes, which really constitutes wearability and making women look and feel good."

HE NOTES THAT HIS clothes, which range from $80 to $180, are designed to double as both daytime and evening wear. "With prices today," he says, "women don't want the kinds of dresses they only wear once a year."

Fuller works basically with soft, year-round colors. He says he purposely stayed away from "eye-popping bright" colors because he figured everyone else would be doing that.

Fuller, who has been designing for 13 years,

Money Talks For Singles

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Single people may think they have more financial difficulties than married people but there's only one major difference, according to Ron Gable, a certified financial planner.

"Singles don't have someone to bounce things off of. You can go around in circles," he said.

Gable, lecturer for a Coastline Community College series titled Financial Planning for Singles, said that the first thing a solo person must do is get a perspective on his financial picture.

"PUT ALL the pieces together, not just a few," he advised. "But who are the sources of advice? How do you correlate the advice? People think of doing things in a vacuum. They ask themselves, 'Who do I go to first?' "

A financial planner can help the process start, Gable said. He interviews clients to "get inside their mind," then begins thinking of their situation the way they do. He offers them perspective.

"Many people get caught in old ways of thinking. Money is a thing that involves a lot of past habits. The economy has changed and their own situation has changed."

The first step in spending money is to go to a tax accountant and make a plan for income taxes, "the only thing you can do something about year after year."

When the options are understood, the person can make decisions about how to spend the money.

Gable advocates making a list of where money will be spent and putting oneself on it.

Once money is set aside for savings, there are "no guilt feelings if you blow the rest of it," Gable said. "You have a better sense of freedom. You shouldn't be a slave to your finances."

HE STRESSES the "building block concept" in his four-part series. At the bottom, the foundation, is emergency money, insurance and wills.

The middle step is liquid growth investments and the top is income tax, estate and retirement planning.

Liquid growth possibilities include stocks, real estate equity trust funds, mutual fund timing programs and such limited partnerships as oil, Gable said. These should not be considered until the bottom block is in place, he warned.

Singles can manage all of this as long as they deal with "internal causes of financial problems" such as fear of failure and lack of knowledge, Gable said.

'Get a perspective. Get it all together."

The series will conclude at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 22, at Huntington Beach City Hall. Topic will be Building have lasting power. Or we feel they have lasting power. It's always a gamble. There's no way to be sure."

The paintings chosen last year, which now are a part of the museum's permanent collection, are:

"Count Dracula II," 1960, Billy Al Bengston; "The Journey," 1976, Joan Brown; "550—Unfold and Arc," 1977, Ron Davis; "Gentle Deception," 1977, John Okulick; "Italian Sentinel," 1959, Nathan Oliveira; "Tracer," 1977, and "Annie," 1965, Ed Ruscha.

Mrs. Turnbull explained why works by those particular artists were selected.

Joan Brown was chosen, Mrs. Turnbull said, because she has "enjoyed a reputation as a top figurative painter for 20 years.

"One of the youngest of the San Francisco Bay area figurative artists of the late '50s, she has continued to pursue her own unique path. She has been labeled an 'unconventional realist'," the curator noted.

JOHN OKULICK is truly a local painter. He made his first important strides in the early '70s, working in his industrial complex studio in Costa Mesa, Mrs. Turnbull said.

"His work appeared in several survey exhibitions at the Newport Harbor Art Museum," she noted, "and he now is in many major museum collections."

Billy Al Bengston "established an impressive reputation during the heyday of the noted Ferus Gallery on La Cienega in the '60s," according to Mrs. Turnbull.

"His art continued to develop significantly," she added, "and a California collection would be incomplete without it."

For 1979 the council has a shorter shopping list.

Two or three larger pieces and some smaller works probably will be selected, Mrs. Turnbull said.

The museum's permanent collection now includes about 150 works displayed in the Sullivan Gallery on a rotating basis.

Le Grand Casino fund-raising event for the museum, a black-tie affair, is scheduled at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 19 at the museum.

It is the largest affair ever undertaken by the museum, according to the curator, with 3,500 invitations to be mailed out and approximately 500 persons expected to actually attend.

The party will include a hosted bar, lavish buffet, live music and valet parking, according to Judy Hurndall, catering and music committee chairman.

Individual tickets will cost $100, and will include an initial supply of gambling chips. Prizes to be awarded include trips to Paris, Hawaii and Puerto Vallarta.

Other La Grand Casino committee chairmen are Linda Clark, Leon Rosen and Gay Bryant. Committee members are Pat Giddings, Pat Gibbs, Joan Rehnborg and Marion Shea.

Marc Freidberg, Acquisition Council Chairman, also is assisting with plans for the evening.

. . . Fashion

does not believe in designing for a specific age group.

"I think if they're good clothes anyone can wear them. I think that's one of the reasons we've been so successful."

If there is any trend to fashion, he says, it is a definite slim-down or close-to-the-body look. "My clothes have always been body conscious."

Fuller appeared shocked when asked about a rumored come-back of the mini. That is one style he never favored, and he puts no credence in its possible revival.

AS FOR HEMLINES, he feels the most attractive lengths are just below the knee, mid-calf or ankle length.

Asked if he plans to branch into men's fashions, Fuller says he'd love to—if he only had more time.

He explains that he is given a period of six weeks to design the 60-70 pieces in each line. That includes finding the colors and fabrics and having it ready for presentation. This deadline must be met four times a year.

And when he's not at the drawing board, Fuller usually spends eight or nine weeks a year on the road. He says few designers spend as much time on the road as he does.

He has done as many as two shows a day for six days in a row, in at least two states a day. At his insistence, his current trip to the West Coast is much more leisurely. He prefers concentrating on one store a day, preferably in one city.

He says he doesn't mind the traveling, largely because it helps him maintain contact with his customers.

That, in turn, helps prevent his creative well from running dry.

"I never worry about that," Fuller says with a smile, "and as long as I'm on the road, too, and find what their needs are, I won't ever have to think about that."

Nuns, Priests Leave Church

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN: Your answer to "Sad in the Shadows" could not have been better. You were perfectly right to say, "If a man does not believe he has the strength to honor the vow of celibacy, he should not take it. After he has taken the vow, if he discovers the celibate life is too great a sacrifice, he should turn in his collar and change professions." You didn't state approximately the number who have left. Have you any idea?

To the Catholic priests and nuns who have abandoned the religious life, I say, thank God for that. If you were not able to make the sacrifice and honor your vows, you were not suited for the vocation to start with and the Church is better off without you.

We are all tempted in our daily lives, regardless if we are single, married or members of a religious order. The secret is to fight temptation — and win.

When "Sad in the Shadows" realized she was falling in love with a priest, she should have taken a cold shower and looked for a priest who resembled Barry Fitzgerald in "Going My Way." — CANADIAN READER

DEAR C.R.: I'm glad you understood my response. Some readers interpreted it as a slam against the Catholic church. Nothing could be further from the truth.

According to Father Andrew Greeley, professor and sociologist at the University of Arizona, approximately 6,000 priests and 25,000 nuns have left their religious vocations in the last decade. I've said it before and I'll say it again, I believe that eventually Catholic priests and nuns will be permitted to marry . . . and I hope it happens in our lifetime.

Shaky Pirates Almost Walk the Plank

OCC Wins, 54-52; Faces Southwest

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If ever the phrase "by the skin of their teeth" applied to a particular situation, it was Orange Coast College's quarterfinal state JC playoff game Thursday afternoon against American River at Cal State Fullerton.

The Pirates, leading by as many as 14 in the second half, needed two clutch free throws by Steve Timmons with two seconds remaining to hold off a furious American River comeback and win, 54-52, before 1,750.

The usually impregnable and well-disciplined Pirates were shaky from the outset, never really getting into the flow of the contest for the entire 40 minutes.

"I CAN'T REMEMBER a game we've played as poorly as we did today," expressed Tandy Gillis, Orange Coast's coach. "I don't really know why either. We were very tentative down the stretch."

"We just played a lousy game," added guard Ray Orgill, who finished as the game's leading scorer with 18 points.

"I don't know what it was. Maybe we were too cautious, maybe it was the tension, maybe it was the first time being here. It's a totally different situation once you get here."

One would have almost thought the Pirates lost in listening to Gillis' and Orgill's comments. And then again, maybe it was just their way of getting themselves ready for tonight's semifinal game against surprising LA Southwest, an 84-75 upset victor over Santa Rosa.

Magee Does His Thing

Gaucho Vows to Give Cypress' Eaton a Lesson

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In the vernacular of the sport, it's "put your money where your mouth is" time for Kevin Magee tonight.

Quiet and polite, especially by enforcer standards, Saddleback's 6-8 center will nonetheless either have to back up some tough words or eat them when the Gauchos take on Cypress College tonight (8 o'clock) in the semifinals of the state junior college basketball tournament at Cal State Fullerton.

EARLY THIS YEAR, Magee took one look at Cypress' 7-3 center Mark Eaton in action and asked what all the fuss was about.

"I don't think he's very good," says Magee. "He really doesn't have much going for him except his height." Magee vowed he would give Eaton a lesson in basketball when—not if—Cypress and Saddleback squared off in the state tournament.

As Saddleback Coach Bill Mulligan surmised Thursday night after Magee and Co. dismantled Oxnard before 3,000 in attendance, 81-76. "Kevin said he was going to lick the big guy and now he gets his chance."

The way Magee outscored, outhustled and generally outclassed Oxnard's Michael Johnson Thursday night, it wouldn't be safe to bet against him tonight. Against the 1978 Los Angeles prep player of the year, Magee hit 12 of 19 field goals for 25 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and also found time to block three shots.

IF THAT WASN'T ENOUGH, he turned in the two plays that turned it around.

Saddleback was holding onto a slim 73-72 lead and running its delay game when Magee got the ball in the left corner, blew by Johnson on the baseline and slammed it through for a three-point lead with 1:13 remaining.

Johnson, trying to retaliate, was isolated against Magee at the other end of the court moments later. He pumped, faked, and went up for a jump shot with Magee right

UCLA Awesome

Bruins Flawless in Second Half

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Dan Belluomini, somewhat shell-schocked after watching UCLA's sharpshooters fire home bomb after bomb, could only shake his head in amazement.

"When you make those 35-footers," said the San Francisco coach, "It's tough to get beat."

WITH GUARDS ROY HAMILTON and Brad Holland gunning home 58 points, mostly long-range missiles, the second-ranked Bruins turned a close game into a rout Thursday night and walked off with a 99-81 victory over the Dons in the semifinals of the West Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Next up for Coach Gary Cunningham's marksmen is DePaul, which rallied behind Gary Garland and Curtis Watkins to deck Marquette 62-56 in the other semifinal match.

San Francisco, led by forceful Bill Cartwright, a 7-foot-1 All-American center, twice led by as many as nine in the first half, then frittered away all but two points of the lead just before intermission.

CARTWRIGHT, WHO ENDED with 34 points, scored two buckets and a pair of free throws in the first minutes of the second half to help open a 51-45 San Francisco lead and an upset seemed to be taking shape.

But then Holland and Hamilton began finding the range, the Bruins went on a 15-1 tear and the game was finished.

A Holland bucket gave the PAC-10 champions a 72-66 lead with about 9:30 left. With 2:22 remaining David Greenwood completed a three-point play to make it 92-71.

HAMILTON FINISHED with a career-high 36 points, Holland added 22, Greenwood 19 and Kiki Vandeweghe 11 as the sizzling Bruins shot 60 percent for the game, 73 percent in the second half.

"This game reminded me of an all-star game I played in my senior year in high school when everything just seemed to go in the basket," said Hamilton. "This is my last year and I have to do everything I can to help us."

"He (Hamilton) just got it going and seemed to make everything," said Belluomini, who finished his first season as San Francisco's head coach with a 22-7 record. "That's the best any guard has played against us all year."

Tapie on 66: I Just Let It Happen

Special to the Daily Pilot

MIAMI — Three years ago Alan Tapie was playing in mini-tournaments including the Crosby Southern at Irvine Coast Country Club and wondering about his future on the PGA tour.

Last year the Laguna Niguel resident gained an exempt status by finishing in the top 60 money winners, then last week at the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic, he fired a first-round 82 and didn't make the cut.

THURSDAY IN MIAMI at the Doral Open, Tapie one-putted 11 times on his way to a six-under-par 66 that gave him the first round lead. He has never won in five years on the tour.

Tapie credits a more positive mental approach for the improvement in his game.

"I didn't try to make it happen, try to force anything," he said following his round. "I just let it happen. It was a heck of a round and I just made a lot of putts, an awful lot of putts. I was thinking well, too."

TAPIE HAD A TWO-STROKE lead until he scored his only bogey of the sunny, windy day after driving behind trees on the right on the final hole at the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

He got off to a spectacular start when he hit two drives to the fringe of the green on the first hole and dropped a 20-foot putt for an eagle.

He saved par with one-putts on the next two holes, dropped one from off the green to save par on the next, birdied the next from seven feet and saved par again on the next. That gave him six putts for the first six holes.

HE MISSED THREE MORE greens and saved par on two of them, had a tap-in birdie of about 18 inches on the 11th hole and scored three more times from the 6-8-foot range.

"Any time anybody shoots 66 they make a lot of putts, and that's what I did. A lot of putts," he said.

Steinbrenner Outraged, Calls Ex-Yank Lyle Stupid

From AP Dispatches

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, enraged by published excerpts from reliever Sparky Lyle's new book, termed the pitcher, "stupid" and called many of his allegations "garbage" Thursday night.

"Everybody says he's a buffoon," said Steinbrenner. "He's not a buffoon, but he's one of the least intelligent athletes I've ever met."

LYLE

Lyle won the Cy Young Award two years ago but with the arrival of Rich Gossage he fell into a secondary role with the Yankees last season, when he was writing his diary-type book. He was traded to the Texas Rangers last November.

"I don't mind what he said about me," said Steinbrenner. "I've been attacked by better than him. What bothers me is what one teammate said about another teammate. I'm bitterly disappointed for those guys in there," he said, motioning toward the Yankees' locker room.

"What he said about third baseman Graig Nettles is garbage."

Lyle wrote that Nettles had made a deliberate error in a an attempt to prevent an April exhibition game against the New York Mets from dragging into extra innings. The slick-fielding third baseman shrugged off the excerpt from his ex-teammate's book.

"I never made an error on purpose in my life," Nettles said. "I don't know if the story was taken out of context or what. Knowing Sparky, he was joking and it came out wrong. Maybe I made a joke about it after the game, but it was a long time ago and I don't remember."

Nettles said he had talked to Lyle about the matter Thursday. "He knows . . . everybody knows . . . I wouldn't do that on purpose," he said.

nearly flawless second half, probably the best we played all year. We were patient and took what are high percentage shots for our players."

Sixth-ranked DePaul, recovering from a nine-point deficit in the first half, and an eight-point Marquette lead in the second, had considerably more difficulty with its old rival from the Great Lakes region.

Marquette's Bernard Toone canned a pair of free throws to give the Warriors a 54-53 lead with 2:14 to go.

THEN WATKINS funneled home a jumper to make it 55-54 DePaul with 1:30 left.

The Warriors committed four fouls in the final 90 seconds and Watkins, Garland, Clyde Bradshaw and Mark Aguirre calmly converted them into seven points to ice the victory.

"When Watkins was fouled I knew the game was over," said venerable DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "He's an 87 percent free throw shooter."

TURNOVERS PLAYED probably the biggest part, with Marquette guilty of 17 and DePaul only six.

Toone, Marquette's stylish 6-9 senior forward, topped all scorers with 26 points while Watkins and Aguirre each had 19 for DePaul.

"I'm disappointed, but our series with DePaul has been like this," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds. "I wish Ray the best of luck. He's a friend and a great coach."

DePaul may have its hands full in the regional finals Saturday.

EARLY THIS year, at UCLA, the Blue Demons were destroyed 108-85.

Never in his long, colorful career has Meyer made it to the NCAA final four, and Raymonds sounded less than optimistic his old friend would do it this year.

"They (UCLA) are such a great shooting team, and they have some size," Raymonds said. "I think DePaul may have to go to their bench and they will be in trouble."

Dodgers' Broberg Battered

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Pete Broberg's days as a pitcher with the Los Angeles Dodgers may be numbered.

Broberg, who signed with the two-time defending National League champions as a free agent just before the club departed Los Angeles for spring training, allowed seven runs in the seventh inning Thursday as the Texas Rangers routed the Dodgers 11-4 in an exhibition baseball game at Pompano Beach, Fla.

The Rangers' big inning snapped a 4-4 tie and sent the Dodgers down to only their second spring training loss in seven decisions.

Broberg has suffered both losses, allowing 14 hits and nine runs, six earned, in six innings of work. He has walked four and struck out three.

Mike Jorgensen, trying to win the starting first base position for Texas, swatted three hits, including a double and a triple, and drove in two runs. Rookies Billy Sample and Marty Scott each had two hits for the Rangers.

Catcher Steve Yeager was the only regular in the lineup for the Dodgers. Joe Simpson, Teddy Martinez, John Oates and Mickey Hatcher had two hits apiece for Los Angeles.

Texas scored four times in the first three innings off Doug Rau.

Edison's Bell, Dotterer Sparkle in Sprints

Los Alamitos High pole vaulter Tim McIntire stole the show with a 15-6 vault Thursday in non-league track and field action involving Orange Coast area schools, although his Griffin teammates found themselves on the wrong end of a 101-35 score to Fountain Valley.

Among top marks for area athletes were University High's Harry Billups' 22.5 in the 220; Newport Harbor's Charles Steak's second place clocking of 4:30.3 in the mile; and triple victories by Laguna Beach's Bailon Arabe and Corona del Mar's Jack Fabregas.

EDISON HIGH'S one-two punch of Kerwin Bell and Mike Dotterer in the sprints was evident at Long Beach Millikan where Bell and Dotterer swept the 100 with 10.0 and 10.1 clockings respectively, while the combination was reversed in the 220 with Dotterer leading the way with a 22.9, followed by Bell (23.0).

Loara High's Mike Serna won the mile in 4:27.5 to nose out Newport Harbor's Steak. Also shining for Newport Harbor was Kevin Jefferies in the weight events, taking the shot in 50-9½ and discus in 144-10.

Laguna Beach's Duane Clark showed some muscle in doubling in the 440 and discus. Clark ran a lap in 52.7 and threw the plate 153-2.

ARABE TRIPLED for Laguna Beach, winning the sprints in 10.5 and 23.7 and the long jump in 18-8, but Irvine used its depth to win the meet.

Fountain Valley also used its depth to submerge Los Alamitos, highlighted by Dennis Cowan's 44-6 in the triple jump and Curtis Brase's double in the hurdles.

Costa Mesa's Mike Moiso doubled in the hurdles, but Mater Dei had John Kapsner in the sprints (10.5 and 23.6) and freshman Bob Planta in the mile and 2-mile (4:30.3 and 9:58.0).

Corona del Mar eased past Dana Hills behind Fabregas' wins in the 100, (10.5), 220 (24.3) and long jump (19-11).

ORANGE COAST . . .

turning the game into a defensive affair.

With the score tied eight times in the first 12 minutes of play, the Pirates finally established a lead on baskets by Gary Wills and Orgill with a free throw by Stu Van Horn sandwiched in between. Leading 20-15, OCC then added three more points to the margin to hold a 28-20 advantage at the intermission.

At the outset of the second half, the Pirates briefly flashed the form that made them the South Coast Conference champions by scoring eight of the half's first 10 points to assume their largest lead of the afternoon, 36-22.

BUT AMERICAN RIVER, the Valley Conference champion, wouldn't fold.

With the Pirates slowing down their tempo, the Beavers decided to pick up theirs. The Beavers, waiting for their opening, finally got it with 5:05 remaining. It was at that time that Brian McCormick was to make Coast's final basket of the game.

Repeatedly, the Beavers would make a basket and then foul the Pirates in an effort to get the ball back. And repeatedly, the Pirates would miss their free throws giving the Beavers another chance.

Eight times in nine tries the Pirates missed a chance to increase their lead at the free throw line down the stretch, with five of those misses being front ends of a one-and-one situation.

WHAT RESULTED from all this was a 14-point lead vanishing into a 52-52 tie with HEADLESS CENTER Saddleback's Kevin Magee has the ball cover his face after a slam dunk against Oxnard Thursday in the quarterfinals of the state JC tournament.

Rustler Clubs 2 Homers

Orange Coast, Golden West and Saddleback colleges were winners Thursday in baseball action as coast area athletes came through with clutch hitting and pitching with Frank Meraz's two three-run homers for Golden West topping the day.

Orange Coast required 10 innings before putting the stops to visiting LA Harbor, 5-4, in non-conference action, while Golden West traveled to Rio Hondo and blasted the Roadrunners with a 15-hit attack, including 11 runs in the last three innings to take a 16-8 Southern California Conference victory.

SADDLEBACK GOT rich on Riverside pitching in the second inning and scored seven times en route to an 8-5 Mission Conference triumph.

Joe Mutt went all the way for Orange Coast, striking out nine and walking only one batter in picking up his fifth victory in as many decisions.

The winning margin came with two out in the 10th inning when Don Hill walked, Tom Barnett followed with a single and Mike Sodders singled sharply to right to score the winner.

SODDERS ALSO HAD a triple and RBI single in the seventh which tied the game at 4. Randy Day had a pair of doubles for OCC.

Meraz wielded the big stick for Golden West, stroking the aforementioned three-run homers and adding a double and single in five appearances at the plate in producing seven RBI.

Both homers were drilled over the left field wall. Also, Tony Abarca had a run-scoring triple and Shawn Gill had a two-run double to pace the Golden West attack.

SADDLEBACK RELIEF pitcher Mike O'Sullivan, after giving up a double, retired the last 12 batters to secure Jeff Huddleston's victory.

The Gauchos got their seven runs in the second on run-scoring hits by Bruce Welz, Eric Browning, Eddie McCann (double), Mark Stowell, Doug Fritz and Paul Bethke, in addition to Doug Jones' sacrifice fly.

on him like numbers on a uniform. Magee went for a mighty swat and missed but still got the job done.

JOHNSON, THE intimidator, was intimidated. He never got the shot off, got called for traveling and Saddleback sealed the game by doing what it couldn't do earlier — hit free throws.

Like the entire Gaucho team, Magee seemed hesitant and tight in the first half. But when the second half began, Saddleback immediately took charge, attacking Oxnard straight up with Magee doing most of the damage.

"I got two early fouls and I had to lay back a bit in the first half," said Magee. "But I wanted to come out in the second half and get the tip. We got the tip, got the two and went from there.

"It was just a matter of getting our heads together. We told ourselves at halftime that we were going to win and so we took the game right to them."

ED PATRICK, the 5-10 guard who was just as important as the 6-8 Magee, shared the same sentiment.

"Everybody was shaky and a little nervous at first," said Patrick, who got nine of his 19 points from the free throw line, including four in the final 20 seconds. "We just had to calm down and get our stuff together at halftime.

"I don't think we played our best tonight but if we calm down, we should do pretty good against Cypress. I think it was just a matter of confidence. After we got over that shaky first half, we came out and stuck it to them."

MULLIGAN, WHO HAD hoped that Magee and Johnson (17 points, 11 rebounds) would neutralize each other, didn't need any Knute Rockne-speech at halftime to get his team going. All he gave them were some hard, cold facts.

"We had just two offensive rebounds in the first half and I reminded them games are usually won on the boards. I also told them we were down by just one at halftime (40-39) and hadn't played well.

"I don't know what the difference was. If I did, we'd have gotten it together in the first half."

If he's not delivering any inspired pep talks at halftime, at least he's practicing on his post-playoff game speech. After going winless in seven previous state playoff games, Mulligan has now won two straight in the 1979 post-season affair.

"It's just nice to talk to somebody after a state tournament," he beamed.

If Magee can just live up to his promise, Mulligan will have a lot more to talk about Saturday.

Miller, Aikens Hot, But Angels Lose

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Rick Miller and Willie Mays Aikens enjoyed big days for California on Thursday, but it wasn't enough as the Angels dropped an 8-6 exhibition baseball decision to the Milwaukee Brewers.

Miller and Aikens both swent 4-for-4, and Aikens ripped a towering two-run homer in the game at Sun City, Ariz.

Miller's impressive day gave him 11 hits in 20 at-bats in the Angels' nine exhibition games this spring.

eight seconds to play, the Pirates scoring but three points in the last seven minutes.

With the chips on the line, though, the Pirates came through. Paul Akin took the inbound pass and fired it to Orgill who shoveled it to Timmons going toward the basket.

Timmons then collided with Beaver forward Oscar Burgarin, who was trying to establish position under the basket. The referee ruled in Timmons' favor and he was sent to the line.

Actually, the foul wasn't a bad move on the part of the Beavers. Nobody had been making any free throws for OCC and Timmons had missed four in the closing minutes as badly as anybody could miss them.

But coolly, calmly, the 6-6 freshman from Newport Harbor High canned the pair.

Despite the heroics, none of the Pirates were particularly jubilant afterwards.

"We almost choked," exclaimed Neumann, who grabbed nine rebounds to go with his eight points. "We played too cautiously at the end."

"WE TRIED TO RUN the passing game," explained Gillis. "I thought we got our shots, we just didn't hit them.

"Who knows why we did what we did. Maybe we were tight."

Timmons was the only other Pirate besides Orgill to score in double figures with 10 points. He also grabbed a game-high 11 boards.

American River was led by guard Terry Hearn who finished with 12.

The Pirates, almost to a man, said they expected no problem tonight in shaking their first-game jitters and getting ready for LA Southwest.

"We'll be ready," promised Orgill.

"We'll play good," added Gillis, "but with the type of team we have, nothing is going to be easy."

Bird Flies On

Indiana State Belts Sooners

CINCINNATI (AP) — Oklahoma Coach Dave Bliss had heard all about Indiana State's Sycamores and Larry Bird.

On Thursday night, he got to see first-hand what they could do, as the top-ranked Sycamores beat 16th-ranked Oklahoma 93-72 to advance to the NCAA Midwest Regional tournament finals Saturday against Arkansas.

ARKANSAS WON ITS 14TH straight game, 73-62 after withstanding a furious second-half charge by Louisville.

Bird controlled the Indiana State-Oklahoma contest with 29 points, 15 rebounds and five assists as undefeated ISU won its 31st game.

"You can't judge Larry Bird until you play against him or see him in person," Bliss admitted. "They're a good basketball team, but he makes them a very good basketball team. When you play with Larry Bird, you play excellent basketball because he gives you the confidence of playing with the best.

"He gets a lot of basketball out of all their players."

It was all in a night's work for Bird.

"I JUST TRY TO PLAY a team game. I've been playing for enough years to know when someone's open, you've got to get him the ball and you always hope that he can throw off to somebody else," Bird said.

The Sycamores blew open the game in second half with a lead that grew to 25 points.

There were four ties in the first half and Oklahoma had a 33-30 lead with 4:56 remaining on a McCullough jump shot.

But then the omnipresent Bird converted both ends of a one-and-one foul situation, starting the Sycamores on their way to their eight-point halftime lead.

In the opening game, Sidney Moncrief scored 27 points and the fifth-ranked Razorbacks survived a blistering second-half rally by 13th-ranked Louisville.

Two Share LPGA Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Vivian Brownlee and Nayoko Yoshikawa carded 4-under-par 68s Thursday to share the first round lead in the Rancho Bernardo Golf Classic.

Brownlee, of Dunedin, Fla., was in the first group off the tee in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event on the 6,212-yard, par 72 Rancho Bernardo Inn and Country Club course and her 68 stood up until Yoshikawa matched her.

Yoshikawa, playing in her fifth and final LPGA event this season before returning home to Japan, played in the final threesome of the first round.

Second at 69 in the 72-hole event which finishes Sunday were Barbara Moxness and Amy Alcott. Two strokes off the pace after 18 holes were Susie McAllister, Louise Bruce, Sandra Spuzich and Sandra Post.

Defending champion Sally Little was one of 13 golfers at one-under-par 71. Also three shots behind the co-leaders were Jane Blalock, Pat Bradley, Sandra Palmer and JoAnn Washam.

UCI Tumbles Again

AZUSA — UC Irvine's problems continue this year as it dropped another baseball game Thursday, this time to Azusa-Pacific, 8-2.

Four Irvine pitchers were banged up for the eight runs with Ken Gutierrez taking the loss. His record now drops to 1-4.

Ed Knaggs and Eric Frolander provided the only offense for the Anteaters as Knaggs hit two singles and a double in three at-bats. Frolander added a home run in the eighth for Irvine's only runs.

The Anteaters' record now drops to 7-14.

Tars Face Laguna

Newport Harbor High's No. 1 ranking in CIF 4-A volleyball will be at stake tonight as the Sailors host No. 3 ranked Laguna Beach at 7 o'clock.

Although it's a non-league match, the contest pits the traditional super powers of the Sunset and South Coast leagues and Newport Harbor, despite its No. 1 billing, will be hard pressed.

The Sailors will be playing without senior captain Greg Sullivan, an all-league setter who tore ligaments in his ankle and will be lost for the season.

Newport Harbor is expected to move junior Tom Bunnell into the starting lineup to fill the void, and more pressure will be placed on returning all-league setter Kyle Slaughter.

Laguna's top guns include returning starters Kevin Norick, Andrew Dodds and Rene Oliver.

ABC Holds Key

Thursday Night Baseball?

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Negotiations between major league baseball and the networks over a TV contract to replace the one that expires at the close of the coming season continue to drag on with ABC holding the key.

Baseball is holding firm to its demands for more money, which it will doubtless get, and more quality exposure, which is the sticky point. By quality exposure, baseball means prime time in September.

At present, baseball is replaced by Monday night football in September and that galls the baseball people no end. Just when the pennant races get hot the sport disappears from prime time.

ABC IS NOT ABOUT to tinker with Monday night football, so much of the current haggling centers on whether ABC would go for, say, Thursday night baseball. With its crack Thursday night lineup of entertainment shows, the network is reluctant to commit that time to baseball. And with its desire for prime time exclusivity, it may not accept any arrangement that gives NBC or CBS a Thursday night package.

The big drawback to dropping baseball entirely is, of course, losing out on the World Series, playoffs and All-Star Game, the main items that make the baseball package attractive.

So the negotiations, mostly with ABC, drag on. NBC and CBS remain more or less in limbo.

A clue to the network's thinking may be forthcoming shortly. ABC has not yet announced its plans for this season. The network may decide to try out a couple of Thursday night games to see what develops. If so, that would indicate that ABC may try to accommodate baseball's demands for prime time in September under the new contract.

NBC IS STILL BEATING the bushes for a successor to Maury Wills as commentator on its backup baseball Game of the Week this season. Wills was quietly dropped recently.

The top candidates appear to be Wes Parker, the former Dodger first baseman who has turned to acting, and Earl Williams, the former catcher who starred with the Atlanta Braves as a rookie, then bounced around for a few seasons before dropping out of sight.

SPORTS ON TV

BOTH ABC AND NBC have been lining up people for their Olympic coverage teams in preparation for 1980. ABC has the Winter Games from Lake Placid and NBC will cover the Summer Games from Moscow.

There have been no official announcements yet, but many of the key spots have been filled. Jim McKay, the man who set the standard for this sort of thing, will again anchor ABC's effort. The network will do 50½ hours from Lake Placid, all of it in prime time and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Keith Jackson, Frank Gifford and Al Michaels will be involved, as will ABC's "experts" such as Dick Button on figure skating and Bob Beattie on skiing.

Howard Cosell will probably not be there because winter sports are not his thing.

Dick Enberg appears locked in as prime time host of NBC's mammoth 150-hour effort from Moscow. NBC will be televising mornings, afternoons, evenings and even have a late-night session.

Tickner Finishes Fourth

VIENNA (AP) — If dazzling jumps, loops and spins were all that mattered in figure skating, Robin Cousins of Britain would be the new world champion today and America's Charlie Tickner his runnerup.

They topped the free skating and had a crowd of 7,000 cheering wildly in Vienna's Stadthalle Thursday night But Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union won the title because he had built up a big lead on his compulsory figures and short program earlier in the competition.

"I GUESS it's more difficult to defend a title than to win it," said Tickner, 25, of Littleton, Colo., who was world champion last year but finished fourth this time.

Cousins finished second behind Kovalev, and Jan Hoffman of East Germany was third.

Tickner suffered a bad slip at the start of his short program Wednesday when he fell attempting a triple jump. It cost him vital points, and he had too big a gap to make up as he went after Kovalev in the free skating Thursday night.

COUSINS, 21, is the man British fans see as the successor to Olympic gold medalist John Curry. He is called the best free skater in the world, but his slow start in the compulsories pulled him back once more. He has never won a major title.

BUT THIS was how the free skating scoring compared with the overall result:

Free skating — Cousins 9 ordinals and 105.90 points, Tickner 22 and 104.40, Hoffmann 30 and 103.10, Kovalev 37 and 102.20.

Overall placings — Kovalev 17 and 185.80, Cousins 22 and 185.18, Hoffmann 23 and 185.10, Tickner 28 and 164.28.

Although the compulsories cost him a world title, Cousins doesn't believe they should be dropped from the competition.

MIXED UP FLEET Congressional Cup racers overlapped each other as light airs scrambled the five match racing pairs off Long Beach Harbor. Approaching the leeward mark in two separate pairings are Dick Deaver (No. 2) and Bruno Trouble (No. 6) of France. Deaver won both his matches but was being protested in his first race.

Deaver Leads in Cup —If Protest Granted

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

Dick Deaver of the Balboa Yacht Club may or may not have a leg up on his second consecutive Congressional Cup match racing championship.

It depends on the outcome of a double protest in Deaver's first match Thursday against Harold Cudmore of the Royal Cork Yacht Club of Ireland. Both skippers were flying protest flags as they crossed the starting line in the third start of the first series of races off Long Beach Harbor.

SHOULD DEAVER win the protest he would be tied with two wins with Pelle Petterson of the Royal Gothenberg Yacht Club of Sweden who won both his matches — the first against Bruno Trouble, Yacht Club d'Hyeres, France, and the second against John Odenbach Jr., Yacht Racing Union of the Great Lakes.

For the rest of the 10-man field in the 15th annual Congressional Cup it was a frustrating day with six winding up with one win and one loss each and two others going down to defeat in both races.

It was also a frustrating day for the race committee who had to finally abandon the third race because of uncooperative weather.

THE WEATHER was light and fluky for the first two series of races, but after three pairs had been started in the third race the wind shifted so widely that a recall was signalled so that the mark could be reset to allow a true weather leg. A second attempt to get the third race under way was thwarted when what little wind there was shifted back again and a light rain began to fall.

Deaver had his boat Argonaut moving well over the course in both races, beating Cudmore by three minutes and 28 seconds and Dennis Durgan of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club by 4:39. Whether or not he stands 2-0 going into the third race depends on the outcome of the protest hearing which was not to be announced until today.

Petterson also won both his races by healthy margins, defeating Trouble by 2:57 and Odenbach by 1:34.

THE DREARY, FLUKY weather made it a dull day of racing for both competitors and spectators. In every match the boat that got the start went on to win the race.

The abandoned race threatens to run the Congressional Cup over into Sunday unless the weather improves today and Saturday. The committee said an attempt would be made to make up the aborted race by sailing four races today.

Here is the way the racing went Thursday:

First Series

RACE I — Dennis Durgan, NHYC, def. Richard Hackett, Coyote Point YC, 1:11; Pelle Petterson, Royal Gothenberg YC, def. Bruno Trouble, Yacht Club d'Hyeres, 2:57; Dick Deaver, BYC, def. Harold Cudmore Royal Cork YC, 3:28 (protest pending); Scott Allan, New York YC, def. Marvin Beckmann, Galveston Bay Cruising Association, 1:03; Henry Scofield, Long Beach Yacht Club, def. John Odenback Jr., Yacht Racing Union of the Great Lakes, 1:20.

RACE II — Trouble def. Allan, 10 secs; Deaver def. Durgan, 4:39; Beckmann def. Schofield, 1:17; Petterson def. Odenbach, 1:34; Cudmore def. Hackett, 2:05.

Standings after two races:

Petterson, 2-0; Deaver, 2-0 (pending protest); Cudmore, 1-1 (protest pending); Beckman 1-1 (protest pending); Allan, 1-1; Schofield 1-1 (protest pending); Durgan 1-1; Trouble 1-1; Hackett 0-2; Odenbach 0-2.

Busy Weekend

Power Racers Rule the Sea

The roar of offshore powerboats will drown out the obscenities and demands for sea room of the rag sailors Saturday as one of the busiest and noisiest of boating and yachting weekends of the spring season gets under way along the coast.

The top feature of the local scene will be the Bushmills Grand Prix offshore power boat race which will send the roaring behemoths up and down the coast from Newport Beach to Long Beach and Dana Point at about the same time sailboat regattas will be getting under way.

Starting signal for the Bushmills will sound at 10 a.m. featuring one of the top drivers of the U.S. out in quest of their first victory in the 1979 bid for national points. Hundreds of spectator boats will line the course, not to mention the thousands of shoreside spectators who will be watching the extravaganza.

HOPEFULLY, the power boats will be long gone before the start of the final sailboat match races of the Long Beach Yacht Club's Congressional Cup Series gets under way off the Long Beach breakwater.

On the local scene, two yacht clubs have scheduled sailing events inside the bay. The Bahia Corinthian Yacht Club will stage its annual St. Patrick's Day Regatta for inside-the-bay classes on Sunday, and the South Shore Yacht Club will host any and all classes in the fourth race of its Winter Hibachi Series Sunday.

The Capistrano Bay Yacht Club also has scheduled a St. Patrick's Day Regatta for Sabot and Laser classes on Sunday.

Signs Draw Attention

FORT RILEY, Kan. (AP) — Military authorites at Fort Riley hope that new speed limit signs will catch motorists' eyes.

The signs show some speeds reduced from 45 mph to 43 mph and from 35 mph to 33 mph.

The military police say they still will allow drivers to drive at the old speed limits, but "they might think twice now before going anything over 45," said Donna Beach of the public information office.

Spectator Boats Race Hazard

There's an old conundrum: Why does a chicken cross the road? The corny answer: To get to the other side.

It brings up the question: Why does a slow spectator boat cross the course of a high speed boat race?

THE ANSWER IS probably the same, but it could get you or someone else killed. Race drivers blasting through the water at 90 miles per hour can't always see a small boat that eases out on the course, for whatever reason.

And even if someone is not killed or maimed, such a stupid maneuver on the part of a spectator boat could get the Bushmills Grand Prix killed as a race.

THE COAST GUARD has warned that it will stop the race and possibly forbid any other races in this area unless spectator boats stay in line during the course of the race.

In past Bushmills races here, spectator boats wandering across the race course have endangered themselves and the racers, and in one race, forced the racers to slow their pace to avoid careless spectator craft.

Coastal Weather

Cloudy with showers likely tonight. Partial clearing with decreasing chance of rain Saturday.

Light variable winds night and morning hours. Highs Saturday 58 to 63.

Coastal temperatures will range between 53 and 62. Inland temperatures will range between 52 and 63. The water temperature will be 55.

Surf Report

Huntington, Newport beaches: Winds of 20 to 25 mph make for choppy conditions and waves of two to three feet. Surfing conditions poor.

Open Throttle for Bushmills!

Daily Pilot Photos by Patrick O'Donnell

One racer flies out of water in the middle of spectator fleet, above, as fellow contestants speed down coast during last March's action. This year course has been changed to feature complex navigation.

Power Boat Grand Prix Hugs Coast

A tougher, tighter course and spirited competition between past winners should add interest to Saturday's ninth running of the $35,000 Bushmills Grand Prix.

Betty Cook of Newport Beach, who startled boaters with her 1977 victory, and Joe Ippolito, last year's winner, are vying in this inaugural of the year's ocean racing season.

ACTION WILL start before the race with boaters passing in review to the north, then turning south toward Dana Point as the race begins. The review will follow the 9:30 a.m. boat parade from the Balboa Bay Club in Newport Harbor.

The best vantage point for spectators is on the water, with tighter restrictions placed this year on the fleet of viewers.

Most are expected to congregate in the start-finish line area off Newport Pier, where four 82-foot Coast Guard patrol boats will keep them in place, issuing fines up to $1,000, if necessary.

OFFICIALLY SUGGESTED spectator fleet areas include:

— On the west side of the Newport jetty, shoreward of a line bearing 300 degrees magnetic from the Newport Harbor entrance buoy No. 1.

Best viewing from this spot may be achieved by rounding between the end of the jetty and the bell buoy and settling shoreward of the line of four bright orange marker buoys between the Newport and Balboa piers.

— At Dana Point, the south end of the course, the best area is shoreward of a line bearing 120 degrees magnetic from the Line o' Marchers

Mission Viejo's St. Patrick's Day Parade will kick off its 10th year Saturday but the procession will have a new time and route.

The line of march will start at noon at O'Neill Road, continuing south on Marguerite Parkway to Alicia Parkway. (The west side of Marguerite Parkway will be open to north and south traffic during the parade.)

MORE THAN 100 entries and some 4,000 participants will form the cavalcade and 14,000 spectators are expected.

Special guests this year will include Mickey Mouse, the Disneyland Ambassador and the New Mouseketeers. Also featured will be the El Bekal Shrine Oriental band plus military units and 15 commercial floats or novelty entries.

Judging stands will be located at two different sites on Marguerite Parkway.

CATEGORIES TO BE judged at the Vista del Lago intersection will include marching/walking, civic or service or commercial floats, novelty/specialty, antique/classic autos, equestrians, Shriner category and sweepstakes prizes.

The Southern California School Band and Orchestra Association will eye bands, drill teams, drum majors and corps, youth and military drill teams between Vista del Lago and Alicia Parkway.

'Governess' Gallivants

Family, 'King and I' Benefit From Travel

Constance Towers, like the English governess she plays in "The King and I," has a job that entails travelling far from home, but her experience shows that nowadays career-caused separations need not sever family ties.

She's been away with the record-breaking production of the Rodgers and Hammerstein classic, now at the Pantages Theatre in Los Angeles through April 22, almost half of her four-year marriage to John Gavin without putting any significant strain on the relationship.

"OF COURSE, the travel fare has been enormous," admits the actress.

Whenever Gavin had a break in his acting schedule, he would fly cross-country to visit, and she took time off periodically to return to California, especially to attend events like graduations.

Keeping the couple's two-coast careers from putting undue pressure on their four children ("Two are mine, two are his, all are ours") has been a course in family psychology for Constance and her Bel Air-based brood.

"When I life for Broadway, I wanted to take my 16-year-old daughter with me, but she was just starting school and I didn't want to disrupt her," the actress explained.

'King' Yul Brynner

"On a trip back to see her, I was shocked at how awful she looked. It turns out she had wanted to come with me to New York, but she didn't want to be a burden. We were both trying to be so unselfish, not telling each other what we really wanted, that we made ourselves miserable.

"I took her back with me, and now we're both happy.

"To put it mildly, I think my family has been marvelously patient."

SHE SEES THE cooperation of her kin with her seizing of a great career opportunity a continent away as part of a whole shift in societal attitudes towards women and their roles.

"I'm so encouraged by what's been happening in our world," says Constance. "Even as far as age goes. There is room for the older actress now — you don't have to be in your 20's to work."

Still, she has to have a youthful stamina to do this play. Not only must she whirl like a feather in a ball gown that weighs 70 pounds, but she must work with one of the world's most formidable stage presences — Yul Brynner.

"IT TAKES AN awful amount of energy to keep up with him," she confesses, "but he's the biggest help possible. He's not at all threatened — instead he wants you to do the best you possibly can.

"I've learned a lot from working with Yul. His attitude is 'Get out there, on stage and in life, and explore yourself.' "

She's been doing just that professionally and personally since coming to "The King and I," the biggest success of her career, which includes past work with John Ford and John Wayne.

Constance Towers and Royal Siamese Children sing "Getting to Know You."

SIDNEY HARTH (right), associate conductor and principal concertmaster of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, will direct its 8:30 p.m. performance Saturday at Santa Ana High School, featuring pianist Yefim Bronfman (left). The Orange County Philharmonic Society is presenting the program of "Overture to Benvenuto Cellini" by Berlioz, Concerto No. 3 in C Minor for Piano and Orchestra by Beethoven and Symphony No. 1 in B Flat Minor by Walton. The Russian-born Bronfman, 21, made his U.S. debut with the Israel Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall. Tickets at $10 and $11 will be available at the auditorium, 520 W. Walnut St., Santa Ana.

MORE THAN 120 VOICES will be heard when three Golden West College choirs present a special fund-raiser, "Choral Spectacular '79" at 8 o'clock tonight in the college theater. Tickets, priced at $2, are available in the Fine Arts Building or will be sold at the door for $3. "The musicians will demonstrate a combination of influences that have gone into making rock music what it is today," said Alan Remington, instructor of OCC's "History of Rock" class.

GOOD TIME SINGERS, an Orange Coast College performance group specializing in singing and dancing, will perform at 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Huntington Center, Huntington Beach. Randy Cobb, former music director for Serendipity Singers, will lead the OCC troupe in contemporary music and Broadway tunes.

Cher's Disco Future Looking Sunny

By LISA ROBINSON

To say that something's happened with Cher's new record that hasn't happened to her for a while is an understatement. After not having a hit since "Dark Lady" in 1974, Cher is hot with her disco smash, "Take Me Home."

In New York City for the Billboard Disco Forum (where she hosted Casablanca's party at the Empire Rollerdome) and to promote her lavish TV special, Cher moaned about her new, short haircut ("The biggest mistake I've ever made," she said, while keeping it under wigs) and talked about the relationship with her record company.

"WHEN I FIRST WENT to Casablanca I asked Neil Bogart, 'Why are you giving me all this money and why are you so enthused?' He said he couldn't help it if Warner Brothers didn't know what they were letting go or if they didn't know what to do with me."

" 'I'm not a foolish man,' he said, 'and I don't throw away money.' From the very beginning he treated me as though I was just coming off my last hit."

Cher has the disco hit, but half of her album is still rock 'n' roll. "I like rock 'n' roll," she says, "and I can't give that up. It would be like cutting off one of my arms.

"IT'S TOO EARLY TO tell how this hit has changed my audience. I'm not sure who they are, except that people are stopping me on the street and telling me they love the record.

"There's no age group, no specific kind of person doing that. It always happened to me in New York more than Los Angeles, but now it's happening there too.

"I don't know what went wrong before," she said. "After I left MCA I went to Warners, and it was at Warners that my career was really in the toilet. I made a joke about this one time, but I wasn't really kidding. They didn't know when I was there and they didn't know when I left."

Cher: 'I'm terrified' when performing live

Cher confirmed my suspicions that boyfriend Gene Simmons had something to do with Cher's fantasy album cover.

"IT WAS SORT OF Genie's idea," she said, "because he gave me a book of Frank Frazetta's and I said, 'God, Gene, wouldn't it be fun to do something like that for an album cover?' So I took the book to Bob Mackie, who designed the costume."

Does she ever feel trapped by all the costumes? Would Cher ever consider stepping onstage in a basic black dress?

"No," she says. "I don't want to ever sing in a basic black dress. I don't even want to be buried in a basic black dress. I don't want to do anything basic. I'd rather be in basic blue jeans, but never in a basic black dress.

"I don't feel trapped at all, because I wear exactly what I want to wear when I wear it.

"In my TV show the part I loved the best was in the middle of a gigantic number, with people in diamonds dripping off of them and all that stuff, I walked out of my body in a pair of blue jeans. That's how I really feel about myself.

"THE ONLY REAL PRESSURE on me now is to go out there and perform life. There is so much pressure on me to do that that I think I'm going to give it the old college try.

"I go into rehearsal in May — Joe Layton is putting my act together — and I think it'll be something along the lines of what Diana (Ross) or Bette (Midler) do."

And even though Cher's been in the business now for 15 years, she admits that when it comes to performing live: "I'm terrified."

OCC Gallery Events Whet Artistic Appetites

PAINTINGS BY WELL-KNOWN American artist, Milford Zornes, are on display at the Orange Coast College Art Gallery, room 103, through April 6. "Because of the coincidence of travel and the need to carry expedient materials, I became a watercolorist by default," the artist says. He has been exhibiting and winning awards for his paintings since 1939; some are shown in the Metropolitan Museum and the Pentagon. He has taught at Otis Art Institute, Scripps and Pomona colleges and Pasadena School of Fine Art and each spring instructs a workshop at OCC. Gallery hours are 10 to 3 weekdays and 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays. Admission is 25 cents. Zornes will be the guest demonstrator when the Costa Mesa Art League meets at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 22 in TeWinkle Middle School, 3224 N. California St.

ART WILL BE A PRIMARY focus on Saturday, March 31 during a "Triple Event Scholarship Day" on the Orange Coast College campus. More than 100 local artists will be represented in an art exhibit and sale from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the lawn in front of the OCC Library. Exhibitors must apply by Friday, March 23. Ten percent of all art sales will go directly to OCC's Student Scholarship Fund. Other special events will be fun runs of 10 kilometers and two miles, sponsored by the Bank of Newport, and a pancake breakfast, to be served by the Costa Mesa-Orange Coast Lions Club. For more information on all events, phone 556-5508.

A DOCUMENTARY FILM celebrating the artistry of 90-year-old Georgia O'Keeffe will be screened at 2 p.m. Saturday at Newport Harbor Art Museum, 850 San Clemente Drive, Newport Beach. A CAPSULE REVIEW of 20 years of painting and sculpture by California figurative artist James Strombotne opens at Newport Harbor Art Museum Saturday. His caustic imagery combined with painterly finesse evolved national acclaim in the early 1960s. Strombotne will speak at the museum's Hester Gallery, 850 San Clemente Drive, Newport Beach, at 2 p.m. Sunday in an informal public lecture in the "Meet the Artist" series.

'ST. LOUIS' BY WILLIAM CLIFT ON DISPLAY AT SUSAN SPIRITUS GALLERY

VISUAL COMPARISONS between traditional and contemporary quilts are evident in an exhibit of the craft, hanging in the Golden West College gallery in Huntington Beach through March 28. "Many young people, and men in particular, are relating to artistic qualities of quilts as antiques," says curator Darrell Ebert. Gallery hours are 1:30 to 4 p.m. Monday and Wednesday; noon to 4 Tuesday and Thursday and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

INSTALLATION ARTIST Gary Beydler will discuss his work at noon Tuesday, March 20, in Fine Arts Hall 116 at Orange Coast College as part of the spring art lecture series. Admission is $1.50. He also will show examples of his recent work in filmmaking.

GRAND PRIX . . .

buoy R2 in an east-southeast direction. Spectators are warned to stay at least 1,000 yards off the buoy

— AT ANAHEIM Bay and Alamitos Bay in Long Beach, the north end of the race, the best area is shoreward of an arc 1,000 yards off Oil Island Esther.

Spectators will not be permitted to cross the line of orange buoy markers or moor above the Santa Ana River jetty, south of the Southern California Edison Co. stacks, or east of the entrance channel to the Newport Harbor.

Those who hope to watch the race from the air are warned that federal safety regulations call for a minimum of 500 feet between aircraft and boats.

FOR THOSE without boats or planes from which to watch the race, topography is suggested.

The highest blufftops between Newport Beach and Dana Point will offer the best views.

Changes in the course were designed to make the navigation more complex and challenging and to reorient it to Long Beach.

Racers will not make a run to Catalina. The start line has been moved from the mouth of Newport Harbor to a position 1.5 miles off Newport Pier. Boats will pass by there about every 18 minutes.

BOATS IN THE offshore class will race 178.4 nautical miles, with two passes at Long Beach and Dana Point and tight circuits off Huntington Beach and Newport Beach.

Film Festivals Ahead

Hobbyists Entertain

Prize-winning 8 and 16mm films will be shown when the Orange County Cinematographers attend their annual banquet Saturday at the Sheraton-Newport.

The club members are home movie and slide show enthusiasts who produce travel, comic and animated films or impressionistic dissolves

They share them at the Republic Federal Savings building, 2400 E. 17th St., Santa Ana on the second Thursday of every month.

Outgoing president Bill Allen of Irvine will install his successor, Chet Scerra, at the banquet.

GOVERNOR'S KIN IN 'THE FOX LAUGHS'

Wrong to Dun A Whodunit?

To the Editor:

I quickly acknowledge Tom Titus's freedom to dislike any production he sees in our local theaters, but when he allows predisposition and subjectivity to color his responses, such critical weaknesses should be exposed. (Intermission column, Daily Pilot, March 6.)

To say that the murder mystery genre is dead is ridiculous. Only when Agatha Christie's plays and books cease to be read and produced will the genre die. "The Fox Laughs" is a well structured example of that popular breed.

TO EXPECT THE auto chase and the dynamite devastation of today's murder mystery in our small theater production is naive. "The Fox Laughs" is of the classical variety

As for the so-called "herrings and gimmicks," these are integral elements in the genre, and were they eliminated, the murder mystery would lose its integrity. Titus should know that the devotees of the mystery dramas play the game. The intellectual pursuit of "Who done it" is analogous to that found in the game of chess.

It is unfortunate that your reviewer could not join in the spirit with which our general audiences view the production. The play is being well received by the patrons of the Cabrillo Playhouse.

AS FOR OUR INTRODUCTION of backstage crew, an action that offended your reviewer, it was an open gesture of gratitude, because these people, as well as the actors, serve us without one cent of remuneration, and we are highly indebted to them. They make it possible for the Fox to laugh, even if Tom Titus cannot.

April Shower of Shows

Three Theaters Offer Comedy, Suspense

Traditionally, September, November, January, March and May are production months for community theaters along the Orange Coast, but that situation will be changed a bit next month.

Opting for an April production — and spaced a week apart — are three local playhouses — the Irvine Community Theater, Saddleback Valley Community Theater and San Clemente Community Theater. Each cast its next show last week and all are planning openings in mid-April.

FIRST UP WILL BE the recently reorganized Irvine players with their second production of the 1979 "homecoming season," Jack Heifner's comedy-drama "Vanities." Carol Filian is directing the story of three Texas cheerleaders who mature in different directions.

Barbara Peters will portray Joanne, the homebody; Jeani Gibbon is Kathy, the organizer, and LaDonna deBarros is the rebellious coed, Mary. "Vanities" will open April 12 for two weekends and seven performances in the University High School theater, with advance reservations available by calling 754-3639 or 754-3643.

THE SUSPENSE DRAMA "Night Watch" will open the following weekend, on April 20, for the Saddleback group, and will feature Susan O'Connell and Robert Sax in the leading roles of a distraught woman and her exasperated husband. Others in the cast are Carrie Mowery, Joan Sidell, Kathy Brothen, Tom Shepherd, Joe Ritkes and Joe Cordio.

Michael Bielitz, currently on stage in Westminster's "Sunday in New York," is directing the Lucille Fletcher thriller, which will be presented April 20 through May 5 in the Mission Viejo High School theater. Call 586-8342 for information and reservations.

MEANWHILE, IN SAN Clemente, director Ben Jutzi is assembling his production of a new comedy, "Eat Your Heart Out," which goes on the boards April 26 for four weekends and a dozen performances. Harvey Dabling has been cast in the pivotal role of an actor who moonlights as a waiter.

Playing various roles in support will be Jean Hyde, Priscilla Sanford, Scott Michael and Paul Goedhart. The show will be staged at the Cabrillo Playhouse, 202 Avenida Cabrillo, San Clemente, where information may be garnered at 492-0465.

ORANGE COAST COLLEGE is in rehearsal for David Rudkin's searing aduit drama "Ashes," which will see one of OCC's drama professors directing the other in a "first" of sorts for the college.

John Ferzacca will stage the play, which concerns a couple's desperate attempts to have a child, and William Purkiss will play one of the leading roles. Pamela Smith is cast as his wife, with Teri Ciranna and Tom Arnold also taking major assignments.

Completing the OCC cast will be David Greenlee, Kathye MacDonald, E.A. Renard, Bryan Burnes, Julia Billups, Susan Mancini and Kelly Kahn. Performances will be given March 28-31 at 8 p.m. in the college's Drama Lab Theater.

The Tubes

Attention channeled to execution

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Tubes, perhaps rock's most eccentric and engaging performing band, will return to Southern California for a pair of April 2 concerts at UCLA's Royce Hall (tickets through Mutual).

Unfortunately, plans for a Tubes concert next Friday night at UCI apparently crumbled earlier this week, so save your gas money.

ON, THE HEELS of the San Francisco-based octet's fifth album, the Todd Rundgren-produced "Remote Control" (A&M), the live venue reportedly will be presented without the Tube's notorious regalia of theatrical props and effects.

Guitarist/leader Bill Spooner says the stripped down tour is for fans who may have grown "bored" of Tubes' shows that place a premium on elaborate staging.

The Tubes have now aimed all their energy and pathos at the target — television — that has been their namesake and creative force.

Indeed, it is high time audiences became more aware of the Tubes' incredible musical execution in concert instead of waiting, sometimes apprehensively, for the visual impact of the next satirical skit.

WITH MUCH OF the credit going to Rundgren for his stylized dense production, the band's new album also heralds a change in direction

Often criticized for unfocused efforts that try to hit all the marks, The Tubes have now aimed all their energy and pathos at the target — television — that has been their namesake and creative force since the beginning.

It's a depersonalized video fantasy world that hassinger Fee Waybill so confused ("Turn Me On") that he desires to take "the girl with the bouncy hair" out of the tube and to Jamaica where they can spend their time, yup, watching television.

HE JUST MIGHT get the cash he needs to take him if he can only catch a lucky streak as a guest on a TV game show ("Be Mine Tonight").

You get the idea. No doubt the Tubes will now be criticized in some circles for making this effort a one-shot joke.

Granted, there are a few problems. Whereas Rundgren can overdub his own delicate voice 2,000 times and make it sound realistic, the push towards ensemble vocals with Waybill sometimes results in a power overload.

Even Bill Spooner's lone vocal on his quirky blues tune, "Only The Strong Survive," is clouded in a reverb effect that makes it a bit too distant and uncomfortable, even within the television theme context.

STILL, THE BAND has come up with a fine batch of songs that should be quite effective in person. All possess strong melodic lines as foundations for the Tubes trademark fusion of electronic effects and rhythmic bombast.

A case in point is "Getoverture," an instrumental in the tradition of "Up From The Deep" and "God/Bird Change" from past efforts.

Pumping along behind Prairie Prince's muscular drum work, keyboardist Vince Welnick and electronic whiz Michael Cotten soar off into deep space, yet still create an ominous feel; as if you've been buried alive and are trying to claw your way out.

THIS SHOULD HAVE been chase scene music for "Invasion of The Body Snatchers."

Another highlight is "Telecide," a closing track in which guitarists Spooner and Roger Steen are finally turned loose for stinging solos.

Alas, there is probably no "hit" on this album, but it should more than satisfy this unique and artful band's dedicated following. It's a legion that will certainly increase after seeing the Tubes in concert.

'Norma Rae' Awakens Mind, Reveals Actress

"NORMA RAE" is an intelligent and frequently moving social drama about suppression of workers' rights in cotton mills of today's South. It is also a Pygmalion story of the awakening of a young Southern woman's mind by a union organizer from New York. The film succeeds on both levels. Martin Ritt, an old hand at protest movies, directed with conciseness and understanding of human values; he carefully avoids outrage at the workers' conditions. Sally Field is a revelation as the late-blooming crusader. Her performance signals the start of the 1979 Academy race for best actress. Ron Liebman is persuasive as the Jewish pariah in the company town, and Beau Bridges has a telling scene as Norma Rae's bewildered husband. Rated R, with moderately rough language and some suggestiveness.

"FAST BREAK" scores high in enjoyment, low in credibility, but remains a winner nevertheless. The filmmakers ask us to believe that a Brooklyn delicatessen cashier could take four ghetto basketballers to an unknown Nevada college and coach a ragtag team to victory over a giant university. What's more one of the transplanted athletes is a girl nicknamed "Swish." Logic aside, the modest film affords a sizable score of laughs and excitement. Jack Smight directed the young and talented cast with verve and a good sense of basketball action. Gabriel Kaplan ("Welcome Back, Kotter") makes an impressive film debut as the never-say-die coach. Rated PG, with a modicum of locker room language.

"AGATHA" is an intellectual whodunit — or what happened — a fictional explanation of Agatha Christie's unsolved 11-day disappearance in 1926. The script suggests that the mystery writer fled in anguish over her husband's infidelity and plotted revenge against his mistress, only to be discovered by an American journalist. The solution has the credulity of a Christie plot, and the production is handsome, low-key and very British. The film's downfall is the casting. It is difficult to accept Vanessa Redgrave as the shy, unassertive author or Dustin Hoffman as the suave, know-it-all reporter. The rating is PG, with some innocent nudity at an English spa where Mrs. Christie was discovered.

"THE DEER HUNTER" might have been a superb document of the devastation to human lives caused by the Vietnam war. The grime of a Pennsylvania coal town and the fierce beauty of Southeast Asia have been magnificently photographed by Vilmos Zsigmond, and the cast is first rate. But director Michael Cimino allows the story to drag on past three hours, with endless scenes of male camaraderie and war atrocity. He also seems to have allowed the actors to devise their own dialogue, a grave error. The character of Robert DeNiro is crucial, yet it remains ambiguous. His recent roles have all been inward-looking, with little communication to the audience. His talent is too great to remain so hidden. The rating is R, much swearing and point-blank killing.

MASTERFUL CHARACTER
Peter Falk in 'Brinks'

"THE BRINK'S JOB" shows how a clutch of smalltime hoodlums managed to pull off the heist of the century, the $2.7 million robbery of Brink's Boston head quarters in 1950. It was easy, thanks to incredibly lax security. William Friedkin ("The French Connection") is expert at the caper movie, and he wisely compensates for the lack of suspense by creating authentic atmosphere and a gallery of rare characters. Foremost is Peter Falk, who delivers a masterfully shaded performance as Tony Pino, a shoplifter suddenly lifted to the big time. Rated PG, probably due to a few epithets.

"THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY" offers high adventure in splendid style, written and directed by Michael Crichton from his own novel. The robbery takes place not in the Old West but in 1855 England; it is said to be based on the first real-life heist of a moving train. The crime is perpetrated by a group of polished crooks headed by Sean Connery, who is able to function equally well in high society and the underworld. The pace is leisurely, most of the film concerned with the theft of four keys required to open the strong box of gold headed for the Crimean battle field. The climax is thrilling, with Connery himself scrambling atop the racing train. He gets fine support from Donald Sutherland, Lesley-Anne Down and an English cast. Rated PG.

DEBUTS IN 'ICE CASTLES'
Lynn-Holly Johnson

"NORTH AVENUE IRREGULARS" is a Disney comedy, one that adults can enjoy as well as small fry. The plot is basic Disney: new minister in town enlists housewives to get the goods on a gambling ring. The action is furious; the belly laughs frequent. Best of all the characters are carefully drawn though they sometimes behave like escapees from a 1950s sitcom. Edward Herrmann (notable as Franklin Roosevelt in the TV movie) performs solidly as the gang-busting reverend, and he receives fine support from Barbara Harris, Susan Clark, Cloris Leachman, Virginia Capers and Patsy Kelly. Rated PG.

"ICE CASTLES" is an unabashedly sentimental movie that warms the heart and lifts the spirits. And how many films like that come along in a season? The story concerns a teen-age girl with Olympic-style ice skating skills. Her life is pulled in five directions by her hometown sweetheart (Robby Benson), her possessive father (Tom Skerritt), local rink owner (Colleen Dewhurst), hard driving coach (Jennifer Warren) and an amorous sportscaster (David Huffman). Lynn-Holly Johnson is astonishing in her film debut. Rated PG.

Another Lady Trucker on the Road

CLORIS LEACHMAN IN 'WILLA' TV MOVIE
This Time, a Story Line With the Action

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I think somebody at CBS is harboring a fantasy about lady truck drivers. Nothing wrong with that, we're all entitled to our daydreams, except this fantasy shows up about once a month in the form of a TV movie.

Last month, it was "Flatbed Annie and Sweetie Pie: Lady Truckers," a fatuous little piece that established no high mark in television drama. Just a couple of cuties tooling in their big rig talkin' trucker talk.

This time, though, we get a story line to go along with our lesson in the highway idiom.

TV REVIEW

"WILLA," the CBS Saturday Night Movie, at 9 on Channel 2, is about an I-don't-need-no-man hashslinger who pines for the freedom of the blacktop. Seems her Daddy was a truck-drivin' man, see, and it's in her blood.

Willa's husband, natch, left Willa alone to take care of two babies and an alcoholic mother. But that's okay, because Willa is independent and determined to make it on her own.

So, she quits her job, goes on welfare and makes a deal with the local produce man, John Amos. She'll spend her evenings unloading weighty sacks of produce if he'll teach her to drive a truck. Here, you know Amos is going to say, "Truckin's serious business, it ain't for no skinny chick."

He does.

BUT WILLA'S WILL PREVAILS and, even though she is pregnant, she totes those sacks and learns to drive that big rig.

Here's where the story comes in. To drive a truck, of course, you have to leave town. And when Willa leaves, the welfare lady takes Willa's children from her.

This upsets Willa. Her boyfriend has the perfect way out of the mess. He'll marry her, and be Papa to her kids. But a lady who wants more than anything to drive a truck is not likely to succumb to such convention, and Willa tells him, "I gotta know I can do it . . . when I'm with you, when I'm with any man, I feel helpless."

A story line, and a feminist statement to boot.

WILLA DECIDES TO MAKE enough money trucking to get her kids back, and is fortunate enough to meet up with Cloris Leachman, another lady trucker. They drive around while the background music glorifies the truckin' life, and, you suppose, everything turns out okay.

Deborah Raffin is cute and upbeat as "Willa," but the stars of these trucking movies are the big beast themselves, the 18-wheelers. Somehow, trucks are no longer just big things that scare hell out of you on hilly two-lane roads; they're demigods on 18 wheels, complete with legend and song.

Maybe I can talk CBS into doing a movie about my fantasy. Naah, who'd be interested in a lady sinkerball pitcher?

'Sunday' Livens Weekend in Westminster

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Westminster Community Theater's "Sunday in New York" gave this reviewer a Friday evening in the theater that generated reminiscent guffaws through Saturday and Sunday.

This timely revival of the Norman Krasna classic is a fast-paced, fun-filled frolic which contains at least two memorable scenes that are worth the cost of admission alone.

IF THIS IS THE kind of thing we are getting in community theater these days, then this writer is spending far too much time in the concert hall.

The reviewer's last exposure to "Sunday" left the impression that the production was marred by some ineffective casting and the inability to establish and maintain the fast pace clearly called for in Krasna's brilliant script.

No one can point an accusing finger at director Tom Titus on either score.

His cast, brilliantly headed by Michael Bielitz as Mike Mitchell and Laura Black as Eileen Taylor, is an ideally chosen group who revel in the zany Krasna format from first to last scene.

AND THE PACE is often frenetic, with crisp scene changing, beautifully timed entries and flawless dialogue providing cornerstones to the finished product — a splendidly mounted play.

Many members of a capacity audience gleefully revived a couple of scenes that stopped the show as they wended their way home Friday night.

ONE SCENE, A MOVIE theater where a "flasher" gets his comeuppance from a boozy spinster, has the audience in stitches.

No less funny is the scene in the Japanese restaurant where Mitchell and Adam Taylor, cleverly played by Jerry Benner, come very close to losing the game of mistaken identities they are playing with Eileen's fiance, Russell Wilson, played by Frank James.

"Sunday in New York" is grand, highly entertaining theater. It certainly took a lot of the blue out of this writer's Monday.

UC Irvine Stages Trio

Three plays of varying emotional levels will be presented at UC Irvine this weekend.

Anton Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" will be staged by the Drama Workshop at 8 o'clock tonight and Saturday in the Fine Arts Little Theater, Humanities Hall 161.

This drama, charged with passion and frustration, concerns a family on a Russian estate at the turn of the century whose security of provincial existence is disrupted by the arrival of new relatives.

Tickets are $1 for the production directed by Paul Becque, graduate student in drama.

"Untitled #2" will be presented by the Graduate Actors in Drama in collaboration with Ashley Carr, associate professor of drama, at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Fine Arts Studio Theater. Admission is free.

The original production, derived from written and improvisational forms, explores the actor's psyche both onstage and off.

An evening of comedy will be offered when the Dell'Arte Company preforms "Under Glass" at 8 o'clock Saturday in the Fine Arts Village Theater. Tickets are $3 and $2.50.

The performers look at such social institutions as marriage, mental hospitals, old-age homes and sugar addiction. The program will include pieces from the group's repertoire of one-act plays by Thornton Wilder, Stan Laurel and Megan Terry.

The Dell'Arte Company is an independent school of professional actors and singers based at Blue Lake in Humboldt County. It is participating in a second California Arts Council Touring Theater project.

Starting a New Business

According to California Business and Professions Code (Sec. 17900 to 17930) all persons doing business under a fictitious name must file a statement with the County Clerk and have it published four times in a newspaper serving the area in which the business is located.
The statement is required by law and is necessary in protecting your business name. Most banks require proof of filing to open commercial accounts.
The DAILY PILOT provides both filing and publication services. We have all the necessary forms and maintain a daily service to the Orange County Courthouse. Either stop by one of our convenient offices or phone the LEGAL DEPARTMENT 642-4321, Ext. 332 for more information and forms.

Do you read the PUBLIC NOTICES published in this newspaper daily?

They are a vital part of DUE PROCESS OF LAW and of the PEOPLE'S RIGHT TO KNOW . . .

Public notices are published under court orders or legislative codes for the purpose of notifying one or more individuals of some proposed action or past event which may adversely or favorably affect their rights, interest or duties, and also for the purpose of giving such persons the opportunity to protect their rights, or to be heard in the matter.

Many public notices have great value to taxpayers, such as those notices published by municipalities, public authority corporation, treasurers and others who are required by law to publish financial reports, budget hearing notices, ordinances or advertisements of bids on public work. These notices keep you informed as to how and why your tax dollars are being expended. They also prevent or discourage frauds, raids on public treasuries and favoritism in the letting of public contracts

PUBLIC NOTICES MAY AFFECT YOUR LIFE, YOUR PROPERTY, OR YOUR BUSINESS.

Starting a New Business

According to California Business and Professions Code (Sec. 17900 to 17930) all persons doing business under a fictitious name must file a statement with the County Clerk and have it published four times in a newspaper serving the area in which the business is located.

The statement is required by law and is necessary in protecting your business name. Most banks require proof of filing to open commercial accounts.

The DAILY PILOT provides both filing and publication services. We have all the necessary forms and maintain a daily service to the Orange County Courthouse. Either stop by one of our convenient offices or phone the LEGAL DEPARTMENT 642-4321, Ext. 332 for more information and forms.

VOL. 72, NO. 75, 4 SECTIONS, 50 PAGES ORANGE COUNTY, CALIFORNIA FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1979 TEN CENTS

Dying Woman Ignored by Commuters

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked."

Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today.

"The highway was busy at the time because it was when everyone was going in to town and coming out from work," Mayberry said.

"At first, when I was nearing the area, I thought the report was a joke. Traffic was like normal — busy. But once I got near the car, I could see her.

"Others must have seen her, too. Just was no one stopped. They slowed down and looked but no one stopped. People acted like nothing was going on."

Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville, just north of Franklin.

"The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said. "They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help."

The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman.

"I think she had been there 10 or 15 minutes before I got there," Mayberry said. "I think if somebody had gotten to her sooner, she might have had a chance."

'LEPRECHAUN' WELCOMES SWEEPSTAKES WINNER FRANK MC NULTY
San Franciscan Wouldn't Share His $128,410, So He Served 49 Months

Luck of the Irish

Sweepstakes Winner Free for St. Pat's Day

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Frank McNulty, who went to jail for 49 months rather than share his $128,410 Irish Sweepstakes winnings with the government, walked out of prison today, just in time to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

THE STUBBORN IRISHMAN has been in jail since February 1974, serving the first 44 months on tax evasion charges and the last five months after Judge Alfonso Zirpoli found him in contempt of court.

The judge lifted that indeterminate contempt sentence Tuesday, saying it was obvious keeping McNulty in jail would not persuade him to pay the more than $70,000 he owes in taxes and penalties

McNULTY, 67, made what he hopes will be his last appearance in federal court Thursday at a hearing at which the government asked that a receiver be named to take control of his assets.

District Judge Zirpoli — hinting he didn't think too much of the idea — took the matter under submission.

His attorneys, Jim Larson and Rex Clack, said McNulty has not been well, is tired and plans to go off some place for a few days to "breathe free, fresh air for the first time in years."

McNULTY, HOWEVER, WILL not be totally free. He still owes the taxes and will be on parole until Aug. 3.

McNulty's money has been in the bank of the Isle of Jersey in the English Channel since June of 1973 and has grown to about $140,000 in that time.

$200,000 Demanded

Hijacking Foiled As Man Arrested

BULLETIN

A man demanding $200,000 ransom and transportation to Cuba was taken into custody this morning after he hijacked a plane in Arizona.

His remaining hostage, Mary Ellen Paul of Los Angeles, was released unharmed.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—An unarmed man demanding $200,000 and transportation to Havana hijacked a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner on a flight from Phoenix to Tucson today, the airline said.

The plane was Flight 62, which originated in Los Angeles and was bound for Miami. It had left Phoenix at 9:15 a.m. local time and arrived at Tucson at 9:40 a.m.

The plane landed at Tucson International Airport, and everyone but a female flight attendant and the hijacker got off unharmed, according to Continental spokesman Jack Gregor in Los Angeles. The plane had carried 89 passengers.

"Everybody is safely off the aircraft, including the cockpit crew, except for one flight attendant," Gregor said. "She is being held hostage."

FBI agents were lying underneath the tail of the plane attempting to negotiate with the hijacker, who Gregor said was dressed in a business suit and had boarded the flight in Los Angeles.

Vietnam Disputes Chinese

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — China declared today that all its troops have withdrawn from Vietnam, ending a nearly month-long invasion, but Vietnam-dominated country to the west, accused Peking of crossing its border.

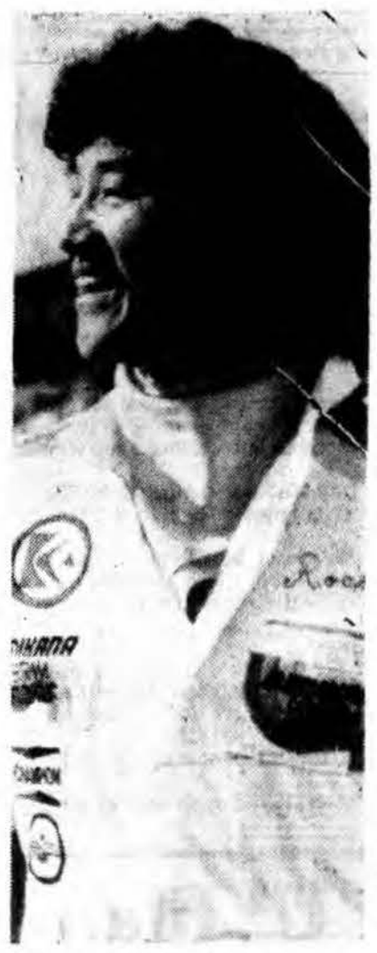
Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua told reporters in Peking today that all Chinese troops have pulled out of Vietnam, Japan's Kyodo News Service reported in Tokyo.

The dispatch from the Chinese capital said Huang also called on Vietnam to hold a meeting of deputy foreign ministers of China and Vietnam as soon as possible.

But he did not say if Chinese troops had pulled out of areas in which Vietnam claimed the Chinese put up new boundary markers.

The official Chinese news agency Xinhua (Hsinhua) reported today that Chinese frontier forces from Quangxi (Wangsi) and Yunnan have returned to Chinese territory.

"To strike back at the Vietnamese aggressors, the Chinese frontier forces, starting from Feb. 17, captured in quick succession well over 20 cities, towns and strategic points," the dispatch said.



DRIVE TO WIN

Power Boat Racer Aoki Determined

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Last year, Rocky Aoki started all eight offshore power boat races on the Grand Prix circuit.

He never finished any of them.

This year's season opens Saturday with the Bushmills Grand Prix off the Orange Coast and Aoki is determined it'll be different.

He has a new boat and a new engine. "I'm an innovator," he said. He also recognizes the old racing dictum that you can't win the race unless you finish it.

The 40-year-old restaurant chain owner jokes about last year's failures, but they obviously are a sore point with him.

So his innovations for this year are centered on the idea of not only being fast but having a boat that is less likely to break down mid-race. Those breakdowns cost him the 1977 and 1978 Bushmills after he won the 1976 race.

This year, he and his crew will be going out in a wooden hulled catamaran, the only one on the circuit.

Wood is faster and the catamaran design has some aerodynamic design advantages, he said. The boat is

College's Employees Get Raises

Coast Community College District employees have been granted an average four percent salary increase.

Granted by trustees Wednesday night, the increases are retroactive beginning Feb. 1 for the district's 700 faculty members and beginning March 1 for classified employees and management.

The increases raise the average faculty member's salary to about $22,880 annually, compared with the previous $22,000, a spokesman said.

Chancellor Norman E. Watson's previous $54,451 salary moves upward to $56,629, the spokesman said.

The increases, granted after discussion with employee bargaining units, follow the state Supreme Court's ruling that wage freezes on government employees imposed because of tax cuts brought about by Proposition 13 are unconstitutional.

Wages for government workers throughout the state had been frozen since last summer.

Lump-sum payments for the retroactive portions of the raise agreement are expected to show up on employees' paychecks sometime within the next four to six weeks, the spokesman said.

The raises are the first since July, 1977. Raises normally are granted in July but were withheld in 1978 because of the state-imposed wage freeze.

Negotiations for more raises will begin this summer, a spokesman said.

Huntington's Glenn Yost Rites Slated

Funeral services will be held Saturday for Glenn Yost, an artist and member of the Huntington Beach Historical Society, who died Sunday of an apparent heart attack. He was 69.

Services are set for 10 a.m. at Christ Church Unity in Anaheim

Mr. Yost was a professional portrait artist and a member of the board of directors of the Huntington Beach Art League. He was well known for his art lectures and demonstrations in West Orange County.

He is survived by one daughter, Piper Lombardo of Nebraska; an aunt, Edna Edwards of Turlock and one granddaughter.

OCC, SADDLEBACK IN SEMIFINALS

Orange Coast College vs. LA Southwest and Saddleback against Cypress. Those will be the matchups tonight (6 and 8, respectively) in the semifinals of the JC state basketball tournament at Cal State Fullerton. (See Sports, Page B4).

OCC, seeded second in the tournament and No. 2 in the state, defeated LA Southwest earlier in the year to win the Miles Eaton tournament.

Saddleback, seeded fourth, will be up against the tourney's top seed and the state's No. 1 team Cypress.

Meadowlark Airport Rezoning Proposed

Questions about the future of Meadowlark Airport arose today after it was learned that papers have been taken out that indicate an attempt may be made to rezone the facility.

Huntington Beach Planning Director James Palin confirmed that a petition for rezoning the controversial general aviation facility site into a mobile home park was taken out on behalf of owners last week.

However, he said the petition, which would require action by the City Council, has not been returned or filed.

Palin said he had discussed the rezoning matter with members of the Nerio family, owners of the 30.15-acre facility in western Huntington Beach.

Art Nerio, the operator of the facility, claimed today that the petition is "news to me."

He said he is mainly concerned with keeping the airport going.

Nerio, whose family has owned the airport since 1952, said there have been discussions over the years for the purchase of the site.

Other sources confirm also that a rezoning petition was taken out but that there are no definite plans for the future of the property.

Meadowlark has been under siege for years because of safety hazards it allegedly poses to residents of neaby homes.

The controversy came to a head in late 1977 after several crashes at the airport.

The City Council at that time formed a Meadowlark Airport committee in an attempt to solve problems.

The council later announced its support of the airport and of efforts by pilots to make it more safe and less noisy.

Meadowlark again came under attack Thursday night during a regular meeting of the airport panel.

Plastic Surgery Cases

Small Jury Hears Of Heart Attacks

By REBECCA HELM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Testimony on the treatment of patients suffering cardiac arrest was to continue today in a state medical board hearing for an Orange County plastic surgeon accused of gross negligence.

The accusations against Dr. Ralph Small of Santa Ana were lodged by the state Board of Medical Quality Assurance after Small's patient, Kim Plock, died Nov. 27 following breast implant surgery.

Small's hearing in Santa Ana is expected to continue about one month.

Mrs. Plock, the 33-year-old mother of three, died five days after she went into cardiac arrest while undergoing surgery at Small's Santa Ana office, according to the allegations.

The 29-year-old surgeon faces similar charges in connection with another woman patient who allegedly suffered serious infection following thigh lift surgery.

The hearing could result in revocation of Small's license to practice medicine. An Orange County Superior Court order has temporarily suspended his practice.

Today, State Deputy Attorney General David Chandler, representing the medical board, was to continue questioning Dr. Richard L. Koons on the follow-up treatment required for someone suffering a heart attack.

Koons is the interim chairman of the Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center Department of Anesthesiology.

Will St. Paddy's Be Peaceful Day?

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

FAITH AND BEGORRA, for on this Saturday's a day when Seal Beach police wish everyone was Italian or imagined themselves to be. Then a quiet St. Patrick's Day would be assumed.

"We're going to handle it just like we did last year," says Police Chief Ed Cibbarelli, whose men encountered relatively little 1978 revelry of the law-breaking variety.

CHIEF CIBBARELLI

SEAL BEACH IN YEARS past, a picturesque seaside hamlet boasting two classic pubs in the same 100 block of Main Street — Clancy's and the Irisher-by-the-Sea — has been shamed by a bit of March 17 turmoil.

One recent Saint Paddy's Day, a full-scale riot erupted, leading to a call for help from numerous other Orange County law enforcement agencies. But conditions are considered appreciably mellowed now.

No one has even advanced any specific theory for selection of Seal Beach in previous years by those who are Irish or wish they were on that day and worked up real Irish thirsts.

CHIEF CIBBARELLI suggests that this year, sheer urban sprawl and commercial development in the surrounding area may lessen St. Patrick's day fervor on his town's Main Street even more.

Relatively few problems were encountered at all last year, when Seal Beach police literally marked March 17 off the calendar and just looked south and whistled until March 18 came around, as the saying goes.

They ignored St. Paddy's Day, in short and nothing much happened.

Chief Cibbarelli notes that many larger restaurants and watering holes such as those in Marina Village across the San Gabriel River in Long Beach are absorbing many celebrants.

JONGRY JOSE'S, a Mexican restaurant in Marina Village, wished it was Irish so much last March 17 that the staff served green margarita cocktails.

"But I don't know what's planned this year," says a spokesman who identified herself only as Dana.

Celebration of the day Himself drove all the snakes out of the Emerald Isle is definitely on schedule, however, on the Orange County side, at Clancy's and the Irisher.

"WE'RE NOT REALLY planning anything special, just our decorations," says bartender Ann "The Widow Finnegan" Cooper, for 17 years now a serving wench at the Irisher.

She blames Seal Beach's finest for the last real March 17 unpleasantness on Main Street, a donnybrook estimated to involve up to 5,000 people which left various shop win dows shattered.

"The last St. Patrick's Day riot was agitated by the police. And now they are frightened," declared Mrs. Cooper.

Her counterpart down the street at Clancy's and a former waitress at the Irisher, Ruth Hollingsworth, anticipates a typical Irish crowd will be toasting its patron saint there.

POLICE ON PREVIOUS St. Patrick's Days following the historic Main Street melee that tarnished the day for all asked both the Irish pubs to keep their doors closed or at least shut down early.

Restraint finally paid off for all concerned in 1978, says Mrs. Hollingsworth.

"It was just normal. We even stayed open until closing time," she declares.

New 'New U' Flap: Jews Blast Paper

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Editors of the UC Irvine student newspaper, the New U, have charged that once again the contents of their journal have caused it to wind up at the city dump.

They claim that up to 5,000 copies of this week's edition were consigned to the ash can by students who objected to the content of an advertisement carried in a humor supplement.

Last January, editors said 3,000 newspapers were junked by a few students who reacted to a story with photographs of a wet T-shirt contest designed to allow young women to show off their breasts.

The ad in Tuesday's edition was for a magazine, "The Jew You" and touted article titles implying that Jews are usurers, enjoy killing Arabs, and have big noses.

Besides the ad, an article also contained in the humor supplement refers to Jews as "a group of noisy (and pretty damn rude) people."

Steven Brotman, a coordinator for the campus Jewish Student Union, called the comments "ridiculous and inflammatory" but denied New U staff members' allegations that the Jewish Student Union participated in stuffing the papers into the trash.

West Bank Woes

Discord Snags Peace Effort

By The Associated Press

A faction in the Israeli Cabinet is demanding that the government commit itself to stepped-up Jewish settlement in the West Bank of the Jordan River and continued Israeli security control of the area, it was learned today.

The discord apparently is one reason Menachem Begin has postponed for 24 hours the Cabinet's consideration of the full Egyptian-Israeli treaty, originally scheduled for Sunday.

A Begin spokesman said the delay resulted from the prime minister's illness: He has been ordered to bed because of a cold.

But it also will give Begin time to try to head off a clash over the demands of a three-man National Religious Party faction in the 17-member Cabinet.

In Egypt, meanwhile, President Anwar Sadat declared today that the "real test" of the peace process will come after the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, when the two countries open negotiations on establishing self-rule for the Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, another Israeli-occupied territory.

"I know Begin will be raising hell as he always does, but, my God, I shall be raising hell for him also," Sadat said at an impromptu news conference in his home village.

The White House announced that a U.S. delegation, including President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Carter's son Chip, is heading for the Mideast today in an attempt to persuade Arab leaders to change their minds and support the proposed Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Partygoers Robbed of $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

"I think they were wild enough to shoot us," said Mrs. Mortimer Fleishhacker, who lost several rings to the robbers.

She and the other guests were forced to lie on the floor of the sprawling, one-story home as they were robbed.

At least one woman standing amid the deviled eggs, rolled-up cheese and German wine hors d'ouevres managed to slip a valuable diamond ring into her bodice, unseen by the robbers, police said.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor — may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

The new outfit cost him $800,000 which he spent without hesitation.

"Winning is everything," he explained. "Coming in second is the same as coming in last."

Aoki, who made his mark in the business world as the owner of the Benihana restaurant and hotel chain, says he took up power boat racing to escape business headaches.

He pursues his racing hobby with the same intensity that he runs his international corporation. A quiet man, he means it when he says winning is everything.

There was the race last year in San Francisco, for instance. It was so rough that his navigator opened a gash on his chin when his face smashed into the dash board and also managed to break his ankle.

Ocean racers stand, using their legs to cushion the blows their boats take. The broken ankle was obviously a painful hindrance. So Aoki slowed the boat and he and the throttle man put the navigator in the water for a committee boat to come fetch.

It turned out to be a useless move, they were unable to finish the race because the boat later cracked in half in the rough water.

Aoki may face a similar problem Saturday, only this time it may be his crew who'll be putting him over the side.

Last October he dislocated his knee in a crash during a closed course race in a small one-man boat. The knee was repaired in surgery, but he says he hasn't got full use of it yet.

"The damage that can occur to a patient from the efforts of resuscitation must be assessed immediately because it can negate resuscitation," Koons said.

The anesthetist said the patient should be taken to a hospital where special equipment can monitor the heart and body's progress.

Skateboard Sacrificed

From the Thursday crime log of the Huntington Beach police comes a story of averted human disaster — but a minor tragedy nonetheless.

Young Brian Manley told officers he was riding his skateboard near the curb on Atlanta Street about 7:30 in the evening.

Suddenly, he said, a Volkswagen swerved towards him, leading him to believe his life was soon to become history.

An officer wrote: "He jumped for safety, but his skateboard made the ultimate sacrifice. Its remains may be viewed at the above location." Brian was unhurt.

College Land Swap Rapped by Students

Agriculture students are protesting plans to trade seven acres of Coast Community College District land for property in Fountain Valley to be used for an administration center.

Spokesmen for about 16 protesting students told college trustees Wednesday that the college property on Adams Street in Costa Mesa is used to grow feed for Orange Coast College livestock.

They contend that giving the seven acres for five acres owned by Garden Grove physician Maxwell Roston is an unfair exchange and would further decrease diminishing open land at the Orange Coast College campus in Costa Mesa.

The Fountain Valley property on Euclid Street at Warner Avenue would be used for construction of Coastline College's administrative headquarters.

Coastline uses public buildings and leases privately owned structures for classrooms throughout the college district in offering courses to 20,000 students.

Its headquarters currently is housed in rented structures across from Fountain Valley City Hall on Talbert Street near Brookhurst Street.

Trustees have asked Coastline administrators to study possible sites for construction of a district-owned headquarters facility. Trustees haven't acted yet on the proposed land trade.

A Coastline College spokesman said this week that most of the seven-acre district-owned site in Costa Mesa is leased to auto dealerships for car storage, and a portion contains the district's garage.

Only about two acres are used part-time for agricultural products, he said.

Under tentative agreements, the district would continue to receive lease income for the Costa Mesa property over the next three years, a spokesman said

The district also would be granted use of "hundreds" of parking spaces at Fountain Valley Community Hospital, adjacent to the proposed Euclid Street site.

The Euclid site, the spokesman said, is almost in the direct center of the sprawling 105-square-mile college district.

Irvine Church Fraud Warned By Authorities

A self-described minister who received his credentials by mail order is hiring area children to sell lottery tickets to benefit the expansion of a church that doesn't exist, Irvine police said Thursday.

A drawing is supposed to be held at "St. John's Church," in the ministry of the Universal Life Church, at noon on Saturday at 23331 El Toro Road in El Toro.

If someone shows up for it, police detective Paul Jessup said, he'll be disappointed.

There is no church at the address. There is, however, a professional office building there, and among the tenants is an answering service which the "minister" used.

UCI's New U Gets Dumped Again

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Editors of the UC Irvine student newspaper, the New U, have charged that once again the contents of their journal have caused it to wind up at the city dump.

They claim that up to 5,000 copies of this week's edition were consigned to the ash can by students who objected to the content of an advertisement carried in a humor supplement.

Besides the ad, an article also contained in the humor supplement refers to Jews as "a group of noisy (and pretty damn rude) people."

Steven Brotman, a coordinator for the campus Jewish Student Union, called the comments "ridiculous and inflammatory" but denied New U staff members' allegations that the Jewish Student Union participated in stuffing the papers into the trash.

"The JSU officially had nothing to do with it," Brotman said. "We didn't encourage anything like that."

Brotman said he suspected there were some enraged Jewish students who threw away papers, as well as some angry non-Jewish readers, who threw away papers.

New U editors defended the comments as intended in a humorous manner, and said other religious groups were satirized as well. Another ad, advocating "Maximum Sex," was purportedly the work of the Crusade for Christian Copulation.

Richard Clucas, editor of the newspaper, has come under scrutiny of the Communications Board, which oversees the newspaper operations and annually selects the New U editor.

Various campus resolutions have been proposed to remove Clucas as editor.

Past incidents viewed by some as journalistic indiscretions or lapses of good taste include publication of bogus advertisements demeaning Iranians, and articles some felt were offensive to women.

Schools Get Tough

No Raises, Fewer Benefits, More Hours

The Board of Education of the Irvine Unified School District has responded to a teachers' proposal for a 17 percent contract salary increase: It proposes no increase.

Further, the board proposes a longer working year, fewer benefits, greater ability to discipline teachers, a provision to prevent teacher strikes, and possibly larger—not smaller, as teachers want—class sizes.

The tough new contract proposal, according to district administrator Delaine Richards, who developed the document, is a reaction to the uncertainty of school financing in the post-Proposition 13 era.

Spokesmen for the Irvine Teachers Association said they haven't developed a response yet to the board plan, which was presented for inspection Wednesday.

The board proposes a two-year contract, rather than the one-year pact sought by teachers.

Richards said that until it is known whether the state again will bail out districts hurt by loss of property tax revenues caused by Proposition 13, the first year of the contract proposal, for 1979-80, freezes salaries.

Current entry level salary for a teacher in the district is $11,319. The average teacher salary is $16,470.

The second year of the contract, 1980-81, does provide a $226, or two percent, pay boost. That, too, Richards said, depends upon the state legislature and improved school financing.

Richards pointed out that, even with no contractual increase proposed, teacher pay would not stand still, because teachers receive annual increments for experience, of $624.

Other pay increases are given for educational units earned beyond the bachelor's degree.

Rather than give pay increases as individual credits are earned, as is the existing method, the board proposes that units be collected in blocks of 15 units, beginning with at least 30 units earned beyond the degree, before pay is increased.

Home Flood Probe Set In Irvine

Irvine city officials will meet with water district administrators and executives of the Irvine Company and Broadmoor Homes to determine who will pay to stop the flooding at about 60 Turtle Rock homes.

A consultant's report determined that flooding has been caused by a combination of rainfall, overwatering and, possibly, leakage from water and sewer systems.

The City Council was told Tuesday that the Irvine Ranch Water District has not yet responded to questions regarding the latter possibility. It was estimated that it would be a week or more before the district could furnish details.

The consultant, LeRoy Crandall and Associates, said further causes of flooding were in the construction of the homes themselves, and poor maintenance of existing yard drains.

The consultant reported that because the homes were built without roof drains, rainwater sluices off the roofs, straight down walls, and seeps into foundations.

Adjustments of grading made by the homeowners themselves when planting yards or installing patios also contributed to the seepage problem, according to the consultant.

Crandall and Associates proposed a $20,000 solution that includes the installation of receptor pipelines along Culver and Turtle Rock drives to carry runoff water into existing storm drains.

It was also suggested that more test wells be drilled to further examine the cause of excessive water.

ANDY ANDREWS SHOWS HOW TO FLUSH NEWPORT BAY
He Wants To Try His Idea But Officials Are Cautious

Silt Remover

Straight Flush Beats Full Bay

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Ottie "Andy" Andrews was a little boy growing up in Massachusetts, he started "playing around" to see how tidal currents could be harnessed.

His initial experiments washed out a yacht club dock and tore out a couple hundred feet of river banks.

Now Andrews thinks he has a way that kind of energy could be put to work cleaning out the silt that's clogging Newport Bay.

He likes to call his proposed project the "Self Cleaning Bay."

Andrews, currently a Long Beach resident, has been studying Newport's siltation problems since retiring as a gas truck driver 10 years ago.

He figures it would cost a minimum of $4 million to dredge the silt out of the Upper Bay alone, not to mention the ongoing costs of preventing another build up.

"Why not put nature to work to clean it out?" he asks.

Andrews, who describes himself as an inventor, has designed a combined wave pump and tidal gate structure that he says would be the solution to the siltation problem.

What he'd like to do is cut a channel from the beach at 43rd Street to Balboa Boulevard, with an eight foot underground pipe connecting the channel to the bay behind Newport Island. That's the wave pump.

Then, he'd string a series of water barriers between islands in the Upper Bay to make a loop-shaped channel. That chan-

Hijacking Thwarted; Man Seized

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man demanding $200,000 and transportation to Havana hijacked a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner on a flight from Phoenix to Tucson today, the airline said. He was taken into custody later at the airport.

The plane landed at Tucson International Airport, and everyone but a female flight attendant and the hijacker got off the plane unharmed, according to Continental spokesman Jack Gregor in Los Angeles.

The flight attendant, identified as Mary Ellen Paul, of Los Angeles, was later freed unharmed, and authorities said the hijacker was taken into custory.

The plane had carried 89 passengers.

Gregor said an FBI agent had boarded the plane at the airport.

A reporter at the airport said he saw a man in an orange vest stand on the roof of a police car at the nose of the plane and pull himself up through the cockpit window.

There were reports the hijacker was armed with a knife, but Continental said it could not confirm that.

Passengers described the hijacker as tall, in his 50s and wearing a gray business suit. They said he had boarded the flight in Los Angeles.

FBI agents were lying underneath the tail of the plane attempting to negotiate with the hijacker.

One of the passengers, Richard Paul, 38, of Los Angeles, a television actor who played the mayor on the ABC series "Carter Country," said that while the plane was between Phoenix and Tucson, the pilot came on the intercom and asked all passengers to get off at Tucson.

"His voice was shaking," Paul said, "that bothered me. It always bothers me when the man in charge has a shaking voice."

Posh Party Robbed Of $100,000 in SF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor — may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

Patrolman John Stumpf said two young men knocked at the door of hostess Mary Anders' home at 6:20 p.m., about 20 minutes after the party started, and identified themselves as police officers.

They pushed their way past a maid who realized her error and tried to close the door against them.

Loss of Financing Warned by Riles

Wilson Riles, state superintendent of public instruction, told an audience of Irvine businessmen and secondary school educators Thursday, "We can actually lose public education in California" without a long-term system of school financing.

Riles spoke to members of the Greater Irvine Industrial League and the Irvine Unified School District, who met at the Registry Hotel to announce a joint program of vocational education.

The state schools chief commended the group for the program, in which high school students visit GIIL-member companies to learn the workings of the businesses and of the economy in general.

"You're the kind of example (of public education) we need in this state," Riles said, and added, "So you'd better succeed."

Dying Woman Ignored by Commuters

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked."

Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today.

"The highway was busy at the time because it was when everyone was going in to town and coming out from work," Mayberry said.

"At first, when I was nearing the area, I thought the report was a joke. Traffic was like normal — busy. But once I got near the car, I could see her.

"Others must have seen her, too. Just was no one stopped. They slowed down and looked but no one stopped. People acted like nothing was going on."

Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville, just north of Franklin.

"The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said.

"They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help."

The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman.

"I think she had been there 10 or 15 minutes before I got there," Mayberry said. "I think if somebody had gotten to her sooner, she might have had a chance."

FLUSHING BAY — Andy Andrews' "self-cleaning bay" would use a wave pump and channel at 43rd Street (dotted line) to bring in fresh ocean water and a channel created by a series of barriers and tide gates in the Upper Bay at Shellmaker Island (dotted lines).

nel would have tidal gates at the two bottom ends.

Here's how it works.

The wave pump is based on the venturi principle of increasing the velocity of waves that would hit the channel by constricting its size.

He estimates 100,000 gallons a minute could be pumped through the channel and pipe during a day of two-foot surf, even when the tide is falling.

That water, when combined with the channelization of the Upper Bay barriers and gates would flush the silt out of the Upper Bay and Lower Bay and take it out to sea.

Andrews, who's trying to interest the state Department of Fish and Game and the county Environmental Management Agency in his plan, concedes that he's got no idea how much it would cost.

"But it'd be cheaper in the long run than having to keep dredging the bay out or letting it die," he observes.

To illustrate his point, Andrews has been hauling a model of his tide gates and wave pump around with him and with the aid of a garden hose and some food coloring he'll demonstrate his theory to anyone who's interested.

George Osborne, head of the county's EMA, says he's reserving judgment of the proposal until a working model of the bay is built.

"You really can't predict how it would work from the demonstration I saw," he commented.

Aside from the engineering and construction problems that Andrews' plan entails, Osborne brought up one other potential road block:

"The prospect of getting all the permits you'd need from all the agencies involved — well it's practically overwhelming," he said

Andrews says he'll keep trying to get people interested in his idea. He figures the bay has about 12 years before the silt kills the marine life, plants and birds that live here now

"This had been a dream of mine since I was a kid, to clean up a bay like this. Right now all I want is for some agency to be interested enough to let me build a working model," he said

Nurse Fights Rape Attempt In Newport

A vacationing student nurse told Newport Beach police a man tried to rape her while she was at the beach at Balboa this week.

The 21-year-old Montana resident reported the incident Thursday. She said it happened at about noon Wednesday, but she was too upset to report it.

According to the police report the man sat down and chatted with the woman and attacked her while she got up to leave.

She said she fought him off when he said he was going to rape her and she ran for help to a group of people about 100 yards away.

She said her assailant had brown hair and eyes, was dressed in cut off jeans and had a bicycle with him on the beach.

Law Exempts Valley Farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston introduced legislation Thursday to exempt the farms of California's Imperial Valley from federal reclamation law acreage limits.

On another matter, the California Democrat told a news conference he was shelving another bill which would have authorized some $240 million in child care assistance to working parents over two years.

Will Aoki Pull a 'Rocky' Win?

Bushmills Racer Back With New Engine, Old Aspirations

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Last year, Rocky Aoki started all eight offshore power boat races on the Grand Prix circuit.

He never finished any of them.

This year's season opens Saturday with the Bushmills Grand Prix off the Orange Coast and Aoki is determined it'll be different.

He has a new boat and a new engine. "I'm an innovator," he said. He also recognizes the old racing dictum that you can't win the race unless you finish it.

The 40-year-old restaurant chain owner jokes about last year's failures, but they obviously are a sore point with him.

So his innovations for this year are centered on the idea of not only being fast but having a boat that is less likely to break down mid-race. Those breakdowns cost him the 1977 and 1978 Bushmills after he won the 1976 race.

This year, he and his crew will be going out in a wooden hulled catamaran, the only one on the circuit.

Wood is faster and the catamaran design has some aerodynamic design advantages, he said. The boat is powered by a Chrysler engine that Aoki hopes will prove to be more durable over the 180-mile course.

The new outfit cost him $800,000 which he spent without hesitation.

"Winning is everything," he explained. "Coming in second is the same as coming in last."

Aoki, who made his mark in the business world as the owner of the Benihana restaurant and hotel chain, says he took up power boat racing to escape business headaches.

He pursues his racing hobby with the same intensity that he runs his international corporation. A quiet man, he means it when he says winning is everything.

There was the race last year in San Francisco, for instance. It was so rough that his navigator opened a gash on his chin when his face smashed into the dash board and also managed to break his ankle.

Ocean racers stand, using their legs to cushion the blows their boats take. The broken ankle was obviously a painful hindrance. So Aoki slowed the boat and he and the throttle man put the navigator in the water for a committee boat to come fetch.

It turned out to be a useless move, they were unable to finish the race because the boat later cracked in half in the rough water.

Aoki may face a similar problem Saturday, only this time it may be his crew who'll be putting him over the side.

Last October he dislocated his knee in a crash during a closed course race in a small one-man boat. The knee was repaired in surgery, but he says he hasn't got full use of it yet.

So his new boat has a seat in it to protect his knee. "This is a test race for me as well as the boat," he said.

He may be leaving business pressures behind but he's trading them in for worries about his engine, his knee, the boat and the weather.

If it gets too rough, the wooden hull can crack open like an egg hitting concrete.

He's riding atop 300 gallons of high octane aviation fuel and fire is a very real danger. It happened three times last year.

Then there's the wind that could pick his catamaran up and flip it over.

But it's all worth it to Aoki. He might win and that possibility "makes you forget about everything — even the chance you might be killed.

"You know you could die but when you get out there, all you think about is winning that race," he said.

Carter '80 Panel Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's expected 1980 bid for re-election moves a step closer to reality today with the planned filing of papers creating an official campaign committee.

Democratic party sources said papers creating a Carter-Mondale Presidential Committee would be filed with the Federal Election Commission.

Evan Dobelle, the onetime Republican who is treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, will be chairman. John Dalton, former president of the Government National Mortgage Co., will be treasurer.

TEACHERS.

Paid sabbaticals, travel leaves and educational leaves—all existing under the current teachers contract—would be deleted under the board proposal.

Other provisions:

—Teachers could not strike, picket, or engage in work stoppages or slowdowns, or support or sanction such activities.

—Teachers could be suspended without pay for up to six days for "unsatisfactory performance of a minor nature."

Richards said examples of minor infractions include a teacher constantly late to class, or negligent in designing lesson plans, or who doesn't attend required staff meetings, or who takes frequent unauthorized trips to the hairdresser.

Currently the only available disciplinary tool is dismissal.

—Teachers would work 183, rather than 181, days in the year. Of these, 177 are instruction days.

—Class sizes would be indeterminate, dependent upon what funding is available to the district. Currently, class sizes are 29 students per teacher at elementary schools, 26 to 1 at the high schools. Teachers seek, in general, class sizes of 25 pupils per teacher.

A public hearing to debate the teachers and board proposals is scheduled for March 28. Negotiations begin afterward.

RILES AT UCI. . .

Riles said, "It saddens me that we don't realize what we have and that because we don't realize what we have, we may lose it."

He urged the group to support state legislation for long-term school financing and to oppose both the Gann initiative to limit government spending, which he called "dangerous for the schools," and bills for voucher systems.

Under a voucher system, parents literally shop for schools. The state then directs a voucher — a check — to parents which they use to pay for the education of their children at any school, public or private, that meets a predetermined set of criteria.

Riles said that, under a voucher system, "The Peoples' Temple Church could set up a school system. The Ku Klux Klan can — and will — set up a school system."

Such things could happen, he said, because politically, California "is a volatile state."

"We do some great things," Riles said, "but we also do some kooky things. And I don't want to take that chance."

"The viability and vitality of your community," he said, "is tied directly to the quality and image of your schools.

"You have to communicate (to the legislators) what you want and need. The winners are your children."

Riles came to Thursday's luncheon, however, not only to warn that inaction may bury public education, but to praise the vocational education program.

Its pilot phase has been in operation for over a year, and has involved the participation of 32 companies, 90 educators and 1,100 high school students from Irvine, University and SELF schools.

Called The Irvine Enterprise in Education (TIE), it is intended to help students gain a better understanding of the American economic system.

As part of the program, businessmen have been guest speakers in the classroom, groups of up to 10 students have toured companies and asked questions of company heads and actually worked at the side of company employees.

Internships, paid and unpaid work, research and advanced studies of businesses are available to the better students.

Riles said the program echoes his own feeling that basic education is important, but that equally important is "the need to prepare students for work in a post-industrial age."

Riles said the program will help "tear down the fences—real or imaginary—which separate learning from experience."

Death Suspect Arrested on Burglary Rap

Raymond Resco, who missed his Orange County Superior Court murder trial Thursday because, he said, he feared for his life, showed up in court this morning and was promptly arrested on burglary charges.

Resco's attorney, Thomas Crosby, and prosecutor Jay Moseley had just completed final arguments in Resco's murder case when Newport Beach police officer Al Epstein showed up in court with a warrant for the burglary arrest.

Resco was quickly taken into custody by a courtroom bailiff on suspicion of three counts each of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Epstein declined to elaborate on the burglary charges. Bail was set at $60,000.

But, according to other Newport Beach police sources, the charges stem from a series of Santa Ana burglaries in which stereo equipment, electric guitars and amplifiers were taken.

'Take It or Leave It' Raise Taken

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Laguna Beach municipal employees rejected a five percent cost of living increase, then voted to accept the offer after consultants for the city made it a "take it or leave it" proposition.

Municipal employee association president Michael Townsend said employees voted overwhelmingly earlier this week to reject the five percent offer in exchange for the city retaining an estimated 10 percent of the payroll expected to be cut from the 1979-80 budget.

But the city's negotiating team, headed by consultants from Hamilton and Associates, said the cost of living offer is not connected with a proposed reorganization of city employees that could see 10 percent of the municipal salary payroll cut by next year.

Townsend said the employee group, one of three in the city, was willing to forego a five percent hike in salary on the condition there would be no layoffs and no position cuts in next year's budget.

City councilmen last year instructed City Manager Fred Solomon to reorganize departments within the 180 employee organization, and to cut 10 percent of the payroll budget.

Budget discussions are under way in the city, and many employees fear a rash of layoffs as a result.

"The majority of the employees voted to accept the five percent cost of living increase yesterday (Thursday)," Townsend said. "We have to be realistic about it since the last pay increase was a year and a half ago."

But Townsend said acceptance of the pay offer was forced on employees.

"Why wouldn't they accept that five percent increase as a means of saving employees," Townsend asked.

He said employees are also disgruntled because the city manager received about a 10 percent increase in salary, awarded by city councilmen last week.

Councilmen awarded a merit raise of $3,000 for Solomon, whose salary went from $36,000 to $39,000. He also received an increase in his car allowance from $1,200 a month to $1,800.

"On the one hand we're talking about a 10 percent increase for the city manager, and on the other, a 10 percent cut in manpower," Townsend said.

Funds Revealed

Ashbrook Tops SC Candidates

By RAYMOND ESTRADA Jr.
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Retired auto dealer James H. Ashbrook has collected more funds for his political war chest so far than any of the other 36 hopefuls in the April 24 race for three San Clemente City Council seats.

Twenty-eight of the candidates hoping to fill the posts of the three recalled council members reported they have collected or spent less than $200 since filing for the election in early February.

Mayor William Walker and council members Donna Wilkinson and Howard Mushett were recalled Jan. 23 after a bitter political feud.

Ashbrook, 66, has his council campaign well under way after city records released Thursday indicate he has collected $1,350, paid $628 in printing and other bills and still owes $875 in debts so far.

Ashbrook, of 3826 Calle Tiara, loaned himself the $875 and donated $100 of his own money to his cause. Other $100 donations came from neighbor N.L. McAdoo, a mobile home park owner, V.J. Shrader, a Fullerton-based builder, and Fred Greenberg, a retired San Clemente resident.

Right behind Ashbrook is food industry executive Roy Hurlbut, 54, who has amassed $1,319 and spent $697 largely on printing and advertising.

Hurlbut, of 3902 Calle Ariana, received $1,200 in contributions of more than $100 and another $119 in donations less than $100.

Donors include American Respiratory Service, $500, and $100 each from San Clemente Sport Fishing Inc., Dwayne Berger, a local real estate agent, resident Howard Massie,

Two Hurt in Crash

Fullerton resident Paul Scott Walker, 23, and his passenger, Jerome Bacigalupo, 29, also of Fullerton were trapped inside Walker's Volkswagen after a head-on collision on Bluebird Canyon Road Thursday night. The pair collided with a Cadillac driven by Samuel Lee Cooper, 33, of 1540 Bluebird Canyon Road and the impact tossed the small sedan upside down. Walker, who was treated and released from South Coast Medical Center, was being held on suspicion of felony drunk driving. His passenger remains in stable condition in the intensive care unit at the hospital.

Jewish 'Humor' Ad

'New U' Assailed Again

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Editors of the UC Irvine student newspaper, the New U, have charged that once again the contents of their journal have caused it to wind up at the city dump.

They claim that up to 5,000 copies of this week's edition were consigned to the ash can by students who objected to the content of an advertisement carried in a humor supplement.

Last January, editors said 3,000 newspapers were junked by a few students who reacted to a story with photographs of a wet T-shirt contest designed to allow young women to show off their breasts.

The ad in Tuesday's edition was for a magazine, "The Jew You" and touted article titles implying that Jews are usurers, enjoy killing Arabs, and have big noses.

Besides the ad, an article also contained in the humor supplement refers to Jews as "a group of noisy (and pretty damn rude) people."

Steven Brotman, a coordinator for the campus Jewish Student Union, called the comments "ridiculous and inflammatory" but denied New U staff members' allegations that the Jewish Student Union participated in stuffing the papers into the trash.

Summer Courses OK'd—for a Price

Laguna Beach students will get a chance to take summer school classes this year — for a price.

School trustees moved Thursday to contract with the University of La Verne to offer a collection of summer courses to both elementary and high school students

Board members unanimously approved the program that will cost parents up to $110 for four-hour per-day high school courses for six weeks and up to $65 for three-hour per day, five-week kindergarten through eighth grade classes.

A schedule offering students 1½-hour classes in elementary grades for $35 and two-hour classes in high school grades for $60 also is available.

Last year summer school was cancelled in the Laguna Beach district because of Proposition 13. Trustees directed a task force to explore possibilities of offering summer school on a fee basis.

The months-long study culminated in Thursday's vote.

Concerns were raised by several trustees over how parents who couldn't afford the tuition could send their children to the summer sessions.

"I would like to see the committee investigate the possibility (of offering scholarships) if a need exists," Board President Ron Chilcote said.

Allan Fink, assistant to the president of La Verne University, said his institution could not get involved in a scholarship program.

"We're not allowed to have that information (used to determine need) so it becomes a community problem," Fink said. "If there are concerns in the community then groups can raise money to pay tuition."

Schools Superintendent Robert Sanchis said district officials could have problems identifying need for individual students.

"There would be a problem identifying need," Sanchis told trustees. "I think it would be almost impossible to identify a specific level of need."

Nevertheless, trustees asked the summer school task force committee to explore the possibility of making scholarships available through community groups.

While the summer program will be offered and accredited through the University of La Verne, Fink said Laguna Beach teachers and administrators will

Daly Lover Seeks Cash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 31-year-old man who claims to have been the lover and housekeeper of the late James Daly has gone to court seeking half the actor's estimated $2 million estate, his attorney says.

Randall Jones' claim was filed in Superior Court on Wednesday after he was refused by the actor's sister, Mary Ellen Daly, and business manager, Fred Jamner, acting as co-executors, said attorney Ed Ross.

"It will be a Lee Marvin type trial," said Rose, referring to the suit brought against actor Lee Marvin by his former live-in girlfriend, Michelle Triola Marvin.

Niguel Firemen Rattled

Snake Killed; Garage Destroyed by Blaze

County firemen extinguished a two-garage fire Thursday night, all the while working around a rattlesnake left on the walkway by a biology student.

Capt. Dennis Schwander said 17 firemen responded to the 7:30 p.m. blaze in the Pacific Island Village in Laguna Niguel, containing a double garage fire.

The fire, believed to be caused by a faulty electrical outlet, destroyed the garage of Ed Graham, 31584 Crystal Sands Drive, and an adjacent garage owned by Denny Farger, 11582 Crystal Sands Drive.

An automobile owned by one of the residents was also destroyed in the blaze which caused an estimated $41,000 damage to the structures and contents.

A large recreational building behind the garages sustained about $1,000 in damage, firemen said.

It wasn't until the blaze was quelled that firemen were informed they were working around a rattlesnake.

"This guy came up and asked if the rattlesnake was still around," Captain Schwander said.

"We asked 'what rattlesnake,' and he showed us where a pillowcase containing the snake was located."

A high school biology student apparently brought the snake home, and when his parents said he couldn't keep it in the house, he left it outside, Schwander said.

Firemen used a fire ax to cut the reptile's head off so that firefighting could continue without psychological hazards.

Dying Woman Ignored by Commuters

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation).

Restoration Work

U.S. Won't Pay Slide Costs

By STEVE MITCHELL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The federal government says it won't pick up reconstruction costs for slide-ravaged Bluebird Canyon in Laguna Beach, but residents of that neighborhood said today the roads and utilities to their lots will be put in by somebody.

"The streets are going to be put back in there somehow," said homeowner Dave DeLo, adding his group is still optimistic they will someday rebuild their homes on the 3.5-acre landslide site.

Officials from the Federal Disaster Assistance Agency told city officials Thursday there will be no federal funds forthcoming for reconstruction of the landslide area.

The final word came from the agency's director, William Wilcox, who said work will be restricted to emergency restoration of the land, which slid into a horseshoe crevasse last Oct. 2, destroying 22 homes and leaving 28 others uninhabitable.

"Somebody's got to take care of it," DeLo said, "either the state and city, or the feds.

"Hopefully, the federal government will pick up the cost and we intend to work with the city to achieve that end."

Cost of reconstruction to the area has been estimated at $200,000. City and state officials contend the federal government should pick up the cost under an emergency declaration issued by President Carter last year for flood damages suffered in Southern California.

Geologists hired by the city contend last October's landslide was triggered by those torrential rains.

But federal officials disagree, saying the cost of making the lots buildable again rests with the city and state on a joint funding basis.

The city would be required to pick up 40 percent of the costs, with the state paying the rest.

The federal disaster agency is picking up costs of emergency buttressing at the landslide area, to insure against further slippage.

And while city officials appear at a loss of what to do next, a spokesman for Rep. Robert Badham's office in Washington said this morning the Congressman has not given up the fight.

"We've been working on the problem, and we will continue to work on the problem," said a Washington spokesman for Badham.

"We're not giving it up. I don't know what the options are now, but we'll definitely be looking at alternatives," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Bluebird homeowners are confident the roads will be put in and utilities installed once the buttressing work is completed.

"The technical appeals have been denied, but the thing we must do is go back there (to Washington) as a homeowners' group to appeal," DeLo said.

"It's really not that big of a number, and if we can't get federal assistance, the city would only have to pick up a portion of the cost," he said, adding that a municipal price tag would be much less than $100,000.

"The city spent more than that just for legal costs for the Sycamore Hills lawsuit."

'HUMOR'...

"The JSU officially had nothing to do with it," Brotman said. "We didn't encourage anything like that."

Brotman said he suspected there were some enraged Jewish students who threw away papers, as well as some angry non-Jewish readers, who threw away papers.

New U editors defended the comments as intended in a humorous manner, and said other religious groups were satirized as well. Another ad, advocating "Maximum Sex," was purportedly the work of the Crusade for Christian Copulation.

Richard Clucas, editor of the newspaper, has come under scrutiny of the Communications Board, which oversees the newspaper operations and annually selects the New U editor.

Various campus resolutions have been proposed to remove Clucas as editor.

Past incidents viewed by some as journalistic indiscretions or lapses of good taste include publication of bogus advertisements demeaning Iranians, and articles some felt were offensive to women.

Of the humor issue, Clucas said today, "I don't think we particularly wanted to promote ethnic humor; most of it had to do with belief rather than ethnicity.

"It's kind of ironic that some of the groups that were upset were the Jewish students, the gay community and the Christian community.

"Some of the most outlandish humor about them were written by people who come from those backgrounds.

"No one was trying to offend the Jewish students, and I'm sorry that they were offended."

Clucas said he is trying to hang onto his post as editor until the end of June, when a new one is scheduled to be named.

"This is just supposed to be an educational opportunity anyway," Clucas said. "Boy, am I getting an education."

Marvin Attorneys Told to Wind Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin's lawyers are under orders to rest their case today, and Michelle Triola Marvin's attorney says rebuttal testimony will attempt to show "what a loving, caring, giving lady she was."

Marvin's lawyers were told by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall on Thursday that they were being held to an earlier promise that they would end their case today.

"The court believes ample leeway has been given to all counsel to proceed with their case," said Marshall.

Marvin's presentation was to conclude with some final details of the actor's finances during the six years he and Miss Marvin lived together.

Testimony has shown Marvin earned $3.6 million during that period. Miss Marvin is suing for half.

The defense team, claiming the actor owes Miss Marvin nothing, presented 36 witnesses in some four weeks of testimony to prove that point.

Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, said he would call 18 to 20 witnesses in a rebuttal case expected to run through next week.

"These witnesses will refute every single point these people brought up," Marvin said.

The last witness to testify Thursday angered Miss Marvin, who shouted out in court: "They're lying. I don't even know her!"

'Sex Doctor' Hospitalized

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An anesthesiologist accused by authorities of sexual perversion with female patients during surgery was rushed to a hospital shortly after a newspaper carried a story about his case.

The state Board of Medical Quality Assurance says it is seeking to revoke the license of the anesthesiologist, Dr. William Miofsky, 46, of Sacramento. It filed a formal complaint against him one week ago.

On Thursday, the Sacramento Bee carried a page-one story on the board's investigation. Miofsky, who is married and has children, was admitted hours later to Mercy San Juan Hospital.

Toilet Seat Death Weapon

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police are investigating the murder of an oil company auditor who apparently was beaten to death with a toilet seat from her townhouse.

The nightgown-clad body of Nancy Rose, 32, chief auditor for the Atlantic Richfield Co.'s office here, was found Thursday morning along a roadside in southern New Jersey.

Police said a portion of the toilet seat from her $165,000 Society Hill townhouse was broken off and found beside the body.

Phony Lottery

'Minister' Sought In Irvine Fraud

A self-described minister who received his credentials by mail order is hiring area children to sell lottery tickets to benefit the expansion of a church that doesn't exist, Irvine police said Thursday.

A drawing is supposed to be held at "St. John's Church," in the ministry of the Universal Life Church, at noon on Saturday at 23331 El Toro Road in El Toro.

If someone shows up for it, police detective Paul Jessup said, he'll be disappointed.

There is no church at the address. There is, however, a professional office building there, and among the tenants is an answering service which the "minister" used.

He is no longer a client, and officials of the service assure callers they had never planned to host a lottery and don't engage in any business other than answering telephones and recording messages for clients.

The Universal Life Church is a nondenominational organization based in Modesto that, for a fee, will mail to anyone credentials showing he is a minister of the church.

Police are withholding the name of the man until they are able to build a case against him.

They have gone public with the investigation in hopes of turning up victims who purchased lottery tickets.

Police believe the tickets were sold from November of last year up until this month.

West Bank Woes

Discord Snags Peace Effort

By The Associated Press

A faction in the Israeli Cabinet is demanding that the government commit itself to stepped-up Jewish settlement in the West Bank of the Jordan River and continued Israeli security control of the area, it was learned today.

The discord apparently is one reason Menachem Begin has postponed for 24 hours the Cabinet's consideration of the full Egyptian-Israeli treaty, originally scheduled for Sunday.

A Begin spokesman said the delay resulted from the prime minister's illness: He has been ordered to bed because of a cold.

But it also will give Begin time to try to head off a clash over the demands of a three-man National Religious Party faction in the 17-member Cabinet.

In Egypt, meanwhile, President Anwar Sadat declared today that the "real test" of the peace process will come after the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, when the two countries open negotiations on establishing self-rule for the Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, another Israeli-occupied territory.

"I know Begin will be raising hell as he always does, but, my God, I shall be raising hell for him also," Sadat said at an impromptu news conference in his home village.

The White House announced that a U.S. delegation, including President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Carter's son Chip, is heading for the Mideast today in an attempt to persuade Arab leaders to change their minds and support the proposed Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The delegation will meet with leaders of two moderate Arab states, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, whose support is considered crucial to future success of the U.S.-sponsored peace drive.

The Camp David accords call for Jordanian participation in the West Bank-Gaza negotiations, but Jordan has refused to accept the invitation, making it more likely that only Egypt, Israel and the United States will negotiate self-rule arrangements for the Palestinians.

David Glass, a National Religious Party member of the Israeli Parliament, told The Associated Press that the NRP's demands in the Cabinet are not being presented as an ultimatum as the Cabinet prepares to debate the treaty.

SALARY...

comment today on the pay flap, but Councilman Howard Dawson said the city manager's increase, and the proposed reorganization of city departments are not related.

"We promised Solomon a six month review when we hired him last year, and when we compared the job he has been doing here for us, we felt he is certainly entitled to a merit increase," Dawson said.

As far as the cost of living increase offered employees, Dawson said he does not believe the wage and salary package is related to any restructuring plans for city departments.

"It's a different thing altogether," Dawson said.

Townsend also objected to the hiring of Hamilton and Associates to conduct wage bargaining for the city.

"Solomon's contract says he is to do the negotiating with employees, or his appointed representative," Townsend said.

"We don't understand why he doesn't conduct the negotiating himself instead of contracting an outside firm at $700 a month to do it.

"I don't see why he can't eliminate the consultant and do it himself and create a little more harmony among employees and pour that money (consultant's fees) into salaries."

Partygoers Robbed of $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

"I think they were wild enough to shoot us," said Mrs. Mortimer Fleishhacker, who lost several rings to the robbers.

She and the other guests were forced to lie on the floor of the sprawling, one-story home as they were robbed.

At least one woman standing amid the deviled eggs, rolled-up cheese and German wine hors d'ouevres managed to slip a valuable diamond ring into her bodice, unseen by the robbers, police said.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor — may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

Patrolman John Stumpf said two young men knocked at the door of hostess Mary Anders' home at 6:20 p.m., about 20 minutes after the party started, and identified themselves as police officers.

ANDY ANDREWS SHOWS HOW TO FLUSH NEWPORT BAY
He Wants To Try His Idea But Officials Are Cautious

Silt Remover

Straight Flush Beats Full Bay

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Ottie "Andy" Andrews was a little boy growing up in Massachusetts, he started "playing around" to see how tidal currents could be harnessed.

His initial experiments washed out a yacht club dock and tore out a couple hundred feet of river banks.

Now Andrews thinks he has a way that kind of energy could be put to work cleaning out the silt that's clogging Newport Bay.

He likes to call his proposed project the "Self Cleaning Bay."

Andrews, currently a Long Beach resident, has been studying Newport's siltation problems since retiring as a gas truck driver 10 years ago.

He figures it would cost a minimum of $4 million to dredge the silt out of the Upper Bay alone, not to mention the ongoing costs of preventing another build up.

"Why not put nature to work to clean it out?" he asks.

Andrews, who describes himself as an inventor, has designed a combined wave pump and tidal gate structure that he says would be the solution to the siltation problem.

What he'd like to do is cut a channel from the beach at 43rd Street to Balboa Boulevard, with an eight foot underground pipe connecting the channel to the bay behind Newport Island. That's the wave pump.

Then, he'd string a series of water barriers between islands in the Upper Bay to make a loop-shaped channel. That channel would have tidal gates at the two bottom ends.

Here's how it works.

The wave pump is based on the venturi principle of increasing the velocity of waves that would hit the channel by constricting its size.

He estimates 100,000 gallons a minute could be pumped through the channel and pipe during a day of two-foot surf, even when the tide is falling.

That water, when combined with the channelization of the Upper Bay barriers and gates would flush the silt out of the Upper Bay and Lower Bay and take it out to sea.

Andrews, who's trying to interest the state Department of Fish and Game and the county Environmental Management Agency in his plan, concedes that he's got no idea how much it would cost.

"But it'd be cheaper in the long run than having to keep dredging the bay out or letting it die," he observes.

To illustrate his point, Andrews has been hauling a model of his tide gates and wave pump around with him and with the aid of a garden hose and some food coloring he'll demonstrate his theory to anyone who's interested.

George Osborne, head of the county's EMA, says he's reserving judgment of the proposal until a working model of the bay is built.

"You really can't predict how it would work from the demonstration I saw," he commented.

Aside from the engineering and construction problems that Andrews' plan entails, Osborne brought up one other potential road block:

"The prospect of getting all the permits you'd need from all the agencies involved — well it's practically overwhelming," he said.

Andrews says he'll keep trying to get people interested in his idea. He figures the bay has about 12 years before the silt kills the marine life, plants and birds that live here now.

"This had been a dream of mine since I was a kid, to clean up a bay like this. Right now all I want is for some agency to be interested enough to let me build a working model," he said.

Irvine Appearance

Loss of Financing Warned by Riles

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Wilson Riles, state superintendent of public instruction, told an audience of Irvine businessmen and secondary school educators Thursday, "We can actually lose public education in California" without a long-term system of school financing.

Riles spoke to members of the Greater Irvine Industrial League and the Irvine Unified School District, who met at the Registry Hotel to announce a joint program of vocational education.

The state schools chief commended the group for the program, in which high school students visit GIIL-member companies to learn the workings of the businesses and of the economy in general.

"You're the kind of example (of public education) we need in this state," Riles said, and added, "So you'd better succeed."

Riles said, "It saddens me that we don't realize what we have and that because we don't realize what we have, we may lose it."

He urged the group to support state legislation for long-term school financing and to oppose both the Gann initiative to limit government spending, which he called "dangerous for the schools," and bills for voucher systems.

Under a voucher system, parents literally shop for schools. The state then directs a voucher — a check — to parents which they use to pay for the education of their children at any school, public or private, that meets a predetermined set of criteria.

Riles said that, under a voucher system, "The Peoples' Temple Church could set up a school system. The Ku Klux Klan can — and will — set up a school system."

Such things could happen, he said, because politically, California "is a volatile state."

"We do some great things," Riles said, "but we also do some kooky things. And I don't want to take that chance."

"The viability and vitality of your community," he said, "is tied directly to the quality and image of your schools.

"You have to communicate (to the legislators) what you want and need. The winners are your children."

FINANCING NEEDED
School Chief Riles

Riles came to Thursday's luncheon, however, not only to warn that inaction may bury public education, but to praise the vocational education program.

Its pilot phase has been in operation for over a year, and has involved the participation of 32 companies, 90 educators and 1,100 high school students from Irvine, University and SELF schools.

Called The Irvine Enterprise in Education (TIE), it is intended to help students gain a better understanding of the American economic system.

As part of the program, businessmen have been guest speakers in the classroom, groups of up to 10 students have toured companies and asked questions of company heads and actually worked at the side of company employees.

Internships, paid and unpaid work, research and advanced studies of businesses are available to the better students.

Riles said the program echoes his own feeling that basic education is important, but that equally important is "the need to prepare students for work in a post-industrial age."

Riles said the program will help "tear down the fences—real or imaginary—which separate learning from experience."

'Typical' Quakes Shake Southland

JOSHUA TREE (AP) — Five earthquakes rocked a large part of Southern California, alarming residents and causing some damage, but scientists called the temblors part of a "typical swarm."

Authorities said no injuries or deaths were reported in the Thursday afternoon quakes, which ranged from 4.1 to 5.2 on the Richter scale.

"That area is known for its swarms," said California Institute of Technology seismology laboratory spokesman Dennis Meredith. The temblor series was centered near this isolated desert town, about 130 miles east of Los Angeles.

"They get a swarm of that size about every 10 years," Meredith said of the desert area. "They are calling it a typical Southern California swarm and it will last a day or two."

The temblors were followed by countless small aftershocks, scientists at Cal Tech in Pasadena said. All were centered 13 miles north-northwest of Joshua Tree.

The quakes, scientists added, were apparently unrelated to the severe quakes that rocked Mexico on Wednesday.

Damage was reported at stores in the tiny hamlet of Landers, nearly on top of the epicenter, and at Yucca Valley, about five miles from Joshua Tree.

Jean Halliday, owner of Halliday Liquors in Landers, said the store suffered more than $1,000 in damage to merchandise.

"Whiskey came down from the shelves and wine broke. There's booze all over the store and it stinks," she said. "You get a headache without even taking a drink."

Trial Recessed

Waddill Witness' Words Conflicting

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The murder retrial of Dr. William Waddill stood in recess for the weekend today after jurors heard conflicting testimony Thursday from a key prosecution witness.

Dr. Ronald Cornelsen, under questioning by defense attorney Charles Weedman, refused to budge from his contention that he saw Waddill s hand press down on the throat of the baby Waddill is accused of strangling.

But he couldn't recall whether he had told police the two-pound, 15-ounce infant known as Baby Girl Weaver was "alive, crying, breathing and moving independently," words attributed to Cornelsen in a police report.

"That could be the police interpretation of what I said," Cornelsen testified, denying he had used the word "crying" at all to police.

In addition, Cornelsen had offered different testimony in the retrial about where he stood in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery when he purportedly saw Waddill choking the infant.

When Weedman produced a diagram from the first trial showing Cornelsen viewing Waddill from another angle, the silver-haired pediatrician contended his latest drawing is more accurate "as best I can remember."

Waddill, a 43-year-old Huntington Harbour physician, is accused of strangling the infant after she allegedly survived a saline abortion performed on an 18-year-old unwed mother.

Waddill has contended the infant never was alive when he examined her in the Westminster Community Hospital nursery two years ago.

His first murder trial ended last May when jurors said they were deadlocked 7-5 in favor of acquittal following 16 weeks of testimony and 11 days of deliberations.

Cornelsen also testified Thursday that hospital gossip led him to believe that a resuscitation team had partially revived the alleged abortion survivor before he and Waddill arrived at the hospital.

Earlier court testimony, however, had indicated no such revival occurred.

Weedman also asked Cornelsen if he reported Waddill to authorities because he feared for his own responsibility in failing to stop what he believed was an act of murder.

But Cornelsen said the thought of having to face a medical review board in Sacramento had never crossed his mind when he called police.

Testimony late in the day Thursday came from Dr. Victor Mikity, a USC radiologist and deputy Los Angeles County Coroner.

Mikity insisted that radiograms, a type of x-ray, of the infant's body indicated the fetus was about 28 weeks along in its gestational cycle.

One Child's Body Found; Mother Held

FINLEY, Wash. (AP) — A small, decomposed body pulled from the Columbia River Thursday is believed to be that of a boy whose mother told police she tossed her two toddlers off a bridge, police said.

Authorities tentatively identified the body as 18-month-old Christopher Adams. It was found by a chemical company employe who was working on a moored barge.

Officials said the child's clothing matched the clothes described by Tanya Ann Adams, 24, after she walked into Pasco Police headquarters Feb. 5 to tell officials she had thrown her two sons into the Columbia River from a cable bridge linking Pasco and Kennewick.

Mrs. Adams told investigators she believed she was possessed by the devil, and that she did not want her boys to follow in her sinful footsteps or those of her estranged husband.

The other boy, Ryan, 2½, has not been found, Benton County Sheriff Bob Rupp said a boat would patrol the river for the next few days in search of a body.

Throwing a Trial

YA'LL COME TO THE PARTY: We get all kinds of invitations here at the newspaper. Fancy engraved notices may urge us to some politico's fund-raiser cocktail bash at $25 per drink. Or we may get the less formal invite to a ribbon-cutting for the corner taco stand.

Never before, however, have I viewed a formal invitation all printed up — to somebody's court trial.

This happened only this week. One of our staff writers got the written invitation to the upcoming Harbor Judicial District trial of one Jane D. McLaughlin of Costa Mesa.

JANE McLAUGHLIN

YOU SUSPECT THAT few people who are in peril of a $500 fine or six months in the county clanger send out invitations to the ceremonies.

I don't know what kind of party you'd call this. A Slammer Shindig? A Jailhouse Jump? Who knows?

Anyway, the printed invitation urges, "You are cordially invited to attend the trial of Jane D. McLaughlin on Tuesday, March 20, 1979, at nine o'clock a.m."

IT DEVELOPS THAT Miss McLaughlin, 31, is something of a special case. Since last May, she's been in a running feud with Costa Mesa City Hall. She claims she doesn't need a business license to operate her Morningside Printing firm out on Mesa Verde Drive East.

That license demand would infringe upon her rights, she declares.

So it is that the city attorney's office is hauling her into court. She tried to get the jurisdiction switched to federal court, apparently as a constitutional issue, but this maneuver has been frustrated.

Miss McLaughlin seems to have some other strong feelings about the role of government in her life. Like with paper money. She doesn't believe in it. She keeps her books balanced in gold grains.

BUT I DIGRESS. Back to the courthouse invitation. Miss McLaughlin says she's sent the missive to all the people who have supported her during her lengthy clash with the powers at City Hall.

It goes on to note, "I'm requesting your presence because I believe that you'll have a good effect on the jury.

"In addition, I'm quite confident that you'll enjoy the presentation of my case and the testimony of the witnesses should prove entertaining."

The printed invite even includes a map so you can find your way to the party house out on Jamboree Road.

Better leave your noisemakers and funny paper hats at home.

Gas Price Soaring

Nigeria Seeks Big Oil Fee Hike

By The Associated Press

If Nigeria acts on its announced desire to raise crude oil prices by 17 percent on April 1 it could trigger similar action by other oil producers and increase U.S. gasoline prices an additional three cents, analysts say.

The African nation's statement Thursday came as a survey by the Lundberg Letter, an oil industry publication, reported that gasoline prices at full-service stations rose about 2 cents a gallon nationwide since February. That is nearly twice the rise from January to February.

A GALLON OF UNLEADED gasoline in Chicago, for example, increased from 82.19 cents to 84.36 cents.

The Lundberg Letter attributed the rise to the Iranian oil production slowdown and the Energy Department's decision earlier this month to let oil companies pass through refining costs on certain gasolines.

Nigeria supplies about 6.1 percent of the 18.7 million barrels of oil used daily by the United States — an import figure exceeded only by Saudi Arabia.

The increase would be far larger than the 3.9 percent boost originally scheduled for April 1 by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Moreover, it would nearly double price boosts already announced by OPEC nations reacting to tightened supplies caused by Iran's problems.

Analysts said Nigeria's new price by itself might not raise consumer prices, but if other oil producers match the boost, gasoline prices could rise by 3 cents a gallon.

The only other OPEC nation to suggest such a big price rise is Algeria, which is threatening a 25 percent increase.

OPEC had scheduled a total increase of 14.5 percent this year in the basic price of crude oil. The first increase, of 5 percent, raised the price to $13.35 Jan. 1. Other increases were scheduled quarterly.

Speculation abounded that OPEC nations would decide March 26 to set base prices at a level reflecting 9 percent increases announced by most countries recently.

But Nigeria's warning that it wants to raise the per-barrel price by $2.50—from $14.80 to $17.30 — no matter what OPEC does, may alter other OPEC members' thinking, analysts said.

Meanwhile, a group of Japanese trading companies announced in Tokyo Thursday that the National Iranian Oil Co. agreed to sell them about 500,000 barrels of crude oil a day under a long-term contract. The Japanese didn't say how much they were paying for it.

IT WAS BELIEVED to be the first long-term contract signed by the revolutionary regime, which renewed oil exports March 5 after a shutdown since December due to strikes against the shah.

Meanwhile, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo. said today that closing nuclear power plants along the Eastern Seaboard to study their earthquake resistance may have been a rash move since the region "is not exactly an earthquake zone."

Estimates are that it could take 100,000 barrels of oil a day — or more — to replace the generating capacity lost by closing the plants.

'FATHER' OF EUROPE
Statesman Jean Monnet

Political Economist, Monnet, Dies

PARIS (AP) — Jean Monnet, the foremost advocate of European unity and the inspiration and driving force behind the European Common Market, died today at his home near Montford l'Amaury, sources at the headquarters of the European Community reported. He was 90.

Monnet, a self-described political economist, was the key figure in the drive to bind the free European nations economically and politically, but during his long career he constantly shunned the limelight.

His first major step toward European unity was a six-nation pool of coal and steel resources, formally presented in 1950. Seven years later it became known as the European Economic Community.

Monnet was never a member of a government, but was, as author Theodore H. White called him, "a broker of ideas." He brought statesmen together by demonstrating how his ideas were in the interest of those concerned, persisting where leaders resisted or hesitated.

THE DAPPER, dynamic Frenchman, described by the late President Kennedy as a "statesman of the world," never had a university education. Owner of a prosperous cognac business, he was independently wealthy and took on a job only as long as he felt he was doing something useful to mankind.

Iranian Trial Halted

Khomeini Seeks New Executions Rulings

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today ordered the Islamic court trying former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida to halt its proceedings until new rules can be drawn up for the revolutionary tribunals that have sent at least 62 men before firing squads in little more than a month.

There was no immediate explanation for the decision, but the move appeared to represent a victory for Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan who has threatened to resign if such "inhuman and irreligious" proceedings continued.

KHOMEINI'S decision was read over Tehran Radio, and shortly afterward a spokesman for the ayatollah said Bazargan and two Cabinet ministers had traveled to the holy city of Qom on Thursday night for consultations with the Moslem leader.

Although there was no immediate confirmation, it appeared certain that Bazargan's trip to Khomeini's residence 100 miles south of Tehran was made primarily to protest the Hoveida trial and the repercussions it might have on the country.

Khomeini's revolutionary committee opened Hoveida's trial Thursday to an invited audience after the execution of at least 62 men convicted in secret since Khomeini's forces took power Feb. 12.

Selected Iranian reporters were invited along with some 200 relatives of demonstrators killed by Shah Mohammed RZA Pahlavi's police. The reporters said the trial began about 2 a.m. in a makeshift courtroom in Tehran's Qasr Prison.

The trial was in recess today for the Moslem Sabbath and was scheduled to resume Saturday.

Some of the reporters present said the 57-year-old Hoveida, who was prime minister from 1963 to 1977, was groggy from medication and wearing a black ski parka as he was led before the court. He sat with his head bowed and hands folded as the prosecutor read 16 charges against him, including spying for the United States, and demanded the death penalty.

Hoveida denied any wrongdoing and declared: "I could be in New York at the moment or in other countries walking freely. I had the opportunity, but why am I here? I had the chance to leave the country before my arrest."

He was also accused of smuggling heroin, revolting against Iran by forming cabinets on the order of the United States, interfering in elections and allowing foreign exploitation of Iran's resources.

The prosecutor alleged Hoveida suppressed the shah's opposition, "entering into a battle against God and his emissaries," but Hoveida denied that, too.

HOVEIDA WAS arrested by the shah last November for alleged corruption and misappropriation of funds in an apparent move to ease growing opposition to the monarch. But he was freed when the shah left Iran and he surrendered to the revolutionary government when it took power.

Attempt to Ban Kids TV Ads Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A constitutional law professor said today the Federal Trade Commission is "proceeding with peril into dangerous and ill-charted waters," with its proposal to ban television advertising directed at young children.

Charles Alan Wright, who represented former President Nixon in court when the Watergate scandal unfolded, said the proposed ban "would lead the commission across the line into areas where the First Amendment bars it from going."

Wright, a University of Texas law professor, testified for General Mills, one of the companies that would be affected by the proposal.

He said U.S. Supreme Court decisions on freedom of speech show "government may discourage the use of the disfavored product by taxing it, or may even ban its sales altogether, but the First Amendment disables government from achieving its goals by restricting the free flow of truthful information."

He said the FTC staff's justification for the ban is "an overly simplified view of the constitutional area. The staff seemed to feel that the commission could do almost anything it wanted to do in almost any area."

Wright said a finding that certain commercials are false would mean that there is no constitutional problem in banning them. "But simply pinning the label 'deceptive' on them is not enough," he argued.

Citing a 1976 decision striking down a Virginia ban on price advertising of prescription drugs and subseqeuent decisions elaborating on that decision, Wright said:

"The Commission now has a special responsibility to take the First Amendment into account in its deliberations and to exercise care that its orders do not intrude upon constitutional protections."

FTC staffers have contended the agency has authority to issue the ban because children are involved and because the ban is directed at broadcast media rather than print media.

SAINT PETER 'KNOWS' RIGHTS

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's teachers haven't been at all shy about letting state legislators know their feelings concerning proposed pay raises in the budget now under consideration.

One irate teacher vented her wrath Thursday on Sen. Beverly Langford, D-Calhoun, saying, "I wouldn't vote for you if you were St. Peter."

Langford replied: "Ma'am, if I were St. Peter, you wouldn't be in my district."

U.S. Summary

Thundershowers dampened the West and parts of Texas today with lighter showers extending from central Texas and Louisiana into eastern Kansas and southwestern Missouri.

Occasional snow showers reached from western Montana into eastern Washington state and a few snow flurries lingered along the southern shore of Lake Ontario.

A travel advisory was posted for the Tahoe Valley of western Nevada as gusty winds and occasional snow swirled through the area.

Parts of the Northeast braced for more snow as flurries were expected from western New England across northern New York state.

Mild weather prevailed over the northern half of the Plains and across the upper half of the Rockies but cool or cold temperatures were found in most other sections of the country.

California

The chance of showers from a weak Pacific storm system was expected to taper off this evening, leaving partly cloudy skies over Southern California for the weekend.

Rain from the storm was so light that only traces could be reported in most locations early today. Long Beach reported .08 of an inch and .05 of an inch fell at Los Angeles International.

The chill from the storm, however, may be enough to put a damper on plans for Sunday's test flight of a space shuttle in the upper desert, where National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials fear that near-freezing mercury readings may damage delicate instrumentation aboard the craft.

Forecasters estimated the chance of showers in the metropolitan area at 40 percent tonight, tapering off to 30 percent on Saturday.

Low temperatures in the Los Angeles area are expected to be in the low 50s tonight, with highs Saturday in the low 60s.

Southern California mountain areas are expected to have showers and some traces of snow from the current storm according to NWS, which predicted highs in the mountains Saturday to be in the 30s and low 40s, with overnight lows of 28 to 34.

(Coastal weather information will be found on Page B8 today)

Catering Class

He Throws Bashes for Stars

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — There are several ways to throw a party. You can scribble BYOB on your invitations, put out some bread and cold cuts and hope for the best.

Or you can toss fiscal caution to the winds, mortgage your home and call in the experts. Robert Leberman is ready when you are.

As chairman of Casserole Catering, the granddaddy of Southern California caterers and the largest of the breed, Leberman's been responsible for some of the ritziest bashes in town for 33 years.

AND IF HOLLYWOOD is the entertainment center of the world, Leberman is a strong contender for the title of the entertainer's entertainer.

He's catered for everyone from Tiny Tim — "a bug on cleanliness ... he only ate organic foods served only on sterilized plates and only by one man" — to Marlon Brando, who ordered a dinner for six in his Japanese-style home. "It was the first time the staff had ever served a meal in stocking feet."

In the 1960s, Casserole also played housemother to the Beatles whenever they dropped into town. Leberman discloses that the Fab Four just loved a hamburger concoction that included Coke and cornflakes.

IT WAS DUBBED the Beatleburger, Leberman says, and "I still have the letter authorizing exclusive use of the name." He's not sure why the Beatleburger has never seen the light of day: "I never tasted it."

You don't have to be famous to call in Casserole — just rich, Leberman, a patrician-looking white haired man in his 60s, makes no secret of the fact that his favorite clients are those who care enough to serve the very best and can afford to do so.

"A CUSTOM COUTURIER gets $1,400 for a garment, so why shouldn't a custom caterer charge $1,400 for a dinner party?" he asks.

Actually, $1,400 is small potatoes for a firm that specializes in such corporate bashes as an Arabian Nights extravaganza that ABC threw for National Football League executives on a gargantuan cocktail party for $25,000 at the opening of an Orange County fashion center.

Affairs of these size require the logistical planning of military actions, with Leberman as quartermaster extraordinaire.

HE CAN TELL you how much ice you need to serve drinks for 10,000 (10,000 pounds, a pound a person) or how much those paper-thin slices of smoked salmon cost the generous host ($1.87½ a slice, including Casserole's markup).

Casserole, which started in 1946 delivering home meals more on the level of Chicken Delight than Escoffier, pioneered what Leberman calls public relations entertaining in the early 1950s.

But while the big party remains Casserole's bread and butter, there is nothing too miniscule for its services — if the price is right.

Beatlemania Lives On

Second Generation of Fans Keeps Legend Alive

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen years after they were introduced to America on the Ed Sullivan show, 10 years after they last entered a recording studio together, the Beatles are still big business.

It's not exactly that the Beatles need it. The four members of the group that revolutionized music in the 1960s — Paul McCartney, John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — made millions in the first flush of success and now have separate, successful careers.

BUT NOW THEIR work together is making loads of money for other people.

Their label, Capitol Records, reports that the group's records still sell millions of copies a year.

"Beatlemania," a stage show using Beatle look and sound-alikes, is doing well on Broadway and on a nationwide tour. And Beatle memorabilia is highly prized by collectors and commands impressive prices.

THE BEATLE boom is not just attributable to nostalgia. Many of the fans are teen-agers, some of whom weren't born when the group's long hair shocked the nation in 1964.

At a recent gathering of Beatle fans in New York at the fifth annual Beatlefest, half the crowd appeared to be younger than the Beatle legend.

"This is weird — I really feel old," said said fan Walter Winnick. Winnick is 23.

"HALF THE CROWD is adults and half the crowd is teen-agers. They're second-generation Beatle fans," said Mark Lapidos, organizer of the New York Beatlefest and similar events in Chicago and Los Angeles.

Lapidos won't say how much he makes from organizing Beatlefests, but it's enough to allow him and his wife, Carol, to make a living doing it full time.

Lapidos put together his first New York Beatlefest in 1974, and they've played to capacity crowds ever since. With a minimum of advertising, this one drew more than 6,000 Beatlemaniacs at an average price of $8 a head.

AND THAT WAS just where their spending began. Inside, there were four large meeting rooms and a huge ballroom full of Beatles' films, artwork by fans, guest speakers and a flea market, the latter the event's most popular area.

There, devotees of the four Liverpudlians could buy anything from buttons to trading cards to records to movies — all at impressive prices.

A copy of the rare "Yesterday . . . And Today" album with the rare cover showing the Beatles holding what appear to be dead babies can fetch $250 — 50 times what it cost new. Reproductions of the cover photograph were selling for $3 each and were available on T-shirts and posters.

BOB IULIUCCI, selling films and videotapes of old Beatle performances, said business was "great." Iuliucci also would not say what his annual income from Beatle memorabilia was, but he would admit to it being "in five figures."

Iuliucci got into the Beatle business three years ago by combining two hobbies, Beatle music and film. He travels the country selling his wares to Beatle fans.

"In Houston I sold over $300 worth of films to a woman who didn't even own a projector," he said. "She just wanted the films."

FOR THE MOST hardcore Beatle fans, Beatlefeast is heaven. And the fans react to the goings-on with fervor reminiscent of the height of Beatlemania in 1964; girls still scream when their favorite Beatle's face appears during one of the endless string of movies being shown. And Beatle sound-alike contests are perennial favorites.

The less devoted partake of more moderate celebrations. The "Beatlemania" stage show is scoffed at by a lot of Beatle fans who resent the slick presentation of ersatz Beatles, but it's heading for its third year on Broadway.

Carter OK On Loans?

ATLANTA (AP) — An audit by the company responsible for monitoring loans to the Carter family's peanut warehouse has found no irregularities, says Charles Kirbo, the trustee for President Carter's business interests.

Kirbo made the statement in denying a Washington Post report concerning alleged irregularities involving the loans. He said the company "found nothing which supports any of the allegations made by The Washington Post."

The Post article, printed Sunday, quoted a former warehouseman, Jimmy Hayes, as saying he and Billy Carter, the president's brother, misled the National Bank of Georgia about the amount of peanuts stored in the Plains, Ga., warehouse as collateral for loans.

3 of 4 New Cars Recalled

DEAR PAT: Can you find out how many cars were recalled last year compared to 1977? I'd also like to know which cars were involved in major recalls last year.

F.B., Newport Beach

More than 9 million motor vehicles and 14.6 million tires were recalled for safety defects in 1978, indicating a drop from the record 12.9 million vehicles recalled in 1977, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. However, the millions of tires being recalled by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. constitute the largest single tire recall in history.

NHTSA reports that 58 recall campaigns, involving 4.7 million vehicles, were influenced by government actions or investigations, as was the Firestone recall.

The largest single vehicle recall in 1978 was conducted by Ford Motor Co., involving 1.5 million 1971-76 Pinto and Bobcat cars that had potentially unsafe fuel tanks. Also, General Motors recalled 320,000 subcompact Chevettes for a gas tank problem and 265,000 Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick models for defective rear axles. Finally, Chrysler Corp. recalled 1.1 million Aspen and Volare models to correct steering defects.

In addition to the car and tire recalls, there were 850,000 units of motor vehicle equipment recalled under NHTSA regulations.

Agency Checks Solar Woes

DEAR READERS: The Department of Consumer Affairs now has a Solar Insulation Unit to check into various aspects of the solar energy and insulation fields. The focus of the unit is the development of a solar insulation telephone complaint service.

The staff is available to take consumer complaints, mediate, and assist with problem resolution. The unit also is evaluating solar and insulation advertisements for fraudulent representations.

Several consumer protection pamphlets are available from the unit. They are: Consumer Guidelines for Buying Solar Energy Equipment; Solar Advertising Guidelines; and Sample Warranties for Solar Energy Equipment.

To receive copies of these pamphlets, register complaints, or for more information, telephone the unit toll-free at (800) 952-5567, or write to: Solar Insulation Unit, Department of Consumer Affairs, 1020 N St., Room A547-F, Sacramento, Calif. 95814.

UCI's New U Gets Dumped Again

By PHILIP ROSMARIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Editors of the UC Irvine student newspaper, the New U, have charged that once again the contents of their journal have caused it to wind up at the city dump.

They claim that up to 5,000 copies of this week's edition were consigned to the ash can by students who objected to the content of an advertisement carried in a humor supplement.

Last January, editors said 3,000 newspapers were junked by a few students who reacted to a story with photographs of a wet T-shirt contest designed to allow young women to show off their breasts.

The ad in Tuesday's edition was for a magazine, "The Jew You" and touted article titles implying that Jews are usurers, enjoy killing Arabs, and have big noses.

Besides the ad, an article also contained in the humor supplement refers to Jews as "a group of noisy (and pretty damn rude) people."

Steven Brotman, a coordinator for the campus Jewish Student Union, called the comments "ridiculous and inflammatory" but denied New U staff members' allegations that the Jewish Student Union participated in stuffing the papers into the trash.

"The JSU officially had nothing to do with it," Brotman said. "We didn't encourage anything like that."

Brotman said he suspected there were some enraged Jewish students who threw away papers, as well as some angry non-Jewish readers, who threw away papers.

New U editors defended the comments as intended in a humorous manner, and said other religious groups were satirized as well. Another ad, advocating "Maximum Sex," was purportedly the work of the Crusade for Christian Copulation.

Richard Clucas, editor of the newspaper, has come under scrutiny of the Communications Board, which oversees the newspaper operations and annually selects the New U editor.

Various campus resolutions have been proposed to remove Clucas as editor.

Past incidents viewed by some as journalistic indiscretions or lapses of good taste include publication of bogus advertisements demeaning Iranians, and articles some felt were offensive to women.

Of the humor issue, Clucas

Pay Pact Nixed

Teachers Declare Impasse

Negotiations between teachers and the Newport-Mesa Unified School District have reached an impasse, with the organization representing employees rejecting a five percent salary increase.

District Superintendent John Nicoll said the two sides broke off bargaining late Wednesday afternoon. The teachers, represented by the Newport-Mesa Education Association, are expected to ask for a state mediator to enter the stalled talks.

Teacher negotiators had turned down a 3.5 percent salary offer last week. They are standing firm on a demand for the district to fund a bonus for teachers with 15 years of service. The district claims it cannot afford it.

"We maintain that this is a priority issue and we will continue to fight for it," a statement by teachers says.

Nicoll said the district's latest offer would have provided for a top salary of $21,924 for the 322 teachers at the top of the pay schedule. The offer also would have provided for an average boost of $950 annually for all teachers, retroactive to July 1, 1978.

The declaration of impasse by the Newport-Mesa Education Association now goes to the state Public Employment Relations Board, which is expected to refer the matter to the state Conciliation Service.

ANDY ANDREWS SHOWS HOW TO FLUSH NEWPORT BAY
He Wants To Try His Idea But Officials Are Cautious

Straight Flush Beats Full Bay

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Ottie "Andy" Andrews was a little boy growing up in Massachusetts, he started "playing around" to see how tidal currents could be harnessed.

His initial experiments washed out a yacht club dock and tore out a couple hundred feet of river banks.

Now Andrews thinks he has a way that kind of energy could be put to work cleaning out the silt that's clogging Newport Bay.

He likes to call his proposed project the "Self Cleaning Bay."

Andrews, currently a Long Beach resident, has been studying Newport's siltation problems since retiring as a gas truck driver 10 years ago.

He figures it would cost a minimum of $4 million to dredge the silt out of the Upper Bay alone, not to mention the ongoing costs of preventing another build up.

"Why not put nature to work to clean it out?" he asks.

Andrews, who describes himself as an inventor, has designed a combined wave pump and tidal gate structure that he says would be the solution to the siltation problem.

What he'd like to do is cut a channel from the beach at 43rd Street to Balboa Boulevard, with an eight foot underground pipe connecting the channel to the bay behind Newport Island. That's the wave pump.

Then, he'd string a series of water barriers between islands in the Upper Bay to make a loop-shaped channel. That chan-

Airliner Hijacker Captured

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man demanding $200,000 and transportation to Havana hijacked a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner on a flight from Phoenix to Tucson today, the airline said. He was taken into custody later at the airport.

The plane landed at Tucson International Airport, and everyone but a female flight attendant and the hijacker got off the plane unharmed, according to Continental spokesman Jack Gregor in Los Angeles.

The flight attendant, identified as Mary Ellen Paul, of Los Angeles, was later freed unharmed, and authorities said the hijacker was taken into custory.

The plane had carried 89 passengers.

Gregor said an FBI agent had boarded the plane at the airport.

A reporter at the airport said he saw a man in an orange vest stand on the roof of a police car at the nose of the plane and pull himself up through the cockpit window.

There were reports the hijacker was armed with a knife, but Continental said it could not confirm that.

The FBI identified the suspect as John Carleton Kivlen, 52, of San Rafael.

Ray Resco Arrested In Court

Raymond Resco, who missed his Orange County Superior Court murder trial Thursday because, he said, he feared for his life, showed up in court this morning and was promptly arrested on burglary charges.

Resco's attorney, Thomas Crosby, and prosecutor Jay Moseley had just completed final arguments in Resco's murder case when Newport Beach police officer Al Epstein showed up in court with a warrant for the burglary arrest.

Resco was quickly taken into custody by a courtroom bailiff on suspicion of three counts each of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Epstein declined to elaborate on the burglary charges. Bail was set at $60,000.

But, according to other Newport Beach police sources, the charges stem from a series of Santa Ana burglaries in which stereo equipment, electric guitars and amplifiers were taken.

Police allege the items were found in the Newport Crest condominium that Resco vacated last weekend.

Crosby said he would attempt to have his client arraigned on the burglary charges today and to get him free on bail.

Moments before Resco's arrest today Moseley had complained that he didn't have the murder defendant's current address.

But Crosby suggested such information be related outside open court "because of the problems of yesterday."

Resco, one of seven persons charged with the October, 1977, slaying of Fountain Valley drug dealer Stephen Bovan claimed Thursday that an unknown assailant tried to shoot him Wednesday night hours before his scheduled court appearance.

Judge Robert Kneeland, who is hearing arguments in the murder case, issued a warrant for Resco's arrest Thursday, but

Bushmills Racer Determined

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Last year, Rocky Aoki started all eight offshore power boat races on the Grand Prix circuit.

He never finished any of them.

This year's season opens Saturday with the Bushmills Grand Prix off the Orange Coast and Aoki is determined it'll be different.

He has a new boat and a new engine. "I'm an innovator," he said. He also recognizes the old racing dictum that you can't win the race unless you finish it.

The 40-year-old restaurant chain owner jokes about last year's failures, but they obviously are a sore point with him.

So his innovations for this year are centered on the idea of not only being fast but having a boat that is less likely to break down mid-race. Those breakdowns cost him the 1977 and 1978 Bushmills after he won the 1976 race.

This year, he and his crew will be going out in a wooden hulled catamaran, the only one on the circuit.

Wood is faster and the catamaran design has some aerodynamic design advantages, he said. The boat is powered by a Chrysler engine that Aoki hopes will prove to be more durable over the 180-mile course.

The new outfit cost him $800,000 which he spent without hesitation.

"Winning is everything," he explained. "Coming in second is the same as coming in last."

Aoki, who made his mark in the business world as the owner of the Benihana restaurant and hotel chain, says he took up power boat racing to escape

N-M Trustees To Interview 5 Candidates

Officials of the Newport Mesa School District have received 10 applications from persons interested in being appointed to a seat on the district's Board of Trustees.

The board is scheduled to meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Harper Community Center in Costa Mesa to interview five of the candidates.

Trustees will pick one of the 10 hopefuls at their next regular board meeting, Tuesday, March 27. Whoever is chosen will replace trustee Duke O'Brien, who has resigned from the panel effective March 31.

The ten applicants for the job are William Bandaruk, a consulting engineer; Christopher Creely, a bookstore owner; Robert De Berry, a school administrator in Santa Ana; Karen McGlinn, who is active in PTA and civic affairs; Michael McLaughlin, an attorney; Janet Pelichowski, a parent and volunteer; K. Paul Raver, a county official; Conrad Trigilio, a district circulation manager for the Daily Pilot; Jerome Vandewalle, a mechanical engineer, and Richmond Westlake, a student at Cal State Fullerton majoring in public administration.

Whoever the board appoints will serve out O'Brien's term, which expires Nov. 30.

OCC, SADDLEBACK IN SEMIFINALS

Orange Coast College vs. LA Southwest and Saddleback against Cypress. Those will be the matchups tonight (6 and 8, respectively) in the semifinals of the JC state basketball tournament at Cal State Fullerton. (See Sports, Page B4).

OCC, seeded second in the tournament and No. 2 in the state, defeated LA Southwest earlier in the year to win the Miles Eaton tournament.

Party Hit For $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the city's social set attending a posh private cocktail reception for visiting New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin were robbed at gunpoint of an estimated $100,000 in jewels, cash, checks and credit cards, police said.

Police said one of the 21 victims lost a check for $1,000 and others lost valuable jewelry during the 15-minute holdup Thursday night at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

'I think they were wild enough to shoot us," said Mrs. Mortimer Fleishhacker, who lost several rings to the robbers.

She and the other guests were forced to lie on the floor of the sprawling, one-story home as they were robbed.

At least one woman standing amid the deviled eggs, rolled-up cheese and German wine hors d'ouevres managed to slip a valuable diamond ring into her bodice, unseen by the robbers, police said.

Police said Slatkin — in San Francisco as a visiting conductor — may have lost the least because he reportedly tossed his wallet under a chair and out of sight as soon as the robbers burst into the party.

Patrolman John Stumpf said two young men knocked at the door of hostess Mary Anders' home at 6:20 p.m., about 20 minutes after the party started, and identified themselves as police officers.

They pushed their way past a maid who realized her error and tried to close the door against them.

Dying Woman Ignored by Commuters

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped.

Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car.

The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging fazed no one.

When Franklin policeman Ewing Mayberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night.

"She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked."

Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today.

"The highway was busy at the time because it was when everyone was going in to town and coming out from work," Mayberry said.

"At first, when I was nearing the area, I thought the report was a joke. Traffic was like normal — busy. But once I got near the car, I could see her.

"Others must have seen her, too. Just was no one stopped. They slowed down and looked but no one stopped. People acted like nothing was going on."

Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville just north of Franklin.

"The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said.

"They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help."

The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman.

"I think she had been there 10 or 15 minutes before I got there," Mayberry said. "I think if somebody had gotten to her sooner, she might have had a chance."

FLUSHING BAY — Andy Andrews' "self-cleaning bay" would use a wave pump and channel at 43rd Street (dotted line) to bring in fresh ocean water and a channel created by a series of barriers and tide gates in the Upper Bay at Shellmaker Island (dotted lines).

Here's how it works.

The wave pump is based on the venturi principle of increasing the velocity of waves that would hit the channel by constricting its size.

He estimates 100,000 gallons a minute could be pumped through the channel and pipe during a day of two-foot surf, even when the tide is falling.

That water, when combined with the channelization of the Upper Bay barriers and gates would flush the silt out of the Upper Bay and Lower Bay and take it out to sea.

Andrews, who's trying to interest the state Department of Fish and Game and the county Environmental Management Agency in his plan, concedes that he's got no idea how much it would cost.

"But it'd be cheaper in the long run than having to keep dredging the bay out or letting it die," he observes.

To illustrate his point, Andrews has been hauling a model of his tide gates and wave pump around with him and with the aid of a garden hose and some food coloring he'll demonstrate his theory to anyone who's interested.

George Osborne, head of the county's EMA, says he's reserving judgment of the proposal until a working model of the bay is built.

"You really can't predict how it would work from the demonstration I saw," he commented.

Aside from the engineering and construction problems that Andrews' plan entails, Osborne brought up one other potential road block:

"The prospect of getting all the permits you'd need from all the agencies involved — well it's practically overwhelming," he said.

Andrews says he'll keep trying to get people interested in his idea. He figures the bay has about 12 years before the silt kills the marine life, plants and birds that live here now.

"This had been a dream of mine since I was a kid, to clean up a bay like this. Right now all I want is for some agency to be interested enough to let me build a working model," he said.

'HUMOR'. . .

said today, "I don't think we particularly wanted to promote ethnic humor; most of it had to do with belief rather than ethnicity.

"It's kind of ironic that some of the groups that were upset were the Jewish students, the gay community and the Christian community.

"Some of the most outlandish humor about them were written by people who come from those backgrounds.

"No one was trying to offend the Jewish students, and I'm sorry that they were offended."

Clucas said he is trying to hang onto his post as editor until the end of June, when a new one is scheduled to be named.

"This is just supposed to be an educational opportunity anyway," Clucas said. "Boy, am I getting an education."

Nurse Fights Rape Attempt In Newport

A vacationing student nurse told Newport Beach police a man tried to rape her while she was at the beach at Balboa this week

The 21-year-old Montana resident reported the incident Thursday. She said it happened at about noon Wednesday, but she was too upset to report it.

According to the police report the man sat down and chatted with the woman and attacked her while she got up to leave.

She said she fought him off when he said he was going to rape her and she ran for help to a group of people about 100 yards away.

She said her assailant had brown hair and eyes, was dressed in cut off jeans and had a bicycle with him on the beach.

Law Exempts Valley Farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston introduced legislation Thursday to exempt the farms of California's Imperial Valley from federal reclamation law acreage limits.

On another matter, the California Democrat told a news conference he was shelving another bill which would have authorized some $240 million in child care assistance to working parents over two years.

Whale Watch Group Fears Boat Races

Members of Whale Watch, a Newport Beach-based organization, said today they are concerned about collisions Saturday between boat racers and migrating California gray whales.

The 180-mile Bushmills Grand Prix is slated along the Orange Coast from Seal Beach to Dana Point and Mike Hickey, a Whale Watch spokesman, said the course is in the whales' migration path.

"There are at least 25 whales a day coming through here," he said.

Hickey's organization has asked the Pacific Offshore Power Boat Racing Association, organizers of the race, to warn drivers of the hazard, a precaution that has been taken each year since the race started in 1976.

A race spokesman said that there have been no problems with whales and racers during any previous Bushmills Grand Prix races off the Orange Coast.

However, Hickey said his group will be on the course Saturday morning prior to the start of the race to scout whales.

"We'll be in contact with the Coast Guard and the race committee," he said. "If we find any whales that might be a hazard, we'll be able to warn the committee."

business headaches.

He pursues his racing hobby with the same intensity that he runs his international corporation. A quiet man, he means it when he says winning is everything.

There was the race last year in San Francisco, for instance. It was so rough that his navigator opened a gash on his chin when his face smashed into the dash board and also managed to break his ankle.

Ocean racers stand, using their legs to cushion the blows their boats take. The broken ankle was obviously a painful hindrance. So Aoki slowed the boat and he and the throttle man put the navigator in the water for a committee boat to come fetch.

It turned out to be a useless move, they were unable to finish the race because the boat later cracked in half in the rough water.

Aoki may face a similar problem Saturday, only this time it may be his crew who'll be putting him over the side.

Last October he dislocated his knee in a crash during a closed course race in a small one-man boat. The knee was repaired in surgery, but he says he hasn't got full use of it yet.

So his new boat has a seat in it to protect his knee. "This is a test race for me as well as the boat," he said.

He may be leaving business pressures behind but he's trading them in for worries about his engine, his knee, the boat and the weather.

If it gets too rough, the wooden hull can crack open like an egg hitting concrete.

He's riding atop 300 gallons of high octane aviation fuel and fire is a very real danger. It happened three times last year.

Then there's the wind that could pick his catamaran up and flip it over.

But it's all worth it to Aoki. He might win and that possibility "makes you forget about everything — even the chance you might be killed.

"You know you could die but when you get out there, all you think about is winning that race," he said.

Mesa Cops Recover $7,000; Two Held

Two people were arrested and nearly $7,000 in stolen antique merchandise was recovered Thursday by Costa Mesa police.

Detective Dave Hayes said the recovered items were stolen from the Harvest, a store specializing in antique merchandise. The store is located at 2664 Newport Blvd.

Taken into custody by police were Costa Mesa residents William Branco of 2668 Newport Blvd. and Angie Masten of 2975 Babb St. Brnco was booked on two counts of burglary and two counts of possession of stolen property. Ms. Babb was booked on one burglary count and two counts of possession of stolen property.

Hayes said all the merchandise taken from The Harvest in two separate burglaries — one in January and another last weekend — had been recovered by police.

According to police reports, the store was burglarized late Saturday night and Sunday when it was closed. In all, about $5,000 in merchandise was taken. The other $2,000 in merchandise was reported missing in the January burglary.

The owner of the store, Helga Harvest, told police he had no theft insurance and would go out of business unless the merchandise was recovered.

Acting on a tip, Hayes said officers went to the homes of Branco and Ms. Babb Thursday, where they found much of the missing antique loot.

The detective said the suspects offered no resistance.

The stolen merchandise included mugs, dishes, baskets and other kitchen utensils, all imported from Europe.

College Employees Get Pay Increases

Coast Community College District employees have been granted an average four percent salary increase.

Granted by trustees Wednesday night, the increases are retroactive beginning Feb. 1 for the district's 700 faculty members and beginning March 1 for classified employees and management.

The increases raise the average faculty member's salary to about $22,880 annually, compared with the previous $22,000, a spokesman said.

Chancellor Norman E. Watson's previous $54,451 salary moves upward to $56,629, the spokesman said.

The increases, granted after discussion with employee bargaining units, follow the state Supreme Court's ruling that wage freezes on government employees imposed because of tax cuts brought about by Proposition 13 are unconstitutional.

Wages for government workers throughout the state had been frozen since last summer.

Lump-sum payments for the retroactive portions of the raise agreement are expected to show up on employees' paychecks sometime within the next four to six weeks, the spokesman said.

The raises are the first since July, 1977. Raises normally are granted in July but were withheld in 1978 because of the state-imposed wage freeze.

Negotiations for more raises will begin this summer, a spokesman said.

College Land Swap Rapped by Students

Agriculture students are protesting plans to trade seven acres of Coast Community College District land for property in Fountain Valley to be used for an administration center.

Spokesmen for about 16 protesting students told college trustees Wednesday that the college property on Adams Street in Costa Mesa is used to grow feed for Orange Coast College livestock.

They contend that giving the seven acres for five acres owned by Garden Grove physician Maxwell Roston is an unfair exchange and would further decrease diminishing open land at the Orange Coast College campus in Costa Mesa.

RESCO. . .

ordered it held on the assurance from Resco's attorney that his client would appear in court today.

According to Resco, the shooting occurred about midnight when he and his wife were leaving their Fountain Valley apartment to go to an all-night restaurant.

He contended several shots were fired from an auto before it pulled away.

He said he and his wife got in their car and "kept on driving" without returning to their home.

Fountain Valley police had said the only shooting incident reported to them was about a mile from Resco's apartment near Slater Avenue and Ward Street, but turned out to be a false report.

Resco's attorney, Thomas Crosby, had told Judge Kneeland Thursday his client was in hiding in fear of his life.

Both Resco and his co-defendant and brother-in-law Anthony Marone Jr., 24, of Huntington Beach have waived their right to a jury trial on the murder charge.

Police have charged that the two and Jerry Peter Fiori, also of Huntington Beach, killed Bovan to fulfill a $25,000 murder contract issued by some Newport Beach businessmen with ties to the Hare Krishna religious sect.

Fiori, the admitted trigger man, already has been convicted of second degree murder and is serving nine years in prison.

In arguing his case against Resco today prosecutor Jay Moseley contended the defendant took part in the slaying and deserves a second degree murder conviction.

He argued that Resco accompanied Marone Jr. and Fiori to the place where Bovan was shot.

And it was Resco, Moseley said, who "threw the gun into the Back Bay to help conceal the murder."

However, Crosby argued that the most his client could possibly be convicted of is "accessory after the fact of murder" for his disposal of the gun.

On Thursday Kneeland listened to arguments in Marone Jr.'s trial and is expected to rule later.

Return Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The return of a U.S. Marine from Vietnam is being delayed by the Vietnamese government because of a misunderstanding over whether the United States regards him as a war prisoner, U.S. officials say. But the officials, who asked not to be identified, said they expect the conflict to be resolved quickly and that Pfc. Robert Garwood, 33, will be allowed to leave Vietnam in a few days.
