SAN DIEGO ELITE STAR IN SEX FLING TAPES

Chase Ends in Death

A Westminster woman who led law enforcement officers in a 100 mile-per-hour chase down Beach Boulevard through Huntington Beach died early Wednesday of injuries suffered just before her toppling car rolled to a stop on a sandy beach.

Sharon Shelton Young, 24, of 13861 Locust St., died in Pacifica Hospital at 8:15 a.m., less than six hours after she allegedly ran a red light on Beach Boulevard at Bolsa Avenue, Huntington Beach police reported.

Orange County Sheriff's deputies, who patrol the Midway City area, said they saw the incident and launched a southbound chase at 2:27 a.m. on Beach Boulevard in which the woman allegedly ran several other red lights.

The deputies were joined in the pursuit by a Huntington Beach police unit just north of Pacific Coast Highway where Beach Boulevard dead ends at the juncture of the city's beach and Huntington Beach State Beach.

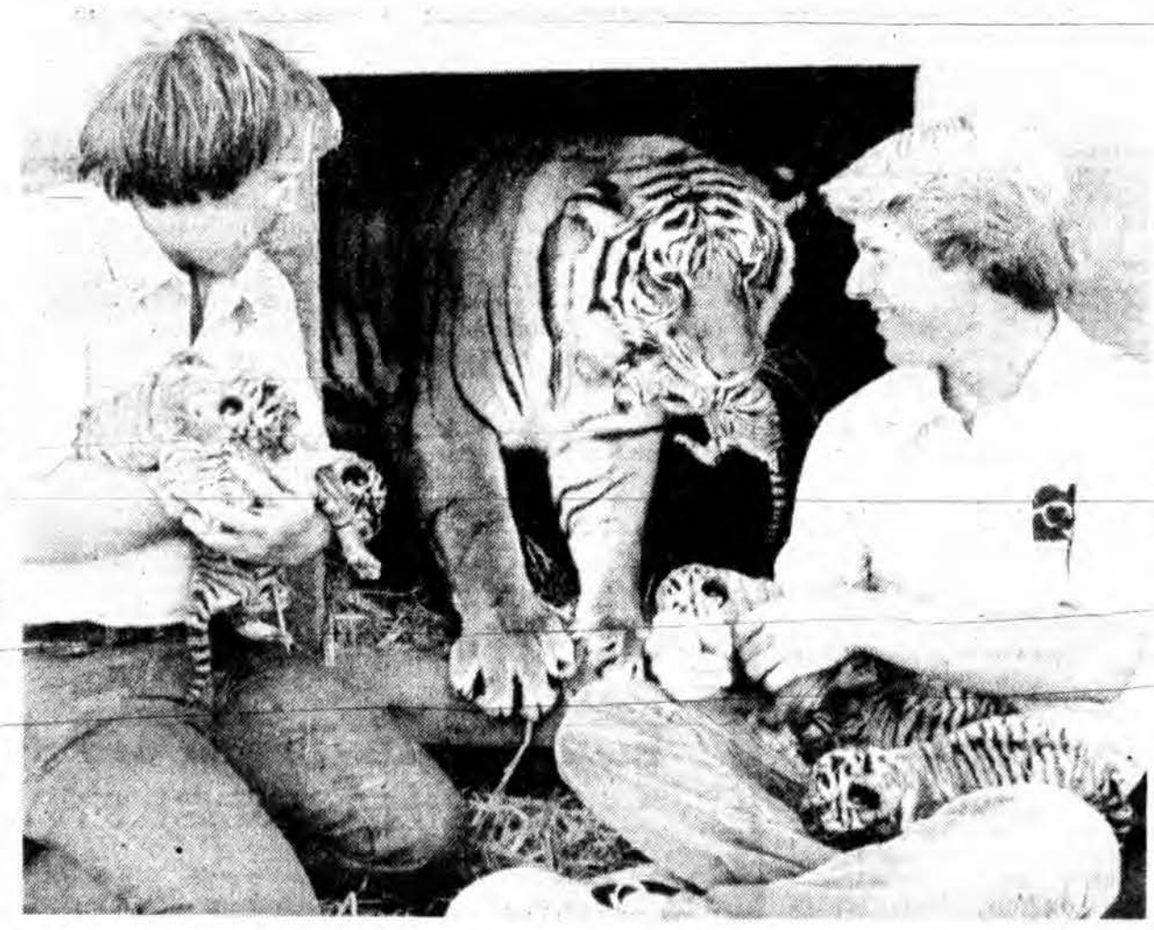

Police said Miss Young's 1978 yellow Camaro sped through the Coast Highway intersection and up a beach access road, hit a curb and a planter box and flew some 50 feet through the air before plowing into the sandy beach.

Traffic investigators said the car continued 300 feet on the beach toward the ocean, rolling over and over.

"When it stopped, you couldn't tell it was a Camaro," said one officer. "It was about the size of a Volkswagen."

Miss Young's unconscious body was found some 10 feet from where her mangled car rested, officers said. She suffered massive head injuries.

Sex Fling Tapes Seized

San Diego Elite Face Public Embarrassment

LA MESA (AP) — Some nervous swingers are upset by the vice squad's seizure and viewing of video tapes from a service that, for a $15 fee, matched couples seeking to swap mates for sexual flings.

"I sure hope nobody's looking at those tapes," Marge, an airline employee in San Diego, said Wednesday. "It would cause me much embarassment if the neighbors found out."

Their chagrin stems from a police raid Friday on Art Bell's Video Encounters office here in which 30 video tapes were confiscated.

They feature interviews Bell, 33, made with 100 members of the club and about 300 subscribers of the Video Dating Service. Also seized was $4,500 worth of videotape and camera equipment.

Bell and Marsha Boyd, 24, were arrested for investigation of pandering, solicitation for prostitution, solicitation to commit a lewd act and operating a disorderly house. Both self-described "swingers." Each was freed on $4,000 bail pending arraignment April 27 in El Cajon Municipal Court.

"A lot of people are going to be hurt by this," said Bell. "When they joined I promised them complete privacy. I have no idea what the arrests were about. We weren't doing anything illegal."

A sheriff's spokesman said the pair were arrested after vice squad officers answered a Video Encounters ad in a sex magazine offering to introduce couples who wanted to trade partners.

The missing tapes feature about 400 San Diego area residents, including "some real prominent people, such as public officials, teachers, company presidents, journalists and even some law enforcement personnel," Bell said.

Dozens of customers have been calling Bell after he informed them of the raids and the possibility they may be contacted by investigators.

"The crux of the thing is they are providing couples for sex

HAVRE de GRACE, Md. (AP) — When Susan Sarver was robbed, she thought police ought to do something about it.

Ms. Sarver, 23, called the town police to report that someone kicked in a window of her car and had taken an ounce of marijuana from the front seat. She valued the loss at $35.

She also reported the loss of two surgical clamps she used to hold marijuana cigarettes, seven cassette tapes and a camera, all valued at $131. Police said they were treating the report as a "regular larceny case."

Balboa Speech

Rousselot Says 'Intend to Win'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

John Rousselot, the arch conservative who's almost a candidate for the U. S. Senate seat held by Alan Cranston, paid a call Wednesday on some of Newport Beach's staunchest Republicans.

Speaking to the Balboa Bay Republican Women, Federated, Rousselot left little doubt that he will seek the GOP nomination to challenge California's Democratic senator in 1980.

But he hedged a bit by saying that he's only 95 percent certain he'll run.

ROUSSELOT

"This is a big state and I have to put together a structure statewide," he said.

"But I intend to win," he added.

The talk was billed as a state of the Congress report by Rousselot, a six-term Republican from San Marino.

But the speech took a decidedly anti-Cranston turn, with Rousselot comparing his stand on a variety of issues to the voting record of California's senior senator.

When asked why he plans to move out of the House of Representatives, Rousselot gave what amounted to a campaign speech.

He pointed out that the GOP already has 41 seats in the Senate and that 24 Democrats, including Cranston, will be facing campaigns in 1980.

Rousselot said he views that as an excellent opportunity for the Republicans to take a majority in the 100-member upper house.

"And Alan Cranston is a lot more vulnerable than any of you in this room might think," he added.

"He's for big government. If all the votes cast by Alan Cranston had carried, this country's deficit would be $2 trillion. That's trillion," Rousselot declared pounding the lectern for emphasis.

Bomb Threat Disrupts Council Meet

A bomb threat sent 50 spectators scurrying out of the San Clemente City Council Chambers Wednesday during the last meeting of three council members recalled by voters Jan. 23.

Police Chief Gary Brown said a male telephone caller told a city dispatcher, "You only have a few minutes to clear the building before the bomb goes off" at about 8:40 p.m.

Mayor Roy Hamm halted the meeting and told the crowd to leave the chambers while police and firemen searched for hidden explosives.

The meeting is expected to be the last time William Walker, Howard Mushett and Donna Wilkinson will sit as council members after city voters recalled the trio Jan. 23 following a bitter political feud.

Police said that a similar call was made earlier this week to a dispatcher.

Police also noted that the maximum penalty for telephoning a false bomb threat to officials is three years in a state prison or one year in a county jail.

Judge Clears Synanon Trial Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge hearing pretrial evidence in the case of Synanon founder Charles Dederich and two Synanon members ordered the courtroom cleared today of all reporters and people not participating in the case.

Municipal Judge Vincent Erickson made the order on the motion of Paul Geragos, attorney for Joseph Musico, the 28-year-old Synanon member who is charged with Lance Kenton, 23-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton, in the Oct. 10 rattlesnake attack on attorney Paul Morantz.

Dederich, 65, was brought into the courtroom in a wheelchair and helped to a seat behind the counsel table. His modishly long hair contrasted sharply with the crewcuts sported by several Synanon followers accompanying him.

Kenton wore a conservative dark business suit with neatly trimmed short hair. Musico was in a light blue business suit.

The judge made no comment in granting Geragos' motion. Geragos did not explain his reason for the request, but such requests have been routinely granted as a right of the defendant to a closed preliminary hearing. The action came just before Morantz was to take the stand.

Meanwhile, Deputy District Attorney John Watson said Kenton's fingerprint was found inside a car allegedly seen parked near attorney Morantz' home the day the attorney was bitten by the snake that had been placed in his mailbox.

The evidence was discovered Wednesday morning during a recheck of the car requested by defense attorneys, he said.

Morantz, 33, was hospitalized six days after the snakebite. He earlier had won a $300,000 lawsuit against Synanon, a $30 million business, religion and drug rehabilitation foundation.

Numerous exhibits were marked during Wednesday's session before Judge Erickson — including the now-headless snake.

Musico and Kenton were arrested at a Synanon facility in Badger, Calif., two days after the attack. They have pleaded innocent to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to commit murder.

Dederich was arrested last December at his Lake Havasu City, Ariz., home. He was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and assault and with solicitation to commit murder. Dederich allegedly made a tape recording threatening enemies.

Among evidence prosecutors plan to present at the trial is the rattlesnake, preserved in formaldehyde, and a tape recording on which a voice identified as Dederich's says:

"We're not going to mess with old-time turn-the-other-cheek religious postures. Our religious posture is don't mess with us — you can get killed dead, literally dead."

Village Fleeced

Building Collapse Unnoticed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire lambasted two federal agencies today for spending $279,000 on a rural community center so isolated that it collapsed without anyone noticing immediately.

The Wisconsin Democrat awarded his monthly Golden Fleece Award to the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration, which jointly financed the center for Merrill Township, Mich.

HUD provided $100,000 for the building and EDA spent $179,000 on a never-completed road to the center.

The center was designed for counseling, food stamp distribution, literacy classes, job training and other community services for two township villages. It was built "at a secluded site in a virtually inaccessible forest halfway between" the two villages, the senator said.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the center were held in April, 1976, he said.

On Feb. 22, the senator added, a woodsman discovered the building had fallen in and reported it to the local postmaster, who told the sheriff and the township supervisor, who in turn called HUD's Detroit regional office.

When the collapse was discovered, the structure was unpainted, unlandscaped and unfurnished. The road to it was never finished because of insufficient money.

In the small community of Bitely, Mich., today, the township supervisor, James Ware, said the decision to erect the building was made by a "darn fool" predecessor adminsistration.

"They said a snow overload collapsed the roof. Why that building collapsed and other buildings around here 50 or 60 years old are still standing, I'd like to know. It's all in the hands of the township attorney," Ware said.

The building cost $40,000 more than the grant, he said, and the township still owes money on it.

A source at HUD, who asked not to be identified, said department officials visited the site in April 1975 — before the grant was awarded — and were assured the access road would be built.

As for the center's site, access and structural condition, he said, HUD was informed by the local government and by its auditors that the federal money was being handled properly and that the construction was being carried out.

"We monitored the thing in March 1976 and again in July 1976, when construction had started, and we noted that there was no road," said the source, adding that the local government "said that they indeed would commit to building a road."

"In September, 1977, we again monitored construction defects in the building, which we brought to their attention," the source said.

Last month, he said, HUD received a letter saying the work had been done and certified by a state inspector, "and that the construction deficiency had been cleared up and certified by a state inspector."

"If Congress really wants HUD to substitute its judgment for that of the local community in some of these matters, they would have to write that into the law and give us an adequate staffing for onsite monitoring on a regular basis," the source said.

"I would guess that when we receive the Golden Fleece award, we'll send it on to the city," he added.

FDA officials did not comment immediately on Proxmire's action.

Libel Ruling Called Harmful to Public

By The Associated Press

The public, not the principal participant in the U.S. Supreme Court's latest libel law decision, actually may suffer the greatest loss from the ruling, according to some news officials.

The decision, which opens the newsroom editing process to inquiry in libel cases, was greeted, by and large, with sharp reaction from a sampling of the nation's publishers, editors and broadcasters.

Some speculated the ruling Wednesday would result in journalists serving lengthy jail terms, and newspapers steering away from major investigations.

In a 6-3 decision, Justice Byron R. White ruled that the Constitution's free press safeguards do not protect reporters and editors from being forced to explain how they prepared statements subsequently alleged to be libelous.

The decision came on a pending $44.7 million libel suit against CBS and others brought by a retired Army colonel.

Allen H. Neuharth, chairman and president of Gannett Co. and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, called the decision "one more step by the current court to weaken, erode and diminish freedom of the press and, by extension, all First Amendment freedoms.

"The American people — not just the press — were the real losers today."

His reaction was echoed by Rick Dalton, managing editor of the Topeka (Kan.) Capital-Journal, who said, "Make no mistake, this will be far more damaging to the public than the press."

CBS News President Bill Leonard said the court was "denying constitutional protection to the journalist's most precious possession — his mind, his thoughts and his editorial judgment."

James Goodale, executive vice president of The New York Times, said the decision would "hamper the really big investigation stories" because reporters would know that if they got involved in libel suits, they "in effect, are going to have to stand naked in front of the courts with respect to all their thought processes."

Ralph Otwell, editor of the Chicago Sun-Times, said that "going into the thought process of a reporter and all the subjective judgments he is forced to make is a George Orwellian invasion of the mind."

Car Plunges; Unidentified Woman Hurt

An unidentified woman is in serious condition today after she apparently lost control of her car on the San Diego Freeway in San Juan Capistrano, plunging off a 160-foot embankment and another 100-foot slope.

California Highway Patrol spokesman Tom Sapp said the woman, identified only as Jane Doe since she was not carrying identification, was in surgery today at UCI Medical Center. He described her injuries as major.

Witnesses said she was traveling at about 70 miles per hour in the fast lane south of Avery Parkway when her car began fish-tailing. The vehicle swung across the freeway, dropping off the first embankment.

The disabled vehicle then continued across Camino Capistrano and dropped off a second embankment. It came to rest just east of the railroad tracks following the 8:15 p.m. Wednesday accident.

concluded, "And another good point is that I love campaigning."

His audience applauded enthusiastically.

The Congressman never mentioned his recent resignation from the right wing John Birch Society to which he's belonged for more than 15 years. That resignation, announced earlier this week, is viewed as another indication that he's trying to move into the Republic mainstream in preparation for seeking the Senate nomination next year.

According to Rousselot, the importance of that Senate seat rests in the fact that "one senator can do 10 times as much damage or goodness as a member of the House of Representatives."

He said he sees as critical, issues such as the defeats of the pending SALT II treaty, the foreign relations appropriations for Panama and expansion of the federal bureaucracy.

He predicted that the Proposition 13 message of less government spending will bear fruit in Washington in a reduction of new laws creating new bureaucracies and in the elimination of some that already exist.

"You can be grateful," he told the audience. "Congress has done absolutely nothing this year which means you're safe. We haven't passed a lot of crazy laws."

Diedrich Team Wins Round

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SAN DIEGO—The bribery trial of Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich and architect LeRoy Rose was interrupted today while the judge decided if testimony possibly damaging to Diedrich could be given before a jury.

The eight-man, four-woman jury hearing the case was left in Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp's courtroom while the judge and contending attorneys in the case set up shop in a courtroom on another floor.

At issue in the hearing was the possible testimony of former Anaheim Hills Inc. president William Stark.

Defense attorneys James Riddett and Keith Monroe called for the hearing on the belief Stark might be asked to testify about matters of which he had no first hand knowledge.

When called to the witness stand in the almost empty courtroom, Stark conceded that in 1973 he felt apprehensive about the possibility "things were going down the path of a criminal nature."

His reference was to the company's attempt to free 2,200 acres in Anaheim Hills from an agricultural preserve agreement with the county that was thwarting its development.

It is the prosecution's contention that Diedrich and Rose were involved in a bribery-conspiracy centering on the company's effort to secure a favorable commitment from the Board of Supervisors.

Today, Stark briefly discussed a dinner meeting he attended in early 1973 with Diedrich, Rose and another company official, Richard Owen.

"I just had a gut feeling. I didn't like the way things were going.

"There was discussion of politics and finances closely related together. I don't like those kinds of things.

"I didn't like the timing of the meeting, Mr. Rose's relationship as campaign manager for Mr. Diedrich and Mr. Rose's wish to sell us some land," Stark testified.

It is the prosecution's contention that Rose and Diedrich attempted to solicit a bribe from the company by offering to sell it land in Fullerton at a price $150,000 above its true value.

At the conclusion of the 40-minute hearing, Judge Tharp ruled some of Stark's testimony could not be given before the jury.

Simply put, the judge said Stark could only testify on matters of which he had a first hand knowledge.

That ruling upheld defense attorney James Riddett's argument that Stark "has drawn conclusions with no basis in fact."

Riddett said a witness such as Stark should be limited in his testimony to what he either heard or said and not be allowed to testify to conclusions he might have correctly or incorrectly drawn.

Late Wednesday afternoon, prosecution witness Michael Remington ended what amounted to a full day of testimony.

No Zone Change

State Keeps Hold On Aliso Viejo

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The State Coastal Commission rejected a proposal Wednesday that would have limited its control over a 20,000-dwelling development inland of Laguna Beach, Aliso Viejo.

That action was just the opposite of the stand taken only a few hours earlier by regional commissioners meeting in Huntington Beach.

The state commission's recommendations — supporting no change in the existing coastal zone — will move to the state Legislature for action next month.

Richard Munsell, assistant director of the county's Environmental Management Agency, said today he was disappointed with the state commission's decision in Los Angeles. Munsell had lobbied for reduced coastal commission control over the 6,600-acre project that the county has approved.

"There's still some opportunity for the county, if it chooses, to evaluate what happened and see if it wants to work with the Legislature," said Munsell.

In contrast, representatives of Laguna Beach who had protested any reduction in the coastal zone, today expressed joy at the State Commission's action.

Lewandowski appeared before local commissioners Wednesday and noted that the City Council had passed a resolution opposing any change in the coastal boundary.

UCI Charges Expected

Pair Face Legal Action in Dumping Paper

Campus police at UC Irvine will seek criminal charges against two students suspected of destroying bundles of the student newspaper, the New University, a police spokesman said today.

Additionally, the spokesman said, findings of an investigation into theft and destruction of the newspapers will be turned over to the Dean of Students for other action.

Based on statements from witnesses and results of a photographic lineup of possible suspects, campus police narrowed the investigation to the two students, the spokesman said.

He declined to identify them until complaints are filed with the Orange County District Attorney's office.

The destruction of the newspapers occurred in March after the New University became embroiled in a controversy over publication of advertisements that contained alleged racial slurs against Iranians and Jews.

On March 14, 780 papers were stolen and the word "racist" painted on a newspaper rack. One week later, 200 copies of the paper sitting on a loading dock were doused with oil.

The spokesman said the complaint would involve charges of theft and malicious mischief. Both are misdemeanor offenses.

"We felt that if we didn't take action, the situation could get worse," the spokesman said.

Copies of the New University also were seized and destroyed following publication of coverage of a woman's Wet T-shirt contest at a Santa Ana saloon. Police have no suspects in that incident, the spokesman said.

Body Discovered After Robbery Try

Orange County sheriff's investigators, searching for clues Wednesday from a foiled April 12 Laguna Hills robbery, instead found the remains of the alleged bandit.

The body of Aaron Golden Walker, 23, of Riverside, was found in a muddy rainwater pool where he apparently fell after dying from a single gunshot wound fired by police, Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said.

A post-mortem examination indicated Walker bled to death from a gunshot wound in the heart as he ran from the alleged holdup attempt at Carl's Jr., 3002 Lake Forest Drive, Hart said.

The death bullet was one of two fired at Walker by Riverside police, who interrupted the alleged holdup and fire their guns after Walker turned toward police with his own weapon, Hart said.

Hart said Walker ran from the restaurant east toward a construction sight when he died and tumbled into the rain-swollen pool.

Investigators Wednesday went to the site to search for footprints, Walker's gun and other clues. Hart said but discovered the body in three feet of water.

It hadn't been found earlier because the pool, created by rain in the construction area, had been about four feet deep, Hart explained.

Walker's alleged robbery companion, 19-year-old Debra Reed of Riverside, is still in Orange County Jail on attempted robbery charges, Hart said.

She was arrested in a car a short distance from the fast-food restaurant, investigators reported.

The meeting is expected to be the last time William Walker, Howard Mushett and Donna Wilkinson will sit as council members after city voters recalled the trio Jan. 23 following a bitter political feud.

Police said that a similar call was made earlier this week to a dispatcher.

Police also noted that the maximum penalty for telephoning a false bomb threat to officials is three years in a state prison or one year in a county jail.

Language Skill Proves Winner

Eric Elliott

When Eric Elliott's family moved to Costa Mesa from Indio two and a half years ago, the then-sophomore in high school didn't have any friends and was bored. So he taught himself a couple of dying languages.

Elliott, now a senior at Estancia High School, said he managed to find books on Welsh and Breton, a Welsh-related language spoken in the Brittany province of France.

Later, he improved his pronunciation with the aid of cassette tapes and earned enough money to spend a summer in Wales.

"They'd forget I wasn't Welsh until I started speaking English, and then they'd expect to hear an English accent," Elliott said. "It's a rarity to find an American who speaks Welsh."

The 18-year-old won't have to earn his way to Europe this summer. He's won an eight-week trip to France, in the Alliance Francaise competition recently at UC Irvine.

Elliott, who's in his third year of French at Estancia but is reading at the fifth-year level, competed against students from throughout Orange County by delivering two impromptu short speeches in French.

"That competition was murder," Elliott said. "I'd never even made a speech before in English."

In addition, Elliott is studying German and speaks some Spanish. He downplays his abilities — "I'm fluent in English and that's it" — but his language teacher, Leonard McNutt, disagrees.

"He'll stand and talk to three of us teachers at once, carrying on conversations in German, Spanish and French simultaneously, said McNutt. He adds that he's retiring this year and Elliott is "capping my career."

"I just like learning languages," Elliott said. "It's like solving puzzles."

Although he heard Spanish spoken as he was growing up in Indian Wells, Elliott had no other background in foreign languages. He said his family isn't linguistically oriented and his trip to Wales was the only time he's traveled abroad.

And when it comes to languages, Elliott said, "I've only scratched the surface. If you look at something like Mayan and Aztec, it blows your mind." As for Oriental languages, "I think you have to be born into those. Even Russian is so complex." When he's not learning languages, Elliott said he enjoys listening to music. He likes some contemporary rock singers like Bruce Springsteen, and also an unusual form of rock called Welsh punk.

While in Wales, Elliott explained, he attended a concert by a group called Dr. Hugh L. Detestable and His Patients.

"They sang in Welsh and spat on the audience," Elliott said.

Rattler Case

Synanon Trial Court Cleared

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge hearing pretrial evidence in the case of Synanon founder Charles Dederich and two Synanon members ordered the courtroom cleared today of all reporters and people not participating in the case.

Municipal Judge Vincent Erickson made the order on the motion of Paul Geragos, attorney for Joseph Musico, the 28-year-old Synanon member who is charged with Lance Kenton, 23-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton, in the Oct. 10 rattlesnake attack on attorney Paul Morantz.

Dederich, 65, was brought into the courtroom in a wheelchair and helped to a seat behind the counsel table. His modishly long hair contrasted sharply with the crewcuts sported by several Synanon followers accompanying him.

Kenton wore a conservative dark business suit with neatly trimmed short hair. Musico was in a light blue business suit.

The judge made no comment in granting Geragos' motion. Geragos did not explain his reason for the request, but such requests have been routinely granted as a right of the defendant to a closed preliminary hearing. The action came just before Morantz was to take the stand.

Meanwhile, Deputy District Attorney John Watson said Kenton's fingerprint was found inside a car allegedly seen parked near attorney Morantz' home the day the attorney was bitten by the snake that had been placed in his mailbox.

The evidence was discovered Wednesday morning during a recheck of the car requested by defense attorneys, he said.

Morantz, 33, was hospitalized six days after the snakebite. He earlier had won a $300,000 lawsuit against Synanon, a $30 million business, religion and drug rehabilitation foundation.

Numerous exhibits were marked during Wednesday's session before Judge Erickson — including the now-headless snake.

Musico and Kenton were arrested at a Synanon facility in Badger, Calif., two days after the attack. They have pleaded innocent to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to commit murder.

Dederich was arrested last December at his Lake Havasu City, Ariz., home. He was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and assault and with solicitation to commit murder. Dederich allegedly made a tape recording threatening enemies.

Among evidence prosecutors plan to present at the trial is the rattlesnake, preserved in formaldehyde, and a tape recording on which a voice identified as Dederich's says:

"We're not going to mess with old-time turn-the-other-cheek religious postures. Our religious posture is don't mess with us — you can get killed dead, literally dead."

Chase Ends in Death

A Westminster woman who led law enforcement officers in a 100 mile-per-hour chase down Beach Boulevard through Huntington Beach died early Wednesday of injuries suffered just before her toppling car rolled to a stop on a sandy beach.

Sharon Shelton Young, 24, of 13861 Locust St., died in Pacifica Hospital at 8:15 a.m., less than six hours after she allegedly ran a red light on Beach Boulevard at Bolsa Avenue, Huntington Beach police reported.

Orange County Sheriff's deputies, who patrol the Midway City area, said they saw the incident and launched a southbound chase at 2:27 a.m. on Beach Boulevard in which the woman allegedly ran several other red lights.

The deputies were joined in the pursuit by a Huntington Beach police unit just north of Pacific Coast Highway where Beach Boulevard dead ends at the juncture of the city's beach and Huntington Beach State Beach.

Police said Miss Young's 1978 yellow Camaro sped through the Coast Highway intersection and up a beach access road, hit a curb and a planter box and flew some 50 feet through the air before plowing into the sandy beach.

Traffic investigators said the car continued 300 feet on the beach toward the ocean, rolling over and over.

"When it stopped, you couldn't tell it was a Camaro," said one officer. "It was about the size of a Volkswagen."

Water Price Hike Nixed

Plans to raise the price of water pumped from Orange County's underground basin to help meet Orange County Water District operating costs were scrapped Wednesday night.

District directors resolved to dip into reserve funds and to temporarily curtail some capital improvement projects to hold down water costs.

An earlier plan called for increasing the price of domestic water by $3 an acre foot, a move that would have increased the average north-county area's home water bill about $3 a year.

Directors voted to keep domestic water prices at their current rate, but did increase the price of water used for irrigating crops by $5 an acre foot.

That increase would hike the Irvine Company's water bill by an estimated $37,500 a year, said Nereus Richardson, district engineer. The firm is the largest agricultural water user in the county, he said.

Richardson said this morning that even though OCWD domestic water prices won't go up, coastal area residents probably will pay more for water anyway.

formed them of the raids and the possibility they may be contacted by investigators.

Members of the vice squad have viewed the tapes, in which clients bare their sexual fantasies and preferences, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"The crux of the thing is they are providing couples for sex and in turn are receiving money for providing that service, which is an act of prostitution," said a vice officer who asked to remain unidentified.

Bell said that in the videotape interviews, couples or individuals are asked about their fantasies, sexual likes and dislikes and that interviewees are fully clothed. Two couples appeared topless, Bell said, but there was no sexual contact.

Bell's attorney, George Haverstick, called the arrests "just another extension of our times. In the '60s, drugs were the problem, now it's sex."

Wind Beaches Yacht

Strong winds and dense fog along the Baja California coast put one of the yachts returning from the Cabo San Lucas race on the beach near Punto Abrojos, it was learned today.

Grounded in a desolate area was Windmiller, 37-foot sloop owned by John Miller of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club.

The boat was being returned from Cabo San Lucas by two unidentified couples. The boat reportedly went aground on a sloping beach, damaging the rudder and propeller. None of the passengers was injured.

The two women of the crew were taken off the beach by an aircraft flown to the area by a NHYC member, according to George West, chairman of the race.

West said the hull was apparently not damaged and a new rudder, propeller and shaft is being flown to the area for possible repairs at low tide. An attempt will be made to refloat the boat at high tide.

The accident occurred Friday night and communication with local friends was made by way of the vessel's radio.

Ironically, the returning boats have been bucking strong northerly winds, the kind of weather they had hoped for during the race, in which they had strong southerly winds.

Cyclist Hurt In Smashup

A Costa Mesa motorcyclist suffered a broken knee Monday when his accelerator reportedly jammed and he jounced across a lawn at 50 miles an hour, slamming into a parked car and a trailer, police reported today.

Michael Eugene McDaniel, 22, of 203 Rose Lane, was treated but not admitted at Costa Mesa Memorial Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Police said McDaniel was riding near his home at 2 p.m. when the accident occurred. McDaniel reportedly hit a car parked in the driveway of 220 Rose Lane, bounced off and hit the trailer parked nearby.

Violence Study Bill Backed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assemblyman John Vasconcellos' bill to determine if violence is caused by diet, sexual repression, a lack of touching or some other such thing, has won its first committee test.

But the San Jose Democrat's AB 23 was sent Monday to the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, which killed last year's version.

EVIDENCE NIXED. .

In one segment, he is pictured as the professional through which a land development company in 1973 funneled $55,000 to Diedrich in return for a favorable land use decision.

Remington in the prosecution's theory is also cast in the role of the conduit through which at least $30,000 in fees paid to Rose in late 1974 by the same development company were passed on to Diedrich.

In testimony Tuesday, Remington, who was testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution, labeled the $55,000 he had passed on to Diedrich as a loan.

Wednesday, however, he inched back from that label when cross-examined by defense attorneys.

That pullback came when he was asked if he still believes the money he handled in 1973 to have been a loan to Diedrich.

"I would have to give a qualified yes," Remington replied.

After the jury was told to leave the courtroom, the former Fullerton attorney told Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp he is now "highly suspicious" of the 1973 transactions in which he was the middle man.

Later in the day, however, the former Diedrich-Rose ally again banged heads with the team of defense lawyers.

This time the issue was at least $30,000 sent him by Rose in late 1974, money Remington said arrived unsolicited.

And, Remington testified, he passed the money on to Diedrich in cash after deducting the amount of taxes he would pay because of the "income" received from Rose.

"No, I never performed any services—legal or otherwise — for Mr. Rose," Remington said.

But Rose defense lawyer Sylvan Aronson said Remington must have served Rose because there were legal bills to support the payment sent him by the architect.

"I'm telling you, Mr. Aronson, I never did any legal work, never did anything to earn a finder's fee, never did anything for LeRoy," Remington insisted.

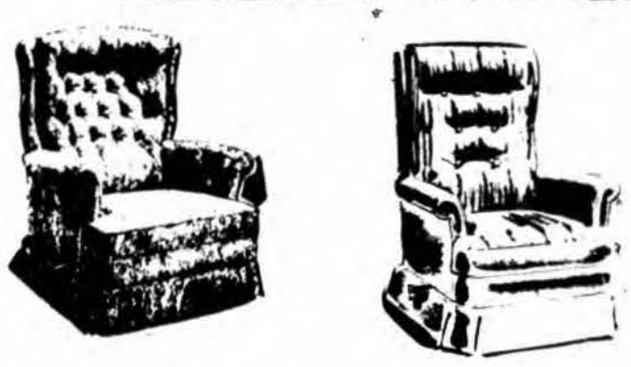

He said the bills Aronson held in his hand were drawn after the unsolicited checks were received from Rose.

The billings in the form of ledger cards, Remington said, were "generated" after the money was received and according to instructions in covering letters as a way to account for the transactions.

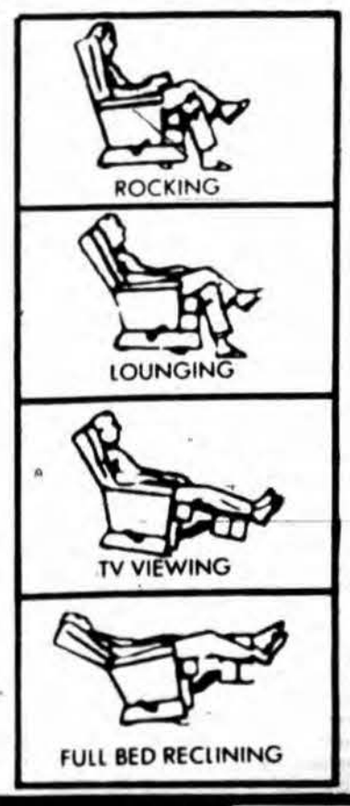

"We had to balance the account so ledger sheets were generated," Remington testified.

But his exchange with Aronson set the stage for a defense contention that the money Rose paid to Remington was for services rendered and not as part of a bribery-conspiracy.

CHAD GREEN PLAYS IN TIJUANA FOUNTAIN
Leukemia Victim 'Most Alert Kid on Block'

Laetrile Flap

4 Quit Posts in Chad Case

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four local officials of the Leukemia Society of America have resigned after being ordered to quit helping a 3-year-old Massachusetts boy being treated with Laetrile for leukemia.

"You don't own me," Bob Deane said he replied to letters accusing him of violating the society's stand against use of the substance produced from apricot pits.

THE U.S. FOOD AND DRUG Administration calls Laetrile unproven in cancer treatment.

In court battles lasting more than a year, Gerald and Diane Green lost custody of their leukemia-stricken son and were prohibited from feeding him Laetrile, which the U.S. Food and Drug Administration calls unproven as a treatment for cancer.

The Greens took the youngster to a Laetrile clinic in Tijuana across the Mexican border from San Diego in January. A subsequent contempt of court order is being appealed in Massachusetts.

MEANWHILE, THE GREENS ARE living rent-free in a house owned by an unidentified American at the south outskirts of Tijuana. They take Chad to the clinic daily for chemotherapy and Laetrile treatments.

"Chad's doing fine," said Deane in an interview Wednesday. "He's studying Spanish and is the most alert kid on the block."

A delivery of donated food and clothing is made every week or two by Gail Brinkworth, who owns a San Diego printing supply company.

IN HIS WALKOUT, DEANE, administrator of the San Diego Senior Citizens' Medical Clinic, was joined by Ted Millan and John Lynch, directors of the Leukemia Society chapter, and by John Helmer, the treasurer, like Deane all unpaid volunteers.

Together they started a new charity called The Nice Guys with an initial project of helping the Children's Workshop in San Diego, for youngsters suffering learning, speech and hearing handicaps.

'No Hope For Life' In Baby

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A second UCLA medical professor testified today that the infant Dr. William Waddill allegedly strangled had no hope for life.

Dr. John Menkes, clinical professor of pediatrics and neurology, testified that, even without the effects of the saline solution used to perform an abortion on the infant's 18-year-old unwed mother, the infant wouldn't have lived.

He contended hospital personnel used inadequate resuscitation on the two-pound, 15-ounce infant before Waddill arrived at the Westminster Community Hospital nearly 20 minutes after the infant's birth.

And when the effects of saline is taken into account, Dr. Menkes testified, "the chances decrease from essentially nil to even farther down.

"The high concentration of saline is known to be damaging to the brain and essentially damages many areas," the professor continued.

"I just saw a child like this last week, as a matter of fact," Menkes told the Orange County Superior Court jury.

His analysis was nearly identical to that of another UCLA professor who testified in the trial Wednesday.

Dr. Cynthia Barrett said that, when Waddill arrived 20 to 25 minutes after delivery of the alleged abortion survivor, "I think death was inevitable."

Dr. Barrett told the jury her own experience was with premature infants, not with infants who had been exposed to saline abortion solution.

But even without the presence of saline, Dr. Barrett testified, an infant of the same age as the one known as Baby Girl Weaver and with the same weak life signs would need immediate revival attempts starting within the first minute after birth.

Dr. Barrett went on to say that personnel at Westminster Community Hospital lost any chances to revive the infant by taking the wrong emergency steps in the baby's first moments of life.

"If I walked into a hospital and someone said this baby is 20 minutes of age," Dr. Barrett continued, "I would probably say 'has this baby been baptized and do the parents want it to be'?"

Starting intense resuscitation after 20 minutes, the doctor continued, "would be below the medical standard in any community in this country."

Waddill's attorney, Charles Weedman, has contended the two-pound, 15-ounce infant was already dead or on the verge of death when Waddill arrived at the hospital.

Traffic Tied

Truck Flips; Cars Halted

A traffic jam that involved thousands of motorists and plugged the San Diego Freeway for more than four hours occurred Wednesday when a dump truck loaded with asphalt blew a tire and overturned near the freeway's interchange with the 605-San Gabriel Freeway.

CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY Patrol officers called to the scene said the asphalt spewed from the truck when the vehicle pitched over onto the ice plant verge.

They said cars backed up from Long Beach to Costa Mesa while work crews struggled to clear the goo from the highway.

OFFICERS SAID normal traffic was restored about 6 p.m., four hours after the truck overturned. They said the driver of the vehicle was unhurt.

Rousselot Says, 'I Intend to Win'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

John Rousselot, the arch conservative who's almost a candidate for the U. S. Senate seat held by Alan Cranston, paid a call Wednesday on some of Newport Beach's staunchest Republicans.

Speaking to the Balboa Bay Republican Women, Federated, Rousselot left little doubt that he will seek the GOP nomination to challenge California's Democratic senator in 1980.

But he hedged a bit by saying that he's only 95 percent certain he'll run.

ROUSSELOT

"This is a big state and I have to put together a structure statewide," he said.

"But I intend to win," he added.

The talk was billed as a state of the Congress report by Rousselot, a six-term Republican from San Marino.

But the speech took a decidedly anti-Cranston turn, with Rousselot comparing his stand on a variety of issues to the voting record of California's senior senator.

When asked why he plans to move out of the House of Representatives, Rousselot gave what amounted to a campaign speech.

He pointed out that the GOP already has 41 seats in the Senate and that 24 Democrats, including Cranston, will be facing campaigns in 1980.

Rousselot said he views that as an excellent opportunity for the Republicans to take a majority in the 100-member upper house.

"And Alan Cranston is a lot more vulnerable than any of you in this room might think," he added.

"He's for big government. If all the votes cast by Alan Cranston had carried, this country's deficit would be $2 trillion. That's trillion," Rousselot declared pounding the lectern for emphasis.

With his face slightly flushed and his blue eyes flashing, he concluded, "And another good point is that I love campaigning."

His audience applauded enthusiastically.

The congressman never mentioned his recent resignation from the right wing John Birch Society to which he's belonged for more than 15 years. That resignation, announced earlier this week, is viewed as another indication that he's trying to move into the Republic mainstream in preparation for seeking the Senate nomination next year.

According to Rousselot, the importance of that Senate seat rests in the fact that "one senator can do 10 times as much damage or goodness as a member of the House of Representatives."

He said he sees as critical, issues such as the defeats of the pending SALT II treaty, the foreign relations appropriations for Panama and expansion of the federal bureaucracy.

Nuclear Exercise Started

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A U.S. bomber carrying six nuclear warheads crashes into the Nevada desert, and deadly radiation seeps from the torn weapons.

With that scenario, a 500-member team of military and civilian experts began a $1.6-million, week-long exercise Wednesday to evaluate the ability of the nation's military and civilian officials to handle a nuclear accident.

Although it comes three weeks after the worst nuclear scare in the United States — the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa. — the project at the Nevada Test Site 100 miles north of Las Vegas has been in preparation for four years. It is a joint effort of the federal energy and defense departments.

"Because we haven't had an accident involving nuclear weapons since the 1968 incident in Spain, we don't have the real-life expertise," said Lt. Col. Bill McGee, Defense Nuclear Agency public affairs officer.

In that accident, a U.S. military plane carrying atomic weapons crashed into the sea off the Spanish coast. The weapons later were recovered.

In the Nevada exercise, sections of a wrecked plane were strewn about to duplicate the wreckage of a C-141. Six mannequins — representing dead or injured crew members — were in place along the impact zone.

To add to the realism of the exercise, a small amount of diluted radium 223 was spread throughout the 350-yard-square test area Wednesday.

McGee said the radium 223 was in liquid form and "can't get into the air.

"We're talking about one ten-millionth of a gram, with a half life of 11 days," he said, adding that a nuclear explosion could not occur.

"The real concern would be if the warhead ruptured on impact and the inside of the radioactive component warhead was consumed, the gases could travel several thousand miles by wind."

The on-scene commander will be confronted with all the predictable predicaments of such a crisis, said McGee.

"We'll have mock press briefings, irate farmers, demonstrators—all the things likely to occur," he said.

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

Performance Handicap Racing Fleet yachts will virtually own this year's Newport to Ensenada race with 440 of the 552 entries scheduled to start Saturday at noon.

Next highest group is the International Offshore Rule ratings with 86 boats. The multihulls, racing under the Ocean Racing Catamaran Association rule has 19 entries and the Midget Ocean Racing Fleet has six.

The PHRF is divided into seven classes. The largest group is PHRF-G (the lowest ratings) with 87, Class C haa 79, Class B 70, Class D 60, Class F 51, Class A 48 and Class E 45.

The IOR is divided into three classes with 35 in Class A, 21 in Class B and 30 in Class C.

ORCA and MORF will both race as one class each.

The top-rated boats in PHRF are the 69-foot Drifter with a time allowance of minus 1.6667 hours and Ragtime with a minus 1.2500 hours.

'Forgotten' Con Found In Austria

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A man picked up April 1 for questioning about an auto accident, then placed in a cell and "forgotten" for 18 days, was found and hospitalized Wednesday. Doctors said his survival without food was "nearly a miracle."

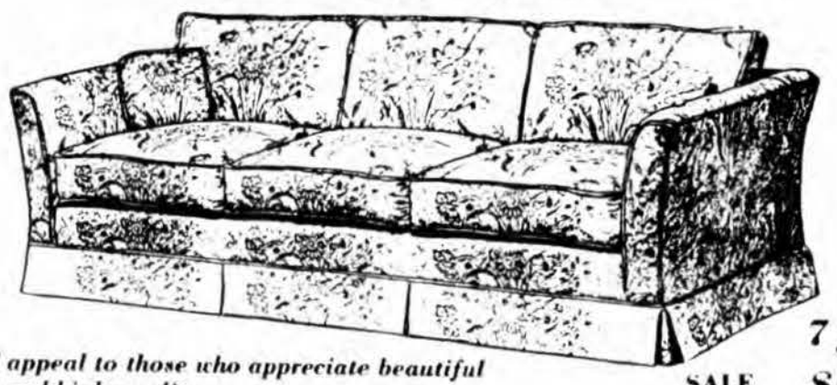

The man was rushed from a cell at Hoechst, in the western Vorarlberg province, to an intensive-care unit at Bregeyas. He was identified as Andreas Mihavecs, a resident of Bregenz.

There was no explanation why no one checked the cell since April 1 or why Mihavecs failed to call attention to his presence. Interior Minister Erwin Lanc ordered an inquiry.

Gasoline Gamble

POOPED OUT AT THE PUMP: Harriett Wieder, the former Huntington Beach City Council person now serving on our august Orange County Board of Supervisors, wants to take the guessing out of gasoline.

Mrs. Wieder is currently pushing a proposal that would force service station operators to post pump prices in a conspicious manner.

The idea is that the motorist would then know how sorely he's going to be fleeced before he drives up to the pump and gets fleeced.

THAT ASIDE, I think Mrs. Wieder's price posting idea is a most noble gesture. Noble, but empty. Just like your gas tank.

Trouble is, in the current gasoline shortage scare, people are in a panic to line up at the stations and fill their tanks before somebody else gets the last gallon.

Gas Station Customer Rolling for Two Gallons and His Pet Turtle

Nobody cares about the price. They're frantic. They'll pay anything. So this allows the petroleum people to charge just about anything.

IT MAY REACH the point where you drive up to the pump and the friendly operator asks, "Okay, buddy, how much do you have in your pocket today?"

"I think I have fifteen bucks."

"Fifteen bucks it is, then. Shall I fill it up?"

Now, if motorists ever return to reason and sanity, competition may also return to the service station dodge. You might even see some innovative merchandising.

Maybe an operator will post a sign declaring:

"UNLEADED — 50.9 Cents." Under that, in tiny type, it will add, "Per Half-Gallon."

Other operators with imagination might cater to the sinful lust for gambling that lurks in the hearts of many in the populace.

They won't just have permanent prices in the little windows on the gasoline pumps. They'll install price numbers that spin around and then stop, like the slot machines at Las Vegas.

YOU DRIVE UP to the pump and pull the one-armed lever. The price numbers spin and stop, one at a time.

Then the gas station operator says, "Gee, tough luck, mister. You hit 99.9 per gallon.

Recession Due?

Economy Dips In 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy sputtered to its lowest growth rate in a year in the first quarter, a 0.7 percent rate of increase that indicated the economy could be dipping toward a recession if the trend continues, government figures showed today.

The increase in the gross national product in January through March was less than expected and was down sharply from a 6.9 percent rate of growth in the final quarter of 1978. The first-quarter rate was the lowest since a 0.1 percent decline in the same period last year.

THE SHARP slowdown in growth seemed certain to support the argument of G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, that economic growth already is slowing and that further measures to dampen the economy could plunge the nation into a serious recession.

While the 0.7 percent rate of growth was near the recession level of less than zero percent growth, Miller and top administration experts believe the economy will rebound at least partly from the low first-quarter growth, thus avoiding a recession in the near future.

The unusually severe winter in many parts of the country was at least partly to blame for the slow economic growth in the first quarter. But it probably also reflected efforts by the government to slow the economy through high interest rates and reduced federal spending.

THE ADMINISTRATION is aiming for overall economic growth this year of about 2.2 percent, down from 4 percent last year but at a level it believes is necessary to help combat inflation.

The Commerce Department said in its GNP report that inflation in the first quarter increased at an 8.7 percent annual rate, up from an 8.2 percent rate in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The department said the slower economic growth in January through March was caused by an 0.3 percent decline in sales activity throughout the economy, a sharp turnaround from a 7.2 percent annual rate of increase in the final three months of 1978.

"THE DECREASE . . . reflected decreases in consumer expenditures for goods, construction outlays, net exports and government purchases," the department said.

The figures on economic growth were computed at an annual rate, meaning it would be the total growth for a year if the first-quarter levels were continued for an entire 12-month peridod.

The Commerce Department said the GNP, the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, was at an annual rate of $1,413.3 billion in the first quarter, after discounting for the effects of inflation.

Fire Injures 34

Thirty-four students were injured, one critically, when fire broke out before dawn today in a dormitory at George Washington University in downtown Washington. Hundreds, including the three above, were routed from the building, some jumping from windows. Cause of the fire was not immediately established.

Marijuana Research Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing increased marijuana use among teen-agers, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is calling for a major study of the drug.

Califano asked for the review and preparation of a "long-range broad-based research plan" Wednesday in sending a report to Congress.

THE ANNUAL report said 16.1 percent of people between the ages of 12 and 17 were users of marijuana in 1977, compared with 12.4 percent the year before.

"The dramatic increase in the use of marijuana by our youth is particularly alarming," Califano said in a prepared statement.

"It is sheer folly for millions of young Americans to indulge in a drug while so little is known about its long-term consequences — and when much of what is known suggests, for example, adverse pulmonary effects and psychomotor impairment."

THE FORMAL HEW report called for further study on the effects of marijuana on humans, particularly "the implications of chronic use and the possible effects on users who may be especially vulnerable," such as children.

U.N. Troops Hurt In Lebanon Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese Christian militiamen, fighting to drive "foreign troops" out of the vest-pocket republic they proclaimed in southern Lebanon, wounded eight U.N. troops today in an attack on the international peace force's administrative base there.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis convened his Cabinet in emergency session today to consider "coercive action" against the Israeli-backed Christian rebels in the south.

Government sources said Sarkis was expected to order a court-martial that would try Maj. Saad Haddad, leader of the rebels, on treason charges and sentence him to death in absentia.

Union Leader Indicted

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ben Schmoutey, head of Nevada's largest union, and six other people have been indicted by a federal grand jury after a two-year investigation into a series of restaurant bombings in Las Vegas and Stateline, Nev.

U.S. Summary

Downstream residents looked for higher ground today as the rampaging Pearl River moved relentessly toward the Gulf of Mexico after causing an estimated half billion dollars damage to the state's capital city and leaving some 17,000 persons homeless.

"We've still got a serious situation here," Viva Polk, a spokeswoman for the city of Jackson, Miss., said Wednesday. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricity because of damage to equipment."

Meanwhile, in Alabama, the bulging Alabama and Tombigee rivers sent many persons living near their banks packing to the homes of friends, relatives or Red Cross shelters. President Carter declared the state a major disaster area late Wednesday.

And in Southeast Texas, hundreds of residents chased from their homes in Conroe faced the prospect of more flooding today after a stubborn thunderstorm poured more than 8 inches of rain on the area Wednesday, inundating schools, houses, businesses and highways.

Forty miles downstream from Jackson, tiny Georgetown lay deserted Wednesday as the Pearl advanced. A spokesman for the Mississippi Power and Electric Co. said the flooding had cut electrical power to about 160 customers in the community, and telephone connections into the town were sporadic Wednesday night.

Farther south in Columbia, Miss., Marion County Civil Defense Director Jim Thornhill said 1,500 persons had fled their homes in the face of record floodwaters.

"Everything is cool as a cucumber in Columbia. Now we're just waiting for it to happen," said Thornhill. "We're sitting back and waiting for the inevitable."

A crest of 27.5 feet is expected Saturday at Columbia, and the river will probably peak at 34.5 feet at Monticello the same day.

"The rising water — it has stopped," Jackson Mayor Dale Danks said Wednesday after the Pearl began dropping from its record crest of 42.25 feet. By 9 p.m., it had fallen to 41.4 feet and was still going down.

Nuclear Stoppage Rejected

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric stockholders have rejected a proposal which would have halted the utility's construction of nuclear power plants in California.

And at the annual shareholders meeting Wednesday in San Francisco, a plan to convert the Diablo Canyon nuclear powerplant to a wind and solar energy generating unit was also overwhelmingly defeated.

The two proposals were placed on the shareholders' ballots following a year-long legal battle with the utility by Phyllis Appelgarth, 61, PG&E stockholders and members of the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of 25 state environmental groups

STATE

Allegations Denied

Deukmejian told a Police Academy press conference Wednesday that one of his agents reported seeing the documents during the search early this month, but did not remove them.

Job Return Ordered

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — County supervisors succeeded on their third attempt Wednesday to have the court issue a back-to-work order against striking sheriff's deputies, but the 350 member Service Employees International Union voted Wednesday night to join the deputies' strike.

Superior Court Judge Arden Jensen signed the temporary restraining order against the deputies, forbidding them from striking or engaging in a work slowdown.

Incentives Asked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy is expected to ask the state Public Utilities Commission today to speed up its decision on whether to provide incentives for installing energy-saving systems, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Under one such incentive system, utility companies would provide the money for customers to install cost-effective devices such as solar heaters and other energy-saving devices.

Africa Good?

Brown, Ronstadt Said Closer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The relationship between Jerry Brown and Linda Ronstadt is still as good if not better than before their African trip, friends of Brown were reported as saying today.

They added that the major trouble happened when they walked into a corps of international reporters in Nairobi who were primarily waiting for permission to enter war-torn Uganda, and didn't have anything better to do than follow them around — especially Miss Ronstadt.

THE FRIENDS WERE quoted today in the San Jose Mercury and the Long Beach Independent.

As for Miss Ronstadt contemplating an early return home, Jacques Barzaghi, a friend and aide to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., said it was "not because she was angry at Jerry. It was because she was being hassled so much by photographers, by the increasing media situation."

French-born Barzaghi and Polish-born Jan Krajewski, a long-time friend and Los Angeles campaign contributor, preceded the Democratic governor and the singer, and accompanied them much of the way.

"SHE COULDN'T walk out of her room. Everywhere she went she was followed by 20 people popping flash pictures of her. It was incredible," Barzaghi said.

Krajewski said the reporters awaiting the fate of the Idi Amin government were in the same Nairobi hotel as Brown and Miss Ronstadt.

"She got a little bit upset," with the turmoil during a shopping trip, Krajewski said.

Barzaghi said that "their relationship can only be better" as a result of the trip.

Bad Spot in Road

Cars Crash at Same Site

VENTURA (AP) — A man driving a 1977 Datsun south along U.S. Highway 101 skidded into the ocean near the Santa Barbara-Ventura county line Wednesday at the same spot another Datsun went into the sea Sunday, authorities said.

James Bogardus, 55, waded ashore uninjured following the accident, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Shirley Robertson of Oxnard, whose age was not known, died when her 1976 Datsun swerved off the highway and plunged into the waves.

Skid marks from Bogardus' car overlapped those left from Ms. Robertson's, officials said. They added that Bogardus probably was saved by his seat belt, while Ms. Robertson, who had not fastened the safety device, was knocked unconscious and drowned.

Newspaper to Appeal Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Examiner Editor and Publisher Reg Murphy says his newspaper will appeal a Superior Court jury's $4.56 million libel judgment against the paper stemming from an investigative series the Examiner ran two years ago.

"We'll appeal immediately, of course," Murphy said in a statement released by the newspaper. "We believe there was prejudicial handling of the trial."

The San Francisco Superior Court jury of nine women and three men reached its verdict Wednesda night after nine hours of deliberation in the $30 million libel suit against the Examiner, reporter Raul Ramirez and free-lance journalist Lowell Bergman.

The two reporters have been assisted in their defense by a committee formed of some 400 persons — including 200 journalists. The group has described the case as "a test whether journalists can fairly pursue their stories without intimidation . . ."

The 1976 suit, filed by police homicide investigators Edward Erdelatz and Frank McCoy, plus former assistant district attorney Pierre Merle, involved a front-page series the afternoon newspaper ran in May 1976.

Quoting numerous sources, some from sworn affidavits, the Examiner said it had uncovered evidence that a bank teller and reputed Chinatown gang member was convicted of a 1972 murder based "on perjured and misleading testimony exacted by a prosecution that badly needed a conviction."

The officials denied the story and said it damaged their reputations.

Couples 'Beware'

Marvin Case Precedent Setting?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legal experts predict the Marvin vs. Marvin decision will spawn more court battles between unmarried couples, and one feminist leader says that in light of the ruling, a woman should spell out property claims before washing a single dish for her lover.

Both Marvins claimed victory Wednesday after Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 to compensate her for the six years she says she wasted by living with actor Lee Marvin.

Lawyers not involved with the precedent-setting case were split on the issue of whether the ruling by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall would have an immediate effect on unmarried couples.

MISS MARVIN SAID after the ruling was announced she considers it a victory but wants to put the entire episode behind her.

"Last night, I took down every memento of Lee, every picture," she said. "The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now. . . . I'm going to try to put this behind me and live my life.

Miss Marvin had sued the actor for $1.8 million. However, Marshall rejected her claim that an implied contract entitled her to half the actor's earnings during their cohabitation.

He awarded her the six-figure sum "for rehabilitation purposes" to help her become self-sustaining.

"I couldn't have hoped for more. They lost on every charge, on every one. The award doesn't pertain to the points of law," said actor Lee Marvin.

The actor said he had accepted the concept of rehabilitation payments when he paid Miss Marvin $22,000 after they separated nine years ago.

Marvin, 55, later flew with his wife, Pamela, to New York, where he told reporters at Kennedy Airport, "Anybody today has to be very cautious about anything that isn't authorized or condoned by the government," referring to live-in relationships.

The judge's award was based on a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that gave judges discretion to impose an equitable remedy in cases where couples lived together without a contract.

In New York, feminist Gloria Steinem told the Daily News the ruling was sexist.

"I think women will be far more likely to insist on a financial agreement in writing before they give up their careers or wash even one dish and that's probably healthy," she said.

Legal experts agree the ruling is likely to encourage suits by other spurned live-in lovers. But they differed on whether the courts will be flooded or simply sprinkled with similar actions.

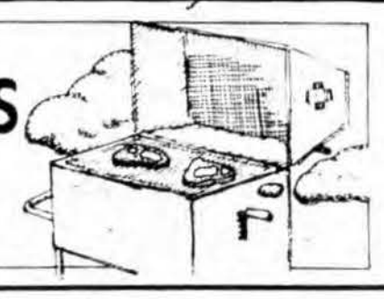

"The decision was surprising to me because it means that there will be a tremendous flood of this kind of litigation," said Stuart Walzer, a Beverly Hills attorney.

"I thought he (Marshall) was conservative and his instincts would push him away from encouraging litigation. I suppose he figured in view of the overall amount demanded, this was a modest sum. But unfortunately, it will be touted as a great triumph and this will encourage more litigation," said Walzer.

School Site Use Poses Problems

Three elementary schools are scheduled to close soon in Costa Mesa and Newport-Mesa district trustees are running into a dilemma in deciding what to do with the sites.

They've wisely indicated they don't want to sell the schools, which might be needed again someday.

However, in reviewing potential lessees, they've run into what could be a conflict between the interest of taxpayers in general and the desires of the schools' neighbors.

Neighbors don't want much more traffic or heavy night use. Both of these could be expected to some degree if Coastline Community College, one of the interested groups, were to lease a school.

If trustees lease to a public entity, such as Fairview State Hospital or the County of Orange, they don't have to take bids. But if they choose a private party, bids followed by a public auction are required, giving Coastline an opportunity to lease a site.

However, many public entities would like to pay a lot less than fair market value for a lease — perhaps only a token $1 a year.

Trustees, who indicated they don't like that idea, would seem well advised to seek something approaching a fair market rent, for starters. Then, if there are community needs that mitigate this, well and good. Costa Mesans who still are paying off bonded indebtedness on the sites shouldn't routinely be asked to subsidize some other government agency.

Furthermore, private groups such as the Orange Coast YMCA, schools and day-care centers frequently offer services valued by the public at large and should at least have an opportunity to consider one or more of the sites.

Perhaps the way to protect neighbors against unreasonable noise and traffic is through lease restrictions, an option school staff members have been asked to explore.

At present it looks as if open bidding on the three sites, all of them much sought after, coupled with reasonable lease restrictions, would best serve all the residents of Costa Mesa.

Sign Solution

The issue of how to enforce Costa Mesa's 1974 sign ordinance appears to have been settled, at least for the time being.

After much discussion and legal consultation, the City Council this week approved a motion by Councilman Donn Hall that, while not technically amending the ordinance, will delay full enforcement by two years.

Signs that have permits but are scheduled to be phased out will get a breather while the city steps up its fight against illegal signs which have no permits.

Officials of the Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce said the move doesn't quite go as far as they would have liked but it will have their support.

Understandably, no compromise is going to please everyone.

Chamber officials have a valid point — that it's unfair to penalize owners of signs that were legally erected but no longer meet sign ordinance restrictions, while unpermitted signs continue to escape penalty.

And there are certainly some merchants who oppose any form of sign restrictions on the grounds that signs larger or more numerous than the new (1974) ordinance permits are essential to their business.

But a clutter of large, garish signs fighting to outshout each other is a disservice to a business area, to the customers and to the community generally.

Bus Shelter Needs

A proposal to provide free bus shelters for the City of Costa Mesa was turned down by the City Council this week because the structures would have included two large advertisements.

Although American Bus Shelter Company Inc.'s proposal, which included free maintenance and insurance, was an attractive one, a majority of council members said they believe the advertising-financed shelters would conflict with city efforts to cut the number and size of signs in the city.

They said they support the idea of more bus shelters but just couldn't stomach the prospect of what in effect become 4- by 6-foot lighted billboards at night.

Meanwhile, they said, they've just committed $35,000 to building and maintaining more shelters.

It is certainly to be hoped that the council will continue to seek acceptable ways of building — or having private interests build — shelters and bus schedule posts to encourage bus use and aid the elderly, young and handicapped.

Boyd/Dating

By L.M. BOYD

Our Love and War man has been looking over the report of a dating-service manager. When men in this particular outfit refuse to go out a second time with the girls to whom they're first introduced, those men are asked why. They accuse the girls of having one or more of these seven faults: Self-centered. Aloofness. Conspicuous mannerisms. Critical attitude. Over-eagerness. Plain stupidity. And — yes, they call it a fault — superior intelligence. None of these marvelous men said he refused to go out with the girl a second time just because he simply wasn't up to handling the little lady.

If all the water going over Niagara Falls went into bathtubs, it would fill about 4,000 every second.

Politics, Health Affect Summit

WASHINGTON — The struggle between the White House and the Kremlin over where Jimmy Carter will meet Leonid Brezhnev in the much-delayed summit conference is heating up every day, with no quick solution in sight.

Holding the whip hand is Brezhnev. He can genuinely plead poor health as a bar to travel. Soviet diplomats here have bluntly informed the White House that the ailing Soviet president, although only 72 years old, is under doctor's orders not to fly. That means a summit that can fairly easily be reached by train: read Geneva or Vienna.

But the freedom of Brezhnev's whip hand is restricted by the fact that it is the Russian's turn to come to the U.S., in return for Richard Nixon's summit trip to see Brezhnev in 1974, and Gerald Ford's to Vladivostok also in 1974. Carter's top political aides and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski have warned him that an agreement to meet Brezhnev on Soviet soil would be exceedingly politically damaging to Carter. Indeed, they warn it might even hurt in the Senate SALT debate.

BUT THERE'S another reason Carter won't go to Moscow: the juicy prospect of a pre-election summit there in 1980. If Carter met Brezhnev on Soviet soil in 1979, a repeat in 1980 would be out of the question.

With a Brezhnev flight to Washington or Alaska now out, the likeliest prospect seems to be Vienna, much easier to get to than Geneva. But it's not decided and some Carter advisers have been talking up Warsaw, Poland, homeland of Brzezinski's family. The problem with Warsaw is twofold: for Carter, its position as capital city of the Warsaw Pact would make it embarrassing; for Brezhnev, it would be unthinkable to meet Carter in a Soviet satellite after Carter had refused to go to Moscow.

TEDDY'S DIET

It may not qualify as a "crash" diet, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's new, abstemious eating habits have reduced his bulk from 222 to 210 pounds in the last three weeks.

That is not enough, say Kennedy staffers who are pushing him to get down to at least 200 pounds. The senator's breakfast is now half a grapefruit and a cup of coffee without cream or sugar; lunch, a cup of consomme, lettuce and lean meat, without dessert; dinner, lean meat, green vegetables and no dessert. Stricken from the Kennedy diet are bread, butter and potatoes.

One political expert to whom Kennedy confided details of what he called a "crash" diet is convinced the effort to slim down is dictated by presidential politics. Others don't agree. They think the driving force behind the fleshing down process is vanity, pure and simple.

CARTER FOLLIES

When President Carter summoned his White House helicopter for another routine weekend trip to Camp David, the very day after his energy speech to the nation, at least one top Carter aide was incredulous. This sub-cabinet-level official told us the president could have scored high political and didactic points if he had foregone his weekend trip just that once, with an announcement explaining that he was practicing what he had preached the night before, conserve energy.

Instead, Carter apparently gave the idea no thought at all and proceeded with business as usual. Likewise, on his Easter weekend trip to Georgia the president could have taken an energy-saving train to make a symbolic point. Instead, he flew in Air Force One.

The disdainful attitude toward his own appeals to reduce energy consumption raises this question. If the president himself does not cut down on energy consumption, why would he expect anyone else to do so? The White House response — that a solar heating system is being installed for part of the west wing — is ridiculed as causing Jimmy Carter not the slightest personal discomfort.

Handgun 'Victims' Include Criminals

To the Editor:

In your editorial "Ugly Statistics" (April 10) you state that a compilation of news reports indicates 625 Americans were killed by handguns in February. The figures reflect murders, suicides and accidental deaths. However, you neglect to mention how many of these "victims" were rapists, burglars and murderers shot by potential victims in defense of their own lives. How many of the 1,650 persons killed in the stated three-month period were felons bent on murder of innocent people who happened to be armed? National Rifle Assn. (NRA) figures indicate there were at least 1,200 incidents of successful self-defense against armed attackers in this period.

NEWSPAPER clippings reporting instances wherein violent, armed criminals intent on murder and mayhem are thwarted by armed, honest citizens are received by the NRA at the rate of at least 400 each and every month. Many of these cases do not involve shooting, the mere presence of the weapon, usually a handgun, is often enough to deter violence.

The presence of handguns has never been shown to be a contributor to suicide. Guns of any kind are virtually non-existent in Japan, and handguns are very strictly controlled in Sweden — yet these countries have the highest suicide rates in the world. Handguns are among the least likely contributors to accidental deaths. According to the National Safety Council, you are more likely to choke to death on a piece of steak.

That the majority of Americans do not want more gun control is evident by the conspicuous lack of public referendums on this supposedly controversial subject. The anti-gun groups do not want the issue voted on by the people, because they would lose and they know it.

Universal Pronoun

To the Editor:

I have designed a creative alternative to respond to the androgynous masculine/feminine need for universal pronouns.

Transitions are difficult. When the new can be introduced conforming to the traditional patterns as much as possible, change is much easier to assimilate.

It's analagous to how we might all have learned to drive an automatic car. It would be easier to learn to drive on the other side of the road with an automatic car than learning to do that plus changing the car from an automatic to a stick shift.

THE ONE word that has been causing the greatest discomfort in a "shifting gear" effect has been the word "man." I propose that we substitute the surrogate world "nam." The conditional response in our somatic system stays in balance, and yet we boldly advance to salute our androgynous nature. (Examples: namhood, namkind, worknamship.)

The following pronouns have been used by me for some time in lecturing, teaching and writing. The transition is smooth and easy:

Support GRUNT

To the Editor:

The citizens of the United States need to be as concerned about rail accidents as they are about nuclear. The recent catastrophes involving propane and chlorine tank cars point this out.

We should immediately set up a citizens group to protest lack of action on the part of our government. The general committee, "Concerned About Railroad Practices" (CARP) would be the protesting and picketing agency. The second committee, "Can Railroads Alter Performance" (CRAP) would undertake an in depth study of the greedy profiteering of the nation's railroad managements. Because of the dangers involved, the railroads should be shut down until all studies are completed and fail-safe ways found to run trains.

The above committees would report to an official congressional committee, aided by committees from each of the states, in turn aided by county and city committees (only those served by railroads, of course, or likely to be served by railroads in the future). These committees in turn will be monitored by the congressional committee to give it something to do.

UNFORTUNATELY, although we could raise as much support for this activity as the anti-nuclear group, we don't have the advantage of raising hob at one plant and then traipsing off to the next in a show of tremendous force. Picketing 40,000 miles of track is no stroll in the park. But, with one picket every 1,263 miles, we can show them that we mean business.

With the railroads effectively shut down, the studies can begin, every inch of track inspected, every pound of ballast weighed, environmental studies instituted, covering every cubic foot of right-of-way and air rights above it.

The permits which will be required will guarantee no accidents from other than human or mechanical error. There would be only 742 federal, 464 state, 317 county, and 310 city permits involved. It should only take a maximum of 10 years to get the railroads started up again, except in 42 states where certain railroads run right through an endangered species habitat. On the mainland between New York City and Philadelphia, for instance, someone reported seeing some Thwartwise Bugaboos mating (so called because that's how Bugaboos mate).

With the rails shut down, we can then sit around and grin at each other and chortle over the power we have wielded to help all Americans stay alive.

Flight Path

To the Editor:

With regard to Ms. Lewis' reply (4-12-79) to Mr. Thompson's letter (4-5-79), I happen to agree with Mr. Thompson. His argument is well thought out, and logical. Her's is far fetched, and a little idealistic. Perhaps the best thing to do is answer her letter, point by point.

1. California residents who don't want to put up with earthquakes have the option of moving to Kansas.

2. People who are afraid of possible auto accidents, have the option of not driving.

3. Those who object to paying income tax, have the option of moving to Cuba.

Based on this, those who do not like jet noise have the option of moving out of the flight path.

OTHER FACTS.

1. Since 1969, everything has expanded.

2. Noise levels have increased everywhere.

3. Each year, auto manufacturers fail to meet pollution standards, and are granted exemptions.

4. Can't find a new site for the airport? Perhaps it's in the best place now.

5. Those people who live in the flight path, and have lived there since it was designated a residential area have a right to bitch about the noise. Anyone else has no more right to complain about the noise than an Alaskan has to complain about the snow in the winter. Noise in a flight path and snow in Alaska are facts of life. If you want to live in those respective areas, you have to put up with those respective nuisances.

Orange County Airport is the busiest for its size, of any airport in the world. For those naive souls out there who think that a few people calling and complaining are going to change that, I have some property in Florida, and a bridge in New York that they might be interested in for investment purposes.

As for me, there is no way that you could get me to live in the flight path. You see, I don't like loud noises.

Outlaw Windows?

To the Editor:

Your editorial of April 10, entitled "Ugly Statistics," citing deaths from handguns, is of concern to me. Statistics are great but they should be viewed in perspective.

Would you permit your readers the opportunity to judge the significance of the numbers you quote by publishing some related statistics.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the same time period how many Americans choked to death on food? How many drowned in swimming pools, beaches, bathtubs etc? How many fell or jumped to their death?

If you are genuinely concerned with the safety of others and wish to promote legislation of this type, possibly your efforts would be better directed toward laws to outlaw open windows, swimming pools and unground meat.

Postal Thanks

To the Editor:

As I finished writing another letter I thought I should write a letter to your newspaper to say thank you to the United States Postal Service.

I shabbily take for granted the "mail" all the time. I apologize to all postal and mail delivery employees.

In a way it's one of my "heart" throbs: getting a letter over to someone.

What do you men and women feel as you drive trucks, walk streets and stand in uniforms servicing us at post offices? A young man in grey-blue bermuda shorts bending down taking letters out of a mailbox bitterly told me of some of the frustrations.

Thank you, you all!

Oil Stockpile Program Failing to Meet Goals

WASHINGTON — Energy czar James Schlesinger, who has already offended many members of Congress by his overbearing personality and his pro-oil policies, is now in more hot water for the way his department has bungled the strategic petroleum reserve program.

The need for a stockpile of oil in the United States was dramatically illustrated in recent months, when the temporary stoppage of Iranian oil production and planned cutbacks by Arab producers showed how dangerously dependent the United States is on foreign oil.

In 1975, Congress ordered establishment of a petroleum reserve to protect us from the whims of the oil-exporting nations in time of emergency. The Department of Energy was supposed to store 500 million barrels of oil in underground salt domes by 1980. The ultimate goal was to have up to a billion barrels set aside.

BUT A confidential report by the General Accounting Office, prepared for Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., and Rep. Donald Pease, D-Ohio, has concluded that the DOE has failed miserably. The program is shockingly behind schedule; oil purchases have been erratic and economically unsound; important safety and environmental considerations have too often been ignored, the report states. Here are some of the specifics:

There were supposed to be 250 million barrels of oil in storage by the end of last year. The stockpile currently stands at about 70 million barrels. And incredibly, even this woefully small reserve is not available for immediate use because the pumps are not yet in place.

The 250-million-barrel goal is not expected to be reached until sometime next year; the 500-million-barrel stockpile won't be attained until 1982, and maybe not before 1985.

— THE RESERVES are stored in underground salt domes in Louisiana and Texas. Serious questions have been raised about the safety of the storage procedures, particularly in light of an explosion and fire at the West Hackberry, La., cavern last fall. One man died and 30,000 barrels of crude were lost in the fire.

The GAO report concludes that the fire was at least partially the result of poor management and inadequate safety precautions. Though salt-cavern storage is a feasible system, the report says, "the potential exists for serious problems" if the DOE can't maintain higher standards of operation.

— Oil was pumped into two caverns at Bryan Mound, Texas, without first testing an adjacent cavern. The GAO investigators believe the DOE "took an unnecessary risk in view of the structural damages and financial loss that could have occurred."

— The DOE's practice of buying reserve oil on a "spot" or single-transaction basis, instead of on long-term contracts also drew criticism from the GAO. "If the Department of Energy's planning is not improved, much higher costs to the government will result," the report predicts.

GI GOURMETS: With skyrocketing food prices punishing everyone's pocketbook these days, taxpayers may be incensed to learn that our troops overseas are feasting on lobster tails and filet mignon. An internal Army audit found that mess halls in Europe alone were spending $3.5 million more than necessary, much of it for luxury items.

Because of a loophole in the meal-financing system, the auditors found, Army cooks are spending as much as $6.30 per person for some dinners. This is more than $5 above the authorized amount.

Defense nutrition experts figure that it should cost $3.15 per day to give each GI three balanced meals. But often a soldier eschews the prescribed three squares in favor of a cup of coffee for breakfast or a soft drink and hamburger for lunch. This tendency is taken into account in the mess halls' purchasing, and the money saved from the allotted $3.15 is put aside for extravagant menus more appropriate to a fine restaurant than an Army mess hall.

THE AUDITORS found that $3.5 million of this surplus was improperly spent, $2 million of it on such lucullan repasts as the "super supper" at one Frankfurt mess hall — lobster tails, filet mignon, stuffed pork tenderloin and Cornish game hens. Another facility's "family night" featured lobster tails and grilled steaks.

Army investigators are also looking into the possibility that one mess hall was diverting food to the local economy.

WONDER WHEELS — In February, 1974, we reported that a single company, Everest and Jennings, dominated the $100 million-a-year wheelchair business. The Justice Department filed anti-trust action against the firm, and won a consent decree last February that will allow more sales of competitive wheelchairs.

Even stiffer competition may be on the way, in the form of a revolutionary four-wheel-drive chair developed by Ralf Hotchkiss, head of the Ralph Nader-founded Center for Concerned Engineering.

Our associate Les Whitten gave the Hotchkiss wheelchair an exhausting personal test, piloting the manually powered prototype through mud and deep ruts that are impassable to conventional models. Hotchkiss himself successfully tested his chair during Washington's worst snowstorm in more than 50 years.

The secret of the Hotchkiss chair is biblically inspired. Ezekiel 10:11 tells of mysterious wheels that "go on their four sides." The Hotchkiss chair uses pairs of rubber cones that roll forward, backward and sideways to overcome obstacles and prevent slipping.

Hotchkiss plans, to offer production rights to manufacturers on a non-exclusive basis, to prevent the new wheelchair from being monopolized by a single company.

How the Wizard Was Unmasked

And so it was that Dorothy, after many adventures, came at last to the golden city of Oz.

Oz was ruled, of course, by the Wizard of Oz. The People of Oz worshipped the Wizard. When it came to wizardry, there was no one more wizard than the Wizard. It was widely known that he was all-wise, all-powerful and absolutely irrefutably infallible. In fact, when pressed, he said so himself.

So everyone did exactly whatever the Wizard told them to do, even though most of the time they couldn't understand what he was saying. That was because the Wizard spoke wizard talk.

For example, it was the Wizard who Unlocked the Secret of the Atom. "E equals emcee squared!" cried the Wizard in his thunderous voice. And everyone said wasn't it wonderful to have the secret of the atom, whatever that secret might be.

NATURALLY, the Wizard, who loved performing feats of wizardry, used the secret to make the biggest bombs the world had ever seen. "Don't worry," the Wizard told the people who couldn't quite comprehend how they worked, "they're for your own good." And he had lots of fun exploding them all over the place to see what would happen — until everyone's hair started turning green.

After that, the Wizard stocked the bombs in big piles so the people would feel safe. "What if they go off accidentally?" asked a nervous Nelly.

"How could they?" demanded the Wizard. "I made them myself and it is widely known that I am all-wise, all-powerful and absolutely irrefutably infallible."

SO WHEN Dorothy asked to see the Wizard, who was also widely known to be ten feet tall and to glow with wisdom, the people of Oz looked at her strangely. "But no one has ever seen the Wizard," they said. "He dwells in the Tower of Ivory, guarded by positrons, quarks, millirems and all manner of strange things."

Dorothy, however, was not to be denied. At last she gained entrance to the very Throne Room of the Wizard himself. "What do you want?" he shouted from behind an impenetrable screen of verbiage.

"I just want to go home to Kansas as quickly as possible, please, sir," said Dorothy.

"Hmmmm," said the Wizard, who liked challenges. "All right, I shall Harness the Atom for Peace and make you a magical nuclear reactor."

"It sounds dangerous," said Dorothy dubiously.

"How could it be?" demanded the Wizard. "I will make it myself and it is widely known that I am all-wise, all-powerful and absolutely irrefutably infallible."

SO THE WIZARD happily built a huge nuclear reactor which he called Three Mile Island. As the people of Oz gathered to watch in awe, he pushed a button from high up in his Tower of Ivory. Steam shot out, bells clanged, sirens wailed, the ground trembled and everyone ran for their lives.

The Tower collapsed and out tumbled the Wizard, who was five-foot-two and wore bifocals. "But you're not ten feet tall," said Dorothy. "You're just an ordinary little man."

"Don't worry," said the Wizard, dusting himself off. "I'll build you another and this time . . ."

"Thank you, I think I'll walk," said Dorothy. "After all, anything a man can make can break."

Needless to say, the people of Oz never blindly trusted any wizard ever again.

So the story has a happy ending.

Cyclists End Grueling Trip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three suntanned cyclists wheeled into town this week after a two-month, 3,000-mile trip from Savannah, Ga., to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Illinois college students Marty Ross, Tom Cummings and Steve Frederick crossed such countryside as the swamps of Mississippi and the windswept plains of Texas, covering about 100 miles a day. All three have relatives who died of cancer.

The grueling trek over, Ross said the trio have still another goal in the drive they think will net about $2,500 — to get on the Johnny Carson Show to raise more money for their cause before they fly back to Savannah.

Cummings said he wrote to the show in January asking to be a guest, but hadn't gotten a response

Historian Wins Putlitzer

STANFORD (AP) — Historian Don E. Fehrenbacher, born and raised in the heart of "Lincoln country," expressed quiet pride that his study of the famed Dred Scott case won the 1979 Pulitzer Prize for history.

"I think it means fulfillment most of all," he said of "The Dred Scott Case: Its Significance in American Law and Politics."

HE WROTE THE BOOK over a period of a dozen years, taking several years off to edit four books by the late David M. Potter, one of which won a Pulitzer Prize in 1977.

"It gives you the feeling that the long hours at the typewriter have been worth it and that the product has been recognized," he said. "It also acts as a stimulus, don't you think? Once you've won you're under tremendous pressure to continue to produce."

FEHRENBACHER

Fehrenbacher, 58, has been teaching at Stanford since 1953,. An expert on Lincoln, his prize-winning book grew, he said, "out of my interest in the antebellum period, in Lincoln and in constitutional history."

Fehrenbacher, married and the father of three grown children, was born in Sterling, Ill. and graduated from Sterling (Kans.) College. He earned a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

THE DRED SCOTT CASE IS considered one of the key incidents which led up to the Civil War. Scott, the slave of an Army surgeon, lived with his master for a time in Illinois, a state which prohibited slavery.

After his owner's death, Scott sued his owner's widow for his freedom, claiming that his residence in a free state made him a free man.

By a vote of 7-2, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1857 that Scott could not bring suit in a federal court because Negroes were not citizens of the United States.

SCOTT HAD BEEN SOLD IN the meantime, but two months after the Supreme Court decision he was freed by his new owner.

Fehrenbacher is working on a sequel to a book on Lincoln entitled "Prelude to Greatness," which dealt with Lincoln in the years prior to his election. The new work will deal with his years as president.

3 Arnholt Smith Firms Bankrupt

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Three more companies once controlled by financier C. Arnholt Smith have been declared bankrupt.

The order was signed by a bankruptcy court judge. In addition to Sovereign State Capital Corp., Westward Realty and the British Columbia Investmemt Corp., the bankruptcy specification was assigned to 29 subsidiaries of British Columbia.

Attorney Herbert Weiss, in San Diego private practice, was named trustee for the firms which earlier had been in Chapter XI proceedings for reorganization.

Court Orders Sale of Whiting Ranch

The Whiting Ranch, valued by its former owner at $50 million, is to be sold at a court auction in June.

Santa Ana Bankruptcy Court Judge Aaron K. Phelps ordered the sale of the 2,768-acre property near El Toro after rejecting former owner Borden Kent "Ken" Rogers' 11th hour move to retain control of the acreage.

PHELPS MADE the ruling after listening to testimony which included the statement that Rogers bought the land, which lies at the edge of the Cleveland National Forest, for $2 million from the Whiting Brothers in 1975 in an agreement that included no down payment from the financier.

Noting that there are claims totalling more than $10 million on the property, Phelps appointed Newport Beach attorney Robert A. Fisher to act as trustee in the sale.

Phelps ordered Rogers not to interfere with the sale or conduct any negotiations with government entitities or agencies while the property is under Fisher's trusteeship.

HE REJECTED a plan by Rogers in which the financier suggested the sale of 500 acres of the ranch to a development firm for $13 million. At that point, Rogers valued the Whiting Ranch at $50 million.

Fisher believes the true value of the property is between $10 million and $15 million.

It was argued in court that Rogers tried to retain control over the ranch by a legal maneuver described as the filing of a petition to convert the pending bankruptcy into a "Chapter 11" action — a legal definition that gives the petitioner a further opportunity to reorganize his financial affairs and re-evaluate his indebtedness.

"HE MADE A MOVE to block the sale," Phelps said of Rogers. "Then others made a move and he was checkmated."

Rogers told Judge Phelps that his plan to sell 500 acres of the ranch, the largest undeveloped land parcel for sale in Orange County, would provide the court with a $3.2 million down payment.

Rogers said the development firm involved in the deal would build some 2,200 homes on the property, with 750 houses reserved for low-income dwellings. The low-income units would be financed in part by government funds, he said.

PHELPS DESCRIBED the proposal as "not very creditable." He said the proposed officers of the development firm were former associates of Rogers and the firm had showed no evidence of incorporation or even the existence of a bank account.

Judge Phelps said he has already validated three claims, among claims totalling $40 million submitted to his court. He identified them as:

— A $1.6 million note held by the El Toro Land Co., formerly known as the Whiting Brothers Corp., related to the purchase by Rogers in February 1975.

— A $400,000 note held by the Florida Insurance Commission and first drawn on the now-defunct Seaboard Life Insurance Co. of Florida. It was stated in court that Rogers used the note as a down payment for the ranch.

No Messy Yards

Mesans to Get Cleanup Word

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

This weekend or early next week, about 300 Costa Mesans will get notices from the city that they're not going to like.

The letters will say, in essence, "Clean up your property or we'll do it for you — at your expense."

THE PROBLEM, SAYS Costa Mesa Fire Marshall Russ Henderson, is that some of those people won't have messy yards. Others will have just cleaned them up

That's one headache in the city's weed abatement program, aimed at eliminating fire hazards such as dried out long grass and piles of flammable items, including paper or wood.

Once a year, notices are sent and, inevitably, some of them are in error

The properties on which notices are sent are identified by records, field inspections, aerial photos and sometimes memory, Henderson said

SOMETIMES A NOTICE is sent to the right neighborhood but the wrong house, he said. Other times a property is scheduled for construction soon or has recently been cleaned.

Henderson said he can't estimate what percentage of the total will turn out to be false notifications He said last year the city sent out slightly fewer notices and had to use its contract crews to clean up about 110 properties.

What happens after the notice, mistaken or not, is received?

Anyone wishing to complain can call the Fire Prevention Office, 754-5128, or speak at a City Council public hearing to be held at May 7 at 6:30 p.m Henderson said

HOWEVER, UNLESS there's room for confusion — you're growing corn, for instance — you don't have to speak up, Henderson said. An inspector goes to the sites two days before cleanup is scheduled and checks to make sure the property needs weed abatement.

The cleanup crews start May 15 and will probably work until the end of June, Henderson said.

If you have a weed problem — say, on a vacant lot or the rear portion of an extra-large yard — you might want to let the city clear it up and then bill you, rather than doing it yourself, Henderson said.

THE REASON IS that the contract crews are paid for bulk work and are relatively inexpensive. It costs $18 to clear a lot under 7,500 square feet and $21 for a half-acre plot.

The charges are sent with tax bills, Henderson said.

If the bills aren't paid, they become a lien against the property and are due when the property is sold, Henderson said.

So, Henderson said, homeowners who receive "false" notices needn't worry.

"THEY ARE NOT going to be billed if they don't have weeds when we get there to do the job," he said.

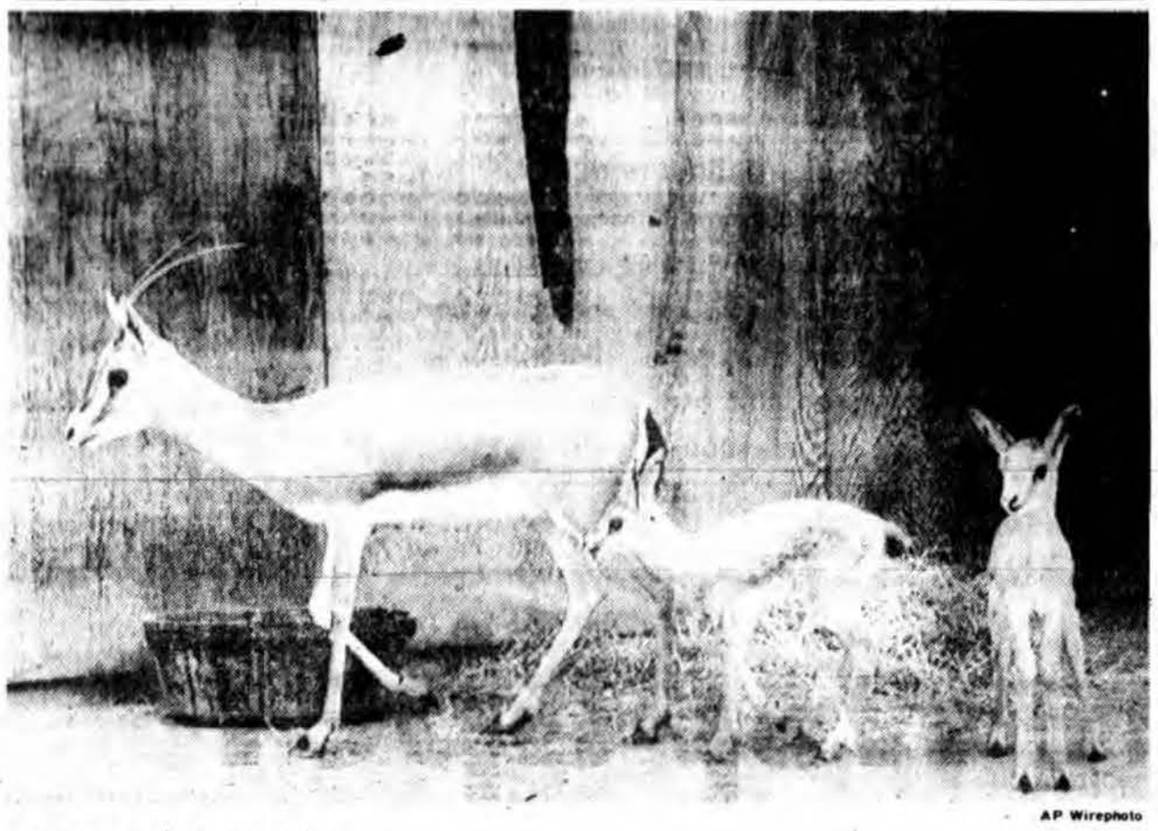

He also noted that, although the law allows it, the city doesn't use herbicides.

"There's always some environmentalist who reads that and says, 'We don't want herbicides.' Well, we don't use them," Henderson said.

Since the purpose of the abatement is to prevent or control grass fires, Henderson said, city crews also go to Fairview Regional Park and cut fire breaks through the park, which is difficult for fire engines to reach.

ONE OTHER ISSUE that comes up each year concerning weed abatement is phone calls from neighbors complaining that the city missed a disreputable lot in their area, Henderson said.

"We cannot consider it a nuisance until it dries out and actually becomes a fire hazard," he warned, noting that weed abatement isn't meant as a beautification project

Civilian 'Cops' Eyed

Irvine Mulls 'Public Safety Assistants'

By FREDERICK SCHOEMEHL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Citing success in using civilians as traffic investigators, Irvine Police Chief Leo Peart wants to place civilians into minor crime reporting and quasi-detective positions.

Peart is proposing increased use of civilians, known as public safety assistants, as part of budget requests soon to be considered by the City Council.

EXPANSION OF the civilian program, the chief said, would result in lower costs and would free sworn police officers to concentrate on more important duties.

The police chief outlined his ideas for the expansion in an interview this week.

He said he could see no problem with allowing non-sworn personnel to collect reports on minor, non-felony crimes such as malicious mischief, disturbing the peace, vandalism, petty theft and annoying phone calls.

Nor, the chief said, does he see why civilians couldn't handle much of the paperwork that now falls into the hands of detectives as they prepare cases against crime suspects.

"I WANT TO stress, however, that when a citizen calls and needs an officer with a gun, that we're not going to send out a civilian with a pencil," Peart said.

Irvine now employs four civilians as police traffic investigators. The city started the civilian program based on a system used in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The investigators respond to accidents, interview those involved and prepare reports.

PEART ESTIMATED that the city realizes a 33 percent savings by using civilians rather than sworn personnel to investigate accidents. He said lower base salaries and differences in retirement and fringe benefit programs between sworn and non-sworn personnel account for the savings.

Expanded use of civilians in Irvine is "extremely viable" because the city is rapidly growing. Civilians, thus, don't bump out sworn personnel, he explained.

Peart said he hopes to institute a civilian "Career ladder" so that the paraprofessionals will be able to vie for promotions within the department.

HE SAID HE envisions a complete civilian force within the police department that would handle non-field operations such as dispatching, planning, crime prevention and property and evidence control.

Another one of the chief's proposals is to place a ranking civilian in charge of the department's "business" functions. A sworn captain now in charge would be switched to field operations "where we need him," the chief said.

300 Plywood Sheets Taken

Building materials thefts continue to plague construction companies working in Irvine, according to Irvine police.

Suffell and McAdam Inc., reported that 300 sheets of construction-grade plywood valued at $4,500 were stolen from a material storage area at 2091 Business Center Drive by persons who used a company forklift to load the wood.

Also reported to police by Bren Co. was the theft of a $500 fireplace box from a house in the framing stage in Turtle Rock Highlands.

In Laguna Beach

Sycamore Mortgage Payoff Plans Eyed

Laguna Beach city officials are taking a three-pronged approach in plans to pay off the mortgage on Sycamore Hills at minimum cost to the taxpayers.

Councilmen and citizens learned Tuesday night the city is seeking a number of methods of acquiring the 522-acre parcel purchased from Rancho Palos Verdes Corp. a year ago for $6.75 million.

AND THE RESULTS OF efforts by city planners should begin to take a definite form by June 15, the deadline for final payment to Rancho of $5.4 million remaining due on the mortgage for the land in Laguna Canyon.

In the next few weeks the City Council will:

Monitor progress on a loan application with the federal government for $6.4 million in Coastal Energy Impact Program funds money which they agreed to seek Tuesday night.

Hear proposals from possibly a half dozen developers interested in purchasing between 65 and 70 acres of Sycamore Hills near the Rossmoor Leisure World community.

STUDY THE GENERAL plan amendment for Sycamore Hills and the Laguna Canyon area, currently being prepared by a Laguna Lakes Regional Park Task Force design team.

City Manager Fred Solomon outlined the city's application for a 5 percent per year loan under the Federal Coastal Energy Impact Program for councilmen Tuesday, saying the loan has two advantages to Laguna Beach.

It would allow the city up to 10 years to repay the federal loan, and would reduce the annual interest costs from a current $540,000 per year to $270,000 on the balance owed Rancho Palos Verdes Corp.

HE SAID THE city has been working with the staff of the state Coastal Commission on the application, which must be filed by June 1.

Marlene Roth, the city's director of community development, told councilmen there would be no problem in meeting the application deadline.

The council voted unanimously to forward the request for the federal loan in order to meet that deadline.

THEY ALSO LISTENED as Solomon outlined plans to hear proposals from developers later this month regarding proposals for building residential units on land adjacent to Leisure World on El Toro Road.

The council is considering sale of a portion of Sycamore Hills to pay the city's debt on the land.

Solomon said he is seeking developer interest in paying "up to $6 million," for 65 to 70 acres of land, thereby leaving the rest of Sycamore Hills in open space.

AND HE SAID he is looking into possible development of a golf course and equestrian facilities near the proposed development as an incentive to developers to create fewer units on the proposed residential land.

"The primary thrust is for that (residential) development alone," Solomon said in an interview today.

Costa Mesa Seeks Funds for Projects

A total of $913,000 in community development funds for four projects has been requested by Costa Mesa in its fifth year application to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A copy of the plan is available at Housing and Community Services at City Hall, 77 Fair Drive, weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

THE LARGEST amount, $668,000, is requested for the Wallace Neighborhood Strategy Area slightly northwest of downtown.

City officials plan to improve public works, especially water mains and alleys, and to build about 50 apartments for low and moderate income families.

The second largest sum, $165,000, is sought for the Center Street Neighborhood Strategy Area to aid senior citizens. Plans call for building a neighborhood recreation center for seniors, the disabled and low and moderate income families, along with providing transportation for seniors and the handicapped to programs and meals at other locations.

THE CITY IS seeking $60,000 to aid its continuing program to remove architectural barriers to the handicapped. And $58,600 is requested for loans to enable low and moderate income homeowners to rehabilitate older homes.

The city is seeking $60,000 to aid its continuing program to remove architectural barriers to the handicapped. And $58,600 is requested for loans to enable low and moderate income homeowners to rehabilitate older homes.

A family of four with an income no more than $18,600 might qualify for a low-interest loan or grant, officials said.

Suspect Held In Theft at Plaza Center

A Garden Grove man was arrested at South Coast Plaza in Costa Mesa after police allege he burglarized a car, confronted the returning owner and snatched her paycheck money out of her hand.

Released after posting $5,000 bail was John Steadman Nilsen, 21, who faces charges of suspicion of vehicle burglary and grand theft, police said.

Police said Christine Ann O'Brien, 18, of San Juan Capistrano, was returning to her car after cashing her paycheck when she saw a man rummaging inside.

When she challenged him, police said, the man snatched from her hand the envelope containing her money and fled. Taken was $149 in cash and radio equipment, police said.

A few minutes later, a man who officers said matched the description of the thief was spotted near the South Coast Plaza Hotel by several officers. After a brief foot chase, Reserve Officer Robert Fate tackled the suspect, police said.

Economy Shopping 'In'

Americans Seek Ways to Cut Grocery Bills

By The Associated Press
(Last of three articles)

Inflation is changing the way America shops.

No-frills packages, bag-it-yourself stores and do-it-yourself food cooperatives are gaining popularity as people look for ways to cut grocery bills.

It is difficult to come up with firm figures on how much of the more than $200 billion Americans spend every year on food goes to the non-traditional shopping outlets.

RON COTTERILL, A FOOD marketing specialist from Michigan State University, estimated that there are roughly 1,000 food co-ops throughout the United States, about one-eighth the number of conventional supermarkets. Cotterill said the co-ops probably account for less than 1 percent of total grocery sales.

Industry spokesmen say it is hard to keep track of the alternative systems because they are growing so rapidly. No-frills foods — standard grades in plain packages — were not introduced until 1977. Today, according to industry estimates, they are offered by 100 chains in 10,000 supermarkets, about one-third of the total.

"It looks like we're seeing the start of a whole new movement," said Midge Shubow of the federal Office of Consumer Affairs.

"There's an exciting trend in this country to say, 'Look. We've got to do a lot of this ourselves.'"

Food co-ops are the most basic form of do-it-yourself shopping. Consumers band together to buy food and other grocery products, in bulk, at wholesale.

They may operate as simple buying clubs or as full-fledged stores.

Members of buying clubs trade time and labor for cash savings. They take turns acting as purchasing agents and distributing the food. Buying clubs often handle fresh foods only and tend to feature seasonal items. Your menus may be limited by other members' tastes.

THE SUPERMARKET-STYLE CO-OPS are more complicated, often requiring full-time managers. Shoppers may or may not have to pay a membership fee — sometimes as little as $1 — to help with rent, utilities, wages, etc. Prices are marked up only enough to cover any additional operating costs. There is no profit. Costs are kept to a minimum, sometimes with the help of members who volunteer their labor in exchange for additional discounts.

Cotterill said co-ops "are growing daily." Today's co-op movement, he said, has its roots in the 1960s and early 1970s.

"It was started primarily by young people as a move toward local control of their lives. They (the co-ops) sort of fell into good times in the sense that food price inflation really focused attention on food prices and on alternatives to going to a supermarket."

Savings may vary. They can range up to 60 percent, particularly in buying clubs, said Cotterill.

THE BUYING CLUBS ALSO offer non-economic benefits.

"You do trade time for money, but lots of times if you look at the relative time and stress of going through the supermarket system, you may be coming out with lower prices and a whole lot happier," Cotterill said.

Consumers in areas convenient to local farms can save money by eliminating still more of the marketing bill by picking their own produce or shopping at roadside stands.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that as of 1976, there were more than 3,000 pick-your-own operations and 9,000 roadside stands throughout the United States. A USDA survey indicated that 18 percent of all households shopped at a pick-your-own outlet in 1977, and 38 percent went to a roadside stand at least once during the year. Fresh fruits and vegetables and eggs were the most popular products.

NO-FRILLS PRODUCTS OFFER another alternative in more traditional surroundings. Consumers willing to skip fancy packages and trimmings and, in some cases, settle for lower grades of fruits and vegetables can save up to 35 percent.

The USDA says the savings are due to reduced product costs for processors who use Grade B and Grade C fruits and vegetables, rather than the fancier Grade A used primarily for national brands; to lower packaging costs; and, to a smaller degree, to less-advertising.

What about quality? Retailers say no-frills foods are equal in nutritional value to private-label and national brands. They may be less attractive to look at, however. The peas may be uneven in size, for example, and the green beans may be broken. Depending on what you want the product for, appearance may not matter.

THE NON-FOOD PRODUCTS ALSO vary. Tissues are unscented; they also may be rougher. Comparisons of detergents showed that in some cases, more of the no-frills brand was required to get clothes clean.

The idea of no-frills started in France in 1976 and was brought to this country a year later by Jewel Cos., a Chicago-based chain.

"They appear to us to be a permanent part of product marketing," said Robert Wunderle of Pathmark, an East Coast chain which introduced no-frills a little more than a year ago.

Wunderle said Pathmark started with 27 no-frills items and now offers 80. Customer acceptance, he said, "is very, very strong."

PRICES OF NO-FRILLS MAY BE more stable. A Washington Post survey of 14 products showed that in the eight months since the no-frills items were introduced in the area of the nation's capital they have risen in price less than half as much as national brands.

Warehouse and limited-assortment stores offer another alternative.

The stores vary from area to area, but most have several characteristics in common. They are spartan in appearance, carry fewer items than supermarkets, sell products directly from the cartons, do not individually price mark each item and require customers to bring their own shopping bags. The gross margin for the warehouse stores —the difference between what they pay for products and what they charge — is about 12 to 13 cents on the dollar instead of the 22 cents for the conventional supermarket.

A USDA study found that general warehouse stores tend to be nearly as large in size as traditional grocery outlets, but carry only 3,000 to 5,000 items compared to up to 12,000 in a supermarket. They stock only a small selection of fresh produce and do not sell meat at all.

LIMITED-ASSORTMENT OR BOX stores are smaller in size than conventional supermarkets and carry only about 300 items, usually concentrating on the most popular, fast-moving products.

The USDA said there are an estimated 500 warehouse and limited-assortment stores across the country, compared to more than 30,000 conventional supermarkets. It said the trend is significant because it is the first time that the industry itself has tried to provide a low-cost alternative shopping system for consumers.

Jewel Cos. is among those experimenting with warehouse stores and Tom Stemberg of Star Markets, a division of Jewel, says prices are 15 percent to 35 percent less than they are in a conventional supermarket.

"The thing is going beserk," he said, adding that the warehouse stores are "a phenomenon that's going to rock the country."

COTTERILL, OF MICHIGAN STATE University, said the new forms of buying will "tend to persist." Inflation, he said, has forced people to look at what they are paying for and who is getting their money. If they don't like what they see, they may not return to the supermarket.

A somewhat similar view came from a very different source. George Koch, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, said the new forms of shopping "are going to be as strong as the consumer wants them to be. It's their choice."

Gas Pains to Continue

Carter Aide Brings Grim News to County

By O. C. HUSTINGS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

An aide to President Carter was in Orange County this week, bringing bad news on inflation and no promises of relief from the gas pains being suffered by Southern California motorists.

"Most of the news we have on the inflation front is bad news," said presidential assistant Jack Watson.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S 7 percent voluntary wage control program has received "considerable" support from labor and "overwhelming" compliance from big business, Watson said.

"Our great problem lies with the bulk of American businesses who are not in the Fortune 500," he said. "I suspect they think their actions don't make that much difference."

Watson presented his views during a meeting this week with county and city government officials in Santa Ana.

AS CARTER'S SPECIALIST in "intergovernmental affairs," Watson said, his primary function is to offer recommendations on coordinating local government needs with federal programs.

He said he has heard many questions from automobile-dependent Californians about gasoline problems. He offered no optimistic answers.

On the possibility of federal funding of mass transit projects here, he said, "I don't think the prospects are good. I don't think we can afford such projects."

LOCAL OFFICIALS QUERIED WATSON about the future of the federal government's revenue sharing program. The annual $6.8 billion program reallocates tax revenues back to state, county and city governments.

The no-strings-attached financial aid is especially favored by local officials.

Carter has left the program in his budget through September 1980, Watson said. However, the president isn't sure that states should get a share of the money and hasn't yet decided the future of the program, he added.

Campaigner Blasts 'Lazy' U.S. Voters

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A man who has managed the campaigns of several seekers of political office condemned "the vast majority" of American voters as "lazy, selfish and incompetent."

Howard Adler told a conference called by the League of Women Voters on Wednesday in Newport Beach that most attempts to remove corruption from America's political system are doomed to failure.

"VOTERS DON'T GIVE a damn, so the politicians don't," Adler said. "Many people just give up on reform because campaign reform is drowned in red tape that makes the income tax system look simple by comparison."

Adler said the corruption often fostered by the American system of raising funds for political candidates can be countered only by the increased education of children in the American system of government and the duties of citizenship.

He blamed families and school teachers for the failure of children to take into later life the principles that would enable them to insist on the overhaul of such issues as campaign reform.

"THAT'S WHERE these many millions of tax dollars should be spent," he said.

"Rather than getting the kind of education that would make meetings like this unnecessary, the children are being allowed to grow up with the belief that they need only protect their own day-to-day interests."

Former Orange County planning commissioner Shirley Grindle agreed with Adler that those determined to clean up campaign practices and the area of political contributions have to deal with an apathetic public.

But she argued that her own TINCUP (Time Is Now, Clean Up Politics) organization had, by collecting more than 100,000 signatures, forced the Orange County Board of Supervisors to adopt an ordinance that sharply restricts campaign contributions.

THE FORMER PLANNER said county supervisors had been angered by the restrictions imposed by the ordinance and that she had been condemned as a a traitor to the board.

Mrs. Grindle resigned her seat on the planning commission in December 1976, during a controversy that brought her into conflict with fellow planners and the board of supervisors.

She said, however, that the falling level of contributions to county supervisors seeking office and re-election to office clearly proved the value of the TINCUP movement and the belief of its members that the group's activities in the field of campaign reform should be extended.

Mrs. Grindle said that during the six months ending in December 1977, county supervisors received $145,000 in contributions from supporters.

A YEAR LATER, after the passage of the ordinance, that six-month level had dropped to $75,000, she said.

She said the TINCUP ordinance has been the only effective measure ever applied in Orange County in terms of the control of any kind of political spending.

Former Carter Aide to Speak About Treaties

Mark A. Siegel, who quit as deputy assistant to President Carter to protest plans to sell war planes to Saudi Arabia, will speak in Costa Mesa on Sunday.

He will be featured at a United Jewish Welfare Dinner at the South Coast Plaza Hotel.

Siegel will discuss the Mideast peace treaties and their prospects for success.

The dinner will be open to campaign leaders, volunteer workers and donors of more than $250 to UJWF, which aids health, educational and social welfare agencies.

Those eligible can make reservations at $15 a plate by calling 754-1944.

Artists to Judge

Two Orange County artists will serve as jurors in art for this year's Orange County Fair, which opens July 13 in Costa Mesa.

They are Carl Glassford of Mission Viejo, art director at KOCE-TV, and Victor Casados of Costa Mesa, a teacher at Orange Coast College, Costa Mesa.

Entry blanks and details can be obtained by calling 751-3247. Entry blanks must be received by June 1.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A May 6 rally and march to protest nuclear power plants was announced in Washington and a number of other cities.

Consumer activist Ralph Nader and actress Jane Fonda are among the persons scheduled to speak at the Capitol after a march that will take the protesters past the White House.

Dean Bars Sexy Magazines

BRISTOL, R.I. (AP) — The dean of students at Roger Williams College has barred Playboy, Penthouse, Oui and Playgirl magazines from a store in the student union.

"I don't think the college needs a dirty bookstore," said William O'Connell, the dean.

He said he objects to the magazines because they are degrading to women.

Stephen Shea, president of the college's business club which runs Roger's Corner Store, said the club agreed to remove the magazines to avoid an argument.

Roger Williams is a liberal arts and business college with 3,300 students, about one-third of whom are women.

Report Raps Colleges

Dishonesty on Campus

BERKELEY (AP) — Cheating, theft and other forms of dishonesty are rising on American university and college campuses, the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education reports.

The report Wednesday included in that criticism improprieties by the institutions themselves, including award of credits for insufficient academic work, and "inflated and misleading advertising" in the hunt for students.

THE 86-PAGE REPORT was the subject of discussions in Washington at the annual meeting of the American Association of Higher Education.

"We are concerned. We see certain signs of deterioration of important parts of academic life," the report said, scoring "most institutions of higher education, to a small or large degree, for these destructive aspects" of higher education.

On academic dishonesty, the report said:

"THIS RANGES FROM cheating to theft and destruction of library materials. With regard to cheating, 8.8 percent of undergraduates report that some forms of cheating are necessary to get the grades they want."

The figure, said the report, an activity of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, is an increase of 1.3 percentage points since 1969.

"The report found that theft and mutilation of library materials at college and university libraries "is a serious problem at 80 percent of the institutions studied."

FOR EXAMPLE, THE report said, undergraduate libraries at UC Berkeley, Northwestern University and the University of Washington "report annual loss rates between 4 and 5 percent of their collections."

The report noted that even a 1 percent loss rate nationally would require a replacement cost of at least $63.4 million a year.

Joan Kennedy Eyes Future

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Kennedy says she doesn't think her separation from Sen. Edward Kennedy will end in divorce, but she isn't certain she would be at his side if he ran for president.

In an interview in the May issue of Ladies' Home Journal, Mrs. Kennedy described her life since recovering from alcoholism. She lives in a Boston apartment and attends college classes and sessions for Alcoholics Anonymous. She says her husband visits her once or twice a month.

"I am working on myself in — I hope — an unselfish way," she said. "And until I do that I cannot begin to talk about marriage or no marriage . . . At the end of a couple years, I can make up my mind about things, from a position of strength, and of being well, very well."

THE SMALL CAR JUST GREW UP.

Here's a small car with honest room for five. That's for five full-size adults.

You get room because the engine's been moved forward. It sits sideways. It's a transverse-mounted 4-cylinder, or you have the option of the world's first transverse V6. Both are GM-built by various divisions, and your Olds Dealer has details on sources and availability.

Omega has front-wheel drive. And MacPherson strut suspension. And rack-and-pinion steering. Which help make Omega quick, agile and very smooth on the road.

Omega also has very good mileage for a car this size. With standard engine and transmission, the EPA estimate is (24) mpg. And the highway estimate is 35 mpg.

Remember, the circled EPA estimate is for comparisons to other cars. Your mileage depends on speed, weather and trip length; your actual highway mileage will probably be lower than the highway estimate.

The new 1980 Omega.

This is the Oldsmobile of small cars.

So come see it, drive it and love it. The small car just grew up.

ADOORNMENTS

By DR. STEINCROHN

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I know you are not an advocate of extreme exercise for older people. What I'm personally very much interested in is your opinion of overexercise for youngsters. It seems to me some schools are going whacky about exercise for children.

I have three normal, healthy girls in school. My 11- and 13-year-olds complain continuously about the rigorous paces they are put through every day.

FIFTY PUSHUPS AND situps per minute and continuous running until they are ready to drop (some of the running is used for punishment). In dodgeball the ball is thrown so hard there have already been sprained ankles and fingers and eyeglasses broken. In the instance of one injury the ball was forcibly thrown by a man teacher.

Shouldn't this be re-examined? Shouldn't some of the policies be changed? And the sooner the better!

PLEASE GIVE US your views in your column. I'd like to cut it out and bring it to the attention of the physical ed teachers in the two schools in which my children are enrolled. Incidentally, the exercises I have listed are but a small example of what their physical training involves — Mrs. T.

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

DEAR MRS. T: Why not take it up directly with the principals of your daughters' schools? If you bring it to their attention it's likely that they will discuss the problem with school physicians and the heads of the physical education classes.

As you imply, I'm an advocate of moderation in exercise. This applies to the young as well as to those adults who believe that fitness and health are not possible unless one throws one's muscles around with abandon.

Whenever I talk about exercise I try to emphasize that growing children need it for proper physical development. But there's a limit here, too — as your complaint seems to suggest.

SOME BECOME SO lopsided in their thinking about the need for exercise that they administer it (or take it) like some people try to cure a cold. They take the entire bottle at one gulp rather than a teaspoonful three times a day.

If you firmly believe that your children are not "copouts" who are basically lazy and simply want to get out of taking their physical ed classes, then you'd better take the time to talk it over with the school authorities. Immoderate exercise is something I do not recommend for either children or adults.

Repeat Spraying Fends Off Fleas

DEAR PAT: I've seen a few fleas in the yard already this spring. I remember you published information last year about what type of pesticide to use when spraying outside to help prevent fleas. Can you repeat this?

J.W., Costa Mesa

Use a Malathion spray, available at any nursery. It can be purchased as a concentrate and diluted in any spraying apparatus as directed by the manufacturer. Repeat spraying at two-week intervals to get rid of existing fleas and also destroy flea eggs.

White Finish Turned Yellow

DEAR PAT: Our kitchen cabinets are white ash. They have a white finish with the wood grain showing through and they're covered with a coat of varnish. The white part has worn off around the handles and knobs and the cabinets have a yellowish appearance. Should I touch up the white spots, remove all the old finish or what? I'd like to find a finish that wouldn't turn yellow in time, if that's possible.

J.R., Costa Mesa

Cabinet refinishers say that if you just touch up the worn spots, it will be difficult to get a perfect match with the surrounding surfaces. You might try a single spot to see how it turns out. If this doesn't work, a complete refinishing should be done. Choosing a finish that won't turn yellow is difficult because a lot depends on how well the surface is maintained, especially in a kitchen area susceptible to grease and grime. Manufacturers of some urethane finishes say their products resist yellowing. Whatever you use, keep the surface waxed to make it easier to keep clean. Periodic removel of old wax is necessary to avoid wax buildup that also has a yellowish tinge.

Inflation Looks Worse on List

DEAR PAT: Can you give me a rundown of the inflation rate since last June from month to month? I'd also like to know how much the cost of basic necessities, such as food, utilities and health care have risen in this period. We read these figures each month when the Consumer Price Index comes out, but it's difficult to remember and compare them.

L.R., Newport Beach

The inflation rate since June 1978 looks even more discouraging on a month-to-month basis. Increases were: June: 1 percent; July: 0.7 percent; August: 0.6 percent; September and October: 0.8 percent; November: 0.5 percent; December: 0.4 percent; and January: 0.9 percent. Wholesale prices, which offer an advance look at consumer costs, jumped 1 percent in March 1979 - a compounded annual rate of 12.7 percent. The February rise was only slightly less than January's 1.3 percent, the biggest in more than four years.

The cost of basic necessities also skyrocketed in 1978. Hospital charges rose 13 percent; food: 11.3 percent; and energy: 8 percent. These increases are particularly hard on the typical family budget because they constitute 70 percent of the total budget. Food alone requires 16 to 20 percent of a family's income.

Recall Hotline Reassures Owner

DEAR PAT: Will you please repeat the hotline phone number you can call to find out if a used car has been involved in a federal recall?

W.E., Corona del Mar

The National Highway Transportation Safety Administration's tollfree hotline number is: (800) 424-9393. If you can provide a used car's Vehicle Identification number, the NHTSA can report if that car was recalled and if repairs were made for any recalls after Jan. 1, 1974. Less specific information is available on recalls before that date. The NHTSA also urges motorists to report vehicle safety problems by calling the hotline number, or by writing to the Office of Defects Investigation, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 400 Seventh St. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590.

Doolittle Raid Gave America Lift

EDITOR'S NOTE: April 18 was the day in 1942 that Doolittle's Raiders bombed Tokyo. The following explains why the raid was a shot-in-the-arm to a nation looking for its first good news of World War II.

By the Associated Press

April 18, 1942. The Pacific war is five months old and, for America and her allies, the news has all been bad.

Once-proud warships lie rusting on the bottom of Pearl Harbor. The Japanese have subjugated vast chunks of Asia. Hong Kong, Singapore, Manila, and Cavite have fallen. Bataan has just surrendered, and America will soon learn that thousands died and hundreds were murdered on the brutal Death March of 76,000 American prisoners.

IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN, 688 miles east of Japan, an American aircraft carrier turns into a 30-knot wind and a B-25 ground bomber lumbers down the 467-foot flight deck and lurches into the air — a carrier deck takeoff never before asked of a ground bomber and one some airmen thought impossible. Fifteen more B-25s follow, wheeling to follow their leader westward.

DOOLITTLE

And then, across America, the headlines bloom in a hundred variations: Yanks Bomb Tokyo.

For America, it was the first morale-boosting victory of the war; for Japan, the first proof that its warlords had lied and the first intimation of defeat; for the war itself, a tactical turning point that was not to be fully understood or appreciated until much later.

NOT UNTIL AFTER THE WAR did Japan's military reveal that the Tokyo raid precipitated the Battle of Midway. Admiral Isoruku Yamamoto used it as a club to convince wary Japan to invade Midway. U.S. planes and ships destroyed four Japanese carriers and 253 planes in the sea-air battle that many historians see as the war's turning point.

This past weekend, survivors of the 80 men who manned the 16 bombers over Japan met in a reunion at Charleston, S.C., led by the man who piloted that first plane off the carrier Hornet and who trained and commanded the men that became known as Doolittle's Raiders.

At 82, General James H. Doolittle is much older than most of the other 51 living Raiders — he was, after all, a World War I flier and a racing pilot and aeronautical engineer between the wars.

But Doolittle looks 20 years younger than his age. He remains active as a director of an insurance company and a consultant on foreign and military affairs, commuting two days a week to his Los Angeles office from his Carmel Valley home, 300 miles north.

HE STILL SEEMS THE IDEAL fighter pilot — trim, wiry and strong — the kind of a man who can squeeze comfortably into the fighter cockpit.

The kind of flier who, back between the wars, flew the first outside loop, considered impossible then; flew the first completely blind flight — taking off, flying a prescribed course and then landing; and set record after record in cross-country flights and speed races.

And the kind of a leader who went on to spend three years as an Air Force commander in North Africa and Europe. But for those who remember that discouraging half-year after Pearl Harbor, he will always be best known as the leader of Doolittle's Raiders.

President Franklin Roosevelt wanted to strike a blow against Japan and give Americans a morale boost. The Air Force chose Doolittle for the job, and he picked his men and took them to Florida.

THERE HE BLOCKED OFF a 470-foot runway and he and his men spent a month practicing unbelievably short takeoffs, for which the long-range B-25 bombers were never intended.

The original plan, Doolittle recalled in an interview before the Charleston reunion, was to get within 400 miles of Japan aboard the Hornet. Thirteen B-25s, including Doolittle's, were then to take off for Tokyo. The other three were to hit Nagoya, Kobe and Osaka.

After dropping four 500-pound bombs each, the planes were to fly to bases in China controlled by an American ally, Chiang Kai Shek.

But luck dealt the Raiders a setback. A Japanese fishing boat, converted to patrol duty by installation of long-range radio, saw the Hornet 700 miles off the coast, 300 miles from launch point.

"OUR PEOPLE INTERCEPTED THE patrol boat's radio warning and we knew we had to go then," Doolittle recalled.

And so they went, 288 critical miles more than planned.

All 16 planes delivered their bombs but then all ran into trouble. One, leaking fuel from a puncture, diverted to Valdivostok, where the Russians interned its five men for the duration. The other 15 headed for China, only to run out of fuel and into a howling storm.

Three planes crash-landed, one on an inland lake, two in the surf off the coast. Two men drowned. Another was killed when he jumped. Eight were captured by the Japanese. Three were executed by the Japanese and one died of starvation in a Japanese prison.

The others — including Doolittle — bailed out over China, were rescued by the Chinese and went back to fight again.

DOOLITTLE SAYS THE RAID'S success came because the Japanese were "taken completely by surprise. . .Not knowing that we were flying long-range ground bombers. . .the Japanese were convinced that it would take at least another day before we could possibly be within striking range.

"The Japanese did get some fighters up and they did throw some anti-aircraft fire," Doolittle continued. "All our planes were shot up. None was shot down."

Unlucky Lakers Hopeful

SEATTLE (AP) — As if the Los Angeles Lakers aren't in enough trouble, Seattle's John Johnson had to rub it in.

"Gus Williams really gets keyed up when he goes down there (Los Angeles)," Johnson said Wednesday night after Williams led the SuperSonics to a wild 108-103 overtime victory over the Lakers in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

THE TRIUMPH before 26,862 Kingdome fans, the Sonics' largest crowd this season, gave Seattle a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinals series. Game three is set for Friday night in Los Angeles.

The 6-2 Williams, a fourth-year pro who played college ball at USC, scored six of his game-high 38 points in overtime, including a 20-footer with 52 seconds left that broke a 103-103 tie.

Williams has scored 65 points, grabbed 11 rebounds, dished out five assists and made four steals in the series.

"He wants to play better," Johnson said. "It'll be a great game.

"IT'S GOING TO BE tough there. You've got to win on the road if you're going to go places. It's that simple."

Williams said, "Things seemed to fall into place tonight. We played good ball up until the last couple of minutes. The Lakers never really gave up. We'll have our hands full down there."

Wednesday night's game was one each team thought it had wrapped up in the final, frantic minutes of the fourth quarter.

After the teams traded timeouts, Dennis Johnson inbounded the ball to Williams who passed it to Sikma. Sikma's 15-footer was blocked by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with three seconds left, but Sikma grabbed the carom and fed Dennis Johnson on the baseline. Johnson's 18-footer at the buzzer sent the game into overtime.

"I saw six seconds left (when Abdul-Jabbar blocked Sikma's shot)," said Nixon. "The team kind of relaxed because they thought time was going to expire."

"I FEEL GOOD about all t my shots — as long as they go in," said Dennis Johnson, who scored six of his 17 points in overtime.

Jerry West, the Lakers' coach, said his team shouldn't be counted out of the series.

"I don't think our players feel that this is over yet," he said. "All we want to do is play as well as we have done in these last two games. Tonight they got a very fortunate break at the end of regulation time to tie it."

Hard to Swallow

Sutton Wants to Forget 1978 Season

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If the start of the 1979 baseball season has been nerveracking for the Dodgers, consider what Don Sutton had to endure during the fall and winter of 1978.

Probably more than any other player on the team, Sutton took the Dodgers' loss to the New York Yankees in the World Series the hardest.

The regular season had been emotional enough for the dean of the pitching staff, losing the fall classic was just the capper.

"IT WAS THE LOWEST POINT in my career," said the 13-year veteran, referring to the series defeat. "I took an entire week off and hid from everybody."

Sutton, a deeply emotional individual, listed four reasons as to why 1978 was so hard to swallow.

"First of all it was a trying year anyway, and I don't have to say anything more about that," he said, obviously alluding to the highly publicized scuffle with Steve Garvey.

"Second, it was the fourth time we hadn't won the World Series," he continued. "Third, it was the first time I made no valid contributions (0-2 with a 7.50 ERA), and fourth, the thought came home that this might have been my last shot—it's tough to keep repeating."

WITH ALL THE PERSONAL GOALS Sutton has achieved, only a World Series championship, dating back to 1966, has eluded this 34-year-old in four tries.

"I think people forget we take losses just as seriously and hard as the next person. You put everything together that happened last year and it's very depressing."

Sutton was so depressed over the circumstances he started training for the 1979 campaign the first week of November.

"I wanted to go into spring training in such good shape that I could pitch nine innings the first day."

"It's my only unfulfilled goal," says Sutton, who has virtually rewritten the Dodger record book with his pitching exploits.

It's also that unfulfilled goal that's keeping Sutton in the game today.

DON SUTTON

"SOMETIMES I FEEL this may be my last year. Other times I feel it will be next year after my contract runs out. Most of the time, though, I feel I'll pitch five more years including this one."

Would a World Series championship alter that thinking?

"I would think it might," he says.

Sutton is more than grateful to everything baseball has brought to him during his career.

"I can't believe all the good things that have happened to me," he says. "It's more than I ever expected.

"NOW, I WANT TO TURN the one-way street around and give some positive input. I want to put back some of the joy baseball has given me."

So far, the joy of the 1979 season has been missing for Sutton, too.

The Dodgers are struggling, and the pitching corps has been battered badly in the

It Wasn't Artistic, but So What? -- Fregosi

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — It wasn't a very pretty victory, but California Manager Jim Fregosi will take it.

The Angels and Minnesota Twins combined for five errors and nine unearned runs Wednesday, but California's 11-6 triumph left the Angels tied with Texas atop the American League's Western Division, good enough for Fregosi.

"IT WASN'T AN ARTISTIC success, but so what?" Fregosi said. "I've been in games like this on both sides. The field was in rough shape and that sometimes makes fielders apprehensive."

The Angels picked up three unearned runs in the second inning and two more in the top of the third to forge a 7-2 lead before Minnesota battled back.

All three of the Twins' runs in the bottom of the third were unearned, thanks to a throwing error by Angels' starter Chris Knapp. And it wasn't until the eighth inning before California scored three more times to break open an 8-6 contest.

"WE HAD TOO MANY opportunities to score when we didn't, and we didn't prevent them from scoring some runs they never should have had," said Minnesota shortstop Roy Smalley, whose solo home run in the first inning gave the Twins a brief 1-0 lead.

Former Twin Rod Carew was in on California's scoring most of the day, scoring three times, knocking in two runs and collecting four hits plus a walk in five trips to the plate.

Carew, a seven-time A.L. batting champion, notched his 44th four-hit game of his career and is 8-for-17 against his former teammates.

"BIG DEAL," said Fregosi. "At one time or another Carew has hit like that against just about every team, including this one."

Twins skipper Gene Mauch agreed.

"He's in a situation now like he was in 1977 when he had good hitters behind him," Mauch said, referring to the year Minnesota had Carew, Larry Hisle and the late Lyman Bostock in the lineup.

The heart of the California batting order accounted for eight of the Angels 10 runs batted in. Don Baylor, Joe Rudi and Willie Aikens each had two RBI's in addition to Carew, while Bobby Grich was 3 for 5.

ANGRY DRIVERS WILL RACE INDY

NEW YORK (AP) — Holding a boycott threat in abeyance, leading auto race drivers reiterated Wednesday they plan to compete in the Indianapolis 500 May 27 despite newly imposed restrictions not to their liking.

"It's the biggest race in the business — it's where the money and prestige are," said Salt Walther. "I don't think any of the guys are thinking boycott. But the idea of cutting the engine boost will hurt the race."

"We'll run — we'll have to meet their conditions even if we don't like them," added two-time Indy winner Johnny Rutherford. "Too bad we have people making rules which they don't understand."

Dodgers Blanked

Lasorda: We Just Couldn't Produce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Houston Astros' Manager Bill Virdon watched his team win its second successive series over Los Angeles and remarked in understatement, "I'd say we have established the fact that we can stay in the same ballpark with the Dodgers."

The latest Houston victory came Wednesday night as Vern Ruhle threw a six-hit shutout at Los Angeles in the Astros' 4-0 triumph.

HOUSTON INCREASED its lead in the National League West to two games, and Los Angeles dropped 3½ games behind and into fifth place, the lowest the Dodgers have been in the standings in three years.

"We just couldn't produce a thing," said Los Angeles' Manager Tom Lasorda after his club suffered its seventh loss in its last nine games and second shutout defeat in three nights.

Houston jumped on Los Angeles' starter Doug Rau, 0-2, for three runs in the second inning and that was plenty for the 28-year-old Ruhle, who earned his first victory in three decisions.

RUHLE, RELEASED LAST SPRING by the Detroit Tigers after experiencing arm trouble, permitted only two runners past first base in pitching his third NL shutout.

"It was nice to get a few breaks and getting those runs early made my job easier," said Ruhle.

CEY

"He had good control, good stuff and enough zip on his fastball," Virdon said following the Astros' seventh complete game in 13 starts, and the mound staff's fourth shutout.

THIRD BASEMAN RON CEY collected three of Los Angeles' six hits. Cey, who had labored through a 0-for-19 slump, said, "He (Ruhle) pitched very well. Their pitching staff is hot. That's one reason we're getting beat, because someone else is playing good baseball.

"We're just not doing some of the things we know we can do. But a lot of clubs would like to be 6-8."

Rau said afterward that part of his problem is a sore shoulder. He has failed to last more than five innings in any of his three starts and his earned run average is 6.23.

"THE STIFFNESS IN THE SHOULDER definitely is bothering me," said the Los Angeles left-hander. "It's throwing me off, but with six days before my next start, I feel things will change."

Jose Cruz doubled home Houston's first run in the second inning, and Alan Ashby's sacrifice fly produced another. Rau wild-pitched home the third run.

Walton's Revolution Seems Over

NEW YORK (AP) — The revolution seems to be over for Bill Walton.

Gone are the days when Walton used his position as basketball's premier center as a pedestal from which he criticized the American government and its policies.

Walton, a Balboa Island resident, was in New York recently to publicize his segment on the "American Sportsman" this Sunday. The 6-11 center wisecracked and chatted easily about climbing a 145-foot tree in the Philippines to view the nesting of the endangered monkey-eating eagle.

WEARING A SPORTS JACKET and a tie, his red beard and hair neatly trimmed, Walton patiently signed autographs for well-wishers and was extremely cordial and relaxed while talking with a couple of journalists.

It was hard to believe that this was the same man who once told a news conference that he urged "the people of the world to stand with us in our rejection of the United States government" or the same man whose dealings with newsmen have often been nonexistent.

WALTON HAS MISSED the entire National Basketball Assocation season because of a stress fracture of the left foot he suffered last April 21. The injury prompted him to denounce the medical practices of the Portland Trail Blazers, insisting he would never play for that club again.

But even that stance has softened, and many pro basketball observers now feel he'll return to Portland next season. All Walton will say, however, is: "I don't know where I'm gonna play, I just know I'm gonna play."

He says he now plays a lot of one-on-one basketball, rides his bike and lifts weights.

A Capsule Report From the World of Sports

Rodgers, Carter Have Running Conversation

From AP Dispatches

BOSTON — When America's First Jogger telephoned America's fastest marathoner, he was put on hold.

So many well-wishers called Bill Rodgers' running store on Tuesday that President Carter had to wait to get through with his message to the winner of Monday's Boston Marathon.

"I picked up the phone and he just said, 'Hi, Bill, this is President Carter.' Out of the blue. I was shocked," said Rodgers.

RODGERS

"He complimented me on my win and he was wondering about the marathon. He said he grinds out five or six miles a day. I told him, 'You're doing a good job as a runner and as a president.'"

Carter invited Rodgers and his wife, Ellen, to a White House dinner for Japan's Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Rodgers won his second straight Boston Marathon with a record clocking of two hours, 9 minutes, 27 seconds, besting his own record of 2:09.55. He called it "the best quality marathon I've ever run."

Goorjian Leaves ASU for Loyola

PHOENIX—Greg Goorjian, an All-CIF sensation at Crescenta Valley High and a starting freshman guard for Arizona State last season, is reported leaving the campus to join his father at Loyola University. Goorjian said he decided to leave ASU after his father, Ed, accepted the job as assistant coach at Loyola two weeks ago. Goorjian, who holds numerous CIF state scoring records, averaged nine points and three assists for the Sun Devils last season.

Texas outfielder Oscar Gamble, recalling his dismal 1978 season after signing a $2.85-million contract: "Most of the San Diego fans didn't even know my name. They just called me 2.85. That's the way I was known to most of the fans out there—2.85. It was a long, long year."

Zoeller Loaded With Confidence

RANCHO LA COSTA —"Betsy's back in the bag and if I ever come down out of orbit, I should do real well this week," new Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller said before teeing off today in the first round of the Tournament of Champions.

Betsy, of course, is the putter that went sailing out of sight when Zoeller dropped a birdie putt on the second extra hole for his dramatic victory in Augusta, Ga.

Although Zoeller thought it was gone, his caddy found the putter and returned it to him.

"She's acting very nicely now and I'm loaded with confidence," said the happy-go-lucky Zoeller, a Masters long-shot who scored his first pro golf tour victory earlier this year in nearby San Diego.

Despite his confidence, the hard-hitting Zoeller had a back problem going into today's first round.

He said he "jerked a knot" in his back on a tee shot Wednesday and had to quit after six holes to seek medical attention.

MARK FIDRYCH

The Bird's Feathers Ruffled

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mark "The Bird" Fidrych getting ready to pitch looks like Arnold Palmer getting ready to putt — knees together, feet apart, shoulders hunched over.

His pitching routine is all Fidrych, though.

He talks to himself, talks to the ball, talks to the resin bag. He rearranges the mound, storms to the pitching rubber and flings the ball in a rage.

THE BIRD'S ROUTINE came out of hiding Wednesday night as Fidrych pitched 3⅓ innings for the Detroit Tigers in a 6-0 exhibition loss to the Cincinnati Reds.

He pitched once against big leaguers in spring training. In fact, because of arm trouble, he hasn't pitched very much at all since he was the sensation of 1976, his rookie season.

That year, he posted a 19-9 mark and led the American League with a 2.34 earned run average. His last regular-season game was a year ago Tuesday.

"MY ARM WAS ALL RIGHT. When I threw the ball I didn't worry about it," Fidrych said Wednesday night. "I threw as hard as I could. I was just getting racked around a little bit."

The Bird gave up five runs on seven hits, including five for extra bases, but he said that was an improvement over his spring training performance.

"I came out smelling bad, but at least I was throwing strikes," he said. "Maybe next time I will be even better. Everyone gets hit. I've been hit worse than that."

CHAMP SUMMERS and Cesar Geronimo led the Cincinnati assault, Summers with a double and a home run and Geronimo with a double and a triple.

The Reds scored twice in the second inning on doubles by Summers, Dan Driessen and Geronimo. Summers led off the fourth with the homer, Driessen followed with a walk and scored on Geronimo's triple, and Vic Correll singled in Geronimo.

The Bird's inglorious departure failed to leave him dispirited.

"I KNOW I BELONG here (in the major leagues) and not on the sidelines," he said. "If I didn't think I had it in me, I would have quit.

"When I'm ready to pitch, I think there'll be a spot for me on the Tigers. What the company wants to do with me, they'll do with me. But if they wanted me to go down and pitch for Evansville, I'd say no."

Fidrych may start again for the Tigers when the Reds go to Detroit next week for a return exhibition game. After that, it'll be up to Manager Les Moss whether The Bird takes up roost again in the Tiger rotation.

"Nobody wants to admit it openly, but how well (Bob) Welch and (Terry) Forster return to form will play a big role in how well we do this season.

"WE KNOW THIS TEAM is going to score runs, it's just going to take six or seven guys who want to double up on the pitching staff to get us going.

"This could easily happen as Welch could develop quickly and (Andy) Messersmith should be able to win his share. We've added a lot of guys (Darrel Thomas, Gary Thomasson, Von Joshua) who are going to help us.

"I just want to stay well and keep going out there. I have a lot of big memories of the game of baseball."

DAVE CUNNINGHAM

Bring Back Fregosi?

Bring back Jim Fregosi.

Let's see Anaheim's favorite Angel back at shortstop, fielding grounders and making the old double play pivot again.

Rumors continue to circulate that the Angels want a new shortstop. So why not Fregosi?

Baltimore's three-time Gold Glove winner, Mark Belanger, is the current topic of speculation. The Orioles say he's available.

So what? In the past two seasons Belanger has hit .213 and .206. Sure, in those same years his fielding percentage was .985, but the man is 34 years old.

WHEN BELANGER SIGNED with the Orioles for a $35,000 bonus in 1962, baseball still included names like Roger Maris, Mickey Mantle, Warren Spahn and Stan Musial.

Insiders say that Fregosi specifically asked for help in the shortstop department, but GM Buzzie Bavasi hesitated to make a trade. He said he wanted to give the youngsters a chance.

Among the early trade rumors was one with Texas which had aging veteran Bert Campaneris coming to California for Dave Chalk.

That, too, seemed like a mistake to me. At 36, Campaneris is even older than Belanger. He hit .186 last year. His value to the team, even as an elder statesman or wiseman, would be very limited . . . hardly worth the six-figure salary he commands.

IF THE TEAM WANTS that kind of shortstop, why not make Fregosi a player-manager? It's being done in Chicago, with shortstop Don Kessinger managing and playing for the White Sox.

Fregosi is 37, right in the same league with Belanger, Campaneris and Kessinger. He has a better lifetime average (.265) than any of them.

Last April Fregosi was a major league shortstop in Pittsburgh. He played 20 games and hit .200 before Gene Autry got on the phone and made him an offer he couldn't refuse.

THIS IS THE MAN who still holds virtually every career hitting record for the Angels, despite having been traded away eight years ago.

But, as you may have guessed, I am joking. Fregosi is no more qualified to play shortstop for the Angels than Bobby Knoop is fit to make a comeback at second base. Knoop retired seven years ago.

My contention, and I think Bavasi agrees, is that Rance Mulliniks can do the job. He played 78 games in 1977 and hit .269 as a raw, 21-year-old rookie.

He slipped to .185 in just 50 games last season, but Mulliniks redeemed himself by hitting .307 at Salt Lake City. He had an equally successful spring training and won the job over Orlando Ramirez and Jim Anderson.

BAVASI HAS NOT ONLY resisted a trade for a more experienced shortstop, but he has also turned down offers from clubs who wanted Mulliniks.

"I don't think I saw the real Rance Mulliniks last year," Bavasi says. "Everything I heard about him was favorable and even this past winter a lot of clubs inquired about him. We're confident he can bounce back and do the job."

As soon as everyone else starts sharing that same confidence, we can put to death the rumors about people like Belanger and Campaneris.

Bossy Puts in the Winner

Islander Star Doing It All

From AP Dispatches

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — New York Islanders right wing Mike Bossy is running out of ways to top himself.

It wasn't enough he scored 69 goals in the regular season, or that he scored three times and had an assist Monday night in the Islanders' 6-2 rout of the Chicago Black Hawks.

So Bossy topped himself again, sending a five-foot shot past Chicago goalie Tony Esposito at 2:31 of overtime Wednesday night to give New York the first 1-0 overtime NHL playoff triumph in 25 years.

"I love to see the puck go in, and I love to see the red light flash," said the 22-year-old Bossy, who saw two of his favorite things after flipping a perfect Bryan Trottier pass behind Esposito.

In less than two National Hockey League seasons, Bossy has set more records than most players set in a career.

What, in the world, can he do next?

"I want to win a Stanley Cup," he said. "But after that? Well, I don't think winning one Cup would be a feeling that I won't be able to surpass. I'd want to be on a team that wins it again."

Canadiens 5, Maple Leafs 1

MONTREAL — Bob Gainey, first winner of the Frank Selke Trophy as the best defensive forward in the National Hockey League last season, looked all that and more Wednesday night, scoring two goals to lead the Montreal Canadiens to a 5-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final series.

"It's just tremendous to play alongside guys like Jacques Lemaire and Guy Lafleur," said left winger Gainey in crediting his new linemates with making his outstanding performance possible.

"It's very easy to do well playing beside the best players in the world.

"I didn't do anything different. I played the same way I would on a line with Doug Jarvis. It's just that Lemaire and Lafleur play so well offensively that when you play with them you have to get involved in good scoring chances. That's what happened tonight."

Lafleur scored one goal and had three assists, and Lemaire and Steve Shutt scored the other goals for Montreal.

Rangers 6, Flyers 1

PHILADELPHIA — It may be hard to envision how a 7-1 game turns on one goal.

But that was the feeling Wednesday night after the New York Rangers defeated the Philadelphia Flyers in the second game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League quarter-final playoff series.

After the victory the Rangers headed home for games Friday and Saturday nights. The Rangers' victory enabled them to tie the series 1-1 and steal the home-ice edge.

Bruins 4, Penguins 3

BOSTON — Coach Don Cherry admits it's tough playing a team like the Pittsburth Penguins, but he insists his Boston Bruins are not going to open up and play like the Ice Follies.

"It's like going out to fight a guy in the ring and all he does is feint and back up — it's tough putting on a show," Cherry said Wednesday night after the Bruins edged the Penguins 4-3 for a 2-0 lead in their National Hockey League quarter-final playoffs.

"They sit back and grab the wings, and it's tough playing a team like that," Cherry said. "That's the way they beat Buffalo and that's the way they win hockey games. There's no way that I'm opening up.

Molitor Brothers: UCI's Rowing Bookends

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When John Molitor decided to follow in his brother's crew steps, he didn't figure he'd become part of a matching set of rowing bookends.

But that's the way UC Irvine's varsity eight shapes up after Coach Bob Newman juggled his lineup to make John the bow man and older brother Chris the stroke oarsman. Because as similar as they are on dry land, they are at opposite ends of not only the shell but the crew spectrum as well.

CHRIS, A 6-3, 195-POUND senior, rows on the starboard side. The captain of the crew in his third year on the varsity eight, he's one of the strongest men in the boat and has a double major of chemistry and biology in the class room.

John, a 6-1, 180-pound junior, rows on the port side. The smallest man in the boat in his second year on the varsity eight, he's one of the best technical rowers who just happens to major in biology.

Both spent their first year at UCI rowing with the freshmen eight and living in a dorm before moving up to the varsity and an apartment in Balboa. And both got into rowing for the same reason - a way to break up the monotony of academics.

"I couldn't just go to school. I think I'd go crazy," says Chris, the more vocal of the pair. "I don't think I could study and do nothing else.

"IT WAS SOMETHING NEW, a challenge," explains the more serious John. "They say once you row for one year, you'll come back for three more. It's addicting."

Chris was recruited by one of UCI's patented practices - knocking on dorm doors. "I figured, what else is there," he recalls. "I had played football in high school but I didn't want to play anymore. Crew was a fresh start but it sure wasn't easy."

More than word of mouth, John was recruited by word of sight. "I went to some of my brother's races and it looked pretty fun," he says with a chuckle. "I looked into it and decided to try it. Chris didn't pressure me at all. I just wanted to try something because I didn't go out for any sports in high school."

CREW IS STILL ENJOYABLE to the Molitors, despite a training schedule that includes two hours of rowing, Monday through Saturday, and another hour and a half of weight lifting and running Monday through Wednesday.

CHRIS MOLITOR

JOHN MOLITOR

"You train all year for seven or eight races that last about six minutes each," says John. "So you're talking about hundreds of hours for less than 50 minutes of competition.

"It's worth it but sometimes we all have doubts. Like when you're in grave pain, you say 'What am I doing here.'"

Chris, who along with Jeff Hansler, John Augustine and Mike Gilb have been rowing together since freshmen, laughs when he says the key to a successful crew is "big legs."

"ACTUALLY, SWING IS the big word around here," he says. "You're on when everybody does everything together, you have the proper technique, the timing is perfect and you're long in the water.

"You should hear one sound when the blades enter the water and one sound when they come out."

Since it is his job to set the pace and rhythm for the boat, Chris carries a lot of responsibility on his broad shoulders, whether it be in his new position as the stroke man or in his old slot in the No. 7 seat.

BETWEEN THEM, CHRIS and John have seven years of rowing experience, five on the varsity level. But their seats are anything but guaranteed since all varsity spots are open to challenges.

"I'm starboard and John's port so we never compete for the same seat," Chris says. "But we do have to earn our positions each year. Just because you're in the boat one year, doesn't mean you'll be in it the next."

CdM Rolls Again

Estancia Belts Costa Mesa

Corona del Mar High's Sea Kings virtually wrapped up the Sea View League baseball championship with a 12-5 victory over host Irvine High Wednesday afternoon to highlight area prep baseball action.

Coach Tom Trager's Sea Kings lashed out 13 base hits and benefited from seven Irvine errors to post the victory.

Jim Shollin socked a solo homer in the third inning for CdM, then in the fifth the Sea Kings exploded for six tallies. The big inning was highlighted by Carl Ehmann's double and a two-run single by Chris Johnston.

Other runs were driven in by Shollin, Jeff Cole and John Melbon with a double.

Jim Heil had a two-run double for Irvine in the sixth after the Sea Kings had put the decision beyond reach. Ehmann had two doubles and a single in four trips to the plate.

In other games Wednesday:

Estancia 6, Costa Mesa 1

Estancia's Eagles scored five times in the second inning, more than enough to defeat visiting Costa Mesa's Mustangs. The runs came on three base hits, two walks and a costly error.

Rick Riley and Roy Santa Maria had singles and Randy Brouwer had a safety that got two runs home in the inning.

The victory put Estancia in second place in the Sea View League standings with Costa Mesa dropping to third.

Estancia's Bob Larimer had two hits in three plate appearances while pitcher Glenn Donnelly had six strikeouts and one walk. Dave Campbell had seven whiffs for Costa Mesa but gave up six walks.

Mission Viejo 12, Dana Hills 6

South Coast League leader Mission Viejo took an early lead and added seven big runs in the sixth frame to thwart a Dana Hills threat.

Three Dana Hills players had two base hits including Gary Tovey, Bill Crowder and Kevin Gardner. Tovey also had two RBI for the Dolphins.

Westminster 6, Edison 5

Langston had opened the inning with a double and moved to third on a sacrifice bunt with the score tied at 6-6.

Edison scored three times in the third inning to tie the count with Mike Zinn getting a triple to drive two of the runs across.

Saddleback Splits

Bucs Blast Grossmont

Orange Coast College breezed to a 15-0 victory over host Grossmont in South Coast Conference baseball action Wednesday while Saddleback College was splitting a pair of 12-11 games with San Diego City College in the Mission Conference.

Coach Mike Mayne's Orange Coast Pirates had 18 hits in blasting Grossmont with every starter but one getting at least two. Three players had two RBI including Don Hill, Ruben Soto and Mark Marches.

Saddleback and San Diego CC completed a suspended game that was called by darkness after nine innings and the teams tied, 11-11. Ruben Candelaria belted a double off the left field fence with one out, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Doug Fritz' line drive single to win it.

The second game was a rainout earlier and found San Diego scoring six runs in the eighth inning to come from behind for the win.

UC Irvine Gets Barnes

Continuing its search for front court players, UC Irvine has signed 6-7 forward Donald Barnes of North High in Riverside to a national letter of intent.

An All-CIF 3-A selection, Barnes averaged 14.4 points, nine rebounds and three blocked shots for the Huskies, who were unbeaten during the 1978-1979 season before they lost to Downey in the CIF championship final.

Safe Landing

Seattle's Julio Cruz slides back safely under the tag of Oakland's Dave Revering during third inning action Wednesday. An inning later, Cruz was ejected for arguing with the second base umpire as the A's won, 5-2.

Fimlaid Fools 'Em

Swim Star's Looks Are Deceiving

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

To look at Golden West College's Al Fimlaid, the last thing an observer would say was that he resembled one of the top swimmers in the state, or even resembled a swimmer at all.

Sun-bleached blond hair with a small beard, if Fimlaid did anything in the water it was probably on a surf board.

And yet, when the GWC swim team invades Ventura today through Saturday for the Southern Cal championships, Fimlaid will be counted on heavily to lead the Rustlers to the conference title.

LIKE MOST WHO participate in aquatics, Fimlaid was reared in the water at an early age.

"I learned to swim at the age of two, and by the time I was four I was already a member of a swim team," said the 6-2, 180-pounder.

Supported by his mother, a pretty fair swimmer herself in college, in the early goings, Fimlaid developed into one of the top prospects in the nation for his age, owning 35 top-10 rankings in the nation by the age of 10.

"I was in the water almost every day, and started double workouts (three hours daily) at the age of nine," he says.

THE HARD WORK paid handsome dividends as Fimlaid owned the national record in the backstroke at age 10. But the hard work also had its drawbacks as Fimlaid "was burned out" on the sport shortly thereafter.

"From the age of seven to 13 that's all I did and I finally got burned out," says Fimlaid candidly. "I took three years and didn't do anything."

Fimlaid's interest was finally rekindled as a senior at Westminster High.

"Ken Hamdorf (the GWC swim coach) helped a lot," he says. "He got personally involved and is a good motivator."

FIMLAID DIDN'T SET the world on fire at Westminster, but he did get himself into shape for Golden West, where he has been nothing short of spectacular in his two years at the campus.

AL FIMLAID

In the latest statistics released for the best times in the state this season, Fimlaid ranks second in the 200 backstroke (1:59.96), fourth in the 200 individual medley (1:59.69), 20th in the 100 free (0:49.00), and 29th in the 200 free (1:48.50).

"I really enjoy the back and the indo," he says. "I get bored with the free because it's nothing but conditioning."

THE 400 INDO, which consists of four different strokes (free, back, breast and butterfly), is easily Fimlaid's favorite, but also his most strenuous.

"Four laps with each stroke is really a grueler, but I like it because you have to change paces and strokes and you have to go through your best and worst. It's definitely my most challenging event."

Swimming is still not as important to Fimlaid today as it was when he was setting records as a youngster. He works out daily, but only what is required by his coach. He doesn't have any aspirations toward the Olympics; nor does he know if he even wants to compete at all after his first year at a major college.

"I'll just swim next year and see what happens after that," he says.

ONE EVENT HE IS pointing towards, though, is the state championships in early May.

"What it all comes down to is one meet," he says, with some competitiveness in his voice. "I would like to swim a 1:54 in the 200 back, that should win it. And I'd like to finish in the top three in the indo."

And how should the team fare?

"This is the best team I've ever competed with," Fimlaid says honestly. "We have a lot of depth."

Most of that depth is provided by Fimlaid.

Sailors, Area JCs Triumph

Newport Harbor High's Sailors remained undefeated in Sunset League volleyball action after defeating Fountain Valley, 3-1, Wednesday night.

The loss dropped the Barons to second place a game behind the Tars with Huntington Beach, a 3-0 victor over Marina, in third place.

Huntington Beach, battling to gain a CIF playoff berth, had strong games from Ricky Glenn as a middle blocker, Dave Mottsinger as an outside hitter and Ken Griest as a setter.

The Edison-Westminster match was called before completion with an appeal being made to the CIF concerning the officiating.

On the junior college front, Golden West's Rustlers have a perfect 4-0 Southern California Conference record after stopping LA Harbor in four games, 3-1.

Orange Coast's Pirates are likewise undefeated in conference action with a 6-0 mark. Two matches remain, one with Santa Ana Friday night, that could determine the champion of the South Coast Conference.

Orange Coast returned to action after a layoff for the Easter vacation period but defeated Cerritos in three straight games, 15-8, 16-14, 15-11.

Edison Shocks Oilers

Ted Nusenow defeated Lance Fedderly, 6-4, in the final match to give Edison High's Chargers an upset 14½-13½ Sunset League tennis victory over league leading Huntington Beach Wednesday afternoon on the winner's courts.

Aiding the victory with 4½ points was the Edison doubles team of Craig Nusenow and Larry Hartmann. Huntington Beach still leads the league with an 8-3 record to 7-4 for Fountain Valley.

Laguna Beach toyed with Capistrano Valley while Alan Mitchell and Dan Murphy won all of their singles matches to lead San Clemente to victory over Laguna Hills, 23-5.

On the women's front, all three area JCs are leading their leagues. Orange Coast wrapped up the South Coast title for the second straight year with an 11-0 record and a 14-1 overall effort.

Saddleback is leading the Mission Conference and Golden West the Southern Cal circuit. Saddleback defeated San Bernardino, 8-1 while GWC went out of conference to top Pasadena, 6½-2½.

Mt. SAC Relays

Who Will Finish Second to King?

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Before track practice began Tuesday, UC Irvine Coach Len Miller was recapping his team's entries in the Mt. SAC Relays when he came to the long jump.

"You want to know who you're jumping against, La Monte?" he asked his three-event star, LaMonte King. "Okay, competing for second place will be Arnie Robinson, Randy Williams, Charlton Ehizuelen ..."

KING CHUCKLED, of course, but nobody would be surprised in the least if he did beat Robinson and Williams, Olympic champions in 1976 and 1972, when the 20th running of the Mt. SAC Relays showcases a world-class field in nearly every event Saturday.

King leaped 26-10¼ as a freshman last year to rank among the top 10 in the world. Last week, he sailed 25-8¾ at the San Jose Relays to beat Williams and has had a couple of jumps in the 26-foot range disqualified.

A triple winner in last year's PCAA championships, King also faces a stellar field in the 200 meters. He has run a 20.3 hand-timed this season which, converted to an electronic clocking, would rank eighth in the United States this year.

WITH A 200 FIELD that includes Olympian Millard Hampton, Guy Abraham (20.8), Wardell Gilbreath, and possibly Clancy Edwards and Dwayne Evans, Tommie Smith's 20.4 stadium and meet record is in jeopardy.

In fact, with the new synthetic surface installed in a stadium that was one of the fastest of the 1960s, most records could come tumbling Saturday.

THE MEET WILL mark Tim Chambers' season debut in the 400 intermediate hurdles. Chambers clocked 51.8 as a freshman last year before being sidelined by an injury. He'll also team up with Vincent Shelton, Darryl McGee and Anthony Wells on a crack 1,600 relay team that has already clocked 3:12.5.

Bill Thilken has a good shot at placing in the pole vault, based on his career best of 16-6. Likewise Curt Eilenberg in the javelin (224-7).

Dave Daniels, UCI's outstanding steeplechase runner, will run the mile in the distance medley relay team that also includes Wells (400), Thomas Frazier (800) and David Schriver (1,320). UCI will also field a strong 1,600 relay team with Joe Young, Joe Avila, Don Moses and Charlie Christensen.

GWC Loses; Irvine Girls Romp, 15-0

Robin Lenzen drove in a pair of runs with a homer and a triple to lead host Rio Hondo College to a 2-1 women's softball victory over Golden West College Wednesday in women's softball action.

On the high school scene, Jenny Viega belted a grand slam homer and Jodie Ybarra pitched a one-hitter as Irvine High defeated Corona del Mar, 15-0, in Sea View League play.

Lenzen's day at the plate for Rio Hondo was capped with a 3-for-3 performance that also included a single. Her homer came in the third inning and the triple brought the winning tally across in the fifth.

Bridget Cross drove in the only Golden West run in the fourth inning with a triple. The Rustlers still lead the circuit standings with a 4-1 record to 3-2 for Rio Hondo in second place. Golden West is 22-6 for the season.

Irvine is 4-0 in league play after Wednesday's victory. Viega's homer sparked a nine-run fourth inning for the Vaqueros. Shelley Ovesen had a two-run homer.

Rossman Won't Have Surgery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Surgery will not be required on Mike Rossman's right hand broken during his loss to Victor Galindez for the World Boxing Association light heavyweight championship.

Dr. Edward A. Campbell, New York Athletic Commission physician, also told Rossman Wednesday that the bone is not the same one he broke in a 1977 fight.

It's Easier to Replace Rams

SACRAMENTO (AP) — It would be easier for Los Angeles to obtain a replacement franchise for the Rams football team, under a bill that has cleared its first Assembly committee test.

AB 787 by Assemblywoman Theresa Hughes, D-Los Angeles, won 7-1 approval Tuesday by the Assembly Committee on Governmental Organization, and went to the Ways and Means Committee.

Ms. Hughes said Los Angeles has not been able to secure a replacement for the Rams, scheduled to move to Anaheim in 1980, "because of the anti-competitive nature of the National Football League."

She said it is not for "a lack of interested teams."

Mustangs Top Foe

Mike Moiso won both hurdle events and placed second in the triple jump in addition to running on the winning relay team for the Costa Mesa High Mustangs in a Sea View League dual meet against El Toro Wednesday afternoon.

Moiso's efforts helped push the Mustangs to a 68-67 victory — but it was not official until this morning when it was confirmed that El Toro did not pick up a point for a third place in the pole vault because the opening height was not cleared.

Moiso had a 15.6 in the high hurdles and a 41.1 in the low hurdles for his double.

Bananas Go to Battle

Chavez Boycott Aims at Lettuce Victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cesar Chavez, his United Farm Workers union locked in another struggle he fears it may not survive, is resorting once again to his ultimate weapon — a call for a consumer boycott.

The target is not grapes or lettuce or wine. It is Chiquita bananas.

CHAVEZ HOPES THE boycott will bring victory in the union's three-month strike against 11 major lettuce growers in California and Arizona.

The connection between bananas and lettuce?

Sun Harvest Inc., one of the largest struck growers, is owned by United Brands Co., which sells bananas under the Chiquita label. A successful banana boycott, the UFW hopes, would pressure Sun Harvest into settling with the union and set a pattern for the other growers.

"OUR BEST HOPE is the boycott," Chavez said in an interview. "The best hope is what we call 'The Court of Last Resort' — the American public."

In its 13 years, the 12,000-member UFW has won the backing of up to 17 million adults for boycotts launched to gain bargaining recognition, according to a national poll cited by the union.

"The American public," Chavez says, "has been very good to us."

CHAVEZ, 52 AND still the dominant force in the union he founded 13 years ago, is touring the country on behalf of the six-week-old boycott.

This week he is in Washington, seeking publicity for the boycott, along with money from other unions and government support for his lettuce strike.

The boycott, he says, is causing alarm at United Brands.

But company spokesmen following behind Chavez contend the UFW provoked the lettuce strike and is exploiting the good intentions of sympathetic consumers who are being asked to back a strike that will result in sharply higher food prices.

CHAVEZ CONTENDS the growers are trying to break the strike — and ultimately the UFW — by importing illegal aliens to replace the striking farm workers.

Non-union harvesting is up to 30 percent "and increasing," he said, claiming the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service is ignoring the situation.

"If we cannot stop the unchecked illegal immigrant strike-breaking game that they've been playing, it'll be very serious for the entire union. We need desperately to get the government to enforce the law."

CHAVEZ SAID THE union will face its critical test late this month when the lettuce harvest begins in California's Salinas valley, billed as the nation's "Salad Bowl."

The company, however, says the issue "is not the establishment or survival of a union or cause, but the settlement of a contract."

And so far, United Brands spokesman Dennis A. Sullivan said, the boycott has not affected sales of Chiquita, which he called "the most valuable thing" United Brands owns.

SULLIVAN DENIED that Sun Harvest has hired any illegal aliens. He said California's farm labor law allows for replacing striking workers, and that is what Sun Harvest has done.

Record Sales, Earnings Told By Allergan

Allergan Pharmaceuticals, Irvine, has reported record sales and earnings in the first quarter of 1979.

For the three months ended March 31, sales rose 34 percent to $18,230,000 from $13,648,009 in the prior year. Net income was $2,166,000, or 51 cents a share, compared with $1,633,000, or 39 cents, in the prior year, as adjusted for the 3-for-2 stock split on Sept. 1.

Earnings per share were computed on the basis of 4,229,000 average shares outstanding in the first quarter of 1979 and 4,186,000 in 1978.

In 1978, Allergan had record sales of $62,373,000 and record net income of $9,441,000, or $2.26. The company develops, manufactures and sells specialized ophthalmic and dermatologic products.

'Find Dirt?'

Tiny Telephone Company Probed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Art Brothers runs one of the nation's tiniest telephone companies. The way he runs it — with castoff equipment and seat-of-the-pants ingenuity — is the subject of a rare kind of Federal Communications Commission hearing.

The owner of Beehive Telephone Co. and his one employee provide service to 101 customers scattered over 7,000 square miles of rural Utah economically unattractive to a giant like Mountain Bell.

"IF ONE OF MY customers dies, I go to the funeral," Brothers, 49, says. "I sob and cry, but perhaps for different reasons."

Brothers will hold a phone in his left hand on April 30, raise his right hand and swear to tell the truth to FCC Law Judge David I. Kraushaar, who will be listening in Washington, D.C.

What follows will be another round in a hearing examining the "character" of Beehive, to determine if the agency should grant Brothers radio-telephone licenses so he can triple the number of customers he serves.

A ruling will follow, probably early this summer.

ORDINARILY, THE FCC wouldn't be involved. But Brothers uses radio frequencies instead of telephone wires for some out-of-the-way customers.

Beehive's "character" is at issue because the FCC in 1977 suspended Brothers' license for a year for what FCC attorney Steve Melnikoff says was "very pervasive violation of the rules in almost every area he operated."

"I just put radios on the air without a license," Brothers concedes, "and they came down on me like a ton of bricks."

THE HEARING IS rare, Melnikoff says, because the sole issue is "whether Beehive has the requisite character to be a licensee of this commission." And since the FCC already has determined Beehive and Brothers are the same, "in a sense it applies to Brothers."

"I thought it would be a quickie, once-over-easy, pro forma hearing," says Brothers, who's convinced the FCC's intention is to bankrupt him through legal fees. "They've been out trying to find all the dirt on Brothers they can."

"I think it's a distortion of the facts that we are bleeding him dry," Melnikoff responds.

BROTHERS

As for the "dirt," the Federal Aviation Administration in 1977 issued an emergency revocation order when Brothers was caught piloting a plane on a suspended license. The suspension came in 1974 after Brothers, attempting to land on a country road, struck a pickup, injuring himself and the occupants, an FAA spokesman says.

Brothers unsuccessfully appealed both rulings.

SAYS MELNIKOFF: "What bothers us is he's claiming to be rehabilitated."

Brothers says Beehive broke even last year, "providing Art Brothers doesn't take any salary." And yet he tirelessly logs 40,000 miles a year and gets by with used equipment he refurbishes.

PROTECT CHILDREN FROM CHOKING ACCIDENTS

By Terry Grant, R. Ph.

Be especially cautious to keep objects small enough to be swallowed away from infants and children. For they do not expectorate, but attempt to swallow and inhale them into the lungs. Teach them to spit anything out.

Do not stimulate a child to laugh or cry while food is in his mouth. Physicians advise it is not wise to reach into an infant's mouth to remove an impacted foreign object. Place the victim face down across a bed or chair and call a physician.

Attacks Lower U.S. Confidence

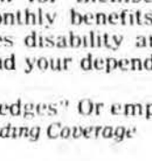

By SYLVIA PORTER
(Third of Four Columns)

Joseph Califano, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, may remember an event that took place on Columbus Day, 1966. His boss President Lyndon Johnson, spoke at an employee awards ceremony that day at Social Security headquarters just outside Baltimore.

On the platform with Johnson was Dave McNally, 23-year-old pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles who a few days earlier had pitched his team to victory in the World Series. McNally, a former Social Security beneficiary, was there to help Johnson make a point.

AFTER THE DEATH OF HIS FATHER in World War II, survivors benefits were paid to the McNally family.

The experience of the McNally family, Johnson said, "was a prime example of how Social Security helps the young as well as the aged." And Johnson added that, on his recommendation, Congress had extended payment of survivors benefits to full-time students 18 to 21 years old

But coolly declaring it's "a new ball game," Califano, just before Christmas, persuaded President Carter that these student benefits should be phased out along with other benefits.

In return for these benefits, workers have been paying higher and higher Social Security taxes. These taxes may account for some of the outraged reaction to the proposed benefit cutbacks. But here's an even more basic objection:

If we accept the Carter administration's implied thesis that the government has no obligation to fulfill its part of a compact created by the tax contributions of workers and employers, what protection do we have against a future administration forcing even more drastic cuts?

IN HIS PROPOSED BUDGET FOR the next fiscal year, Carter has recommended ending the $255 lump sum death benefit, which has been part of the law since 1939. In cases where a worker dies before retirement and leaves no eligible survivors, it may be the only payment in return for years of Social Security tax payments.

The House Ways and Means Committee rejected this cut, precluding any possibility of action by Congress in time for the next fiscal year. But the door is open for later consideration

Nelson Cruikshank, White House counselor on the aging, was bypassed by Califano and James McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, when the benefit cutbacks were being drafted.

HE OPPOSED THEM AT A congressional hearing, warning that this "breach of faith" could erode confidence in government.

Wilbur J. Cohen, former HEW secretary and an architect of the Social Security program, has formed a coalition of 115 organizations to combat the cuts.

There will be public hearings. Maybe before those hearings, Carter and Califano will find time to read a leaflet HEW distributed in January. Said the leaflet:

"Workers paying into the Social Security system are building lifetime protection for themselves and their families. In addition to monthly benefits in retirement, Social Security also provides disability and survivors insurance that protects you and your dependents throughout your working years."

Are these trustworthy pledges? Or empty promises?

Business Survey Cites Optimism

When Prudential asked business people in the 12-state Western region to compare their expected business activity for the second quarter of 1979 with this year's quarter, 76 percent said they looked forward to gains, 11 percent said they believed their business would stay the same and 13 percent said they expected a drop.

IN THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA-ARIZONA-Nevada region, business people were nearly as optimistic: 73 percent of those polled say their economic activity will increase during the second quarter when compared to the first three months of 1979. Some 10 percent said they anticipate a decrease, while 17 percent said they expect no change.

The 12-state panel was even more enthusiastic in measuring the second quarter against the same period of 1978: 83 percent said they figure on an increase, while 10 percent said they see a downtrend.

When panel members were asked to compare predicted second quarter activity against the same period in 1978, 83 percent of the agriculture and extractive group said they expected an upturn.

Price Policy Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's decision to lift price controls on domestically produced crude oil will spur inflation by half a percentage point more than the administration has predicted, a congressional study says.

The Congressional Budget Office study also said the deregulation will both save less oil and produce less oil than forecast by the White House.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., an opponent of Carter's plan to remove all price controls by mid-1981, released the study Wednesday.

90th Birthday

Nazis Rally For Hitler

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — American Nazis have called for a rally to commemorate the 90th birthday of Adolf Hitler, but Austrian authorities say they will prevent such a gathering and expel any foreigners who show up.

Police said Wednesday they intercepted a confidential letter circulated in Europe by Nazis in Lincoln, Neb., calling for a rally Saturday at Braunau, Hitler's birthplace, 150 miles west of here.

HITLER'S ACTUAL BIRTHDAY IS Friday. He was born April 20, 1889. Austria will not tolerate any gathering on its territory honoring Hitler, police said, and Neo-Nazis attempting to celebrate will be arrested and expelled if they are foreigners, according to the Austrian Press Agency.

HITLER

Police said the letter called on "old Nazi comrades" in the United States and Europe to "stage a mighty demonstration in Braunau to commemorate the birthday of the Fueher, Adolf Hitler."

A spokesman at the Interior Ministry said authorities believed the letter was authentic.

He said the letter was mailed by a group identifying itself as the NSDAP, the German acronym for the National Socialist German Workers' Party — the full title of Hitler's Nazi Party.

THEY SAID THE LETTER recommended "active resistance" against Austrian authorities in case of police action. The letter reportedly assumed that only a few local gendarmes would be on duty.

Police said, however, that gendarmerie and customs guards will be reinforced.

Nazis have conducted several marches in the United States recently, to protests from Jewish groups and survivors of concentration camps. The American Civil Liberties Union has argued that such groups have the constitutional right to march, even though their racist and white-supremacy principles may be opposed to American values.

MOST AUTHORITIES SAY HITLER committed suicide with his mistress Eva Braun at Berlin in 1945. Russia claims to have identified his body through dental markings after it was found in Hitler's Berlin command bunker in the final days of World War II.

Hitler grew up in Linz in upper Austria, but subsequently went to Munich and served in the German army in World War I. He did not return to Austria until 1938 when he proclaimed the Nazi annexation of Austria to "greater Germany."

Hitler's birthsite at Braunau on the Inn River, which forms the Austria-Germany border, was considered a shrine in the Nazi era from 1938 to 1945. The birthday celebration was abolished at the end of World War II, when Austria regained independence.

Pigeon Finds Love

BRYN, England (AP) — Arthur Tinsley, who raises pigeons, got a letter reporting that one of his birds flew 2,000 miles across Europe to find a home in the Soviet city of Odessa.

"She flew the loft and found a new love there," said Tinsley.

He said Priscilla was only 10 weeks old when she disappeared last year. Her new owner wrote that he picked up the bird near his home on the Black Sea coast and traced her through the identifying band on her leg.

Robert Walden, "Rossi" on "Lou Grant", talks with reporters at Press Club meeting

Rap With 'Rossi'

To learn his role as reporter Joe Rossi on 'The Lou Grant Show' actor Robert Walden spent time shadowing real reporters to see how they operate.

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Every Tuesday night on CBS gruff but lovable city editor Lou Grant oversees his news room domain, a bustling universe of clattering typewriters, ringing telephones and inquiring reporters.

This dramatization of big city journalism has not only become a weekly habit for millions of Americans, but it apparently has also become a favorite of many members of the fourth estate.

"They love it," claims Robert Walden, who plays "The Lou Grant Show's" brash investigative reporter Joe Rossi. "They think by far it's the best representation of the profession."

Not only is it assigned viewing in several college journalism schools, according to Walden, but no less than Walter Cronkite and Woodward and Bernstein tune in.

SO, TOO, DO THE MEMBERS of the Orange County Press Club who showed up Wednesday night at the Saddleback Inn in Santa Ana to hear Walden speak.

"Come Rap With Rossi," the press club flyer sent to members had said. And so they did, during an hour-long question and answer session with the 35-year-old Walden.

Except for a glass of orange juice — "That's too redneck for me;" he told someone who offered him a particular brand of beer — Walden appeared not unlike his TV reporter character.

He wore a brown corduroy suit, his tie was loosened at the neck and a pen stuck out of his shirt pocket. A reporter's notebook was even stuffed in his jacket. He says he uses it for messages and making notes to himself. "It's convenient," he explained. "I always carry it."

Walden, a native New Yorker who studied Method Acting, explained that he always researches the roles he plays. When he heard that brash Joe Rossi was, in part, based on Los Angeles Times reporter David Shaw, he followed Shaw around for days to learn how he operates.

"HE (SHAW) WAS SUPPOSED to be very disliked, very arrogant and a great writer," said Walden who described his TV character as a "workaholic" and a "social cripple."

"The role was actually written so obnoxious that he just had no redeeming social value," he said. "I realized this is the most unhappy person I've played in my life. He needs more love and recognition than anyone on that paper."

Actually, Walden is developing his own credentials as a journalist. Shaw wrote a "TV Guide" article about Walden and mentioned that the actor had writing ambitions. Walden subsequently was swamped with newspaper writing offers.

One offer he accepted was from the Los Angeles Free Press. The assignment was to cover a cross-country American Indian protest march to Washington.

"I didn't know anything about the Indian cause or the politics involved," he said. "But I thought it was an incredible human interest story."

HE SPENT MORE than four days with the Indians — 150 men, women and children — and his first-person account of the walk was carried on the front page of the paper.

"I not only had a great story but one of the great highs of my life," said Walden. "I was really happy about it. I worked harder on that than on any 'Lou Grant' episode."

Walden takes his writing seriously. "If I'm going to write it, it really has to be better than a professional piece," he said. "It has to be good because I'm crossing over in a profession I may not be qualified to be in."

Robert Walden, actor, just may have found a new vocation. Out of that story grew an offer from the New York Times to write an article on "How Lou Grant Glamorizes the News Profession."

"I don't think 'Lou Grant' glamorizes the profession. I think 'All the President's Men' did," said Walden, who had a role in that film

HE ALSO DIDN'T want to do a piece that would slam his own show. He smiled: "You just can't take shots at where you eat."

He feels he has a better idea for the Times. "I thought more interesting would be the media's reaction to 'Lou Grant.'

"I'd been to a lot of papers and got a lot of good notes. I was stunned at how much the media watches it and supports and likes it."

Walden, who plans to visit the Washington Post next week, said he enjoys writing.

"I like doing it and I think by actually writing or attempting to write I found what a

Musical Ensemble Showcases New Talent

By MARCIA FORSBERG
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In more than one of those old Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland movie musicals somebody usually popped up with: "I know! Let's put on a show!" Then the velvet curtains parted and a batch of clear-eyed, energetic troopers sang their hearts out.

Indeed, they put on a show.

Members of the three-year-old Orange County musical ensemble say their popularity is based on their versatility, rapport with an audience and vast repertoire a three-course menu of familiar Broadway show hits, favorite opera highlights and popular contemporary songs.

Plus, they say, they love what they do and have a good time doing it.

But they aren't a bunch of fresh-scrubbed kids. All have professional backgrounds

The Showcase Singers is a corporation comprised of five officers. Singers are Joie Bucknum, a former Western Regional finalist for the New York Metropolitan Opera who sang opera at Anaheim's Melodyland in its theatrical days; baritone Patrick Dundon, who has had operatic training and has appeared on recordings with the Smothers Brothers; and Jan Knowlton, who was attracted to musical comedy after taking "all the legitimate training for opera."

Pianist Linda Barker, trained in classical music, took her masters degree in music from the University of Denver. When not performing, she teaches piano. Business manager Bent Koldsbaek is an Orange County businessman who says he's "along for the ride."

But the group doesn't stop there. It maintains a roster of four accompanists and 20 singers. All are trained musicians who perform

Saving Souls For Beethoven

Cheryl Romo

My husband is trying to save me.

The initial conversion attempts began almost immediately after we started dating four years ago.

And he has worked diligently ever since in an attempt to rescue my misguided soul from the low-order strains of Pink Floyd and Peter Frampton.

He wants to turn me on to the music of Beethoven and Dvorak.

It started with a softly put suggestion that I take a music appreciation class so that I might become, he said, "an educated person."

Later, he would invite me over to his apartment to listen to classical music and would pretend he was conducting an orchestra. Although this sort of behavior may seem odd to some, I did not think it unusual at all.

His wild hand gestures and tapping feet only reminded me of someone having a good a time at a rock concert — to boring music.

Even though I have always discounted suggestions by others that I was the sort of person who could be easily persuaded and thus led astray, his incessant pastorale preaching eventually began to wear through the plastic walls of my acid rock heart.

His tactics were devious: Instead of flowers, he brought me a fifth of Beethoven. Each time I entered my car and turned on the radio, someone had mysteriously switched ever-lovin' KMET to the somber and affected KUSC.

As the years passed, the man who would eventually become my husband tried to reach me indirectly through my children.

The sabotage began when he attempted, and failed, to teach my son how to play classical guitar. He later persuaded my daughter to enroll in a music appreciation class at her school.

Naturally when she needed help with her homework, he knew she would come to me.

And because I didn't know who Liszt was or why Prokofieff loved oranges and still thought Yehudi Menuhin worked at the corner deli and Mozart was famous for being on a T-shirt — the crafty man thought he could shame me into the faith.

His plan backfired when my daughter became enamoured with a group known as "Cheap Trick" and was never seen worshipping at the shrine of Prokofieff or Liszt again.

In a last ditch effort to save me from total Moog corruption, he bought season tickets to the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Once a month we graced the 405 freeway leading to the holy shrine of shrines the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, and then climbed four flights of steep stairs to take our place among the faithful.

Our lofty position in the peanut gallery was so high above the performers, one felt a sense of vertigo when giving a standing ovation.

And the seats were so squashed together, the smell of holy body odor permeated the consecrated air.

To my husband's chagrin, I fell asleep twice during the services and admittedly found the whole experience uninspiring until last Saturday night.

Saturday was the first time I had ever seen Carlo Maria Giulini, the new music director and conductor of the philharmonic, in person.

The Italian Giulini is tall, elegant and looks romantically like Cary Grant in his black, long-tailed tuxedo. His commanding presence at the podium was so breathtaking, I was immediately converted and was just about to ask the man squashed next to me if I could borrow his binoculars.

But I hesitated after glancing at my husband who did not seem humored with my sudden classical conversion at all.

Life is difficult to understand sometimes. So are husbands. I mean, here I am, dripping with faith and eager to return to the Los Angeles Philharmonic to watch Giulini minister to his flock and what do I get?

A husband who doesn't understand me.

...Showcase Singers

on a rotating basis with members of the original group. It boils down to four singers and one accompanist per gig.

THE RESULT IS a vivacious, spirited aggregation that combines "experienced professional performers with stars of tomorrow," says Jan. "We're interested in providing an outlet for the local talent, so we take in aspiring singers."

The group's name is entwined with its philosophy. "The name 'Showcase Singers' connotes two things," says Koldsbaek. "One, to entertain — when they (the singers) are out there with the audience, when one gets down on his knee to sing a love song to someone in the audience, it's always part of the 'show.'

"And two, the idea that we showcase present — new talent. We try to make it financially attractive to them, so they can pursue their musical educations," he adds.

The criteria for performing with the singers include "training and quality of voice, plus a personality that warms with the audience," says Koldsbaek.

"The standards are very high," Linda stresses.

WHEN AUDITIONING FOR a slot on the roster, the "new" talent must be familiar with song after song after song to keep up with the extensive repertoire. No two shows are ever the same, says Joie; Linda adds that the group does "medleys from 40 Broadway shows, lots of opera and solo work."

They frolic through collages of tunes taken from "Camelot," "My Fair Lady," "Fiddler on the Roof," "Oklahoma" and "Chorus Line," to name a few. They do current hits like "You Light Up My Life" and "You Don't Send Me Flowers Anymore."

"People know those songs they've heard them on Musak," says Joie with a laugh.

"Many people won't go and sit through two hours of opera just to hear their favorite aria," says Koldsbaek. "But we do the favorites."

He adds that part of the Showcase Singers' charm is versatility. "These kids are schizophrenic. One minute Joie's out there doing Annie, and three minutes later she's doing something else. She has to switch characters.

"The singers spend weeks practicing the different personalities (for different musical numbers)," he says.

THE SINGERS STROLL through the crowds, encouraging audience participation and sing-alongs. "The audience likes to be a part of what's going on, and we have a feeling for the audience," says Jan.

They mingle even when playing to 6,000 people at the Shrine Auditorium. "We went out into the audience and sang to the guys," Jan recalls.

Since their beginnings in a Corona del Mar restaurant three years ago, the group has performed at Knott's Berry Farm, for civic groups and organizations in Orange and Los Angeles counties, for private parties, "on the beach at Catalina," says Joie, and at numerous other locations.

They currently appear at Five Crowns, Corona del Mar, Sundays and Mondays; Opaso restaurant in Orange, Sundays and Thursdays; and D'Amico's Italian Restaurant, Orange, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

journalist might experience and go through," he said.

"All that time and energy for something someone is going to wrap their fish in the next morning and someone is going to cut indiscriminately." (That comment drew appreciative laughs from the audience).

The experience, he said, changed the way he played Rossi in the second season. "It gave me much more confidence. I knew what I was doing at that desk."

TOWARD THE END of the questioning, someone finally asked the inevitable. What does Walden think of reporters?

"I'm in the great minority," he said. "I happen to like reporters a lot. I admire in this day and age people who can read and write. They're intelligent people.

"I like them because they care. They want to change things for the better. I think actors and reporters have something in common in that respect."

Walden paused and added, "I must say that more than doctors, more than actors, reporters are the most egotistical. In any city room I've been in, I feel the reporters think they're the brightest person in the room."

"It's true," commented someone in the audience over the din of laughter.

Welcome Home, Erma

Erma Bombeck

At least a dozen times during a year, I will hear from a reader who wonders what a superficial column on Monday dieters, oversexed coat hangers, legally dead football enthusiasts and siblings who argue for a living, is doing in a newspaper.

It does seem incongruous — in the midst of global wars, energy crises, unemployment, rising food costs and nuclear threats — that my prime concern is taking the static electricity out of my underwear.

On occasion when the criticism gets through to me, I pull out a letter written by a surgeon in Derry, N.H. In it, he describes the cardiac operating suite in a general hospital.

"I stare in wonder like any visitor.

"The blood sweeps rich and red through the bypass pump, its pulsating progress checked constantly by the 'pump driver,' the technician entrusted with this flow of life. Other artisans huddle over their machines and monitor the rhythms of existence.

"The knives flash in the brilliance of the overhead lights. Clamp, tie, cut.

"The hours go by. The surgeons stand like storks over the patient and by their side leans the nurse orchestrating with now weary gestures the clamor and chatter of the instruments, the sounds of survival.

"All is science. Technology is god. The room is a cathedral to the detachment, the unreality and the impersonality of modern life. And to life's inconsistencies.

"Because there, over there in the corner, beside the stainless steel supplies, the burnished sinks, the abundant accumulations of the systems of surgery, there on the notice board with all its checklists and warnings and instructions to those who worship at this temple, is stuck a piece of newspaper, the down-to-earth, back-to-basics benediction of the Erma Bombeck columns.

I've read that letter a thousand times. Maybe I need reassuring more than my readers that this day a new baby will utter his first words, "Make him stop looking at me," a bird will get sauced on pyracantha berries, and my mother will duly report that she became constipated in Mexico.

L. M. BOYD INFORMS in the DAILY PILOT

New Faces in the Crowd

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: These days with so many people popping up with bobbed noses, vastly reduced (or enlarged) breasts, fantastic hairpieces (after 20 years of baldness), capped teeth, facelifts and eye-jobs, what should a surprised observer say?

You dealt with this problem several weeks ago, but I didn't get much out of your answer.

So many of my friends are going in for recycling that I'm truly at a loss as to how to deal with the startling transformations.

Do these people want to be told they look better? It seems that after going to so much trouble (not to mention expense), something should be said. On the other hand, I'm told, most women who have had facelifts prefer to pass themselves off as "well-rested." How about some guidelines? — AMBUSHED IN AZUZA

DEAR AM: "You look wonderful" or "terrific" is always appropriate — assuming she or he does, of course. Unless the individual volunteers more information, stop there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've read many letters in your column from parents whose children have broken their hearts. Very little is said about the reverse situation. It's time someone spoke out.

My mother was an alcoholic and my father was a workaholic. She was never sober and he was never home. Miraculously I survived a hellish childhood and I'm still beleaguered by their problems. I get incoherent calls from Mother about Dad. I get calls from Dad begging me to "do something" about Mother. They both beg me to come home and "straighten things out." It's not as if I live next door, Ann — I'm thousands of miles away!

For years I've tried, without success, to help them. It's useless. Yet they continue to cause me untold grief by trying to draw me into their disputes. Any suggestions? — ANGUISHED SON

DEAR SON: If you've urged them to get counseling — suggested AA for her and Al-Anon for him — you've done as much as any child can do. The rest is up to them. Parents can guilt-trip children in a very subtle manner. Don't let them booby-trap you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a male homosexual in my very late teens who would give anything in the world to be straight. I refuse to have physical relations with members of my own sex although the desire is strong. The thought of it disgusts me and goes against my moral and religious training.

My friends are all heterosexual. No one suspects I have this problem. I have no feminine mannerisms — not a single clue that I am not perfectly normal.

I've tried so hard to change on my own, but it hasn't worked. Please tell me, is it humanly possible to cure this sickness? Has anyone ever done it? I pray that you can help me. — YOUR FRIEND IN VIRGINIA

DEAR FRIEND: Some homosexuals have been "cured," but they must be strongly motivated and lucky enough to find the right therapist.

If you have not tried counseling, I urge you to do so. Write the American Psychiatric Association headquarters for guidance: 1700 18th Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20009. If you can't change, therapy can help you understand your dysfunction and accept yourself as you are.

Silly Scripts Sink 'Miss Winslow & Son'

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sitcom being TV's favorite form, and the liberation of women being one of everybody's favorite subjects, it figured that one of the networks would come up with something like "Miss Winslow & Son."

CBS' newest sitcom is about an independent young woman who got pregnant but didn't love the child's father enough to marry him. She had a couple of options open at this point, but chose the only one that would support a sitcom — she has the baby and raises it alone.

No problem there, unless you're of the belief that such things as unwed motherhood don't belong on TV, in which case you probably have a very large library and know exactly what your kids look like.

THE PROBLEM WITH "Miss Winslow" is that it's an adult sitcom idea rendered adolescent by its handling. We're asked to cheer for and laugh with a heroine who's bold enough to stand up for herself and assert her independence. What we're given, though, is a cutesy simperer (Darlene Carr) who seems a little embarrassed about what she did, and a whole lot of material that has been around the sitcom block a few times.

In one episode, for example, Susan Winslow (who works in ambiguous but suitably with-it profession) goes on a date with one her clients. She returns home and tells her mother she likes the guy but is afraid to get close to him because of . . . well, you know, her special little problem.

Her mother, who would have preferred it had Susan gotten into the family business through the more conventional route, scolds:

"SUSAN! YOU PUT A charming, successful bachelor on hold? What if he hangs up?"

About this time the doorbell rings and there stands none other than the charming, successful bachelor himself, who insists upon a dinner date. Susan is worried about little you-know-who back in the bedroom, and when the little bugger starts crying, she tells her prospective boyfriend that she's baby sitting for a friend.

Well, they make a date and Susan decides to tell the guy about her baby, despite her mother's warning that men don't make passes at girls with young lasses (or lads). Turns out, Mom is right. The guy's a jerk.

"WHAT DO I KNOW about babies?" he asks after Susan spills the beans. "Except that one end drools and the other end drips. My head is not into kids."

Speaking of drips. . .

Aside from the central theme, "Miss Winslow" is much like any other of a hundred sitcoms that swarm the airwaves. There are fighting couples (Mr. Winslow tells Mrs. Winslow to "Sit on it" in one episode. I wonder if anyone at the networks has ever really thought about that lovely little command so popular on TV?), smart-aleck neighbors and a boss who lacks compassion.

I guess it's admirable when TV tries to be timely, but tries like this make you wish for the days when it didn't.

Community theater along the Orange Coast has managed to survive the effects of Proposition 13, which limited the support that schools and municipalities could offer.

For some groups, however, the going hasn't been easy. Among the walking wounded is the Costa Mesa Civic Playhouse, which lost much of its city funding after the Jarvis-Gann amendment became law.

WHILE OTHER community groups such as Westminster and Saddleback Valley have been adding one production each to their seasons, Costa Mesa found itself in the unenviable position of having to cut back by one, offering four shows during 1978-79 and another "Idiot's Delight" during the summer months. Nonetheless, the Civic Playhouse didn't make any sacrifices in the area of artisitic quality. Its "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" remains the highlight of the community theater season locally.

WLASICK

To insure more such productions in the future, however, the Civic Playhouse must come up with some outside financial assistance — and that's where the "14 Carrot Follies" comes in. It's a home-grown variety show opening tonight and running through Saturday at the playhouse, in the Community Recreation Center on the Orange County Fairgrounds.

STAN WLASICK, the theater's longtime technical director, and Robbie Schoonover, one of Costa Mesa's best-known actresses, are producing and directing the revue. Both will be remembered for their leading roles in the playhouse's 1978 summer musical, "Once Upon a Mattress," while Wlasick played Brick in the aforementioned production of "Cat."

Performing in the evening of musical and comic sketches, in addition to Wlasick and Miss Schoonover, will be Bryan Burnes, Kathleen Costello, Pat Krone, Joanne Fantozzi, Ted Knorr, Judson LaHaye and Paula Tomei. Music will be coordinated by Anita Grossman, a veteran accompanist for playhouse musicals.

Tickets for the '14 Carrot Follies' are $4 and can be ordered by calling the playhouse at 754-5159 before 5 p.m. Friday. They'll also be available at the door.

THE NEXT production of the Westminster Community Theater, opening May 4 for a five-weekend run, will be George M. Cohan's 1913 mystery melodrama, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Ron Albertsen, a specialist in mystery farce ("The Bat," "Any Number Can Die"), is directing.

Clark Burson and Jan McKinley head the cast of the Westminster show, with David MacArthur, Carol Albright, Bill Aebi, Pat Mullins, Chuck Gresham, Kathryn Peniston, Frank James, Jack Willenbacher, Kenneth Mick, Robert Leibovich and Ron Grigsby completing the company. For Gresham and James, it's their third consecutive WCT production.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" will be staged Fridays and Saturdays through June 2 with an 8:30 curtain at the theater, 7272 Maple St., Westminster. Call 893-8626 for advance reservations.

SADDLEBACK College is getting ready to revive a seldom-seen comedy, "No Time for Sergeants." It's scheduled for May 3-6 and 10-13 in the college's main theater.

H. Wynn Pearce, who understudied Andy Griffith in the leading role of the original Broadway production in 1955, is directing the show. He played Will Stockdale at least 400 times during its last five months in New York.

Broadway's 'G.R. Point'

Viet Drama Powerful

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — No longer is Broadway ignoring Vietnam war dramas. It now has one, a major work called "G.R. Point." It's incredibly moving, powerful, comic, tragic . . . well, it's a classic.

"G.R."—the initials mean Graves Registration—has a brilliant cast headed by Michael Moriarty. David Berry, a Vietman vet, wrote the show, his first drama. It may earn him his first Tony award.

It's set in 1969, at a camp near Cambodia, in an Army quartermaster unit that both runs a laundry and readies the bodies of GIs killed in combat for their sad, final trip back to "the World."

"YOU FRAG 'EM, WE bag 'em" is the callous, macabre motto of the unit's hated sergeant, a black man named Deacon (Howard E. Rollins). Ironically, he's the only overt racist in the group of three blacks, one Puerto Rican and four whites. He calls Vietnamese animals.

The troops are fairly safe because they aren't in combat. Still, as one kid notes, "Us support types don't have to go out into the field, but here in Disneyland West the field comes in after us."

Boredom is constant, terror is quick and real. The sweet scent of pot — smoked in a funny, then frightening scene — is an accepted aroma, as is the stench of human waste burned in diesel oil.

SAVE FOR STRAW (Michael Jeter), a gentle country kid, no one believes in the war, not even the unit's lieutenant Paul Espel, an oafish, energetic man with a passion for volleyball.

They only believe in each other, in staying alive. As Zan (Mark Jenkins), the unit's voice of wisdom and conscience, puts it: "Dumb is dead....and dead in the Nam is dumbest of all."

Into the sardonic band of hippie warriors comes Micah (Moriarty). He's a rich kid, an Amherst graduate, aloof and pedantic. He actually joined the Army albeit to avoid being drafted into the infantry.

WHY NOT FLEE TO Canada? He shrugs. "I guess I didn't believe in anything badly enough to resist." Why isn't he an officer? "I didn't want to be responsible for other people's lives."

One soldier, K.P. (Brent Jennings), nods sagely. "Remind me not to go on guard with him."

That settled, Micah settles into their cynicism, their values, after a violent scene in which he tries to stop Deacon from sexually abusing the unit's Vietnamese hootch maid (Lori Tan Chinn).

He even starts writing home to his widowed mother about everything he sees, even the home worst, sharing the rot of Vietnam with the home front, despite pleas by his buddies not to do it.

HE TEETERS ON THE edge of insanity when his camp is hit hard at night by enemy troops. The scene, lit by orange flashes and films of single and multiple flares, is frightingly realistic.

He learns for a dark, horrible moment he actually enjoys killing; it makes him supremely alive. Only Zan — later killed in an accident — keeps him sane by urging him to talk about it, to let the rage flow.

It's all part of the continuing madness of the war. But Berry's telling of it, from the start of the play to its finish, is remarkably humane and compassionate. Extreme highs, extreme lows, in between, he's got it all down with fidelity. There's no mistaking that he's been in Vietnam.

DON'T RUN OUT

BUY A FIAT STRADA TODAY!

WITH LESS GAS TO GO AROUND, YOU NEED A CAR THAT GOES AROUND ON LESS GAS.

The new 1979 Fiat Strada gives you better mileage than the Datsun 310 or the gas-powered Rabbit and it costs hundreds of dollars less than either car going in before you even go out. What's more, Strada gives you better gas mileage than the Omni or Horizon, too. An EPA estimated 28 MPG, 41 MPG estimated highway mileage.

Remember: compare these estimates to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on speed, weather, and trip length. Highway mileage will probably be less.

Bribe Evidence Axed

Diedrich Jury Won't Hear 'Conclusions'

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SAN DIEGO—The bribery trial of Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich and architect LeRoy Rose was interrupted today while the judge decided if testimony possibly damaging to Diedrich could be given before a jury.

The eight-man, four-woman jury hearing the case was left in Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp's courtroom while the judge and contending attorneys in the case set up shop in a courtroom on another floor.

At issue in the hearing was the possible testimony of former Anaheim Hills Inc. president William Stark.

Defense attorneys James Riddett and Keith Monroe called for the hearing on the belief Stark might be asked to testify about matters of which he had no first hand knowledge.

When called to the witness stand in the almost empty courtroom, Stark conceded that in 1973 he felt apprehensive about the possibility "things were going down the path of a criminal nature."

His reference was to the company's attempt to free 2,200 acres in Anaheim Hills from an agricultural preserve agreement with the county that was thwarting its development.

It is the prosecution's contention that Diedrich and Rose were involved in a bribery-conspiracy centering on the company's effort to secure a favorable commitment from the Board of Supervisors.

Today, Stark briefly discussed a dinner meeting he attended in early 1973 with Diedrich, Rose and another company official, Richard Owen.

"I just had a gut feeling. I didn't like the way things were going.

"There was discussion of politics and finances closely related together. I don't like those kinds of things.

"I didn't like the timing of the meeting, Mr. Rose's relationship as campaign manager for Mr. Diedrich and Mr. Rose's wish to sell us some land," Stark testified.

It is the prosecution's contention that Rose and Diedrich attempted to solicit a bribe from the company by offering to sell it land in Fullerton at a price $150,000 above its true value.

At the conclusion of the 40-minute hearing, Judge Tharp ruled some of Stark's testimony could not be given before the jury.

Simply put, the judge said Stark could only testify on matters of which he had a first hand knowledge.

That ruling upheld defense attorney James Riddett's argument that Stark "has drawn conclusions with no basis in fact."

Riddett said a witness such as Stark should be limited in his testimony to what he either heard or said and not be allowed to testify to conclusions he might have correctly or incorrectly drawn.

O'Connor May Get New Hearing Officer

The Huntington Beach Personnel Commission decided to do some reconsidering Wednesday night after coming under fire for the way it has handled the firing of deputy city attorney John O'Connor.

Commissioners said they would take a new look at the selection of a hearing officer to determine the merits of O'Connor's appeal at a special meeting next Monday.

In a five-minute meeting last Wednesday, the commission selected former municipal court judge Paul Mast as hearing officer.

But O'Connor has hinted that alleged ties between Mast and City Attorney Gail Hutton and her deputy, Bob Sangster, would prevent him from getting an impartial hearing.

O'Connor also charged that the selection of Mast was made by Mrs. Hutton and Sangster and that the commission had acted as a rubber stamp.

Personnel chairman Wandalyn Hiltunen said the selection of Mast was made in order to expedite the hearing process.

"Somebody is shooting craps with my career and they are using rigged dice," O'Connor alleged.

Under questioning from members of the audience Wednesday night, personnel commission members confirmed that Mast was the only person considered for the case.

During a recess in the hearing, former mayor Jerry Matney walked to the head table and told Commissioner Wally Van Cott, "You have been duped."

After conferring privately, the commission asked that another list of potential hearing officers be offered for consideration in addition to Mast.

Commissioner Major Bowles also asked that an attorney other than Sangster be appointed as its representative because of potential conflict of interest.

O'Connor was fired March 27 on a number of counts of insubordination a few days after he and Mrs. Hutton gave differing opinions on a zoning matter at a City Council meeting.

Mrs. Hutton subsequently said she had decided to discharge O'Connor prior to that incident.

O'Connor claims the reasons for dismissal are a sham and that he was in fact fired for political reasons.

He also claimed Wednesday night that Mrs. Hutton and Sangster were one-time students in classes taught by Mast.

Sangster said he did take a four-week seminar from Mast in 1966. "I must have take 500 other similar courses from other instructors," he said.

Ex-Huntington Cop Must Wait For Decision

Gil Coerper's nine-year battle to win back his job on the Huntington Beach police department will have to wait at least another 30 days.

The latest delay was caused when lawyers disagreed Wednesday night on what transcripts should be reviewed by members of the Huntington Beach Personnel Commission.

The transcripts of the case must be reviewed because two of the three present commissioners were not on the personnel commission at previous hearings involving Coerper.

Commissioners said they are aiming for a decision at their next meeting in May after the attorneys work out their differences.

The 44-year-old Coerper was fired in 1970 on charges he gave away a few items to fellow officers that had been designated for charity.

But the District Court of Appeal in San Bernardino ruled last month that the penalty was too severe and that disciplinary action must be something less than dismissal.

Troops Advancing

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Tanzanian and Ugandan troops were advancing east and north of Kampala today in a slow two-prong drive to reopen the supply route from Kenya and extend the new government's control to northern and eastern Uganda.

Two Arrested In Valley on Theft Charges

A Fountain Valley police officer who spotted a car driven without lights through the city's industrial area arrested two Los Angeles men as burglary suspects early today.

Booked into Orange County Jail on charges of suspicion of burglary and possession of burglary tools were Joe Wilson, 18, and Raymond Landry Jr., 21.

Officer Norm Satterfield, joined by Officer Don Nielsen, made the arrest at 1:27 a.m. near Ward Street at Ellis Avenue. The two discovered the car was filled with bicycles and tools believed taken earlier from four homes in the Tibrun development area.

In addition to an estimated $700 worth of stolen property, about $200 in cash was recovered, police said.

The money was believed taken in the burglary of California Wire Products at 10620 Lawson River Ave. earlier in the morning.

Woman, 24, Dies In Beach Crash

A Westminster woman who led law enforcement officers in a 100 mile-per-hour chase down Beach Boulevard through Huntington Beach died early Wednesday of injuries suffered just before her toppling car rolled to a stop on a sandy beach.

Sharon Shelton Young, 24, of 13861 Locust St., died in Pacifica Hospital at 8:15 a.m., less than six hours after she allegedly ran a red light on Beach Boulevard at Bolsa Avenue, Huntington Beach police reported.

Orange County Sheriff's deputies, who patrol the Midway City area, said they saw the incident and launched a southbound chase at 2:27 a.m. on Beach Boulevard in which the woman allegedly ran several other red lights.

The deputies were joined in the pursuit by a Huntington Beach police unit just north of Pacific Coast Highway where Beach Boulevard dead ends at the juncture of the city's beach and Huntington Beach State Beach.

Police said Miss Young's 1978 yellow Camaro sped through the Coast Highway intersection and up a beach access road, hit a curb and a planter box and flew some 50 feet through the air before plowing into the sandy beach.

Traffic investigators said the car continued 300 feet on the beach toward the ocean, rolling over and over.

"When it stopped, you couldn't tell it was a Camaro," said one officer. "It was about the size of a Volkswagen."

Will Resign

U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell said today he will leave office before the end of summer, according to a Detroit newspaper. Earlier, Bell had said he would resign before the end of President Carter's first term.

Another Professor To Speak at Trial

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A second UCLA medical school professor was to take the witness stand today in the trial of a Huntington Harbour physician accused of strangling a newborn infant.

Dr. John Menkes, clinical professor of pediatrics and neurology was to offer medical expert testimony in the murder retrial of Dr. William Waddill.

Another UCLA medical school professor told Waddill's Orange County Superior Court jury Wednesday that the infant Waddill allegedly strangled was doomed to die before the doctor arrived at the Westminster Community Hospital nursery.

Dr. Cynthia Barrett said that, when Waddill arrived 20 to 25 minutes after delivery of the alleged abortion survivor, "I think death was inevitable."

Dr. Barrett told the jury her own experience was with premature infants, not with infants who had been exposed to saline abortion solution.

But even without the presence of saline, Dr. Barrett testified, an infant of the same age as the one known as Baby Girl Weaver and with the same weak life signs would need immediate revival attempts starting within the first minute after birth.

Dr. Barrett went on to say that personnel at Westminster Community Hospital lost any chances to revive the infant by taking the wrong emergency steps in the baby's first moments of life.

"If I walked into a hospital and someone said this baby is 20 minutes of age," Dr. Barrett continued, "I would probably say 'has this baby been baptized and do the parents want it to be'?"

Starting intense resuscitation after 20 minutes, the doctor continued, "would be below the medical standard in any community in this country."

Waddill's attorney, Charles Weedman, has contended the two-pound, 15-ounce infant was already dead or on the verge of death when Waddill arrived at the hospital.

Water Price Hikes Nixed By Directors

Plans to raise the price of water pumped from Orange County's underground basin to help meet Orange County Water District operating costs were scrapped Wednesday night.

District directors resolved to dip into reserve funds and to temporarily curtail some capital improvement projects to hold down water costs.

An earlier plan called for increasing the price of domestic water by $3 an acre foot, a move that would have increased the average north-county area's home water bill about $3 a year.

Directors voted to keep domestic water prices at their current rate, but did increase the price of water used for irrigating crops by $5 an acre foot.

That increase would hike the Irvine Company's water bill by an estimated $37,500 a year, said Nereus Richardson, district engineer. The firm is the largest agricultural water user in the county, he said.

Richardson said this morning that even though OCWD domestic water prices won't go up, coastal area residents probably will pay more for water anyway.

Traffic Tied

Truck Flips; Cars Halted

A traffic jam that involved thousands of motorists and plugged the San Diego Freeway for more than four hours occurred Wednesday when a dump truck loaded with asphalt blew a tire and overturned near the freeway's interchange with the 605-San Gabriel Freeway.

CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY Patrol officers called to the scene said the asphalt spewed from the truck when the vehicle pitched over onto the ice plant verge.

They said cars backed up from Long Beach to Costa Mesa while work crews struggled to clear the goo from the highway.

OFFICERS SAID normal traffic was restored about 6 p.m., four hours after the truck overturned. They said the driver of the vehicle was unhurt.

Sex Fling Tapes Seized

San Diego Elite Face Public Embarrassment

LA MESA (AP) — Some nervous swingers are upset by the vice squad's seizure and viewing of video tapes from a service that, for a $15 fee, matched couples seeking to swap mates for sexual flings.

"I sure hope nobody's looking at those tapes," Marge, an airline employee in San Diego, said Wednesday. "It would cause me much embarassment if the neighbors found out."

They feature interviews Bell, 33, made with 100 members of the club and about 300 subscribers of the Video Dating Service. Also seized was $4,500 worth of videotape and camera equipment.

Bell and Marsha Boyd, 24, were arrested for investigation of pandering, solicitation for prostitution, solicitation to commit a lewd act and operating a disorderly house. Both self-described "swingers." Each was freed on $4,000 bail pending arraignment April 27 in El Cajon Municipal Court.

"A lot of people are going to be hurt by this," said Bell. "When they joined I promised them complete privacy. I have no idea what the arrests were about. We weren't doing anything illegal."

A sheriff's spokesman said the pair were arrested after vice squad officers answered a Video Encounters ad in a sex magazine offering to introduce couples who wanted to trade partners.

The missing tapes feature about 400 San Diego area residents, including "some real prominent people, such as public officials, teachers, company presidents, journalists and even some law enforcement personnel," Bell said.

Dozens of customers have been calling Bell after he informed them of the raids and the possibility they may be contacted by investigators.

Members of the vice squad have viewed the tapes, in which clients bare their sexual fantasies and preferences, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"The crux of the thing is they are providing couples for sex and in turn are receiving money for providing that service, which is an act of prostitution," said a vice officer who asked to remain unidentified.

Bell said that in the videotape interviews, couples or individuals are asked about their fantasies, sexual likes and dislikes and that interviewees are fully clothed. Two couples appeared topless, Bell said, but there was no sexual contact.

Bell's attorney, George Haverstick, called the arrests "just another extension of our times. In the '60s, drugs were the problem, now it's sex."

EVIDENCE NIXED. . .

Late Wednesday afternoon, prosecution witness Michael Remington ended what amounted to a full day of testimony.

In one segment, he is pictured as the professional through which a land development company in 1973 funneled $55,000 to Diedrich in return for a favorable land use decision.

Remington in the prosecution's theory is also cast in the role of the conduit through which at least $30,000 in fees paid to Rose in late 1974 by the same development company were passed on to Diedrich.

In testimony Tuesday, Remington, who was testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution, labeled the $55,000 he had passed on to Diedrich as a loan.

Wednesday, however, he inched back from that label when cross-examined by defense attorneys.

That pullback came when he was asked if he still believes the money he handled in 1973 to have been a loan to Diedrich.

"I would have to give a qualified yes," Remington replied.

After the jury was told to leave the courtroom, the former Fullerton attorney told Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp he is now "highly suspicious" of the 1973 transactions in which he was the middle man.

Later in the day, however, the former Diedrich-Rose ally again banged heads with the team of defense lawyers.

This time the issue was at least $30,000 sent him by Rose in late 1974, money Remington said arrived unsolicited.

And, Remington testified, he passed the money on to Diedrich in cash after deducting the amount of taxes he would pay because of the "income" received from Rose.

"No, I never performed any services—legal or otherwise — for Mr. Rose," Remington said.

But Rose defense lawyer Sylvan Aronson said Remington must have served Rose because there were legal bills to support the payment sent him by the architect.

"I'm telling you, Mr. Aronson, I never did any legal work, never did anything to earn a finder's fee, never did anything for LeRoy," Remington insisted.

He said the bills Aronson held in his hand were drawn after the unsolicited checks were received from Rose.

The billings in the form of ledger cards, Remington said, were "generated" after the money was received and according to instructions in covering letters as a way to account for the transactions.

"We had to balance the account so ledger sheets were generated," Remington testified.

But his exchange with Aronson set the stage for a defense contention that the money Rose paid to Remington was for services rendered and not as part of a bribery conspiracy.

And with only Remington's word that the money was passed on to Diedrich in cash, Aronson's contention seemed to lay the groundwork for a denial that Diedrich ever received the money.

To that end the defense attorneys began questioning Remington about his motive in testifying.

Foremost in their minds was the grant of immunity as well as a criminal case settled in late 1977.

In that case, Remington, Diedrich and others were named conspirators and more in an alleged plot to violate state election laws.

Remington pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge and agreed to pay a $10,000 fine after being placed on probation for three years.

Later, the indictment was quashed but the charges against Diedrich and others were reinstated by the state attorney general's office last month.

The defense attorneys made reference to the criminal indictment against Remington and asked if he didn't hope to avoid paying the fine as a result of his testimony.

But Remington insisted the issue of the fine was in a court's hands and that he did not hope to curry favor with the district attorney's office in return for his testimony.

The former attorney insisted his testimony was the truth and that "I have no desire to become involved in a perjury case."

When asked if he was mindful of assistant district attorney Capizzi's role as prosecutor in the case, Remington answered, "I am and, of course, I have no wish to antagonize him."

FORT KENT, Maine (AP) — A university president had no comment after pleading innocent to charges of taking a can of crab meat worth $1.89 and a can of cold pack cheese worth $1.29 from an IGA store.

Iran Purge Now at 150

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The rival religious leaders of Iran's Islamic revolution held peace talks in the holy city of Qum today as a revolutionary firing squad executed a Moslem cleric for collaborating with the ousted shah's secret police.

Revolutionary riflemen also executed six members of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's personal guard, raising to 150 the number killed in the purge that began with the overthrow of the last royal government in February.

Radio Tehran said the cleric, Ahmad Alemizadeh, betrayed many young people to SAVAK, the secret police. The imperial guardsmen, ranging in rank from private to colonel, were convicted of firing during the Sept. 8 riot in Tehran in which more than 100 persons were killed and hundreds were injured.

Press Barred From Synanon Snake Hearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge hearing pretrial evidence in the case of Synanon founder Charles Dederich and two Synanon members ordered the courtroom cleared today of all reporters and people not participating in the case.

Municipal Judge Vincent Erickson made the order on the motion of Paul Geragos, attorney for Joseph Musico, the 28-year-old Synanon member who is charged with Lance Kenton, 23-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton, in the Oct. 10 rattlesnake attack on attorney Paul Morantz.

Dederich, 65, was brought into the courtroom in a wheelchair and helped to a seat behind the counsel table. His modishly long hair contrasted sharply with the crewcuts sported by several Synanon followers accompanying him.

Kenton wore a conservative dark business suit with neatly trimmed short hair. Musico was in a light blue business suit.

The judge made no comment in granting Geragos' motion. Geragos did not explain his reason for the request, but such requests have been routinely granted as a right of the defendant to a closed preliminary hearing. The action came just before Morantz was to take the stand.

Meanwhile, Deputy District Attorney John Watson said Kenton's fingerprint was found inside a car allegedly seen parked near attorney Morantz' home the day the attorney was bitten by the snake that had been placed in his mailbox.

The evidence was discovered Wednesday morning during a recheck of the car requested by defense attorneys, he said.

Morantz, 33, was hospitalized six days after the snakebite. He earlier had won a $300,000 lawsuit against Synanon, a $30 million business, religion and drug rehabilitation foundation.

Rousselot Says, 'I Intend to Win'

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

John Rousselot, the arch conservative who's almost a candidate for the U. S. Senate seat held by Alan Cranston, paid a call Wednesday on some of Newport Beach's staunchest Republicans.

Speaking to the Balboa Bay Republican Women, Federated, Rousselot left little doubt that he will seek the GOP nomination to challenge California's Democratic senator in 1980.

But he hedged a bit by saying that he's only 95 percent certain he'll run.

ROUSSELOT

"This is a big state and I have to put together a structure statewide," he said.

"But I intend to win," he added.

The talk was billed as a state of the Congress report by Rousselot, a six-term Republican from San Marino.

But the speech took a decidedly anti-Cranston turn, with Rousselot comparing his stand on a variety of issues to the voting record of California's senior senator.

When asked why he plans to move out of the House of Representatives, Rousselot gave what amounted to a campaign speech.

He pointed out that the GOP already has 41 seats in the Senate and that 24 Democrats, including Cranston, will be facing campaigns in 1980.

Rousselot said he views that as an excellent opportunity for the Republicans to take a majority in the 100-member upper house.

"And Alan Cranston is a lot more vulnerable than any of you in this room might think," he added.

"He's for big government. If all the votes cast by Alan Cranston had carried, this country's deficit would be $2 trillion. That's trillion," Rousselot declared pounding the lectern for emphasis.

With his face slightly flushed and his blue eyes flashing, he concluded, "And another good point is that I love campaigning."

His audience applauded enthusiastically.

Professor Slain in Burglary

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A burglar apparently clubbed a university professor to death when she caught him in her place, police said today.

She was a 43-year-old assistant professor of education at San Diego State University.

A neighbor called police late Wednesday after noticing that a window was broken in the condominium and the front door was open.

"It appears that someobody was rummaging through the place, and the victim interrupted a burglary in progress," said police Lt. John Gregory.

No weapon was found and no arrest was made. The slain woman had been looking after the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Hale, both retired school teachers. They have been away often on trips.

From there, Miss Fonda will go to Golden West College in Huntington Beach where she will appear during a benefit concert sponsored by Students for Responsive Government and the Student Development Office.

The concert itself gets under way at 7:30 p.m. in the campus amphitheater and features Dire Wolf, a country-rock band and Bread and Roses, an acoustical music group.

The actress is expected to be at Golden West at 9 p.m.

Advance tickets cost $4.50 for general admission and $3.50 for senior citizens and students. At the door the admission prices will be $5 for general and $4 for seniors and students.

Nuclear Exercise Started

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A U.S. bomber carrying six nuclear warheads crashes into the Nevada desert, and deadly radiation seeps from the torn weapons.

With that scenario, a 500-member team of military and civilian experts began a $1.6-million, week-long exercise Wednesday to evaluate the ability of the nation's military and civilian officials to handle a nuclear accident.

Although it comes three weeks after the worst nuclear scare in the United States — the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa. — the project at the Nevada Test Site 100 miles north of Las Vegas has been in preparation for four years. It is a joint effort of the federal energy and defense departments.

"Because we haven't had an accident involving nuclear weapons since the 1968 incident in Spain, we don't have the real-life expertise," said Lt. Col. Bill McGee, Defense Nuclear Agency public affairs officer.

In that accident, a U.S. military plane carrying atomic weapons crashed into the sea off the Spanish coast. The weapons later were recovered.

In the Nevada exercise, sections of a wrecked plane were strewn about to duplicate the wreckage of a C-141. Six mannequins — representing dead or injured crew members — were in place along the impact zone.

To add to the realism of the exercise, a small amount of diluted radium 223 was spread throughout the 350-yard-square test area Wednesday.

McGee said the radium 223 was in liquid form and "can't get into the air."

"We're talking about one ten-millionth of a gram, with a half life of 11 days," he said, adding that a nuclear explosion could not occur.

"The real concern would be if the warhead ruptured on impact and the inside of the radioactive component warhead was consumed, the gases could travel several thousand miles by wind."

The on-scene commander will be confronted with all the predictable predicaments of such a crisis, said McGee.

"We'll have mock press briefings, irate farmers, demonstrators — all the things likely to occur," he said.

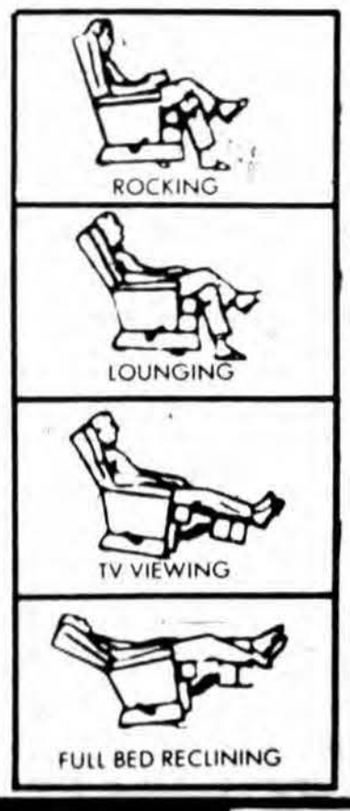

"We're cramming into one week what would normally take two months. It took seven weeks to clean up the radioactive material left by the Soviet satellite that crashed in Canada a couple of years ago."

Gasoline Gamble

POOPED OUT AT THE PUMP: Harriett Wieder, the former Huntington Beach City Council person now serving on our august Orange County Board of Supervisors, wants to take the guessing out of gasoline.

Mrs. Wieder is currently pushing a proposal that would force service station operators to post pump prices in a conspicious manner.

The idea is that the motorist would then know how sorely he's going to be fleeced before he drives up to the pump and gets fleeced.

THAT ASIDE, I think Mrs. Wieder's price posting idea is a most noble gesture. Noble, but empty. Just like your gas tank.

Trouble is, in the current gasoline shortage scare, people are in a panic to line up at the stations and fill their tanks before somebody else gets the last gallon.

Gas Station Customer Rolling for Two Gallons and His Pet Turtle

Nobody cares about the price. They're frantic. They'll pay anything. So this allows the petroleum people to charge just about anything.

IT MAY REACH the point where you drive up to the pump and the friendly operator asks, "Okay, buddy, how much do you have in your pocket today?"

"I think I have fifteen bucks."

"Fifteen bucks it is, then. Shall I fill it up?"

Now, if motorists ever return to reason and sanity, competition may also return to the service station dodge. You might even see some innovative merchandising.

Maybe an operator will post a sign declaring:

"UNLEADED — 50.9 Cents." Under that, in tiny type, it will add, "Per Half-Gallon."

Other operators with imagination might cater to the sinful lust for gambling that lurks in the hearts of many in the populace.

They won't just have permanent prices in the little windows on the gasoline pumps. They'll install price numbers that spin around and then stop, like the slot machines at Las Vegas

YOU DRIVE UP to the pump and pull the one-armed lever. The price numbers spin and stop, one at a time.

Then the gas station operator says, "Gee, tough luck, mister. You hit 99.9 per gallon.

Recession Due?

Economy Dips In 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy sputtered to its lowest growth rate in a year in the first quarter, a 0.7 percent rate of increase that indicated the economy could be dipping toward a recession if the trend continues, government figures showed today.

The increase in the gross national product in January through March was less than expected and was down sharply from a 6.9 percent rate of growth in the final quarter of 1978. The first-quarter rate was the lowest since a 0.1 percent decline in the same period last year.

THE SHARP slowdown in growth seemed certain to support the argument of G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, that economic growth already is slowing and that further measures to dampen the economy could plunge the nation into a serious recession.

While the 0.7 percent rate of growth was near the recession level of less than zero percent growth, Miller and top administration experts believe the economy will rebound at least partly from the low first-quarter growth, thus avoiding a recession in the near future.

The unusually severe winter in many parts of the country was at least partly to blame for the slow economic growth in the first quarter. But it probably also reflected efforts by the government to slow the economy through high interest rates and reduced federal spending.

THE ADMINISTRATION is aiming for overall economic growth this year of about 2.2 percent, down from 4 percent last year but at a level it believes is necessary to help combat inflation.

The Commerce Department said in its GNP report that inflation in the first quarter increased at an 8.7 percent annual rate, up from an 8.2 percent rate in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The department said the slower economic growth in January through March was caused by an 0.3 percent decline in sales activity throughout the economy, a sharp turnaround from a 7.2 percent annual rate of increase in the final three months of 1978.

"THE DECREASE . . . reflected decreases in consumer expenditures for goods, construction outlays, net exports and government purchases," the department said.

The figures on economic growth were computed at an annual rate, meaning it would be the total growth for a year if the first-quarter levels were continued for an entire 12-month peridod.

The Commerce Department said the GNP, the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, was at an annual rate of $1,413.3 billion in the first quarter, after discounting for the effects of inflation.

Fire Injures 34

Hundreds, including the three above, were routed from the building, some jumping from windows. Cause of the fire was not immediately established.

Marijuana Research Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing increased marijuana use among teen-agers, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is calling for a major study of the drug.

Califano asked for the review and preparation of a "long-range broad-based research plan" Wednesday in sending a report to Congress.

THE ANNUAL report said 16.1 percent of people between the ages of 12 and 17 were users of marijuana in 1977, compared with 12.4 percent the year before.

"The dramatic increase in the use of marijuana by our youth is particularly alarming," Califano said in a prepared statement.

"It is sheer folly for millions of young Americans to indulge in a drug while so little is known about its long-term consequences — and when much of what is known suggests, for example, adverse pulmonary effects and psychomotor impairment."

THE FORMAL HEW report called for further study on the effects of marijuana on humans, particularly "the implications of chronic use and the possible effects on users who may be especially vulnerable," such as children.

U.N. Troops Hurt In Lebanon Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese Christian militiamen, fighting to drive "foreign troops" out of the vest-pocket republic they proclaimed in southern Lebanon, wounded eight U.N. troops today in an attack on the international peace force's administrative base there.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis convened his Cabinet in emergency session today to consider "coercive action" against the Israeli-backed Christian rebels in the south.

Government sources said Sarkis was expected to order a court-martial that would try Maj. Saad Haddad, leader of the rebels, on treason charges and sentence him to death in absentia.

Union Leader Indicted

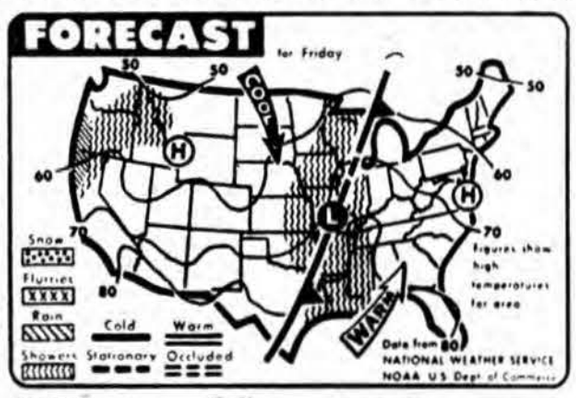

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ben Schmoutey, head of Nevada's largest union, and six other people have been indicted by a federal grand jury after a two-year investigation into a series of restaurant bombings in Las Vegas and Stateline, Nev.

U.S. Summary

Downstream residents looked for higher ground today as the rampaging Pearl River moved relentessly toward the Gulf of Mexico after causing an estimated half billion dollars damage to the state's capital city and leaving some 17,000 persons homeless.

"We've still got a serious situation here," Viva Polk, a spokeswoman for the city of Jackson, Miss., said Wednesday. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricity because of damage to equipment."

Meanwhile, in Alabama, the bulging Alabama and Tombigee rivers sent many persons living near their banks packing to the homes of friends, relatives or Red Cross shelters. President Carter declared the state a major disaster area late Wednesday.

And in Southeast Texas, hundreds of residents chased from their homes in Conroe faced the prospect of more flooding today after a stubborn thunderstorm poured more than 8 inches of rain on the area Wednesday, inundating schools, houses, businesses and highways.

Forty miles downstream from Jackson, tiny Georgetown lay deserted Wednesday as the Pearl advanced. A spokesman for the Mississippi Power and Electric Co. said the flooding had cut electrical power to about 160 customers in the com-

CHAD GREEN PLAYS IN TIJUANA FOUNTAIN
Leukemia Victim 'Most Alert Kid on Block'

Laetrile Flap

4 Quit Posts in Chad Case

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four local officials of the Leukemia Society of America have resigned after being ordered to quit helping a 3-year-old Massachusetts boy being treated with Laetrile for leukemia.

"You don't own me," Bob Deane said he replied to letters accusing him of violating the society's stand against use of the substance produced from apricot pits.

THE U.S. FOOD AND DRUG Administration calls Laetrile unproven in cancer treatment.

In court battles lasting more than a year, Gerald and Diane Green lost custody of their leukemia-stricken son and were prohibited from feeding him Laetrile, which the U.S. Food and Drug Administration calls unproven as a treatment for cancer.

The Greens took the youngster to a Laetrile clinic in Tijuana across the Mexican border from San Diego in January. A subsequent contempt of court order is being appealed in Massachusetts.

MEANWHILE, THE GREENS ARE living rent-free in a house owned by an unidentified American at the south outskirts of Tijuana. They take Chad to the clinic daily for chemotherapy and Laetrile treatments.

"Chad's doing fine," said Deane in an interview Wednesday. "He's studying Spanish and is the most alert kid on the block."

A delivery of donated food and clothing is made every week or two by Gail Brinkworth, who owns a San Diego printing supply company.

IN HIS WALKOUT, DEANE, administrator of the San Diego Senior Citizens' Medical Clinic, was joined by Ted Millan and John Lynch, directors of the Leukemia Society chapter, and by John Helmer, the treasurer, like Deane all unpaid volunteers.

Together they started a new charity called The Nice Guys with an initial project of helping the Children's Workshop in San Diego, for youngsters suffering learning, speech and hearing handicaps.

Condos Switch Backed

A proposal to convert a 76-unit Laguna Niguel apartment complex to condominiums has been approved unanimously by Orange County planning commissioners.

In exchange for commission approval, owners of Crown Valley Apartments, at the southwest corner of Hillhurst Drive and Crown Valley Parkway, agreed to keep 19 of the units as $270-to-$360-per-month rental units for three years.

In addition, any tenants displaced by the conversion will be given moving expenses of up to $500 each.

Bill Olson of the county Environmental Management Agency said the for-sale one-and two-bedroom units will be priced at $60,900 to $75,000 each, well below the average cost of other homes in the Laguna Niguel area.

Owners of the adults-only complex said a survey of existing tenants showed 33 were interested in buying the condominium units and another 19 would like to continue to rent.

Another seven plan to move before the rental units are converted to condominiums, seven more will be assisted by the owners in finding comparable rental housing and two more rented knowing the conversion was pending.

The remaining three tenants failed to answer the survey, according to a report to planning commissioners.

Police Seek Motive in Dana Slaying

Orange County sheriff's investigators are still trying to establish a motive in the stabbing death of a Dana Point area woman, found dead in her home Sunday.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said officers are trying to learn who may have talked with or seen Margaret S. Lamar, of 33911 Manta Court, in the week before her death.

Mrs. Lamar, who lived alone, was found dead Sunday by her daughter, 23-year-old Linda Lamar, of Newport Beach.

The daughter had last spoken with her mother by telephone a week earlier.

Hart said there was no sign of forced entry at the residence, the home had not been ransacked and Mrs. Lamar had not been attacked sexually.

Citizens Saluted

Two Cities Face Road Funds Loss

The cities of Irvine and San Juan Capistrano face the loss of $486,000 in county road funds for three local street projects unless city and county officials agree on long-range highway building plans.

Orange County supervisors agreed this week to give Irvine $160,000 toward the $806,000 building of a two-lane segment of Bonita Canyon Road.

But they threatened to withhold another $243,000 in county gas tax funds for improvements on Alton Avenue in Irvine, along with $243,000 for work on Del Obispo Street and Camino Capistrano in San Juan Capistrano because city and county road plans are at odds.

The issue is a county policy which has governed distribution to cities of the county's share of state gasoline tax revenue.

In the past, the county has shared part of those funds with cities for local street projects with the aim of developing a unified county road network.

But the policy also requires that cities participating in the program have long-range road-building plans that match county proposals.

Irvine and San Juan Capistrano city officials recently amended their street plans, deleting plans to build future roadways county officials contend will one day be needed.

Irvine City Council members deleted two miles of Trabuco Road between Jeffrey Road and Culver Drive from their arterial highway plan, along with two miles of Culver from Bonita Canyon to the future San Joaquin Hills highway.

In San Juan, council members eliminated a two-mile stretch of Horno Creek Road west of Ortega Highway a move made in connection with a lower-density land development plan in the Horno Creek area.

San Juan officials also have dropped plans for a future one-mile stretch of La Novia Avenue east of an extension of Camino Las Ramblas.

Supervisor Thomas Riley said discussions are underway to resolve the differences and a solution may be found within two weeks.

Laguna Beach has not been eligible for county gasoline tax funds since 1974 because of similar differences between city and county road construction plans.

9 More Drug Arrests Made In County

Nine more suspected heroin dealers had been arrested by early today, bringing the total number of arrests in a two-day Orange County drug roundup to 73.

County Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart noted the bulk of those arrested were Santa Ana residents, although a few live in Costa Mesa, Orange, Anaheim, Garden Grove, Westminster and Stanton.

The Costa Mesa suspects jailed on charges of selling heroin are Henry Wattenburg Chavarria and Frederick Allen Williams, both 30.

The addresses of the two Costa Mesa suspects were not immediately available.

Investigators believe Tuesday's drug roundup, which focused on alleged street and middle-echelon dealers, is the largest of its kind in county history.

'Forgotten' Con Found In Austria

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A man picked up April 1 for questioning about an auto accident, then placed in a cell and "forgotten" for 18 days, was found and hospitalized Wednesday. Doctors said his survival without food was "nearly a miracle."

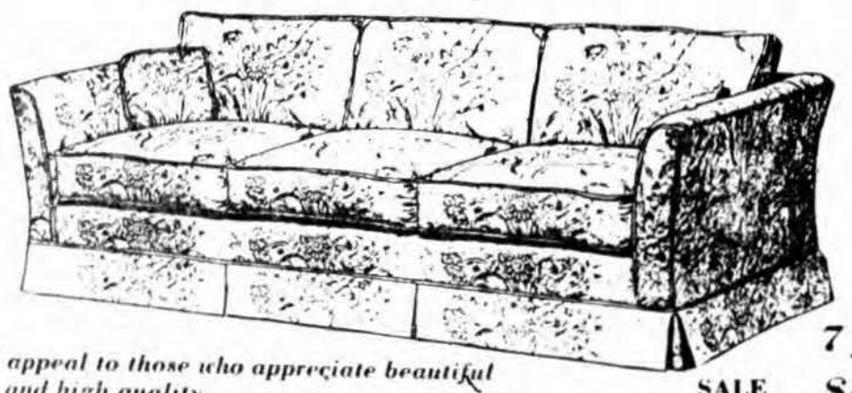

The man was rushed from a cell at Hoechst, in the western Vorarlberg province, to an intensive-care unit at Bregeyas. He was identified as Andreas Mihavecs, a resident of Bregenz.

There was no explanation why no one checked the cell since April 1 or why Mihavecs failed to call attention to his presence. Interior Minister Erwin Lanc ordered an inquiry.

Gasoline Gamble

POOPED OUT AT THE PUMP: Harriett Wieder, the former Huntington Beach City Council person now serving on our august Orange County Board of Supervisors, wants to take the guessing out of gasoline.

Mrs. Wieder is currently pushing a proposal that would force service station operators to post pump prices in a conspicious manner.

The idea is that the motorist would then know how sorely he's going to be fleeced before he drives up to the pump and gets fleeced.

THAT ASIDE, I think Mrs. Wieder's price posting idea is a most noble gesture. Noble, but empty. Just like your gas tank.

Trouble is, in the current gasoline shortage scare, people are in a panic to line up at the stations and fill their tanks before somebody else gets the last gallon.

Gas Station Customer Rolling for Two Gallons and His Pet Turtle

Nobody cares about the price. They're frantic. They'll pay anything. So this allows the petroleum people to charge just about anything.

IT MAY REACH the point where you drive up to the pump and the friendly operator asks, "Okay, buddy, how much do you have in your pocket today?"

"I think I have fifteen bucks."

"Fifteen bucks it is, then. Shall I fill it up?"

Now, if motorists ever return to reason and sanity, competition may also return to the service station dodge. You might even see some innovative merchandising.

Maybe an operator will post a sign declaring:

"UNLEADED 50.9 Cents." Under that, in tiny type, it will add, "Per Half-Gallon."

Other operators with imagination might cater to the sinful lust for gambling that lurks in the hearts of many in the populace.

They won't just have permanent prices in the little windows on the gasoline pumps. They'll install price numbers that spin around and then stop, like the slot machines at Las Vegas.

YOU DRIVE UP to the pump and pull the one-armed lever. The price numbers spin and stop, one at a time.

Then the gas station operator says, "Gee, tough luck, mister. You hit 99.9 per gallon.

Recession Due?

Economy Dips In 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy sputtered to its lowest growth rate in a year in the first quarter, a 0.7 percent rate of increase that indicated the economy could be dipping toward a recession if the trend continues, government figures showed today.

The increase in the gross national product in January through March was less than expected and was down sharply from a 6.9 percent rate of growth in the final quarter of 1978. The first-quarter rate was the lowest since a 0.1 percent decline in the same period last year.

THE SHARP slowdown in growth seemed certain to support the argument of G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, that economic growth already is slowing and that further measures to dampen the economy could plunge the nation into a serious recession.

While the 0.7 percent rate of growth was near the recession level of less than zero percent growth, Miller and top administration experts believe the economy will rebound at least partly from the low first-quarter growth, thus avoiding a recession in the near future.

The unusually severe winter in many parts of the country was at least partly to blame for the slow economic growth in the first quarter. But it probably also reflected efforts by the government to slow the economy through high interest rates and reduced federal spending.

THE ADMINISTRATION is aiming for overall economic growth this year of about 2.2 percent, down from 4 percent last year but at a level it believes is necessary to help combat inflation.

The Commerce Department said in its GNP report that inflation in the first quarter increased at an 8.7 percent annual rate, up from an 8.2 percent rate in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The department said the slower economic growth in January through March was caused by an 0.3 percent decline in sales activity throughout the economy, a sharp turnaround from a 7.2 percent annual rate of increase in the final three months of 1978.

"THE DECREASE . . . reflected decreases in consumer expenditures for goods, construction outlays, net exports and government purchases," the department said.

The figures on economic growth were computed at an annual rate, meaning it would be the total growth for a year if the first-quarter levels were continued for an entire 12-month peridod.

The Commerce Department said the GNP, the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, was at an annual rate of $1,413.3 billion in the first quarter, after discounting for the effects of inflation.

Fire Injures 34

Hundreds, including the three above, were routed from the building, some jumping from windows. Cause of the fire was not immediately established.

Marijuana Research Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing increased marijuana use among teen-agers, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is calling for a major study of the drug.

Califano asked for the review and preparation of a "long-range broad-based research plan" Wednesday in sending a report to Congress.

THE ANNUAL report said 16.1 percent of people between the ages of 12 and 17 were users of marijuana in 1977, compared with 12.4 percent the year before.

"The dramatic increase in the use of marijuana by our youth is particularly alarming," Califano said in a prepared statement.

"It is sheer folly for millions of young Americans to indulge in a drug while so little is known about its long-term consequences — and when much of what is known suggests, for example, adverse pulmonary effects and psychomotor impairment."

THE FORMAL HEW report called for further study on the effects of marijuana on humans, particularly "the implications of chronic use and the possible effects on users who may be especially vulnerable," such as children.

U.N. Troops Hurt In Lebanon Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese Christian militiamen, fighting to drive "foreign troops" out of the vest-pocket republic they proclaimed in southern Lebanon, wounded eight U.N. troops today in an attack on the international peace force's administrative base there.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis convened his Cabinet in emergency session today to consider "coercive action" against the Israeli-backed Christian rebels in the south.

Government sources said Sarkis was expected to order a court-martial that would try Maj. Saad Haddad, leader of the rebels, on treason charges and sentence him to death in absentia.

FORECAST for Friday

U.S. Summary

Downstream residents looked for higher ground today as the rampaging Pearl River moved relentessly toward the Gulf of Mexico after causing an estimated half billion dollars damage to the state's capital city and leaving some 17,000 persons homeless.

"We've still got a serious situation here," Viva Polk, a spokeswoman for the city of Jackson, Miss., said Wednesday. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricity because of damage to equipment."

Meanwhile, in Alabama, the bulging Alabama and Tombigee rivers sent many persons living near their banks packing to the homes of friends, relatives or Red Cross shelters. President Carter declared the state a major disaster area late Wednesday.

And in Southeast Texas, hundreds of residents chased from their homes in Conroe faced the prospect of more flooding today after a stubborn thunderstorm poured more than 8 inches of rain on the area Wednesday, inundating schools, houses, businesses and highways.

Forty miles downstream from Jackson, tiny Georgetown lay deserted Wednesday as the Pearl advanced. A spokesman for the Mississippi Power and Electric Co. said the flooding had cut electrical power to about 160 customers in the community, and telephone connections into the town were sporadic Wednesday night.

Farther south in Columbia, Miss., Marion County Civil Defense Director Jim Thornhill said 1,500 persons had fled their homes in the face of record floodwaters.

"Everything is cool as a cucumber in Columbia. Now we're just waiting for it to happen," said Thornhill. "We're sitting back and waiting for the inevitable."

A crest of 27.5 feet is expected Saturday at Columbia, and the river will probably peak at 34.5 feet at Monticello the same day.

"The rising water — it has stopped," Jackson Mayor Dale Danks said Wednesday after the Pearl began dropping from its record crest of 42.25 feet. By 9 p.m., it had fallen to 41.4 feet and was still going down.

Nuclear Stoppage Rejected

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric stockholders have rejected a proposal which would have halted the utility's construction of nuclear power plants in California.

And at the annual shareholders meeting Wednesday in San Francisco, a plan to convert the Diablo Canyon nuclear powerplant to a wind and solar energy generating unit was also overwhelmingly defeated.

The two proposals were placed on the shareholders' ballots following a year-long legal battle with the utility by Phyllis Appelgarth, 61, PG&E stockholders and members of the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of 25 state environmental groups.

STATE

Allegations Denied

Deukmejian told a Police Academy press conference Wednesday that one of his agents reported seeing the documents during the search early this month, but did not remove them.

Job Return Ordered

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — County supervisors succeeded on their third attempt Wednesday to have the court issue a back-to-work order against striking sheriff's deputies, but the 350 member Service Employees International Union voted Wednesday night to join the deputies' strike.

Superior Court Judge Arden Jensen signed the temporary restraining order against the deputies, forbidding them from striking or engaging in a work slowdown.

Incentives Asked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy is expected to ask the state Public Utilities Commission today to speed up its decision on whether to provide incentives for installing energy-saving systems, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Under one such incentive system, utility companies would provide the money for customers to install cost-effective devices such as solar heaters and other energy-saving devices.

Africa Good?

Brown, Ronstadt Said Closer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The relationship between Jerry Brown and Linda Ronstadt is still as good if not better than before their African trip, friends of Brown were reported as saying today.

They added that the major trouble happened when they walked into a corps of international reporters in Nairobi who were primarily waiting for permission to enter war-torn Uganda, and didn't have anything better to do than follow them around — especially Miss Ronstadt.

THE FRIENDS WERE quoted today in the San Jose Mercury and the Long Beach Independent.

As for Miss Ronstadt contemplating an early return home, Jacques Barzaghi, a friend and aide to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., said it was "not because she was angry at Jerry. It was because she was being hassled so much by photographers, by the increasing media situation."

French-born Barzaghi and Polish-born Jan Krajewski, a long-time friend and Los Angeles campaign contributor, preceded the Democratic governor and the singer, and accompanied them much of the way.

"SHE COULDN'T walk out of her room. Everywhere she went she was followed by 20 people popping flash pictures of her. It was incredible," Barzaghi said.

Krajewski said the reporters awaiting the fate of the Idi Amin government were in the same Nairobi hotel as Brown and Miss Ronstadt.

Barzaghi said that "their relationship can only be better" as a result of the trip.

Bad Spot in Road

Cars Crash at Same Site

VENTURA (AP) — A man driving a 1977 Datsun south along U.S. Highway 101 skidded into the ocean near the Santa Barbara-Ventura county line Wednesday at the same spot another Datsun went into the sea Sunday, authorities said.

James Bogardus, 55, waded ashore uninjured following the accident, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Shirley Robertson of Oxnard, whose age was not known, died when her 1976 Datsun swerved off the highway and plunged into the waves.

Skid marks from Bogardus' car overlapped those left from Ms. Robertson's, officials said. They added that Bogardus probably was saved by his seat belt, while Ms. Robertson, who had not fastened the safety device, was knocked unconscious and drowned.

Newspaper to Appeal Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Examiner Editor and Publisher Reg Murphy says his newspaper will appeal a Superior Court jury's $4.56 million libel judgment against the paper stemming from an investigative series the Examiner ran two years ago.

"We'll appeal immediately, of course," Murphy said in a statement released by the newspaper. "We believe there was prejudicial handling of the trial."

The San Francisco Superior Court jury of nine women and three men reached its verdict Wednesda night after nine hours of deliberation in the $30 million libel suit against the Examiner, reporter Raul Ramirez and free-lance journalist Lowell Bergman.

The two reporters have been assisted in their defense by a committee formed of some 400 persons — including 200 journalists. The group has described the case as "a test whether journalists can fairly pursue their stories without intimidation . . ."

The 1976 suit, filed by police homicide investigators Edward Erdelatz and Frank McCoy, plus former assistant district attorney Pierre Merle, involved a front-page series the afternoon newspaper ran in May 1976.

Quoting numerous sources, some from sworn affidavits, the Examiner said it had uncovered evidence that a bank teller and reputed Chinatown gang member was convicted of a 1972 murder based "on perjured and misleading testimony exacted by a prosecution that badly needed a conviction."

The officials denied the story and said it damaged their reputations.

Couples 'Beware'

Marvin Case Precedent Setting?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legal experts predict the Marvin vs. Marvin decision will spawn more court battles between unmarried couples, and one feminist leader says that in light of the ruling, a woman should spell out property claims before washing a single dish for her lover.

Both Marvins claimed victory Wednesday after Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 to compensate her for the six years she says she wasted by living with actor Lee Marvin.

Lawyers not involved with the precedent-setting case were split on the issue of whether the ruling by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall would have an immediate effect on unmarried couples.

"MISS MARVIN SAID after the ruling was announced she considers it a victory but wants to put the entire episode behind her.

"Last night, I took down every memento of Lee, every picture," she said. "The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now . . . I'm going to try to put this behind me and live my life.

Miss Marvin had sued the actor for $1.8 million. However, Marshall rejected her claim that an implied contract entitled her to half the actor's earnings during their cohabitation.

He awarded her the six-figure sum "for rehabilitation purposes" to help her become self-sustaining.

"I couldn't have hoped for more. They lost on every charge, on every one. The award doesn't pertain to the points of law," said actor Lee Marvin.

The actor said he had accepted the concept of rehabilitation payments when he paid Miss Marvin $22,000 after they separated nine years ago.

Marvin, 55, later flew with his wife, Pamela, to New York, where he told reporters at Kennedy Airport, "Anybody today has to be very cautious about anything that isn't authorized or condoned by the government," referring to live-in relationships.

The judge's award was based on a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that gave judges discretion to impose an equitable remedy in cases where couples lived together without a contract.

"I think women will be far more likely to insist on a financial agreement in writing before they give up their careers or wash even one dish and that's probably healthy," she said.

Legal experts agree the ruling is likely to encourage suits by other spurned live-in lovers. But they differed on whether the courts will be flooded or simply sprinkled with similar actions.

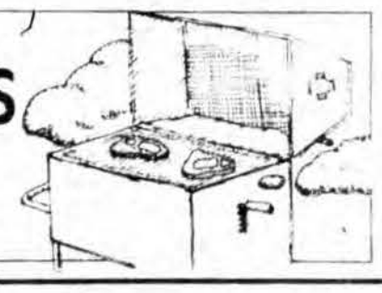

"The decision was surprising to me because it means that there will be a tremendous flood of this kind of litigation," said Stuart Walzer, a Beverly Hills attorney.

"I thought he (Marshall) was conservative and his instincts would push him away from encouraging litigation. I suppose he figured in view of the overall amount demanded, this was a modest sum. But unfortunately, it will be touted as a great triumph and this will encourage more litigation," said Walzer.

Outbursts Erode Council Dignity

With Congressman Dan Lungren and Orange County Supervisor Harriett Wieder in attendance, Thomas unleashed a particularly vitriolic attack.

He told Lungren he was "crazy as hell" and demanded that colleagues shut their blankety blank mouths when they attempted to proceed with the discussion.

Thomas also directed abusive language at a respected department director and at other council members.

Thomas' outburst exceeded acceptable bounds, even for an Army barracks.

But it was particularly offensive coming in city government setting from a councilman whose office should carry with it a certain amount of dignity and prestige.

There can be no excuse for this embarrassing display.

It causes distress and probably adversely affects deliberations of officials who must be wondering what is to come next.

Abusiveness is not an acceptable standard for public officials.

Thomas' fellow council members have placated him in the past in order to woo his vote. It's time for them to bring pressure on him to control himself.

Mangers Forgetful?

Assemblyman Dennis Mangers of Huntington Beach has come out loud and clear in support of the local police department.

Mangers told a large gathering of officers and city leaders at a Chamber of Commerce police awards banquet that police deserve the gratitude of all peace-loving citizens of the city.

He went on to lambaste last year's report by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights which criticized police activities.

The Civil Rights report was indeed sloppy and inadequate. It was based on a great deal of assumption and hearsay and very little on hard evidence.

To this point there is no argument with Mangers' statements but we do have to take some exception to his remarks.

The assemblyman implied that "the press" has been an instrument in putting the police force in an unfavorable light by focusing on negatives.

Lest he forget, this newspaper was the first, perhaps even ahead of Mangers, to publicly poke holes in the federal report, both in reporting the rebuttals of police and city officials and in Daily Pilot editorial comment.

Seniors Need Home

The Fountain Valley Seniors group is in the unfortunate position of being one of the area's few such groups that lacks a facility it can call its own.

The seniors can share space with youngsters at the city recreation facility, or have parts of the facility to themselves for about 15 hours per week.

City officials say they are sympathetic to the need, but they are correct when they reject the idea of spending large amounts of money to build a separate senior center.

Perhaps some low-cost alternatives can be looked at. The elementary school district will lose two schools to declining enrollment this spring and no decision has been made on future uses of the vacant school sites.

City officials could take the initiative on behalf of the seniors in negotiating with the district for leasing some portion of one of the schools solely for seniors' activities.

Such a commitment should not heavily burden the city financially. The seniors would have to defray operating costs through fund-raising activities.

Boyd/Dating

By L.M. BOYD

Our Love and War man has been looking over the report of a dating-service manager. When men in this particular outfit refuse to go out a second time with the girls to whom they're first introduced, those men are asked why. They accuse the girls of having one or more of these seven faults: Self-centered. Aloofness. Conspicuous mannerisms. Critical attitude. Over-eagerness. Plain stupidity. And — yes, they call it a fault — superior intelligence. None of these marvelous men said he refused to go out with the girl a second time just because he simply wasn't up to handling the little lady.

Maybe it's to his credit that George Washington was a lousy speller, don't know. In any case, he certainly gummed up the written word. Early unedited manuscripts show he wrote things like: "I passed the time. . .much more agreeabler than what I imagined I should." And: "went ahunting. . .and catched a fox." No criticism intended. He done good.

Some winter, that of '77 Bears in Anchorage zoo wouldn't hibernate because the air was too warm. Colorado ski resorts shut down because there wasn't enough snow. And Miami got its first snowfall ever.

If all the water going over Niagara Falls went into bathtubs, it would fill about 4,000 every second.

Dear Gloomy Gus

When you consider that Orange County is thought to be the Kook Capital of California, is it any wonder the city councils of the county are infested with so many? And what about the voting public that put them in office?

Politics, Health Affect Summit

WASHINGTON — The struggle between the White House and the Kremlin over where Jimmy Carter will meet Leonid Brezhnev in the much-delayed summit conference is heating up every day, with no quick solution in sight.

Holding the whip hand is Brezhnev. He can genuinely plead poor health as a bar to travel. Soviet diplomats here have bluntly informed the White House that the ailing Soviet president, although only 72 years old, is under doctor's orders not to fly. That means a summit that can fairly easily be reached by train: read Geneva or Vienna.

But the freedom of Brezhnev's whip hand is restricted by the fact that it is the Russian's turn to come to the U.S., in return for Richard Nixon's summit trip to see Brezhnev in 1974, and Gerald Ford's to Vladivostok also in 1974. Carter's top political aides and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski have warned him that an agreement to meet Brezhnev on Soviet soil would be exceedingly politically damaging to Carter. Indeed, they warn it might even hurt in the Senate SALT debate.

BUT THERE'S another reason Carter won't go to Moscow: the juicy prospect of a pre-election summit there in 1980. If Carter met Brezhnev on Soviet soil in 1979, a repeat in 1980 would be out of the question.

With a Brezhnev flight to Washington or Alaska now out the likeliest prospect seems to be Vienna, much easier to get to than Geneva. But it's not decided and some Carter advisers have been talking up Warsaw, Poland, homeland of Brzezinski's family. The problem with Warsaw is twofold: for Carter, its position as capital city of the Warsaw Pact would make it embarrassing; for Brezhnev, it would be unthinkable to meet Carter in a Soviet satellite after Carter had refused to go to Moscow.

TEDDY'S DIET

It may not qualify as a "crash" diet, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's new, abstemious eating habits have reduced his bulk from 222 to 210 pounds in the last three weeks.

That is not enough, say Kennedy staffers who are pushing him to get down to at least 200 pounds. The senator's breakfast is now half a grapefruit and a cup of coffee without cream or sugar; lunch, a cup of consomme, lettuce and lean meat, without dessert; dinner, lean meat, green vegetables and no dessert. Stricken from the Kennedy diet are bread, butter and potatoes.

One political expert to whom Kennedy confided details of what he called a "crash" diet is convinced the effort to slim down is dictated by presidential politics. Others don't agree. They think the driving force behind the fleshing down process is vanity, pure and simple.

CARTER FOLLIES

When President Carter summoned his White House helicopter for another routine weekend trip to Camp David, the very day after his energy speech to the nation, at least one top Carter aide was incredulous. This sub-cabinet-level official told us the president could have scored high political and didactic points if he had foregone his weekend trip just that once, with an announcement explaining that he was practicing what he had preached the night before, conserve energy.

Instead, Carter apparently gave the idea no thought at all and proceeded with business as usual. Likewise, on his Easter weekend trip to Georgia the president could have taken an energy-saving train to make a symbolic point. Instead, he flew in Air Force One.

The disdainful attitude toward his own appeals to reduce energy consumption raises this question: If the president himself does not cut down on energy consumption, why would he expect anyone else to do so? The White House response that a solar heating system is being installed for part of the west wing [illegible]'s ridiculed as causing Jimmy Carter not the slightest personal discomfort.

Handgun 'Victims' Include Criminals

To the Editor:

In your editorial "Ugly Statistics" (April 10) you state that a compilation of news reports indicates 625 Americans were killed by handguns in February. The figures reflect murders, suicides and accidental deaths. However, you neglect to mention how many of these "victims" were rapists, burglars and murderers shot by potential victims in defense of their own lives. How many of the 1,650 persons killed in the stated three-month period were felons bent on murder of innocent people who happened to be armed? National Rifle Assn. (NRA) figures indicate there were at least 1,200 incidents of successful self-defense against armed attackers in this period.

NEWSPAPER clippings reporting instances wherein violent, armed criminals intent on murder and mayhem are thwarted by armed, honest citizens are received by the NRA at the rate of at least 400 each and every month. Many of these cases do not involve shooting, the mere presence of the weapon, usually a handgun, is often enough to deter violence.

The presence of handguns has never been shown to be a contributor to suicide. Guns of any kind are virtually non-existent in Japan, and handguns are very strictly controlled in Sweden yet these countries have the highest suicide rates in the world. Handguns are among the least likely contributors to accidental deaths. According to the National Safety Council, you are more likely to choke to death on a piece of steak.

That the majority of Americans do not want more gun control is evident by the conspicuous lack of public referendums on this supposedly controversial subject. The anti-gun groups do not want the issue voted on by the people, because they would lose and they know it.

Universal Pronoun

To the Editor:

I have designed a creative alternative to respond to the androgynous masculine/feminine need for universal pronouns.

Transitions are difficult. When the new can be introduced conforming to the traditional patterns as much as possible, change is much easier to assimilate.

It's analagous to how we might all have learned to drive an automatic car. It would be easier to learn to drive on the other side of the road with an automatic car than learning to do that plus changing the car from an automatic to a stick shift.

THE ONE word that has been causing the greatest discomfort in a "shifting gear" effect has been the word "man." I propose that we substitute the surrogate world "nam." The conditional response in our somatic system stays in balance, and yet we boldly advance to salute our androgynous nature. (Examples: namhood namkind, worknamship.)

The following pronouns have been used by me for some time in lecturing, teaching and writing. The transition is smooth and easy:

Support GRUNT

To the Editor:

The citizens of the United States need to be as concerned about rail accidents as they are about nuclear. The recent catastrophes involving propane and chlorine tank cars point this out.

We should immediately set up a citizens group to protest lack of action on the part of our government. The general committee, "Concerned About Railroad Practices" (CARP) would be the protesting and picketing agency. The second committee, "Can Railroads Alter Performance" (CRAP) would undertake an in depth study of the greedy profiteering of the nation's railroad managements. Because of the dangers involved, the railroads should be shut down until all studies are completed and fail-safe ways found to run trains.

The above committees would report to an official congressional committee, aided by committees from each of the states, in turn aided by county and city committees (only those served by railroads, of course, or likely to be served by railroads in the future). These committees in turn will be monitored by the congressional committee to give it something to do.

UNFORTUNATELY, although we could raise as much support for this activity as the anti-nuclear group, we don't have the advantage of raising hob at one plant and then traipsing off to the next in a show of tremendous force. Picketing 40,000 miles of track is no stroll in the park. But, with one picket every 1,263 miles, we can show them that we mean business.

With the railroads effectively shut down, the studies can begin, every inch of track inspected, every pound of ballast weighed, environmental studies instituted, covering every cubic foot of right-of-way and air rights above it.

The permits which will be required will guarantee no accidents from other than human or mechanical error. There would be only 742 federal, 464 state, 317 county, and 310 city permits involved. It should only take a maximum of 10 years to get the railroads started up again, except in 42 states where certain railroads run right through an endangered species habitat. On the mainland between New York City and Philadelphia, for instance, someone reported seeing some Thwartwise Bugaboos mating (so called because that's how Bugaboos mate).

With the rails shut down, we can then sit around and grin at each other and chortle over the power we have wielded to help all Americans stay alive.

Outlaw Windows?

To the Editor:

Your editorial of April 10, entitled "Ugly Statistics," citing deaths from handguns, is of concern to me. Statistics are great but they should be viewed in perspective.

Would you permit your readers the opportunity to judge the significance of the numbers you quote by publishing some related statistics.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the same time period how many Americans choked to death on food? How many drowned in swimming pools, beaches, bathtubs etc? How many fell or jumped to their death?

If you are genuinely concerned with the safety of others and wish to promote legislation of this type, possibly your efforts would be better directed toward laws to outlaw open windows, swimming pools and unground meat.

Postal Thanks

To the Editor:

As I finished writing another letter I thought I should write a letter to your newspaper to say thank you to the United States Postal Service.

I shabbily take for granted the "mail" all the time. I apologize to all postal and mail delivery employees.

In a way it's one of my 'heart" throbs: getting a letter over to someone.

What do you men and women feel as you drive trucks, walk streets and stand in uniforms servicing us at post offices? A young man in grey-blue bermuda shorts bending down taking letters out of a mailbox bitterly told me of some of the frustrations.

Thank you, you all!

Elite Embarrassed by Swinger Tapes

LA MESA (AP) — Some nervous swingers are upset by the vice squad's seizure and viewing of video tapes from a service that, for a $15 fee, matched couples seeking to swap mates for sexual flings.

"I sure hope nobody's looking at those tapes," Marge, an airline employee in San Diego, said Wednesday. "It would cause me much embarassment if the neighbors found out."

Their chagrin stems from a police raid Friday on Art Bell's Video Encounters office here in which 30 video tapes were confiscated.

They feature interviews Bell, 33, made with 100 members of the club and about 300 subscribers of the Video Dating Service. Also seized was $4,500 worth of videotape and camera equipment.

Bell and Marsha Boyd, 24, were arrested for investigation of pandering, solicitation for prostitution, solicitation to commit a lewd act and operating a disorderly house. Both self-described "swingers." Each was freed on $4,000 bail pending arraignment April 27 in El Cajon Municipal Court.

"A lot of people are going to be hurt by this," said Bell. "When they joined I promised them complete privacy. I have no idea what the arrests were about. We weren't doing anything illegal."

A sheriff's spokesman said the pair were arrested after vice squad officers answered a Video Encounters ad in a sex magazine offering to introduce couples who wanted to trade partners.

The missing tapes feature about 400 San Diego area residents, including "some real prominent people, such as public officials, teachers, company presidents, journalists and even some law enforcement personnel," Bell said.

Dozens of customers have been calling Bell after he informed them of the raids and the possibility they may be contacted by investigators.

Members of the vice squad have viewed the tapes, in which clients bare their sexual fantasies and preferences, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"The crux of the thing is they are providing couples for sex and in turn are receiving money for providing that service, which is an act of prostitution," said a vice officer who asked to remain unidentified.

Diedrich Team Wins Round

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SAN DIEGO—The bribery trial of Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich and architect LeRoy Rose was interrupted today while the judge decided if testimony possibly damaging to Diedrich could be given before a jury.

The eight-man, four-woman jury hearing the case was left in Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp's courtroom while the judge and contending attorneys in the case set up shop in a courtroom on another floor.

At issue in the hearing was the possible testimony of former Anaheim Hills Inc. president William Stark.

Defense attorneys James Riddett and Keith Monroe called for the hearing on the belief Stark might be asked to testify about matters of which he had no first hand knowledge.

When called to the witness stand in the almost empty courtroom, Stark conceded that in 1973 he felt apprehensive about the possibility "things were going down the path of a criminal nature."

His reference was to the company's attempt to free 2,200 acres in Anaheim Hills from an agricultural preserve agreement with the county that was thwarting its development.

It is the prosecution's contention that Diedrich and Rose were involved in a bribery-conspiracy centering on the company's effort to secure a favorable commitment from the Board of Supervisors.

Today, Stark briefly discussed a dinner meeting he attended in early 1973 with Diedrich, Rose and another company official, Richard Owen.

"I just had a gut feeling. I didn't like the way things were going.

"There was discussion of politics and finances closely related together. I don't like those kinds of things.

"I didn't like the timing of the meeting, Mr. Rose's relationship as campaign manager for Mr. Diedrich and Mr. Rose's wish to sell us some land," Stark testified.

It is the prosecution's contention that Rose and Diedrich attempted to solicit a bribe from the company by offering to sell

IUSD Faces Higher Enrollment

There will be more than 1,000 new students in the Irvine Unified School District next school year and school trustees took the first steps Wednesday night on deciding where to place them.

It was the general consensus of trustees to change existing attendance boundaries as little as possible, with some exceptions. A final decision will be made May 9.

Elementary students in the Northwood area will attend the Santiago Hills School, scheduled to open in the fall, while new students in the south Woodbridge area would be housed temporarily at Culverdale School.

The board also favored a recommendation to relocate the district's Basics Plus program from portable classrooms at Culverdale to the C.E. Utt School leased from the Tustin Unified School District.

This would allow the program to expand to 840 students from the current 652, district officials said.

No changes in junior high or high school attendance zones are contemplated, although 650 new junior and senior high students are anticipated when school doors open next fall.

Enrollment pressure on the secondary schools will be relieved in the fall of 1980 when Woodbridge High School opens, officials said.

David King, a facilities planner, said today that the district has ample space to accommodate upcoming enrollment increases.

State Still Controls Aliso Viejo

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The State Coastal Commission rejected a proposal Wednesday that would have limited its control over a 20,000-dwelling development inland of Laguna Beach, Aliso Viejo.

That action was just the opposite of the stand taken only a few hours earlier by regional commissioners meeting in Huntington Beach.

The state commission's recommendations supporting no change in the existing coastal zone—will move to the state Legislature for action next month.

Richard Munsell, assistant director of the county's Environmental Management Agency, said today he was disappointed with the state commission's decision in Los Angeles. Munsell had lobbied for reduced coastal commission control over the 6,600-acre proj-

Pair Face Legal Action in Dumping Paper

Campus police at UC Irvine will seek criminal charges against two students suspected of destroying bundles of the student newspaper, the New University, a police spokesman said today.

Additionally, the spokesman said, findings of an investigation into theft and destruction of the newspapers will be turned over to the Dean of Students for other action.

Based on statements from witnesses and results of a photographic lineup of possible suspects, campus police narrowed the investigation to the two students, the spokesman said.

He declined to identify them until complaints are filed with the Orange County District Attorney's office.

The destruction of the newspapers occurred in March after the New University became embroiled in a controversy over publication of advertisements that contained alleged racial slurs against Iranians and Jews.

On March 14, 780 papers were stolen and the word "racist" painted on a newspaper rack. One week later, 200 copies of the paper sitting on a loading dock were doused with oil.

The spokesman said the complaint would involve charges of theft and malicious mischief. Both are misdemeanor offenses.

"We felt that if we didn't take action, the situation could get worse," the spokesman said.

Copies of the New University also were seized and destroyed following publication of coverage of a woman's Wet T-shirt contest at a Santa Ana saloon. Police have no suspects in that incident, the spokesman said.

Language Skill Pays Off

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When Eric Elliott's family moved to Costa Mesa from Indio two and a half years ago, the then-sophomore in high school didn't have any friends and was bored. So he taught himself a couple of dying languages.

Elliott, now a senior at Estancia High School, said he managed to find books on Welsh and Breton, a Welsh-related language spoken in the Brittany province of France.

Later, he improved his pronunciation with the aid of cassette tapes and earned enough money to spend a summer in Wales.

"They'd forget I wasn't Welsh until I started speaking English, and then they'd expect to hear an English accent," Elliott said. "It's a rarity to find an American who speaks Welsh."

The 18-year-old won't have to earn his way to Europe this summer. He's won an eight-week trip to France, in the Alliance Francaise competition recently at UC Irvine.

Elliott, who's in his third year of French at Estancia but is reading at the fifth-year level, competed against students from throughout Orange County by delivering two impromptu short speeches in French.

"That competition was murder," Elliott said. "I'd never even made a speech before in English."

In addition, Elliott is studying German and speaks some Spanish. He downplays his abilities — "I'm fluent in English and that's it" — but his language teacher, Leonard McNutt, disagrees.

"He'll stand and talk to three of us teachers at once, carrying on conversations in German, Spanish and French simultaneously, said McNutt. He adds that he's retiring this year and Elliott is "capping my career."

"I just like learning languages," Elliott said. "It's like solving puzzles."

Although he heard Spanish spoken as he was growing up in Indian Wells, Elliott had no other background in foreign languages. He said his family isn't linguistically oriented and his trip to Wales was the only time he's traveled abroad.

Ex-Interior Chief Dies

EASTON, Md. (AP) — Former Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton died at his home near here today, a spokesman at Newman Funeral Home said. He was 65.

The brother of former Sen. Thurston Morton, R-Ky., Morton served as interior secretary and Republican national chairman during the Nixon administration. He represented Maryland's Eastern Shore in Congress from 1962 until 1970.

Morton died at his waterfront estate in the Pres'quisle section of Talbot County. There was no immediate word on the cause of his death.

SD Professor Found Slain; Home Looted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A burglar apparently clubbed a university professor to death when she caught him in her place, police said today.

She was a 43-year-old assistant professor of education at San Diego State University.

A neighbor called police late Wednesday after noticing that a window was broken in the condominium and the front door was open.

"It appears that someobody was rummaging through the place, and the victim interrupted a burglary in progress," said police Lt. John Gregory.

No weapon was found and no arrest was made. The slain woman had been looking after the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Hale, both retired school teachers. They have been away often on trips.

Firefighter Retains Hair

MIAMI (AP) — Miami firefighter Jerry Saslaw, sidelined to a desk job because he wouldn't shave his chest, is back at the firehouse, chest hair and all.

Saslaw refused to take a required electrocardiogram stress test because patches of hair had to be shaved to attach electrodes to his skin. Saslaw said he made the stand for his girlfriend, a 27-year-old flight attendant, who liked his hairy chest.

However, since his transfer, a cardiologist found the electrodes would work as well on his back and he passed the test.

Is his girlfriend happy? The new one is, he says. He and the stewardess split up after his story received national publicity.

"The whole thing really irritated her," he says.

Bomb Threat Disrupts Council Meet

A bomb threat sent 50 spectators scurrying out of the San Clemente City Council Chambers Wednesday during the last meeting of three council members recalled by voters Jan. 23.

Police Chief Gary Brown said a male telephone caller told a city dispatcher, "You only have a few minutes to clear the building before the bomb goes off" at about 8:40 p.m.

Mayor Roy Hamm halted the meeting and told the crowd to leave the chambers while police and firemen searched for hidden explosives.

The meeting is expected to be the last time William Walker, Howard Mushett and Donna Wilkinson will sit as council members after city voters recalled the trio Jan. 23 following a bitter political feud.

Proxmire Assails Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire lambasted two federal agencies today for spending $279,000 on a rural community center so isolated that it collapsed without anyone noticing immediately.

The Wisconsin Democrat awarded his monthly Golden Fleece Award to the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration, which jointly financed the center for Merrill Township, Mich.

HUD provided $100,000 for the building and EDA spent $179,000 on a never-completed road to the center.

The center was designed for counseling, food stamp distribution, literacy classes, job training and other community services for two township villages. It was built "at a secluded site in a virtually inaccessible forest halfway between" the two villages, the senator said.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the center were held in April, 1976, he said.

On Feb. 22, the senator added, a woodsman discovered the building had fallen in and reported it to the local postmaster, who told the sheriff and the township supervisor, who in turn called HUD's Detroit regional office.

When the collapse was discovered, the structure was unpainted, unlandscaped and unfurnished. The road to it was never finished because of insufficient money.

In the small community of Bitely, Mich., today, the township supervisor, James Ware, said the decision to erect the building was made by a "darn fool" predecessor adminsistration.

"They said a snow overload collapsed the roof. Why that building collapsed and other buildings around here 50 or 60 years old are still standing, I'd like to know. It's all in the hands of the township attorney," Ware said.

The building cost $40,000 more than the grant, he said, and the township still owes money on it.

A source at HUD, who asked not to be identified, said department officials visited the site in April 1975 — before the grant was awarded — and were assured the access road would be built.

As for the center's site, access and structural condition, he said, HUD was informed by the local government and by its auditors that the federal money was being handled properly and that the construction was being carried out.

Two Cities Face Road Funds Loss

The cities of Irvine and San Juan Capistrano face the loss of $486,000 in county road funds for three local street projects unless city and county officials agree on long-range highway building plans.

Orange County supervisors agreed this week to give Irvine $160,000 toward the $806,000 building of a two-lane segment of Bonita Canyon Road.

But they threatened to withhold another $243,000 in county gas tax funds for improvements on Alton Avenue in Irvine, along with $243,000 for work on Del Obispo Street and Camino Capistrano in San Juan Capistrano because city and county road plans are at odds.

The issue is a county policy which has governed distribution to cities of the county's share of state gasoline tax revenue.

In the past, the county has shared part of those funds with cities for local street projects with the aim of developing a unified county road network.

But the policy also requires that cities participating in the program have long-range road-building plans that match county proposals.

Irvine and San Juan Capistrano city officials recently amended their street plans, deleting plans to build future roadways county officials contend will one day be needed.

languages, Elliott said, "I've only scratched the surface. If you look at something like Mayan and Aztec, it blows your mind." As for Oriental languages, "I think you have to be born into those. Even Russian is so complex." When he's not learning languages, Elliott said he enjoys listening to music. He likes some contemporary rock singers like Bruce Springsteen, and also an unusual form of rock called Welsh punk.

While in Wales, Elliott explained, he attended a concert by a group called Dr. Hugh L. Detestable and His Patients.

"They sang in Welsh and spat on the audience," Elliott said. "It adds a little vitality to Welsh.

"I was in the balcony," he added. "I didn't get spat on."

At home, he listens to European rock music on an FM station that he says is "between the Christian and the Spanish station."

Unfortunately, Elliott said, his radio tends to drift to the religious station when he leaves it on overnight.

"I wake up and it's wandered over and I hear, 'Repent'!" he said.

After his trip to France this summer, Elliott plans to enter UCI but hasn't decided on a career.

"You can't make much of a living learning Welsh," he said.

5 Irvine Citizens Honored

Five Irvine residents will be honored with outstanding citizen awards Saturday night at the Fourth Annual Community Awards Banquet of the Greater Irvine Lions Club.

The medal of valor award will be presented to Chuck Leonard, a civilian Irvine traffic investigator for his efforts to save two persons severely burned and injured in roll-over of a lunch truck. One person later died despite Leonard's efforts.

Leonard is a retired lieutenant from the Los Angeles Police Department. Presenting the award will be Irvine Police Chief Leo E. Peart.

The Lions' achievement award will be presented by Jack Huntress, district governor, to Emily Hackler, a registered nurse with High Hopes, an organizations that helps rehabilitate persons who have suffered severe head injuries.

Don Dennis, city editor of the Irvine World News, will receive the press relations award.

Paul Brady, assistant Irvine city manager, will present the community service award to Theresa Avera, supervisor of the city's Youth Services Department.

The citizenship award will be presented by Irvine Mayor Bill Vardoulis to Charles E. Cleminshaw, president of Irvine Housing Opportunities, a non-profit group that helps provide housing to families with moderate incomes.

The awards banquet will be held at the Skyliner Room of the Airporter Inn Hotel.

ect that the county has approved.

"There's still some opportunity for the county, if it chooses, to evaluate what happened and see if it wants to work with the Legislature," said Munsell.

In contrast, representatives of Laguna Beach who had protested any reduction in the coastal zone, today expressed joy at the State Commission's action.

Lewandowski appeared before local commissioners Wednesday and noted that the City Council had passed a resolution opposing any change in the coastal boundary.

The county and developers had asked the commission to move the coastal boundary about two miles seaward to the first ridgeline along Laguna Beach.

This would have canceled commission control over 3,430 acres of Aliso Viejo land that (overall) stretches from Laguna Hilltops inland to Laguna Hills and south to the Laguna Niguel area.

The company plans to build 8,900 of its 20,000 units on land within the coastal zone.

At the conclusion of the 40-minute hearing, Judge Tharp ruled some of Stark's testimony could not be given before the jury.

Simply put, the judge said Stark could only testify on matters of which he had a first hand knowledge.

That ruling upheld defense attorney James Riddett's argument that Stark "has drawn conclusions with no basis in fact."

Riddett said a witness such as Stark should be limited in his testimony to what he either heard or said and not be allowed to testify to conclusions he might have correctly or incorrectly drawn.

Late Wednesday afternoon, prosecution witness Michael Remington ended what amounted to a full day of testimony.

Irvine Company Honeymoon Over?

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Since the sale of the Irvine Company in August, 1977, a popular local sport has been honeymoon watching.

IT REQUIRES no physical exertion, it's essentially an indoor sport and no special equipment is needed.

The locals who watched the operation of the company under the Irvine Foundation used to participate in a similar sport known as lawsuits, as in how many have been filed so far. The all-star player there was Joan Irvine Smith who filed a total of 24 before the company changed hands.

REYNOLDS

Honeymoon watching is a variation on that theme. It might also be called waiting for the shoe to drop. For the local enthusiasts, the suspense was ended last month when the honeymoon did, indeed, end, with the filing by the litigious Mrs. Smith of lawsuit number 25.

HER SILVER SUIT, as it were.

Mrs. Smith's suit over increasing the size of a major water pipeline to Irvine Company and other south county property holds plenty of significance outside the allegations enumerated in the legal document itself.

It makes it clear that the granddaughter of James Irvine II is still her own woman and not the least cowed by her high-powered partners when it comes to disputing company policy and management decisions.

SOMETHING ELSE THAT'S emerged from the newest court fray is the company's willingness to have a word or two to say about the suits filed by the woman who still owns 11 percent of the company's stock.

Under the ownership of the Irvine Foundation there was lots of stiff upper lipness about Mrs. Smith's suits.

The reaction under the new board of directors hasn't quite been public, but company President Peter Kremer was frank in discussing his thoughts in a memo circulated to the firm's employees.

HE SAID, among other things, that the suit is absurd.

Kremer's note to employees concluded by dismantling the suit piece by piece:

— He refuted Mrs. Smith's allegation the board of directors had no authorization to make the pipeline decision.

— He used "absurd" to describe her contention that increasing the water supply would decrease company agricultural operations.

— He discounted the idea that the company's action would affect the future density of Irvine.

— And he said, in effect, that it was tough luck that competitors would benefit along with the Irvine Company.

THAT'S THE WAY THE honeymoon ended.

Speculating on the subject of Mrs. Smith's next lawsuit is going to be almost as entertaining as the latest spinoff sport — circulating the rumor about the sale of the Irvine Company.

If the rumor mill is to be believed, the company has been sold — is being sold, will be sold, is in escrow — to a group of Arabian oil magnates, Texans or Korean businessmen for $300 million or $800 million.

COROLLARY RUMORS are that parts of the company are for sale, Alfred Taubman's share is for sale, or Donald Bren's interest has been sold.

So you have to wonder who will be around for the Golden anniversary lawsuit.

Service Held For Irvine's Paul Shank

Memorial services were conducted Tuesday for Paul Domingo Shank of Irvine who died Saturday at Hoag Memorial Hospital at age 57.

Mr. Shank had been employed for 34 years as a merchandise manager for a Sears Roebuck and Co. store in Santa Fe Springs.

He is survived by two sons, Jeff and Steve, of Burbank and a brother, Robert of Burbank, and Elsie Castillo of Rocky Ford, Colo.

Nuclear Stoppage Rejected

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric stockholders have rejected a proposal which would have halted the utility's construction of nuclear power plants in California.

And at the annual shareholders meeting Wednesday in San Francisco, a plan to convert the Diablo Canyon nuclear powerplant to a wind and solar energy generating unit was also overwhelmingly defeated.

STATE

The two proposals were placed on the shareholders' ballots following a year-long legal battle with the utility by Phyllis Appelgarth, 61, PG&E stockholders and members of the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of 25 state environmental groups.

Allegations Denied

Deukmejian told a Police Academy press conference Wednesday that one of his agents reported seeing the documents during the search early this month, but did not remove them.

Job Return Ordered

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — County supervisors succeeded on their third attempt Wednesday to have the court issue a back-to-work order against striking sheriff's deputies, but the 350 member Service Employees International Union voted Wednesday night to join the deputies' strike.

Superior Court Judge Arden Jensen signed the temporary restraining order against the deputies, forbidding them from striking or engaging in a work slowdown.

Incentives Asked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy is expected to ask the state Public Utilities Commission today to speed up its decision on whether to provide incentives for installing energy-saving systems, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Under one such incentive system, utility companies would provide the money for customers to install cost-effective devices such as solar heaters and other energy-saving devices.

Africa Good?

Brown, Ronstadt Said Closer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The relationship between Jerry Brown and Linda Ronstadt is still as good if not better than before their African trip, friends of Brown were reported as saying today.

They added that the major trouble happened when they walked into a corps of international reporters in Nairobi who were primarily waiting for permission to enter war-torn Uganda, and didn't have anything better to do than follow them around — especially Miss Ronstadt.

THE FRIENDS WERE quoted today in the San Jose Mercury and the Long Beach Independent.

As for Miss Ronstadt contemplating an early return home, Jacques Barzaghi, a friend and aide to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., said it was "not because she was angry at Jerry. It was because she was being hassled so much by photographers, by the increasing media situation."

French-born Barzaghi and Polish-born Jan Krajewski, a longtime friend and Los Angeles campaign contributor, preceded the Democratic governor and the singer, and accompanied them much of the way.

"SHE COULDN'T walk out of her room. Everywhere she went she was followed by 20 people popping flash pictures of her. It was incredible," Barzaghi said.

Krajewski said the reporters awaiting the fate of the Idi Amin government were in the same Nairobi hotel as Brown and Miss Ronstadt.

"She got a little bit upset," with the turmoil during a shopping trip, Krajewski said.

Barzaghi said that "their relationship can only be better" as a result of the trip.

Bad Spot in Road

Cars Crash at Same Site

VENTURA (AP) — A man driving a 1977 Datsun south along U.S. Highway 101 skidded into the ocean near the Santa Barbara-Ventura county line Wednesday at the same spot another Datsun went into the sea Sunday, authorities said.

James Bogardus, 55, waded ashore uninjured following the accident, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Shirley Robertson of Oxnard, whose age was not known, died when her 1976 Datsun swerved off the highway and plunged into the waves.

Skid marks from Bogardus' car overlapped those left from Ms. Robertson's, officials said. They added that Bogardus probably was saved by his seat belt, while Ms. Robertson, who had not fastened the safety device, was knocked unconscious and drowned.

Newspaper to Appeal Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Examiner Editor and Publisher Reg Murphy says his newspaper will appeal a Superior Court jury's $4.56 million libel judgment against the paper stemming from an investigative series the Examiner ran two years ago.

"We'll appeal immediately, of course," Murphy said in a statement released by the newspaper. "We believe there was prejudicial handling of the trial."

The San Francisco Superior Court jury of nine women and three men reached its verdict Wednesda night after nine hours of deliberation in the $30 million libel suit against the Examiner, reporter Raul Ramirez and free-lance journalist Lowell Bergman.

The two reporters have been assisted in their defense by a committee formed of some 400 persons — including 200 journalists. The group has described the case as "a test whether journalists can fairly pursue their stories without intimidation . . ."

The 1976 suit, filed by police homicide investigators Edward Erdelatz and Frank McCoy, plus former assistant district attorney Pierre Merle, involved a front-page series the afternoon newspaper ran in May 1976.

Quoting numerous sources, some from sworn affidavits, the Examiner said it had uncovered evidence that a bank teller and reputed Chinatown gang member was convicted of a 1972 murder based "on perjured and misleading testimony exacted by a prosecution that badly needed a conviction."

The officials denied the story and said it damaged their reputations.

Couples 'Beware'

Marvin Case Precedent Setting?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legal experts predict the Marvin vs. Marvin decision will spawn more court battles between unmarried couples, and one feminist leader says that in light of the ruling, a woman should spell out property claims before washing a single dish for her lover.

Both Marvins claimed victory Wednesday after Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 to compensate her for the six years she says she wasted by living with actor Lee Marvin.

Lawyers not involved with the precedent-setting case were split on the issue of whether the ruling by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall would have an immediate effect on unmarried couples.

MISS MARVIN SAID after the ruling was announced she considers it a victory but wants to put the entire episode behind her.

"Last night, I took down every memento of Lee, every picture," she said. "The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now . . . I'm going to try to put this behind me and live my life.

Miss Marvin had sued the actor for $1.8 million. However, Marshall rejected her claim that an implied contract entitled her to half the actor's earnings during their cohabitation.

He awarded her the six-figure sum "for rehabilitation purposes" to help her become self-sustaining.

"I couldn't have hoped for more. They lost on every charge, on every one. The award doesn't pertain to the points of law," said actor Lee Marvin.

The actor said he had accepted the concept of rehabilitation payments when he paid Miss Marvin $22,000 after they separated nine years ago.

Marvin, 55, later flew with his wife, Pamela, to New York, where he told reporters at Kennedy Airport, "Anybody today has to be very cautious about anything that isn't authorized or condoned by the government," referring to live-in relationships.

The judge's award was based on a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that gave judges discretion to impose an equitable remedy in cases where couples lived together without a contract.

"I think women will be far more likely to insist on a financial agreement in writing before they give up their careers or wash even one dish — and that's probably healthy," she said.

Legal experts agree the ruling is likely to encourage suits by other spurned live-in lovers. But they differed on whether the courts will be flooded or simply sprinkled with similar actions.

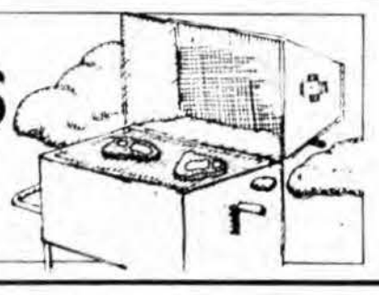

"The decision was surprising to me because it means that there will be a tremendous flood of this kind of litigation," said Stuart Walzer, a Beverly Hills attorney.

"I thought he (Marshall) was conservative and his instincts would push him away from encouraging litigation. I suppose he figured in view of the overall amount demanded, this was a modest sum. But unfortunately, it will be touted as a great triumph and this will encourage more litigation," said Walzer.

Resale Controls Seem Infeasible

Programs geared to keep prices of low and moderately priced housing low and moderate sound well and good until one starts considering the practicality of how they will work

In the city of Irvine, for example, the City Council has been wrangling with what staff planners call "resale controls." They are, essentially, limits on what low and moderately priced housing could resell for after their original purchase.

One might wonder, under a resale control program, if an owner who planted a five-gallon ficus would be able to sell his house for more than a neighbor who planted a one-gallon palm? Should the home handyman who keeps his house in constant tune reap a larger sales price than his television addicted neighbor with a disdain for paint brushes and screwdrivers?

There are questions that might not seem so silly. Is it fair in our free enterprise system to deny home buyers the profits they are entitled to? And, if government gets into the resale control business, where next will it squeeze its nose?

Thus far, the council has wisely steered clear of approving any form of resale control. But some sectors are anticipated to keep pressing for them. The council should hold its ground.

Questions of Conflict

Given attention in recent years to conflict of interest and all the laws and regulations to prevent it — one wonders how a loophole in the city of Irvine's ordinances escaped scrutiny.

Quite simply, it came to light last week that there was nothing on the books to prevent a City Council member or city commissioner from working for the city while in office.

That such double duty was legal obviously stirred up the council, which immediately ordered the city attorney to draft an ordinance forbidding such practices.

While the council is to be commended for its swift action, one troublesome point remains.

Councilman Arthur Anthony left the impression that a city commissioner had been employed by the city indirectly — but employed, nonetheless.

Anthony was wrong. What the commissioner did was nothing more than sign contracts between a cultural league board, of which she is a member and authorized agent, and the city for services the league provided. She did not receive a dime in city money. The implication, of course, was that she did.

It all seems to be a case of clashing personalities, which, in Irvine, is more often the rule than the exception.

Ripoff in Reverse

Irvine Mayor Bill Vardoulis is dancing a political ballet in trying to get access to $1.5 million authorized by voters in 1974 for construction of a performing arts center.

The mayor would like to take this money and use it for development of new athletic fields and parks.

One of his arguments is that the proposed center is going to cost millions of dollars more and that a gigantic public ripoff could occur if plans for the center are allowed to proceed.

At the very least, the mayor believes, the entire issue should be returned to the voters for a second look — a move that in these cost-conscious times would mean certain death for the center.

It should be remembered that the original authorization was not meant to finance the center totally. Rather, the $1.5 million was to be used as "seed money" with additional support coming from other private and public groups.

As was pointed out during council discussion of the issue, the greater ripoff would be for the council to ignore this need and the voters' 1974 expression.

Boyd/Dating

By L.M. BOYD

Our Love and War man has been looking over the report of a dating-service manager. When men in this particular outfit refuse to go out a second time with the girls to whom they're first introduced, those men are asked why. They accuse the girls of having one or more of these seven faults: Self centered. Aloofness. Conspicuous mannerisms. Critical attitude. Overeagerness. Plain stupidity. And — yes, they call it a fault — superior intelligence. None of these marvelous men said he refused to go out with the girl a second time just because he simply wasn't up to handling the little lady.

Maybe it's to his credit that George Washington was a lousy speller, don't know. In any case, he certainly gummed up the written word. Early unedited manuscripts show he wrote things like: "I passed the time. . . much more agreeabler than what I imagined I should." And: "went ahunting, and catched a fox." No criticism intended. He done good.

Citizens born under the sign of Pisces tend to be drawn to the four Ds: dancing, drinking, drugs and daydreams. But they can be pretty spiritual, too, if exposed sufficiently to religion, art and philosophy. Or so say the stargazers.

Some winter, that of '77. Bears in Anchorage zoo wouldn't hibernate because the air was too warm. Colorado ski resorts shut down because there wasn't enough snow. And Miami got its first snowfall ever.

Honey. Ginger. Sherry. Pepper. They sound like the names of a team of cheerleaders, what? They're not, though. Add Teriyaki and you've got a dandy meat marinade.

Dear Gloomy Gus

If Mayor Vardoulis really believes the city has enough money to provide all the playing fields Irvine will ever need without another bond issue, why does he want to steal the $1.5 million theater bond funds for recreation improvements?

Politics, Health Affect Summit

WASHINGTON — The struggle between the White House and the Kremlin over where Jimmy Carter will meet Leonid Brezhnev in the much-delayed summit conference is heating up every day, with no quick solution in sight.

Holding the whip hand is Brezhnev. He can genuinely plead poor health as a bar to travel. Soviet diplomats here have bluntly informed the White House that the ailing Soviet president, although only 72 years old, is under doctor's orders not to fly. That means a summit that can fairly easily be reached by train: read Geneva or Vienna.

But the freedom of Brezhnev's whip hand is restricted by the fact that it is the Russian's turn to come to the U.S., in return for Richard Nixon's summit trip to see Brezhnev in 1974, and Gerald Ford's to Vladivostok also in 1974. Carter's top political aides and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski have warned him that an agreement to meet Brezhnev on Soviet soil would be exceedingly politically damaging to Carter. Indeed, they warn it might even hurt in the Senate SALT debate.

BUT THERE'S another reason Carter won't go to Moscow: the juicy prospect of a pre-election summit there in 1980. If Carter met Brezhnev on Soviet soil in 1979, a repeat in 1980 would be out of the question.

With a Brezhnev flight to Washington or Alaska now out, the likeliest prospect seems to be Vienna, much easier to get to than Geneva. But it's not decided and some Carter advisers have been talking up Warsaw, Poland, homeland of Brzezinski's family. The problem with Warsaw is twofold: for Carter, its position as capital city of the Warsaw Pact would make it embarrassing; for Brezhnev, it would be unthinkable to meet Carter in a Soviet satellite after Carter had refused to go to Moscow.

TEDDY'S DIET

It may not qualify as a "crash" diet, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's new, abstemious eating habits have reduced his bulk from 222 to 210 pounds in the last three weeks.

That is not enough, say Kennedy staffers who are pushing him to get down to at least 200 pounds. The senator's breakfast is now half a grapefruit and a cup of coffee without cream or sugar; lunch, a cup of consomme, lettuce and lean meat, without dessert; dinner, lean meat, green vegetables and no dessert. Stricken from the Kennedy diet are bread, butter and potatoes.

One political expert to whom Kennedy confided details of what he called a "crash" diet is convinced the effort to slim down is dictated by presidential politics. Others don't agree. They think the driving force behind the fleshing down process is vanity, pure and simple.

CARTER FOLLIES

When President Carter summoned his White House helicopter for another routine weekend trip to Camp David, the very day after his energy speech to the nation, at least one top Carter aide was incredulous. This sub-cabinet-level official told us the president could have scored high political and didactic points if he had foregone his weekend trip just that once, with an announcement explaining that he was practicing what he had preached the night before, conserve energy.

Instead, Carter apparently gave the idea no thought at all and proceeded with business as usual. Likewise, on his Easter weekend trip to Georgia the president could have taken an energy-saving train to make a symbolic point. Instead, he flew in Air Force One.

The disdainful attitude toward his own appeals to reduce energy consumption raises this question: If the president himself does not cut down on energy consumption, why would he expect anyone else to do so? The White House response — that a solar heating system is being installed for part of the west wing — is ridiculed as causing Jimmy Carter not the slightest personal discomfort.

SOMETIMES I THINK THIS WHOLE THING IS GETTING AWAY FROM ME!

Handgun 'Victims' Include Criminals

To the Editor:

In your editorial "Ugly Statistics" (April 10) you state that a compilation of news reports indicates 625 Americans were killed by handguns in February. The figures reflect murders, suicides and accidental deaths. However, you neglect to mention how many of these "victims" were rapists, burglars and murderers shot by potential victims in defense of their own lives. How many of the 1,650 persons killed in the stated three-month period were felons bent on murder of innocent people who happened to be armed? National Rifle Assn. (NRA) figures indicate there were at least 1,200 incidents of successful self-defense against armed attackers in this period.

NEWSPAPER clippings, reporting instances wherein violent, armed criminals intent on murder and mayhem are thwarted by armed, honest citizens are received by the NRA at the rate of at least 400 each and every month. Many of these cases do not involve shooting, the mere presence of the weapon, usually a handgun, is often enough to deter violence.

The presence of handguns has never been shown to be a contributor to suicide. Guns of any kind are virtually non-existent in Japan, and handguns are very strictly controlled in Sweden — yet these countries have the highest suicide rates in the world. Handguns are among the least likely contributors to accidental deaths. According to the National Safety Council, you are more likely to choke to death on a piece of steak.

That the majority of Americans do not want more gun control is evident by the conspicuous lack of public referendums on this supposedly controversial subject. The anti-gun groups do not want the issue voted on by the people, because they would lose and they know it.

DON VAN DALSEM

Universal Pronoun

To the Editor:

I have designed a creative alternative to respond to the androgynous masculine/feminine need for universal pronouns.

Transitions are difficult. When the new can be introduced conforming to the traditional patterns as much as possible, change is much easier to assimilate.

It's analagous to how we might all have learned to drive an automatic car. It would be easier to learn to drive on the other side of the road with an automatic car than learning to do that plus changing the car from an automatic to a stick shift.

THE ONE word that has been causing the greatest discomfort in a "shifting gear" effect has been the word "man." I propose that we substitute the surrogate world "nam." The conditional response in our somatic system stays in balance, and yet we boldly advance to salute our androgynous nature. (Examples: namhood, namkind, worknamship.)

The following pronouns have been used by me for some time in lecturing, teaching and writing. The transition is smooth and easy:

DR. RENEE M. NAMASTE

Support GRUNT

To the Editor:

The citizens of the United States need to be as concerned about rail accidents as they are about nuclear. The recent catastrophes involving propane and chlorine tank cars point this out.

We should immediately set up a citizens group to protest lack of action on the part of our government. The general committee, "Concerned About Railroad Practices" (CARP) would be the protesting and picketing agency. The second committee, "Can Railroads Alter Performance" (CRAP) would undertake an in depth study of the greedy profiteering of the nation's railroad managements. Because of the dangers involved, the railroads should be shut down until all studies are completed and fail-safe ways found to run trains.

The above committees would report to an official congressional committee, aided by committees from each of the states, in turn aided by county and city committees (only those served by railroads, of course, or likely to be served by railroads in the future). These committees in turn will be monitored by the congressional committee to give it something to do.

UNFORTUNATELY, although we could raise as much support for this activity as the anti-nuclear group, we don't have the advantage of raising hob at one plant and then traipsing off to the next in a show of tremendous force. Picketing 40,000 miles of track is no stroll in the park. But, with one picket every 1,263 miles, we can show them that we mean business.

With the railroads effectively shut down, the studies can begin, every inch of track inspected, every pound of ballast weighed, environmental studies instituted, covering every cubic foot of right of way and air rights above it.

The permits which will be required will guarantee no accidents from other than human or mechanical error. There would be only 742 federal, 464 state, 317 county and 310 city permits involved. It should only take a maximum of 10 years to get the railroads started up again, except in 42 states where certain railroads run right through an endangered species habitat. On the mainland between New York City and Philadelphia, for instance, someone reported seeing some Thwartwise Bugaboos mating (so called because that's how Bugaboos mate).

With the rails shut down, we can then sit around and grin at each other and chortle over the power we have wielded to help all Americans stay alive.

Flight Path

To the Editor:

With regard to Ms. Lewis' reply (4-12-79) to Mr. Thompson's letter (4-5-79), I happen to agree with Mr. Thompson. His argument is well thought out, and logical. Her's is far fetched, and a little idealistic. Perhaps the best thing to do is answer her letter, point by point.

1. California residents who don't want to put up with earthquakes have the option of moving to Kansas.

2. People who are afraid of possible auto accidents, have the option of not driving.

3. Those who object to paying income tax, have the option of moving to Cuba.

Based on this, those who do not like jet noise have the option of moving out of the flight path.

OTHER FACTS.

1. Since 1969, everything has expanded.

2. Noise levels have increased everywhere.

3. Each year, auto manufacturers fail to meet pollution standards, and are granted exemptions.

4. Can't find a new site for the airport? Perhaps it's in the best place now.

5. Those people who live in the flight path, and have lived there since it was designated a residential area have a right to bitch about the noise. Anyone else has no more right to complain about the noise than an Alaskan has to complain about the snow in the winter. Noise in a flight path and snow in Alaska are facts of life. If you want to live in those respective areas, you have to put up with those respective nuisances.

Orange County Airport is the busiest for its size, of any airport in the world. For those naive souls out there who think that a few people calling and complaining are going to change that, I have some property in Florida, and a bridge in New York that they might be interested in for investment purposes.

As for me, there is no way that you could get me to live in the flight path. You see, I don't like loud noises.

Outlaw Windows?

To the Editor:

Your editorial of April 10, entitled "Ugly Statistics," citing deaths from handguns, is of concern to me. Statistics are great but they should be viewed in perspective.

Would you permit your readers the opportunity to judge the significance of the numbers you quote by publishing some related statistics.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the same time period how many Americans choked to death on food? How many drowned in swimming pools, beaches, bathtubs etc? How many fell or jumped to their death?

If you are genuinely concerned with the safety of others and wish to promote legislation of this type, possibly your efforts would be better directed toward laws to outlaw open windows, swimming pools and unground meat.

Postal Thanks

To the Editor:

As I finished writing another letter I thought I should write a letter to your newspaper to say thank you to the United States Postal Service.

I shabbily take for granted the "mail" all the time. I apologize to all postal and mail delivery employees.

In a way it's one of my "heart" throbs: getting a letter over to someone.

What do you men and women feel as you drive trucks, walk streets and stand in uniforms servicing us at post offices? A young man in grey blue bermuda shorts bending down taking letters out of a mailbox bitterly told me of some of the frustrations.

Thank you, you all!

Elite Embarrassed by Swinger Tapes

LA MESA (AP) — Some nervous swingers are upset by the vice squad's seizure and viewing of video tapes from a service that, for a $15 fee, matched couples seeking to swap mates for sexual flings.

"I sure hope nobody's looking at those tapes," Marge, an airline employee in San Diego, said Wednesday. "It would cause me much embarassment if the neighbors found out."

Their chagrin stems from a police raid Friday on Art Bell's Video Encounters office here in which 30 video tapes were confiscated.

They feature interviews Bell, 33, made with 100 members of the club and about 300 subscribers of the Video Dating Service. Also seized was $4,500 worth of videotape and camera equipment.

Bell and Marsha Boyd, 24, were arrested for investigation of pandering, solicitation for prostitution, solicitation to commit a lewd act and operating a disorderly house. Both self-described "swingers." Each was freed on $4,000 bail pending arraignment April 27 in El Cajon Municipal Court.

"A lot of people are going to be hurt by this," said Bell. "When they joined I promised them complete privacy. I have no idea what the arrests were about. We weren't doing anything illegal."

A sheriff's spokesman said the pair were arrested after vice squad officers answered a Video Encounters ad in a sex magazine offering to introduce couples who wanted to trade partners.

The missing tapes feature about 400 San Diego area residents, including "some real prominent people, such as public officials, teachers, company presidents, journalists and even some law enforcement personnel," Bell said.

Dozens of customers have been calling Bell after he informed them of the raids and the possibility they may be contacted by investigators.

Members of the vice squad have viewed the tapes, in which clients bare their sexual fantasies and preferences, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"The crux of the thing is they are providing couples for sex and in turn are receiving money for providing that service, which is an act of prostitution," said a vice officer who asked to remain unidentified.

Bell's attorney, George Haverstick, called the arrests "just another extension of our times.

State Holds Control of Aliso Viejo

County's Proposal Rejected

By MICHAEL PASKEVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The State Coastal Commission rejected a proposal Wednesday that would have limited its control over a 20,000-dwelling development inland of Laguna Beach, Aliso Viejo.

That action was just the opposite of the stand taken only a few hours earlier by regional commissioners meeting in Huntington Beach.

The state commission's recommendations — supporting no change in the existing coastal zone — will move to the state Legislature for action next month.

Richard Munsell, assistant director of the county's Environmental Management Agency, said today he was disappointed with the state commission's decision in Los Angeles. Munsell had lobbied for reduced coastal commission control over the 6,600-acre project that the county has approved.

"There's still some opportunity for the county, if it chooses, to evaluate what happened and see if it wants to work with the Legislature," said Munsell.

In contrast, representatives of Laguna Beach who had protested any reduction in the coastal zone, today expressed joy at the State Commission's action.

Lewandowski appeared before local commissioners Wednesday and noted that the City Council had passed a resolution opposing any change in the coastal boundary.

The county and developers had asked the commission to move the coastal boundary about two miles seaward to the first ridgeline along Laguna Beach.

This would have canceled commission control over 3,430 acres of Aliso Viejo land that (overall) stretches from Laguna Hilltops inland to Laguna Hills and south to the Laguna Niguel area.

The company plans to build 8,900 of its 20,000 units on land within the coastal zone.

Leading the fight in favor of continued coastal commission control over the acreage were

Clemente Call

Threat Clears Council Room

A bomb threat sent 50 spectators scurrying out of the San Clemente City Council Chambers Wednesday during the last meeting of three council members recalled by voters Jan. 23.

Police Chief Gary Brown said a male telephone caller told a city dispatcher, "You only have a few minutes to clear the building before the bomb goes off" at about 8:40 p.m.

Mayor Roy Hamm halted the meeting and told the crowd to leave the chambers while police and firemen searched for hidden explosives.

The meeting is expected to be the last time William Walker, Howard Mushett and Donna Wilkinson will sit as council members after city voters recalled the trio Jan. 23 following a bitter political feud.

Police said that a similar call was made earlier this week to a dispatcher

Police also noted that the maximum penalty for telephoning a false bomb threat to officials is three years in a state prison or one year in a county jail.

Testimony In Diedrich Trial Nixed

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

SAN DIEGO—The bribery trial of Orange County Supervisor Ralph Diedrich and architect LeRoy Rose was interrupted today while the judge decided if testimony possibly damaging to Diedrich could be given before a jury.

The eight-man, four-woman jury hearing the case was left in Superior Court Judge Ross Tharp's courtroom while the judge and contending attorneys in the case set up shop in a courtroom on another floor.

At issue in the hearing was the possible testimony of former Anaheim Hills Inc. president William Stark.

Defense attorneys James Riddett and Keith Monroe called for the hearing on the belief Stark might be asked to testify about matters of which he had no first hand knowledge.

When called to the witness stand in the almost empty courtroom, Stark conceded that in 1973 he felt apprehensive about the possibility "things were going down the path of a criminal nature."

His reference was to the company's attempt to free 2,200 acres in Anaheim Hills from an agricultural preserve agreement with the county that was thwarting its development.

It is the prosecution's contention that Diedrich and Rose were involved in a bribery-

Another Prof To Speak at Waddill Trial

By KATHY CLANCY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A second UCLA medical school professor was to take the witness stand today in the trial of a Huntington Harbour physician accused of strangling a newborn infant.

Dr. John Menkes, clinical professor of pediatrics and neurology, was to offer medical expert testimony in the murder retrial of Dr. William Waddill.

Another UCLA medical school professor told Waddill's Orange County Superior Court jury Wednesday that the infant Waddill allegedly strangled was doomed to die before the doctor arrived at the Westminster Community Hospital nursery.

Dr. Cynthia Barrett said that, when Waddill arrived 20 to 25 minutes after delivery of the alleged abortion survivor, "I think death was inevitable."

Dr. Barrett told the jury her own experience was with premature infants, not with infants who had been exposed to saline abortion solution.

But even without the presence of saline, Dr. Barrett testified, an infant of the same age as the one known as Baby Girl Weaver and with the same weak life signs would need immediate revival attempts starting within the first minute after birth.

Dr. Barrett went on to say that personnel at Westminster Community Hospital lost any chances to revive the infant by taking the wrong emergency steps in the baby's first moments of life.

"If I walked into a hospital and someone said this baby is 20 minutes of age," Dr. Barrett continued, "I would probably say 'has this baby been baptized and do the parents want it to be'?"

Professor Slain in Burglary

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A burglar apparently clubbed a university professor to death when she caught him in her place, police said today.

She was a 43-year-old assistant professor of education at San Diego State University.

A neighbor called police late Wednesday after noticing that a window was broken in the condominium and the front door was open.

"It appears that someobody was rummaging through the place, and the victim interrupted a burglary in progress," said police Lt. John Gregory.

No weapon was found and no arrest was made. The slain woman had been looking after the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Hale, both retired school teachers. They have been away often on trips.

San Juan Pursues Road Work Funding

San Juan Capistrano city councilmen criticized county supervisors Wednesday for failing to act on funding for two Mission City road improvement projects, then called for a meeting with 5th District Supervisor Thomas Riley to see if problems over roadway planning can be ironed out. (Related story Page A3)

At stake is $239,000 in Arterial Highway Financing Program funds for improvements on Camino Capistrano from Del Obispo Street to Avenida Padre and at Aguacate Road and Del Obispo Street.

The city was poised Wednesday to approve bidding for the projects when they were notified county supervisors are holding off approval of the funds for two weeks.

County planners are concerned about differences between the county's master plan of highways and the city's traffic circulation plans.

"We're bearing the brunt of uncontrolled growth," Councilmen Philip Schwartze complained Wednesday. "The county doesn't have its act together and, as a result, residents of San Juan Capistrano have to take a lot of environmental degredation.

"It really hurts me to see development going on up north."

Councilman James Thorpe, a former Orange County planning commissioner, agreed with Schwartze.

"Our planning is a lot more realistic than theirs," he asserted. "A lot of their planning is

Cranston Hit By Rousselot In Newport

By JOANNE REYNOLDS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

John Rousselot, the arch conservative who's almost a candidate for the U. S. Senate seat held by Alan Cranston, paid a call Wednesday on some of Newport Beach's staunchest Republicans.

Speaking to the Balboa Bay Republican Women, Federated, Rousselot left little doubt that he will seek the GOP nomination to challenge California's Democratic senator in 1980.

But he hedged a bit by saying that he's only 95 percent certain he'll run.

"This is a big state and I have to put together a structure statewide," he said.

"But I intend to win," he added.

ROUSSELOT

The talk was billed as a state of the Congress report by Rousselot, a six-term Republican from San Marino.

But the speech took a decidedly anti-Cranston turn, with Rousselot comparing his stand on a variety of issues to the voting record of California's senior senator.

When asked why he plans to move out of the House of Representatives, Rousselot gave what amounted to a campaign speech.

He pointed out that the GOP already has 41 seats in the Senate and that 24 Democrats, including Cranston, will be facing campaigns in 1980.

Rousselot said he views that as an excellent opportunity for the Republicans to take a majority in the 100-member upper house.

"And Alan Cranston is a lot more vulnerable than any of you in this room might think," he added.

Shave Nipped

Firefighter Retains Hair

MIAMI (AP) — Miami firefighter Jerry Saslaw, sidelined to a desk job because he wouldn't shave his chest, is back at the firehouse, chest hair and all.

Saslaw refused to take a required electrocardiogram stress test because patches of hair had to be shaved to attach electrodes to his skin. Saslaw said he made the stand for his girlfriend, a 27-year-old flight attendant, who liked his hairy chest.

However, since his transfer, a cardiologist found the electrodes would work as well on his back and he passed the test.

Is his girlfriend happy? The new one is, he says. He and the stewardess split up after his story received national publicity.

"The whole thing really irritated her," he says.

Courtroom Cleared

Judge Bars Press From Synanon Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge hearing pretrial evidence in the case of Synanon founder Charles Dederich and two Synanon members ordered the courtroom cleared today of all reporters and people not participating in the case.

Municipal Judge Vincent Erickson made the order on the motion of Paul Geragos, attorney for Joseph Musico, the 28-year-old Synanon member who is charged with Lance Kenton, 23-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton, in the Oct. 10 rattlesnake attack on attorney Paul Morantz.

Dederich, 65, was brought into the courtroom in a wheelchair and helped to a seat behind the counsel table. His modishly long hair contrasted sharply with the crewcuts sported by several Synanon followers accompanying him.

Kenton wore a conservative dark business suit with neatly trimmed short hair. Musico was in a light blue business suit.

The judge made no comment in granting Geragos' motion. Geragos did not explain his reason for the request, but such requests have been routinely granted as a right of the defendant to a closed preliminary hearing. The action came just before Morantz was to take the stand.

Meanwhile, Deputy District Attorney John Watson said Kenton's fingerprint was found inside a car allegedly seen parked near attorney Morantz' home the day the attorney was bitten by the snake that had been placed in his mailbox.

The evidence was discovered Wednesday morning during a recheck of the car requested by defense attorneys, he said.

Morantz, 33, was hospitalized six days after the snakebite. He earlier had won a $300,000 lawsuit against Synanon, a $30 million business, religion and drug rehabilitation foundation.

ALISO VIEJO. . .

After a lengthy debate of regional commissioners, commission alternate Frank Footner, filling in for absent Orange County Supervisor Harriet Wieder, suggested a compromise coastal boundary.

The compromise boundary, approved by local commissioners in a 6-3 vote, would have narrowed the coastal zone considerably, but still left about 500 acres near Aliso Creek inside the coastal zone.

Greenbelt head Alexander and Lewandowski both said they were disappointed with the local commission's action.

The recommendation was quickly forwarded to the State Commission, meeting for the last time before recommendations are due at the Legislative level.

"I think it's wonderful," said Alexander of the ensuing state commission reversal, which came on an 8-1 vote.

"It's what I would have expected the regional commission to have done," he added. "Now they (Aliso Viejo Company officials) will have to submit their development plans to the scrutiny of the regional and state commissions."

Alexander said he was still at a loss to explain the motives behind the joint efforts of the county and developers to have the coastal boundary sliced so severely.

The proposed development, which has drawn support from county supervisors, would add about 53,000 residents to the South County area.

County representative Munsell convinced local commissioners that county guidelines — including a developer promise that half the acreage would be retained for open space — would ensure a well-planned development.

He said the narrowing of the coastal zone to the first major ridgeline above Laguna would meet the guidelines established in the 1976 Coastal Act.

The state commission's staff said otherwise, maintaining that the zone should continue to extend as far inland as five miles because of "valuable coastal resources in the area."

Munsell complained today that he and Aliso Viejo Company representative Ron Mead were not given ample time to plead their case last night before the State Commission.

"They were dealing with a lot of coastline (boundary changes from Santa Barbara south to the Mexican Border) and they gave us two minutes for our pitch," said Munsell.

"The two commissions really don't reinforce each other," he added. "It's like two kangaroo courts; they're just independent of each other."

The state commission also tabled county requests that seven residential areas of Laguna Beach be excluded from the coastal zone.

The area included Aliso Terrace south to Pacific Island Village/Monarch Summit.

The communities along Pacific Coast Highway cover 733 acres and include 2,000 dwellings. County officials wanted the territory removed from coastal control because it is about 90 percent developed.

Today, Stark briefly discussed a dinner meeting he attended in early 1973 with Diedrich, Rose and another company official, Richard Owen.

"I just had a gut feeling. I didn't like the way things were going.

"There was discussion of politics and finances closely related together. I don't like those kinds of things.

"I didn't like the timing of the meeting, Mr. Rose's relationship as campaign manager for Mr. Diedrich and Mr. Rose's wish to sell us some land," Stark testified.

It is the prosecution's contention that Rose and Diedrich attempted to solicit a bribe from the company by offering to sell it land in Fullerton at a price $150,000 above its true value.

At the conclusion of the 40-minute hearing, Judge Tharp ruled some of Stark's testimony could not be given before the jury.

Simply put, the judge said Stark could only testify on matters of which he had a first hand knowledge.

That ruling upheld defense attorney James Riddett's argument that Stark "has drawn conclusions with no basis in fact."

Riddett said a witness such as Stark should be limited in his testimony to what he either heard or said and not be allowed to testify to conclusions he might have correctly or incorrectly drawn.

Late Wednesday afternoon, prosecution witness Michael Remington ended what amounted to a full day of testimony.

In one segment, he is pictured as the professional through which a land development company in 1973 funneled $55,000 to Diedrich in return for a favorable land use decision.

Remington in the prosecution's theory is also cast in the role of the conduit through which at least $30,000 in fees paid to Rose in late 1974 by the same development company were passed on to Diedrich.

In testimony Tuesday, Remington, who was testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution, labeled the $55,000 he had passed on to Diedrich as a loan.

Wednesday, however, he inched back from that label when cross-examined by defense attorneys.

FIREMEN SURVEY DAMAGE AT CAPISTRANO HOME
Cigarette Blamed for $50,000 Blaze Today

Cigarette Blamed For San Juan Fire

A San Juan Capistrano family escaped without injury early today when a blaze, started by smoking in bed, caused an estimated $50,000 damage to their home, Orange County firemen reported.

Members of the Dale Heese family of 33981 Calle Borrega were awakened by a smoke detector, a device firemen contend saved them from injury or death.

The son dragged his mattress outside and tried to extinguish the fire, spokesmen said, but when he returned to his bedroom he found it ablaze.

All five family members escaped quickly, firemen said, and the flames were brought under control within 15 minutes by 25 firefighters called to the scene.

Firemen said the blaze destroyed two bedrooms and two baths and damaged the home's attic.

Woman Injured in Crash

An unidentified woman is in serious condition today after she apparently lost control of her car on the San Diego Freeway in San Juan Capistrano, plunging off a 160-foot embankment and another 100-foot slope.

California Highway Patrol spokesman Tom Sapp said the woman, identified only as Jane Doe since she was not carrying identification, was in surgery today at UCI Medical Center. He described her injuries as major.

Witnesses said she was traveling at about 70 miles per hour in the fast lane south of Avery Parkway when her car began fish-tailing. The vehicle swung across the freeway, dropping off the first embankment.

The disabled vehicle then continued across Camino Capistrano and dropped off a second embankment. It came to rest just east of the railroad tracks following the 8:15 p.m. Wednesday accident.

Garden Accord Nearing?

Two Laguna Beach factions in a battle over a 2.5 acre garden area donated to the city in Allview Terrace appear to be nearing a compromise this week on public use of the park.

Proponents for the Hortense Miller Botanical Gardens told city councilmen Tuesday night an agreementent between the friends of the garden and Allview Terrace homeowner U.T. Thompson III is nearly complete.

Thompson, who lives across the street from the garden owned by Hortense Miller and the city, filed suit in Orange County Superior Court earlier this year, accusing his 70-year-old neighbor of maintaining a public garden on a private street.

Mrs. Miller executed a quitclaim deed conveying title of the property to the City of Laguna Beach in 1976, reserving a life estate for herself.

The agreement stipulates that the city will conduct public tours of the gardens, comprising more than 1,500 plant species, with arrangements set up through the city's Department of Recreation and Social Services.

Thorpe suggested city officials start looking at local funds to complete road projects.

"I don't think we can afford to be seduced by the money the county offers," he said. "We'd better review all the things (on the master plan of highways) that are not in our best interest since they're not going to give us the money anyway.

"I'm in favor of calling their bluff."

Two road links specifically mentioned by county officials are Horno Creek Road and a short extension of La Novia from Camino Las Ramblas.

The city wants to make Horno Creeks Road a loop street through a proposed agriculturally oriented planned community northeast of the Ortega Highway near Interstate 5. County plans call for the road to link up with O'Neill ranchlands outside city limits — lands that eventually could be developed.

The La Novia extension is under consideration for elimination as part of Glendale Federal Savings and Loan's plan to develop 1,201 units along San Juan Creek Road in east San Juan. The extension would connect that development with homes in the south end of the city.

Body Discovered After Robbery Try

Orange County sheriff's investigators, searching for clues Wednesday from a foiled April 12 Laguna Hills robbery, instead found the remains of the alleged bandit.

The body of Aaron Golden Walker, 23, of Riverside, was found in a muddy rainwater pool where he apparently fell after dying from a single gunshot wound fired by police, Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said.

A post-mortem examination indicated Walker bled to death from a gunshot wound in the heart as he ran from the alleged holdup attempt at Carl's Jr., 3002 Lake Forest Drive, Hart said.

The death bullet was one of two fired at Walker by Riverside police, who interrupted the alleged holdup and fire their guns after Walker turned toward police with his own weapon, Hart said.

Hart said Walker ran from the restaurant east toward a construction sight when he died and tumbled into the rain-swollen pool.

Investigators Wednesday went to the site to search for footprints, Walker's gun and other clues, Hart said but discovered the body in three feet of water.

It hadn't been found earlier because the pool, created by rain in the construction area, had been about four feet deep, Hart explained.

Walker's alleged robbery companion, 19-year-old Debra Reed of Riverside, is still in Orange County Jail on attempted robbery charges, Hart said.

She was arrested in a car a short distance from the fast-food restaurant, investigators reported.

Geologist OK'd For Clemente

San Clemente City Council members voted 4 to 1 Wednesday to hire a part-time geologist.

City Manager Jerry Weeks said there were few takers for the advertised $33,000 a year full-time geologist post approved by the council earlier this year.

Weeks said one of the applicants for the full-time post said he would be willing to take the job part-time. Weeks said the name of the geologist may be announced next week.

Lame duck Councilman William Walker argued that the city needs a full-time geologist because of "the amount of work he will be faced with in the future."

But lame duck Councilman Howard Mushett, recalled Jan. 23 along with Walker and Councilwoman Donna Wilkinson, disagreed with the need for a full-time city geologist.

Mushett asserted that the amount of work for the geologist "will run out when he sees that our hillside grading ordinances have been violated" due to council development approvals.

Mrs. Wilkinson said Mushett's comment was on shaky ground and that the council's decisions have been based on "expert" information from city aides. She voted for the part-time post.

Waddill's attorney, Charles Weedman, has contended the two-pound, 15-ounce infant was already dead or on the verge of death when Waddill arrived at the hospital.

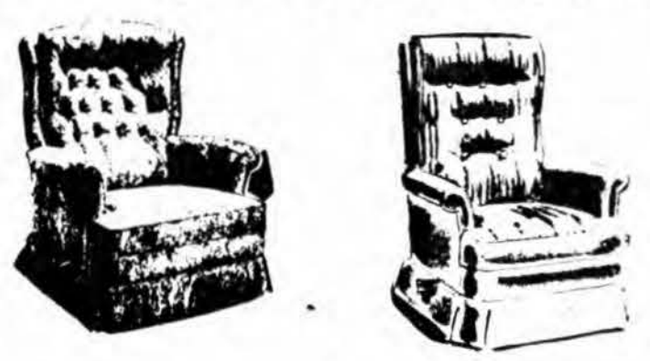

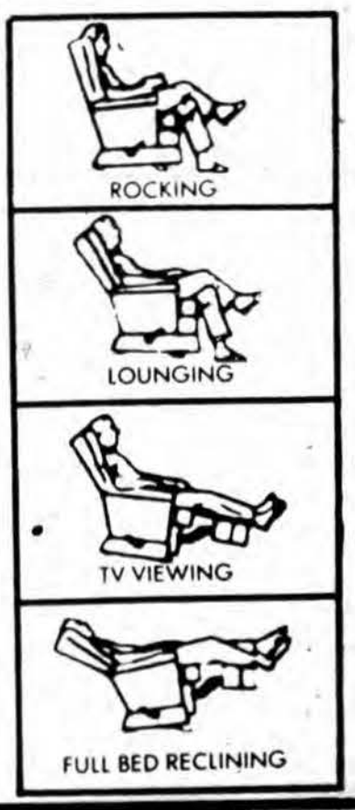

He has denied his client strangled the baby, but said Waddill ordered no "heroic" revival measures because the baby had no hope for life.

She contended she has seen such gasping go on in a dying baby for perhaps 30 minutes to an hour.

"Dying is a long process if you are sitting there and watching it go through its various phases," the UCLA professor testified.

CHAD GREEN PLAYS IN TIJUANA FOUNTAIN
Leukemia Victim 'Most Alert Kid on Block'

Laetrile Flap

4 Quit Posts in Chad Case

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four local officials of the Leukemia Society of America have resigned after being ordered to quit helping a 3-year-old Massachusetts boy being treated with Laetrile for leukemia.

"You don't own me," Bob Deane said he replied to letters accusing him of violating the society's stand against use of the substance produced from apricot pits.

THE U.S. FOOD AND DRUG Administration calls Laetrile unproven in cancer treatment.

In court battles lasting more than a year, Gerald and Diane Green lost custody of their leukemia-stricken son and were prohibited from feeding him Laetrile, which the U.S. Food and Drug Administration calls unproven as a treatment for cancer.

The Greens took the youngster to a Laetrile clinic in Tijuana across the Mexican border from San Diego in January. A subsequent contempt of court order is being appealed in Massachusetts.

MEANWHILE, THE GREENS ARE living rent-free in a house owned by an unidentified American at the south outskirts of Tijuana. They take Chad to the clinic daily for chemotherapy and Laetrile treatments.

"Chad's doing fine," said Deane in an interview Wednesday. "He's studying Spanish and is the most alert kid on the block."

A delivery of donated food and clothing is made every week or two by Gail Brinkworth, who owns a San Diego printing supply company.

IN HIS WALKOUT, DEANE, administrator of the San Diego Senior Citizens' Medical Clinic, was joined by Ted Millan and John Lynch, directors of the Leukemia Society chapter, and by John Helmer, the treasurer, like Deane all unpaid volunteers.

Together they started a new charity called The Nice Guys with an initial project of helping the Children's Workshop in San Diego, for youngsters suffering learning, speech and hearing handicaps.

Condos Switch Backed

A proposal to convert a 76-unit Laguna Niguel apartment complex to condominiums has been approved unanimously by Orange County planning commissioners.

In exchange for commission approval, owners of Crown Valley Apartments, at the southwest corner of Hillhurst Drive and Crown Valley Parkway, agreed to keep 19 of the units as $270-to-$360-per month rental units for three years.

In addition, any tenants displaced by the conversion will be given moving expenses of up to $500 each.

Bill Olson of the county Environmental Management Agency said the for-sale one-and two-bedroom units will be priced at $60,900 to $75,000 each, well below the average cost of other homes in the Laguna Niguel area.

Owners of the adults-only complex said a survey of existing tenants showed 33 were interested in buying the condominium units and another 19 would like to continue to rent.

Another seven plan to move before the rental units are converted to condominiums, seven more will be assisted by the owners in finding comparable rental housing and two more rented knowing the conversion was pending.

The remaining three tenants failed to answer the survey, according to a report to planning commissioners.

Police Seek Motive in Dana Slaying

Orange County sheriff's investigators are still trying to establish a motive in the stabbing death of a Dana Point area woman, found dead in her home Sunday.

Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart said officers are trying to learn who may have talked with or seen Margaret S. Lamar, of 33911 Manta Court, in the week before her death.

Hart said there was no sign of forced entry at the residence, the home had not been ransacked and Mrs. Lamar had not been attacked sexually.

Citizens Saluted

Two Cities Face Road Funds Loss

The cities of Irvine and San Juan Capistrano face the loss of $486,000 in county road funds for three local street projects unless city and county officials agree on long-range highway building plans.

Orange County supervisors agreed this week to give Irvine $160,000 toward the $806,000 building of a two-lane segment of Bonita Canyon Road.

But they threatened to withhold another $243,000 in county gas tax funds for improvements on Alton Avenue in Irvine, along with $243,000 for work on Del Obispo Street and Camino Capistrano in San Juan Capistrano because city and county road plans are at odds.

The issue is a county policy which has governed distribution to cities of the county's share of state gasoline tax revenue.

In the past, the county has shared part of those funds with cities for local street projects with the aim of developing a unified county road network.

But the policy also requires that cities participating in the program have long-range road-building plans that match county proposals.

Irvine and San Juan Capistrano city officials recently amended their street plans, deleting plans to build future roadways county officials contend will one day be needed.

Irvine City Council members deleted two miles of Trabuco Road between Jeffrey Road and Culver Drive from their arterial highway plan, along with two miles of Culver from Bonita Canyon to the future San Joaquin Hills highway.

In San Juan, council members eliminated a two-mile stretch of Horno Creek Road west of Ortega Highway — a move made in connection with a lower-density land development plan in the Horno Creek area.

San Juan officials also have dropped plans for a future one-mile stretch of La Novia Avenue east of an extension of Camino Las Ramblas.

Supervisor Thomas Riley said discussions are underway to resolve the differences and a solution may be found within two weeks.

Laguna Beach has not been eligible for county gasoline tax funds since 1974 because of similar differences between city and county road construction plans.

9 More Drug Arrests Made In County

Nine more suspected heroin dealers had been arrested by early today, bringing the total number of arrests in a two-day Orange County drug roundup to 73.

County Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart noted the bulk of those arrested were Santa Ana residents, although a few live in Costa Mesa, Orange, Anaheim, Garden Grove, Westminster and Stanton.

The Costa Mesa suspects jailed on charges of selling heroin are Henry Wattenburg Chavarria and Frederick Allen Williams, both 30.

The addresses of the two Costa Mesa suspects were not immediately available.

Investigators believe Tuesday's drug roundup, which focused on alleged street and middle-echelon dealers, is the largest of its kind in county history.

'Forgotten' Con Found In Austria

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A man picked up April 1 for questioning about an auto accident, then placed in a cell and "forgotten" for 18 days, was found and hospitalized Wednesday. Doctors said his survival without food was "nearly a miracle."

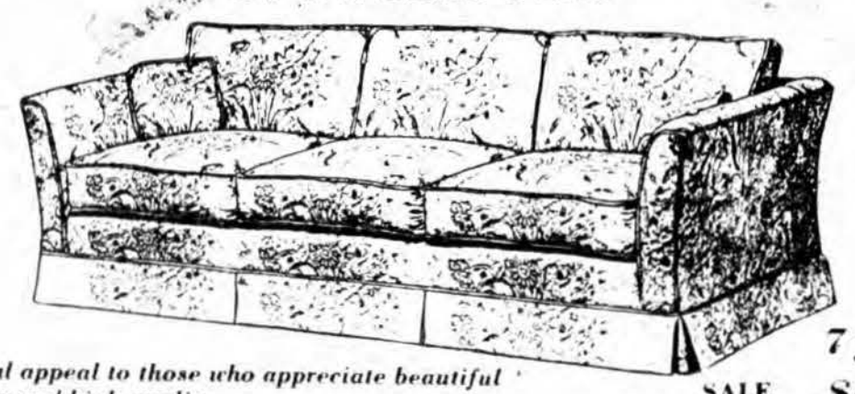

The man was rushed from a cell at Hoechst, in the western Vorarlberg province, to an intensive-care unit at Bregeyas. He was identified as Andreas Mihavecs, a resident of Bregenz.

There was no explanation why no one checked the cell since April 1 or why Mihavecs failed to call attention to his presence. Interior Minister Erwin Lanc ordered an inquiry.

Gasoline Gamble

POOPED OUT AT THE PUMP: Harriett Wieder, the former Huntington Beach City Council person now serving on our august Orange County Board of Supervisors, wants to take the guessing out of gasoline.

Mrs. Wieder is currently pushing a proposal that would force service station operators to post pump prices in a conspicious manner.

The idea is that the motorist would then know how sorely he's going to be fleeced before he drives up to the pump and gets fleeced.

THAT ASIDE, I think Mrs. Wieder's price posting idea is a most noble gesture. Noble, but empty. Just like your gas tank.

Trouble is, in the current gasoline shortage scare, people are in a panic to line up at the stations and fill their tanks before somebody else gets the last gallon.

Gas Station Customer Rolling for Two Gallons and His Pet Turtle

Nobody cares about the price. They're frantic. They'll pay anything. So this allows the petroleum people to charge just about anything.

IT MAY REACH the point where you drive up to the pump and the friendly operator asks, "Okay, buddy, how much do you have in your pocket today?"

"I think I have fifteen bucks."

"Fifteen bucks it is, then. Shall I fill it up?"

Now, if motorists ever return to reason and sanity, competition may also return to the service station dodge. You might even see some innovative merchandising.

Maybe an operator will post a sign declaring:

"UNLEADED — 50.9 Cents." Under that, in tiny type, it will add, "Per Half-Gallon."

Other operators with imagination might cater to the sinful lust for gambling that lurks in the hearts of many in the populace.

They won't just have permanent prices in the little windows on the gasoline pumps. They'll install price numbers that spin around and then stop, like the slot machines at Las Vegas.

YOU DRIVE UP to the pump and pull the one-armed lever. The price numbers spin and stop, one at a time.

Then the gas station operator says, "Gee, tough luck, mister. You hit 99.9 per gallon."

"Better luck next time, now."

Recession Due?

Economy Dips In 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy sputtered to its lowest growth rate in a year in the first quarter, a 0.7 percent rate of increase that indicated the economy could be dipping toward a recession if the trend continues, government figures showed today.

The increase in the gross national product in January through March was less than expected and was down sharply from a 6.9 percent rate of growth in the final quarter of 1978. The first-quarter rate was the lowest since a 0.1 percent decline in the same period last year.

THE SHARP slowdown in growth seemed certain to support the argument of G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, that economic growth already is slowing and that further measures to dampen the economy could plunge the nation into a serious recession.

While the 0.7 percent rate of growth was near the recession level of less than zero percent growth, Miller and top administration experts believe the economy will rebound at least partly from the low first-quarter growth, thus avoiding a recession in the near future.

The unusually severe winter in many parts of the country was at least partly to blame for the slow economic growth in the first quarter. But it probably also reflected efforts by the government to slow the economy through high interest rates and reduced federal spending.

THE ADMINISTRATION is aiming for overall economic growth this year of about 2.2 percent, down from 4 percent last year but at a level it believes is necessary to help combat inflation.

The Commerce Department said in its GNP report that inflation in the first quarter increased at an 8.7 percent annual rate, up from an 8.2 percent rate in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The department said the slower economic growth in January through March was caused by an 0.3 percent decline in sales activity throughout the economy, a sharp turnaround from a 7.2 percent annual rate of increase in the final three months of 1978.

"THE DECREASE . . . reflected decreases in consumer expenditures for goods, construction outlays, net exports and government purchases," the department said.

The figures on economic growth were computed at an annual rate, meaning it would be the total growth for a year if the first-quarter levels were continued for an entire 12-month period.

The Commerce Department said the GNP, the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, was at an annual rate of $1,413.3 billion in the first quarter, after discounting for the effects of inflation.

U.N. Troops Hurt In Lebanon Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese Christian militiamen, fighting to drive "foreign troops" out of the vest-pocket republic they proclaimed in southern Lebanon, wounded eight U.N. troops today in an attack on the international peace force's administrative base there.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis convened his Cabinet in emergency session today to consider "coercive action" against the Israeli-backed Christian rebels in the south.

Government sources said Sarkis was expected to order a court-martial that would try Maj. Saad Haddad, leader of the rebels, on treason charges and sentence him to death in absentia.

Marijuana Research Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing increased marijuana use among teen-agers, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is calling for a major study of the drug.

Califano asked for the review and preparation of a "long-range broad-based research plan" Wednesday in sending a report to Congress.

THE ANNUAL report said 16.1 percent of people between the ages of 12 and 17 were users of marijuana in 1977, compared with 12.4 percent the year before.

"The dramatic increase in the use of marijuana by our youth is particularly alarming," Califano said in a prepared statement.

"It is sheer folly for millions of young Americans to indulge in a drug while so little is known about its long-term consequences — and when much of what is known suggests, for example, adverse pulmonary effects and psychomotor impairment."

THE FORMAL HEW report called for further study on the effects of marijuana on humans, particularly "the implications of chronic use and the possible effects on users who may be especially vulnerable," such as children.

U.S. Summary

Downstream residents looked for higher ground today as the rampaging Pearl River moved relentessly toward the Gulf of Mexico after causing an estimated half billion dollars damage to the state's capital city and leaving some 17,000 persons homeless.

"We've still got a serious situation here," Viva Polk, a spokeswoman for the city of Jackson, Miss., said Wednesday. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricity because of damage to equipment."

Meanwhile, in Alabama, the bulging Alabama and Tombigee rivers sent many persons living near their banks packing to the homes of friends, relatives or Red Cross shelters. President Carter declared the state a major disaster area late Wednesday.

And in Southeast Texas, hundreds of residents chased from their homes in Conroe faced the prospect of more flooding today after a stubborn thunderstorm poured more than 8 inches of rain on the area Wednesday, inundating schools, houses, businesses and highways.

Forty miles downstream from Jackson, tiny Georgetown lay deserted Wednesday as the Pearl advanced. A spokesman for the Mississippi Power and Electric Co. said the flooding had cut electrical power to about 160 customers in the community.

Nuclear Stoppage Rejected

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric stockholders have rejected a proposal which would have halted the utility's construction of nuclear power plants in California.

And at the annual shareholders meeting Wednesday in San Francisco, a plan to convert the Diablo Canyon nuclear powerplant to a wind and solar energy generating unit was also overwhelmingly defeated.

The two proposals were placed on the shareholders' ballots following a year-long legal battle with the utility by Phyllis Appelgarth, 61, PG&E stockholders and members of the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of 25 state environmental groups

Allegations Denied

Deukmejian told a Police Academy press conference Wednesday that one of his agents reported seeing the documents during the search early this month, but did not remove them.

Job Return Ordered

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — County supervisors succeeded on their third attempt Wednesday to have the court issue a back-to-work order against striking sheriff's deputies, but the 350 member Service Employees International Union voted Wednesday night to join the deputies' strike.

Superior Court Judge Arden Jensen signed the temporary restraining order against the deputies, forbidding them from striking or engaging in a work slowdown.

Incentives Asked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy is expected to ask the state Public Utilities Commission today to speed up its decision on whether to provide incentives for installing energy-saving systems, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Under one such incentive system, utility companies would provide the money for customers to install cost-effective devices such as solar heaters and other energy-saving devices.

Africa Good?

Brown, Ronstadt Said Closer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The relationship between Jerry Brown and Linda Ronstadt is still as good if not better than before their African trip, friends of Brown were reported as saying today.

They added that the major trouble happened when they walked into a corps of international reporters in Nairobi who were primarily waiting for permission to enter war-torn Uganda, and didn't have anything better to do than follow them around — especially Miss Ronstadt.

THE FRIENDS WERE quoted today in the San Jose Mercury and the Long Beach Independent.

As for Miss Ronstadt contemplating an early return home, Jacques Barzaghi, a friend and aide to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., said it was "not because she was angry at Jerry. It was because she was being hassled so much by photographers, by the increasing media situation."

French-born Barzaghi and Polish-born Jan Krajewski, a longtime friend and Los Angeles campaign contributor, preceded the Democratic governor and the singer, and accompanied them much of the way.

"SHE COULDN'T walk out of her room. Everywhere she went she was followed by 20 people popping flash pictures of her. It was incredible," Barzaghi said.

Krajewski said the reporters awaiting the fate of the Idi Amin government were in the same Nairobi hotel as Brown and Miss Ronstadt.

"She got a little bit upset," with the turmoil during a shopping trip, Krajewski said.

Barzaghi said that "their relationship can only be better" as a result of the trip.

Bad Spot in Road

Cars Crash at Same Site

VENTURA (AP) — A man driving a 1977 Datsun south along U.S. Highway 101 skidded into the ocean near the Santa Barbara-Ventura county line Wednesday at the same spot another Datsun went into the sea Sunday, authorities said.

James Bogardus, 55, waded ashore uninjured following the accident, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Shirley Robertson of Oxnard, whose age was not known, died when her 1976 Datsun swerved off the highway and plunged into the waves.

Skid marks from Bogardus' car overlapped those left from Ms. Robertson's, officials said. They added that Bogardus probably was saved by his seat belt, while Ms. Robertson, who had not fastened the safety device, was knocked unconscious and drowned.

Newspaper to Appeal Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Examiner Editor and Publisher Reg Murphy says his newspaper will appeal a Superior Court jury's $4.56 million libel judgment against the paper stemming from an investigative series the Examiner ran two years ago.

"We'll appeal immediately, of course," Murphy said in a statement released by the newspaper. "We believe there was prejudicial handling of the trial."

The San Francisco Superior Court jury of nine women and three men reached its verdict Wednesda night after nine hours of deliberation in the $30 million libel suit against the Examiner, reporter Raul Ramirez and free-lance journalist Lowell Bergman.

The two reporters have been assisted in their defense by a committee formed of some 400 persons — including 200 journalists. The group has described the case as "a test whether journalists can fairly pursue their stories without intimidation . . ."

The 1976 suit, filed by police homicide investigators Edward Erdelatz and Frank McCoy, plus former assistant district attorney Pierre Merle, involved a front-page series the afternoon newspaper ran in May 1976.

Quoting numerous sources, some from sworn affidavits, the Examiner said it had uncovered evidence that a bank teller and reputed Chinatown gang member was convicted of a 1972 murder based "on perjured and misleading testimony exacted by a prosecution that badly needed a conviction."

The officials denied the story and said it damaged their reputations.

Marvin Case Precedent Setting?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Legal experts predict the Marvin vs. Marvin decision will spawn more court battles between unmarried couples, and one feminist leader says that in light of the ruling, a woman should spell out property claims before washing a single dish for her lover.

Both Marvins claimed victory Wednesday after Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 to compensate her for the six years she says she wasted by living with actor Lee Marvin.

Lawyers not involved with the precedent-setting case were split on the issue of whether the ruling by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall would have an immediate effect on unmarried couples.

MISS MARVIN SAID after the ruling was announced she considers it a victory but wants to put the entire episode behind her.

"Last night, I took down every memento of Lee, every picture," she said. "The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now. . . . I'm going to try to put this behind me and live my life. . . .

Miss Marvin had sued the actor for $1.8 million. However, Marshall rejected her claim that an implied contract entitled her to half the actor's earnings during their cohabitation.

He awarded her the six-figure sum "for rehabilitation purposes" to help her become self-sustaining.

"I couldn't have hoped for more. They lost on every charge, on every one. The award doesn't pertain to the points of law," said actor Lee Marvin.

The actor said he had accepted the concept of rehabilitation payments when he paid Miss Marvin $22,000 after they separated nine years ago.

Marvin, 55, later flew with his wife, Pamela, to New York, where he told reporters at Kennedy Airport, "Anybody today has to be very cautious about anything that isn't authorized or condoned by the government," referring to live-in relationships.

The judge's award was based on a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that gave judges discretion to impose an equitable remedy in cases where couples lived together without a contract.

"I think women will be far more likely to insist on a financial agreement in writing before they give up their careers or wash even one dish and that's probably healthy," she said.

Legal experts agree the ruling is likely to encourage suits by other spurned live-in lovers. But they differed on whether the courts will be flooded or simply sprinkled with similar actions.

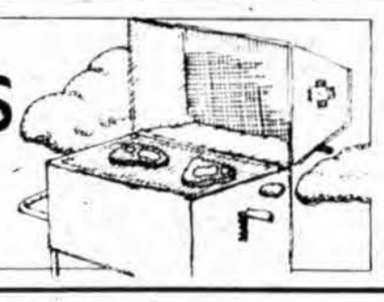

"The decision was surprising to me because it means that there will be a tremendous flood of this kind of litigation," said Stuart Walzer, a Beverly Hills attorney.

"I thought he (Marshall) was conservative and his instincts would push him away from encouraging litigation. I suppose he figured in view of the overall amount demanded, this was a modest sum. But unfortunately, it will be touted as a great triumph and this will encourage more litigation," said Walzer.

Clemente Ballot Recommendations

San Clemente voters have a tough task ahead of them next Tuesday. They must select three council members from a field of 36 candidates.

It is a record number of candidates for any California city its size. It has been difficult for voters to decide among 36 candidates who have been given only two and three minutes each to speak at four candidates' forums.

In an attempt to help voters make their choices, the Daily Pilot has covered the forums and spoken individually to many of the council hopefuls.

We recommend:

— Mitchell E. "Mitch" Haddad, 27, an environmental prosecutor and county deputy district attorney, who believes San Clemente should have growth, "only if it is allowed in a controlled atmosphere." Haddad is seeking a one-year term.

— William C. Mecham, a 32-year-old teacher and a labor negotiator who believes he can bring the differing factions in San Clemente together for effective city government. He is seeking a one-year term.

— Wilma R. Bloom, 51, who operates a hardware store in San Clemente, has a background in finances as former finance director of the county's League of Women Voters. She also has been active in civic affairs and is knowledgeable on affairs dealing with housing. She is seeking a three-year term on the council.

The Daily Pilot also recommends a no vote on an advisory ballot measure that asks the citizens of San Clemente to purchase 2,600 acres of property in the back country at an estimated cost of $26 million.

Smoking Ban Wise

Capistrano Unified School District trustees have decided against establishment of a student smoking area at Capistrano Valley High School.

It is hard to just to justify such an area at a high school campus. It would only condone more smoking while the frequent cigarette puffing that goes on in the lavatories would continue.

Some school officials believe an area should be set aside for smoking students since trustees have decided to start a "closed campus" policy at Capistrano Valley High.

It is believed that students flee the campus so they can light up without fear of being policed by teachers and proctors at the school.

Some argue that the current no-smoking policy at the school cannot be enforced anyway. So, they say, why not set up a smoking area where other students will not be bothered?

The problem is that it puts the school board in the hard to defend position of abetting something that is illegal and detrimental to young people's health. And Dana Hills and San Clemente students would probably request a smokers' area like the one sought at Capistrano Valley High. Where would it all end?

It would also be wise, however, to monitor closely the closed campus policy at Capistrano Valley High, to see if senior and junior students who show they are responsible can't be allowed to leave campus when they have a free class period.

Look at the Future

On May 2, San Juan Capistrano residents will get one of their first opportunities to view a proposed 1,200-unit home development — a building plan that was the result of secret sessions to settle a lawsuit against the city.

The plan, developed by city officials and attorneys for Glendale Federal Savings and Loan, covers about 1,600 acres of land east of the San Diego Freeway and south of San Juan Creek Road.

The proposal calls for massive grading of the prominent hillside vista behind the San Juan Hills Golf Course, a sweeping panorama visible throughout the city.

The plans also call for high density homes in much of the land near San Juan Creek Road.

The May 2 discussion will take place at the City Council meeting at 7 p.m. in council chambers, 32400 Paseo Adelanto.

Three previous discussions of the proposed general plan amendment received only light public comments and were not well attended, one planning commissioner said.

Residents interested in learning about the plan and commenting on it should attend the May 2 meeting.

Otherwise, as Mayor Ken Friess predicted, the screaming will start when the earth movers begin plowing under the scenic hillsides.

By L.M. BOYD

Our Love and War man has been looking over the report of a dating-service manager. When men in this particular outfit refuse to go out a second time with the girls to whom they're first introduced, those men are asked why. They accuse the girls of having one or more of these seven faults: Self-centered. Aloofness. Conspicuous mannerisms. Critical attitude. Over-eagerness. Plain stupidity. And yes, they call it a fault superior intelligence. None of these marvelous men said he refused to go out with the girl a second time, just because he simply wasn't up to handling the little lady.

Dear Gloomy Gus

When you consider that Orange County is thought to be the Kook Capital of California, is it any wonder the city councils of the county are infested with so many? And what about the voting public that put them in office?

Politics, Health Affect Summit

WASHINGTON — The struggle between the White House and the Kremlin over where Jimmy Carter will meet Leonid Brezhnev in the much-delayed summit conference is heating up every day with no quick solution in sight.

Holding the whip hand is Brezhnev. He can genuinely plead poor health as a bar to travel. Soviet diplomats here have bluntly informed the White House that the ailing Soviet president, although only 72 years old, is under doctor's orders not to fly. That means a summit that can fairly easily be reached by train: read Geneva or Vienna.

But the freedom of Brezhnev's whip hand is restricted by the fact that it is the Russian's turn to come to the U.S., in return for Richard Nixon's summit trip to see Brezhnev in 1974, and Gerald Ford's to Vladivostok also in 1974. Carter's top political aides and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski have warned him that an agreement to meet Brezhnev on Soviet soil would be exceedingly politically damaging to Carter. Indeed, they warn it might even hurt in the Senate SALT debate.

BUT THERE'S another reason Carter won't go to Moscow: the juicy prospect of a pre-election summit there in 1980. If Carter met Brezhnev on Soviet soil in 1979, a repeat in 1980 would be out of the question.

With a Brezhnev flight to Washington or Alaska now out, the likeliest prospect seems to be Vienna, much easier to get to than Geneva. But it's not decided and some Carter advisers have been talking up Warsaw, Poland, homeland of Brzezinski's family. The problem with Warsaw is twofold: for Carter, its position as capital city of the Warsaw Pact would make it embarrassing; for Brezhnev, it would be unthinkable to meet Carter in a Soviet satellite after Carter had refused to go to Moscow.

TEDDY'S DIET

It may not qualify as a "crash" diet, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's new, abstemious eating habits have reduced his bulk from 222 to 210 pounds in the last three weeks.

That is not enough, say Kennedy staffers who are pushing him to get down to at least 200 pounds. The senator's breakfast is now half a grapefruit and a cup of coffee without cream or sugar; lunch, a cup of consomme, lettuce and lean meat, without dessert; dinner, lean meat, green vegetables and no dessert. Stricken from the Kennedy diet are bread, butter and potatoes.

One political expert to whom Kennedy confided details of what he called a "crash" diet is convinced the effort to slim down is dictated by presidential politics. Others don't agree. They think the driving force behind the fleshing down process is vanity, pure and simple.

CARTER FOLLIES

When President Carter summoned his White House helicopter for another routine weekend trip to Camp David, the very day after his energy speech to the nation, at least one top Carter aide was incredulous. This sub-cabinet level official told us the president could have scored high political and didactic points if he had foregone his weekend trip just that once, with an announcement explaining that he was practicing what he had preached the night before, conserve energy.

Instead, Carter apparently gave the idea no thought at all and proceeded with business as usual. Likewise, on his Easter weekend trip to Georgia the president could have taken an energy-saving train to make a symbolic point. Instead, he flew in Air Force One.

The disdainful attitude toward his own appeals to reduce energy consumption raises this question. If the president himself does not cut down on energy consumption, why would he expect anyone else to do so? The White House response that a solar heating system is being installed for part of the west wing is ridiculed as causing Jimmy Carter not the slightest personal discomfort.

Handgun 'Victims' Include Criminals

To the Editor:

In your editorial "Ugly Statistics" (April 10) you state that a compilation of news reports indicates 625 Americans were killed by handguns in February. The figures reflect murders, suicides and accidental deaths. However, you neglect to mention how many of these "victims" were rapists, burglars and murderers shot by potential victims in defense of their own lives. How many of the 1,650 persons killed in the stated three-month period were felons bent on murder of innocent people who happened to be armed? National Rifle Assn. (NRA) figures indicate there were at least 1,200 incidents of successful self-defense against armed attackers in this period.

NEWSPAPER clippings reporting instances wherein violent, armed criminals intent on murder and mayhem are thwarted by armed, honest citizens are received by the NRA at the rate of at least 400 each and every month. Many of these cases do not involve shooting, the mere presence of the weapon, usually a handgun, is often enough to deter violence.

The presence of handguns has never been shown to be a contributor to suicide. Guns of any kind are virtually non-existent in Japan, and handguns are very strictly controlled in Sweden yet these countries have the highest suicide rates in the world. Handguns are among the least likely contributors to accidental deaths. According to the National Safety Council, you are more likely to choke to death on a piece of steak.

That the majority of Americans do not want more gun control is evident by the conspicuous lack of public referendums on this supposedly controversial subject. The anti-gun groups do not want the issue voted on by the people, because they would lose and they know it.

Universal Pronoun

To the Editor:

I have designed a creative alternative to respond to the androgynous masculine/feminine need for universal pronouns.

Transitions are difficult. When the new can be introduced conforming to the traditional patterns as much as possible, change is much easier to assimilate.

It's analagous to how we might all have learned to drive an automatic car. It would be easier to learn to drive on the other side of the road with an automatic car than learning to do that plus changing the car from an automatic to a stick shift.

THE ONE word that has been causing the greatest discomfort in a "shifting gear" effect has been the word "man." I propose that we substitute the surrogate world "nam." The conditional response in our somatic system stays in balance, and yet we boldly advance to salute our androgynous nature. (Examples: namhood namkind, worknamship.)

The following pronouns have been used by me for some time in lecturing, teaching and writing. The transition is smooth and easy:

Man/Woman/ Nam. He/She/ E. His/Her/ Il/ He is/ She is/ E's.

Support GRUNT

To the Editor:

The citizens of the United States need to be as concerned about rail accidents as they are about nuclear. The recent catastrophes involving propane and chlorine tank cars point this out.

We should immediately set up a citizens group to protest lack of action on the part of our government. The general committee, "Concerned About Railroad Practices" (CARP) would be the protesting and picketing agency. The second committee, "Can Railroads Alter Performance" (CRAP) would undertake an in depth study of the greedy profiteering of the nation's railroad managements. Because of the dangers involved, the railroads should be shut down until all studies are completed and fail-safe ways found to run trains.

The above committees would report to an official congressional committee, aided by committees from each of the states, in turn aided by county and city committees (only those served by railroads, of course, or likely to be served by railroads in the future). These committees in turn will be monitored by the congressional committee to give it something to do.

UNFORTUNATELY, although we could raise as much support for this activity as the anti-nuclear group, we don't have the advantage of raising hob at one plant and then traipsing off to the next in a show of tremendous force. Picketing 40,000 miles of track is no stroll in the park. But, with one picket every 1,263 miles, we can show them that we mean business.

With the railroads effectively shut down, the studies can begin, every inch of track inspected, every pound of ballast weighed, environmental studies instituted, covering every cubic foot of right-of-way and air rights above it.

The permits which will be required will guarantee no accidents from other than human or mechanical error. There would be only 742 federal, 464 state, 317 county and 310 city permits involved. It should only take a maximum of 10 years to get the railroads started up again, except in 42 states where certain railroads run right through an endangered species habitat. On the mainland between New York City and Philadelphia, for instance, someone reported seeing some Thwartwise Bugaboos mating (so called because that's how Bugaboos mate).

With the rails shut down, we can then sit around and grin at each other and chortle over the power we have wielded to help all Americans stay alive.

Outlaw Windows?

To the Editor:

Your editorial of April 10, entitled "Ugly Statistics," citing deaths from handguns, is of concern to me. Statistics are great but they should be viewed in perspective.

Would you permit your readers the opportunity to judge the significance of the numbers you quote by publishing some related statistics.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the same time period how many Americans choked to death on food? How many drowned in swimming pools, beaches, bathtubs etc? How many fell or jumped to their death?

If you are genuinely concerned with the safety of others and wish to promote legislation of this type, possibly your efforts would be better directed toward laws to outlaw open windows, swimming pools and unground meat.

Postal Thanks

To the Editor:

As I finished writing another letter I thought I should write a letter to your newspaper to say thank you to the United States Postal Service.

I shabbily take for granted the "mail" all the time. I apologize to all postal and mail delivery employees.

In a way it's one of my "heart" throbs: getting a letter over to someone.

What do you men and women feel as you drive trucks, walk streets and stand in uniforms servicing us at post offices? A young man in grey blue bermuda shorts bending down taking letters out of a mailbox bitterly told me of some of the frustrations.

Thank you, you all!

Court Orders Sale of Whiting Ranch

The Whiting Ranch, valued by its former owner at $50 million, is to be sold at a court auction in June.

Santa Ana Bankruptcy Court Judge Aaron K. Phelps ordered the sale of the 2,768-acre property near El Toro after rejecting former owner Borden Kent "Ken" Rogers' 11th hour move to retain control of the acreage.

PHELPS MADE the ruling after listening to testimony which included the statement that Rogers bought the land, which lies at the edge of the Cleveland National Forest, for $2 million from the Whiting Brothers in 1975 in an agreement that included no down payment from the financier.

Noting that there are claims totalling more than $10 million on the property, Phelps appointed Newport Beach attorney Robert A. Fisher to act as trustee in the sale.

Phelps ordered Rogers not to interfere with the sale or conduct any negotiations with government entities or agencies while the property is under Fisher's trusteeship.

HE REJECTED a plan by Rogers in which the financier suggested the sale of 500 acres of the ranch to a development firm for $13 million. At that point, Rogers valued the Whiting Ranch at $50 million.

Fisher believes the true value of the property is between $10 million and $15 million.

It was argued in court that Rogers tried to retain control over the ranch by a legal maneuver described as the filing of a petition to convert the pending bankruptcy into a "Chapter 11" action — a legal definition that gives the petitioner a further opportunity to reorganize his financial affairs and re-evaluate his indebtedness.

"HE MADE A MOVE to block the sale," Phelps said of Rogers. "Then others made a move and he was checkmated."

Rogers told Judge Phelps that his plan to sell 500 acres of the ranch, the largest undeveloped land parcel for sale in Orange County, would provide the court with a $3.2 million down payment.

Rogers said the development firm involved in the deal would build some 2,200 homes on the property, with 750 houses reserved for low-income dwellings. The low-income units would be financed in part by government funds, he said.

PHELPS DESCRIBED the proposal as "not very creditable." He said the proposed officers of the development firm were former associates of Rogers and the firm had showed no evidence of incorporation or even the existence of a bank account.

Judge Phelps said he has already validated three claims, among claims totalling $40 million submitted to his court. He identified them as:

— A $1.6 million note held by the El Toro Land Co., formerly known as the Whiting Brothers Corp., related to the purchase by Rogers in February 1975.

— A $400,000 note held by the Florida Insurance Commission and first drawn on the now-defunct Seaboard Life Insurance Co. of Florida. It was stated in court that Rogers used the note as a down payment for the ranch.

Sidewalk Skating A No-no

There won't be any signs asking skateboarders, roller skaters and bicyclists not to ride on city sidewalks, but police were given the go-ahead this week by councilmen to discourage such activities in the busy downtown business area.

Acting Police Chief Neil Purcell asked Laguna Beach City Council members this week to approve funding for signs to be placed on city sidewalks asking two- and four-wheel enthusiasts to stay on the streets.

"WE ARE RECEIVING complaints from pedestrians about being knocked down or bruised by skateboarders, roller skaters and bicyclists," Purcell told councilmen.

But his sign proposal was knocked down by council members Wayne Baglin, Sally Bellerue and Kelly Boyd, who said the posters would only serve to show the city's law prohibiting such activity is unenforceable.

Purcell admitted the sidewalk ordinance, "is almost unenforceable," adding his office will "when they can, take appropriate action to discourage such activities."

COUNCILMEN DID approve the acting police chief's proposal to distribute fliers to downtown merchants, the chamber of commerce and firms that rent roller skates, asking them to hand them out to the sports enthusiasts.

Purcell said it is difficult for motor officers to spot a violator, park the patrol unit and catch up with the skater before they are out of sight.

And, he said, "foot beat officers would not present a positive community image if they are in the position of literally chasing down minor violators on the sidewalks."

"THE BIG PROBLEM is in the downtown central business district," Purcell said, adding his patrol officers will expend most of their efforts at enforcement in that area.

"We will try to warn violators, verbally, and, if necessary by citation, that skating on the narrow width of the downtown sidewalks is not compatible with pedestrians."

Dance Techniques

Instructor Martha Morrison guides students Jodi Blakely, 6, and Michele Holliday, 8, both of San Clemente, in dance exercises. Ms. Morrison, a professional dancer who runs her dance company, will teach city Recreation Department-sponsored class beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. for five weeks. School's Master Plan Eyed

An expanded library, a revamped swimming facility, sound-proofed classrooms and a safe way for students to cross Park Avenue will be top priority items tonight as Laguna Beach school trustees consider a master plan for high school facilities.

Trustees will be asked to approve the master plan that covers present needs as well as necessities that could spring up in the future if the 50-year-old campus' population swells to 1,400.

School Superintendent Robert Sanchis said that district officials would seek state, federal or private funds to finance improvements tabbed as current necessities in the master plan.

Sanchis said officials went ahead with a full-blown master plan despite declining enrollments because of the potential for future growth within Laguna Beach school boundaries.

The high school's current enrollment is 1,100.

Tonight's meeting is set for 7:30 in district offices, 550 Blumont St.

Private Summer School

Capo Turstees OK Pact With Corporation

Capistrano Unified School District trustees have moved a step closer to establishing a privately run, pay-as-you-go summer classes program for first through twelfth grade.

Trustees approved an agreement with the American Learning Corporation to offer first thorough eighth grade youngsters 24 days of summer classes for $144 in tuition.

THE AGREEMENT MUST be approved by the Orange County counsel, said Superintendent Jerome Thornsley.

District officials said a similar agreement with La Verne University provides summer classes for ninth through twelfth grade students at an undetermined tuition cost.

La Verne officials offered to organize the summer program for first through twelfth grade instruction. But trustees this week decided to ask their services just for high school students.

THE PRIVATELY RUN summer program has been developed in anticipation that state funds will not be available to pay for classes this year.

Trustees have also authorized district aides to work out an agreement with Saddleback College officials to allow high school students to attend the college's summer program.

YMCA Slates Camp Signup Program

Workers had their hands full in San Juan Capistrano when they moved the English house, built in 1907, from its Camino Capistrano site to the Los Rios area. Last September there was a sign saying "Free House." Offer was part of a plan by Harrison Negley, a local antique dealer and owner of the home, to keep it in San Juan. Several people bid for the free home, but aerospace executive Bill Hardy won when he agreed to renovate structure and move it to Los Rios area, Orange County's oldest housing area.

Americans Seek Ways to Cut Grocery Bills

By The Associated Press
(Last of three articles)

Inflation is changing the way America shops.

No-frills packages, bag-it-yourself stores and do-it-yourself food cooperatives are gaining popularity as people look for ways to cut grocery bills.

It is difficult to come up with firm figures on how much of the more than $200 billion Americans spend every year on food goes to the non-traditional shopping outlets.

RON COTTERILL, A FOOD marketing specialist from Michigan State University, estimated that there are roughly 4,000 food co-ops throughout the United States, about one-eighth the number of conventional supermarkets. Cotterill said the co-ops probably account for less than 1 percent of total grocery sales.

Industry spokesmen say it is hard to keep track of the alternative systems because they are growing so rapidly. No-frills foods — standard grades in plain packages — were not introduced until 1977. Today, according to industry estimates, they are offered by 100 chains in 10,000 supermarkets, about one-third of the total.

"It looks like we're seeing the start of a whole new movement," said Midge Shubow of the federal Office of Consumer Affairs.

"There's an exciting trend in this country to say, 'Look. We've got to do a lot of this ourselves.'"

Food co-ops are the most basic form of do-it-yourself shopping. Consumers band together to buy food and other grocery products, in bulk, at wholesale.

They may operate as simple buying clubs or as full-fledged stores.

Members of buying clubs trade time and labor for cash savings. They take turns acting as purchasing agents and distributing the food. Buying clubs often handle fresh foods only and tend to feature seasonal items. Your menus may be limited by other members' tastes.

THE SUPERMARKET-STYLE CO-OPS are more complicated, often requiring full-time managers. Shoppers may or may not have to pay a membership fee — sometimes as little as $1 — to help with rent, utilities, wages, etc. Prices are marked up only enough to cover any additional operating costs. There is no profit. Costs are kept to a minimum, sometimes with the help of members who volunteer their labor in exchange for additional discounts.

Cotterill said co-ops "are growing daily." Today's co-op movement, he said, has its roots in the 1960s and early 1970s.

It was started primarily by young people ... as a move toward local control of their lives. ... They (the co-ops) sort of fell into good times in the sense that food price inflation really focused attention on food prices and on alternatives to going to a supermarket."

Savings may vary. They can range up to 60 percent, particularly in buying clubs, said Cotterill.

THE BUYING CLUBS ALSO offer non-economic benefits.

"You do trade time for money, but lots of times if you look at the relative time and stress of going through the supermarket system, you may be coming out with lower prices and a whole lot happier," Cotterill said.

Consumers in areas convenient to local farms can save money by eliminating still more of the marketing bill by picking their own produce or shopping at roadside stands.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that as of 1976, there were more than 3,000 pick-your-own operations and 9,000 roadside stands throughout the United States. A USDA survey indicated that 18 percent of all households shopped at a pick-your-own outlet in 1977, and 38 percent went to a roadside stand at least once during the year. Fresh fruits and vegetables and eggs were the most popular products.

NO-FRILLS PRODUCTS OFFER another alternative in more traditional surroundings. Consumers willing to skip fancy packages and trimmings and, in some cases, settle for lower grades of fruits and vegetables can save up to 35 percent.

The USDA says the savings are due to reduced product costs for processors who use Grade B and Grace C fruits and vegetables, rather than the fancier Grade A used primarily for national brands; to lower packaging costs; and, to a smaller

Notice of Freight Rail Plan Public Hearing

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans), Division of Mass Transportation is asking the public to comment on a draft of the 1978 California State Rail Plan. The plan responds to Federal legislation emphasizing rail freight service. The legislation provides money to subsidize, purchase, or rehabilitate railroad lines which railroad companies have proposed to drop. This plan recommends which of the lines should be eligible for such assistance.

We encourage shippers, communities or persons interested in our recommendations to testify either at one of the hearings noted below or by writing the Division of Mass Transportation, Caltrans, P.O. Box 1499, Sacramento, CA 95807 before May 14, 1979.
