STORY By ARTHUR R. VINSEL

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Mankind's ancient visionaries, ever the evolving thinkers, dreamers and engineers, left crude blueprints revealing a yearning to travel on wondrous machines powered by their feet.

These ancient drawings most often showed two wheels, literally earthbound Chariots of the Gods designed for a race of beings only recently walking erect.

From the 1790 affectation of scoot-powered two-wheelers by French dandies through the 1839 development of a pedal-and-rod powered contraption by a Scottish blacksmith—the quest continued.

Not to be outdone, the French streamlined the Scottish prototype with a vast improvement, the Boneshaker Velocipede, with a 64-inch-high front wheel.

And then they condescendingly invented the tricycle for ladies and short fellows and so it has gone up to the Space Age and today's ubiquitous Moped.

Today, the search still isn't over in a world beset by fuel and energy shortages, a need to commute great distances and a Getting-There-Is-Half-The-Fun Syndrome.

Odd-Even Plan Coming

Orange County motorists who spent Saturday waiting in long lines when they could find an open gas station might find their frustration eased early this week, according to county government officials.

And drivers who want to abandon the great gasoline search in favor of public transportation will soon find more buses on county roadways, said officials of the Orange County Transit District (OCTD).

It was Board of Supervisors Chairman Philip Anthony who made the necessary move late Friday to "as quickly as possible" ease the plight of gas seekers.

Anthony asked Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to declare a gasoline state of emergency in Orange County and, thus, bring the odd-even gasoline sales policy to the county.

Not a rationing scheme, the odd-even plan simply divides motorists into two groups, giving each alternate days on which they are eligible to buy gas.

And only those drivers with gas tanks less than half full can buy gas on their assigned days.

To minimize unrewarding stops at gasoline-short service stations, operators will be required to hoist color-coded flags to indicate the status of their storage tanks.

Under the odd-even plan, owners who drive vehicles bearing license plates that end in an even number such as two or four will be assigned even numbered calendar days for gasoline purchases.

And those whose autos bear licenses ending in odd numbers such as one or seven as well as letters can make their gas buys on odd numbered dates.

Supervisor Thomas Riley, who backed Anthony in his appeal to the governor, said he expects the plan to "end this chaotic and sometimes dangerous situation at gas stations.

"It worked fairly well in the energy crisis of 1974. I don't see why it shouldn't work now," Riley said.

Supervisor Harriett Weider said she will meet Monday with city officials in her district to discuss the plan's regulations, a task that will fall to local law enforcement agencies.

The Huntington Beach supervisor noted that violations will be a misdemeanor and violators will be subject to citations.

While Mrs. Weider meets with city officials Monday, Anthony will fly to Sacramento to confer with state energy directors to iron out details of the plan.

And in Garden Grove, OCTD director Ralph Clark will ask fellow board members to invoke a standby gas crunch emergency plan he asked to have prepared two months ago.

That plan, if approved by OCTD's full board, will press additional buses into service on heavily traveled routes and open six new routes by July 1.

Clark said telephone lines at OCTD headquarters "have been ringing off the hook" since county motorists began feeling the gas pinch.

Seal Saved By Bay Crew

The whole world seemed out of gas Saturday night, but there was enough left in the tank for a quick spin to the end of the Newport Harbor Jetty for a little guy in need of a ride.

Orange County Sheriff's Harbor Patrol Dispatcher Tim Oates credited the crew of the Schatzi I, from Linda Isle, for the mercy mission others might not have undertaken.

"This little seal was sitting out on the bell buoy with his jaws fused together by a fishing jig. He was just a baby," said Oates.

Noticing the infant seal's painful plight, the unidentified crew of the Schatzi I pulled up and took him to the Harbor Department dock.

The 50-pound baby just saw something that looked tasty in

World Loves 'Duke' Carter Tells Wayne

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Carter visited actor John Wayne at UCLA Medical Center Saturday, to tell him "he had the love, affection and prayers of not only everybody in our nation, but of millions of persons around the world."

Carter met with the veteran actor for about 15 minutes, stopping at the medical center on his way to the airport.

Wayne, 71, was in stable condition, recovering from intestinal surgery which turned up traces of cancer. Seven members of Wayne's family were in the private room with Carter.

In brief remarks to reporters outside the hospital, Carter said Wayne "was in good spirits . . . and made several jokes and thanked everybody for loving him so much."

Carter was greeted at the hospital by administrator Bernard Strohm and MCA-Universal Chief Lew Wasserman, a prime mover in Southern California Democratic Party circles.

Since being told he has more cancer, Wayne volunteered for an experimental medical program that may not save him, but could help others in the future.

Countdown to Confrontation

Diedrich, Capizzi Ready to Match Wits in San Diego

By GARY GRANVILLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It's been a long time coming.

But early next week, the two men who have played the most prominent roles in Orange County's era of political scandal will finally have their face-to-face showdown.

One player is county Supervisor Ralph Diedrich, a political powerhouse defused but not impotent since being indicted on bribery charges in late 1977.

The other contestant in what may be the final chapter in the closing of an era is Assistant District Attorney Michael Capizzi.

Still boyish appearing at 39, he has been in the forefront in a string of successful political corruption investigations and prosecutions during the past five years.

Setting for the Capizzi-Diedrich showdown will be the County Courthouse in downtown San Diego, a stone's throw from the swank Little America Westgate Hotel and just a block from Broadway's topless bars and tattoo parlors.

There, in a fifth-floor courtroom, Capizzi will be cast as a prosecutor seeking to right wrong.

And Diedrich's role will be that of an accused man attempting to prove his innocence portraying a reasonable, well-mannered and politely forthright elected official who is a pillar of the community back home in Orange County.

But that's not Diedrich's mood of the moment.

And he's already made a fateful decision that in his own mind could decide his trial's outcome.

The 53-year-old county supervisor "will take Capizzi on," attempt to match wits and skills with one of the county's most talented trial attorneys.

The tipoff to Diedrich's mood came Thursday as the ninth day of testimony in his and co-defendant LeRoy Rose's trial came to an end.

"The defense calls Mr. Ralph Diedrich," defense lawyer Jim Riddet said quietly.

Diedrich bounded out of his chair at the defendant's table and, with suit coat flying open, rushed to the witness stand.

Along the way, he waved off a court clerk who stood to swear him in. "I've already been sworn " he snapped.

Diedrich emphasized his free-wheeling approach to his role as a witness a few minutes later while giving a rambling non-answer to a friendly question asked by Riddet.

"Just answer the question, please," Judge Ross Tharp intoned.

"Well," Diedrich retorted with more than a trace of annoyance, "that's what I was trying to do and I will try again."

KEITH ROSENBERG, 6, SHOWS OFF DOUG MALEWICKI'S MINI MICRO MISSILE BIKE

55 MPH HARD TO PEDAL . . .

Now, it is a whole new ballgame rather, make that bicycle race and hundreds gathered Saturday and today at Ontario Motor Speedway for the fifth annual Human Powered Speed Championships to prove it.

"I've been out to the last couple of races and I've been thinking how I could build a better mousetrap," observes contestant Doug Malewicki, 40, of 14962 Merced Circle, Irvine. "This is the first year we've ever built a machine."

His 25-pound Micro Missile backed by friends was among 50 vehicles entered.

Spokesmen for the International Human Powered Vehicle Association (IHPVA) say their theory of transportation for mankind is probably the only workable one for the future.

The meet 50 miles from the Orange Coast has drawn entrants literally from Mt. Baldy to Fujiyama, with a wide variety of contraptions from Japanese, European and U.S. inventors

From the looks of some past and present contenders for the $3,000 Abbott Prize for cracking the longed-for 55mph barrier by unassisted human power and design, there is a long way yet to go

A sampling reveals opinions of what various two and three-wheel competitors resemble:

-A wheeled coffin.
-The Loch Ness Monster's head.
A double-bladed axe, sans handle.
A sleek horse trailer.
-A Nazi buzz bomb with a bump on top.
—A wheeled outhouse with a wrap-around windshield for its vigilant occupant.
—A beaked, prehistoric bird of prey.
—A regular bike with a rider under a clear, petrified raincoat.
A squid on wheels.
A hammock slung between front and rear of a tricycle covered by space age materials.

But to be truthful, these machines ranging from perhaps a $50 backyard shop production to sponsor-backed whizzes valued at $3,000 or more incorporate the latest design and engineering techniques.

"White Lightning," a sleek, three-man hand and foot-pedaled entry backed by Northrop University, broke the record twice Saturday shortly after the delayed 10 a.m. start.

Fog failed to deter the silent machine as it shot first to 55.6 mph, then sealed its victory with a 56.9 mph kiss, a phenomenal 1.9 mph over the mark sought.

One-rider entrants were still hoping to break the 50 mph mark as the single and dual or triple-manned vehicle competition continues today.

Top prize in addition to the $3,000 offered by Dr. Abbott, 34, an Idyllwild general practitioner with two Guinness Book of World Records bicycle speed marks to his record, is a bit more unique Winners also will receive an honorary speeding ticket from the California Highway Patrol!

"When I set the prize up, I really didn't expect it to fall so quickly," says Dr. Abbott, who retired from professional bicycle racing in 1977 and sat out 1978 at a more sedate pace.

He and his wife-nurse Kathryn, instead toured the Sea of Cortez at roughly 2 to 3 mph aboard their 29-foot sloop "Whim" berthed at Dana Point Harbor.

The young physician and onetime professional motorcycle road racer spent part of the Mexican Sea odyssey writing a magazine article about his phenomenal 1972 achievement of 140 mph-plus on a foot-pedaled bicycle.

But that was done at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah, crouched inches behind a high-speed racing car mounted with a pace shield that eliminated drag and created suction to help pull him along.

No such advantage of physics is allowed in IHPVA competition, which is run strictly by the book.

"The rules are quite simple," says a spokesman "Anything goes as long as the vehicle is powered solely by its riders. No wind-breaking motor pacing is allowed, nor is there any sort of stored energy such as motors, springs, compressed air or flywheels.

Lightweight materials and space age aerodynamics provide the greatest engineering advances, obviously, but it takes full physical development and training by Olympic caliber athletes too.

Powered by a man that strong and knowledgeable, the efficiency of the newer wheeled vehicles can be tripled by addition of a streamlined enclosure shell.

The covering has also proven a great safety aid in high-speed crashes, although other factors are involved.

Contestants are not bunched up as in conventional bicycle or auto racing and there are fewer route obstacles.

A colleague and pioneer in the field, Dr. Chester Kyle, of CSULB, agrees with Dr. Abbott that continued improvement of bicycle design is the whole concept

"About 1974 this whole thing (IHPVA) arose out of a a student classroom project, experimenting with bicycle design," says Dr. Kyle.

This weekend's slate consists primarily of road racing, enduro racing and speed racing, with the 30 kilometer road race featuring a running Le Mans start.

"We've got some Olympic caliber athletes. If they can go 35 miles per hour, the average person can easily go 20," says Dr. Kyle, noting also the physical and environmental benefits involved.

"What I think we'll see eventually is a small, lightweight vehicle, probably a combination of pedaling and electrical or small combustion engine," adds Dr. Abbott.

Promoters say in this day and age, 200 horsepower cars are obsolete.

"You can see it coming. Some day I may even pressure for two freeway lanes to be set aside for this," Dr. Kyle says.

Catalog Method Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has "little or no idea of what is going on" in its $2 billion-a-year program that lets agencies shop by catalog for a wide variety of items, including sauna baths and toys, congressional investigators said Saturday.

The General Accounting Office sharply criticized the General Services Administration's "multiple award schedule" as mismanaged. And the GAO, the auditing and investigative arm of Congress, called for legislation to force the government's scandal-ridden purchasing agency to tighten up its procedures.

The GAO report included several pages of pictures from GSA catalogs displaying motorcycles, a power boat, 16 varieties of plastic hats and 13 types of party favors.

Last month, acting GSA Administrator Paul Goulding ordered party decorations, sailboats, sauna baths and 2,200 other luxury items removed from the government purchase catalogs, effective June 1.

Other items, including expensive furniture, are also being considered for removal from the lists. However, an aide to Goulding said Friday that those steps were taken before the acting administrator read a draft copy of the GAO report.

GSA spokesman Peter Hickman said items such as sauna baths and sail boats often were bestowed by the Defense Department on members of the military taking leave time.

Rep. John L. Burton, who requested the study in his role as chairman of a House subcommittee that oversees the GSA, announced Saturday that he will offer a bill to require the agency to make more frequent use of competitive bidding

Burton, D-Calif., said his proposals would save the taxpayers at least $150 million a year

The GSA, which also manages federal buildings, is the target of numerous fraud investigations, which have so far led to 74 indictments. According to an internal GSA estimate, fraud and waste at the agency could cost as much as $100 million a year.

Fuming?

Pump Anger at 'Them'

By ARTHUR R. VINSEL
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The faceless people in power who pull the strings and punch the buttons that set the prices on service station pumps are the ones driving us crazy, not the question of gas or no gas.

This is the basic evaluation of UC Irvine professor of psychiatry Dr. E. Mansell Pattison of Laguna Beach, a good-natured student of human behavior who is watching the situation and us too.

HE IS APPALLED by incidents of violence in ever-lengthening lines of motorists waiting to get fuel, whether they even need it at all.

"Such incidents are understandable, but not justifiable," says Dr. Pattison. "It's crazy behavior, but— these are not crazy people."

He says that at the crux of the matter is the old Catch-22 syndrome, which means you're damned if you do and damned if you don't because you can't get a straight answer even if you ask both questions.

If that makes any sense.

He says the double-bind the man on the street faces is this:

—A SHORTAGE EXISTS, BUT you read in the papers that the fuel companies have plenty of fuel; they're just holding it back.

—There is a shortage, but while we sit sweltering in heat with no gas to go on a vacation to someplace cool, refineries are processing fuel oil to keep us warm next winter.

—Gas stations are closing because the owners can't raise their prices by government edict, even when gas consumers are begging to buy gas to get where they have to go, even at any price.

What it boils down to is: what or whom do you believe when they tell you an answer or answers that varies or may from day to day?

NATURAL DISASTERS ARE accepted, Dr. Pattison points out, but in such as the gasoline situation have no one to blame but people and those in charge of such things are not readily available to question, critize or blame.

So those "people who need people" to paraphrase the Barbara Strisand love ballad — turn to the next guy in line waiting for a chance to top off the tank at the corner gas station.

"People will respond in a positive way," Dr. Pattison says of those natural crises such as 'quakes and tornadoes of floods, when everyman is his brother's brother.

But when the situation is such that unseen persons undermine one's very livelihood, way of life, happiness and well-being with no recourse, people will turn on one another.

"PEOPLE DO AND SAY things that they would never dream of doing otherwise. And, in retrospect, they realize it was a terrible thing." Dr. Pattison says of the manipulated Violence was reported by several Orange Coast police agencies Saturday night, although most stations closed early.

Gasoline rationing is one halfhearted answer, Dr. Pattison admits.

"But, I think it's an irresponsible act on the part of Governor Brown and President Carter to wait to act until we have fistfights in the line and pregnant women being beaten," he observed.

Guzzlers' Business Profitable

Incidents in Saturday's long lines of gas-thirsty drivers waiting for a gush of unleaded or ethyl on the Orange Coast ended fairly peacefully in a gulp of a soft drink.

Raids on parked cars with unlocked gas caps were expected to occur early today.

One enterprising youngster, Andy Wolf, 12, who lives on Afton Circle in Huntington Beach, started making his own profit on the fuel situation Saturday.

He pedaled his bicycle up and down a clocked one-half-mile long line of cars, 70 of them, from Newland Street to Magnolia Avenue to World Gas, where 13 cars were already parked on the lot waiting to be filled.

"I've made $3 in about 10 minutes," said the boy, who peddled Dr. Pepper out of his bike basket.

A hamburger stand employee noticed the boy hustling drinks across the street as he salted french fries for patrons, some of whom came from the waiting line.

"We ought to run a hose across the street and pump Pepsi," he observed.

Bike Victim Critical

One young man was being kept alive by machines late Saturday night and two other persons were undergoing treatment for injuries after a car-motorcycle collision in Santa Ana.

The most seriously injured victim, a Santa Ana man listed in his early 20s, remained unidentified pending notification of his next of kin.

He was being kept alive at Fountain Valley Community Hospital despite massive head and neck injuries following the crash at Harbor Boulevard just north of Fifth Street, police said.

Investigators said a car driven by Marjorie Chavarro, 20, of Santa Ana, made a left turn and collided with the bike operated by Hector Mercado, 22, also of Santa Ana. She was taken to UCI Medical Center. Mercado suffered moderate injuries.

She was not cited pending further investigation.

Dispatcher Oates telephoned the Friends of the Sea Lions organization and rescuer John Cunningham of Laguna Beach arrived to pick up the injured seal.

Once the painful clamp was clipped, she said, the waif opened up and smiled.

Hand Flags Down Help

Suspects Nabbed by Long Arm of Victim ▸

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A human hand waggling for help from the trunk of a car led a Birmingham News reporter and photographer on a 30-minute chase Saturday.

The newsmen stopped the car long enough for police to close in and arrest a woman and two men who were later booked on kidnapping and robbery charges.

Gary Collier, 35, the man waving from the trunk, told police he spent more than 12 hours locked inside after being kidnapped and robbed of $350.

Reporter Mark C. Winne and photographer Jerry Ayres spotted the car — and the hand — on Interstate 59 in Birmingham. They pursued the vehicle and called the newspaper's city desk by radio. The city desk then relayed their reports to police.

Collier, a Birmingham resident, was groggy when he stepped from the trunk after the news car and a patrol car halted the fleeing vehicle.

He told Sgt. Howard Felts he was kidnapped outside a bar the day before and robbed, saying he managed to stick his fingers out of the trunk after tearing away rubber insulation.

Arrested were Joseph Marlin Fendley, 27, of Morris, Ala.; his uncle, Wilbur Martin Fendley, 49, of Bessemer, Ala.; and Robin Green, 24, of Birmingham.

The reporter and photographer were sent out after Garland Reeves, a Birmingham News editor, "heard something on the police radio about a brown car with a hand sticking out of the trunk.

"Ayres remembered seeing a gimmick in a joke store — a rubber hand to attach to a car trunk as if to create the illusion of a panicked hand waving from inside the car," Winne said. "We laughed, thinking we'd solved the mystery that had the sheriff's department and the police — and us — baffled."

Minutes later, they saw a car that fit the description of the police report.

"I craned and caught a glimpse of that hand," Winne said. "We were in the outside lane on our side of the highway and they were in the middle lane of their side. Five lanes between us, each of us traveling about 60 miles an hour, and we saw those few knuckles worth of human hand.

"The hand looked for a minute as though it was the rubber toy, after all, flapping in the wind," Winne said. "Closer inspection showed it was human flesh, strumming up and down.

"We still suspected it might be just a practical joker but we followed."

Ayres, driving, put his camera outside the window to take pictures while Winne steered the car from the passenger side.

The car got off the interstate and led the news car through streets and alleys. Finally, the newsmen cut the fleeing car off, blocking it into an alley. Before the vehicle could turn and escape in the other direction, police arrived.

And Collier, stiff and woozy, climbed from the trunk.

Five Believed Killed In Crash of Plane

OCOTILLO WELLS (AP) — Five persons were believed killed when their private plane crashed Saturday in the wilderness of the Anza Borrego desert 25 miles southwest of here, a San Diego County Sheriff's spokesman said.

The San Diego County coroner was hiking in to the steep ridged area and was expected to reach the crash site late Saturday to identify the victims, two of whom were said to be San Diego residents.

Doug Clements, a San Diego County sheriff's lieutenant, said two persons were confirmed dead "but it is believed no one survived the crash.

"It is a backpack situation," Clements said. "We expect to be out there all night long."

Clements said the plane, believed to be a twin-engine Beechcraft Bonanza, crashed about 200 yards east of the Sunrise Highway shortly after take-off from a dirt airstrip at a private campground.

Crash Kills OC Motorist

Arizona authorities said Phillip R. McLaughlin of San Clemente was killed early Saturday when his car slammed into the rear of a trailer parked in the emergency lane of the Superstition Freeway.

Officers reported that McLaughlin, 55, had entered the freeway but failed to move into the regular traffic lanes when he slammed into the trailer.

The vehicle pulling the trailer had been pulled over moments before by police, authorities said.

TRIAL . . .

"Once he's on the witness stand, we have no control over Ralph. Whether we like it or not, he's going to do what he feels he has to do. That's Ralph."

What Diedrich "feels he has to do" next week is to verbally stand toe-to-toe with Capizzi and slug it out.

Others have taken that route and, without exception, walked away second best.

Capizzi, a University of Michigan graduate, is the son of a distinguished lawyer who can't recall ever wanting to follow any career but the law.

He extends his interest in public service outside the office as a Fountain Valley planning commissioner and by teaching police law one night a week at California State University, Fullerton.

The long trail of intricate political corruption cases he's taken before the Grand Jury and eventually successfully prosecuted in recent years has given him an expertise in such cases under District Attorney Cecil Hicks.

It was Capizzi who prosecuted former Westminster mayor Derek McWhinney, ex-county assessor Jack Vallerga and former Rep. Andrew Hinshaw.

It was also Capizzi who oversaw the non-trial capitulation of one-time county political kingmaker Dr. Louis Cella.

Along the way, he's been scorned by the politically powerful—publicly labeled as "ambitious" and "Cecil's hatchet man."

And in the courtroom, Capizzi has responded to the taunts by defeating a series of renowned defense lawyers whose annual earnings easily more than double his own almost $50,000-a-year salary.

APPEARING FACE TO FACE IN SAN DIEGO MONDAY

He's bested Joe Ball, a colorful suspender-wearing defender who kept a limousine and chauffeur waiting outside the courthouse each day as he battled Capizzi, Marshall Morgan and Richard Murphy.

In style, Capizzi rarely raises his voice in a courtroom and is never anything but polite.

It is part of his technique to lull a witness into a false sense of security by seeming to move away from a hot issue. Then, he quickly returns to the issue with a series of rapid fire questions.

And Capizzi is a master of timing.

For example, he recently left the Diedrich defense team fit to be tied when the jurors were sent home for the weekend with a Capizzi-extracted allegation of "bag man" ringing in their ears.

Though somewhat grudgingly, even Diedrich has high professional praise for the Capizzi who is now bent on seeing he is removed from office and sent to state prison.

"I never said he wasn't a good lawyer. He is good, very good. Excellent. But in this case he's wrong, dead wrong. He's added two and two and come up with five," Diedrich said recently.

He concedes that the trial outcome "depends on my own credibility, whether or not the jury will believe what I say."

And that is why he has decided to portray no one other than Ralph Diedrich when he reaches perhaps the most crucial moments in his life Monday and probably on into Tuesday.

"I have to be me. I can't be (Supervisor) Tom Riley or anyone else.

"The jury may not like me. They may think I'm arrogant or abrasive. But that doesn't mean I've committed a crime. I am who I am and there's nothing I can do to change it.

Chaplin Was 'Champ' at Bringing Out Best

By TOM BARLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They say history was made at the intersection of La Brea and Sunset boulevards in Hollywood. It's hard to believe when you look at the seedy, run-down buildings that occupy the site today.

But look a little more closely in the area that was once occupied by a gatehouse and you'll see the name "Charlie Chaplin" and a set of footprints in the worn pavement.

It's a genuine memento and not one of those cruel jokes perpetrated by one of the many sickies who hang around the premises now operated as a television and recording facility by Tijuana Brass founder Herb Alpert.

The little man with the bent cane, the big feet and the wan smile did indeed use a nail to scratch his name into what was then wet cement more than 60 years ago.

And then he pressed those famous feet into the setting cement in an act of perpetuation that may have set the fashion for those who, in later years, placed their handprints and footprints under a gold star on Hollywood Boulevard.

Chaplin and his band of movie-mad idealists had no idea at the time they founded his Chaplin Studios that the man who devised and personally directed such classics as "The Gold Rush", "The Kid" and "The Great Dictator" would become a legend in his own time.

The efforts that spawned such classics were recalled this week in Corona del Mar by the widow of a British-born jack-of-all-trades. Chaplin's right-hand man for 27 years John "Jack Wilson, the man who left Chaplin after a violent argument in 1943 and never returned despite a personal plea from his former boss and bosom friend.

Edith Wilson recalls that her husband, who died Monday at the age of 86, often declared from the moment he became Chaplin's production manager that he was working for a genius.

Mrs. Wilson, formerly Edith Vaul, sacrificed her own blossoming career as a Mack Sennett bathing beauty to marry Wilson in Hollywood in 1918, at a time when the fledgling Chaplin Studios were moving into top gear.

Many of the girls she worked with went on to stardom. And movie mogul Sennett's opinion of the shapely Edith Vaul might be measured by the fact that she was the only one of his bathing beauties under contract to him.

But Edith Vaul became Edith Wilson and was given ample opportunity to see, from her husband's side the outcome of those first frenzied operations at the Chaplin Studios.

With Edith Wilson, Her Daughter, Edie

Agreeing that Chaplin was a genius, she also remembers him as a hard driving taskmaster who expected every member of his operation to exercise his own unflagging zeal in the search for what she believes he always attained — perfection.

She recalls that her husband was away from home for three days on one occasion when Chaplin insisted, during the making of a movie, that the production crews stay on the job until they had the film the way he wanted it.

Chaplin had cots brought into the studio. And his workers ate and slept there until at last he pronounced himself satisfied.

She remembers friendship and friction in the relationship between Jack Wilson and Charlie Chaplin.

And she feels that their 27-year association might have been a lot less than that if it hadn't been for a common bond between them — their British nationality.

"Jack was born in West Hartlepool in northern England and Charlie, of course, was a Londoner," she said. "It was something that held them together at times when they might easily have come to a parting of the ways."

Reactor plagued by leaks

Periodic pinhole leaks and cracking due to chemical reaction in coolant system pipes at San Onofre nuclear power generating station is indeed worst among five so afflicted in U.S., Southern California Edison Company officials confirmed last week. However, they said after government disclosure, the problem has been known, studied and under control for years. Next step is methodology development, to induce chemical balance during cooling process and thus eliminate the problem.

How soon can new buyer build?

Lunar loony Barry McArdle, 29, of Redlands, visited Orange Coast College dressed in extraterrestrial garb to peddle deeds to lots on the moon. The price of green cheese is holding steady up there at $1 a chunk. He says he visits his six sisters who live around the U.S. annually while making a living selling off moon lots. He only works at it four to six months per year — making people laugh is his declared occupation — but these days that alone would seem a full-time job

Irvine

Whoa, building ban sought here

Curious and perhaps rather concerned Irvine Company officials are anxious to confer with Mayor Bill Vardoulis, following his surprise call for a temporary moratorium on home development. His Honor said road and street development is far behind original schedule for serving the burgeoning community and he foresees a housing ban as the only way to buy time and catch up.

Huntington Beach

Heads bowed for harmony

A coalition of 400 concerned Christians from 10 area churches accompanied by banjo-players sang hymns and prayed on May Day march to Civic Center plaza steps. Pastor Gary Robinson, of quaint old wooden Church-by-the-Sea downtown, said it was in part a gesture against saber-rattling Communist military celebrations and persecution of Christians across the sea. Prayers were also sent aloft for guidance of strife-ridden City Council for "quibbling, fighting and obscene gestures." Latter have gone aloft more than once in recent confrontations at City Hall

Britain Begins Shift Right

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher named on Saturday a Cabinet dominated by longtime aides and leaning distinctly to the right, but Britain's first woman prime minister appointed none of her own sex to the 22-member government.

ALSO NOTABLY absent from the Cabinet list was former Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath, who some thought might be tapped for the key post of foreign and commonwealth secretary. Heath was defeated by Mrs. Thatcher for the party leadership in 1975.

The job of top diplomat went instead to Lord Carrington, 59, Conservative leader in the House of Lords and defense and energy minister in Heath's government, which was defeated by the Labor Party in 1974.

While Mrs. Thatcher appointed no female Cabinet-level ministers, she did aoppint Sally Oppenheim, a key aide, as a junior minister outside the Cabinet. She will be responsible for consumer affairs, the party post she held when the Tories were the opposition in the House of Commons.

ONE WOMAN, Education and Science Secretary Shirley Williams, served in the Labor Cabinet of Prime Minister James Callaghan routed by the Thatcher-led Conservatives in Thursday's national election.

Deputy party leader William Whitelaw, 61, was appointed home secretary, the second-ranking Cabinet post after the foreign secretary, and will stand in for Mrs. Thatcher when she is away.

SIR GEOFFREY Howe, party spokesman on financial affairs while in opposition, became the chancellor of the exchequer. Howe's appointment was expected and he had already begun preparing the national budget, which must be introduced as soon as possible after Parliament reassembles May 15.

Ex-liberal Faces Trial In London

LONDON (AP) — Jeremy Thorpe, former member of Parliament and once a privy councillor to the queen, enters the prisoner's dock Tuesday at London's Old Bailey court, charged with plotting to murder a man who claimed to have had a homosexual relationship with him.

The case, which has caused a great public stir in Britain, comes to trial three years after Thorpe resigned as leader of the Liberal Party because of mounting allegations against him.

IN LAST Thursday's general election, he was soundly defeated in his bid for re-election to Parliament. Thorpe had held the seat for 20 years.

Alongside him in the dock will be David Holmes, 48, a close friend and former deputy treasurer of the Liberal Party; businessmen George Deakin, 35, and John Le Mesurier, 46.

All are charged with conspiring to murder Norman Valentine Scott, 38, a former male model who now earns his living by grooming horses.

Thorpe faces an additional charge of unlawfully inciting Holmes to murder Scott. Each charge carries a maximum 10-year prison sentence.

THE FOUR men have been free on $10,000 bail since their arrest last August. Magistrates in the country town of Minehead, Somerset, ruled last Dec. 13 after a month-long preliminary hearing packed with lurid testimony that each had a case to answer.

Thorpe, a former practicing lawyer who led the middle-of-the-road Liberal Party from 1967 to 1976, has consistently denied all the allegations against him. The other defendants also claim innocence.

Election Tax Cut Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because inflation is causing a surge in government tax receipts, President Carter may be able to both balance the budget and offer Americans a tax cut of $15 billion to $20 billion next year, several prominent economists say.

That is the consensus of the economists, an administration budget expert and the ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee.

The budget expert, who declined to be identified by name, said inflation is pushing tax receipts to the point that the fiscal 1981 budget could be balanced with a $10 billion to $20 billion surplus that could be used for a tax cut.

Still a Mystery

HYSHAM, Mont. (AP) — Authorities say nationwide publicity about the body of an unidentified teen-age girl has produced a flood of telephone calls and a few leads, but no break in the case.

Distraught parents from all over the country called the sheriff's office Friday to see if the "perfect girl" whose body was found near this eastern Montana town last week is their daughter. The calls were triggered by an Associated Press story about the girl.

Accident Tagged

HARRISBURG (AP) — A manintenance tag may have covered two crucial indicator lights on a control panel and compounded the Three Mile Island nuclear accident, a state legislator said Saturday.

State Rep. James Wright, chairman of a legislative committee investigating the March 28 accident, said utility officials told him the tag may have prevented operators from knowing that a backup cooling water system was out of service.

BRIEFS

Marches Slated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The foes of nuclear power take their case to the streets today in an attempt to prove with speeches, songs and sheer numbers that their movement has become a national force.

Protest organizers said Saturday that 25,000 to 30,000 people are expected to join the march from near the White House to the Capitol. At least 400 buses have been chartered for trips to Washington and hundreds of other persons are expected to arrive by private vehicles.

Bomb Still Ticks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A global policy to stabilize the world's population is essential to avoid the collapse of many of the Earth's biological systems, a new study concludes.

The current world population, estimated to be 4.2 billion, is growing at the rate of 70 million people a year, threatening parts of the world with worsening inflation, starvation and a lower standard of living, Lester Brown, president of the Worldwatch Institute, a Washington study group, said in a report released Saturday.

Hostage Freed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man armed with a knife seized a woman at a downtown department store Saturday, dragged her into a restroom and held her hostage for more than two hours, police said.

She was freed unharmed when her assailant was overcome by a police negotiator and the police chaplain, police said.

China Pact Seen

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps arrived in China Saturday and said she hopes to sign, or at least initial, a trade agreement giving China preferential treatment.

Peace Call Out

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesia's prime minister-designate, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, appealed Saturday to black guerrillas to lay down their arms and return home under an unconditional amnesty.

Pops Conductor Fiedler Faints

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, famed conductor of the Boston Pops orchestra, was rushed to the Tufts-New England Medical Center after becoming ill at Symphony Hall late Saturday night.

Tufts-New England spokesman Arthur Mattos said Fiedler was examined in the emergency room and appeared to be in good condition.

Mattos added that the illness appeared to be nothing more than a fainting spell, and was definitely not a heart attack or any complication related to the brain surgery.

Snow Still Sneaking In

Showers Dampen Weekend Plans Across U.S.

U.S. Summary

By The Associated Press

Showers and thundershowers were reported in much of the nation Saturday, and snow fell in parts of northeastern Wisconsin

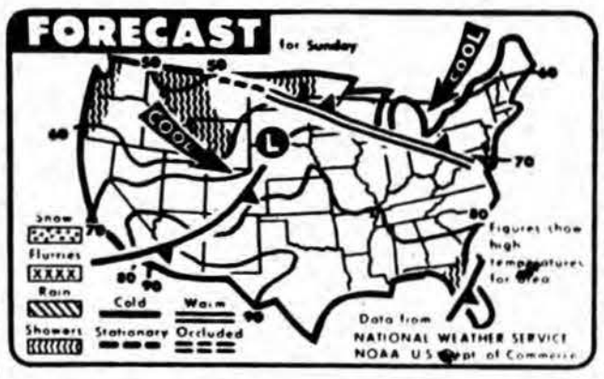

Rain fell along the southern Atlantic Coast through northwestern Florida, in northern New England, parts of the Pacific Northwest, in Minnesota, western Montana, south Texas and in South Dakota.

A high wind warning was in effect for part of western Nevada.

Temperatures were chilly over the upper Midwest, staying in the mid-30s from northern Michigan into northeastern North Dakota. Skies were generally sunny from the southern parts of the Ohio Valley and the Plains to the Southern California coast

The forecast called for rain from Lake Superior across the upper Missouri Valley, the northern Rockies and the Pacific Coast from Washington into Northern California

Scattered showers were predicted for Utah and western Colorado, and central Florida into eastern Virginia.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIANS contended with the the gas crisis in a variety of ways on Saturday. Above, Fountain Valley teen-agers Kathryn Hale, left, and Janet Giglio capitalized on overheated drivers waiting for gas by selling refreshments. Right, Los Angelinos line up with anything and everything they could find to hold gas. Below, a Riverside pilot figures his earthbound steed is more important than his twin-engined Pegasus.

Host 'Not Typical'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Still beaming about having President Carter as a house guest, Stephen and Gloria Rodriguez said Saturday they would love to have the chief executive come again.

"It was excellent," 30-year-old Rodriguez said of Carter's overnight stay in their newly remodeled, fashionable home in predominantly Mexican-American northeast Los Angeles.

"I WAS A little nervous right after he came," said Gloria, who is also 30 and is expecting the couple's third child later this month. "But he is a very simple man, and he made us feel at home. It was an experience I will never forget"

Neither will hundreds of local residents who lined the street late Friday night and early Saturday morning hoping to catch a glimpse of the president.

"This is a wonderful day for the neighborhood," said a fourth-generation Japanese-American Aiko Hanami, who lives across the street.

" THESE KIDS will remember this day until they are quite old," one onlooker said of a group of youngsters who were waiting on the street before dawn Saturday for the president to come out of the house.

Many of them saw Carter and his physician join Rodriguez and his 6-year-old son in jogging three miles before breakfast.

"He is in excellent shape," said Rodriguez. "I had to work to keep up with him."

But Carter said the winner of the race was little Stephen Jr.

After the run, Mrs. Rodriguez fixed a breakfast of chorizo sausages, eggs, beans and tortillas.

"The president liked it," Rodriguez said. "He had seconds."

Rodriguez has a master's degree in urban architectural engineering and is a project coordinator for the city's Community Development Department. He drives a Porsche and admits he isn't a typical Mexican-American.

"I don't consider myself typical," he says. "But I do feel I am representative of a community that does not get much exposure."

HE AND HIS wife said they believe in working to improve their own neighborhood rather than moving as they become more successful.

Stretch of Malibu Highway to Reopen

MALIBU (AP) — Caltrans officials said they planned to open three lanes of the closed Pacific Coast Highway here by noon today unless further slide activity occurs.

The open lanes will detour around the foot of the slide, where an earthern wall has been constructed to shield vehicles and pedestrians from rockfalls, officials said.

CALTRANS plans to open two southbound lanes for morning rush hour and two northbound lanes for evening rush hour. An additional lane will be open for travel the opposite direction.

In off-peak hours, one lane will be open in each direction.

The last major block to reopening the coastal route was removed Saturday when a compromise was reached with property owners who brought a lawsuit against Caltrans over erection of a concrete barrier in the slide zone.

The plaintiffs said the barrier would block access to their homes, but Caltrans argued the portable wall was needed to protect foot traffic from vehicles moving at highway speeds.

Caltrans officials said under the compromise, residents adjacent to the detour area will not be allowed to drive their cars onto their property during peak traffic hours on weekends and weekdays.

CREWS completed stripping on the highway Saturday, but last minute work remained to be done, including installation of three-foot-high plastic lane markers and a 200-foot-long chain link fence to catch stray rocks. A traffic signal at the south end of the slide zone was completed.

Ferry and bus service were still running Saturday, and officials said they will continue indefinitely.

Guilt Noted In Gallons

BURLINGAME (AP) — A gasoline thief, assailed by conscience — and possibly feeling the cops might be looking for him returned to the scene of his crime Saturday to attend to a small matter of honor.

The mini-drama, symptom of the Northern California gasoline crunch, began Friday when David Meister looked out his window and saw a man siphoning gas from his wife's car. Meister reported to police he saw the man get into a car with San Diego license plates, whose number he took down.

Saturday morning, Mrs. Meister found an unsigned note and bills pinned to her car. "This $2 is for 1½ gallons I took yesterday."

SHOWDOWN IN SAN DIEGO . . .

jury) to know why I am being prosecuted, that a district attorney wants a piece of my hide and has moved heaven and earth to get it."

It won't be either Capizzi or Diedrich who will determine the outcome of their confrontation.

The eight-woman, four-man jury that at least was partially screened by a pert blonde psychologist hired by Diedrich is one of a kind. A professional magician regales fellow jurors with matchbook and card tricks during recesses.

And so beguiled have the jurors become with the company they keep that Thursday at noon with picnic baskets and soft drink coolers under arm they cheerfully headed up E Street to their own outdoor picnic.

Even when the judge and lawyers agreed that it would be unlikely that the fifth and sixth alternate jurors' services would be needed and offered to let them go home last week, the two jurors refused.

"I find this all very interesting and would like to stay if it's all right," one said.

Judge Tharp, a former San Diego city councilman, came into the trial with a reputation for being a tough-minded judge who runs a tight ship. Indeed, two weeks ago he sat through a day of the Diedrich-Rose trial with an undiagnosed broken leg.

But the attorneys say that, so far, Judge Tharp has been "reasonable and fair to both sides" and "has done an outstanding job on a difficult case."

His most difficult task ahead might be when deciding if Diedrich is answering the question put to him by Capizzi or, in reminding Diedrich that the prosecutor, not the witness does the questioning.

Diedrich, however, sees himself as defending more than his actions related to the bribery allegations that grew out of a series of Capizzi-led investigations that began in late 1976.

Late last week he recapped his life for the jury.

He talked of a boyhood in industrialized Huntington Park, of battle in France during World War II and an advanced education limited to qualifying him for a contractor's license that he parlayed into wealth.

When he attained the material things he wanted, his attention turned to public service, Diedrich told the jury.

That led him to the chairmanship of the Orange County Fair Board, a year on the county Grand Jury and to a term on the Fullerton City Council.

And from there he moved on to the county Board of Supervisors in 1972 and, though it wasn't said by Diedrich, to dizzying heights of political power in Orange County during 1975 and early 1976.

In Diedrich's mind he clearly pulled himself up by his own bootstraps to climb life's mountain.

However, Capizzi has another view of Diedrich's lifestyle, at least that portion of it spent as a county supervisor.

He states without reservation that Diedrich criminally enriched himself by at least $85,000 plus an illegally obtained $80,000 bank loan during his first two years in office.

But Diedrich is just as certain in his own mind that he has done no wrong and is being prosecuted for crimes that never occurred.

With those differing views go differences in style that are likely to show in their confrontation.

Diedrich is sometimes loud, frequently blunt and enjoys being center stage.

Capizzi is always soft-spoken, frequently subtle and if he doesn't shun publicity, never does he seek it.

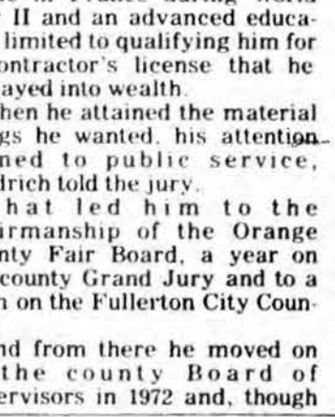

And while Ralph Diedrich rushes to the witness stand to testify in his own defense, Capizzi is no less anxious for the face-to-face confrontation to begin.

Both men know it's been a long time coming.

Odd-Even Policy Cuts Down Chaos

Clearly it's a good weekend to stay home and work in the garden or do a little local shopping. The panic started early and by Thursday the gasoline lines had developed into full-scale traffic jams.

And pump prices were escalating as fast as the lines.

As usual, the explanations were many and varied but not all that satisfactory.

Station operators had used up their April allocations and the May supplies were late in arriving. Too many drivers were topping off tanks — just in case — and creating a sort of mobile gasoline storage situation.

For those who genuinely needed the precious stuff to get to work, the panic as the gas gauge approached the empty mark was all too real.

The one positive action emerged from, of all places, the governor's office, where plans to return to 1974's more or less successful odd-even sales policy were dusted off.

This seems to be the only immediate and practical approach to cutting down the chaos. It should be adopted as rapidly as possible by all local agencies.

There's a discomfiting difference between the current gas panic and the go-around of the early '70s. Then the Arab embargo was a fact of life which we grumpily had to accept.

Today there's a widespread suspicion that the gasoline shortage is something maneuvered — or at least escalated — by the government and/or the oil companies.

A startling 57 percent of drivers interviewed in a survey last week said they feel the shortage is a flat-out "hoax." Only 33 percent believed the shortage is genuine. The rest had doubts.

Given the fact that President Carter and his energy advisers have repeatedly espoused the idea of cutting down gasoline use by raising prices, there's reason for suspicion that we're being had. Not that high prices seem to be curbing our appetite for gas.

And news that the government is charging seven major oil companies with cheating the public to the tune of $1.7 billion by juggling "new oil" and "old oil" prices over a five-year period is not reassuring.

The whole process of international oil distribution is so hopelessly involved it doesn't lend itself to simple explanations.

But at this point some sort of believable information and direction from high government sources is in order. Taxpayers feel they're being manipulated. And they've reason to expect something better than a continuation of this chaotic muddle, accompanied by bureaucratic doubletalk.

Meanwhile, the word in Southern California is: If you're going some place with gas in your tank, stay out of the right traffic lane, or you'll wind up in one of those mile-long gas station line-ups and never reach your destination.

Medicine Man of Merit

A man who was described as an "unappreciated giant" of the University of California was honored last night at the UC Irvine Alumni Association's Lauds and Laurels banquet.

Highest award of the evening, the "Extraordinarius," went to Dr. Gerald Sinykin, founder and director of UCI's innovative student health services, recently rated as the finest of 25 similar programs in the country.

The Harbor Area physician and former chief of staff at Hoag Memorial Hospital organized the student health services in 1964. In addition to designing and running the student health center, with X-ray, laboratory, pharmacy and dental facilities and an eight-bed infirmary, Dr. Sinykin initiated a quantity of health education programs and strongly supported student involvement in operation of the health services.

Now, having terminated his longtime private practice, Sinykin will become director of medical services for the Fluor Corporation, where he will oversee the firm's medical facilities around the globe.

To many students and private patients who have crossed Dr. Sinykin's path in the past couple of decades, he is indeed a giant, a modest one, but certainly not unappreciated. The alumni could not have chosen a finer "Extraordinarius."

Plain(s) English Best

Recently we took exception to the practice of appending the inappropriate term "obscene" to profits and other things we don't understand or approve of.

We're happy to note that President Carter is leading the way out of the jargon jungle and back to basics.

Commenting on Sen. Edward Kennedy's criticism of administration oil policies, Carter said bluntly, "That's just a lot of baloney!"

Now that's a good basic Americanism that gets right to the point.

Boyd/ Raise Eyebrows

By L. M. BOYD

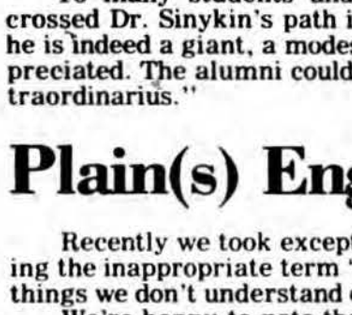

When you meet somebody you like, your eyebrows bob upwards, instantaneously and unconsciously. When you meet somebody who likes you, that person's eyebrows bob upwards, instantaneously and unconsciousiy. Each seeing this happen to the eyebrows of the other gets the message, likewise instantaneously and unconsciously. Researchers say they've proved this beyond question through analyses of photographs. No doubt you've met somebody you knew automatically you didn't like, and you knew automatically didn't like you, and neither of you knew why. Maybe your eyebrows didn't bob.

Pollsters now say 39 percent of the U.S. population reads nothing but newspapers. My kind of people.

Q. "How many letters does the average mail carrier deliver daily?"

A. About 700.

Economic Bite: How Severe?

In the old days business cycles were just left to nature. Then came Keynes. Now we still don't know how to control business cycles very well but we do know how to interfere so as to produce a good-sized boom or recession.

We have nibbled at the apple of knowledge and, as with Adam and Eve, it has caused a hell of a lot of complications. Take the present situation.

BY CHEAPENING credit the Federal Reserve System can probably continue the current business expansion for awhile. By contracting credit it can probably bring recession at once.

And it plays its role against a dramatic background that can be reduced to this formula: Mild recession now . . . recovery in 1980 . . . reelect President Carter. No recession now . . . slump in 1980 . . . defeat President Carter.

It is true that the White House still insists that no recession is likely but very few economists agree. They ask how soon and how severe? And the relation between Carter and the present Federal Reserve Board flies in the face of what has been accepted as the established order of things.

As Arthur Burns, pipe-smoking chairman of the Fed, put it pithily to a congressional committee way back in July 1971: "The rules of economics are not working in quite the way they used to!" Exactly so. And never did.

Today a new anomaly has been added; it was always supposed that any Democratic administration would by nature fight to continue cheap money and that any Federal Reserve Board would fight to slam on the brakes.

People say of economics they can't understand the stuff. More and more, things in Washington you can't understand.

THE SUPREME example is SALT. It is stupefyingly technical. A poor second in this field, I guess, is inflation. Yet inflation remains the most important domestic issue in the nation.

The business cycle can elect a president (Coolidge), disgrace another (Hoover). It can put men to work or send them out with beggars' cups. It can decide whether wives keep their supplementary jobs to fight inflation and whether their husbands can pay installments on the new car.

Are people in debt? Right up to the ears! Americans are currently spending about one-quarter of their disposable income on repayment of mortgage and installment debt.

A RECESSION could be quite serious for a nation living beyond its means. A mild downturn now might be better for Carter in the long run (though he wouldn't admit it) than a steeper one later on.

A lot depends on timing. There was that example in March 1960, when Arthur Burns, then a professor at Columbia, quietly came down to Washington to warn Vice President Nixon that a recession was brewing and would reach a peak just before the election.

Couldn't he get Ike to work on Fed Chairman William McChesney Martin to stimulate the economy? No, he couldn't.

Burns was right, the bottom of the recession came in October: "All the speeches, television broadcasts and precinct-work in the world could not counteract that one hard fact," wrote Nixon in "Six Crises."

Some Presidents have manipulated the economy: others haven't. The most dramatic success was Kennedy, who took the advice of Walter Heller and, in spite of a budget deficit, asked for a $13 billion tax cut in 1963, finally enacted in 1964. There were howls of disapproval, but it worked. It permitted recovery to full employment.

What caused our present inflation? Lyndon Johnson and Vietnam and a Democratic Congress started it. LBJ thought we could fight Vietnam and have the Great Society at the same time: guns and butter, too. Vietnam would be easily won; there would be "no unbearable burden on our resources."

The Reserve Board sent up distress signals. But the situation needed fiscal brakes (higher taxes). Johnson was afraid of higher taxes. He concealed the cost of Vietnam, rigged the budget estimates.

AT A TIME of full employment and strained factories he demanded more spending, the equivalent of pushing down the accelerator on Breakneck Hill.

In an open rift with Johnson, the Fed under William McChesney Martin raised the discount rate in 1965. The result was dramatic: a credit crunch, the end of the boom, inflation slowed, and a reluctant nation suddenly felt war costs.

Johnson finally asked Congress for a quickie income tax surcharge. Congress enacted the tax in the summer of 1968. That helped to give us Nixon.

I HAVE GOTTEN a long way away from Jimmy Carter. His voluntary guidelines aren't working; he has turned down mandatory controls, the budget isn't balanced and the increase in consumer prices is at a current annual rate of 13 percent. Not a cheerful prospect.

President Carter has about 18 months before the election. He might well use the time to accept a mild recession and perhaps turn it around into a strong recovery. His friend Bill Miller, chairman of the Fed, might help more by tightening money than by postponing the showdown.

Drinking Man's Theories Short on Proof

Americans are always offering each other self-help. Usually I reject such notions, but occasionally one turns into a column.

Punch

"Worked out rather well on the whole . . . chap next door wanted a Steinway and I wanted a bar."

First of all, I'd like to say thanks a lot for everything to Dr. Morris Chafetz, M.D. Dr. Chafetz is the author of a book called "Why Drinking Can Be Good for You" (Stein & Day, publishers, $8.95), and I hold the doctor directly responsible for the events of the past several hundred hours.

I have always shied away from books of this kind: i.e., self-improvement books written by doctors, psychiatrists and other various experts. I almost read "How To Be Your Own Best Friend" once, until the guy at the next desk pointed out that I didn't have any friends anyway, so I could save myself the price of the book because I was automatically my own best friend no matter what.

BUT WHEN I saw Dr. Chafetz' "Why Drinking Can Be Good for You," I knew I couldn't resist. I had rejected all of the other books on Transcendental Meditation, est, Silva Mind Control, etc., figuring correctly that they had all been written by tootie fruities for tootie fruities. But Dr. Chafetz' book . . . well, let me give you a few excerpts:

"Winston Churchill once said, 'I have taken more good from alcohol than alcohol has taken from me' . . . I (Dr. Chafetz) must contend, with Sir Winston, that alcohol has done more good than harm . . . It helps us answer our very human need to be in communication with others, the need to sometimes break out a bit, let go, and soar . . . Getting the most from alcohol — the pleasure without the pain — is easy . . . You, like Winston Churchill, can take more good than harm from alcohol."

Now here was a self-improvement book I could live with. I tucked Dr. Chafetz' book under my arm, headed out the door, took a seat at the closest bar and began my therapy. Every time the bartender would gently hint that it might be time to cut me off, I would flash the cover of "Why Drinking Can Be Good for You" at him, wink seriously, and order another.

IT DIDN'T take long before I was able to put some of Dr. Chafetz' advice into good use. Drinking "helps us answer our very human need to be in communication with others," the doctor had written. Across the room, I saw a semi-important editor from the newspaper, a man I had always been a little nervous about approaching. With Dr. Chafetz' book in hand, I walked over to him unafraid, and stood firmly by the side of the table he was sharing with friends.

"Why, hello, Bob," the semi-important editor said.

"My sweat pays your salary," I said.

This was only the beginning of a wonderful few days in which Dr. Chafetz' book proved so helpful. ". . . The need to break out a bit, let go, and soar," he had written. I soared, all right.

I left the first bar and found my way to another, where I encountered a mixed group of people I knew slightly, many of whom had the reputation of being staunch feminists. This gave me the occasion to deliver the full text of my famous speech, "God's Role for Women and Why He Did It." (Reprints available on request.) And off I went into the cold evening.

THERE WAS a slight altercation at my next stop, where I got into a minor fistfight with the jukebox in the barroom of the Holiday Inn. As I remember it, the jukebox did not have "Dream On" by Aerosmith among its selections, and I somehow felt that Dr. Chafetz' book ordered me to settle the dispute like a man.

Fists bleeding, I wandered on through the night, until I came to a fancy French restaurant. I found myself sitting at the bar next to a businessman who had just arrived from Paris. I consulted Dr. Chafetz' book once more. There was that line again: "Our human need to be in communication with others." I turned to the Frenchman.

GREENE: "Wine, eh?"

FRENCHMAN: "Pardon me?"

GREENE: "You're drinking wine."

FRENCHMAN: "Why . . . Yes."

GREENE: "I guess Audie Murphy wouldn't be real comfortable in a place like this. A hillbilly like Audie Murphy wouldn't fit into your circle of friends."

FRENCHMAN: "I beg your pardon?"

GREENE: "Yeah, I guess Audie Murphy wouldn't have known how to order the right kind of wine. Wouldn't have even known how to read the menu in a place like this. Didn't have the culture you Frenchmeh have. A kid out of the Dust Bowl. Father ran out on his family. Mother dead. Audie Murphy never got the chance to eat at an expensive French restaurant. All he did was go over to Europe and save your pitiful country because you were too gutless to do it yourself."

FRENCHMAN: "I'm quite sure I don't know what you're talking about. I was an infant during World War II."

GREENE: "You don't even know who Audie Murphy was, do you?"

FRENCHMAN: "I'm afraid I don't."

GREENE: "You know about Maurice Chevalier, though."

FRENCHMAN: "Yes, as a matter of fact."

GREENE: "Figures. Audie Murphy. Nineteen years old when he got the Congressional Medal of Honor. You never heard of him. Makes sense. You were too busy collaborating with the Nazis to notice it when Audie Murphy was saving your country."

I called for the check. "I'll sign this," I said. I pulled out my pen and in a large, flourishing hand wrote, "Gene Autry."

THE STORY goes on and on — for days and nights, literally — but like I said, I'd just like to thank Dr. Chafetz for his marvelous book. It's done wonders for my life. Drinking IS good for you, and now that my field-testing is over and I'm wide awake, I'm ready to come back to real life. How many more days until the Super Bowl?

'How Do We Know It's Us Without Our Past?'

By PAM HALLAN

Pam Hallan, vice chairman of the Orange County Historical Commission, is employed by the City of San Juan Capistrano

A fan of water, moving in purposeful arcs at the end of a garden hose, carefully gouged the untreated walls of the old adobe.

Cracks widened, dirt fell away, and a small piece of Orange County history moved closer to the earth from which it was fashioned.

HIS WORK done, the assailant recoiled his hose, put it in his car, and drove away. He wasn't a vandal. He was a property owner who considered the presence of a 150-year old adobe on his land a liability.

This incident occurred several years ago in downtown San Juan Capistrano. But unfortunately the circumstances have been repeated many times in Orange County. Simple adobes have been pushed into piles of rubble; proud Victorians have been ripped apart and sold for firewood, and downtown buildings of brick and mortar await the wrecker's ball.

Today marks the beginning of National Historic Preservation Week, dedicated to the theme "preservation is good business." Yet most owners of old buildings do not see it that way.

PRESERVATION is practiced by historical societies or civic organizations. Outstanding examples include the Newland House in Huntington Beach, the Estancia in Costa Mesa and Heritage Hill in El Toro where life from various periods is showcased for the modern observer.

As valuable as these projects are, there is a fallacy at work which Orange Countians have not yet overcome. Historic preservation does not mean taking one house and turning it into a period museum.

Historic preservation is rehabilitating whole neighborhoods for people to continue to live in, preserving downtowns by adapting spaces to modern uses, and taking single buildings and giving them new life as restaurants, shops, or offices.

AT A TIME when our lives are filled with concrete freeways, houses that look more and more alike, and plastic downtowns with token trees in planters the size of postage stamps, we need visible ties to the past for continuity or just to tell us who we are.

As John Steinbeck wrote, "How do we know it's us without our past?"

And yet our older buildings keep disappearing, most from head on collisions with bulldozers and misguided ideas on what constitutes "progress."

Whole blocks of buildings nominated to the National Register of Historic Places were recently demolished in Anaheim; a historically significant packing house was knocked down in Irvine, and a 50-year-old church is losing its fight for survival in Laguna Beach.

WHY DOES this continue to happen?

Historically, there has been one major obstacle to historic preservation and adaptive use — economics. This is no longer a viable argument.

In 1976 the Tax Reform Act was passed by Congress. It allows anyone converting a significant building to a commercial use — office, shop, restaurant, or rental units — to amortize the cost of rehabilitation improvements over a five-year period, rather than spreading them over the life of the building.

IT ALSO permitted accelerated depreciation and made benefits allowable to owners and holders of long-term leases as well.

In 1976 California passed its Historical Building Code, which became part of the Uniform Building Code used by most cities. This addition permits building and safety officials to be lenient with historical buildings in meeting code requirements, so long as minimum health and safety standards are maintained. This can provide less costly options for owners of recognized historical buildings.

Finally, outright grants are available through the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the National Historic Preservation Act, to private as well as non-profit and government organizations for rehabilitation.

STUDIES CONDUCTED by the federal government have shown rehabilitation to cost 25 percent less than new construction. It also has the advantage of being labor intensive and is often more environmentally suitable than new projects.

What is necessary to take advantage of these economic benefits? In most cases, buildings must be either on an inventory recognized officially by local government or on the National Register of Historic Places, a federal list of what's important in the nation, state and local communities.

Any person has the right to apply for registration, generally if a building is over 50 years of age.

The Register places no restriction on personal property rights, yet most people have never even heard of it, nor have they been provided with information about registration procedures, tax benefits or grants.

IN A RECENT survey of every city in Orange County it was discovered that only 4 percent attempt to make information on historic preservation available to the public. Yet 72 percent indicated an interest in historic preservation and had participated in one or more aspects of it.

Most said they would make an attempt to provide information to citizens who request it. Information is also available from the Orange County Historical Commission office at the County Library headquarters.

Does preservation work? Examples are all around us. In San Juan Capistrano an 1895 train station is a successful restaurant. In Tustin, a 1920s Greek Revival building is today a land developer's corporate headquarters.

IN ORANGE, downtown buildings are being renovated for modern uses. In Fullerton, whole neighborhoods are being upgraded to revitalize existing housing stock. In Santa Ana, the 1900 Courthouse successfully combines a museum and office use.

Someone once said, "With the future promising less, the past takes on new importance." Preservation is more than just good business. It may be necessary for our emotional survival.

'Don't Pick on Business'—Stockholder

To the Editor:

I was chagrined to see the criticism of oil company profits in your April 29 editorial.

If you would look at the record of Gulf Oil over the past couple of years, you would see that their profit picture has been anything but good. As a matter of fact, it has been considerably depressed.

You cannot use a profit increase percentage intelligently unless you know the base from which it began. For example, say a company earns 1 percent on its net sales one year and the next earns 5 percent. That, sir, is a 500 percent increase in its profits, and yet, a 5 percent return on net sales is certainly nothing to brag about.

I AM A stockholder in Gulf, a very modest one. One of these days, I will be depending on income from that stock to bolster my Social Security retirement benefits. The current return to me is 7 percent, which leaves me with a net of zero or less when you consider the effects of inflation. If the truth were known, I could retire now, except for the effects of a continuing inflation brought about by reckless government spending and waste of the tax dollar.

Indeed, you pick on the wrong people when you pick on business. I thank "business" every day of my life for providing me with a livelihood and the material amenities one can find nowhere else on earth.

Bad Show, Bosses

To the Editor:

Re: National Secretaries Day

This letter will not be signed which is not my character, however I am in a service business and after what I learned today about "bosses" and secretaries I choose to protect my business.

My first indication of the "boss" lady or man was when the Daily Pilot had a promotion running for $20 to submit a picture of your secretary and say a few nice words. They cancelled because only two people responded.

THE NATIONAL Secretaries Association held their 10th Annual Breakfast in recognition of all secretaries, with 548 attending. When the invitations were mailed a form was included to write a tribute about your secretary, the winning letter named the Secretary of the Day with an all paid trip to Mountain Shadows Resort in Scottsdale, Ariz. for two. Only 33 "bosses" took the time to write 25 words or less.

Now sit tight people. This one will blow your mind. 95 percent of the secretaries in attendance paid for their bosses to get them to attend. As a boss I can assure you I paid for my great secretary and she too was hurt by the figures. You "bosses" might think about this a little bit. Disgraceful.

To the Editor:

I feel as a concerned adult I must write this note.

For well over a year we have watched and read of the Waddill case to either determine him innocent or guilty.

At no time have any charges been brought against the mother of "Baby Weaver." Why?

She, or her parents must have been aware of how far along the pregnancy was.

I am not a pro or con abortion advocate, but I strongly feel their guilt was as great if not greater than Dr. Waddill's. They took the baby's life.

Landscape Refreshes Perceptions

To the Editor:

The Daily Pilot's editorial staff is concerned that a fully developed urban national park might generate more traffic and congestion than planned residential developments with smaller state or local park areas. The patterns of urban growth in Orange County suggest just the opposite. The historical record does not bode well for creation of local parks.

Orange County is far below the national average in parkland acreage for urban areas. Because of a piecemeal approach, planned residential development (PRD) parklands have not met the collective needs of the individual communities. A large urban national park better meets the needs of the residents of Orange County.

THE LAST PRD approval by the county could be a design for disaster. The concept of intensifying the number of units in the Aliso-Viejo PRD in exchange for parkland is very valid. However, going from 10,000 units to 20,000 units is not in the public interest and primarily benefits the developer. The traffic generated threatens the planned road development of South Orange County.

The continuing urbanization of Orange County creates a greater need for a large urban national park.

In the 1970s the federal government developed three national recreation areas (urban national parks): 34,000-acre Golden Gate, 27,000-acre Gateway, and 30,000-acre Cuyahoga.

THESE THREE developments have not generated more traffic and congestion than PRD and small park development would have. The Golden Gate NRA stretching along the California coast from Golden Gate Park in San Francisco to Pt. Reyes National Seashore in Marin County has very little congestion and traffic compared to the other sections of Marin County that have relied on PRDs and smaller parks.

National Urban Parks do not attract traffic congestion because they are not designed for intense recreational use. Public Law 93-555 creating Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area clearly shows this: "The overall concept for management and development of Cuyahoga is that of resource preservation for compatible recreational use."

The low intensity use is clearly revealed in PL 93-555, "In recognition of the Cuyahoga Valley's values within the regional milieu, planning for the park is based on the idea of open-space preservation rather than facility construction." This philosophy has been followed in all three national recreation areas.

PRESERVING THE land not only seems a worthy goal, as your editorial stated, it IS a worthy goal. Hopefully the park will be connected by an open space corridor to the Cleveland National Forest. The 1.8 million people of Orange County deserve such a park.

A park developed with the planning philosophy of PL 93-555: "In a gradually deteriorating environment where fewer and fewer places allow us time and space to rediscover the beauty of nature, the peace of the countryside or the substance of the past, the need to protect landscapes that refresh the spirit and restore our perceptions has become one of the most basic requirements of recreational planning."

Costs Greater, Disaster Closer

Dr. Charles G. Bell is a professor of political science at Cal State, Fullerton.

On June 8, 1976, California voters by 2 to 1 rejected a 5-year moratorium on nuclear power plants (supposedly to insure their safety). Now, the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania has come close to disaster and Rancho Seco in our state's central valley is shut down for safety reasons.

Californians (and the rest of the nation) are caught on the horns of an energy dilemma. And there do not appear to be any acceptable alternatives available.

THE NEAR MELT-DOWN at Three Mile Island has led to a sharp increase in public concern over the use of nuclear electric power. Yet, shutting down our nuclear power plants is not popular either.

A recent national poll by Lou Harris reveals that 40 per cent of Americans are "deeply disturbed" by the Three Mile Island accident. But the same poll found that 80 percent of Americans are opposed to the idea that all nuclear power plants should be permanently shut down. And only 40 percent would agree to even a temporary closure for safety checks.

But perhaps most interesting, only 47 percent supported the construction of more nuclear power plants, while 45 percent opposed the idea. A similar poll by the N.Y. Times-CBS found the same kinds of support and opposition to nuclear power.

IN CONTRAST, A YEAR AGO, Lou Harris found 55 percent of Americans were in favor of more nuclear power while only 25 percent opposed it. Obviously, Three Mile Island has had a tremendous impact on public support for nuclear power.

But what are the alternatives? Nuclear power provides California with four percent of its electrical generating capacity. For the nation as a whole the figure is over 12 percent. While these appear to be small percentages they are, in fact, a critical margin for power hungry Americans.

Closing Rancho Seco for a month means, for example, burning between 735,000 to 997,000 more barrels of oil at an added cost of about $10 million.

And while the San Onofre nuclear plant has not been closed, the future of California's nuclear power development is clearly in doubt. Several months ago, Brown's administration forced cancellation of the proposed Sun Desert plant while the completed Diablo Canyon facility has yet to be approved.

REGARDLESS, WE CONTINUE to burn increasing amounts of oil, coal and natural gas. In addition to polluting the air with coal and oil smoke, the high cost of OPEC oil has contributed to both inflation and our high national trade deficit.

President Carter's solution is to deregulate domestic crude oil prices to encourage production (and use!). Jerry Brown, on the other hand, advocates phasing out present nuclear power plants.

But neither Carter nor Brown has given us any real alternatives. Solar power, geothermal power, wind power, congeneration, and major changes in our private transportation system are clearly years away. Perhaps only astronomical oil prices will bring this about.

MEANWHILE, OUR POLITICAL leaders, whomever they be, wait for clear cut demands from the public for a solution. To date, none has emerged. And, to date, no public official has been willing to risk political oblivion by suggesting any substantial restrictions on oil consumption. California's love affair with the car prevents that!

And so we all wait for the energy disaster to come closer and the costs to become greater — a situation in which we all will lose.

CHAPLIN ERA. . .

She recalls that her husband often yearned for the hum and bustle of the movie studio after he shook Chaplin's hand for the last time in 1943.

"But he didn't go back," she said. "And he didn't respond to a personal appeal from Charlie who asked Jack to join him in making a movie in England about 25 years ago."

HAPPIER MEMORIES include the occasions when the movie maker would order his production crew and many extras to be on hand at 7 a.m. in Chaplin Studios.

"He would stroll in at 11 a.m. as if it was the most normal thing in the world to keep us waiting for four hours," she said. "And you can imagine how furious everybody was."

But within seconds Chaplin would have the workers who had been roundly cursing him rolling on the floor in laughter as he went into one of his incomparable routines. "He was the complete clown," she smiled.

She said her husband, who had acted when he wasn't working as a stunt man, cameraman, laboratory technician or production manager, always said that Chaplin brought the best out of everybody who worked in his movies.

"He inspired everyone who worked under or with him," she said. "Charlie Chaplin could make a loaf of bread act."

THE DEATH OF Wilson cuts the last link with Chaplin and the crews who worked under him more then 60 years ago at Chaplin Studios.

Only the memories remain.

But they are rich memories for Edith Vaul Wilson. She sits, scrapbook in her lap, and dreams of the days when her husband worked with a chirpy Cockney who may well have been the greatest movie maker of all time and the most revered movie personality.

"He was all of that," said. "Jack knew it, I knew it and all of us who worked with him or associated with him knew it."

And she looks again at a picture of her husband and Chaplin, taken during the halcyon days in Hollywood. "They made a great team."

Wanted: Fixer-uppers

A variety of Orange Coast agencies are hoping people will make a little room in summer play schedules to lend a helping hand to others.

The Mental Health Association is looking for able hands to paint and fix up a new facility in Santa Ana which will become an activity center.

SOUTH COAST Repertory Theater needs ushers for at least one performance per week. No pay, but a lot of plays for those 14 or older willing to pour coffee, wine or juice during intermission.

The Probation Department is always looking for men to deal with youngsters who have been in trouble. A strong male image helps.

If any of these openings appeal to you, contact the Voluntary Action Center (VAC) of West Orange County at 898-0043 for details.

In the south county, the VAC at 675-9210 or 833-9278 has the scoop on the following:

A YOUTH guidance center in Santa Ana needs painters to brighten trim and doors, and to teach the youngsters how to do the work.

Orange County public health nurses urgently need translators who speak Spanish, Laotian or Vietnamese to go along on visits to patients, mostly mothers with young children.

Saddleback College in Mission Viejo, needs able-bodied helpers for the child care center on campus. A growing number of pre-schoolers is putting pressure on existing staff. Must be able to tolerate noise. Minimum age 18.

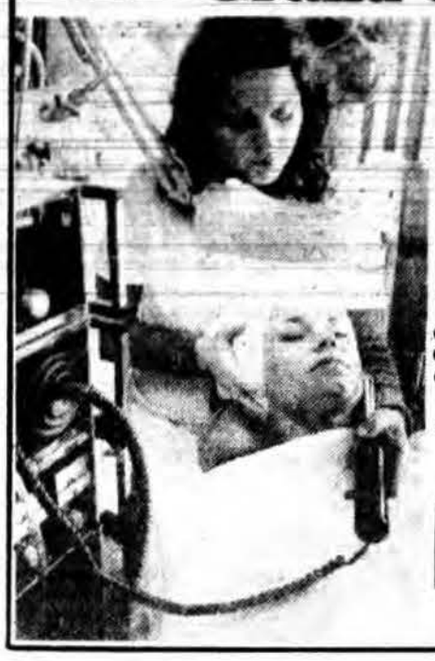

Newport Harbor High School needs guides to give tours through the school's nature center. Contact Mr. House for details at 556-3338.

Free Exhibit In Clemente

A free exhibit of art by local residents is scheduled to be shown Thursday on the San Clemente Beach Club grounds from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

More than 30 artists from Maxine McAdam's Capistrano Unified Adult Education classes will have their work exhibited. Most is oil painting but other types of art will be displayed as well.

Mesa School Pupils Find Ways To Fit Into the Future

By JACKIE HYMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It's gotten so a telephone repairman isn't safe any more at Monte Vista School in Costa Mesa.

He's likely to be dragged off by eager students to describe his profession, how he got there and what his interests were as a child.

"EVERY ADULT who comes into the school is a potential interview," said S. Lee Winocur of Newport Beach, one of two teachers who designed Laboratory Activities to Understand and Nurture Choosing (LAUNCH).

"The telephone repairman was great," she added. "He explained what he does and how the phone company trained him. He even took a phone apart for us."

Mrs. Winocur, a former resource teacher in the Mentally Gifted Minor program, and Carrie Eggleston of Huntington Beach, a former media center resource teacher, designed LAUNCH some four years ago after polling teachers in the Newport Mesa Unified School District.

"THEY AGREED that the youngsters needed to know how to make decisions, to know more about themselves and to like themselves better," Mrs. Eggleston said.

Theorizing that improved decision-making, social and personal skills would lead to improvements in academic studies as well as brighter job futures, the teachers applied for and received a federal grant.

For three years of research and development, they have received funds under Title IV-C of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. The grant of about $50,000 a year pays for the teachers, a secretary, an aide and materials.

THE FUNDING was renewed this year, the fourth, after LAUNCH was selected by the state from about 100 experiments as one of some 30 "exemplary" pilots worthy of adoption in whole or part by other school districts.

According to the state Department of Education, 35 districts statewide so far are considering using the program in one form or another.

Last weekend, the two teachers noted, they conducted a workshop at Monte Vista for 40 teachers from other districts as far away as Eureka.

DRAWING UP A program to teach youngsters to plan ahead, gather information, cooperate with each other, know themselves and develop more responsibility wasn't easy.

The two teachers studied books and vocational programs for older students (LAUNCH is designed for the second through fifth grades), brainstormed together and helped organize a citizens committee to add to the program.

A 609-page handbook, with a teacher's guide and other support materials, has been developed to guide future LAUNCH programs.

Also incorporated into the package is a pamphlet — available in English or Spanish — describing LAUNCH to parents.

"MANY PARENTS feel that one of the responsibilities of being a parent is to be protective," Mrs. Winocur said. "They don't give children many opportunities to make decisions."

Other teachers at the school are asked to plan at least one 30-minute lesson a week in which the students will have to use their decision-making, planning and cooperation skills as part of regular academic work.

The LAUNCH program itself centers on a large room where the youngsters select tasks in different learning areas. They spend about two hours a week in the LAUNCH center.

Here are some examples of activities:

—SELF KNOWLEDGE. A student selects from a list of personality traits, such as "happy" or "helpful," those he thinks best describe him. Two friends are asked to pick the traits they think best fit the student. The answers are then compared and discussed.

Knowledge of others. Students will take the roles of characters from a book or story, to see the situation from that character's viewpoint.

"They actually learn to empathize with the characters," Mrs. Winocur said. "Without that kind of comprehension, the joy of reading just doesn't come through. As a result, we've actually seen a rise in math and reading scores."

—Planning, goal-setting and cooperation. Older youngsters are asked to instruct kindergarten and first-grade children.

"THEY'RE VERY enthusiastic," Mrs. Eggleston said of the young tutors. "They never miss their scheduled meetings. They tell us it feels wonderful to help someone else."

Social skills. Youngsters discuss nonverbal communication, and analyze the meanings of various gestures, such as the "OK" sign with thumb and forefinger.

—Career information. Students imagine a group of settlers going to a new, undeveloped land, and choose occupations that should be represented in the group.

Another task involves designing a uniform for an imaginary new branch of the armed forces, such as Women Astronauts or Moon Marines.

And, as with the telephone man, students query adults — with open-ended rather than yes-or-no questions — as to their interests and how these affect their career.

"Decision-making really takes place in the future," Mrs. Winocur said. "You're thinking in terms of what will be as a result of what you're doing now."

COOPERATION WITH others is another task that is stressed, as is learning to compete fairly without taking setbacks personally, they said.

The teachers also stressed that such skills are vital because it's impossible to train students now for most of the jobs that will be around in 20 years or so.

"Futurists tell us that 80 percent of the jobs our kids will do haven't been invented yet," Mrs. Winocur said.

Although Monte Vista School will close this spring due to declining enrollment, the teachers said LAUNCH will continue.

Several schools in the Newport-Mesa Unified School District have expressed interest in serving as host schools next year, they said.

Also, because the federal funding will continue for at least one more year, the teachers would remain with the district to help other districts understand and adopt LAUNCH.

UCI Writers' Forum To Screen Nationally

A team of UC Irvine students, staff and faculty today begin nationwide telecast of "Writer In Performance," to be aired to five million viewers.

The 30-minute documentary profile series on West Coast authors will feature both established novelists, screenwriters and playrights, in addition to emerging literary talent.

Carried via RCA's Satcom Satellite and Southern Satellite Systems, a cable network in Tulsa, Okla., the UCI-produced programs will be seen at 1:30 p.m. (here) on Channel 3 and Los Angeles' Theta Z channel.

Anne Rice, author of "Interview With a Vampire," will be featured on today's initial show, interviewed by Carol Doty, a UCI novelist.

Subsequent Sunday afternoon segments will feature various biographers, poets, and Joseph Meeker, an environmentalist whose writing specializes in that area of worldwide human concern.

LONDON — The weather is a chill 57 degrees. The Queen is a cool 53 years and Maggie Thatcher has been elected the first woman prime minister.

She's against crime. For increased pensions to match Britain's jumping inflation. She's against taxing pensions of war widows and a lot of other good things.

A MEDICAL CHECKUP didn't give Labour any hope that she would collapse during the campaign.

"Steady as a rock," she said. "They can't find anything wrong with me. They never can."

Mrs. Thatcher is trailed by faithful husband Denis who pops throat lozenges to her during speeches.

FLEW BRITISH Airways from San Francisco to London through nine hours of time zones. The jet lag for men is like being hit by a truck. Science can explain it change of body sleep and eating habits. But they can't do anything about it.

It's been England's coldest winter in many a year. It's not getting warmer. Crops have been lost. Trees are leafing out as they should have done in March.

The Sunday Telegraph reports "Even hares have been discouraged by bitter winds, showing no desire to 'go mad' and indulge in their usual spring boxing matches in the fields."

THE AMERICAN DOLLAR is down, thus discouraging the tourists as well as the hares. The summer season is just opening (no matter that the weather is cold as a pawnbroker's eye). Tourist business was off last year.

The only visitors who have money are oily shieks who take over whole floors of posh hotels like Claridge's. Buy Rolls Royces by the six-pack.

SUMMER LOVE (or Boy Meets Girl): Best action for both is the beach at Waikiki. Easy to meet. Easy to split if the original contact turns out to be low voltage.

"Water's a little warmer today, isn't it?" "Yes, it is. Do you surf?"

"Would you like a Coke?" "Love one" or, if his batteries seem low charged "Love to, but I promised to be back to see my roommate."

WHERE THE GIRLS are: Copenhagen. And all over Sweden. And don't overlook Norway. Bergen and Oslo whose outspoken girls will probably speak to you before you say "hello."

The chance of romance in Norway in not well-known. But believe me, it tops

THOUGH GOV. JERRY Brown and Linda Ronstadt had a good time in Africa, friends of mine tell me: "Wherever you go in Africa, bring your own backgammon opponent. Except Capetown, South Africa."

"Capetown is a very swingy city. Take a look at the local paper's massage ads. Gives you an idea of what's happening.

THE LOVE BOATS: Odds for shipboard romance are worse than betting the hard-way 8 on a Vegas crap table. Women outnumber men. And the outnumbered men are pretty poor numbers anyway.

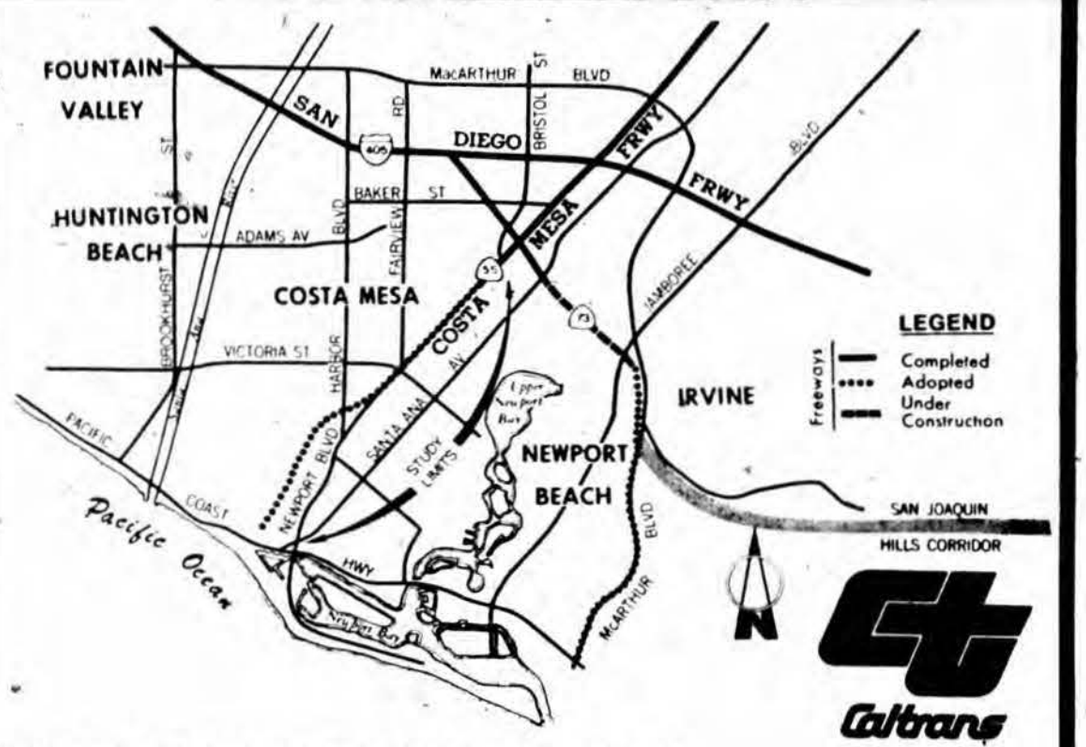

If you cruise, take a short one. Not over 10 days. These get the swinging 30s and 40s.

EUROPE BACKPACKERS: Nearly all under-30. Know all the cheap but good restaurants. The better hostels. Where to buy grass.

They get acquainted easily. Somewhere within a block of American Express, there will be a sidewalk cafe. You can spot it by the Coca Cola bottles on the table. There is where Youth sits and divides knowledge while waiting for American Express to open its doors with Money from Mother.

PUBLIC WORKSHOPS TO DETERMINE WHAT YOU THINK ABOUT NEWPORT BOULEVARD (ROUTE 55) IN ORANGE COUNTY

COME TO A WORKSHOP AND TELL US YOUR IDEAS

California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) is co-sponsoring a series of four public workshops with Orange County and the cities of Costa Mesa, Newport Beach and Irvine. The purpose of these workshops is to provide you every opportunity to discuss your own views regarding the transportation problems along Newport Boulevard (Route 55) and your ideas for solving those problems.

These workshops are being conducted as part of a study on present and future transportation problems along Route 55. The segment of Route 55 being studied extends from Pacific Coast Highway (Route 1) in Newport Beach to the end of the Newport Freeway near Bristol Street in Costa Mesa.

Three city co-sponsored workshops are scheduled at the following locations:

City of Irvine	Wednesday, May 9, 1979, 7:30 p.m. Irvine City Hall 17200 Jamboree Blvd.
City of Costa Mesa	Thursday, May 10, 1979, 7:30 p.m. Southern California College Main Administration Bldg. 55 Fair Dr.
City of Newport Beach	Tuesday, May 15, 1979, 7:30 p.m. Newport Harbor High School Cafetorium 15th St. and Irvine Blvd.

The fourth workshop, co-sponsored with the Orange County Transportation Commission, is scheduled at the following location:

Thursday, June 21, 1979, 7:30 p.m.
South Coast Plaza Hotel
San Diego/San Pedro Room
666 Anton Blvd.
Costa Mesa

These workshops are being conducted as part of the continuing Citizen Participation Program for the Route 55 Transportation Study. Scheduled for approximately two years, this study will produce a Draft Environmental Impact Statement, evaluating several possible solutions. These include highway, street and transit alternatives and their respective environmental impacts.

For questions or further information, contact Court Burrell, project manager for the study, at the Caltrans office, 120 S. Spring Street, Los Angeles, (213) 620-3090.

Best for every body... a pool and a spa.

A pool is exercise. It is diving, splashing, swimming, water games and racing. It's endless fun for the whole family in the air and sun—as it builds up your stamina and trims up your body.

A spa is relaxing. Hot jets of tingly bubbles float away the tensions of the day, relax tight muscles and give your body a feeling of well-being.

Every body needs both. A pool and a spa do different, wonderful things for your body.

Because they share the same construction, filter, heater, and plumbing, a spa built with a pool adds little to the cost.

In the past ten years, Anthony has built 40,000 spas with pools.

You can beat predicted higher prices and get more pool and spa time this year if you call today. To be sure, call Anthony.

The beauty and quality of your pool and spa depends on the responsibility of your builder. Here are Anthony's advantages...

- World's largest pool builder.
- Built more than 132,000 pools.

It's One Spectacular Day at the Derby

AP Wirephoto

SPECTACULAR BID (RIGHT) COMES DOWN THE HOME STRETCH A WINNER.

Franklin Boots Him Home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The kid and the Bid did it in the 105th Kentucky Derby Saturday, and 19-year-old Ron Franklin said it doesn't pay to make his horse mad.

"They came out at me and banged me around with about a half-mile to go," the boyish rider of Spectacular Bid said after the race. "It only made my horse madder."

Franklin said the near collision, which occurred with the Bid's arch Pacific Coast rival, Flying Paster, represented the only near problem during the 1¼-mile race.

FLYING PASTER finished fifth in the 10-horse field, 10 lengths back of the winner.

Young Franklin, who completed his apprenticeship in February, rushed into the jockey room, smiling broadly and raising his hands high in the air. Rival jockeys rushed up to congratulate him, some throwing their arms around him.

FRANKLIN

The 42-year-old Don Pierce, rider of Flying Paster and old enough to be Franklin's father, was among the first to reach the winning jockey He patted Franklin on the back warmly and said "Your horse done real good."

FRANKLIN SAID HE USED the whip five times left-handed to urge Spectacular Bid into the move that won the race. But he added that the greatest influence comes from "tweaking."

"I talk to him around the course," he revealed. "When we made our move, I leaned over and said, 'Come on, big daddy.' "

Franklin, in his first Derby, said he felt that he became more relaxed and more confident after steering Seethreepeo to victory over favored Julie's Dancer with Angel Cordero aboard in the Twin Spires seventh race, preceding the Kentucky classic.

"IT HELPED ME GET USED to the crowd and to look around," he said.

Franklin said that it was an easy race and that never once did he doubt that Spectacular Bid would win it. "Cordero (who rode Screen King) got inside of me on the backstretch," Franklin said. "We just moved to the outside. We were where we wanted to be. I let him do what he wanted to do and he did it. I was never worried."

The inexperience of the jockey was one of the doubts raised by some handicappers of Spectacular Bid's ability to win the Derby, although the horse was heavily favored.

A HIGH SCHOOL DROPOUT, Franklin had shown up at Laurel Race Course in Baltimore in 1976 at age 16 and asked for work. Bud Delp, Spectacular Bid's trainer, said he needed a hot walker and gave the boy a job.

It is one of the lowest jobs around a race track, leading horses around to cool off. Delp took a liking to Franklin, taught him to ride and started allowing him to race about the time that Spectacular Bid came along.

Franklin rode the horse through his first five races but was removed for the veteran Jorge Velasquez for two races in the fall of 1978 when Bid was two years old. This year, Franklin was aboard the steel grey champion all the way but drew the anger of his trainer when he allowed himself to be boxed in several times in the Florida Derby

AFTER THE RACE, Delp was seen and heard on television upbraiding his rider and even at one stage calling him an "idiot."

"Remember I can get another jockey Bill

Angel-killer Palmer Does It Again, 9-1

BALTIMORE (AP) Lee May hit a grand slam home run to back the combined four-hit pitching of Jim Palmer and Tim Stoddard as Baltimore beat the California Angels 9-1 Saturday night.

MAY'S BLAST was the 10th bases-loaded home run of his career, the most by an active American League player. It was his sixth homer of the season.

Palmer, 4-1, struck out four, walked two and allowed all four California hits — two of them by Rod Carew — before giving way to Stoddard at the start of the ninth inning. The only run off Palmer came in the fourth inning and was unearned. Palmer is now 21-7 against the Angels in lifetime decisions.

EDDIE MURRAY, who stretched his hitting streak to 16 consecutive games, drove in Al Bumbry with the first Oriole run in the first inning with a single to left.

Baltimore stretched the lead to 5-0 against Angels starter Don Aase, 2-3, in the third when Rich Dauer and Ken Singleton singled and Murray walked to load the bases. May then hit Aase's first pitch high over the 360-foot sign in left to clear the bases.

Stoddard replaced Palmer in the ninth and retired the Angels in order as the Orioles won the 14th game out of their last 15 and their fifth in a row before 20,455 fans.

BALTIMORE, which banged out a total of 13 hits against three California pitchers, had another four-run explosion in the seventh.

Jim Barr, who replaced Aase on the mound for the Angels in the fourth inning, was touched for the four runs in the seventh.

Bumbry and Dauer smacked back-to-back doubles and Murray lashed a single to right field to drive in the second run of the game and his 19th of the season.

Gary Roenicke then hit his fourth homer of the season into the leftfield seats scoring Murray in front of him.

WHEN BILLY SMITH singled to left, Dyar Miller took over for Barr as the California pitcher, and got the Orioles out without further damage.

The game marked the Angel debut of shortstop Bert Campaneris, whom California obtained Friday by sending infielder Dave Chalk to Texas.

Campaneris went 0-for-three while batting ninth in the order, but Palmer was so effective that Campy's "0-fer" was certainly no disgrace.

The only Angels who got hits were Carew and Dan Ford, each collecting two.

ALTHOUGH BARR came in after most of the damage had already been done, he was ineffective in the role that the Angels had intended for him when he was signed from San Francisco — relief.

Barr, a starter all his career, turned in a strong 8⅔ innings in his only start this season and helped the Angels beat the New York Yankees, 2-1, but he has yet to materialize as a reliable bullpen pitcher, either in short or long relief.

Today's final game of the series in Baltimore will be televised by Channel 5 starting at 11 a.m. From here the Angels tangle with Boston for a four-game series in the Red Sox feared Fenway Park.

Temporary Injunction

Auto Racers Win, May Race at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) A federal judge, citing possible "severe hardships" to some of the biggest names in racing, granted a temporary injunction Saturday night and ordered that six Championship Auto Racing Teams barred from the Indianapolis 500 by the U.S. Auto Club be reinstated.

The six teams are composed of 19 entries, including cars for defending 500 champion Al Unser and other former winners Bobby Unser, Gordon Johncock and Johnny Rutherford.

Two Orange Coast area drivers and two owners are also involved with CART including Corona del Mar's Dan Gurney of All-American Racers, one of the six teams banned from the race by USAC officials.

NEWPORT BEACH owner Ted Field is affiliated with CART but wasn't one of those barred from racing although he is a member of the CART group along with his driver, Danny Ongais of Costa Mesa.

Drivers Steve Krisiloff of Dana Point and Rick Mears, a former resident of Costa Mesa, are also involved with banned car owners.

The ruling by U.S. District Court Judge James Noland ended a three-day hearing in which CART tried to show that USAC and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway conspired to keep the six racing teams out of the 500 in violation of antitrust law.

NOLAND MADE no ruling on CART's allegations of antitrust violations but said the temporary injunction was granted because the "severe hardship the drivers would suffer far outweighs the harm to the defendants by allowing them to race."

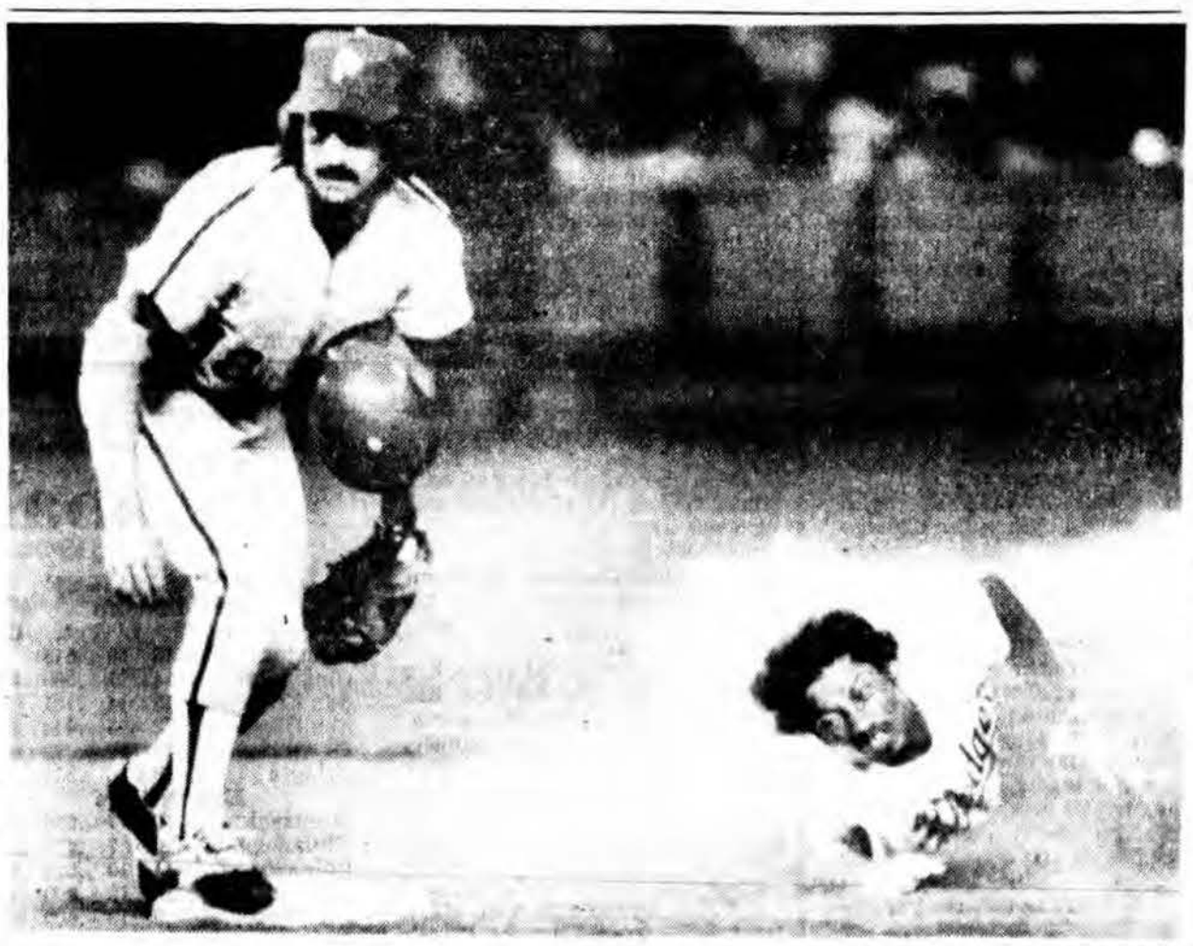

It was USAC's and the Speedway's contention that the six CART teams were leaders in a movement to be harmful to racing in general and the Indy 500 in particular through threats of boycotting the race.

"It is exceedingly clear the plaintiffs will race," Noland said. "If that was clear three days ago, we wouldn't have been here now.

"If only the CART owners and the defendants were involved, the court might let the situation stand as it is," Noland continued. "But there is no way the drivers can sit out the Indianapolis 500 without suffering harm. The drivers are the keystone of a team effort."

OTHER DRIVERS who were affected were Wally Dallenbach and Mike Mosley. The six CART teams were those of Pat Patrick, Roger Penske, Gurney, Jim Hall, Bob Fletcher and Tyler Alexander of Team McLaren.

Noland reiterated his decision does not resolve the differences between USAC and CART. But he suggested that the reason given by USAC for the exclusion of the CART teams, that they were "not in good standing" with the sanctioning organization, was not based on a sufficient standard.

LA'S DERREL THOMAS LOSES HIS HELMET TRYING TO BREAK UP A DOUBLE PLAY.

Schmidt Batters Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) Mike Schmidt slugged two homers and drove in five runs to back the four-hit pitching of Dick Ruthven and Ron Reed Saturday night as the Philadelphia Phillies blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-0.

The Phils battered three Los Angeles pitchers for 13 hits. Schmidt hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning off losing pitcher Andy Messersmith, 1-2, and a three-run shot in the eighth off reliever Charlie Hough.

Schmidt now has eight home runs for the season, four in this series.

RUTHVEN, 5-0, snapped a seven-game losing streak against the Dodgers with seven strong innings. The only hits he allowed were singles by Steve Garvey and Ron Cey in the fourth inning. Hough doubled off Reed in the eighth and Teddy Martinez beat out a bunt in the ninth.

Rudy Meoli doubled home the Phils' first run in the second inning, Greg Luzinski hit a two-run double in the third, Pete Rose doubled home Larry Bowa in the fifth and Schmidt then hit the first of his homers for a 6-0 lead.

Philadelphia scored its seventh run against reliever Lance Rautzhan, who walked three batters and hit one. Luzinski singled home his third run of the night in the eighth inning off Charlie Hough.

THE VICTORY was Philadelphia's 16th in its last 21 games, while Los Angeles was losing its sixth of the last seven games.

Ruthven retired the first seven Dodgers in order before walking Steve Yeager with one out in the second inning.

The Philadelphia right-hander didn't give up a hit until Garvey grounded a single after two were out in the fourth. Cey followed with a base hit, but Ruthven stranded the runners by striking out Dusty Baker on three pitches.

Laver Meets Rosewall in Finals

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Rocket Rod Laver is still the master on the tennis court, an old smoothie with craft and cunning to dispel any thoughts that his competitive career is behind him.

Far from it, with the advent of the Carte Blanche Tennis Legends competition that has opened a whole new era for players over 35 who still have the desire to play competitive tennis.

LAVER SHOWED HIS SKILLS to a crowd of about 1,000 Saturday night at the John Wayne Tennis Club in Newport Beach by beating John Newcombe, 7-5, 6-4 to advance to today's finals.

The Rocket will face a fellow-Austrian, Ken Rosewall, in the singles final, then will join Newport Beach neighbor Roy Emerson in the doubles final against Newcombe and Rosewall. The singles match is at 1 and the doubles will follow at approximately 2:15.

When Laver faces Rosewall, it will be a rematch of many previous matches. "I really haven't kept count on the number of times I have played him," Laver said. "We've played each other a lot of times and Ken is still playing very well. It will be a matter of getting some breaks to win."

MUCH THE SAME was true of his semifinal match with Newcombe. But Laver was happy with most of his game and felt he had played well in both the singles and doubles matches Saturday.

"I didn't return his (Newcombe's) serves very well at times but other than that I thought I played pretty well. I made some unforced errors on the return of his serve."

At one point in the first set, Laver committed three straight double faults on service, then came back to serve an ace and win the game. In all, he had seven double service faults in the match.

"I was happy with my serve and felt it came in well more times than not," he said. "The main thing is that you don't lose the game when you double fault."

As was the case Friday night, the scoreboard lights were turned out early in the match because of the glare in the eyes of the players. "The eyes aren't as sharp as they used to be," Laver said.

LAVER USED HIS rocket-like service, accurate passing and he broke dump shots to control the match throughout Newcombe's service in the final game of the first set to win, then had two service breaks including the final game to win the second.

Rosewall, the oldest player in the tournament at 44, won over Marty Riessen in an afternoon match, 6-3, 7-6. He battled back from a 5-0 deficit in the second set and captured the 12-point tiebreaker, 13-11 to win.

'It Should've Been 7-0'

But Surf Coach Will Take His 1-0 Win, Anyway

By ERNIE CASTILLO
Of The Daily Pilot Staff

On Cinco de Mayo night at Anaheim Stadium, the advertised Surfiesta looked more like a Surf siesta.

But just when it looked like the Surf and the Memphis Rogues were going to decide a Mexican standoff with a shootout at the Big A, Steve David came to the rescue.

DAVID, A two-time NASL scoring champion now relegated to the Surf bench, took a corner kick from Steve Huson and with a Mexican hat dance-like move, whirled and sliced the ball into the left corner of the net to give the Surf its third consecutive victory in its third straight overtime, 1-0, Saturday night.

And though the game should never have been that close, nobody was complaining after the Surf pulled to within four points of the American Conference, Western Division lead.

"IT SHOULD have been 7-0. We should have won early," said Surf Coach John Sewell after his team won for just the second time at home in a game witnessed by 8,662.

"I was disappointed in the way we played but at least we won," said Sewell. I'd rather play badly and win than play great and lose."

It wasn't that the Surf didn't have the opportunities. It just couldn't cash in on them, California, which has scored just five regulation goals in seven games, out shot Memphis by an amazing 22-2 and dominated the game to such a degree that goalies Dave Jokerst and Tony Chursky were called upon to make the grand total of three saves.

OF COURSE, that's the same number of saves turned in by Memphis' John Houska.

Like David, Chursky had lost his starting position recently. But when Jokerst was sent to the hospital at halftime with a bruised shoulder suffered in a collision mid way through the opening half, Chursky stepped in and looked like he never left the net in the first place.

But then again, regardless of who's playing goalie, nobody's been scoring on the Surf. It was the second shutout win by a team that has allowed just seven goals in seven games.

All that's keeping the Surf from becoming a force to contend with when playoff time rolls around is an offense to match. Saturday, it was as active as the nearby freeways and those were nearly deserted.

"THE LAST THREE games should have been won in regulation time," says Sewell. "I was looking for a 4-nil win tonight. I don't think we had that many players who played well.

"It's a good problem when you're winning these types of games, though. That makes it easier to evaluate the problems. But at some time, you've got to lose one. It's just the law of averages."

The low fan turnout seemed to be directly related to the gas crisis. General Manager Paul Deese figured there were 8,000 pre-sale tickets sold and, figuring on 1,000 no-shows, that meant just 1,500 walk-up sales.

"First the injuries, then the strike and now the gas shortage," Deese said, shaking his head.

Umps Supported

Union Boycotts Baseball

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Milwaukee County labor official has written the president of the Milwaukee Brewers to warn that union members will not attend baseball games because of the umpires' strike.

Milwaukee County Labor Council AFL-CIO president Thomas Parker told Brewers President Bud Selig that the council has made plans for its annual AFL-CIO baseball night at the stadium. But Parker said, in a letter dated May 4, council delegates decided Wednesday "not to participate in any baseball functions, pending the resolution of the umpires' dispute."

Parker said the council urged Selig to help solve the umpires' strike.

Parker said Saturday the council has about 100,000 members belinging to 200 Milwaukee-area union locals. He said the delegates at Wednesday's meeting, on a voice vote, overwhelmingly decided to table plans for the August baseball night until the umpires strike is resolved.

Last year about 2,000 union members attended the event, sitting in a specially reserved section of the stadium, Parker said.

Though Parker said the council was considering no further action, he noted "the spirit of the people was that we should be getting more involved with it."

Parker said county stadium employees are members of the AFL-CIO, but he added there would be no job action to shut down the park. He said the council left it to the discretion of delegates whether members of their unions would not attend ball games out of sympathy with umpires.

Parker said he had no reaction from Selig and thought it was too early for the Brewers president to have received the letter.

A Capsule Report From the World of Sports

From AP Dispatches

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Boxing promoter Bob Arum says Muhammad Ali never will fight again because of "severe kidney damage."

Arum said, "Ali is a great champion but he has been fighting since he was 12 years old. That's 25 years. His kidneys are in such bad shape that he suffers agony even in training and sparring."

ALI

Arum added, "He passes blood for two months after each fight. His kidneys have been beaten into a state that if he does not retire now he might never lead a normal life."

Ali is the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion. Larry Holmes holds the World Boxing Council title.

Arum said Ali only is waiting for a sufficiently lucrative offer to stage his retirement announcement.

Arum did not say how he had learned of Ali's serious health problems, and he did not cite any source for the report.

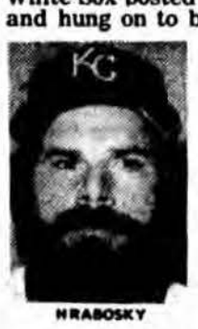

"Ali has taken some bad punishment in the fights in the later stage of his career . . . His hands are badly battered and at this stage of his career, even the damage he has sustained to his head must be a worry."

Quote of the Day

Marv Hecht, a concert pianist and high school umpire, who worked major league spring training games in Miami because of the strike of the regular umpires: "I'm used to pressure from playing concerts. If you screw up a Chopin nocturne, that's much more disastrous than missing a strike at the ankles."

'Bird' Fidrych Flies Again

Mark Fidrych, making his first regular-season start for Detroit since April 17, 1978, threw four innings of four-hit ball and the Tigers held on to beat the Minnesota Twins, 8-4. "The Bird" came out after throwing 50 pitches, 28 for strikes . . . Eric Soderholm hit a three-run homer and a run-scoring single as the Chicago White Sox posted all their runs in the fourth and fifth innings and hung on to beat the Texas Rangers, 7-6 . . . Rich Gale and Al Hrabosky stopped Cleveland on six hits and got the benefit of three Indians errors in one inning as the Kansas City Royals beat Cleveland, 3-2 . . . Lou Piniella's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over Oakland as Tommy John became the first six-game winner in the major leagues . . . Jim Rice broke a mild slump by driving in four runs with a homer and a pair of singles, powering the Red Sox to an 11-4 over the Seattle Mariners.

HRABOSKY

Joe Morgan and Johnny Bench drove in two runs in the second inning, leading the Reds to a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros . . . Jack Clark fouled off a bunt attempt, then slammed a two-run homer in the seventh inning to give the San Francisco Giants a 6-4 victory over the Mets . . . Charlie Moore's two-run triple on a misjudged fly ball sparked a four-run Milwaukee second inning, and Jim Slaton scattered eight hits, leading the Brewers to a 6-1 victory over Toronto . . . Four home runs, including a three-run blast by Jerry Martin and a two-run shot by Bobby Murcer, carried the Chicago Cubs to a 9-3 victory over Atlanta . . . Willie Stargell's two-run single with two out in the ninth capped a three-run rally that lifted the Pirates to a 6-5 victory over St. Louis . . . Dave Winfield hit a pair of two-run homers to power the San Diego Padres to a 6-3 victory over Montreal.

Guidry Gets Bullpen Duty

Misc.

Saying that "the team comes first and there's nothing else on my mind," 1978 Cy Young Award winner Ron Guidry volunteered to surrender his status as the New York Yankees' ace starter and bolster the team's stricken bullpen. Yankee Manager Bob Lemon says Guidry will remain in the bullpen until reliever Rich Gossage comes back from a thumb injury which may keep him sidelined past the All-star break . . . Dennis Paulson of Costa Mesa shot a 73 for second place in the West Coast Amateur tournament at Quail Lake Country Club . . . Ben Crenshaw fired a 68 to share the lead at four-under-par 212 with Britain's Michael King after the third round of the Italian Open golf championship . . . Just as in the Kentucky Derby last year, when his closing rush failed to catch the winner Affirmed, so did Alydar in the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct Race Track Saturday. Star de Maskra led all the way to pay $14.50, $5.20 and $2.80.

DERBY . . .

Shoemaker is only one call away," Delp told Franklin.

However, the Bid's owners, Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff, dictated that the youngster should remain in the saddle.

"They have affinity for each other," said Harry Meyerhoff, a Baltimore real estate developer.

Asked how he felt about news stories which called attention to his inexperience, Franklin said:

"I NEVER THOUGHT about them. I never felt I was in danger of being taken off of the horse."

"If you've got the horse, you can win with him. And this is a horse that refuses to be beaten."

Meanwhile, Spectacular Bid settled for a doughnut as his reward for winning.

The object of cheers and $1 million-plus in wagers a few moments before accepted the treat readily from the hand of Gerald Delp after returning to the quiet of his stable.

DOUGHNUTS ARE a morning ritual, and "if he doesn't get one, he gets mad," said Delp, the 16-year-old son of Bud Delp.

"He's got a mind of his own," the younger Delp said. "He's the smartest horse my dad ever had."

Delp and groom Mo Hall took turns cooling the champion with a walk around the barn. They spoke words of congratulations and encouragement to the champion, who occasionally lifted his head to glance at the dozen spectators on hand.

Hall, a groom for 33 years, has worked with Spectacular Bid during his last 11 stakes races. And this year's Derby winner, he said, "is a whole lot better than the other horses I've worked with."

After a supper of eight quarters of oats Saturday night and relaxation today, Bid and his entourage will leave Monday morning for the Preakness, his next chance for glory and an extra doughnmt.

Irwin, Rachels in Lead

36 Holes Due Today at Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Hale Irwin, using a new, longer putter, fired a seven-under-par 64 on the still-flooded Woodlands Country Club course and moved into a tie with longshot Sammy Rachels for the lead Saturday in the rain-delayed second round of the Houston Open Golf Tournament.

The steady Irwin, a frustrated non-winner on the American tour last year, and Rachels, who hasn't even come close to leading a tournament before, had 36-hole totals of 133, nine-under-par going into today's 36-hole windup. Rachels had a second round 65.

IN ADDITION to Irwin, Bob Gilder and Orville Moody also tied the listed course record of 64 while Rachels and Wayne Levi each shot 65.

Irwin and Rachels, a 28-year-old who has won only $27,000 in four years on the tour, shared a one-stroke lead over Leonard Thompson, Gilder, Levi, Mike Brannan and John Schroeder, tied at 134. Brannan and Schroeder had second round 66s, Thompson a 68.

Lee Trevino, who has made only one bogey in his last 110 holes, was next at 66-135.

"I'M PLAYING AWFULLY good right now," said Trevino, who tied for second last week in New Orleans. "It remains to be seen how well I'll hit the ball over 36 holes. That's a lot of golf. I've played four weeks in a row and I've been flying all over the country playing pro-ams and filming commercial in between.

"But if you can get in the hunt, you kind of forget how tired you are."

There were 10 others at 136, leaving 17 men within three strokes of each other going into the last day's play.

Player shot a 68 for 139 and Arnold Palmer had his best round of the year, a 67, for 140. He was five under par for the day until he three-putted his 16th hole, missing a second putt of less than two feet.

39-foot Putt Helps White

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Donna Horton White sank a 39-foot birdie putt on the 18th green Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after the third round of the Women's International Golf Tournament.

Her par 72, carved out partially in a persistent drizzle, gave the West Palm Beach, Fla., pro a 54-hole total of three-under-par 213.

One stroke back at 214 were Donna Caponi Young, a co-leader with White going into the third round, and Nancy Lopez, last year's LPGA Player of the Year and leading money winner.

Lopez had a 71 and Young, despite a bogey on the first hole and a double-bogey on the second, came in with 73. Bonnie Lauer, with 71, was at 215.

Lopez was the only one of the second-round leaders to actually pick up a stroke in the third round. She had two birdies and a bogey.

U.S. Women Top Soviets

MADRID (AP) — The top-seeded United States pushed past the Soviet Union today and advanced to a fourth consecutive year in the finals against Australia in the Federation Cup, the women's international team tennis championship.

Chris Evert Lloyd, fighting for her 121st consecutive singles win on clay, struggled to defeat Soviet veteran Olga Morozova. There were 14 service breaks before the newly married Evert Lloyd finished it 6-4, 8-6.

Tracy Austin steamrolled her Russian opponent, 20-year-old Natalia Chmyreva, 6-0, 6-1. Chmyreva, bothered by a failing backhand, tried to score by rushing the net, but could not endure the relentlessly steady baseline game of the 16-year-old Austin.

Rangers, Montreal Triumph

From AP Dispatches

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — When the referee permitted a disputed goal by Mike Kaszycki of the New York Islanders Saturday night, New York Rangers right wing Anders Hedberg sat and steamed on the bench.

"I was almost feeling that they'd taken two goals from us in this series, why even play it anymore? Why not just give it to the Islanders?" said Hedberg.

Referee Bryan Lewis had disallowed an apparent score by the Rangers' Dan Murdoch in Thursday night's 3-2 overtime loss to the Islanders. And Saturday night, when referee Dave Newell allowed Kaszycki's tally to stand — giving the Islanders a 2-2 tie — Hedberg saw the need for action.

He took that action 13 minutes later, lifting a 15-foot backhander over Islanders' goalie Billy Smith to give the Rangers a 4-3 triumph in the pivotal fifth game of the best-of-seven series.

When Hedberg's shot settled into the Islanders' cage, another thought crossed his mind.

"I said, 'Thank God. I hope this is the winning goal, 'cause I don't want to play another overtime.'"

Montreal, 5-1

MONTREAL — Guy Lufleur struck for a pair of goals 25 seconds apart in the first period and Ken Dryden stopped 21 of 22 shots as the Montreal Canadiens defeated the Boston Bruins, 5-1.

The victory gave the three-time defending Stanley Cup champions a 3-2 lead in the semifinal series, with the next game scheduled for Boston Tuesday night.

Wayne Cashman's goal 1:28 from the final buzzer spoiled Dryden's shutout.

Lafleur masterfully deflected a shot by Montreal defenseman Guy Lapointe past Boston goaltender Gilles Gilbert at :35 of the opening period. The Canadiens took the ensuing faceoff and rushed into the Bruin zone, with Larry Robinson taking a shot from the point.

Lafleur captured the rebound of Robinson's shot in front of Gilbert and his shot bounced crazily past the Boston goaltender.

Robinson made it 3-0 at 19:02 with a slap shot through Gilbert's legs from the left point.

Rustlers Take Third In State

FREMONT — Greg Holland, Al Fimlaid and Gerhardt Kiessling each set schools records in their respective events to help Golden West College to a third-place finish in the State Community College swim finals here Saturday at Ohlone College.

Kiessling recorded a 1:54.29 for third place in the 200 fly, while Fimlaid's all-time personal best in the 200 back (1:59.47) was good enough only for sixth place.

Holland was also in a tough race. His 16:29.14 broke a school record for the 1,650 free but it only got him ninth place at the state finals.

Jeff Amman also scored points for the Rustlers, clocking 2:13.16 to take eighth place in the 200 breast.

Golden West's 400 free relay team also shined, taking third with a 3:12.66.

Diablo Valley was a runaway winner in the team competition with 493 points to second-place Foothill's 231. Diablo Valley swimmers took first in five of the seven events Saturday.

Two Orange Coast College swimmers fared well at the state's ultimate JC competition. Steve Lacey placed 12th in the 100 free with a 50.57 and Steve Braun took 11th in the 200 fly at 2:01.22.

For Saddleback College, Buzz Harper, Dave Bora and Pat Flood each garnered points.

Harper was 10th in the 200 back at 2:01.73, Bora placed 11th in the 200 breast (2:14.74) and Flood finished eighth in the three-meter diving with 366.6 points.

The women's JC competition, for the first time run concurrently with the men's, was won by Santa Rosa while Saddleback and Orange Coast finished 10-11 and Golden West was 20th.

Pirates Win Again

OCC Crew Dominates

Orange Coast College won its second straight Palmer Cup Saturday in the 18th annual Newport Regatta on North Lido Channel in Newport Beach.

The OCC crews captured four of the five races they entered, but still managed only a one-point victory over UC Irvine in the final Palmer Cup standings.

The standings are named for the late P.A. Palmer, a Newport Beach man who donated time and money to further the Orange Coast College crew program. Points are awarded for placement in the six races.

UCI won the freshman four handily, with OCC taking second, but Orange Coast's crew was the dominant force in the JV eight, the freshman eight, the second freshman eight and the varsity four.

"I'm very pleased with the way we went out an took control," said OCC Coach Dave Grant. "I was a little concerned because we had some illness in our JV eight last week."

Because Orange Coast is only a two-year school, the Pirates were ineligible to enter the varsity eight race but they grabbed points in every other competition.

UCI might have secured a Palmer Cup victory for itself had the Anteaters been able to win that varsity eight race, but Long Beach State nullified that possibility.

The Anteaters led for the first 1,500 meters, but Long Beach State made its move in the final 500 meters and won in a close finish.

In the JV eight, Orange Coast led from start to finish to notch its 10th victory in 14 years of competition at the Newport Regatta.

OCC's JV eight now sports a 17-3 record and has yet to lose to a west coast crew. Two of the defeats were against Harvard, the other to Northeastern.

Orange Coast's solid showing Saturday may install the Pirates as the favorite in JV eight and frosh eight at the prestigious Western Sprints May 19-20 at Lexington Reservoir.

Track Roundup

Finns Snap Marks At Fresno Relays

FRESNO (AP) — Two weight men from Finland, Markku Tuokko in the discus and Reijo Stahlberg in the shotput, got in the best throws in the world this year in their specialties at Saturday's West Coast Relays.

Stahlberg moved to sixth place on the all-time shot put list and Tuokko claimed the eighth best discus mark. Both broke their own Finnish national records and also bettered meet records.

Tuokko won the discus with a toss of 223-6, and the throw would have been longer had it not hooked sharply. Stahlberg had a 71-2 on his second shot put attempt.

STAHLBERG SHATTERED

Al Feuerbach's meet record of 69-11¼ set in 1973.

Asked if he had been bothered by a brisk wind blowing here, Stahlberg grinned and said, "It's okay. Everything's okay."

Tuokko's throws were smooth and seemingly effortless as he twice broke the meet record of 216-9 and exceeded 214 feet five times. He used a borrowed discus because his was found to be slightly too light.

"I'm quite satisfied," the 27-year-old Tuokko said of his third throw, which bettered his 220-6 national record set last Saturday in a meet at San Jose.

Also in sparkling efforts were ex-Marina High star Gary Blume and UC Irvine's Terry Fink.

Blume, competing for Cal, was third in the 3,000 meter steeplechase at 9:03.7. Fink was third in the 800 meters with a 1:56.7 clocking.

Bruins Perfect

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Top ranked UCLA capped a perfect season Saturday night, defeating crosstown rival Southern California 12-15, 15-12, 15-11 and 15-7 to win the NCAA Volleyball Championship before 6,124.

Gauchos Dominate

Finals of the Mission Conference tennis tournament were dominated by Saddleback College Saturday, and Rich Sebti topped it off by beating teammate Mark Alba in the singles championship and earning Player of the Year honors.

Over in the Southern California Conference finals, Golden West's Mark Harding and Kurt Lynott reached the doubles finals before bowing to a tandem from Rio Hondo, which hosted the tournament.

The SoCal Conference girls' tourney at Lindborg Racquet Club produced an all-Golden West final as Kati Bird beat teammate Laura Rice in the singles championship, then teamed with Rice to capture the doubles crown.

Harding and Lynott were 6-2, 7-6 losers in the men's doubles final, while Bird downed Rice in the women's singles final 6-3, 6-0. The Golden West girls captured the overall team title easily, with 34 points.

McEnroe, Borg Vie

DALLAS (AP) — John McEnroe, who advanced to today's final of the World Championship Tennis classic against Bjorn Borg, credited his straight set semifinal victory over second-seeded Jimmy Connors with sticking to strategy.

"I knew I couldn't beat Jimmy trying to slug it out with him," said the 20-year-old from Douglastown, N.Y.

McEnroe said his game against Borg would be patterned after his successful play against Connors. "I'll not let up and I'll make him win his points. His service is his forte but I'll not play defensive tennis," he said.

"I know I must play my best tennis against John," said Borg "I know his game and he knows mine. I feel that if I am to win I must handle his service."

BEAT THE GAS CRISIS WITH A SUPER SAVER REACTOR!
Guarantees you more miles per gallon
Money Back Guarantee

The SUPER SAVER REACTOR contains two systems for improved fuel efficiency. During acceleration and at turnpike speeds, the first system opens a valve and pulls in fresh air. Before, your engine was choked with fuel. Now it's getting the correct mixture.

The second system heats the incoming fuel, letting the carburetor do a better job of mixing air and gas. Result: A vapor that will burn more easily and more completely. You get more power from every gallon and every gallon goes further. We promise a mileage increase or you get your money back. Many owners have reported increases in excess of 30%.* This SUPER SAVER REACTOR is a new, improved version with over 300,000 of the original on the highway today.

The SUPER SAVER REACTOR sells for only $59.95. It works on cars, trucks, and motorhomes, and if you're the sort of handyman who can do basic repairs, you can install the SUPER SAVER REACTOR with tools you already have, in approximately 30 minutes. Or you can have it installed at your local service station. (Sorry, it can't be used on diesels or on engines with fuel injection.)

Incredibly Priced At Only $59.95
Pays For It Self in Just a Few Tankfulls of Gasoline

In California, complies with vehicle code section 27156 for 1979 and older vehicle engines greater than 140 CID, except for the following—1) Three-way catalyst w/feedback system, 2) Fuel injection systems, 3) Variable venturi carb. systems, 4) Chrysler lean-burn systems.

Roger Bannister

4-minute Mile: 25 Years Later

LONDON (AP) The solo trans-Atlantic flight of Charles Lindbergh. The scaling of Mount Everest. The first moon landing. The four minute mile.

All events to conjure with. All events that grabbed the world. All events in which mankind watched man do the impossible.

But today, the 25th anniversary of his historic run, Sir Roger Bannister's famous annual party for three will not take place.

ROGER BANNISTER

THE GREAT BRITISH runner will be in Norway attending a medical conference. So the usual get-together with Chris Chataway and Chris Brasher, the friends who paced him for his epic performance on May 6, 1954, is off.

"We have met on this anniversary every year until now," said Bannister, now 50. "It is a pity we have to miss it this year of all years. I have always said the part played by those two was just as important as mine."

Bannister was the hero of a generation of schoolboys, who thought cracking the four-minute barrier was almost as impossible as flying to the moon.

These days every top international miler runs the distance in less than four minutes and thinks nothing of it. But Bannister, the long lean man with the seven-foot stride, was the runner who made it possible 25 years ago.

"ON THAT DAY in 1954 I knew I had broken a psychological barrier for other athletes as well as myself," he said in a recent interview. "They no longer had to wonder whether it was possible. Instead, there was the perpetual target of a new world record.

"There is no limit to the time in which the mile, or any other set distance, can be run. Records are made to be broken. They can be pushed lower and lower."

Bannister has been Sir Roger since 1975. Queen Elizabeth knighted him for his driving enthusiasm as chairman of the British Sports Council, which plans government financial aid for sport.

He once gave some advice to milers about what they should do when their running careers were over.

"Find something more difficult than running the mile," he told them.

HE HAS LIVED UP to that advice himself. He deliberately cut short his athletic career to be a doctor and has become a distinguished figure in British medicine, a specialist in nervous diseases and consultant neurologist at three London hospitals.

He declared he lost all his competitive urge when he retired from running. He used to jog around a park every morning to keep fit and for pleasure, but that ended when he severely injured an ankle in an automobile accident in 1975.

NOW HE PEDALS a bicycle. "Just for fun," he explained. "I don't race, of course. But I go fast enough to get winded."

He is still long and lean, 25 pounds heavier than when he ran his famous mile.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, Bannister disciplined himself to push his body to the verge of breaking to smash the four-minute mile barrier. Now he advises a gentler form of exercise.

"It should never be a form of self-punishment," he said. "It is very important that exercise should be something enjoyable. It should not be some boring routine you force on yourself for fear of coronary disease."

As a doctor and a famous athlete, he has been one of the most dedicated opponents of anabolic steroids, the artificial sex hormones which athletes use to build up their muscles and body weight.

"It is very, very wrong," he said.

BANNISTER LIVES in a quiet upper middle class square in Kensington with his Norwegian born wife Moyra and their four children.

Erin, 22, works as a post-graduate at the Royal Academy School of Drawing and Painting. Clive, 20, is studying politics and economics at Oxford University. Thurstan, 18, has been studying in the United States and will go to Oxford soon. Charlotte, 15, is still at school.

Romine Slams Sailors

FV Tunes Up for Playoffs, 11-1

Fountain Valley put the crowning touches on its Sunset League baseball championship by blasting host Newport Harbor, 11-1, in the final game of the campaign Saturday.

Kevin Romine smashed a grand slam homer to highlight a nine-run uprising in the fourth inning for the Barons. Romine went three-for-three with five RBI and two walks.

Pitcher Dennis Cowan improved his record to 9-1 and carried a no-hitter into the fifth inning before Newport Harbor finally snapped the spell.

After the no-hitter was spoiled, Fountain Valley Coach Jim Dunn lifted Cowan to save his arm for the CIF playoffs which open Friday.

Newport Harbor's sole run came in the bottom of the seventh when Clark Smith homered.

Joining Romine as an offensive star for the Barons was Jon Ramirez, who went two-for-two as Fountain Valley wrapped up its league race with an 11-4 record.

In other baseball action Saturday:

Huntington Beach 4, Marina 3

Huntington Beach finished up Sunset League action on a winning note by scoring four times in the first inning, thanks to a two-run double by winning pitcher Shawn Cisco and RBI singles by Mike Balliet and Kevin Asbra.

Cisco struck out seven and walked four in going the distance.

Both clubs are headed for the CIF 4-A playoffs with Huntington Beach finishing second to champion Fountain Valley and Marina in the No. 3 slot.

Ocean View 11, Loara 2

The Seahawks, who finished in a tie for third place in the Empire League but missed the CIF 4-A playoffs due to a losing record against Cypress, concluded the season with a pasting of cellar-dweller Loara.

Chris Schulz had a double and three singles in four appearances at the plate, Doug Irvine and Eric Hungerle each doubled and singled and Jeff Fitzhugh, a junior on the mound for the first time this season, showed a promising future.

Fitzhugh retired the heart of Loara's batting order after relieving in the third inning with no out and two runners aboard, struck out five in five innings of relief and allowed only one baserunner in gaining the victory.

Mater Dei 9, Pius X 2

Playoff-bound Mater Dei ended up in second place in the Angelus League race by scoring seven times in the first two innings and coasting to an easy victory over host Pius X.

Tom Baine knocked in two runs, scored twice and went two-for-three for the Monarchs, while Steve Brady also contributed two hits and an RBI.

Greg Brown went the distance, scattering six hits and only running into minor trouble in the fourth, when Pius X scored its two runs.

Saddleback Storms Past Riverside, 6-2

Bruce Welz doubled home Paul Bethke to cap a three-run rally in the first inning Saturday and help Saddleback College coast to a 6-2 victory over visiting Riverside in their final Mission Conference game of the season.

Welz went two-for-four Saturday, while Ruben Candelaria and Doug Fritz also collected a pair of safeties. Fritz finished the conference campaign with a team-high .388 average. He also led the squad in RBI with 27.

UCLA Hosts Cubans Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) Today's UCLA invitational will be an exercise in athletic diplomacy, and it should also be one whale of a track meet.

Cuba has sent eight of its outstanding athletes, and the United States' best with the 1980 Moscow Olympics on their minds will be on hand. The appearance will mark the Cubans' first track competition in the U.S. since 1961.

"Any Los Angeles track fan who misses this meet is out of his mind," said UCLA track Coach Jim Bush.

The meet will feature a number of outstanding events, but the 110-meter hurdles, pitting the three fastest men ever at the event, looms as the best.

RENALDO NEHEMIAH, who has a pending world record of 13.16 seconds, and Greg Foster, with a best of 13.22, will face Cuba's Alejandro Casanas, who held the world standard of 13.21.

"I think we will make a world record," said Casanas. "It will be a hard race, since Nehemiah and Foster are both very good."

But Nehemiah, who has a 6-2 edge over Foster in previous outdoor meetings and has beaten Casanas twice, doesn't think there'll be a world record.

"Everybody expects it to be the best time ever, but it might be more of a strategic race," said the University of Maryland star. "It will be more of a psych game, the U.S. runners versus the Cuban."

The mile will have a different international flavor, with UC Irvine product Steve Scott, America's best, dueling Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland.

Taste, Trends: Blend

By JUDITH OLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Bagpipe music by Glen Thompson of Redondo Beach officially signalled the opening of a new store in Costa Mesa, Jaeger Sportswear Ltd.

The British house features woolen garments for men and women.

Jaeger (pronounced with a soft Y sound), is noted by some persons for its classic look, but Rodney Johnson, president of its North American operation, said he doesn't like the term "classic" because "it is so overdone and misunderstood. Classic is the ability to blend good taste with contemporary fashion trends."

Jaeger introduces several color lines each year for both men and women, then offers a range of garments and textures to coordinate. This season's colors for women are wild orchid blue, wild rose, wild violet and wild rice. For men, there are blues, neutrals and brights.

Styles include blazers, tailored skirts and slacks, coats, sweaters, blouses, skirts and softer, more romantic matching pieces for women.

Jaeger was founded 90 years ago by I. R. S. Tomalin, who introduced the company's philosophy that it "dresses ladies and gentlemen" and does not "sell clothes."

Tomalin, the story goes, was a fan of "Dr. Jaeger's Sanitary Woolen System" which was based on the belief that animal hair, more specifically wool, was healthier and longer lasting than any manmade fiber.

Tomalin so believed this theory that he once dumped all his family's underwear and linens onto the street and set fire to them. He later replaced all the items, the story goes, with garments made of fine wool taffeta.

The company claims to have been the first to introduce camelhair to England at the turn of the century and then, in 1934, to pioneer color coordination in women's clothes.

Today there are 65 Jaeger shops in Britain, 15 in Europe and 23 in North America.

Blood Pressure Tests Offered at Hoag

Periodically, we check the oil in our cars then add a quart or two to keep things rolling smoothly. That diminishes the chances of something drastic happening to the auto.

Similar preventive maintenance can be practiced when it comes to our own bodies. By having our blood pressure checked regularly, the reading can signal the doctor any problems that might be occurring so proper action can be taken.

Free blood pressure clinics will be offered as a community service by Hoag Memorial Hospital Presbyterian in conjunction with National High Blood Pressure Month and National Hospital Week.

The clinics will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, May 7 through 10, in the hospital's main lobby. Parking will be available in the physicians' parking lot located near the hospital's main entrance.

Audio-visual presentations about hypertension (high blood pressure) will be shown, and many free brochures discussing its dangers and treatment will be available.

The clinics will feature registered nurses conducting the simple, painless test and advising any person with abnormal blood pressure reading to see his physician. There will be physicians on hand for informal consultations.

The service is sponsored by The 552 Club, men's support group; The Sandpipers, women's support group, and Hoag Hospital's Auxiliary.

The clinics will focus attention on the potential dangers of high blood pressure, its simple treatment and the necessity for those with the condition to stay on their prescribed treatment.

Tail of Woe: Are Dog's Days Numbered?

Cheryl Romo

My children and I have grown up together in any number of rented houses and apartments. Most of our landlords, as they are prone to do, frowned on the idea of our having pets.

This attitude is understandable when you consider animals are apt to cause significant damage to shag carpets, screen doors and foilage — though I am convinced not as much as some adults.

Still, even if we were not supposed to have pets, my children refused to understand that they were not to love animals and bring them home when they were found homeless, abandoned or injured.

One time my son, then about 8, discovered a seagull with a broken wing on the beach in front of our apartment.

He kept the bird hidden in a cardboard box on the back porch for almost a week as he tried to nurse it back to health.

Finally he came to me for help. We took the seagull to the animal hospital where the veterinarian said there was no hope and the bird had to be put to sleep.

In a brave show of manhood, the boy insisted on remaining in the room and then put his bird back in the cardboard box and took it home for burial.

Through the years our homes became temporary havens for lost dogs, sick frogs, assorted cats — and once a little gray alley cat with a crooked tail who promptly gave birth to a whole litter of kittens with crooked tails.

About five years ago, we finally found a landlord who would officially let us have a dog. We discovered Peter, a sort of blond cocker spaniel, at the Humane Society and brought him home.

Along the way we also acquired a friendly guinea pig, who takes walks on a leash made of string, and uncounted numbers of goldfish.

Last year when I remarried and we moved into our own home without a landlord for the first time, a black Labrador retriever named Augie, my husband's dog, became part of the family.

Now for the problem. About a week ago my daughter found a snow-white puppy — not more than five or six months old — frolicking in the street near our home.

Fearing the gentle, playful animal — who looks like a miniature Samoyed or a German shepherd — would be struck by a car, she brought him home.

The pup had no collar or license tag to identify its owners. So my daughter began an immediate canvass of the neighborhood. She had no luck.

Then she made posters and placed them on corners hoping to attract whoever had lost the puppy, who was by now playing happily with Augie and Peter.

When this produced no results, I placed an ad in the paper hoping to find the owners. So far, we have received no response.

Meanwhile, the children — instead of being discouraged by the situation — are growing happier by the day with this lovable new addition to the family.

They are seriously beginning to discuss whether to name him "Vodka" or "Snow" or "Cotton." Simultaneously, my husband is seriously suggesting that perhaps the pup was not lost at all, but deliberately dropped off in our neighborhood.

Each night he suggests we immediately take the dog to the pound.

I find such an action unthinkable — even though I know we certainly don't need another dog, or the expense that goes with having one.

By this morning, the matter had reached crisis proportions with my husband stomping out saying, "Do you want that dog to go to the pound or do you want me to go to the pound?"

Well, here I am blissfully preparing to celebrate my first year of marriage and I am faced with a dilemma of mammoth consequences.

Who goes to the pound? Or, will the real owner PLEASE stand up?

Perils of Borrowing

It's another one of life's greatest mysteries.

The moment your kids borrow something from you . . . it is never the same again.

I have a phonograph that I've had for years. OK, so it doesn't bounce the sound off of every wall, but I can hear Andy Williams and Frank Sinatra on it well enough.

My kids used it at a party one night because it was plugged into the living room wall and ever since then it rejects any record that isn't rock and there's only one volume level - the one that causes sterility.

It was the same with my hair dryer. They borrowed it and now it keeps blowing and drying even after the switch is turned off. As for my clothes, by the time they're returned, most of them are not recognizable. The sweaters are stretched, the colors faded, buttons and snaps have fallen off, and they have developed permastains for which there is no known cure.

The car is probably the worst. There is something contagious about a teenage driver for which a car has no antidote. The moment they climb inside and insert the key, the transmission goes into failure, tires turn bald, and the battery with two years left on a three-year guarantee goes dead. The gas tank turns to sponge, pointing the gauge to E when it hits the garage.

The list goes on and on. They return luggage with bent frames that will never close again, let alone lock . . . cameras which when focused make every subject look like a Rorschach test . . . binoculars that will never again enjoy the protection of lens caps.

You would think the theory would work in reverse, but it doesn't. A man in Highland Heights, Ohio, recently asked to borrow his daughter's baseball glove for a game with some friends.

She threw him the glove and added, "It's okay to use unless it's a hot, sweaty day. When it's hot and sweaty, the bubble gum which has been in the index finger for two years, runs down your finger and into your hand. If it bothers you, just pick at it with your teeth."

Whatya wanta bet when he picked all the gum off and the glove fell apart, his daughter said, "You've ruined my glove and now you'll have to buy me a new one."

Kids put quite a price on their lifestyle.

The groom graduated from Costa Mesa High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Vogt of Costa Mesa.

Punishment Should Fit Crime

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was a teenager I wrote you a nasty letter. Now I need some advice and am ashamed to ask. I hope you will help me.

My 17-year-old son, Ed, "took" my car without permission. He went to play basketball. Driving conditions were hazardous and Ed had an accident. He wasn't hurt but my car was laid up for two weeks and cost $380 to repair. I grounded the boy for one month.

I'm divorced. My ex-husband, a minister in North Dakota, heard about the incident and phoned to say I was unreasonable.

Now, one week later, Ed announces that he is old enough to make his OWN decisions. He left the house to meet friends.

Now that he has openly defied my authority, what should I do? — BIG Q.

DEAR Q.: Stick to your position. But in the future, don't impose unduly harsh restrictions unrelated to the misdemeanor.

Withholding privileges — driving, allowance, etc. — would have made more sense than trying to lock the boy in the house for 30 days. P.S. You might also tell your ex-husband that since he isn't on the scene to help discipline the boy, you'd appreciate it if he didn't undermine your efforts.

Series Taps Authoress' Roots

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Brodie is, in a sense, at home for the first time in a Scottish television production of Muriel Spark's 1961 novel, "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

It's a proper fit, for the often eccentric Miss Brodie was indeed most comfortable in Edinburgh, the city she called "the Athens of the North." And despite Ms. Spark's own rather ambivalent attitude toward Edinburgh, her hometown, the author insisted that the first television production of her novel be filmed in Scotland.

"I THINK the production gained tremendously by being made in Scotland," said Geraldine McEwan, who plays Miss Brodie in the six-part adaptation, to be broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service beginning Monday night. Some say it could have been 26 parts.

Episodes follow at weekly intervals, but date and time may vary, so check local listings.

"I lived in Scotland for six months while it was being made," Miss McEwan said in a telephone interview from London. "Of course, we used Scottish actors, and most of the girls in the school — most of them were not actors — lived in Scotland. It really did seem to create a special atmosphere.

RICHARD BATES, WHO PRODUCED the series for Scottish Television Ltd., agreed the locale was an influence, albeit one difficult to define.

"There is a great deal of atmosphere there to work with. Edinburgh and Glasgow are remarkable cities.

"As you know, whenever you do a major project like this," says Bates, "you wonder if you have captured the feeling you want."

JAY PRESSON ALLEN, who wrote the screenplay for the 1968 motion picture and was a consultant for the TV production, said she had rejected a number of proposals to film the novel for television, "because none offered the chance for authenticity.

"The film was made with great love and attention to detail," she said, "and still and all. . . .Clearly there is some quality of ambience of the place that is not attainable outside Scotland."

SCOTTISH ATMOSPHERE PREVAILS
Geraldine McEwan Plays Jean Brodie

In this most recent production, that quality is tangible in Scotland's stony gray exterior. It is rooted, too, in the country's conservatism, particularly in education and religion.

"THE PRIME of Miss Jean Brodie," perhaps could have been written only by a person raised in that environment. Born in 1918 in Edinburgh and educated there, Muriel Spark moved while still a young woman to Central Africa. She spent World War II in England, and since then has lived in London, New York and, now, Rome.

"It was Edinburgh that bred within me conditions of exiledom," she once said.

Consider then, "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" in that light.

JEAN BRODIE, APPROACHING 40, joins the staff of the Marcia Blaine School for Girls. From the start, she rattles the school's foundations with the assertion that young women need to know more than the basics.

She offers her girls a new world of art, music, literature and politics. "Give me a girl at an impressionable age," she says, "and she is mine for life."

It is 1930, a troubled time in Scotland as well as the rest of the world, and a particularly painful period for the romantic rebel obsessed with the Italian arts.

"IT'S A FANTASTIC ROLE," said Miss McEwan, a distinguished actress in her own right, "because Miss Brodie's got so many facets to her character.

"It's such a complicated role because of that, and it allows for a different interpretation each time it's done.

"And there was this tremendous sense of reality. We did all our rehearsals in a Victorian school in Glasgow and filmed a lot of the interiors there."

MS. SPARK DID NOT work on the production, Bates said, "but because we were doing it in Scotland, she was so pleased she gave us carte blanche to do as we wished."

"When I read the book and began to break it down . . . well, had we done the 26, we probably could have done 13 more," Bates said.

"The characters and the way they developed, and Brodie's relationship with the girls. . .fantastic."

Shakespeare's 'Live' at Stratford

STRATFORD, Ontario (AP) — Neither the Stratford Festival nor actor Nicholas Pennell figured to be operating in Canada this summer. But the festival, which has set a worldwide standard of stage excellence, opens its 27th season on June 4, when Pennell begins his ninth year with the company.

NICHOLAS PENNELL

Before the 13-play extravaganza closes Nov. 4, some 650,000 persons will jam into the company's three theaters to watch works by Shakespeare and other playwrights.

THE FESTIVAL has come a long way since Stratford born journalist Tom Patterson decided that this Canadian city should, like its English namesake, have a Shakespearean festival.

His idea struggled to life in 1952 for a six-week season when Sir Alec Guinness headlined two Shakespeare plays.

The festival, now a $6 million operation, employs more than 600 people and stages some 400 performances a year.

PENNELL, AN ENGLISHMAN who came here eight years ago for what he thought would be a single season, has witnessed, and contributed to it.

"My feeling was that what was happening in the theater, certainly in Britain, wasn't as exciting as the possibility of what would happen here," Pennell said in an interview.

"Really, professional theater has existed for only about 25 years in this country. It's very young, with a great way to travel. But I think there is more exciting work available here than perhaps anywhere else in the English-speaking world.

"I think it was one of those remarkable things of a man having an idea at exactly the right moment. It's now the second biggest tourist attraction, after Niagara Falls, which is an extraordinary thought."

PENNELL was an established actor before moving to Stratford, but his seasons here have sharpened his skills and given him new goals.

"I had done no Shakespeare until I came here, and now I've done 15 or 20 here, and that's a tremendous experience to get in oneself."

Pennell will star in two Shakespeare plays this summer — "Richard II" and "Othello" — as well as Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest."

"ONE OF THE BEST things of being at Stratford is that is is a repertory company," says Pennell. "In other words, we play one play on Monday, another on Tuesday, and maybe another on Wednesday. One never gets locked into one show. The challenges are fresh.

Pennell is deeply involved in Stratford's development of a new generation of actors. Canada's only major drama school, the National Theater School in Montreal, takes only 30 students a year, "and because of that, companies like Stratford take on kids and let them learn by observation and by practice," says Pennell.

Stratford's reputation means that the young hopefuls learn from the best actors.

During the off-season, Pennell takes a small company around the United States, staging productions and conducting workshops for university drama students.

"What that does, then, is allow what I think is one of the three best theaters in the English-speaking world to go out to the students who are training for the theater.

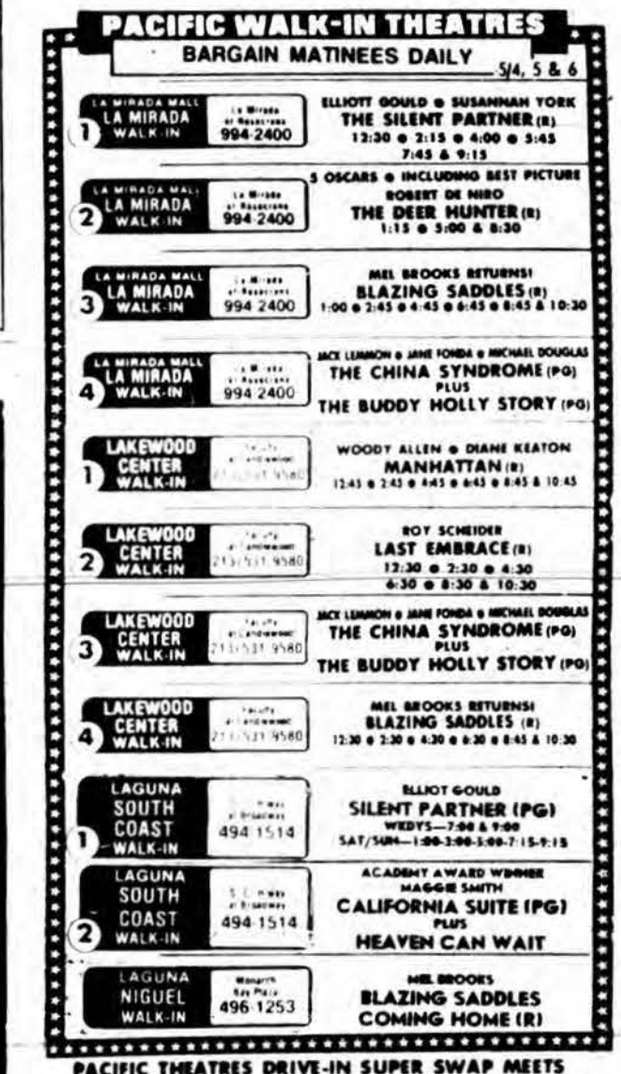

"The experience between live actor and a live audience cannot be preserved because it doesn't exist beyond the moment that it happens."

Game Makers Hit Hard Times—At Last

In '29 when the stock market fell apart, people were jobless and broke, things were bleak and the future looked dark indeed.

Except, of course, when everyman (or woman) became an instant millionaire while playing Monopoly.

WELL, THINGS ARE GETTING tough again, only this time the shortage is gas, not cash, and games are enjoying a comeback. After all, when you can't go anywhere because all the service stations are closed, you can at least take a few loops around Boardwalk.

According to those who sell them, Monopoly and Scrabble are still selling very well indeed, but a new batch of time fillers are on store shelves as well.

Sam Hamo, proprietor of Gamesmanship, a specialty store in South Coast Village that stocks all manner of the usual and unusual games, says many new items eliminate player vs player competition that brought triumph and tears to Monopoly players.

Fantasy sets are near the top of the list, says Hamo, especially a game called Dungeons and Dragons. It has no board, spinners or cards. A game master sets out an imaginary dungeon, through which other players try to move.

What makes it exciting is that the route is populated with monsters and other evil fantasies provided by the players—"who can decide to confront or avoid the monsters they create."

IF THEY DO BATTLE and "live" the players may keep the treasure hoard the dragon protects.

War games are doing well too, he said, especially one called Squad Leader. "It's going to stay popular because the supplier (Avalon Hill) is going to provide new boards and situations each year."

And there are the simulation games, which have players refight classic battles of the past and fanciful battles of the future. "There are at least 200 of them in the shop."

Of course, he added, all the classic old games like Chess, Backgammon, even Mah Jongg and Dominoes are being revived. Feeding the revival is the realization that most have adult-level rules that often are ignored by child players. The more complicated rules put strategy and a lot more variety of play into the games.

HAMO ALSO SAID MANY people are acquiring closets full of games, adding another as the pleasure of the one before fades.

And, the electronic age has made a firm foothold in the industry. "They are the most popular," he said.

One chess set pits a player against a small computer. Other games offer quizzes, simulations of sports and... well, you'd have to play 'em to believe 'em.

Lew Herndon, president of the Ungame Company, (see story below) said one of the nice things about the gas shortage is that it's forcing families to stick together more.

"With my son playing ball, my daughter at modeling school, my wife's job—and I have mine—at best we just meet in one place to sleep."

With empty tanks to thank, the family now spends its time involved with each other, often as not, over a gameboard.

Non-winner's Going Strong

ORANGE COUNTY BUSINESS Of The Week

By THOM LECOQ
Of The Daily Pilot Staff

In 1971 Lew Herndon began operating his audio visual business, providing training films to health care specialists.

At about the same time, Rhea Zakich was having trouble with a throat infection that left her unable to speak for more than three months.

THE TWO didn't know each other then, but within a few months their lives and successes were tightly linked.

It was all due to a personal communications game Mrs. Zakich devised out of frustration at being unable to talk to her children. She called it the Ungame.

The point of the Ungame is to draw cards with personal questions and to reveal oneself as much as you dare to other players.

MRS. ZAKICH made the first sets for family and friends, but soon, more people wanted them. She eventually offered it to major game producers, but they all said no.

She had 1,000 made up for promotion but got frustrated and quit, deciding the Ungame was unmarketable. The samples were thrown away.

But one found its way to Herndon, a youthful fellow at the time, who decided this was too good to pass up.

Since then, the Ungame has sold more than half a million copies, and is moving into the ranks of Monopoly, Scrabble and other evergreens.

THE AUDIO visual side of the business is minor now, he said. "Now the tail is wagging the dog."

The company's limited resources forced him to move slowly, selling a few in Orange and Los Angeles counties through school markets the audio visual business opened.

Then teachers, who played the Ungame with students, began taking it home to play with friends . . . who started asking toy stores if they carried it . . . who started calling Herndon to ask for inventory.

"WE SORT of backed into the toy industry," he said with a smile. But those days are over for good. K Mart, "which is one of the biggies," decided last week to stock the Ungame on a regular basis.

As the company has grown, so has its plant. It started in a garage and now has offices at 1440 S. State College Blvd., Anaheim.

"I'd like to say that it was all due to my marketing prowess," he added, "but I'm not sure I can say it with a straight face."

BUT SELLING a one-item line is almost impossible today, he adds more seriously, "we've done it on the strength of the product alone."

The one-product days are now gone. Herndon's company has five other games, most non-competitive like the Ungame (there is no winner or loser) all use boards and bright packages so they stand out on store shelves.

Herndon pulled out an early carton which was green and drab. "The first 50,000 went out like this. I used to go into toy stores and couldn't spot them on the shelves myself."

MRS. Zakich, on the Ungame staff as a consultant who travels and promotes the main product as well, has co-invented another game, Reunion, which is presently being marketed.

Players roll dice, pick cards that probe feelings, fantasies and knowledge of other players' personalities, and there is a spinner that asks you to recall childhood experiences. "It's the best spinner in the industry," said Herndon, demonstrating the two-part, black plastic device that whirled like mad when flicked lightly.

Another game, Space Shuttle, was co-designed with Rockwell International. That firm's engineers produced the "missions" printed on cards which players must accomplish in paper shuttles.

"IT'S FUN and also educational," said Herndon. "People really don't understand how important and valuable the Shuttle is."

Chess II is another more competitive product. A conventional chess board on one side, the other board surface has been "melted" so squares take on shapes and proportions.

The melted board "really makes you pay attention to your moves."

AND, THERE is Social Security, which isn't about getting a check every month, said Herndon. It's about relationships and keeping them open and strong.

A new game, Roll a Role, lets people try on different personalities and lives—at least for the duration of the game.

None of the new games is a match for the sales of the Ungame, said Herndon, " The odds of a new game being successful are about 18,000 to one, in fact, I'd be inclined to up those odds knowing what I do now."

The odds revision comes from his attempt to broaden the line.

"IT TAKES a lot of tenacity to develop a full game line." Among the problems is reading the 10-or-so letters from game inventors that roll in each day.

"Most companies won't even accept outside ideas; they have their own internal development programs but we do accept ideas (although I'll get 20 more letters a day by saying this)."

Game inventors sometimes stuff letters with sad stories.

Government's Files on You Open to Exam

By PAT DUNN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A U.S. Bureau of the Census employee started it all in 1890, with the invention of punch cards to record a person's name, address, age, sex, and other personal data for electronic counting. Some form of mechanical tabulation was necessary even then to add up this nation's comparatively sparse population of 63 million, as required by the Constitution.

TODAY THE FEDERAL government has an average of 18 files for each person in the United States. About 7,000 data banks have information on 3.8 billion identifiable persons, even though the U.S. population was estimated at 218 million in 1978.

Three agencies operate more than half of the government's information systems. The Department of Defense, with its vast work force, intelligence gathering and contracting activity, has 2,219 systems, with 321 million different names. The Department of the Treasury maintains 910 systems, with 853 million names, for its tax collection, alcohol and firearms registration and Customs Service. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which handles the Social Security Administration and student loan programs, has 693, with 1.3 billion names.

Approximately half of government records on individuals are used to evaluate government programs and determine benefit eligibility. The rest are maintained to collect taxes, enforce laws, defend the country, and disburse money.

THE PRIVACY ACT of 1974 discourages exchanges of personal information among federal agencies and regulates data collection. Federal agencies or outsiders can get federal records about individuals only under these circumstances:

— With the individual's consent.

— In response to a court order, a request by Congress, or a specific written request from the head of an agency for law enforcement purposes.

— To the Bureau of the Census, to the National Archives; or to a researcher if individuals are not named or otherwise identified.

— To another person, in "compelling circumstances affecting the health or safety of an individual" (if the information is limited to the last known address).

Business Dream Rides a Van

When Jim Thompson rolls up to attend his Orange Coast College business classes, he does so in his own customized office coach.

Even though he presently uses it for doing things like accounting class homework, he hopes the hand-crafted vans will become a full-time business.

HIS OFFICE on wheels, which is built within a once-wrecked van he bought for $750, is a pretty plush space. Overstuffed chairs in special fabrics cozy up to a desk with soft overhead lights. A small sink with running water is set in the top of the table opposite.

The floor is plush pile carpet in colors that match the upholstery and walls are walnut panels that run floor to ceiling without a seam.

A stereo built in over the desk whispers soft music—or plays back dictation from the cassette machine up front.

OVERHEAD, A cooling unit pours comfortable air into the van and mini-blinds keep the sun's glare out.

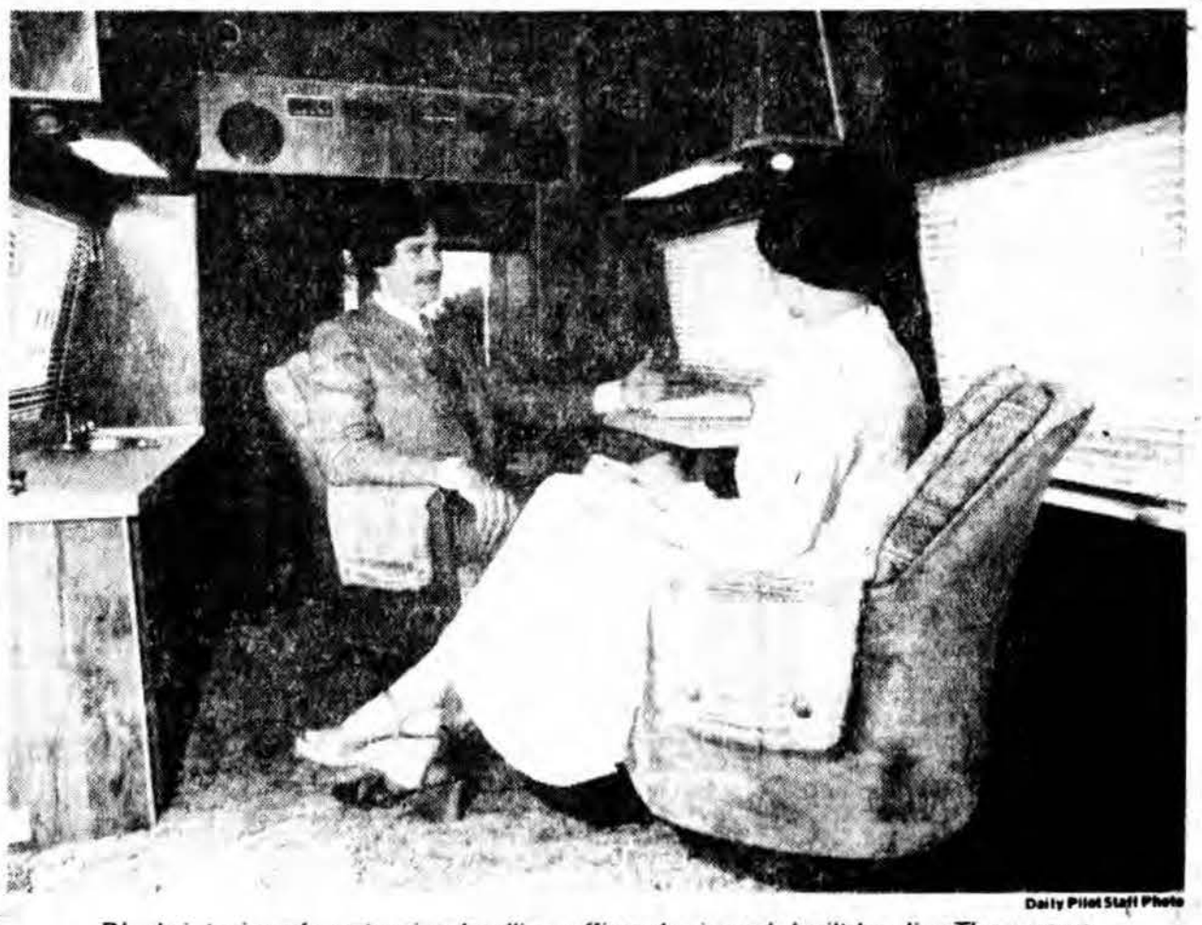

It is all just the way Thompson wants it. Just the way he thinks a computer salesman or builder might want a mobile office to look and feel. Elegant. Efficient.

"This project has been in the works for two years. I've gone slowly so I wouldn't fall on my face," said the slender 30-year-old from Fountain Valley.

WHY SO much care? Because Thompson wants to turn his van idea into a full-time business. He calls it Executive Custom Coaches, and he thinks the business world is ripe for the efficiency his vans offer.

"A salesman makes several calls on a customer now before being able to close. But in a van, he (or she) could make one trip...isolate the client in a nice environment and show the whole line of business machines or other merchandise."

Vans can be customized to meet requirements of specific businesses, with huge tables and deep file cabinets for plans for a builder, lots of shelves for a salesman or even with a built-in console for a computer firm.

Plush interior of customized rolling office designed, built by Jim Thompson

THOMPSON HAS a crew of friends ready to build the units, with plans for them to complete each van from start to finish.

That, he said, will assure pride in workmanship and higher quality. The crews will sign their work and pay for any required reworks.

His pursuit of this business is the result of a teacher's admonition that if you are a real motivator, "you may as well do what you want — and like — to do."

That and an earlier shock of hitting age 25 without having definite plans jogged Thompson into building his prototype van and organizing his business.

Make no mistake, the young man does mean to succeed.

After obtaining financing for conversion of his rebuilt '76 sample van, he kept calling on his banker. Eventually, the loan officer stepped outside to look over the project.

He liked it enough to offer bank financing of future conversions for clients.

A second bank has offered to finance purchase of the converted units for his customers.

A SHOW of faith is nice, said Thompson, but a show of money is more likely to change his hoped-for business into reality.

Leaning back in a soft chair, his three-piece suit's vest a bit limp on his narrow frame, Thompson said his first objective is to land a contract for a dozen or so vans at prices ranging from $15,000 to $25,000 each, depending on the accessories.

"We'll stick to the best quality equipment," he said, "so it can be serviced anywhere."

BUT THAT'S just the start. The young entrepreneur's vision goes much farther down the road.

"Eventually, I'd like to set up a mobile service company to do tune ups, oil changes and service in the field so a company can keep it's people on the move— after all, that's where the sales are made."

With the interview ended, Thompson climbed into the driver's seat and pulled away. After all, if he wants to land that first big order, he has to keep on the move.

Careful Drillers Free of Mishaps

Industrial accidents are inevitable.

And nowhere more so, safety experts agree, than in oil drilling where inherent hazards posed by well and rig lead to the loss of many man hours every year.

LITTLE WONDER, then, that oilmen and safety experts are surprised to learn that a team of Aminoil workers in Huntington Beach has gone 25 years without a lost-time accident.

They are members of Aminoil's Petroleum Engineering Test Section (PETS). They have racked up a record that delights Aminoil's Western Division manager, Bill Donnelly, who readily admits that he still finds it hard to believe.

"You can be lucky for a year, or even a few years," he said. "But nobody working under these conditions is lucky for 25 years. It's just not possible to achieve this kind of a first class safety record without a lot of thinking ahead and looking out for No. 1 — the individual."

JOHN MARTIN, who heads the PETS team, thinks the record is the result of the team's professionalism.

"These people are real pros who have pride in what they are doing because they know how important their work is. The test data that we provide is critical to the engineers who determine how the best wells can be produced."

PETS team members daily use all types of heavy, unwieldy tools in areas of high pressures and high temperatures — classic conditions for those who regard industrial accidents as inevitable.

It only takes a momentary lapse of concentration or the failure to get the right grip on the right tool at a given moment.

BUT THERE HAS been no such lapse in 25 years.

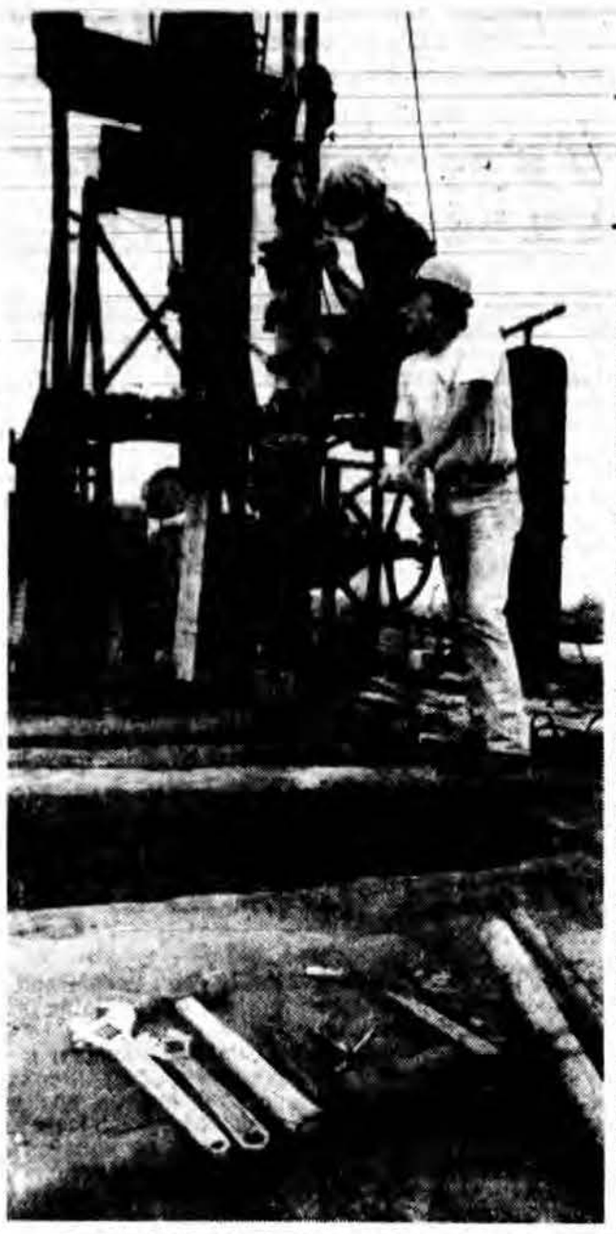

Perhaps PETS employee Tom Leiker put his finger on the reason behind the incredible safety record.

"When we're out in the field," he said, "we're working for each other as much as we're working for the company."

Martin agrees. And he pointed out that 21 present and former PETS employees have contributed to the record over those 25 years.

But can it last?

"I don't know," Martin said. "But I'll tell you this. We're making plans for a 30-year celebration."

Future Scientists Pick at Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Real-life bionic women and men, people talking to computers that have consciences, a solution to the energy crisis and a cure for cancer. These are among the advances some of the nation's top junior scientists expect to become realities before the end of this century.

The predictions were made by 40 high-school seniors who met in Washington recently to receive scholarships and awards for original scientific-research projects as winners in the 38th annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

"BIONIC WOMEN and men are distinct possibilities," said 17-year-old Patricia M. Sandborn, who attends Fort Collins High School, Fort Collins, Colo. "However," she added, "I wouldn't want the concept used to replace people, only to replace body parts. And certainly not to replace parents."

For her winning project, Ms. Sandborn developed a theory to explain why some flying insects can generate more lift than others, concluding that butterflies are the most efficient fliers and flies the least efficient.

She plans to study biomedical engineering at Tulane University, but she feels technology may be moving too fast. "Problems cannot be solved by technology. They have to be solved by people," she said.

IN CONTRAST, Bertha M. Olazabal, 18-year-old senior at Hialeah Miami Lakes Senior High School in Hialeah, Fla., views the rapid pace of technology as a challenge to scientists.

She speculates that by the 21st century, "We shall have control of genetics. Also, we shall be living in a computer world, communicating with computers to help solve our problems — including computers into which consciences have been programmed."

FOR HER winning project, she established a quick and reliable test to identify endothelial cells (the cells that line internal body cavities). For a career in either medicine or biochemical engineering, Ms. Olazabal will attend the University of Miami.

Ron K. Unz, the 17-year-old winner of the first-place $12,000 scholarship, foresees "mechanized, almost completely automated homes and the disappearance of cash through the use of universal credit cards."

Unz, top student in his class of 650 at North Hollywood High School, Calif., believes that a solution to the energy crisis may be forthcoming. "If a great deal of effort is expanded," he predicts, "nuclear fusion may be accomplished by the turn of the century.

"Nuclear fusion is the way the sun and other stars generate energy," he explains. "In the sun, this occurs billions of times every second, and scientists are now trying to duplicate that process to furnish a viable energy source on earth."

The original research project submitted by Unz relates to the possible effects of gravitational fields on electromagnetic interactions. After further study at Harvard College, he is planning to be either a theoretical physicist or mathematician.

"Cancer will be licked soon. It's inevitable," said John P. Karis, 17-year-old from Durham, N.C. His winning entry was the development of an electronic safety device he developed at the Charles E. Jordan High School there.

HIS INVENTION has been used successfully during open-heart surgery at Duke University Medical School Hospital.

"For a complete health evaluation and medical diagnosis, the patient of the future will either have a light beam passed over his or her body or place the hand into a liquid," he says.

"The sky's the limit," says Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, professor of chemistry, University of California at Berkeley and winner of the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1951. He also serves as president of Science Service, the non-profit organization that administers the $89,500 in scholarships and awards of the Science Talent Serch program.

"THERE WILL be great advances in molecular biology that should get right at the basis of life itself," Dr. Seaborg said. "There will be great developments in devices, bio-engineering, artificial organs, and maybe even artificial kidneys and artificial hearts. Just fantastic things."

GOVERNMENT FILES. . .

For a "routine use" of the record "for a purpose compatible with the purpose for which it was collected."

The Privacy Act also permits the release of information about individuals if required under a separate law, the Freedom of Information Act.

THAT LAW gives citizens the right to see documents and other materials used by the government to conduct its business, except for certain materials including "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

The Freedom of Information law doesn't prohibit the government from releasing materials that would invade someone else's privacy; it says that there is no requirement to release such information if the agency chooses not to do so.

You have a legal right to examine any records kept by a federal agency that may be retrieved by your name or other identifier, such as a Social Security number. The exceptions are most Central Intelligence Agency files, active investigatory files held by law enforcement agencies, Secret Service files used to protect the president, classified documents, and certain military promotion records.

YOU HAVE a right to take an adviser with you when seeing your record and a right to a copy.

You also can dispute information in the file. The government agency, within 10 days, must make the correction or notify you that you may have the information you questioned reviewed by the agency.

If the reviewing official appointed by the agency refuses to make a change, then you are entitled to submit a "concise statement setting forth the reasons for disagreement." This statement must accompany your record at any later disclosure.

All of this can be done by mail, if you prefer. There's also nothing to stop an agency from destroying a personal record, but not AFTER you've asked to see it.

CHECKING YOUR personal identification records sounds impossible, but it's not that difficult. Look in the "Federal Register" catalogues for the name and address of the official responsible for individual access to the data bank that interests you. Another source of names and addresses is the "United States Government Manual," available at most libraries. Here are the data systems affecting most persons:

Social Security Administration Health Insurance Master Record, under Title XVIII of the Social Security Act. Write to: Director, Bureau of Health Insurance, 6401 Security Blvd., Baltimore, Md. 21235.

SOCIAL SECURITY Number Holders. All 240 million of the records include previous employers, earning records, and addresses. Send your number, or date of birth, place of birth, or parents' names to: Assistant Bureau Director for Systems, Bureau of Data Processing, Social Security Administration, 6401 Security Blvd., Baltimore, Md. 21235.

Medicare Enrollment Records, including records on 22 million persons enrolled in the Medicare program. Send your claim number, Social Security number, maiden name if female, and date of birth to: Assistant Commissioner for Research and Statistics Social Security Administration, 1875 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Room 1121, Washington, D.C. 20009.

INDIVIDUAL MASTER Files of Taxpayers, plus intelligence, audit, and special files kept on taxpayers. Write to the Internal Revenue Service Center for the region in which you live, as listed on your tax forms. If you feel that your name is included in special files in Washington, write to: Internal Revenue Service, Privacy Act Officer, Washington, D.C. 20224.

National Driver Register. Check to see whether you are listed as a driver whose license has been withdrawn by writing to: Systems Manager, Room 32141 Trans Point Building, Second and V Streets S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590.

FBI National Crime Information Center, including criminal histories, stolen automobiles, and missing persons; and the FBI Central Records System. Write to: Federal Bureau of Investigation, Privacy Act Officer Hoover Building, Washington, D.C. 20535.

VETERANS' AND Dependents' Identification and Locator System, including veterans or dependents who have applied for pension, compensation, education, insurance, or burial benefits.

Write to the Veterans' Administration Center nearest you. Include your claim number if possible, otherwise military identifying information. For Patient Medical Records, write to the Veterans' Administration health care facility where you were treated.

Basic Grant Application File, U.S. Office of Education records on students applying for or receiving federal grants. Write to: Director of Basic and State Student Grants, Room 5678, ROB-3, 400 Maryland Ave. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20202.

Guaranteed Student Loan Program, files on applicants or recipients. Write to: Director, Program Systems Division, Room 4051, ROB-3, Seventh and D Streets S.W., Washington, D.C. 20202.

It's No Gas

Effects Spreading

After the first few weeks of gasoline shortages, side effects are beginning to be felt in some odd areas.

A spokesman for a car rental agency in Costa Mesa said, "Don't use our name please, if people think we're having trouble getting gas, they won't rent from us."

THE AGENCY DOES have gas, he went on, but the supply is being strained by outlying offices which formerly used gas stations to full up rentals, but now must go to the main office for fuel.

And, people bring cars back with empty tanks, he added. No one wants to wait in line for fuel someone else will be using.

"One customer asked if he could get his rental refilled at our pump. I had to say no, so he said he'd return his present car and check out another — with a full tank."

Ford Brown, owner of Ford's Auto Service in Costa Mesa, said he's been booking as many tuneups "as I dare" for people who are trying to stretch mileage.

"I HAD SOMEONE WHO drove his Cadillac to Tucson last week and got only 8 miles per gallon. He brought it in to see if it could be improved." A tuneup would boost that to 12-14 miles per gallon, he said.

"But the average driver doesn't drive to save gas." Brown said rushing from light to light ". . .is an easy 2-3 miles per gallon extra."

His business is being boosted by people willing "to spend $100 if they can just improve mileage."

His tuneup man received the largest check of the past year last week, he added, while the engine specialist's workload is down.

SEVERAL BODY SHOP and tow operators say they haven't seen many cars damaged in gas station fender benders, but expect them soon as tempers get shorter than lines.

Pacific Telephone said people apparently aren't substituting calls for travel, since total system usage isn't showing any increase. . .yet.

County Finds New Firm on Fortune 500

One of the most notable report cards for business is the Fortune Magazine annual ranking of the 500 largest industrial concerns.

This year's rankings, in the issue currently on newstands, provides evidence that California has lost some of its charm for business.

ACCORDING TO home bases provided in the listings, California gained only one company in the top ranks of industrials, Smith International, of Newport Beach.

Northern California had 16 of the top firms last year, but that dropped to only 14 this year.

Southern California, on the other hand, gained. The 1977 list reported 22 headquarters in the region. The new tally reports 24. Orange County had 2 listed.

BAKER International, based in Orange, number 301 last year, moved up to the 272 spot this year while Smith International moved from just off the list (No. 502) to a healthy No. 445.

Baker International also had the highest 10-year record of total return to investors at 19.92 percent, a bit more than Butler Manufacturing at 19.76 percent.

Baker earned its spot with sales of $919 million, finishing with a net income of $77.1 million (rank 179).

SMITH International hit the list with $451.7 million in sales and net income of $52.1 million, which put it in the No. 246 spot in that category.

Smith managed to outshine Baker in one area, however, its total return to investors for 1978 ranked 53rd while Baker's performance placed it in the No. 60 spot.

Inventor Involved

Game Reveals People

Rhea Zakich's life is like one big game . . . or rather, Ungame, which she invented as a way to open up communications within her own family.

That game is now a staple, more than 500,000 copies have been sold, and millions have answered the questions on the cards enclosed in those sets in the process revealing themselves in ways that surprise and occasionally delight Mrs. Zakich.

ZAKICH

HER ROLE as consultant to the Ungame Co. keeps her in touch with players through the mail, personal contacts at conventions and in neighborhood play.

Children, she says, often offer the best responses.

"I remember one child's answer to the card 'Describe joy?' He said, 'It bubbles up inside you and comes up in the shape of a smile.'"

At a coffee klatch, a 3-year-old begged to join the ladies in the game. When they finally relented, the card asked "Describe peace."

"WHY THAT'S when you break off part of something," the youngster explained. It was an answer that made many of the women more patient as they explained things to their children, says Mrs. Zakich.

There are serious reactions as well.

She says one elderly woman in a convalescent home used to get angry that everyone who came in asked how the food was, told what exciting things they were doing, then left. The woman never got a chance to share in the talk.

"THEN CAME the Ungame," the woman wrote. "Now she gets to share from the storehouse of her memories."

And there is the tale of two Fullerton teen agers whose parents died in a recent automobile accident as the youngsters slept in the back seat of the car.

"A friend told me later that the family had played the Ungame a week before the parents died, and a card came up asking what kind of funeral the mother wanted.

"The mother said, 'one thing for sure, I want it to be a joyous celebration.'"

THE SUBJECT of death might never have come up in a family setting, says Mrs. Zakich, but because it did, the two were able to actively plan their parents' memorial service and seemed to recover quickly from the incident.

Mrs. Zakich says it isn't the Ungame, but the relaxing of taboos against telling what you really feel that makes these touching moments happen.

UNGAME SUCCESS. . .

"I've run across people who mortgage their homes, quit their jobs to have more time to promote a game.

"MOST TOYS sold are aesthetically pleasing, dolls are pretty to look at for example, but games all have boards, the boxes are the same and you can't sell them on price unless they're a staple like the Ungame.

"The thing with a game is that it has to have good graphics, be appealing, aimed at the market — but with the best selling games, the reason for playing is hidden. It's the experience of playing that counts."

The experience of the Ungame, according to people who enjoy it, is very personal. Its rules suspend normal bans against saying what you REALLY feel.

Answering question cards can reveal a lot. Lew Herndon's answers to the following, for example:

Q. Talk about the best day of this past week.

A. "THERE were two highlights; one was when I found out K Mart put us on it's regular game program. The second, probably more important, was yesterday on the Salton Sea with my family. I had a super day with them."

Q. What is likely to cause you to blow up?

A. "Too many things!" (a self conscious laugh cuts into a long pause. . .) "let me just leave it at that."

Q. What makes you feel proud?

A. "Seeing my kids grow up to be well thought of, respected people, and secondly, to see our business grow and provide jobs for people who may not have found a place they liked to work before."

Group Buy May Be Fine

By ROBERT J. BRUSS

Many people would like to invest in real estate for the tax shelter, operating profits, and resale inflation hedge. But they don't have time, sufficient capital, or know-how. For them, group investment in a "property syndication" can give all the benefits of owning real property investments but without the management headaches.

A property syndication is a group of two or more investors who pool their funds to buy one or more properties.

THE MOST COMMON syndicate ownership form is a limited partnership. That means a general partner, usually the syndicate organizer, locates the property to be purchased, raises the money to buy it, manages it for a fee, and then shares in its operating profits and resale profits with the limited partner investors.

The limited partnership offers syndicate investors most of the advantages of corporate real estate ownership, such as limited liability, but without the drawbacks such as double taxation of profits and no pass-through of tax losses to the investors.

Limited partners pay only their agreed contribution, often as little as $5,000 or $10,000. If the partnership should turn out badly, as many have, no further assessments can be made upon the limited partners.

THE PARTNERSHIP PAYS no income taxes. But a partnership tax return is filed and each limited partner reports his share of the partnership profits or losses on his personal income tax returns.

While most of past real estate limited partnerships have been successful, there have been some spectacular failures. The key to property syndication success depends on two factors: (1) the property and (2) the syndicator's management ability.

While past success is no guarantee of continued good fortune, it is an indication of probable future results. Therefore, the importance of carefully investigating the syndicator's track record cannot be over-emphasized.

Before investing in a property partnership syndication, always read the offering prospectus closely. Except for very small limited partnerships which are exempt from registration with state authorities or the federal Securities and Exchange Commission, a prospectus must be given to each prospective investor.

SOME LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS are blatantly unfair to the investors if the general partner-syndicator takes big "front end" organization fees, but many limited partnerships are more than fair to both the investors and the syndicator-organizer. If the syndicator receives most of his profit when the property is sold, perhaps in five to ten years, then he will have a continuing interest in the property's success.

Before investing in a property syndication, seek expert advice from an attorney or tax adviser to be sure all the benefits claimed for the syndication really exist. An excellent new book explaining property syndications is Martin Hussander's "Real Estate Syndicator's Manual and Guide," Second Edition, Prentice-Hall 1979, available at larger libraries and bookstores.

Real Estate Mailbag. . .

By ROBERT J. BRUSS

DEAR BOB: Please tell me there is something I can do to get out of selling my home. About three weeks ago I placed a newspaper want ad advertising my house for sale. That very afternoon a nice young man came over, looked around for about five minutes, and then offered to pay my full $65,000 asking price.

I was so happy, I accepted his offer as soon as he wrote it up. He told me he was a real estate broker and that my house would be perfect for his family. I should have known something was wrong as it all seemed too good to be true. The next day I told my neighbor about my quick sale. She told me that I could have gotten at least $75,000 for my house. As I'm going into a retirement home, I could use that extra $10,000.

Is there any way to cancel my sale? My attorney says no.

Clara McG.

DEAR CLARA: If your attorney can't find any loopholes in your sales agreement, there probably isn't any legal way to get out of your contract to sell. The buyer could sue you for specific performance if you refuse to deliver the deed as agreed.

The fact that the real estate broker probably had superior knowledge about your home's true value is no reason to cancel the contract. Unless there is evidence he took advantage of you, since the broker wasn't your agent he had no legal duty to tell you the real value of your home. Perhaps your mistake can be a warning to other do-it-yourself home sellers.

No Tax Due on Conversion

DEAR BOB: If we move out of our home and rent it to tenants, will we owe any profit tax which we deferred from our previous home-sale when we bought this house?

Richard M.

DEAR RICHARD: No. Conversion of your home to rental status is not a taxable event. The postponed tax becomes due when you sell your home.

Seller Not Required to Pay

DEAR BOB: We have "pre-qualified" for either a Veterans Administration or Federal Housing Authority home loan with a local bank. Our problem is getting a seller to sell us a home we like. It seems they all refuse to pay the "loan fee" demanded by the lender. Isn't there some law prohibiting discrimination against buyers?

Yasko M.

DEAR YASKO: While there are laws prohibiting mortgage loan discrimination on the basis of race, creed, national origin, and age, there is no law which can force a home seller to pay the loan fee for your FHA or VA mortgage.

FHA and VA mortgage lenders charge loan fees to raise the low, government-set interest rate (9.5 percent as of this writing) up to market levels obtainable on conventional mortgages. By law, the FHA or VA buyer cannot pay more than a one point "loan processing fee."

For each one point loan fee (one point equals one percent of the amount borrowed), the lender's true yield is raised one-eighth percent. Keep shopping until you find a seller who will pay your loan fee.

Don't be Forced into Insurance

DEAR BOB: The savings and loan association where we are getting our home mortgage "strongly suggested" we buy mortgage insurance. It looks like life insurance to me. Do we have to buy it to get the loan?

Guy M.

DEAR GUY: No. Some mortgage lenders try to get you to buy life insurance which will pay off your home mortgage if you die. You do not have to buy it to get the loan. However, don't confuse this with required "private mortgage insurance" if you are getting a loan for 90 or 95 percent of the home's value. Such PMI insurance protects the lender and is required by law.

Lenders Inflating Prices?

DEAR BOB: You often say that home prices go up faster than the inflation rate. I'm wondering if this is due to the "easy money" offered by mortgage lenders. Do you think that rapid rise in home values is due to generous mortgage loans?

Gerald R.

DEAR GERALD: Yes. Morgage lenders are at least partly to blame for the rapid escalation in home prices. If lenders were more conservative in their appraisals and not so anxious to make mortgage loans, home prices wouldn't escalate so rapidly.

To maximize profits, lenders must make new mortgage loans. And to get these loans, they must make liberal appraisals otherwise the business goes to their competitors.

Before our runaway inflation of the last few years, lenders often made home appraisals at less than the sales price. But those lenders soon found they weren't making loans. Now the lender usually asks what is the sales price and the appraiser is instructed to make the appraisal justify the loan needed.

Threat Isn't Really a Loss

DEAR BOB: We live in a new subdivision where, every spring, the land behind our home slips a little more down a hill. While our house isn't in danger, we are losing some of the open space each year as it slips down the hill. We've tried everything to stabilize it, but due to underground springs, it is extremely difficult. Is there any way we can get a tax deduction for this threatened future loss?

Sue M.

DEAR SUE: Your expenditures for capital improvements to stabilize the hill behind your home should be added to your home's cost basis. When you eventually sell, your profit will thereby be reduced.

I can't think of any tax deduction for your expenditures to prevent a possible future loss of the sliding hill on your property. Tax deductions for casualty losses are allowed only for actual "sudden, unexpected, or unusual" events which have occurred. The threat of a possible future loss isn't sufficient. Your tax adviser has more details.

AMERICAN STOCK EXCHANGE
Week's and Year's High, Low, Close

COPYRIGHT BY The Associated Press 1979.

Sales figures are unofficial.

The 52-Week High and Low columns show the highest and the lowest price of the stock in consolidated trading during the preceding 52 weeks plus the current week. u—Indicates a new 52-week high. d—Indicates a new 52-week low.

s—Stock split or stock dividend amounting to 25 per cent or more since January 1, 1979. The 52-week high-low range and dividend begin with the date of split or stock dividend, and do not cover the entire 52-week period.

n—New issue since January 1, 1979. The 52-week high-low range begins with the start of trading in the new issue and does not cover the entire 52-week period.

Unless otherwise noted, rates of dividends in the foregoing table are annual disbursements based on the last quarterly or semi-annual declaration. Special or extra dividends or payments not designated as regular are identified in the following footnotes.

a—Also extra or extras. b—Annual rate plus stock dividend. c—Liquidating dividend. e—Declared or paid in preceding 12 months. i—Declared or paid after stock dividend or split up. j—Paid this year, dividend omitted, deferred or no action taken at last dividend meeting. k—Declared or paid this year, an accumulative issue with dividends in arrears. r—Declared or paid in preceding 12 months plus stock dividend. t—Paid in stock in preceding 12 months, estimated cash value on ex-dividend or ex-distribution date.

x—Ex-dividend or ex-rights. y—Ex-dividend and sales in full. z—Sales in full.

cld—Called. wd—When distributed. wi—When issued. ww—With warrants. xw—Without warrants. xdis—Ex-distribution.

vj—In bankruptcy or receivership or being reorganized under the Bankruptcy Act, or securities assumed by such companies.

Spending Spree Reaction Mixed Among Analysts

NEW YORK (AP) — The way things are going, you might think the American consumer would be a hero on Wall Street.

By apparently adopting a "buy now before the next price increase" philosophy in an era of rapid inflation, consumers have played a major role in sending the economy into one of its longest periods of expansion since World War II.

The recession that many of the experts began predicting as long as three years ago has been postponed and postponed again. And earnings of many companies have clearly benefited.

BUT IN FACT, stock-market analysts have some very mixed feelings about the consumer spending spree, and the less-than-exuberant behavior of the market lately suggests that many investors share their misgivings.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which dropped 9.10 to 847.54 in the past week, has now been locked in a neutral trend since late March.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, down .62 at 56.76 for the week, also has gone nowhere over the same period.

ABOUT THE ONLY sign of life has been among stocks listed on the smaller American Stock Exchange, whose total market value of about $45 billion roughly equals that of a single Big Board issue, International Business Machines.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Amex market value index reached new highs, before turning downward and closing out the week with a net loss of 1.10 at 182.55.

Big Board volume averaged 29.89 million shares a day, against 30.98 million the week before.

THE COMMON VIEW on Wall Street is that, despite its persistent strength, consumer spending is headed for a time of reckoning before long. And that presents something of a dilemma for the financial community.

The longer economic activity remains strong, the thinking goes, the more inflation problems the country will have. And historically, the stock market is at its strongest not during boom times, but in sluggish periods when investors begin to look forward to a recovery.

"The watchword in Wall Street is 'let's get the recession started so we can get the bull market under way,'" the firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields observed.

BUT A GOOD MANY analysts are not so sure the market is really ready to shrug off a business slowdown once it begins — especially if the decline in activity turns out to be worse than the "soft landing" the Carter administration is hoping for.

A group of analysts at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. said in a recent report: "If, as we suspect, the pace of the overall economy falls off in the second half of 1979, the consumer sector will follow suit; then, some types of spending, particularly for durable goods, should fall sharply."

Real Estate Questions/Comment

By Randall McCardle, Ph.D.
Realtor

How much can the average wage earner afford to spend to buy a house in these economic times?

M.H., Irvine

Some people spend more than they can afford when buying a home. Equally painful is the mistake of buying the cheapest possible house and then suffering through it's shortcomings.

I have no intention of stating how much anyone can afford to pay for a home. This is a very personal decision. There are guidelines of monthly averages that lending institutions use for housing expenses. But like the "height-weight" charts printed on a scale these are only averages. Don't hold back if you feel you can exceed the guidelines. When you are willing and sufficiently disciplined to economize on other expenses, you can get a better home than the average calls for.

A good home may seem costly, but the rewards are well worth it. Investing in a home that's a little more expensive gives you an excellent inflation hedge while your whole family enjoys a better place to live. And often, the resale opportunity is brighter.

Which has greater appeal for impact when a buyer is shopping for a home, the external or internal appearance?

L.C., Costa Mesa

The external appearance of your house has far more impact on a potential buyer than you may realize. You will never get prospects interested unless they stop to look. The interior cannot be relied upon to sell your house because a prospect may never see it. So take a look at the exterior with a critical eye.

Give the house a fresh coat of paint if it needs it. Replace any broken or cracked windows. Fix the fence. Keep the lawn mowed and the shrubs trimmed to give your house that "well-cared-for" look. Make sure your door is in top shape and is inviting with a fresh coat of paint or varnish.

It is common for a hundred dollars worth of improvements to increase the value of a home over a thousand dollars.

Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. He is looking for charm, comfort, location and a bargain. Give him the best show for the money.

Irvine Projects Abound

Gearing up for a busy second half of 1979, Irvine Pacific plans to begin production this year on over 1,500 residences, including condominiums, apartments and custom home sites, according to Roland Osgood, president of the home building arm of the Irvine Company.

In the Irvine Company's Village of Woodbridge, plans for four new projects are under way. Woodbridge North Cove will consist of 300 condominiums on the lake in the northeast quadrant. In the southwest section, Woodbridge Villas will offer 220 townhomes for adult families. Both new developments will offer one and two bedroom units.

Also in the southwest quadrant, Woodbridge Parkview, a moderately priced development, will offer approximately 275 condominiums with one to three bedrooms. Three hundred family and adult units are planned for the Woodbridge Alders Apartments, also featuring one to three bedrooms.

In addition to 76 custom homesites, approximately 158 luxury attached homes are planned for Turtle Rock Crest in Irvine. These spacious homes are designed with two or three bedrooms, and will feature condominium ownership.

Construction will continue on homes in Harbor Ridge, Woodbridge Estates and Woodbridge Gables.

DOUBLE DOOR ENTRY AT ROYAL PRESTWICK IN LAGUNA NIGUEL

Double Doors Featured At El Niguel Heights

A high-ceilinged double door entry provides the introduction to the Royal Prestwick, a 2,569-square-foot home, one of four plans offered at El Niguel Heights in Laguna Niguel.

Open columns separate the contemporary living and dining area from the tiled entry, while admitting natural light from clerestory windows to highlight a sloping ceiling. A wood burning fireplace warms the living-dining area, which opens onto a patio via sliding glass doors.

TO ONE SIDE of the single level home is the bedroom wing which contains four bedrooms and three baths. The master suite has a private bath with two pullman sinks, two mirrored wardrobes, and sliding glass doors.

The kitchen features a bay window breakfast nook and pass-through window to a second patio, as well as a complete selection of built-in electric appliances including microwave oven and trash compactor.

EL NIGUEL HEIGHTS offers four floor plans with 2,040 to 2,945 square feet of living area. These single family homes are priced from $169,500 to $193,500, and overlook the beautiful Laguna Niguel Country Club, with acres of fairways below.

To reach the new Broadmoor Homes development, take the San Diego Freeway to Crown Valley Parkway west to Clubhouse Drive. El Niguel Heights' sales office is open from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Home Value $2 Trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) Privately owned single-family homes in the United States have an aggregate value of more than $2 trillion and represent the single largest category of assets in this country, according to the National Association of Realtors.

And more than one-third of all single-family homes are owned "free and clear," says Donald I. Hovde, president of the association.

Syndication Topic Of Realty Seminar

"Practical Aspects of Small Syndication," a seminar sponsored by the Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley Board of Realtors, is scheduled for Tuesday, May 29, from 8:15 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at South Coast Plaza Hotel in Costa Mesa.

Taught by Duane Gomer, the course has been approved for six hours of continuing education credit by the California Departent of Real Estate. Tickets may be purchased from the Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley Board of Realtors: $45 if ordered prior to May 22; $50 at the door.

Mission Villages

Homes Viewed In San Juan

The Villages of the Mission, a Maurer-Elliott Construction Company development of single family homes in San Juan Capistrano, is holding its grand opening.

The ranch-style homes compose each of the three villages in the project: Belford Terrace, Mission Woods and Mission Springs.

Priced from $129,990, the one and two-story homes offer six spacious floorplans ranging in size up to approximately 3,162 square feet with three or four bedrooms, two or three baths.

THE HOMES FEATURE ceramic tile or wood entries, wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighter valves, and dramatic vaulted ceilings. In some of the models, features include French doors, Inglenook conversation area, built-in wet bar with custom oak cabinetry, and a finished and carpeted bonus room.

The kitchens include a built-in food center with blender and food processor, a 12 cycle dishwasher, cooktop with grill and griddle, a built-in double oven with upper touch-control microwave oven, and disposer.

The family-style kitchens have ceramic tile counter tops, custom oak cabinetry, and wood-framed luminous ceiling. All plans have a separate breakfast nook.

A MASTER SUITE with private dressing area and bath highlights each home and includes mirrored wardrobe doors. Several of the models include a balcony off the master suite. One model features dramatic French doors.

To reach the sales center and the Villages of the Mission, exit the San Diego Freeway at Ortega Highway in San Juan Capistrano. Go east on the Ortega Highway to the new home development. The sales center is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week. For further information, call 661-6714.

WOODBRIDGE GROVE RESIDENTS RELAXING AT HOME

Home Life Sporty

Fun Planned at Woodbridge Grove

"When you live in Woodbridge Grove, you'll want to plan your 'getaway time' at home," commented George McMillen, sales manager of the new neighborhood by Akins Development Company.

"In addition to having eight lighted tennis courts currently under construction, Woodbridge Grove is within walking distance of a variety of recreation amenities, all of which are available for resident's use."

THE VILLAGE OF Woodbridge, master planned by the Irvine Company, features a 30-acre lake reserved for Woodbridge Grove residents for swimming, fishing and boating (sailboats and paddleboats may be rented).

The Woodbridge Beach Club offers a complete, full-time staff of lifeguards, recreation leaders and counselors providing endless association sponsored and family-oriented activities for residents, including Wednesday evening volleyball tournaments and basketball games on two courts.

The 163-single family attached home neighborhood by Akins Development Company offers four spacious plans of one and two stories. Privacy and comfort are the major themes of these deluxe homes, reflected in such construction features as libraries and studies in some plans, a master sitting room in one, and separation of living and privacy areas in all.

PRICES RANGE from $92,900 to $108,900.

The 1,235-square-foot Auburn plan features a master bedroom suite with private dressing area and bath. A secondary bath is situated near a large study. The kitchen with pantry is complemented by a separate breakfast room.

Next is the Bentley, with an ample master bedroom suite that opens onto a private atrium, a secondary bedroom, two baths and library contained within 1,495 square feet of living space on one level.

THE CAMBRIC, A 1,840 square foot plan has three bedrooms, two and one-half baths, and a spacious kitchen with pantry and breakfast room in its two stories. A feature unique to the Cambric is a gallery which is open to the living room below.

Also a two-story plan, the Darby, with 1,987 square feet, contains three bedrooms and two and one-half baths. The stately master bedroom suite not only contains a full size bath but an ample sitting room as well. Downstairs a family room is conveniently located next to the kitchen.

All of the plans contain formal dining rooms, living rooms with fireplace "conversation centers," enclosed two-car garages and laundry facilities.

THE WOODBRIDGE Village Associations, to which all homeowners belong, maintain common areas and facilities.

To reach Woodbridge Grove, take the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to the Culver Drive off-ramp, and follow the signs to the Village of Woodbridge. The Village Information Center is located on the southeast corner of Warner and Culver Drive. Sales office and model homes are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Market Change Reflected

Loans Available, Costly

WASHINGTON — Home buyers this spring are facing a unique set of circumstances — although interest rates are at a record level in virtually every area of the nation, conventional loans for home mortgages are readily available, according to a report issued by the National Association of Realtors.

In its April Real Estate Status Report, the association pointed out that not too long ago high interest rates and tight money were considered as one and the same, but attributed the reversal of this process to the introduction of the six-month money market certificate.

"SINCE THE INNOVATIVE money market certificate appeared, savings and loan institutions are competing successfully for new deposits during a period of rising interest rates," Donald I. Hovde, president of the National Association of Realtors, said. "Consequently, home buyers find themselves with available but costly loans."

According to the survey data cited in the report, lenders also appear quite willing to make mortgage loans to finance condominium resales at terms that are not too different from single-family properties.

"This is in sharp contrast to practices that prevailed just a few years back," Hovde noted. "When condominiums emerged on the American housing market, most lenders were not familiar with the concept and were reluctant to finance individual resales. For a time these restrictive lending practices impaired the marketability and appreciation potential of condominiums, but lenders no longer regard a condominium with uncertainty and apprehension."

THE REPORT SAID ITS survey confirms the availability of mortgage money with respondents indicating that ample-to-moderate financing exists in the single-family transaction market in 80 percent of the nation, with tight conditions in the remaining 20 percent.

Another sign that mortgage money is not being rationed to any great extent is the fact that relatively standard down payments are the rule in most areas.

"The vast majority of respondents to our spring survey," Hovde said, "indicated that lenders are requiring just 20 percent down to obtain an uninsured conventional home loan. In contrast, instances where lenders required 30 percent or more as down payment were extremely scare. Interestingly enough, the downpayment requirements for condominiums were nearly as liberal as those for single-family homes."

THE REPORT ALSO SAID that nearly two-thirds of the survey respondents indicate lenders are requiring a payment of one to two points to secure mortgage loans and in some areas three or more points were the rule.

Virtually every area of the nation has double-digit interest rates with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reporting that the average effective interest rate on a conventional mortgage for purchasing an existing home moved up eight basis points during March to reach 10.47 percent.

"At their current level," Hovde said, "interest rates on conventional mortgages are nearly 1¼ percentage points higher than at this time last year. These mortgage rates are the highest ever recorded by the FHLBB. The previous record was 9.65 percent reached during the peak of the credit bind in 1974."

Solar Development Set for Clemente

Provisions to make a 2,000-acre parcel in San Clemente the largest solar-assisted community in the United States have been announced by Nu-West Development Corporation of Arizona, California land division, the firm developing Rancho San Clemente.

John Belda, senior vice president of Nu-West, revealed details for the solar utilization portion of the specific plan, presently under review by the San Clemente Planning Commission.

Utilizing both active and passive solar assistance techniques, the plan calls for the installation of solar water heating in all buildings of the industrial, commercial and institutional portions of the property.

Merchant builders of the 2,911 residential units will be required to provide the pre-plumbing necessary for solar-assisted water heating. Nu-West is also considering future incentive programs to induce the builders to provide the full solar system.

Condo Conversion Fever Spreading

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — When the buyer, the seller and the bank all like the proposal, you have the makings of a deal, even if it sometimes displeases local government officials.

The deal, in this instance, is the conversion of rental apartments to condominiums or cooperatives. It's been described in some areas as mass hysteria, in others as a fever, and in many places as frantic.

The owner receives more than he would in selling the building as a unit, the buyer gets an inflation hedge; the bank gets to lend money on a secure asset at today's very high interest rates.

A STUDY BY Advance Mortgage Corp. and Citicorp Real Estate calls conversions the hottest sector of the housing boom. Though ignored in official statistics, the number doubled last year to 100,000-plus.

The hysteria occurs in New York City, California and Chicago, the two companies say. Big Manhattan conversions sell out when the offering is filed. In San Diego, sellouts occur while buyers line up.

"In less frantic markets, such as Boston, Minneapolis and Denver, 50-100-unit conversions sell out in six to eight months; in Seattle, in two to four months."

AT THE MOMENT, the party most distressed by conversions are city officials, who fight the trend as a threat to their rental stocks and as a displacer of poor and elderly households.

Others, such as buyers, might be distressed later, when they find, perhaps, that rising maintenance offsets tax benefits. But most seem to feel the immediate benefits are good. Let others fight.

Some fight hard. The District of Columbia permits conversions only of buildings where rents exceed a certain minimum, raised each year. New York requires consent of 35 percent of tenants. Boston and Denver require tenants be given 120 days notice and first refusal rights.

SUCH IMPEDIMENTS do little to stop the practice, and Advance Mortgage and Citicorp Realty estimate the total will reach at least 130,000 this year.

They see the practice growing out of two trends, the demand for ownership by people who used to rent, and the realization by building owners that their return is higher selling than renting.

The desire to own, particularly strong among singles and childless couples, emanates from financial considerations. Tax benefits are one advantage, equity buildup another, appreciation a third.

MARKET VALUES rise sharply in the first year after conversion. "It runs a minimum of 20 percent in most markets and there are some examples of 50 percent and 100 percent," the study determined.

Thereafter, except in Manhattan and some downtown high-rises in other cities, it found, appreciation settles down to a bit less than that on single-family homes.

The second thrust comes from landlords who realize that even in markets with high occupancy they are unable to achieve rent returns that keep pace with costs. Rent controls help exaggerate the trend.

IN NEW YORK, which has rent control, "apartment buildings are worth half again or twice as much as conversional material than as rental," the two companies, both Citicorp subsidiaries, stated.

Another factor might also be involved. The study found that most condo conversions, especially in central cities and in prime suburban sites, are by professional converters.

Some converters are going national, the two companies state. "A California converter operates in five sunbelt states. Chicago converters have acquired quality rental buildings in Atlanta, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Memphis, Tenn., and some 20 other cities."

Newport Seminar

Upgrading Talk Slated

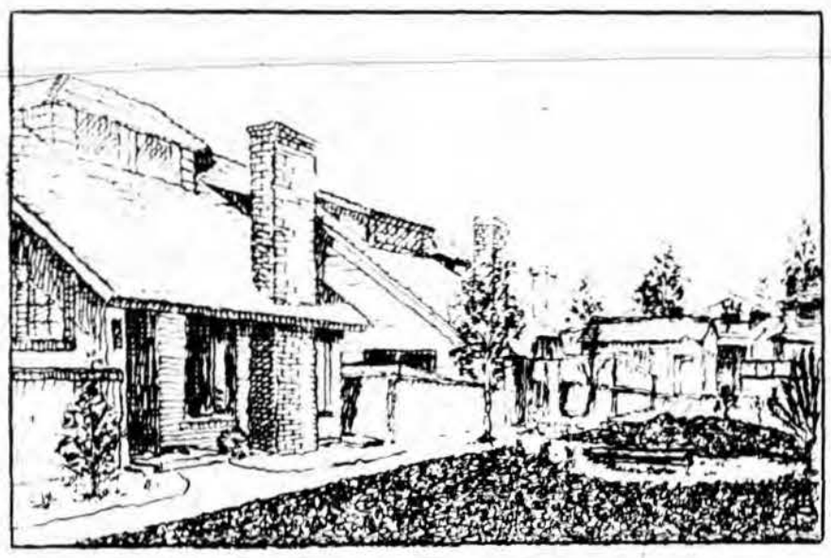

A nationally known specialist in the rehabilitation of income properties will teach a local seminar this spring for the California Association of Realtors.

"Investment Opportunities in Upgrading Older Properties" will feature Loren M. Simkowitz of Bethesda, Md., as instructor June 1 at the Marriott Hotel in Newport Beach.

The course, which is approved for seven hours of continuing education credit by the Department of Real Estate, will cover analysis and acquisition of distressed properties, legal problems of partnership entities and preparation for takeover.

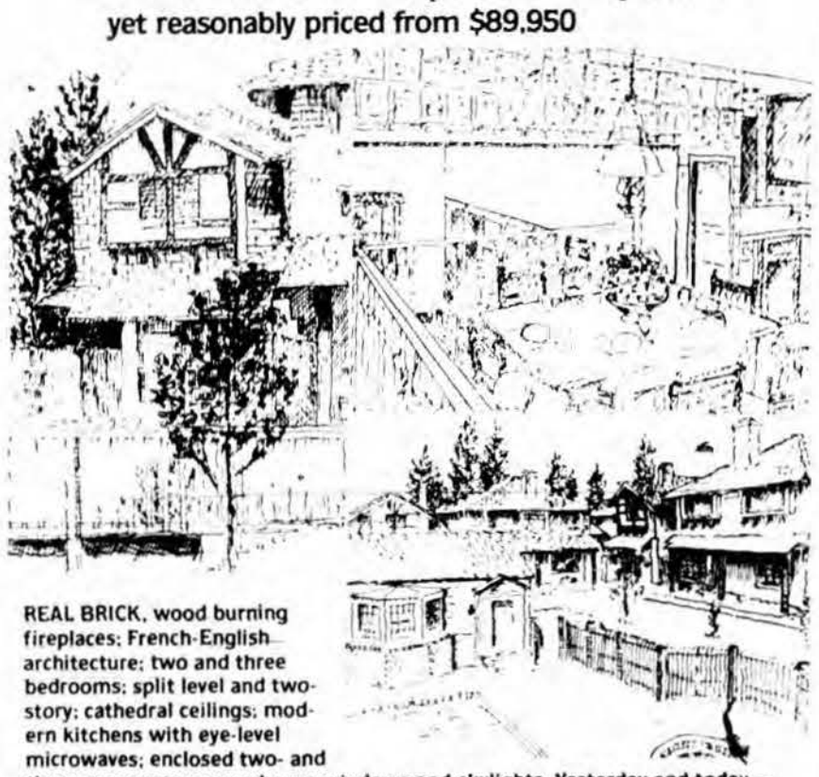

Simkowitz, the president of Monocle Management Ltd., is a professor of the real estate and finance division at American University in Washington, D.C. and coordinator of the real estate program between the Institute of Real Estate Management and the university. He is also a consultant on real estate for Chase Manhattan Bank and the John Hancock and Prudential insurance companies.

Registration deadlines are one week before the course date. Tuition is $50 for CAR Property Division members and $60 for non-members. Checks may be mailed to the California Association of Realtors, Registration Department, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, Calif. 90020.

Ingredients For Investment

Housing prices have gone up steeply since the mid-60's for two basic reasons. First, the shortage of new savings made it difficult to finance private housing, and the number of new housing units built each year was far below that what it should have been. Since there is a steady growth in population, this puts pressure on our housing reserves and prices rise.

Second, there have been inflationary increases in the labor and materials costs that go into building a house. In most urban areas, land values continue to go up each year, too. Historically, real estate values have always increased faster than the cost of living. Thus, it is an excellent inflation hedge.

So here are the ready-made ingredients for a good investment. We all need housing of some kind, and according to the experts, the price of housing will continue to go even higher, though perhaps, not as dramatically as in the past few years.

Dealing direct with California Federal can save you hundreds of dollars on a loan.

It's a question most pool sellers try to duck.

Because financing directly with us eliminates the middle man's loan profits. He stands to lose hundreds of dollars.

But his loss is your gain. And our low interest rates will probably mean extra savings for you.

Before you go pool shopping, call us for a loan commitment. Then you'll be able to compare exactly how much you save.

WAKE UP SLEEPING DOLLARS
Wisdom is having bought property 10 years ago. That statement will still be true 10 years from now! Shouldn't you be thinking of putting some of your sleeping dollars into income property? One of our investment oriented staff can guide you towards making a wise decision.

BAD HABIT?
Putting off property ownership can be disastrous to your future wealth! Give up this bad habit and get some tax savings working for you and some equity building up for you at the same time.

DECISIONITIS
Is "decisionitis" keeping you from buying property? Are you losing money every month and worrying about it? Perhaps we can help you clarify why you can't get your investment planning into motion.

JOIN OUR STAFF
We have a few openings on our sales staff for licensed, experienced, full-time professionals with a dedication to serving their clients and improving their technical expertise. Our clients did extremely well last year and so did our staff who made it happen by averaging $2 million in sales each. Call or write Pat Parkinson.

OVER 100 LISTINGS
As of this week we have over 100 signed listings from condos and houses to multi-million dollar complexes in the office. Call today for an appointment with one of our highly trained staff of over 40. We can help put you on the right track to get your money doing what it should do working for you.

A few selected properties are:

Kennebunkport?
Isn't that the horse that won The Triple Crown in '72?

If you're not sure who (or what) Kennybunkport was, don't feel bad—you're not alone. Kennybunkport is one of 14 distinctively different apartment floorplans at Seawind Village in Huntington Beach. Seawind Village is a result of totally personalized professional planning. The kind of attention you deserve. A perfect blend of nature and living—nestled in a forest with babbling brooks and quiet ponds, cooled by natural ocean breezes. Add to that tennis courts, swimming pools, a jacuzzi and a convenient location near shopping and employment and you've got a place anyone would proudly call home. (Even Kennybunkport!) One and two bedroom, one and two bath adult apartments from $315.00

IBM

Announcing an opportunity to explore the many reasons for joining IBM./San Jose.

We're holding exploratory interviews Saturday, May 12, in Los Angeles.

RSVP (408) 256-1979

Engineers, physicists, materials science people, programmers, designers, technicians: here's an invitation to discuss career opportunities. Come over May 12 for an open, relaxed discussion of the many reasons qualified people should consider IBM.

Professional Advantages

- IBM/San Jose is a peripherals development and manufacturing facility that is a leader in computer technology.
- You'll be teaming up with some of the top talent in your field.
- There's plenty of room to grow. The creative, open environment lets you go as far as your energy, ambition and talent can take you.
- Salary increases are based on merit. And we pride ourselves on being quick to recognize and reward good people.

Personal Advantages

IBM also offers an impressive number of personal advantages. Among them are an outstanding benefits program that includes tuition refund, medical and dental plans; and the campus-like setting of our facility with its extensive recreational facilities.

Tell Mom You Love Her

This Mother's Day send Mom a greeting all the world can share on Sunday, May 13th.

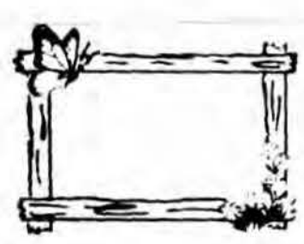

Express your love in a Daily Pilot Mother's Day Greeting.

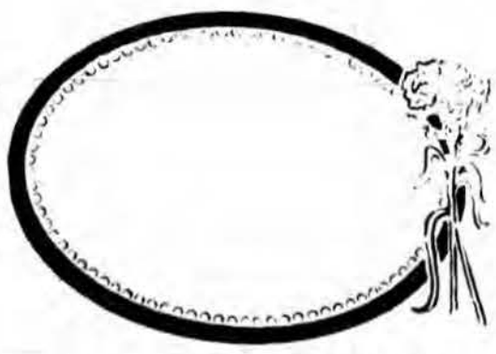

It's easy. Write your message to fit one of our three convenient sizes and bring it to any Daily Pilot office prior to noon May 11th. Or, you may mail a clipping of the border with your message and payment to Daily Pilot, 330 W Bay St., Box 1560, Costa Mesa, Ca. 92626.

$10

If you want help composing a suitable greeting or have any questions call 642-5678. A friendly Daily Pilot ad-viser will be glad to help you.

And, if you like you can charge your Mother's Day ad. Your credit is good with us, or you may use your Master Charge or BankAmericard/Visa.

Ads come in three sizes: $10, $15, and $3 for the speical child's size card. (You must be under 12 years of age to qualify for the littlest greeting). You may fill the entire space. Only words and lines drawn within the design will appear in your completed Mother's Day ad.

DON'T RUN OUT OF GAS . . .
RUN OUT AND BUY A FIAT STRADA TODAY

'79 FIAT STRADA	WAS	SAVE	SALE PRICE
5 spd., AM/FM stereo, bucket seats, 3 door. Demo #84729	$4946	$692	$4254

WITH LESS GAS TO GO AROUND, YOU NEED A CAR THAT GOES AROUND ON LESS GAS.

The new 1979 Fiat Strada gives you better mileage than the Datsun 310 or the gas-powered Rabbit and it costs hundreds of dollars less than either car going in before you even go out. What's more, Strada gives you better gas mileage than the Omni or Horizon, too. An EPA estimated 28 MPG, 41 MPG estimated highway mileage.

Remember: compare these estimates to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on speed, weather, and trip length. Highway mileage will probably be less.

DICKENS, YOU SAY!

In a certain chapter of "The Pickwick Papers," by Charles Dickens, Mr. Pickwick discovers a stone bearing the inscription depicted above. He purchased the stone and took it to London, where it became the subject of much debate, until a scholarly rival exposed it as an amusing hoax.

It may fool you at first, as it did Mr. Pickwick, but with a little puzzling you can read what it says. Which is what?

Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask... Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Coming: more high-mileage cars.

FOR HENRY FORD II, chairman, Ford Motor Co.

Why have car manufacturers stubbornly refused to make a low-priced, high-mileage car so we could buy American-made instead of foreign-brand cars? —Mary N. Rathbun, Micanopy, Fla.

● I believe that in recent years the U.S. auto industry has responded very well to the preference for high-mileage cars. Last year, sales of these "foreign brands" totaled just under two million. So, about three of five of the more fuel-efficient cars sold in the U.S. were made in this country. The U.S.-made cars, in many instances, have become very good values. Today some makes are priced about $1,000 below comparable imports, and, since 1970, many millions of them have been sold. Rest assured, there will be more high-mileage, good-value cars coming from U.S. manufacturers in the months and years ahead.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Can you come up with a list of unusual jobs once held by movie stars? I know already that Charles Bronson was a coal miner and that Cary Grant walked on stilts. —V.K., Fort Smith, Ark.

From coal miner to cowboy

● How about Sean Connery polishing coffins, Sterling Hayden being first mate on a steamer, singer Minnie Ripperton being a receptionist in a funeral parlor? Wayne Rogers' stint as a lifeguard was short-lived; he quit when he failed to save a drowning man. Brenda Vaccaro, who had a weight problem as a youngster, realized she had no future as a candy packer because she packed as much in her mouth as she did in boxes. What we think is the funniest job of all was that held by Johnny Johnson (his new film is Trionic Warrior). He inspected igloos at a furniture show in L.A. His job was to keep the air-conditioning under control, so the igloos wouldn't melt during the night.

FOR GIL GERARD, star of Buck Rogers in the 25th Century

Which appeals to you more — being a superstar or First Man on Mars? Which would you choose? —C.J., Canton, Ohio

● I'd try to negotiate for both, but I'd settle for the First Man offer. Just think of all the offers I'd get when I got back to Earth. The publicity would be incredible. After all, look what happened to swimmer Mark Spitz — and he didn't even get off this planet.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON, star of All in the Family

How have you managed to stay happily married for so long? —Betty Fuller, Gary, Ind.

● When Bill (William H. Putch) and I got married on Oct. 26, 1957, neither of us gave up his individuality. Our lives together have been so successful because we're two individuals working and living together under one roof. We try to help the other but not in a way that's meddling. I don't nose into his affairs, and Bill doesn't stick his fingers into what I'm doing. Yet we're a team and always have been.

FOR FRANKCINA GLASS, author of Marvin & Tige

I know your first book was a smash when it was published a year ago. Has your big success changed you in the last 12 months? —T.E., Durham, N.C.

● I'm not so shy. When I first started promoting the book, I was scared out of my wits. I think I've finally crawled out of my shell and have gotten more mature. Other than that, I'm the same. I haven't gone on the expected spending spree (I hate shopping and especially hate buying expensive things). I'm still finicky about what I eat. I go for simple stuff.

FOR JAY SOLOMON, Administrator, General Services Administration

How will the GSA dispose of the several million small cardboard boxes that were intended to hold silver dollars sold at public auction and to carry a message from Richard Nixon? —B.R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● Of the original 2.9 million coins, approximately 978,000 remain. Each coin is packaged in a box bearing a message from Nixon. GSA hopes to sell the remaining coins in their original boxes in order to save money.

FOR JOHN BRODIE, NBC-TV sports commentator

How do you feel about women covering sports events? —T.M., Winona, Minn.

● It does not matter to me if the announcers are men or women as long as they're good at what they're doing. And I feel the same way about broadcasting. If ladies are authorities on sports, we need them. Women have never objected to men in this area (whether playing or covering), and we certainly owe them the same courtesy. Actually, when it comes to TV reporting, men will get a refreshing viewpoint.

FOR ANNETTE CROSBIE, star of PBS-TV's Edward the King

Was it difficult to turn you into an old Queen Victoria? —Jean Grayson, Westchester, N.Y.

● I'd say so. The makeup artists spent three hours just to apply my plastic double chin. Then, once it was in place, all my eating ceased until filming was over (if I moved my mouth around too much, the chin fell off). Sometimes I went a whole day without solid food. Just so that I didn't pass out from hunger, I "ate" nourishing liquids through a straw.

PRO AND CON

Should Voters Enact Some Federal Laws Directly?

PRO Roger Telschow, national director, Initiative America, Washington, D.C.

After 80 years of successful voter initiative at the state level, a national Voter Initiative Amendment is now before Congress. This bill would allow public votes on issues at national elections. The Gallup poll shows Americans more than two-to-one in favor. State experience shows a national voter-initiative process would encourage a more responsive and representative Congress, increase voter interest and turnout in elections, strengthen our system of checks and balances and lead to the discussion and passage of long overdue reforms now blocked by special interests. Citizen-initiated state referendums have passed such reforms as abolition of poll taxes, workmen's compensation and women's suffrage.

CON Peter G. Fish, associate professor, political science, Duke University

The proposed national legislative initiative is a mischievous and deceptive means of centralizing, polarizing and destabilizing a tested Constitutional order. It would undermine the government of balanced power, reason and broad-based consent, prophetically advanced by our Founding Fathers. The Supreme Court, the states, Congress, political parties and the Presidency would have to take a back seat to well-financed campaigns by passionate single-issue groups for simplistic national solutions to complex problems. Consider the havoc which would be caused by "yes" votes on initiatives repealing civil rights acts, or balancing the Federal budget by percentage reductions in defense appropriations.

PETE ROSE:
THE SWEET SMELL OF EXCESS

By Wilfrid Sheed

There is nothing in a fan's contract that says he has to be fair-minded. So I'll allow that a Rose on any other team would smell at least different. If Pete hadn't once gone barreling into our mascot Bud Harrelson of the Mets, well-nigh totalling the little fellow, I might take a kindlier view of his greedy ways today.

As it is, Rose's hustling on the field and off seem to blend into a single act of pointless aggression. Racing from city to city this winter, sliding into tax shelters and beer distributorships as if they were so many pot-bellied catchers, one had to wonder what he hustles for, and whom.

Baseball has always had a soft spot for guys who bustle about knocking people down. So Rose has always been a model of sorts: running out his walks and pop flies and tearing out to his position as if baseball were actually an activity rather than a cud-chewing rumination. Even those of us who prefer the grace of a DiMaggio or Clemente enjoy these baggy pants guys for contrast, like a burlesque team of Smooth & Dirty, Abbot & Costello. After all, we could never be a Clemente, but we could run out our pop flies, and, by George, we probably would.

What was unspoken, perhaps even unthought, was one's gut belief that the superstars probably played for themselves but that the hustlers played for us. So when Reggie Jackson reached for the Rolls-Royces, it hit our mythology just right; it's what we expected of him, and the dude in all of us silently applauded.

But Rose... with his all-American face, born in Cincinnati and owing that city at least as much as Socrates owed Athens; leaving a squad that had shared as rich a life together as an infantry platoon; and leaving it just for money... well, it was a shock to the system.

Our mistake, of course. Rose's prototypes, such as Ty Cobb and Country Slaughter, were very private players, for whom an extra base was always more real than any human flesh in front of it. All the jokes about spiking one's own grandmother were not jokes to Cobb (there were no jokes to Cobb): in fact, this kind of player, often hailed as the very essence of the game, sometimes seems to verge on the psychotic.

Pete Rose is, of course, a far cry from that. He is an affable fellow with a relatively low body count. But he plays with the same narrow monomania as Cobb did, and it shows in his banking habits. Exhibition game, World Series, Reds, Phillies, it's all the same to him; he would do his same spastic number in an empty parking lot. There is no more reason to praise him for hustle than to praise a hyperactive kid for tapping his foot. He can't help it. If one wants to throw in a little psychodrama, it turns out that Rose's father had only one comment after his young son's performances, to wit: "You didn't hustle enough."

Rose's desire for the most money in baseball is an extension of the same single track. Between that and breaking Stan Musial's National League record for hits, there seems no significant difference. You simply fling yourself on your belly and slide for what you're worth. Since the hits and the cash are dimly connected, Rose has actually taken a pinch less money than he might to go to a club whose park and line-up should suit his lonely record obsessions to perfection. And he can easily recoup as an Aqua Velva man and whatever he is in Tokyo (yes, he even squeezed in some commercials there). Of course, in none of this is he really unusual, but drearily typical. Where you play, what product you hold up, it's all the same, just put the money on the track and he'll follow it anywhere.

We've obviously come a long way since Babe Ruth was admonished for being a bad example to kids and cried his great eyes out in atonement. Just because Pete Rose plays like something out of the Gay Nineties does not mean he has to have a soul to match. What is interesting is that he either doesn't know or doesn't care how much simple admiration his gold fever is costing him. Fans pinned to the floor by inflation can't see why old Pete can't rub along on, say, $400,000 a year. It's nice that his family is secure, but does it have to be 80 times as secure as everyone else's?

It is true that Rose fills the stadium at any price and earns his pay fairly. By the same token, there must be players who don't bring in a single spectator and who shouldn't be paid at all. This way of grading players by box-office appeal was inevitable the day the agents arrived, and it puts an end to any silly notion that one went to watch a whole team, or even a good game. The feeling of camaraderie engendered in the meat counter, or locker room, as the players stare at each other's price tags may explain why nobody has yet quite succeeded in buying a pennant.

Thus ballplayers join the solitary adventurers who play tennis and golf, and perhaps it suits them in some intrinsic way. At least, there has been no voluble protest from Rose's colleagues about the goofy market they now work in. A ballplayer who didn't dream of making more than Rose would lack the necessary fire, the baseball virility, the edginess that managers like to see. A team that voted to share the wealth evenly or to plough some of it back into the minor leagues or even into old timers' pensions, would be the laughingstock of baseball.

Such a team would also do wonders for the game, which is beginning to suffer slightly from circulatory problems as the supply of good, average players dwindles and the super-stars find themselves with no one to play. I remember taking my father to see Willie Mays for the first time. Willie went hitless in four trips, and not one ball was hit his way. So much for the star system. In no other sport can a great player show so little on a given day.

To lapse grudgingly into fairness: Rose nearly always shows you something. And it is not his fault that the sports section reads during the winter like the Financial Times. Publicity has turned salary negotiation into a sport in its own right, with its own long season, and maybe it's too much to ask a competitive man not to try to win. If one hoped for more from Rose, chalk it up to the 12-year-old in every fan: a kid who has taken some brutal beatings lately and may not recover.

Besides, Rose has gone to a team I like, the Phillies, and that automatically improves his character. It will be instructive to see whether he brings that team to life or whether that team does what it usually does and puts him to sleep for good. If he brings a championship to Philadelphia, I for one will refuse to listen to a single bad word against that finest of men, Pete Rose. The 12-year-old fan in us is not all heart. He likes a winner. He is as American as Pete Rose. FW

GERONIMO...

CHIEF JOSEPH...
SITTING BULL...
COCHISE...
CRAZY HORSE...
QUANAH...

From the days when the Indian chiefs were proud, combative, free as the wind...until the final crushing defeat at Wounded Knee, here is the true story of The Great Chiefs. Peace makers like Chief Joseph of the Nez Percés. Warriors like Cochise of the Chiricahua Apache. Brilliant strategists like Crazy Horse of the Oglala Sioux. And the greatest of all Sioux heroes, Sitting Bull.

One of the most violent chapters in American history, the confrontation between the Indian and the white man, has come down to us in distortions, myths and legends. The truth is only now beginning to be learned, and told. It is a truth revealed with graphic fidelity to fact in The Great Chiefs, your introductory volume to THE OLD WEST. What actually happened at the Battle of the Little Bighorn? At Wounded Knee? What led to the triumphs and bitter defeats of the Arapaho, Apache, Cheyenne, Comanche, Crow?

You're invited to follow the true course of events in The Great Chiefs free for 10 days as your introduction to TIME-LIFE BOOKS' much acclaimed series, THE OLD WEST. Extensively researched and documented, this handsomely illustrated series was designed to give you a true picture of the pioneers who faced the dangers and challenges of an untamed continent—who eventually triumphed and settled its wild frontiers. In such superbly narrated, magnificently illustrated volumes as The Cowboys, The Gunfighters, The Indians, The Soldiers and The Alaskans, you will experience the tumultuous adventure of the Old West as it really was.

Send for The Great Chiefs and enjoy it free for 10 days. Mail the order form today.

THE GREAT CHIEFS

YOURS FREE FOR 10-DAY EXAMINATION

THE ALASKANS

The pioneers' last great Western frontier—a colossal wilderness of glacier-ridden mountain ranges, dense forests, mighty rivers and boundless tundra. Hardy adventurers, explorers and treasure-seekers found Alaska's riches as gigantic as its challenges.

THE SOLDIERS

The plain-as-khaki truth about the cowards and heroes, the wise and foolish generals in the latter half of the 19th Century Indian fighters like Sherman, Sheridan and the ill-fated Custer, matched their foes in both courage and bloodthirstiness.

THE COWBOYS

The cowboy as he really was—overworked, lonely, exploited by cattle barons, besieged by marauding Indians, at the mercy of stampeding cattle. Unflinching, puritanically honest, he did his job and helped open the West for those who followed.

TEMPTING DISHES FOR YOUR SPRING DIET

By Marilyn Hansen

It's certainly the season; now's the reason to trim off those unwanted pounds that your bulky clothes have been hiding. We've several tempting, low-calorie recipes for you to vary your Spartan diet in the days ahead.

BEEF BROTH CHAMPIGNON

- ½ lb. mushrooms, sliced (about 2 cups)
- ½ teaspoon tarragon leaves, crushed
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 cans (10½-oz. size) condensed beef broth
- 1½ soup cans water
- ¼ cup sauterne or other dry white wine

1. In saucepan, brown mushrooms with tarragon in butter.
2. Add remaining ingredients. Heat; stir occasionally.

Makes about 6 cups, 6 servings;
1 serving, approximately 72 calories

SOLE WITH HERBS

- 1 lb. fillet of sole
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- ¼ teaspoon thyme leaves
- ¼ teaspoon rosemary leaves
- 1 scallion, chopped
- ½ cup dry white wine
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 4 fresh mushrooms, sliced

1. Rinse sole and pat dry with paper towels. Combine 1 tablespoon oil, garlic, parsley, thyme and rosemary, blending and crushing to make a paste.
2. Place fish fillets on broiler pan. Spread with oil and garlic mixture.
3. Broil fish about 4 inches from source of heat about 8 minutes or until just done.
4. In small saucepan, heat remaining oil, scallion, wine, pepper and salt to boiling. Add mushrooms. Pour over sole. Serve

Makes 4 servings
1 serving, approximately 255 calories

FRESH VEGETABLE BRACER

- 1 can (10½ ozs.) condensed chicken broth
- 1 soup can water
- 1 cup cabbage cut in long, thin shreds
- ½ cup chopped onion
- Generous dash ground nutmeg
- ¼ cup sliced radishes

1. In saucepan, combine all ingredients except radishes. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Cover; simmer 10 minutes or until done. Stir occasionally.
2. Stir in radishes.

Makes about 3½ cups
3 servings; 1 serving, approximately 52 calories

Tom Cavanagh

NEAPOLITAN SALAD

- 2 cups cooked elbow macaroni*
- ¾ cup low-calorie bottled Italian-style dressing
- 2 cups cooked whole green beans
- Salad greens
- 2 cans (5-oz. size) boned chicken or turkey, cut up
- 1 tomato, cut in wedges
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
- Ripe olives
- 4 anchovy fillets

1. Mix macaroni with ½ cup dressing. Mix beans with ¼ cup dressing. Chill.
2. On salad greens, mound macaroni in center of large serving platter. Arrange chicken and beans alternately around macaroni.
3. Garnish with remaining ingredients. Serve with additional dressing.

Makes 4 servings;
1 serving, approximately 233 calories

* Start with ¾ cup uncooked

CORN-STUFFED TOMATOES

- 6 medium tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1½ cups cut corn — canned, frozen or fresh
- ½ cup finely chopped green pepper
- 6 large fresh mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon low-calorie margarine
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 teaspoon vegetable oil

1. Cut off ½ inch from stem end of tomato and scoop out center; discard seeds; reserve pulp.
2. In medium skillet, sauté tomato pulp, onion, corn, green pepper and chopped mushroom stems in margarine for 5 minutes or until onion is limp. Season with salt and pepper.
3. Fill tomatoes with tomato-corn mixture and top with mushroom cap. Brush cap with oil. Place tomatoes in pan.
4. Bake tomatoes in preheated 350°F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until just done.

Makes 6 servings;
1 serving, approximately 89 calories

Announcing the limited availability of First Day of Issue Specimens

The United States of America New Dollar Coin Honoring Susan B. Anthony

Reservations are now being accepted for First Day of Issue Specimens of this new dollar coin, sealed in First Day of Issue Commemoratives, to be postmarked at each of the three U.S. Mint cities (Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Denver) which will produce this historic new U.S. dollar.

On July 2, 1979, the United States Treasury Department will release, through the Federal Reserve Banks, a new U.S. dollar coin honoring Susan B. Anthony. While the issuance of any new U.S. coinage or currency is always a notable event, this particular new issue will be of special interest because of two unique aspects:

- The first resizing of the dollar coin since the introduction of the Liberty Head dollar more than a century ago.
- The first time that U.S. coinage has ever carried the portrait of an American woman.

So that families throughout our great nation may obtain a permanent commemoration of this historic event, special arrangements will be made to obtain First Day of Issue specimens of the new dollar, seal them inside special collector's covers, and postmark them on the exact day of first issue to forever certify their first-day status.

Three First Day Specimens

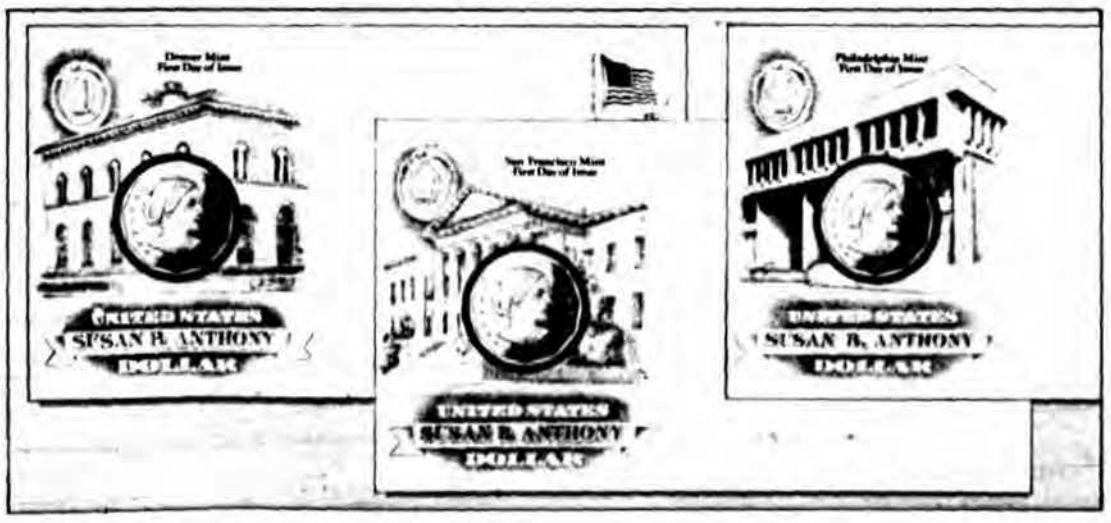

The Susan B. Anthony Dollar will be minted at the Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Denver Mints. Coins from each Mint will carry the appropriate mint-mark (P, S, or D), permitting collector verification.

First-day specimens for each of the three Mints will be available, involving Numismatic Philatelic Covers postmarked on the exact day of issue in each of the Mint cities. These First Day Covers may be reserved individually or in complete sets to include all three Mints.

Reservation Procedure

Reservations may be forwarded now for First Day of Issue specimens. While every effort will be made to meet collector demand, there may be limitations on the number of First Day specimens which can be obtained. Accordingly, all reservations are subject to acceptance, and will be filled on a priority system based on date received.

The processing and fulfillment of these First Day of Issue Commemoratives for the Susan B. Anthony Dollar will be handled by the Postal Commemorative Society, a private agency which is not affiliated with the U.S. Mint or any other government agency. Allow 8 to 10 weeks from issue date for shipment.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

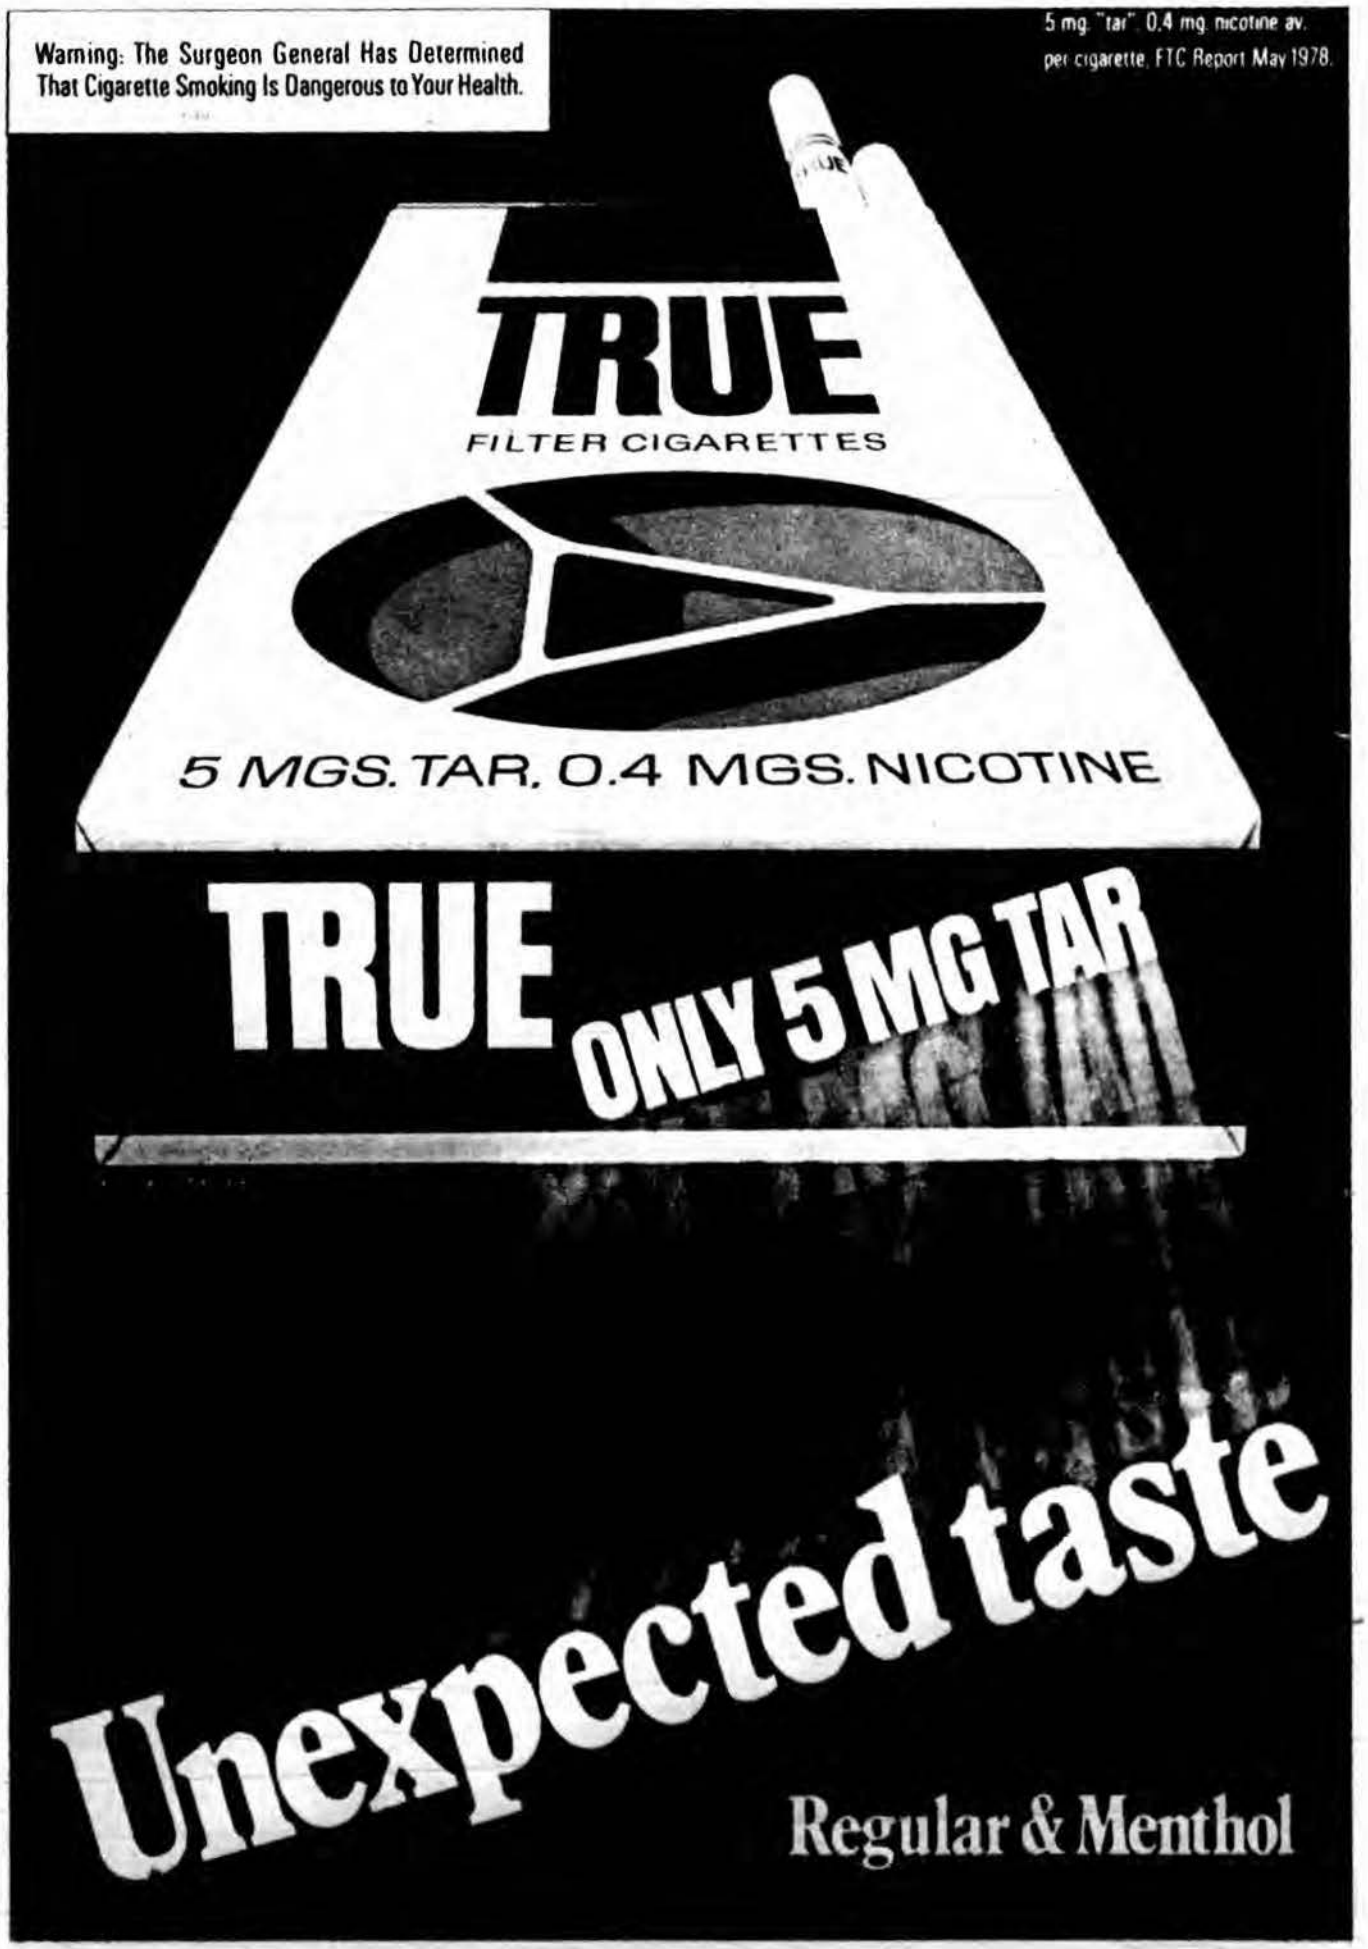

HOW MUCH PAIN CAN YOU TAKE?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How much a given pain hurts depends on your self-esteem.
2. Everyone is subject to aches and pains, but you won't feel them nearly as much if you raise your self-esteem and get on better terms with yourself.
3. Many aches and pains will cease if you simply tell them to.
4. The time of day when you're most sensitive to pain depends on whether you're an introvert or an extrovert.
5. Some people make a "career" of pain.

ANSWERS

1. True. In studies conducted by a team of University of Melbourne psychiatrists, subjects from various walks of life were tested on a Self-esteem Scale, "which measures the individual's personal judgment of his worthiness. They were then divided into three groups: those who had a low pain threshold, who were extremely sensitive to various types of aches and pains, with no organic cause; those with chronic organic pain; and a normal control group whose sensitivity to pain was only moderate. Findings: Self-esteem scores of the pain-sensitive group were significantly lower than for the other two groups. It is pointed out that the amount of pain a person feels from any hurt or indisposition depends on his pain threshold, which is directly affected by his mental attitude. And it is suggested that the greater physical pain suffered by the low self-esteem individual may help to restore his feeling of worthiness "by the belief that he would be capable of functioning well in all areas, were it not for the fact that he is physically afflicted. Similarly, such feelings of guilt and responsibility for failure may be considerably lessened."
2. True. The same research showed that the pain-prone persons in the studies showed a significant reduction in their pain sensitivity after psychological counseling, which resulted in a significant improvement in their self-esteem scores.
3. True. Research at Boston College has shown that a great many pains — especially those which are mainly psychological — are quickly relieved if the sufferer shouts, "Stop, relax!" and then imagines the pleasantest scene he can think of, repeating the process whenever the pain may recur. And while this is not always effective, experiments showed it to be highly effective with certain pains with certain people. So if something hurts, it not only won't hurt to give it a try but may stop it. (Of course, persistent pain from an unidentified cause may signal a condition requiring medical treatment and should be diagnosed by a physician.)
4. True. A team of University of Sussex (England) behavioral specialists made a study of the diurnal variation of pain thresholds of a specimen group of men and women ranging in age from 16 to 78 years. Pain sensitivity was checked every two hours from 8 A.M. to 10 P.M. for seven successive days, using a special scale. Subjects were then given standard personality tests. Findings: Introverts evidenced the greatest sensitivity to pain in the morning hours, between 8:00 o'clock and noon. With extroverts, pain sensitivity peaked in the afternoon hours, between 2:00 o'clock and 6:00.
5. True. Dr. J. Blair Pace, associate clinical professor and chairman of Family Medicine at the University of California, sums up his findings in a monograph, Pain: A Personal Experience. He observes that a person may fail in an attempt to succeed and be impressed by the attention and "stroking" it brings from loved ones when some sort of painful illness strikes. "Such a person," he finds, "may then subconsciously learn that the career he is most suited for is a career of pain. A person once launched upon such a 'career' develops skill in manipulating individuals in the family and in the medical profession."

ANNE JACKSON AND ELI WALLACH'S DREAM KITCHEN: A RENOVATION FASHIONED WITH LOVE

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

An electrical column that couldn't be moved divides a counter island naturally.

Small kitchens can be dull and uncomfortable — little more than walkways between refrigerator, sink and stove. But they're usually endured.

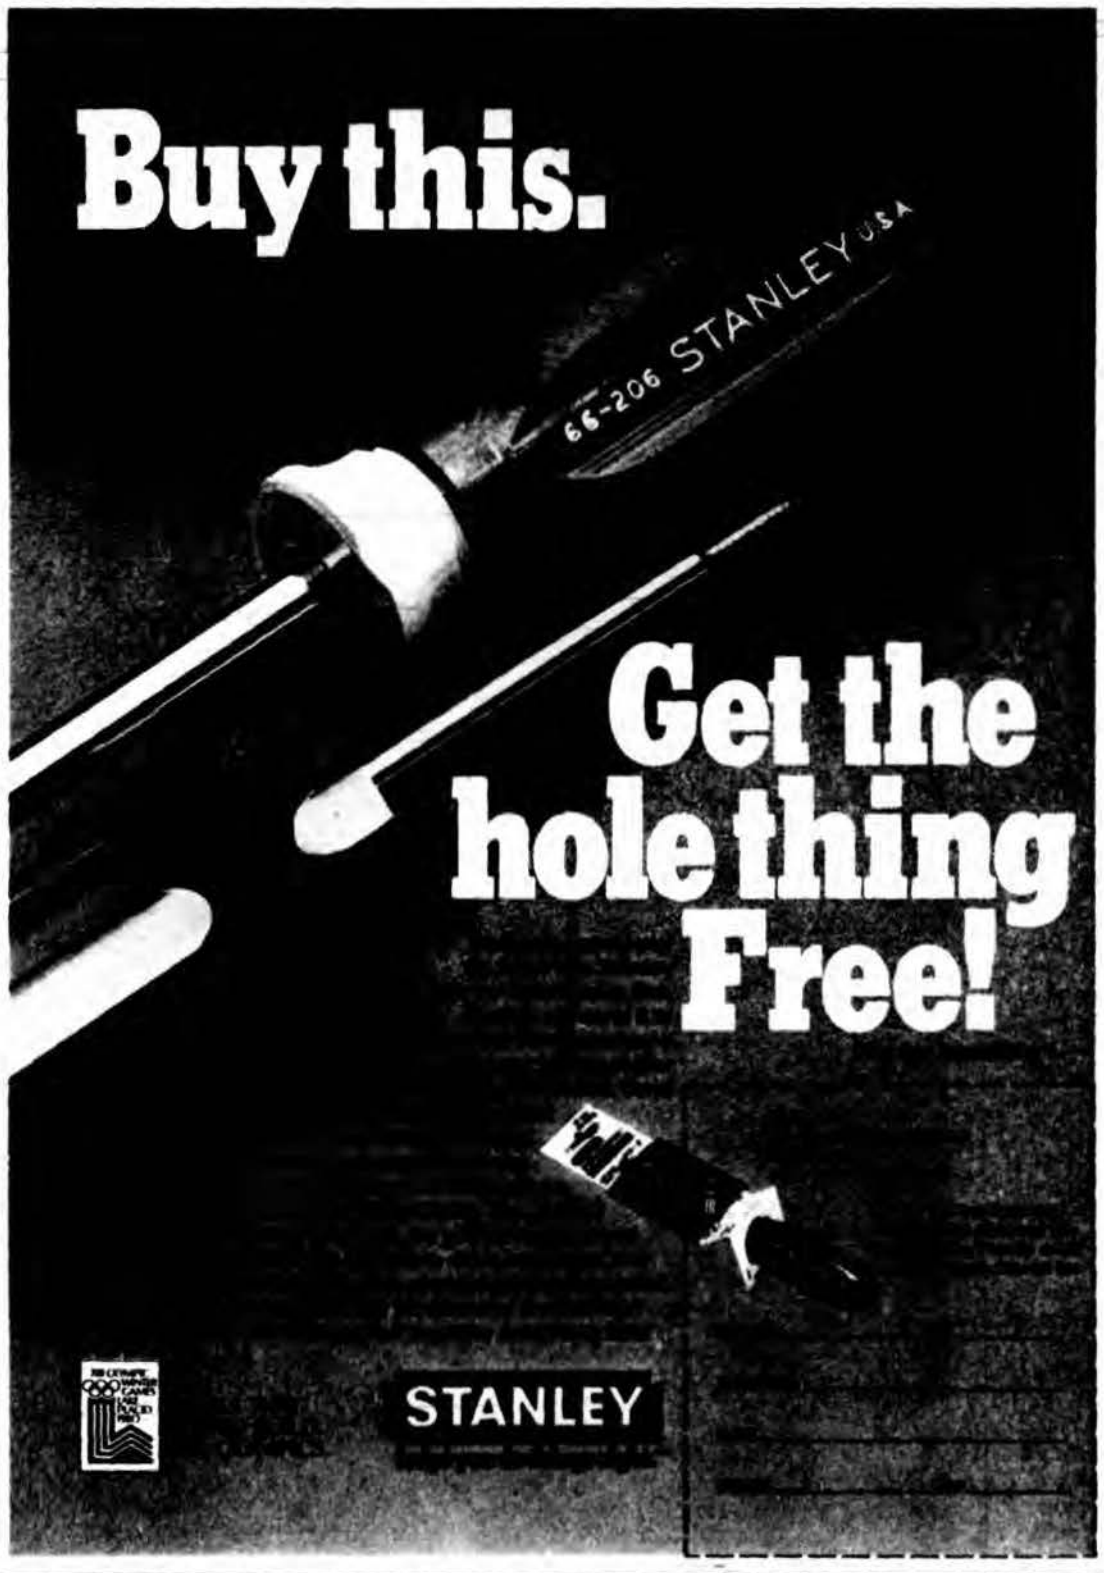

A notable exception is the newly remodeled kitchen of Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson, the husband-and-wife acting team who recently, with their two daughters, starred in a Broadway stage revival of The Diary of Anne Frank. Combining the best of today's technical marvels with the warmth of country charm, the new kitchen has received bravos from family and friends alike.

Like most people, the Wallachs suffered with their kitchen for some time, making do with the small space, dark walls and poor lighting. But when a friend of theirs, Alvin Colt, showed Eli his newly remodeled kitchen, Wallach decided to investigate further. He contacted Colt's designer, Florence Perchuk, C.K.D. (Certified Kitchen Designer), of SVP Kitchen and Bath Designs, New York City, to talk about the problem. He explained that Anne was away working and that they had recently discussed moving into a more modern home but that with a remodeled kitchen as a lure, perhaps she would stay.

Mrs. Perchuk agreed to give it a try and, as a first step, asked each of them to write down their thoughts about the kitchen. What came out of that were the guidelines that Mrs. Perchuk used for the general ambiance of the finished product. For instance, the Wallachs both wanted easy-maintenance in their kitchen, but plenty of warmth. Therefore, Mrs. Perchuk used Formica on the cabinets and countertops but other materials, such as tile and wood, for the floors and walls. But first came the major problem of working out the space.

The kitchen, as it existed, was small and narrow. But alongside the kitchen were a butler's pantry, a hallway and two small maids' rooms. In total, there were close to 600 square feet to work with. So they ripped out partitions, leaving a maid's room.

Because of an electrical column that had been behind the old kitchen's wall and couldn't be moved without extensive rewiring, the kitchen was divided into two separate spaces. Mrs. Perchuk worked with that by creating a gallery-type working space on one side and an informal dining area with a wet bar and counter space on the other, using the column as a natural divider.

All existing equipment in the kitchen was removed, including the lights, floors, cabinets, stove and refrigerator. The only part of the original kitchen now remaining is the location of the back doorway and the window, which was replaced by a less cumbersome one that still lets in the light.

After the basic renovation came the hard part — putting the equipment in to make the kitchen what the Wallachs really wanted: a warm, comfortable place for both family and friends to gather. The Wallachs agreed that Anne would have final say on all choices, and she did, indeed, become involved. Mrs. Perchuk and Anne spent time together picking out materials, tiles, woods, equipment and choosing colors, textures and generally coordinating the total effect.

Mrs. Perchuk used a variety of textures to give the room the warmth and country style the Wallachs wanted. She used hickory and oak beams, quality hardwoods, tile counters with wood trim and terra cotta floors to give a country aura. The arrangement of oak shelves over the counter island in the middle of the room and the oak paneling and wainscotting of the walls complete the warm, cozy feeling associated with a farm kitchen. Plants and accessories, such as Eli's clock collection and Anne's ceramics, contribute to the homey ambiance which has been created.

The Wallachs enjoy entertaining, and Mrs. Perchuk says they entertain frequently in their new kitchen. With two daughters and a son, all of whom cook and all of whom spend time at home, the new kitchen gets a great deal of use. In fact, last New Year's Eve, at a party the Wallachs gave for friends, Mrs. Perchuk said she was very proud to see "Streisand, Paul Newman and other stars all congregating in the kitchen." What better indication of success?

When asked about do-it-yourself remodeling and general kitchen arrangements, Mrs. Perchuk had this to say:

"The most important base is the refrigerator, sink and stove triangle (the total distance between appliances shouldn't exceed 15 to 20 feet), but there are always extenuating circumstances. First of all, think of the shape of the room you have to work with. Then, think of the way you work. Either of these things can change the triangle. I always recommend going to a certified kitchen professional, even if it's only for a consultation. He can give you the guidance and direction you need. But if you won't or can't, be practical. Plan out your space on paper and see how it fits and how it seems to you in terms of the way you work in your kitchen. Do you work to the left? Are you right- or left-handed? Do you bump into your refrigerator every time you turn around?"

To make a small kitchen bigger she suggests:

"Try to contain the cabinets. When I get a highly decorative, heavy-looking cabinet, I find it imposes itself in the room. If I find I can flush out the cabinets — do something very, very simple with other details, such as tile, perhaps, on the floor, or with wallpaper—then I find the cabinets begin to blend in, and there's more of a feeling of a uniform room as opposed to something heavy and massive being introduced into the room. That's one approach.

"The other, as far as making a small room large-looking, is the lighting. It should be kept at a maximum, not a minimum. The overhead lighting and under-the-cabinet lighting are very important. The overall feeling of the Wallachs' kitchen before we renovated was its darkness — so many dark shadows. There was only one overhead light. By introducing the fluorescent lighting, we gave a feeling of openness to that area. I find that off-whites and the new almond colors help — any light color will tend to open the room up."

Mrs. Perchuk does not recommend consulting your friendly neighborhood contractor or your kitchen-supply salesman for advice on where to put things, if you're thinking of remodeling your kitchen, unless you're sure he's a good cook! Oddly enough, most kitchens are planned by male architects or builders. When the house is built, many of these kitchens have little or no relationship to the way the woman of the house, most often the cook, likes to work.

Remodeling or renovating your kitchen is not an easy job. The Wallachs' kitchen took six months from start to finish to do, and that was all done by professionals. So if you're doing it yourself and want it done right, consider the time element, too. And Mrs. Perchuk's final word is, whether you do it yourself or not, if you want to change your kitchen: Think, plan and write it down. Whether or not you'll end up with a kitchen you love, like the Wallachs did, is up to you.

BEFORE

The kitchen suffered from the "drabs," being too dark and narrow. The prescription: Knock out some partitions, add wood, tile and put in bright fluorescent lighting.

LEARNING TO LIVE WITH YOUR PAST

By Isobel Silden

To the growing list of know-yourself better-and-improve-your-life practices, add an intriguing new one: Past Lives Therapy. Psychologist Morris Netherton maintains that we've all passed this way not once, but several times before, and many of the problems we faced in previous lives have been carried over into this one.

The idea isn't new: Zen Buddhists espoused the same thinking 1500 years ago. But Dr. Netherton and his dozen disciples maintain that one does not have to believe in reincarnation for their therapy — which already has its detractors — to work. And they use no extraordinary means — such as hypnosis — to bring patients back to their former lives.

Instead, certain phrases that crop up constantly in a patient's conversation are the simple clues they use to understand a person's past and present life, and then to solve his problems. The thousands of patients Dr. Netherton has helped in the past 10 years have come to him with an assortment of ailments, ranging from ulcers, claustrophobia, alcoholism, epilepsy, unexplained pain and sex problems, as well as general inability to function in today's society.

Says Dr. Netherton in the book he coauthored with Nancy Shiffrin, Past Lives Therapy, "We assume that the events of previous incarnations can have as devastating an effect on a patient's current behavior as anything that has happened to him in this life."

To reveal the influential events in a patient's past — and present — Dr. Netherton first draws him into relaxed, informal conversation. Or as he explains his method: "First we request the data from the unconscious mind. The patient's unconscious mind communicates voluntarily, not by hypnotic inducement."

As the patient freely associates, Dr. Netherton listens for repetitive phrases. A woman patient may frequently comment on how tired she is, for example. Or a male patient may complain repeatedly about the burden of his duties. "I have him repeat the phrase, until he separates himself from the trauma associated with it," Dr. Netherton says. Eventually, out of the repetition, Dr. Netherton believes that a patient's subconscious is jogged, and an image forms.

What kind of image? The answer is different for each patient. The woman who always feels tired may see herself as an overworked charwoman in a past life. The man with the weighted-down feeling might get a sudden vision of himself squirming under the weight of a heavy crown — in his former life as a king!

Once the image surfaces, Dr. Netherton reviews different periods in the patient's life for events and phrases that might trigger other revelations, beginning with the prenatal period. "We reach back to the crucial nine months before birth," he says, "and there we find the roots of every patient's behavior. The fetus records all the mother's thoughts, everything said to the mother, by her, and in her presence, as if it applied to him."

A typical example is the alcoholic who frequently said to himself, "I've gotta have a drink or I'm going to die."

After repeating this phrase again and again during therapy, he saw an image of himself wandering in a desert centuries before. Either abandoned or lost, he needed water, and kept repeating, "I've gotta have a drink or I'm going to die."

With his therapist encouraging and guiding his recollections, the alcoholic also recalled hearing something similar in his present life, even before he was born. His father had been an alcoholic, his mother an abstainer. Her frequent complaint to her husband during her pregnancy had been, "You've got to have that drink, don't you?" And his father had belligerently defended himself by saying, "I'm gonna drink until I die."

Now, in his own life, the alcoholic saw that he'd sought out drink not only to deal with stress, but to fulfill his father's prediction. After a week of intensive counseling, he decided he no longer needed a drink, thanks to his new insights.

Another patient, recuperating from a heart attack, still experiences pain. "Her definition of life is 'I have to have pain to know I'm alive.' She heard that from her mother during childbirth, and in one of her past-life experiences, she was brutally murdered," explains the woman's Past Lives therapist.

Outside the circle of Past Lives therapists, however, there is a more guarded view of the ways our prenatal, present and possibly even past lives might reflect each other. Daniel Borenstein, M.D., president of the Southern California Psychiatric Society, warns against taking the images revealed by Past Lives Therapy too literally. When a patient relates the events in his dreams, Dr. Borenstein points out, it is not the dream which is significant. It is the unconscious meaning that only the trained therapist, with knowledge of the patient and his background, is capable of interpreting.

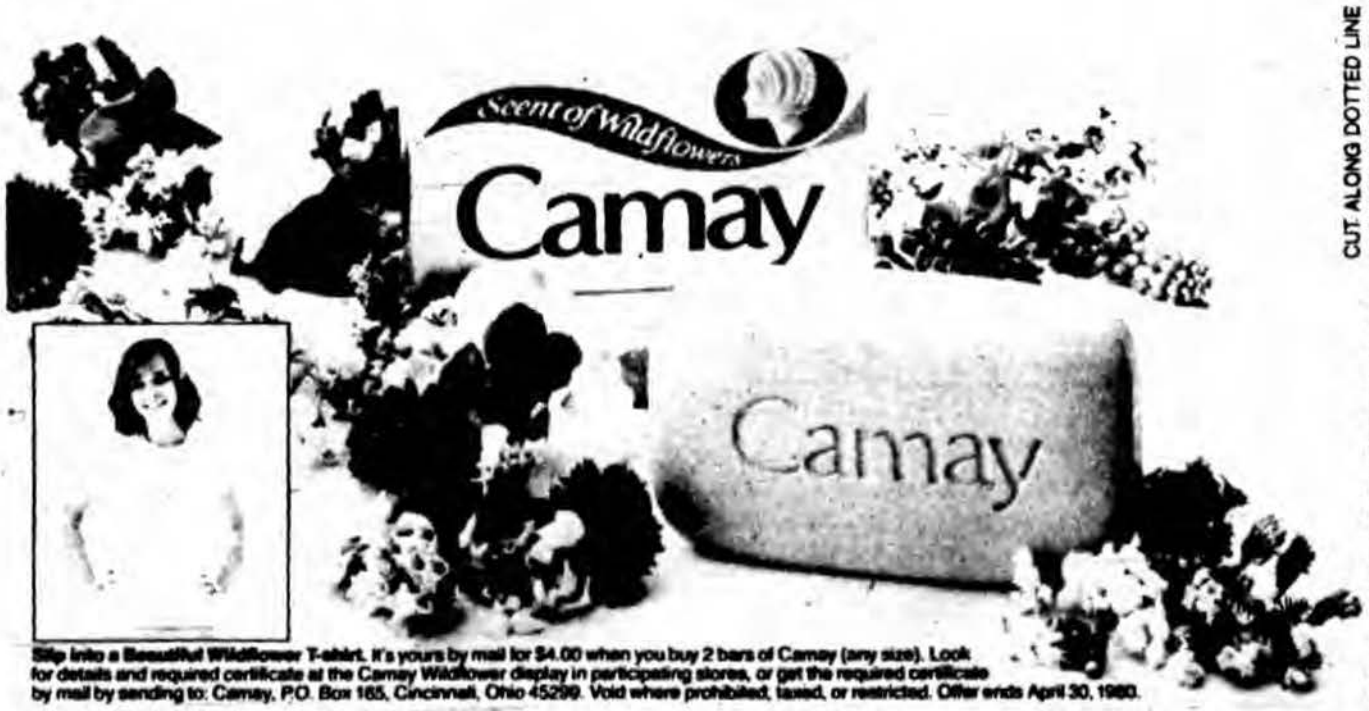

A traditionalist, Dr. Borenstein recognizes the fact that during therapy, patients experience painful memories from all the material revealed during treatment. But he points out that even what is reconstructed from early childhood is not totally accurate or complete. "There is another part of the psyche that observes what is going on, as does the doctor," he notes. "There is rarely a total regression."

There will probably never be universal agreement about the merits of Past Lives Therapy. As even Dr. Netherton concedes, "This is not a miracle cure, nor am I a healer in any sense of the word. The patient," he adds, "is responsible for his own improvement." FW

Do you remember closing your eyes to make a wish over a wishbone? Have you wished on a star? Or tossed a coin in a wishing well?

Now you can own something so much better. It's this set of absolutely charming Wishing Bells. Folks who know the Bells say that if you make a wish as you ring a bell 9 times . . . and hear one more "tinkle" with no help from you . . . your wish could come true!

Your wish must be over the bell of the season. Wish on the spring bell in Spring, the winter bell in Winter, and so on.

We can't promise you anything about wishes coming true, of course. (Though you could be pleasantly surprised.)

We DO promise that you'll be truly happy whether you choose one bell or the complete, 4-season set, in genuine porcelain.

"Drowsy" is delightful. "Hope" lifts up the spirits. "Wistfull" is radiantly the summertime. "Grateful" reminds us to appreciate the good things in life. You'll love them in a window, in a case, on a shelf—anywhere their exquisite colors will brighten a room.

You don't have to love hand-wrought porcelain to see that Wishing Bells are a rare value indeed. The original designs are hand-painted, exclusive and therefore cannot be duplicated by anyone else. They are true keepsakes.

QUIPS & QUOTES

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

TWO LIVES

I lead, it seems, a double life,
So does my ever-faithful wife.
One life is what our friends all see,
The other life is on TV.

We follow what some call a "soap,"
And watch, intent, while others cope
With danger, illness and deceit,
Perhaps a mugging on the street.

With actors we identify.
We sometimes laugh, more often cry,
Our love and hate are both intense,
Our feeling mainly is suspense.

Our second life has such great power
I'm glad each day it's just an hour.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Fire Watch

Fires are one of the leading causes of accidental death in this country, and annually more than 325,000 people are injured in about 4.5 million fires in the home. Most vulnerable to injuries are the very young, the aged and the handicapped, whose lack of mobility hampers their chances of escape. In an effort to alert rescuers to the presence of someone who needs help to escape, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has issued an orange iridescent sticker which can be placed on doors and windows to alert firefighters. The free sticker is available through fire departments or through your nearest Metropolitan office.

Weight-Watching

With the bathing-suit season fast approaching, many women are thinking about how they're going to look in this year's styles. "Diet" is the first word that springs to mind, and, according to Dr. Barbara Edelstein, author of The Woman Doctor's Diet for Women (Ballantine), this is the best time of year to diet.

"The motivating factor for most women who decide they're going to diet is how they look in clothes," says Dr. Edelstein. "Now is a great time to diet because not only are all the great diet foods like fresh vegetables and fruits available, but exercizing becomes much easier and summer clothes are more revealing, motivating most women to lose weight."

According to Dr. Edelstein, "Most men lose weight much more easily than women, and women often feel inferior because they aren't losing as quickly as their husbands or their male doctors expect them to. And yet, a woman's body metabolism changes monthly, affecting the way her body uses calories. Men never have to deal with that change."

Dr. Edelstein suggests that, along with a sensible diet, anyone trying to lose weight should get plenty of exercise, since exercise is a natural appetite suppressant. She feels that social sports like tennis are more enticing than sports like jogging because they don't allow the overweight woman to feel sorry for herself. "Most overweight women don't like to exercise in any way that speeds up their heart rate, and misery loves company." So get out that old tennis racquet or organize a softball team if losing 20 pounds is your goal for this summer.

Lifestyles

Entertainment. Mountains don't pop up with great regularity, but Virginia acquired one this year. The peak, located in an amusement park called Kings Dominion, is made of 3,000 nuts, 2,500 bolts, 3,000 washers, 3,950 nails, 70,000 feet of conduit, 4,070 gallons of paint, 14,000 concrete blocks, 16,000 yards of metal lath, 1,200 pounds of tie wire, 2,350 pounds of welding rod and 30 tons of sand. It covers 90,000 square feet of land, and this man-made construction is the tallest mountain in eastern Virginia.

Books. Every sport has its own vocabulary, and if the language of baseball or table tennis sounds like Greek to you, Sports Lingo by Harvey Frommer (Atheneum) will help you sound like a pro. A dictionary of the language of sports, this book will teach you the lingo for sports ranging from bowling to motorcycling to football. So, if you've been thinking about mastering a sport this summer, you can know what you're talking about before you even begin.

Anniversaries. This week (May 6-12) marks the 65th year that the American Humane Association has sponsored "Be Kind to Animals Week." For more information about this event, contact your local Humane Society.

Clothes Consciousness

Because there is such a vast array of fabrics on today's market, it is often difficult for buyers to keep straight the instructions on how to care for each. The textile industry in this country manufactures some 25 billion square yards of fabric each year, much of it from man-made fibers. Although manufacturers usually do put care labels on clothes, home sewers are often left in the dark about the kind of care they should be giving their garments. Following are some specifics about the cleaning of a few common man-made fabrics.

Polyester is a strong, wrinkle-resistant fabric that should be machine-washed in warm water, machine-dried and immediately removed from the drier.

Acetate, an elegant, versatile fiber, should be dry-cleaned and pressed with a cool iron on the reverse side.

Acrylic is a warm, wool-like material that should be washed in warm water and dried at a low temperature.

Spandex, an elastic, light-weight fabric often used in bathing suits, may be machine-washed and dried at low temperatures. Fragile garments should be hand-laundered.

Rayon, used because it resembles linen, must be dry-cleaned or hand-washed and pressed with a moderate iron on the wrong side while still damp.

If you are unsure of the kind of care a fabric requires, ask the retailer from whom you are buying it. Most manufacturers send care labels along with their bolts of material.

Functional Jewelry

Jewelry becomes more than just mere baubles when designer Mary Ann Scherr gets her hands on it. Ten years ago Ms. Scherr began creating jewelry that was not only beautiful but that served a medical function as well. Called "body monitoring jewelry," her designs include a sterling silver whiplash collar (pictured above right), a gold and silver heart-pulse-sensor bracelet that contains a sound device that goes off when extreme changes in heartbeat are recorded, and a necklace that is actually a portable EKG. The wearer's heartbeat pattern is revealed on a heat-sensitive screen in multicolors, and little doors cover the functional circuitry contained in the piece.

Ms. Scherr, who shows her work at the Florence Duhl Gallery, 31 West 54th Street, in New York City and teaches at the Parsons School of Design, says she gets mail from people all over the country who want her to design jewelry around a special problem. "The whole idea of body monitoring is catching on. It means that people can have more control over their lives if they're warned about a problem in time to seek medical help. It's a very freeing thing for many people. And I really enjoy designing these pieces."

THE AMAZING GINSU

The original double-edged Ginsu is so sharp it can cut through a tin can, and then slice a tomato perfectly. It can hack wood, and still keep its razor sharp edge. It goes through frozen food in a single stroke, cuts a slice of bread so thin you can see through it, and cuts meat better than an electric knife. A knife so good that it comes with a written 50-year guarantee.

It comes with many other great things too. A matching Carving Fork; a 6-in-1 Kitchen Tool that grates, slices, peels. Next, a set of 6 precision Steak Knives. Finally, a Spiral Slicer that makes beautiful garnishes.

Only $9.95 plus 50¢ postage and handling. GINSU PRODUCTS, INC., Dept. GK14, 47 West Shore Road, Warwick, RI 02889.

New! "Water Bed" Insoles Cushion Your Feet . . .

You Walk On Water So Your Feet Feel Like They're Walking On Air!

Every time you take a step, you put hundreds of pounds of pressure on the dozens of tiny bones, ligaments, sinews and muscles of your feet . . .feet that weren't designed by nature to be locked up in hard unyielding shoes! "Water Bed" Insoles cushion your feet with soft pillows of water — to restore the healthful natural "give" nature intended for your feet! The result: blissful comfort, relief from painful arches, corns, calluses and bunions — even if you have to walk or stand on your feet all day.

Each insole has sealed-in pockets of water to shape themselves to the unique contours of your feet. You'll be able to walk miles in comfort, stand for hours and still feel great!

These remarkable insoles are not bulky, not visible, fit any shoes. Even switch them from one pair of shoes to another instantly. Completely undetectable in use — even with the barest sandals! "Water Bed" Insoles give you supple support and comfort at a minimal price. Only $3.99 a pair — order several pair today!

90-DAY MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Order your Water Bed insoles with complete confidence. Use them full 90 days. If they're not the most comfortable thing ever to happen to your feet, return them for prompt refund of purchase price, (except postage and handling).

Ideal for Policemen, Postmen...Anyone Who Has To Stand On Tired, Aching Feet!

NEVER AGAIN DRIVE A DIRTY CAR!

Super-action Miracle Car Brush keeps your car "showroom new"... without water, waxes or hard work!

90-DAY MONEY BACK GUARANTEE!
Use Miracle Car Brush for 90 days. You must be absolutely delighted with it—or return for prompt refund of purchase price. (except shipping and handling).

Brush lasts for years!

Do people judge you by the soiled, grimy-looking automobile you drive? Now you can keep you car gleaming clean and bright—with that shiny "showroom-new" look. And you don't need a hose, you don't need a bucket, you don't need costly waxes, pastes or cleaners. What's more you don't have to line up every Saturday to plunk down $1.50 or $2.00 for a car wash.

All you need is this super-action Miracle Car Brush and a few minutes of spare time.

Never again be ashamed of how your car looks!

This remarkable, chemically-treated Miracle Car Brush cleans and polishes your whole car in minutes—without water, waxes or hard work. It's almost like magic! Millions of dirt-hungry fibers attract dust and grime AUTOMATICALLY—by molecular magnetism THEN GOBBLE IT UP! You never have to rub or scrub. Simply GLIDE the Miracle Car Brush over your car. It actually cleans as it polishes...is 100% safe for new car finishes—even for a Rolls, Caddy or Continental!

Switch to this amazing no-water method!

Say goodbye forever to hoses, buckets and sponges! Never again risk rust, rattles, squeaks—and wet feet! This amazing, easy-care, NO WATER way to clean your car is already used and preferred by millions. Bring back the gleaming-clean beauty of your automobile. Drive with pride...win compliments from friends and neighbors. Best of all, save $75.00 to $100.00 in car wash money! Your chemically-treated Miracle Car Brush costs only $ 3.99—and stays effective up to 12 months. (Then you can renew it.) Brush itself lasts for years!

Quickly pays for itself!

Figure out how much car washes are costing you—and you'll see how the Miracle Car Brush PAYS FOR ITSELF IN ONLY TWO TO FOUR WEEKS! And—incredible as it may seem—it MUST work the way we say...or IT COSTS YOU NOTHING! Check our no-nonsense 90-day guarantee...and be convinced. Then mail the risk-free coupon TODAY for sure!

Robbie Rist (r) is a rich boy whose money can't buy him the things he really wants—only his Special Spirit, Butterfly McQueen (l), can do that—in "Seven Wishes of a Rich Kid," a light-hearted tale of things as they should be, on the ABC Afterschool Special series, Wednesday at 4PM.

Rabbits are simply not your classic heroes, and that's a fact, albeit a harsh one. It's a fact that bugged Bugs Bunny for about 40 years of superstardom, up to and including his latest stellar role in "The Bugs Bunny Mother's Day Special," an animated adventure airing Saturday at 8:30PM on CBS. Think about it. How many rabbits do you know who have ever had a chance to play the strong hero, the damsel-rescuing gallant, the intrepid warrior, the romantic hero? Only one, right? The stalwart rabbit with a heart of gold – Bugs Bunny.

BEHIND-THE-SCENES LAUGHTER

Chevy Chase plans lots of funny things when doing a TV special. But there are funny things that happen behind the scenes that aren't planned. For instance, Chevy plays a clown in one scene of his upcoming special. The problem was his red, ball-like nose kept falling off and rolling under the nearby bed. It happened every time he laughed, as called for in the script. The problem was solved by changing a laughing Chevy to a carefully smiling Chevy.

The occasion for this and other scheduled—and unscheduled humor—was the taping of "The Chevy Chase National Humor Test," in which Chase levels his madcap wit at national TV tests in a tongue-in-cheek effort to find out what makes people laugh, airing on NBC Thursday at 9PM. He'll be joined by guest stars singer/satirist Martin Mull, Pam Dawber (the distaff side of Mork & Mindy), and jazz musician/saxophone player Tom Scott.

Then there was the musical number, with Chevy playing the piano, singing, "When a Man Loves a Woman," accompanied by Mull on electric guitar and Scott doing a saxophone rendition, backed by two other guitarists, a drummer and three background singers. As Chevy went into high gear, so did his drummer, writer/performer Michael Gwynne, promptly falling backwards off the platform, together with his chair. First it brought a gasp, then a laugh—then a re-take.

An alternate humorous version was shot also, with a cat jumping on the piano in the middle of Chevy's singing. The cat, which was to stay there, kept jumping off, however.

Chevy, who normally breaks up others in a scene, found it difficult getting through a laboratory scene with one of his writer/performers, Christopher Guest. Guest portrayed a guitar-playing scientist singing fervent Irish songs to his laboratory rats, as Chevy, playing another scientist, enters the room. The problem was that Guest kept making up his own songs, coming up with different ones every time the scene was re-shot. Chevy just kept breaking up as he heard about "griddle cakes," "clothes made of wool," and "the sea so green that it foams and roams."

Director Tom Trbovich (that's right) patiently tolerated Chase's own antics. "Let's settle for a second and let me give you some marks please," said Trbovich, planning to place the cast in the scene.

Chase quickly preceded the director and gave the performers their marks: "A-plus for you, A-minus for you, and an A for you." Though the cast and crew put in long tape days, they didn't stop laughing.

THE CHANNEL 2 INVESTIGATIONS

Abortion Without Pregnancy

BY CONNIE CHUNG
Channel 2 News Co-Anchor

Connie Chung is a Co-anchor for Channel 2 News and joined KNXT in 1976. She had previously been a reporter and news correspondent for the CBS Network. She is the recipient of many awards and distinctions, including Outstanding Young Woman of America and the National Association of Media Women Award.

20,000 abortions may be done this year on Los Angeles women who aren't pregnant.

One doctor, who had performed abortions on several non-pregnant women, said she had diagnosed them on the basis of the urine test. She now says that test is "nothing more than guessing."

Channel 2 investigators discovered receptionists in some abortion clinics diagnosing women as pregnant – something only doctors are legally licensed to do.

State and local officials aren't doing enough to protect women from such abuse.
