Bacteria found in NB Bay

And it's the kind that can make you sick, say state water quality specialists

By JERRY HIRSCH Of the Delly Pliot Staff

A bacteria that causes gastrointestinal illnesses has been found in Newport Harbor but water quality officials do not have enough test results yet to judge whether there is a public health hazard.

numbers consititute a health hazard? We don't know yet. It is too early in the game," said Gordon Anderson, the environmental program manager with the Santa Ana Region of the state Regional Water Quality Control

Biologists with the water board were scheduled today to announce they have identified the bacteria in the harbor's waters. The water board was to meet at Newport Beach City Hall this afternoon.

The bacteria, enterococcus, a sub-group of Fecal Streptococcus, comes from the waste of warm blooded animals such as humans, horses and dogs. The water board is testing water in the bay to see if waste discharge from boaters is polluting the water.

Recent studies by the Environmental Protection Agency discovered that the bacteria was a better indicator of bacterial pollution than coliform, the bacteria the county health depart-ment uses to check the quality of Newport Harbor waters.

Parts of the Upper Newport Bay such as Dover Shores and North Star Beach are closed to protect swimmers because of the high concentrations of coliform bacteria.

Testing started two weeks ago at 14 locations in the bay and will confinue until August. A more complete report on the test program will be presented to the water board at its September

"We just can't draw any con-clusions yet because we don't have enough information. This is the cutting edge of research and and it will take some time to figure it out,' Anderson said.

"The numbers vary all over the lot and we have not been able to find out what that means yet," said James Anderson, the water board's executive officer.

Finding the bacteria, however, (Please see BAY/A2)

New dosage of hypertension medicine developed by UC Irvine medical researchers

By ANDREA ADELSON Of the Dally Pliot Staff

Hypertension patients may soon give up popping pills forever and instead substitute a skin patch that UC Irvine researchers have shown can safely deliver a week's dose of medication.

The patch, which could be in use as early as this fall, probably will prove most popular with the elderly, who have trouble remembering to take medications, and those wanting to avoid side effects brought on by quickly absorbed pills, Dr. Michael Weber, director of the UCI Hypertension Center in Long Beach, said.

"If we can do a better job treating hypertension, we can save lives," said Weber, a professor of medicine who coordinated a national study of the

More than 50 million Americans suffer from some form of high blood pressure, which increases the risks of heart attacks and strokes. Only 50 percent of patients treated for high blood pressure are believed to be taking their medications as prescribed. Twice daily is the typical dose, he said.

"A non-fatal stroke is an awful way to finish life," added the researcher, who treats some of the 150 patients a week referred to the hypertension center at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Long Beach.

The flesh-toned patch should be on the market this fall after gaining expected Food and Drug Administration approval, Weber said.

The patch isn't a better product than the 20 to 30 blood pressure medications currently prescribed by doctors, he said. "The beauty of this is it's only once potent anti-hypertensive medication,

It is designed so medication diffuses slowly through the skin of the chest or arm for seven days and can withstand exposure to exercise and

Weber said the concept of regulating dosage isn't a new one. UCI researchers are pioneers in developing a sophisticated pump for diabetics which injects the proper insulin dose while monitoring blood sugar level.

Far simpler self-adhesive patches doused with drugs also have been used to treat motion sickness and angina, a heart disorder. None, however, are able to deliver a steady dose for up to a week, he said.

"There's a limit on how much medication can be pushed through the skin," Weber said, pointing out that the amount of clonidine prescribed for a week is tiny, measured in fractions of a milligram.

The medical breakthrough was developed jointly by Palo Alto-based Alza Inc., a bio-medical research firm, and drug maker Boehringer Ingelheim Ltd., of Connecticut.

Huntington cops give 'grand tour' to burned boy, 8

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN

Huntington Beach police officers are known for their tough, nononsense approach in dealing with lawbreakers. But Thursday, local officers opened their hearts to a frail, badly burned boy, giving him a grand tour of the city police station, a ride on an all-terrain beach vehicle and a flight along the coast in a police

The recipient of the warm attention was David Rothenberg, the 8-yearold boy from Brooklyn who was nearly burned to death 16 months ago when his father set fire to their Buena Park motel room. The youth attracted nationwide attention when he defied the odds and survived depsite his severe injuries.

Earlier this week, his mother, Marie Rothenberg, announced that she and David are moving to Orange County, in part to be closer to UC Irvine Medical Center, where David is scheduled for plastic surgery later this month. The Rothenbergs also have made many friends in Orange County during David's difficult months of recovery.

The youngster appeared in fine spirits Thursday as a guest of the Huntington Beach Police Department. His visit began with a modest proposal by Officer Nick Ekovich, whose sister, Dee Fraser, is David's nurse. Ekovich works the city's beach patrol, and he received permission to let David ride one of the three-wheel, all-terrain motorcycles used to police the beaches.

Ekovich said things snowballed from there, especially when David was introduced to the shift's watch commander. "Lt. (Bruce) Young couldn't do enough for him," Ekovich said. "He set up the helicopter ride."

Friday 13th, full moon good luck, some claim

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) - A full moon on Friday the 13th may make some cringe, but those who claim to practice witchcraft are coupli solemn ceremonies and joyous celebrations because of today's rare Miguel Serrano, who operates an herb shop known as a botanica in this southern New Jersey community, said sales of witches' supplies — Lucky 13 Oil and Fast Luck 13 candles, for example — boomed because this month's full moon comes on Friday the 13th. "For some people, Friday the 13th is a lucky day," Serrano said. "Business is booming in the occult everywhere, and I'm sure the botanicas will sell a lot of "13" items," said Gavin Frost, who heads the School of Wicca in New Bern, N.C., that mails literature to about 20,000

Frost said a full moon on Friday the 13th "adds a little to the stivities. We're having an extra party. Having the full moon and the 13th is kind of a festive occasion."

Watson leaves his mark on Coast College District

The new sign stands as a permanent tribute to him. After 32 years with the college district, including 21 as its chief administrator, Watson leaves behind other, less visible but no less important personal stamps on the institutions he guided. BAY POLLUTION...

substantiates the water board's belief that there may be a bacterial problem in the bay, he said.

"We don't know where it is coming from yet so we will work to try and locate the sources," the executive

"If we found negative results we could have folded up or tents and not spent the money on the tests," he said, adding that the investigation will cost about $5,000.

When the EPA announced that state and regional water quality boards look at enterococcus concentrations in marine waters, the agency believed the bacteria was primarily linked to humans.

But the agency has since found out that it is associated with other mammals. That finding may complicate the board's ability to find the source of the bacteria.

Possible sources of the bacteria include sanitary waste discharge from boats, the flow into the bay from San Diego Creek and storm and gutter runoff from the surrounding urban

David said he enjoyed the flight and didn't get airsick.

After a few minutes rest at the police station, David was preparing to conclude his busy day with dinner at a Chuck E. Cheese restaurant.

David said he's excited about the move to Orange County.

"I'm going to try school in September," he said. He and his mother are living in Fullerton, and David will enter the third grade at Eastside Christian School.

David, 8, still must wear a pressurized garment over his body and a face mask to aid his skin grafts. He faces years of reconstructive surgery.

He suffered burns over 90 percent of his body in a fire set by Charles David Rothenberg, 43, in a Buena Park motel room March 3, 1983.

David's father had promised to take him to nearby Disneyland during a trip from their New York home. But he later admitted he set the fire because his divorced wife wouldn't let him see the boy anymore.

The elder Rothenberg is serving a 13-year sentence in California's Soledad Prison after pleading guilty in June 1983 to attempted murder.

WATSON LEAVES MARK ON DISTRICT...

here I am 32 years later.

"I liked it. I became sold on the whole movement, the idea of secondchance institutions and opportunities for young people.

Watson is an Orange County native who graduated from Tustin High School. He attended Pomona College, USC and Claremont Graduate School before earning his doctorate in education at Stanford University. He taught English, speech, drama, history, journalism and other subjects at high schools in Chino and Fresno. For four years, he was superintendent of the Capistrano Union High School

"That's when I decided I wanted to be a big city administrator, head of a K-12 (kindergarten, through high school) system," he explained.

Watson said he had never considered working in a college system before fate stepped in. At a meeting in Los Angeles, Watson found himself sitting next to Bill Priest, then an assistant superintendent at Orange Coast. The two chatted at the meeting and the next morning Priest offered

Watson a job at the college. It was 1952. Watson's house in southern Orange County had burned down and his contract with the Capistrano district was expiring. He decided to accept a job at OCC as halftime assistant superintendent for vocational and adult education and half-time psychology teacher. On his first day, he was led to a tiny office and instructed to prepare some schedules and news releases.

At the time, OCC was a new junior college taking shape on grounds formerly occupied by the Santa Ana Army Air Base.

There were only dirt roads around and the old green-frame buildings," Watson recalled. "Mud puddles all over the place. It was very difficult to get from one side of the campus to the other without getting your shoes and pants muddy. There were still dorms on the campus with people sleeping in

What now is the admissions and records building was built as the college library for a maximum of about 2,000 students, the retiring chancellor said. Today, OCC enrolls about 15 times that number each

In the early 1950s, there were two or three male OCC students to every female student. 'At that time," Watson said, "the girls would come to Orange Coast College perhaps for six weeks or maybe a semester in order to meet someone and get married. Of course, things have changed radically since those days.

Today, women make up more than than half the enrollment.

Watson said one of his early responsibilities was recruiting and he found himself fighting the widespread belief that "junior colleges are just high schools with ash trays.

At the same time, Watson faced his own crossroads. He ended his teaching duties to concentrate on adminis-

Peterson retired in 1963, Watson was named to the post. The following year, when plans were made to open a second college, Watson was named chancellor of the district.

He said his goals were to meet the educational needs of coastal Orange County, to make education available to a wider segment of the community and to offer a variety of learning

These goals seemed within reach because the boom years were beginning for two-year institutions.

"During the 1960s and early '70s, community colleges nationwide grew tremendously and rapidly," Watson recalled. "A lot of students couldn't afford to go to the four-year institutions, so community college enrollments grew very rapidly. During that period, one new community college on the average would develop every week in the United States.

In the mid-60s, Coast District trustees decided to sell some OCC to use the money to establish a second college in Huntington Beach. Some OCC faculty members opposed the move, fearing it would drain resources from the Costa Mesa campus. Nonetheless, Golden West College opened in 1966. The college district paid $1.2 million for the 112-acre site. Last year, the district sold just three surplus Golden West acres for $1.5

Watson said he soon learned an important lesson: when you provide people with convenient access to education, they'll take advantage of community college tripled," he said. When Golden West was being built, college officials wanted to allow students to view televised educational programs in various campus locations. District officials learned that Orange County had been allocated an educational television channel, but no one had applied to

The Coast District did and KOCE Channel 50, based at Golden West, began broadcasting in 1972. Watson said there was little initial opposition to the television station. He said the criticism grew when state funding began dwindling and some instruc-tors saw the TV station as a rival for the same remaining resources.

The district's third college, Coastline, was launched in 1976 with a record opening enrollment of 22,000 and a unique design. The college has no central campus but offers classes at rented community locations. It is tailored to older, parttime students. Watson said its design has been copied by other institutions. Watson denies the district spent too lavishly during the boom period, saying the district did not levy the maximum tax rate permitted. But the lower rate was frozen when Proposition 13, the 1978 tax reform measure, was passed by voters. 'If we had levied the maximum tax at that time, we would have been much better off today," he said.

The retiring chancellor admitted the past few years have been his most difficult ones. Proposition 13 gave the state more control over local programs. A "hit list" eliminated state funds for numerous classes.

And collective bargaining was permitted for college faculty members.

That came at about the same time as resources were shrinking," Watson said. "So here you had a (union), which had an interest in more wages, shorter working hours and better working conditions, at the same time as you had less and less money

"So what happens is you have a train coming in each direction straight at one another on the same track. Obviously, you're going to have a collision.

In the Coast District, that collision look the form of massive layous, an unsuccessfull drive to recall district trustees and finally the election last November of three trustees supported by a district teachers union. After the election, Watson announced he would retire in June. though he claimed it was not because of the election.

Before the election, Watson said he believed the teachers were trying to gain control of the district's governing board. Asked now whether his worst fears are coming true, the retiring chancellor's brief response was, "Only time will tell."

Regarding the community college movement, Watson said, "I think it's at a crossroads. The old boom days are gone forever. I think the colleges may need to strike out in new directions now. These center around increased cooperation between business and industry and the community colleges, more re-training of people who are technologically displaced. And I think the community colleges should have an increased role in developing adult literacy.

Watson is critical of California legislators who want community colleges to return to minimal junior college goals of vocational training and preparation for four-year schools.

And regarding the Coast District that he's helped build over the past 32 years, Watson said, "I feel concerned about whether we can continue the fine repuation we've had locally and nationally. I hope we can. I believe it's possible.

At 68, Watson said he's not ready for the rocking chair. He plans to maintain a home in Orange County and do college consulting work. He will have the honorary title of Chancellor Emeritus but, he foresees no further involvement with the Coast District. He's satisfied with the achievements he will leave behind.

"I think I've accomplished more than I thought I would," he said.

Gabriels sex hearing continued to July 26

The pre-trial hearing in the juvenile drugs and sex case against Laguna Beach civic activist John Gabriels was continued until July 26 to give attorneys time to review transcripts before making final arguments on whether Gabriels should be held over for a full jury trial.

Gabriels faces eight felony counts of supplying the prescription drug Quaalude to juveniles and six misdemeanor counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors after he was arrested in his Hilledge Street home on April 11, one day after his unsuccessful bid for election to Laguna Beach City Council.

The final pre-trial witness, Laguna Beach police investigator Robert Rahaeuser, testified Tuesday that police executed a search warrant on Gabriels' bank safety deposit box and found a glass bottle of

In previous testimony, three runaway juveniles said Gabriels let them stay at his home where he offered them the drug and made sexual advances toward them.

Gabriels' attorney, James Riddett of Santa Ana, attempted to have Rahaeurser's testimony thrown out on grounds the police did not have probable cause to believe the pills were in the safe deposit box. But South Orange County Municipal Court Judge Pamela Iles denied the Riddett was more successful earlier in Tuesday's hearing when Judge Iles agreed that testimony from a former roommate of Gabriels, Bruce Franklin Dunn, should be stricken from the record. Dunn said he had warned Gabriels about giving drugs to minors in 1981.

Woman forced to strip in Mesa holdup attempt

By KAREN E. KLEIN Of the Daily Pliot Staff

A New York woman staying with a friend in Costa Mesa this week was confronted by two men who broke in and ransacked her host's apartment and forced her to disrobe before they fled emptyhanded, Costa Mesa police said.

Fritz and Ferraro on the hustings

ELMORE, Minn. (AP) - Democratic convention delegates haven't made it official yet but the party's bistoric ticket, the first to include a woman, is intact and opening its campaign in Walter F. Mondale's toyhood hometown.

Mondale broke a 200-year-old precedent Thursday by naming Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as his choice for the vice presidential slot.

She thus became a virtual cinch to be the first woman selected for national office by a major political party and Mondale said, "Geraldine Ferraro and I have one vision, one message and two voices to tell it."

Speaking in the Minnesota House of Representatives chamber where he announced his presidential candidacy in February 1983, Mondale said, "Tomorrow we begin our campaign together in Elmore, Minn. From there to the convention and then to the nation and then to the White House.

After their joint appearance in Elmore. Mondale and Ferraro planned to fly to Lake Tahoe, and then go on to San Francisco and the Mondale is assured of the majority he needs for the presidential nomination when the delegate roll call is taken Wednesday night.

And there was no doubt that majority will prevail on Thursday night when a vote is taken to ratify his choice of a running mate.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — After hosting a record-breaking invasion of more than 250,000 students this year, Fort Lauderdale is wondering how to keep spring-break visitors away in 1985. "It was unmanageable," says Assistant City Manager Bob Baldwin. "The basic problem is the number of students out there compared to the number of city people. There's just too many kids." A city committee on Tuesday plans to recommend several ways to cut the number of students flocking to Fort Lauderdale next year, including cutting out all advertising aimed at collegians and banning beach concerts.

Air Florida calls back workers

MIAMI - Two union leaders say Air Florida has recalled additional employees and is "trying to crank back up" its operations by the weekend, but company officials deny a date has been set for taking off again. Wilbur Spurlock, president of the Machinists District 146, which represents about 65 baggage handlers, said officials told him Air Florida could resume operations as early as this weekend.

Medical test speeded up

CHICAGO - With a newly developed test, researchers say they now can detect gonorrhea in three hours, rather than the two to three days it can take to find the disease with one currently used test. An additional benefit of the test, according to Dr. David Welch, who was part of the evaluation team, is that the examination does not rely on live gonorrhea samples for its accuracy. With more than I million cases of the venereal disease reported in the United States in 1981, faster diagnosis was needed to help limit its spread and prevent complications, the researchers wrote in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Discovery to carry full load

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Discovery's twice-delayed maiden launch has been rescheduled for Aug. 24 as a 2-for-1 mission, combining payloads that had been planned for the ship's first two flights. This will eliminate one flight and keep the accelerating shuttle schedule on track following back-to-back last-minute postponements of Discovery's debut in June, NASA said Thursday. The combined mission will keep a communications satellite, a solar panel package and a miniature drug-making factory from going aloft on Discovery's first mission. But two communications satellites scheduled to be carried up on the second flight will go up early.

Sundeen retired in 1968.

But at 82, he still makes the trip each holiday season up to the transportation employees' Christmas party — along with his black hat and his magic wand.

"I can barely get in the door before they all start asking me if I brought my magic tricks," Sundeen says, chuckl-

The Costa Mesa magician performed some of his favorite tricks this week during a special Senior Citizen's Day at the Orange County Fair.

Despite the heat and the problems Sundeen had with tricky microphones, the octogenarian pulled off most of his stunts during his first appearance at the annual festivities.

"My favorite is one I do with two tubes and yellow, green and red handkerchiefs," he said. "I make a rose with the scarves, then they disappear and I pull out real roses from inside the tube.

Sundeen's love affair with magic began 60 years ago, he said, when he began helping his father work illusions. "There weren't very many (magicians) in those days," he said

Since then, magic has been a lifelong hobby, along with ham radio operating and gardening.

Sundeen puts on his show free of charge for church groups, senior citizens parties, hospitals and handicapped children. He charges a fee

"He's so cute. He reminds me of my grandfather," said one woman in the fair audience, as Sundeen bustled about in his royal blue jacket and bowtie, setting up his tricks.

After the show, Sundeen picked up some of his simpler illusions and walked around visiting some of the booths at the fair, showing off his stuff. "I'd walk up to the booths where only one person or so was around and do some of the easy stuff," he said.

He learned magic tricks from his father and from "watching other fellows," Sundeen said. He's even invented some of the illusions on his

Although he's always performed magic, he worked for most of his life for the Los Angeles Railway, starting in 1921 on the yellow street car line. "I made 21 cents an hour," as an electrician and mechanic, he recalled.

When the street cars were abandoned and a bus system was set up in their place, Sundeen simply worked on the electrical equipment and mechanics of the buses.

He worked nearly 50 years there before he retired at age 66.

The magic is one of the things that keep me going," Sundeen said. Since the death of his wife he has lived alone in his Costa Mesa home.

"I've got my ham radio and my chores - I painted the house recently and I do my gardening. I work the same as I always worked, I guess."

Lots of freebies at the OC Fair

While it costs a dime to ride the merry-go-round and a buck to see the world's smallest horse, the 92nd edition of the Orange County Fair in Costa Mesa is loaded with freebies.

Among the organizations represented at the fair, the Costa Mesa Medical Center is offering free blood pressure tests and cardio pulmonary resuscitation training.

Youngsters attending the fair can be fingerprinted by Orange County Sheriff's deputies and some lucky visitors may appear on a cable television program being taped by Rogers Cablesystems.

As always, there are scores of free demonstrations. Visitors can get free periment with a portable back massager, get their glasses cleaned or bounce on a trampoline.

Flower fans can take home a free freshly cut plumeria blossom or learn the art of lei-making at the Big Island Plant Co. booth.

In the fairground's home arts buildings, visitors can sample the cooking and baking styles of celebrity chefs. Political parties also are on hand, passing out free literature, buttons and stickers.

The fair runs through Sunday. Hours are 10 a.m. to midnight. Admission is $4 for adults, $1 for children ages six through 12. Parking

Monroe city fathers in tizzy over this attractive hazard

MONROE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — City officials are considering closing a roadside hot dog stand because the woman who operates it is 'an attractive girl" who might cause traffic accidents by turning the heads of male drivers.

Gerry Clevenger, 30, of Glassboro, quit her job as a cocktail waitress two months ago to become her own boss selling hot dogs "From what they tell me, she's an attractive girl," said Council President Vincent Tarantino. "I felt it was a nuisance. I observed vehicles stopping and her coming to the vehicles and her holding a conversation."

Clevenger said she got the appropriate licenses to open Gerry's Hot Dog Stand at a busy intersection in a rural section of this southern New Jersey community, and never expected any controversy.

"I haven't caused one accident on this corner in the two months that I've been here," she said. "I don't even wear shorts to cause any accidents.

Clevenger says she left her job as a cocktail waitress so she could peddle danger to motorists or could be and bring her 9-year-old son to work with her.

Customers generally pull off the road onto a small patch of dirt to pick up their hot dogs. But Tarantino said some motorists have been seen stopping in the street.

That is a heavily used intersection. I feel she could cause a hazard, she could cause an accident," he said. "If she wears short pants or a bathing suit, it would be a hazard if someone took their eyes off the road."

Tarantino said local lawmakers were told of Clevenger's stand by Butch D'Alessandro, who owns a competing business, Butch's Little Ponderosa, across the street.

"She will stay there and wave at these people to come in. I think it's a traffic hazard out there, D'Alessandro said.

He acknowledged he doesn't like the competition because he too sells hot dogs. At a recent township council meetng, lawmakers discussed whether effects on the body attributed to drinking alcoholic beverages, including protection against heart disease, may result from hormone-like substances in the drinks and not the alcohol, a researcher said Tuesday.

Does alcohol affect body like female sex hormones?

Scientists at the University of Pittsburgh say plant estrogens from the wheat, corn, rice or hops used to make liquor and other alcoholic drinks may affect the body just as human female sex hormones do.

Judith Gavaler, a research associate in the university's department of medicine, said animal research indicates these so-called "phytoestrogens" have a potential for causing biological effects in humans as

"The animal data, although preliminary, indicates that exposure to phyto-estrogens causes an estrogen effect," she said in an interview. "If it works the same way in people, then many of the effects long attributed to ethanol may be caused by phytoestrogens.

Chronic use of ethanol, or pure alcohol, is associated with impotence and sterility in men, she said, and a few even develop such "feminine" characteristics as slightly enlarged breasts.

Heavy alcohol consumption in women has been associated with reproductive dysfunction, early menopause and increased risk of certain types of breast cancer.

These same effects also could be estrogens, but few researchers have looked at other ingredients in alcoholic beverages because ethanol is the most obvious active substance, Gavaler told a seminar sponsored by the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

Women who consume the equivalent of four mixed drinks daily statistically are at a higher risk of developing breast cancer, she said, and some of these cancers are linked to estrogen exposure.

So far, no data prove conclusively that alcohol or phyto-estrogens cause breast cancer, Gavaler said, but it does suggest that these substances could have a role in the disease.

Three phyto-estrogens have been found in alcoholic beverages and all three - betasitosterol, biochamin-A and genistein - have been identified in some breast cancer tissue, she said.

Gavaler said humans are exposed to phyto-estrogens from many sources, including from grains, vegetables and vegetable oils from peanuts, olives, soybeans, corn and other plants.

"I suggest that we are constantly exposed to phyto-estrogens, but that it is not necessarily bad," she said.

Both estrogens and alcoholic beverages are known to increase blood levels of a type of cholesterol that seems to protect against heart disease. These increases in highdensity lipoprotein cholesterol may stem from phyto-estrogen exposure,

To test the effects of alcoholic beverages without the alcohol, Gavaler and colleagues removed the ethanol from bourbon with a vacuum-evaporation technique They then mixed the non-alcoholic bourbon into the daily drinking water of female rats whose ovaries had been removed.

Because the animals no longer had their major sources of estrogen, the researchers looked for any estrogenlinked responses. They found that the uterus and fallopian tubes of each of these rats, which shrink in the absence of estrogen, increased in weight after exposure to the special hourbon.

Also, hormones that stimulate ovarian activity, which were a elevated levels after removal of the organs, declined with consumption of the non-alcoholic bourbon, she said.

Because of these results, she said, future studies of alcohol consumption and disease processes will have to separate the effects of ethanol from those of the phyto-estrogens.

It's about time

The reaction to Walter Mondale's choice of Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate (presuming his fellow Democrats nominate him in San Francisco next week) was swift and just about equally divided between two points of view: It's-abouttime and She's-not-qualified.

Rep. Ferraro may not be qualified to be president, but it's certainly about time a we gave up the addled notion that a woman's gender is a disqualifying factor.

Like most domestic politicians, the congresswoman from Archie Bunker's home district in New York City's Borough of Queens is said to be light on foreigh policy experience. The same might have been said about President Jimmy Carter, the Georgia peanut farmer who earned international acclaim by orchestrating the Camp David accords and then committed political hara-kiri with his handling of the Iranian hostage crisis.

A lack of practical experience in international affairs didn't keep the Ronald Reagan from the presidency. Nor has it kept him from providing strong — if controversial — direction to our foreign policy.

Besides, since when have qualifications been the foremost consideration for vice-presidential candidates. Traditionally, the vice president has been chosen for the politcal support he until now it's always been a he - could bring to the ticket. Vicepresidential candidates largely have won distiction as answers to trivia questions. But even the least presidential among them many critics hang this mantle on Gerald Ford — are superior people, achievers, who have risen very near to the top of their chosen professions.

As a congressman, Ford was not famous for his foreign policy acumen. But his brief stint in the White House may have been as important as any in American history. Ford was the Mr. Nice Guy president, the all-American family man who cooked his own breakfast and helped a nation forget the "Imperial Presidency" albatross that had been hung on his dishonored predecessor, Richard Nixon.

Ferraro knows domestic policy, is intelligent and would bring her own special skills to the office.

Are her particular skills the right ones for the person aspiring to sit a heartbeat away from the Oval Office? Perhaps

But Ferraro would bring to the Democratic ticket the same thing that political parties look for in every candidate: Votepulling power.

Rather than criticize Mondale for "using" her to draw female voters, we should rejoice that a milestone in the history of American democracy has been passed.

A woman whose candidacy would have been rejected automatically because of her gender - and despite her qualifications — can now realistically seek very high public

Laotians risk lives to flee repressive regime there. The sticking point is in the

Refugees who reach haven in Thailand tell harrowing tales of danger, death

WASHINGTON - Catastrophe and conflict have become commonplace in Laos, a faraway land abused by the communists who rule it. Thousands of Laotians, most of them Hmong tribesmen from the hills, risk their lives to escape across the Mekong River into Thailand.

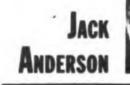

Many of the people are persecuted because they were U.S. allies during the Vietnam War. Their travail is described in a secret cable from the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane.

With characteristic diplomatic understatement, the cable states that "many people in this country have had a pretty rough time." This has caused "surreptitious flight from the country by Lao and others who feel themselves threatened by the (communist) regime or who see grim economic prospects under it.

No early end to this flood of human misery is likely, according to a Defense Intelligence Agency report, because "the Laotian communists are determined to pacify the Hmong and integrate them into the new order." But the tribesmen, the report declares, "will vehemently struggle to maintain their way of life free of government interference.

My associate Dale Van Atta visited Thailand recently and spoke to Laotian refugees who have reached the dubious haven of Thai refugee camps and detention centers. They had harrowing tales to tell.

The stories most deeply etched in the hearts of the escapees involved babies - those who were born along the escape trail and died during its rigors, those who were killed by government soldiers and those who died from inhaling too much opium smoke, blown in their faces to calm them down and prevent crying that could betray the whole party to communist troops.

Van Atta's interpreter, Pongkaset Suwannakoon, told about a refugee mother he had interviewed. Her baby began to cry just as they were stealing into a raft to cross the Mekong. Afraid the Pathet Lao soldier patrolling the river bank would hear the crying, she put her hand over the baby's mouth. But in her panic the mother covered the infant's nose as well, and by the time the raft reached the Thai side of the river, the baby was dead.

At Ban Nong, a fishing village on the Mekong, a leader told my associate about a problem the village fishermen had encountered in recent years: snagging bullet-riddled bodies in their nets.

The ordeal of escape was described by You Toua Xiong, 36, a Hmong leader who had fled his mountain village with nine family members last

They crossed a dam north of Vientiane by boat and caught a bus to the capital. They were able to acquire a small truck, and they started driving toward the border. Other hopeful escapees joined along the way until they had 26 people crammed into the little truck

At the Mekong crossing, they managed to obtain two small boats, which made repeated trips across the river in the dead of night. With 10 refugees still left on the Lao bank three men, five women, a 4-year-old and a 1-year-old - the boats went back for another pickup.

Suddenly the refugees on the Thai shore heard gunfire, then silence. The boats never returned.

BOMBS AWEIGH?: The Pentagon and State Department are quietly but passionately at odds over a shipment of weapons-grade plutonium from France to Japan.

The Pentagon is afraid the plutonium may be hijacked by terrorists if it is shipped on a civilian freighter with no military escort. The State Department is afraid the Japanese will resent being told how to handle the nuclear material. For reasons of their own, the Japanese don't want military involvement in the plutonium shipment.

The reason the United States is involved at all is that the material used to make the plutonium came from this country. By law, U.S. officials are obliged to approve any subsequent use or disposal of the deadly product.

The Japanese plan to use the plutonium strictly for peaceful scientific research. That's no problem method of shipment.

The Japanese government - apparently worried about its people's sensitivity to things nuclear - says its regulations require that the plutonium be shipped on an unarmed freighter. A military ship or escort would create a furor in Japan.

But the Pentagon points out that it would be child's play for a terrorist gang to waylay the freighter on its journey halfway around the world and hijack the plutonium. Terrorists in possession of a nuclear bomb is a recurrent Pentagon nightmare.

The State Department is willing to risk it in the cause of good relations with Japan. My sources tell me the White House will be asked to settle the controversy.

Schools face set of tough choices

High court ruling to prohibit fees may signal cuts

Midway through another hot California summer, one of the legacies of Proposition 13 is obvious to parents with teenage children: Most school districts have no summer programs. Since 1978, many school districts have had to choose between cutting out summer sessions and chopping vital programs during the school year. Their choices are about to get quite a bit tougher. For the same state Supreme Court that allowed cities and counties to assess many new fees as replacements for some of the taxes they lost to Howard Jarvis and Paul Gann has now forbidden schools to do the same thing. Since 1979, many schools have been charging fees for participation in extracurricular activities like sports, bands and student newspapers. Those fees, ranging up to $100 per student, circumvented Proposition 13 in the same way that cities later skirted the law by forming special assessment districts to pay for parks and street lighting.

The schools' reasoning was that since after-school activities are not regular classes, they're not "integral" to the free education every student

The Supreme Court wasted no time shooting that theory down when it ruled this spring in a 7-1 decision.

"It can no longer be denied that extracurricular activities constitute an integral component of public education," wrote Justice Otto Kaus. His majority opinion also blasted the notion of fee waivers for students who cannot afford to pay The whole idea of fees, Kaus wrote,

'contradicts the plain language of the (state) Constitution" which says schools are to be free regardless of ability to pay. Like most other school-finance decisions handed down in the last 12 years, this one will hurt middle-class suburban school districts far more than those in the inner cities. For most urban districts never assessed fees, fearing that huge numbers of their students wouldn't be able to pay. But a heavy toll was exacted in more affluent areas. The Acalanes Union High School District in Contra Costa County raised about $190,000 last year by charging $60 per student Marin County's Tamalpais Uni-fied district charges $45 per student per sport and planned to raise the fee to $60 next fall. 'The court decision could be devastating," said Superintendent Tony Trujillo. "But it also could help. We've been trying for about three years to get a county athletic foundation off the ground. This could give us the impetus we need.' But if not, Tamalpais will have to cut other programs or look to the state Legislature for money to keep its football teams in shoulder pads and its band supplied with trombones. 'There's no doubt the Legislature will be approached for more money in the next year because of this," said one lawyer for the state Department of Education. "But legislators may decide extracurricular activities are not as important as regular class. And the idea that the Legislature has plenty of money is very optimistic." So many districts will no doubt be faced with tough decisions: Cut the football coaching staff or the math faculty? Buy kicking tees or test tubes?

The choice was easy when it was between regular classes and summer school. But no summer school has the kind of powerful community supporters that back many high school football teams.

If school districts decide for academics over extracurriculars, the court decision may force those backers to translate their support into money, or else keep quiet. Thomas Elias is a Santa Monicabased columnist on state affairs.

Moffet in favorite's role after success at Olympic Trials

By ROGER CARLSON Of the Daily Pilot Staff

John Moffet has been a swimmer blessed with success since his early days in Newport Harbor High's program. Winning has been a way of life with records and championships almost a foregone conclusion.

But there's always been someone, somewhere, one-up on him.

Whether it was Canada's Victor Davis or American Steve Lundquist or Britain Adrian Moorhouse or Soviets Vladimir Shemetov or Dmitri Volkov, it seems, the talented Moffet was always keeping his eyes and thoughts on someone higher on the ladder.

No longer is this an issue. Moffet, who'll turn 20 two days before he goes for the gold medal in the 100-meter breaststroke at the Olympic Games on July 29, is the reigning world record-holder in the event with a clocking of 1:02.13.

And, although he's still "only" fifth in the 200 rankings, he figures to be the one to beat for the gold in the 200meter breaststroke Aug. 2.

Moffet went to the recent Olympic Trials with just two things on his mind — qualify for one of the two available berths in each event. Now, with that accomplished, he has a reputation to live up to also.

'It's the first time I've been No. 1."

says Moffet, "and of course, it changes things. I'm the one to beat and it's a fun position to be in."

Although he is one of America's veterans (he earned a berth on the 1980 Olympic team which did not compete in the Soviet Union), he admits emotions come into play.

"There are so many nerves in the blocks," he says. "What you have done for the past six years is on the line. But now that I've made the team I don't have to worry.

While Moffet stunned Lundquist

in the 100 with his world record clocking, the Stanford junior says the effort turned on him later, in the 200, where he held on to get the final of two berths behind Richard Schroeder of Santa Barbara.

"My 200 was horrible," he says. "I didn't feel good in the water and the whole race was forced. I was probably a little nervous. And, I question my own intensity. I had already made the Moffet swam a 2:17,66, well off his anticipated pace.

Davis and Moorehouse, in addition to Schroeder, figure to give Moffet his toughest challenge in the 200. In the 100, it's Lundquist and Davis who are his chief rivals.

"In the 100 I'll just have to go out fast," says the Costa Mesa resident. "Steve (Lundquist) is right behind me and definitely my main competition.
And, you never know . . . " he added, alluding to the unknown factor.

Moffet turned to high yardage workouts upon his return to Southern California from the Olympic Trials, with the idea of a taper beginning within 10 days.

The winner of the 100 gets a bonus in addition to a gold medal — a place on the men's 4 x 100 medley relay team, which projects as a heavy favorite for a gold medal on the final day of the Games, Aug. 4.

While the boycott of the Communist bloc countries is a very big issue in most directions, especially swimming, the men's breaststroke is virtually exempt.

He has no records

But Carl Lewis only concern is winning events

HOUSTON (AP) - He is one of the best-known track athletes in the world and a favorite to win gold medals in four events at the Olympic Games. Yet, Carl Lewis doesn't possess a world record in any event.

But he wears a jack-of-all-trades title comfortably.

"I think it proves that fans like competition, they don't necessarily like records because right now I'm the hottest person in track and field and I'm probably the only one (of the top athletes) without a world record, Lewis said in his final scheduled news conference prior to the Olympic

Lewis qualified for the Olympics in the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the long jump, and will run the anchor leg on the 400-meter relay. Yet he's not concerned about records because he says it is not an objective.

"If I really wanted them, I could have them, I think. But it's not an objective," Lewis said. "My objective is to compete in a lot of events and have fun. If I singled out certain performances on certain days I could probably have world records. "But I'd rather go 19.8, 28-7 and 10.06 and win all three instead of setting records," he said.

Lewis' non-record performances have certainly had no effect on the attention he receives.

T've gotten more attention before the Olympics than most athletes do afterward," Lewis said. "It's mind-boggling to think what it will be like if I do well in the Olympics.

Despite predictions that he will easily match the four gold-medal performance of Jesse Owens in the 1936 Olympics, Lewis is assuming 'The media can only report what it sees," Lewis said. "At the Olympic Games, I've been built very high as a gold-medal threat. I don't look at myself that way. I just think of myself as an athlete competing."

Lewis said he would be upset at not winning four gold medals only if he loses by not competing well.

"You have talented people in different events," Lewis said. "If I go out and run the 100 meters and Ron Brown has a fabulous start and just runs a great race and I run 9.93 and he runs 9.92 and wins the gold medal, then I can't really see me being disappointed.
"It's just like some races they've run great against me and I won and weren't disappointed. Performance is the most important thing. If I perform well, the medals or whatever happens, won't be that big a

Lewis says his primary objective going into the Games will be to remain relaxed and concentrate on qualifying for the finals in each event. "I could jump 27 feet in my sleep and I could run 10.2 basically from a standing start so I should have no (Please see LEWIS/B3)

LA not laughing at Carson's joke

Russell commits 88th error of season ... and it's costly

CHICAGO (AP) - Johnny Carson got a big laugh Wednesday night when he joked that pop singer Michael Jackson and the error-prone Los Angeles Dodgers have something in common - they both wear gloves on one hand for no apparent reason.

But Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda wasn't laughing Thursday after his shortstop Bill Russell's fielding error allowed two unearned runs to score for Chicago in the first inning en route to a 3-2 Cubs' victory in 10 innings.

It was Dodger error No. 88 this year in 89 games - against only 66 for their opponents.

Asked why the Dodgers are only 18-25 against the National League East this year - compared to 46-26 versus the division all of last year -Lasorda deadpanned, "Because we're not beating those teams."

Asked why, he told reporters in the clubhouse "They are scoring more

It was All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg, however, who got the last laugh — a homer into the leftcenter field bleachers in the bottom of the 10th, his 12th of the season. "I had two strikes on me and I was choking up on the bat, trying to get solid contact. I was fortunate it went out," said Sandberg.

The victory stretched the Cubs' extra-innings record to 6-0, and it was the 11th time this season that the last Cub batter of the game got the winning RBI.

'Any time you hit a game-winning homer it's great, said Sandberg, whose heroics came off reliever Tom Niedenfuer, 1-5.

'He's a hot ballplayer right now. You got to give him credit," said Niedenfuer of Sandberg, who on Tuesday night stole a base and went 1for-4 at the plate for the winning National League All-Stars.

"If he keeps swinging like that we're going to win it all," said teammate Leon Durham, playing in his first game since jamming his right shoulder June 24

"I didn't want the rest, but it will do me good down the stretch," he said. Durham contributed a single in Thursday's victory, and said his shoulder felt fully healed after its first test under game conditions. Los Angeles collected nine hits and at least one Dodger reached base in all but the first two innings. "We got guys on, but couldn't get them in," said Lasorda.

Rams open training camp

The Rams opened their 1984 training camp Thursday at Cal State Fullerton and Coach John Robinson expressed high hopes it was just the start of something big.
"We have a much clearer picture of our team than we had last year," Robinson said. "A lot of things have fallen into place since the end of the season." The Rams, a combined 8-17 in 1981-82, were 9-7 and made the playoffs in 1983, which was Robinson's first year with the Rams.

"I don't think anyone can question that this organization is committed to going beyond what we were last year (a contender for the playoffs) into a contender for the championship," Robinson said. Forty-six rookies and young veterans reported on the first day of camp, which will last until Aug. 19. The remainder of the 99-man training-camp squad must report to camp by next Thursday. Among the young veterans reporting Thursday were reserve quarterback Jeff Kemp, second-year linebacker Mike Wilcher, secondyear offensive lineman Gary Kowalski and rookie defensive end Doug Reed, who spent last season on the injured reserve list.

Angels get another sparkling pitching effort from Witt

By RICHARD DUNN

The Angels, who weren't expected to get much pitching this season, continue to get plenty of it. What they were expected to get - hitting - hasn't consistently materialized. Although they got enough of it Thursday night at Anaheim Stadium.

That is, enough to help Mike Witt complete his fifth game and win his ninth (9-7), as the rigt-hander tossed a strong five-hitter in beating the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-2, and added to the amazing resurgence of an often criticized

"I think we have a good pitching staff," Witt said after his win, which topped his previous career-high total, "but we have to get runs, too. They go hand in hand. "We went through the first half pretty good, and we won mainly on pitching. Witt, who was scratched from his last start (July 7) with tendinitis in his right bicep, fanned five to raise his American League-leading total to 106 in winning for the fourth time in a row.

Meanwhile, the Angels received some help in the standings from Baltimore, which bounced Chicago twice Thursday. After Thursday's play that left the Angels 45-42 only a millimeter behind division-leading Minnesota (44-41).

But, since the Angels have been somewhat shaky in the unfriendly confines of Anaheim Stadium this season (16-23), does a win in the first game of a 13-game homestand mean much more than just that?

"Sure, that has to be a plus for us tonight," Angel Manager John McNamara said, "getting back into first place, the first crock out of the box." However, it looked like both teams had taken three days off, in the early going, at least.

Milwaukee scored in the first inning, thanks to a couple of errors and Witt's only two walks of the game, and the Angels tied it (1-1) in the second after Reggie Jackson walked and came home on a three-base throwing error by usually sure-handed first baseman Cecil Cooper, trying to nail Jackson going to third after Juan Beniquez's slow roller for an out to third baseman Roy Howell

Jackson, hustling on the play the whole way, perhaps triggered a spark the Angels could use. 'I had a couple of days off," Jackson noted. "I felt like

I was 19 again.

Then jokingly said, "just great baseball instincts." "I saw a lot of good things tonight," McNamara said. "Witt's pitching, (Rod) Carew's hitting (3-5), Jackson running the bases — not giving up."

The skids continued, for Milwaukee, through the third inning. Carew got the game's first hit, a bloop double off the glove of a diving Robin Yount at shortstop in shallow left field. He moved to third on a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch.

The Brewers turned a routine out into a run-scoring double in the fifth when the Angels upped their lead to 3-1. With two outs and Carew on first, a trio of Brewers (Yount, Howell and left-fielder Ben Oglivie) couldn't handle Fred Lynn's pop up down the left-field line, as it went off Oglivie's glove, allowing Carew to score, who, of course, ith two outs, was running on impact of the ball. And that was all the Angels needed, although they added single runs in the seventh and eighth innings for a bit Summer Games are on schedule, Olympic organizers announced Thursday that about 80 percent of Olympic construction is complete and 90 percent of sold tickets have been mailed.

With both main Olympic villages due to open Saturday, Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee president Peter Ueberroth said Thursday that living quarters and competition sites are 98 percent complete.

Speaking to reporters at what he called the final pre-Olympic press briefing, Ueberroth said: "We're going to be all right financially. The surplus will be there."

The LAOOC had previously predicted a $15 million surplus. That's been reduced, he admitted, but wouldn't say by how much.

"I don't think it's in the best interest of the Games, and we still have discussions with ABC. There are so darn many variables," he said. However, he said a final accounting will be given before he leaves the LAOOC to become commissioner of major league baseball on Oct. 1.

However, he said, "there's no cockiness," adding that "we're not fallible, and a lot could go wrong. There are going to be bugs, and we have to work them out."

The ABC-TV talks are the only negotiations still hanging, he said, and they focus on possible reductions as a result of the Soviet-led boycott by 14 communist-bloc nations.

WASHINGTON - Howard Cosell, the veteran ABC sports announcer, says he's "tired of being tied to the football mentality" and doesn't want to broadcast any more football or baseball games, USA Today reported today.

Cosell, whose contract with ABC runs out at the conclusion of the Summer Olympics, said told the newspaper he wants to concentrate instead on his 'Sports Beat" show and on college lectures. Cosell, 64, has been a member of the "Monday Night Football" crew since its began 14 years ago. 'I'm tired of being tied to the football mentality," Cosell told the newspaper. "You say they put a fast man on a slow man and a tall man on a short man. There's no brilliance in deducing that .

'I don't want to work anymore football or baseball games," he said.

However, Cosell, who was a member of ABC's crew in Tuesday night's All-Star game, said he felt he obliged to talk to ABC chairman Leonard Goldenson to see how much he wants me to continue.

He said he received hundreds of letters a week from people asking how they can become sportscasters. 'I tell them, 'Become a gutteral illiterate and learn how to catch a football," he said. With his lectures, Cosell said, he could "educate our youth so that journalism could be returned to sports broadcasting."

Quote of the day

Patrick McEnroe, 17-year-old brother of John McEnroe, asked about the possibility of facing John and partner Peter Fleming after qualifying for his first doubles appearance at Wimbledon (he was eliminated in the first round): "I wouldn't want to put him out of the championship too early."

SAN FRANCISCO — Al Oliver says he wants to be traded at the end of the season from the San Francisco Giants, preferably to an American League club as a designated hitter, in order to pursue his quest of 3,000

Frustrated Oliver wants trade

The 37-year-old first baseman expressed frustration at his role with the Giants, who are in last place in the National League West, 16 games behind division-leading San Diego. "If we don't win, at the end of the season I will go in and ask them to move me elsewhere," Oliver said in Pittsburgh, where the Giants started a series Thursday against the Pirates.

The first baseman, who has a .305 lifetime batting average, said there are two reasons he is disclosing his plan to ask for a trade now.

'It will give them the opportunity to put someone else at first base, and it will give me a chance to move on to a team that will give me the opportunity and the respect that goes along with getting 3,000 hits," he said.

Gaetti's double sparks Twins

Gary Gaetti cracked a two-out double to spark a three-run rally in the seventh, and Frank Viela scattered five Detroit hits over eight innings to pick up his sixth straight win as Minnesota trimmed the Tigers, 4-2. The Twins, who moved into first place by percentage points over the Angels, were trailing 1-0 before their comeback in the bottom of the seventh. Randy Bush started the inning with a double off Dan Petry, 11-4, and two outs later, Gaetti doubled and Houston Jimenez and Kirby Puckett followed with RBI singles . . . Toronto failed to gain any ground on the American League East leading Tigers, however, as Dave Kingman's 24th home run of the year capped a sixrun seventh-inning explosion that rallied Oakland to a 7-4 decision over the Blue Jays . . Scott McGregor hurled a fourhitter and Cal Ripken Jr. homered as Baltimore defeated Chicago, 3-0, and completed a sweep of a twi-night doubleheader over the White Sox. The Orioles snapped Chicago's seven-game winning streak with a 2-1 victory in the opener as Wayne Gross and Eddie Murray hit homers to back a combined fourhitter by Storm Davis and Sammy Stewart . . . Phil Niekro scattered seven hits over seven innings for his 12th victory and Dave Winfield drilled the first of four consecutive hits in New York's three-run first-inning as the Yankees downed Kansas City, 5-2. Niekro leads the league with a 1.88 earned run average and is 12-4. Buddy Bell drove in four runs with a double, single and sacrifice fly and Charlie Hough pitched a four-hitter to lead Texas to a 7-2 victory over Cleveland ... Rookie left-hander Mark Langston tossed a three-hitter through eight innings and Seattle held on for a 3-2 victory over the Red Sox. Langston, 7-7, also held Boston to just three hits on July I in Fenway Park.

Padres pad lead to six games

Eric Show and Craig Lefferts combined on a four-hitter and Kevin McReynolds rapped his 12th home run, leading San Diego to a 4-1 triumph Thursday night over Joaquin Andujar and the St. Louis Cardinals. The victory boosted the Padres' lead to six games over Atlanta and 71/2 over the Dodgers in the National League West . . . Elsewhere in the NL, the Braves fell another game behind as Keith Hernandez and Mike Fitzgerald each drove in a pair of runs in a five-run ninth inning to give the New York Mets an 8-6 victory in Atlanta . . . Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter through seven innings and drove in two runs with a double, and Ozzie Virgil and Tim Corcoran each homered as Philadelphia knocked off Houston, 5-3. Carlton, 7-4, struck out four and walked one as he won his fourth game in his last five decisions. Al Holland collected his 18th save, pitching the final two innings . . . Jose DeLeon struck out 12 batters in eight innings and Tony Pena's run-scoring double capped a three-run fifth inning as Pittsburgh stopped San Francisco, 6-3 ... Gary Carter, the Most Valuable Player in Tuesday's All-Star game, drove in all three runs with a homer and a two-run single to back the combined six-hit pitching of Bryn Smith and two relievers as Montreal Expos defeated Cincinnati, 3-1.

Wood sizzles to lead by one

Willie Wood, the slightly built rookie called "Wee Willie," birdied half the holes he played, shot an 8-under-par 63 and established a two-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the Busch Golf Classic in Williamsburg, Va. Host pro Curtis Strange, whose home is on this course, regained the putting touch that has eluded him much of the season and had a 65 that left him second alone. Lindy Miller was next with a 66 in the hot, humid weather. Lanny Wadkins, who has taken five titles in the last two seasons but has yet to win this year, and Bruce Lletzke led the group at 67, 4-under par ... In the U.S. Women's Open at Peabody, Mass., consistent Amy Alcott and patient Jo Ann Washam shot one-under par 71s for a share of the first-round lead. Alcott, winner of 19 events in 10 years on the LPGA tour, and Washam, a veteran winless since 1979, were the only players in a field of 150 to break par as the 72-hole event returned to Salem Country Club after a 30-year

Giants, Vikings swing deal

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The New York Giants traded five-time All-Pro linebacker Brad Van Pelt to the Minnesota Vikings for fullback Tony Galbreath, the National Football League teams announced Thursday.

Van Pelt, 33, had been a starter with the Giants since 1974, a year after he was the team's second-round draft choice from Michigan State. Van Pelt was All-Pro and played in the Pro Bowl from 1976-80. Galbreath, 30, started the final seven games of the season for the Vikings last season. He gained 474 yards rushing with a 4.2 average and ran for four touchdowns. He caught 45 passes for 348 yards.

Galbreath was a second-round draft pick of New Orleans in 1976. He was a starter with the Saints for five seasons before being traded to Minnesota prior to the 1981 season.

CFA members reject Big Ten, Pac-10 ference and 19 major independents.

From AP dispatches

All 63 members of the College Football Association, ignoring efforts by a Big Ten-Pac-10 coalition to lure them away, agreed Thursday to join together for a television package in 1984, officials said.

Chuck Neinas, executive director of the CFA, said each of his members had each filed a commitment form to be part of the organization's plan. Neinas said "filed a commitment form" means the schools are bound.

The CFA membership consists of the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big 8 Conference, the Southeastern Conference, the Southwest Conference, the Western Athletic Con-

"Naturally, we are pleased with the unanimous vote," Neinas said from the CFA's headquarters in Denver. The Big Ten and Pac-10 Conferences are not members of the CFA and are working out a separate plan for television rights. Wayne Duke, the Big Ten commissioner, had said his coalition was talking with several Eastern and Southern independents in an attempt to widen its base. Duke did not provide names of those schools. An attempt to get the CFA and Big Ten-Pac-10 to consolidate the efforts failed earlier this week.

The Supreme Court two weeks ago struck down two existing NCAA packages sold to CBS, ABC and ESPN for almost $275 million, saying they were in violation of federal antitrust laws. On Tuesday, college football's mjor schools turned down a last-ditch proposal by the NCAA for a TV package that would have been based on voluntary cooperation.

"The CFA Television Committee will commence discussions with all interested television entities at the earliest possible date," Neinas said.

He said the basic CFA television plan provides for a national marketing effort in two times period on each date - offering those to national networks and national cable - as well as an open period for conference and institutional telecasts in the afternoon, which would be used for local and regional broadcasts.

Retire? Terry

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradsha late Thursday refuted reports that he has decided to retire from the National Football League.

"I had hundreds of phone calls lately but I haven't decided," Bradshaw said in a telephone interview with KDKA-TV in Pittsburgh. "I just get ticked off by all this. It's amazing Earlier Thursday, a CBS spoker-man said Bradshaw has been offered a contract as a color analist for the network and a Shreveport, La. newspaper carried a copyrighted story with Bradshaw implying he was about to retire officially. "We are in serious negotiations with Bradshaw," said Mark Carlson, director of sports information for CBS. "There is no contract on the floor, but we expect something soon, although he said an announcement is expected in the immediate future. "We have made an offer and we think it (an agreement) is very close;

added Doug Richardson, a Carlson associate. Richardson said that no contract could be signed until Bradshaw's status with the Steelers has been settled. Bradshaw told KDKA he believed retirement was not necessary to accept the CBS position, but said he has not made a decision on the offer.

"I'll be very honest with you, I really don't know," he said. "I haven't sat down. I just know I gave them the authority to negotiate on my behalf in regards to the contract." Dave Gershenson, a Los Angeles entertainment agent who is representing Bradshaw in negotiations with CBS, said the two sides were "still talking. That's all I can say. Nothing is final, although I can say both sides are interested."

He characterized the delay in reaching an agreement as "a matter of the attorneys having their way."

His arm didn't seem to give him any problems last night. "It felt pretty good," he said. But how about the long layoff?

"Actually, it probably helped me for tonight, I felt strong. But warming up in the bullpen

ANGEL NOTES — The Angels announced Thursday they have re-activated first baseman Darty Sceniers. Sconiers, who appeared in lust three games prior to his injury (sciatic irrilatation of the lower right back), was placed on the disabled list April 12. The Angels are also expected to re-activate shortstop Dick Scheffeld (sprained ankle) from the DL on Monday, which would leave the Culp with 26 players. So, that would leave the club with 26 players. So, that forces a tough, but inevitable mid-season roster cut. One thing is for sure: they don't need three first basemen (Scohiers, Red Carew and Ren Jackson). Jackson appears to be the one that could go, although the Angel brass admitted in sociola training they would'd let him an horse in spring training they wouldn't let him go because of his versatility. He's batting only .172 with no home runs and five RBI ... $51 million Centre breaks ground

Mola Development Corporation, a major Southern California developer, has broken ground on its $51 million, 375,000 square foot Charter Centre in Huntington Beach

Located on a prime eight-acre site at the corner of Beach Boulevard and Warner Avenue, Charter Centre will have the tallest office tower in the city of Huntington Beach with 14 floors of offices and 210,000 square feet of space. Also included in the center will be an additional six-story 75,000 square foot office building, a five-plex Edwards Cinema, a 44,000 square foot Holiday Health Spa, two major restaurants, a six-level parking structure, and a variety of on-site

The Beach Boulevard and Warner Avenue site represents a strategic location for the city of almost 180,000 people. The site is located less than one mile from the San Diego freeway and ten minutes from the John Wayne Airport, giving it regional Mola Development Corp. President Frank J. Mola described Charter potential for good, sound, solid Centre "as the premier development in the area and a much needed alternative to the congested John Wayne Airport/Irvine Industrial Complex." Mola noted, "Huntington Beach has long been considered a very attractive bedroom community Charter Centre will be a people-oriented project." White, pre-cast concrete panels and seafoam green solar glass will be used to enhance the clean, uncluttered lines of the office structures and capture the feeling of this beach community.

The landscape architect, Fong & Associates of Newport Beach, has designed a pedestrian-oriented plaza that will be accented by an array of fountains and will link the parking structure with the outdoor plaza, restaurants and office towers.

The building of Charter Centre signifies a major step in the re-development plans of Huntington Beach. The city has taken a stronger position in supporting the new con-struction of office and commercial

Credit cards introduced by North Dallas theater

DALLAS (AP) - Moviegoers do with the movie selection. It's just short on cash or weary of waiting in line for a cashier now can use credit cards to buy tickets from an automated teller machine in a first-of-its kind experiment at a north Dallas theater.

Between 5 percent and 15 percent of people attending the Prestonwood 5 movie theater are using the machine, which was installed almost three months ago, a manager said.

The system, dubbed "The Agent," resembles an automatic teller machine and works by running a Mastercard or Visa bank credit card through a slot, which in turn lights a screen indicating the movies showing at the theater.

By touching the screen, customers select the movie and number of tickets they want. The tickets are dispensed immediately, the price is billed to the credit card account, and the stub serves as the receipt.

Credit-card users are charged the same price as those paying cash.

"I can't measure if the number of moviegoers has increased. A lot has to too early to tell right now," said Jeff Schnabel, vice president of operations for the Texas division of American Multi-Cinema Inc.

Schnabel said the theater is hiring an independent marketing firm to evaluate the experiment, which he said is the first of its kind.

If the system works and proves to be cost-effective, Schnabel said, it will be adapted for other theaters owned by AMC, which is the nation's thirdlargest theater chain. He hopes the system can be adapted to accept bank teller cards, sell refreshments and allow customers to purchase tickets days in advance.

No matter how successful the system is, he said, "we will never completely do away with cash sales."

Rick King, assistant division operations manager for AMC, estimates that between 5 percent and 15 percent of the Prestonwood 5's customers are using the new system. "On an average week, that's maybe between 500 and 1,500 people," King

Guy Gamble, manager a Prestonwood 5, said he didn't think the system had increased sales."They (customers) are not going to go across town to use the machine," Gamble said. "It's not a draw."

However, Gamble said many cus tomers who are not aware of the machine use it once they get to the theater to avoid standing in long cash lines. It's also balm for an empty wallet.

"It's nice to use your credit card when you're low on cash and won' get billed until next month," said Ronda Dillard, a graduate student at the University of Texas at Dallas who used the machine on a recent night.

Brian Walters, president of Dallas-based Agent Systems which de-veloped the ticket-buying teller, said The Agent was developed mostly for industries with high volume which normally do not have credit card

Agent Systems is setting up similar erminals at Bay Front Arena in St. Petersburg, Fla., to sell concert tickets, and in the ski industry for the purchase of lift tickets.

Summer camp shows youngsters how to maneuver chairs to enjoy sports

'It's fantastic to get kids out here and have a great time," he added. It was obvious that the youngsters had the time of their lives.

Maneuvering their chairs through the track and field obstacle course or keeping the ball in play on the tennis court, the campers proved their eagerness to apply the newly learned techniques.

But not all the events required the use of a wheelchair.

"The kids' ability to get involved surprises me," said Chip Parmelly, a swimming coach. "It's good to see kids who are afraid of water begin to enjoy it. We set them from their chairs on to a mat and lift them from there into the water. Most of them don't even need assistance - they are able to swim."

Basketball, the last competition before lunch, appeared to be everyone's favorite.

"These kids are talented," said Maureen Hannon, counselor. "Basketball is their favorite sport. After they spend all morning outside, they are sunburnt and enjoy playing indoors.'

Jeff Canford, 13, proudly emphasized that although this was his first summer day camp, he had participated in six similar springtime events at Saddleback College.

'It's getting better each year," he said enthusiastically. "I'm coming back again for sure."

Mintt Phuong of Los Angeles had more luck than Matt Vaughn of Alta Loma in traversing the obstacle course.

For it was on this stage-like entrance, during a balmy summer twilight, that members of the Huntington Harbour Cancer League addressed their own with news of the celebrities set to model in their October Debut fashion show Celebrity chairmen Jeanie Barnett and Delores Olivarez shared turns at the microphone and announced the participation of Tom Fears (former LA Ram and All American, All-Pro), Mary Page Keller "Sally Frame on NBC's popular soap "Another World"), Mary Lou Hopkins, Orange County society columnist, and Daniel Lungren, U.S. Congressman, 42nd District.

The group responded enthusiastically to those names and the promise of more to come.

And it is this very enthusiasm which makes the four-year-old HHCL the second largest fund-raising group for cancer research in the county ($46,000 last year — and this year they're shooting for $50,000).

Nun better as judge of beauty?

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) - When the Miss Illinois finalists parade across an auditorium stage Saturday night, one of their judges will be a woman who is admittedly no expert on swimsuits.

"It's just a little kind of thing I do on the side," said Sister Eric Marie. one of five judges in the preliminary to the Miss America pageant and a professor of voice at Mount Aloysius Junior College in Cresson, Pa.

When it comes to the bathing suit (competition). I'm probably never right," she added.

Although this is her first year to judge an Illinois pageant, the 20-year Roman Catholic nun has judged two Miss Indiana contests and has helped Miss Pennsylvania winners prepare for their Miss America talent competition

She said she sees no conflict between her roles as a nun and a pageant judge

"Why should I?" she said, contending that the events are mainly competitions for scholarship, not beauty. "I wouldn't be involved in this if it really was all a beauty contest. What do I know about being chic?"

She dismissed the bathing suit competition as "such an incidental part" of the contests.

"It's fitness of body more, really, than the sexual end of it," she said. "I think it's all in the way a person perceives it themselves. Anything can

Pageant spokeswoman Betty Brown said some contestants were surprised to find a nun in a black habit among the judges, but added, "They have been delighted with her."

"I think it's one sign that our country has come a long way that we can have all kinds of people involved. and it doesn't always have to be a stereotype person you'd have on a panel," she said.

Sister Eric Marie said she is especially qualified to judge talent competition because of her musical background, noting that "music teachers are very hard to come by." She said the nuns in her convent approve of her activity. "I'd just like to come here and do this as a favor and not make a big fuss," she added.

Sexual harassment trap snares male accountant

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 27, a certified public accountant (male) and feel that I am doing an excellent job in this office. Ever since it became known that my wife has filed for divorce I have been getting the heavy come-on from my immediate superior. She is 32, attractive, highly competent, but not my type.

I have tried to be tactful about letting her know I am not interested. But she's a persistent and cunning lady. My latest assignment requires that we travel together to several

Last night after a few drinks on the plane, she laid it on the line. I told her was interested in another woman. thinking that would cool it. I was wrong. She made it plain that if I didn't play ball I'd be transferred to another department. (Less responsibility and a cut in pay.) She is going on a vacation tomorrow and I have only 7 days to think it over

A lawyer pal of mine says I should sue this woman for sexual harassment. I've never sued anyone in my life. Furthermore I'd feel like a heel. But I'm sure she will demote me if I don't knuckle under. Then I'd have to

Please tell me what you know about sexual harassment. — TRAPPED IN

DEAR N.Y.: The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, a

federal agency charged with enforcing Title VII, defined sexual harassment in 1980. The guidelines are as follows: "Unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors. and other verbal and physical conduct of a sexual nature, constitute sexual harassment when 1) submission to such conduct is made a term or a condition of an individual's employment, 2) submission to or rejection of such conduct is used as the basis for employment decisions, and 3) such conduct interferes with work performance or otherwise creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment.'

Sexual harassment is difficult to prove because there are seldom witnesses. If you are, however, inclined to be gutty and are willing to suffer through some trying times, go for it. You might strike a blow for the independent male and discourage other women from doing this number.

DEAR ANN: Jim and Mary annulled their marriage after five years of sexual incompatability and physical abuse. After the marriage, Mary found pictures of Jim in drag outfits, bags of whips and chains and all sorts of sado-masochistic paraphernalia.

Jim, who is now 39 (parents deceased), has become engaged to a 19-year-old Irish Catholic girl. (I'd bet my life she is a virgin.) She comes from a large family and has lived a very sheltered life. Mary was appalled when she heard of Jim's plans to marry this innocent girl. She told Jim she planned to talk to the poor thing and warn her. Jim said, "This is none of your business. Besides, she wouldn't believe a word you said. Should Mary make the effort to save the girl from what surely will be a disaster? - STANDING BY IN SAN FRANCISCO DEAR SAN FRAN: Ordinarily I would say MYOB, but in this case it seems like the decent thing to do. If the girl refuses to believe what Mary tells her, she will at least have been warned and Mary will feel better for having made the effort.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents and a self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, watering, less fertilizer helps

Frequent deep

Your new sod lawn is thriving. Its lush green color is a source of pride and joy to you.

You have carefully fed and watered it, and mowing has been done on a regular schedule. And now it is You already know that certain grass varieties must be allowed to grow a little taller during the summer months, and that if you've installed any of these that your lawnmower should be adjusted for this. Primarily, the cool-season grasses such as Bluegrass, Blue-Rye combinations and tall fescues fall into this category. With increasingly warmer days.

watering becomes even more import-There are no set rules that will fit the needs of every lawn in every location. Among the variables are the specific turf, the type of soil, temperatures, winds, specific maintenance practices and humidity. Frequency and length of time you irrigate your lawn will have to take all of the above items into consideration; in addition, common sense must come into play.

Summer lawn care special

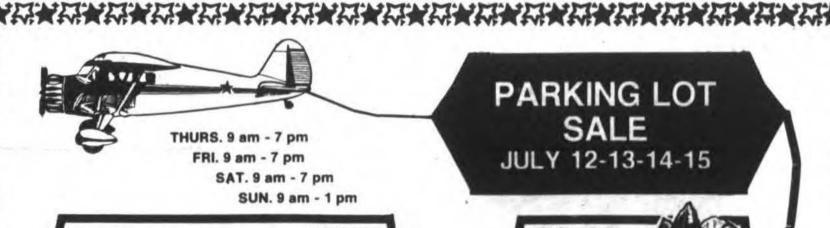

If your lawn is beginning to dry out, showing subtle change of color or showing footprints, it needs water. explains Bob Goodrich, turfgrass expert with Pacific Sod in Camarillo. It is better to deep-water your turf than to sprinkle the top for short periods frequently. Roots will only grow where there is moisture, and top watering does not penetrate far into Under drought conditions, water conservation becomes another factor.

It may be necessary to reduce fertilizer applications in such circumstances and to allow the lawn to grow just a little taller than the ideal. The latter will tend to allow the plant to provide its own shade to the underlying thatch and soil, thus reducing evaporation, says Goodrich. When watering is done, it should be to a depth of six to eight inches while guarding against run-off.

A soil moisture tester is a good investment. There are two basic types, a mechanical device that has a porous tip and contains water which is absorbed by the soil and can be measured to provide an indication of the irrigation needs. The other is an electrical sensor that measures

BMW 318i sustains tradition of unpretentious sports cars

Compact sedans offer comfort as well as high performance

Sixteen years ago, BMW caught the attention of the world's auto enthusiasts with a modest-looking little two-door sedan called the 2002.

Here was a practical, compact shape designed to carry four people. But within that unpretentious shape beat the heart of a sports car.

A tradition was established with the 2002. In 1977 BMW improved on it by introducing the 320i. Today, the tradition of compact, high-quality two-door sedans that behave like sports cars lives on in a new BMW called the 318i.

Introduced in mid-1983 as a 1984 model, the 318i was refined to bring additio nal comfort, driving ease and even higher quality to the BMW concept. The 318i now goes into its first full calendar year with detail improvements.

A challenging set of requirements shaped the 318i's body. At once it had to be efficient at slicing through the wind, provide practical and upright seating for four within compact dimensions, and have a distinctive BMW look. The designers' and engineers' success is evident in its aerodynamic efficiency (drag coefficient 0.38), compact measurements and contemporary styling.

In developing the 318i, BMW engineers explored and experimented with front-wheel drive and found that, for optimum handling, the steering and driving wheels should be separated. Thus the 318i has rearwheel drive, rather than the currently fashionable front-wheel drive.

Ideal handling also requires a strong platform. A rigid, unitized body-frame is a BMW tradition; BMW's body engineers not only improved rigidity, but reduced weight. Attached to this stable platform, the suspension performs as it is meant to, and the car avoid rattles, squeaks or wind leaks.

Four-wheel independent suspension is a familiar BMW feature. For the 318i, BMS's chassis engineers improved on the concept. The MacPherson strut front suspension was redesigned for lighter weight, better wheel control and, at the same time, a more comfortable ride. Consistent with the larger BMW models, the front suspension has a small positive offset (10 millimeters), which minimizes the effect of road disturbances but gives the driver a directionally correct signal. This is an important safety factor if, for example, one wheel goes off the pavement or hits a water puddle.

At the rear, the Bavarian engineers retained BMW's pioneering semi-trailing-arm rear suspension while reducing the arms' pivot angles from 20 to 15 degrees. This gives smaller camber changes in both cornering and straight-line driving, regardless of how heavily the car is loaded. Progressive-rate rear springs help the 318i damp out small, sharp bumps and yet maintain firm control over larger bumps even in cornering.

Variable power-assisted rackand-pinion steering takes the work out of parking and low speed maneuvers while maintaining accurate road feel at speed. Large diameter front disc brakes with light, efficient floating calipers and non-asbestos pads provide generous stopping power; a vacuum booster reduces driver effort at the pedal.

Transmitting the driver's commands to the road are wide TR-style cast alloy wheels with low-profile 195/60HR-14 radial tires — generous "rubber" for a weight-efficient car of just 2,360 pounds.

The BMW engine that powered Brazilian driver Nelson Piquet to the 1983 Formula 1 World Championship.Piquet uses the same cylinder block as the 318i — the only production-based engine ever to win a modern Grand Prix racing series.

On the speed-unlimited German Autobahn network, the 1.8-liter BMW engine has been demonstrating its efficiency, reliability and performance for more than a decade. But BMW engine engineers set new, more ambitious goals for the 318i in fuel efficiency, smoothness and

Bosch L-Jetronic electronic fuel injection with deceleration fuel shutoff helps the 318i engine attain 27 mpg in the EPA city test with either the standard five-speed manual transmission or the optional three-speed automatic. (EPA highway mileage; five-speed, 38 mpg; automatic, 34 mpg.)

34 mpg.)
To enhance smoothness and quietness, the Munich engineers gave the 318i engine lighter pistons, a lighter and stronger crankcase, a vibration-reducing reinforcing shell between engine and transmission, and a temperature- and speed-controlled viscous fan drive.

In a change for the 1984 calendar year, the 318i with five-speed transmission gets numerically higher (3.9:1) final drive ratio and a lower (0.82:1) fifth gear. The result is better acceleration in first through fourth gears with no loss of quietness and fuel economy in fifth.

The 318l's interior — or cockpit, as BMW engineers prefer to call it — is wrapped around the driver for direct sight lines and short reaches to controls. That includes instruments, warning lights, radio and climate controls.

A height-adjustable and reclining seat is part of the package, along with sophisticated driver-information systems. Standard in the 318i are BMW's service interval indicator, which computer-matches maintenance schedules to the owner's driving style, thus eliminating service intervals based only on odometer

Comfort hasn't been slighted either. New electronic temperature control makes the 318i's heater/ventilation/air-conditioning system more effective. 318i seats are designed according to the latest orthopedic findings; also, when a front backrest is folded, the seat automatically moves forward for easy access to the rear seat—and assumes its previous adjustment when returned to upright.

Rich but durable fabrics and velour carpeting give the 318i interior luxury and practicality. Leatherette upholstery is a nocost option; leather is optional at extra cost. One new option is added for 1984: A luxus touring package, combining electric windows, central locking and cruise control.

The 318i is covered by BMW's 3-year/36,000-mile limited warranty and 6-year limited warranty against rust perforation.

Little old ladies may be 'severe service' drivers

What we consider typical driving habits such as short trips can be tough on cars

If you're one of those rare people who have taken the trouble to look up periodic service recommendations in your car owners manual, you may have seen double and triple asterisks referring to "severe service" operation.

The term does not necessarily denote someone who daily climbs Pikes Peak or asks his subcompact car to perform Herculean tasks.

In fact, says Car Care Council, the time-worn idea that the best buy in a used car is the one that has been driven by the little old lady who ran only three miles to and from the grocery store is a thing of the past.

She may qualify as a severe service driver and not even know it. Before buying her car, take a close look at her maintenance records.

Many of the driving habits that we think of as "typical" can be very hard on a car, especially in certain combinations. Example:

short trips (10 miles or less) and stop-and-go driving, such as might be encountered in city traffic or on a delivery route, combined with unusually hot or cold weather are hard on a car. Towing a trailr or otherwise hauling heavy loads on a regular basis is considered severe service, too, especially in hilly terrain

While this kind of driving is the exception rather than the rule, says Car Care Council, people who do fall into these categories should be careful to observe owners manual maintenance recommendations when they apply.

- Especially important is constant checking of vital fluids such as engine oil, transmission fluid, anti-freeze/coolant, brake fluid and power steering fluid. Failure to check and change fluids and filters on schedule can cause rapid engine and/or transmission wear and premature failure of these major components.

Turn on the lights

An engineer from General Motors' guide division adjusts a mounting bracket for high-mounted stop lamps that will be appearing as standard or optional equipment on some 1985 model GM cars. They will also be available for retrofitting on some current models. Government regulations require such lamps be installed on all 1986 cars. The lights—designed for higher visibility—are expected to reduce rear-end collisions in heavy traffic.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone behind scenes "applies pressure" in your behalf. Focus on hidden resources, ability to make use of lessons recently learned. Romance is part of scenario, relationship grows in intensity. Capricorn plays significant role.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on career, business, a wider area of distribution. You'll no longer be carrying another person's burden. You'll be invited to participate in community or charitable project. Prestige goes up if you acquiesce.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect highlights spiritual values, education, new start and romance. Ideals are put to test you'll gain enlightenment through contacts with creative, diverse individuals, including Leo and Aquarius natives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone is hiding something — deep, check legal precedents, realize money is definitely involve. Protect security, don't give up territorial rights for mere, whispered promise. First impressions prove correct - follow hunch.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Leave details for another day - for now, perceive picture in its entirety. Focus on accelerated social activity, travel, important contacts which could ultimately lead to profitable, legal agreement. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check fine print, read between lines. Lunar emphasis on employment, dependents, work methods, special services and care of pets. Routine changes, boisterous individual, perhaps a Scorpio, issues stimulating challenge. Accept with

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Creative juices are activated - you'll imprint style, scenario will highlight change, travel, variety and romance. Young persons figure prominently, status quo will be shaken and you'll gain through written word. Virgo plays key role. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Attention centers on homebase, domestic situation, luxury items, art objects and gift which represents token of affection. Feeling of being confined is temporary. You have chance now to correct past errors, to gain solid footing emotionally and

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Instructions subject to change keep options open, realize emphasis in on trips, visits, relatives and fresh opportunities. Look behind scenes for answers, give full play to intellectual curiosity. Means ask numerous questions and expect valid CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This can be your money day What appeared to be a loss rebounds in your favor. You'll locate lost article, you'll correct past errors, relationship intensifies, you'll have more responsibility and increased chances for financial rewards.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You strike chord of universal appeal. People could flock to you now for opinions, answers, views and reviews. Emphasis on personality, charisma, correct timing and sharp intuition. One who fascinates you could fall madly in love - with you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could make "remarkable" discovery - and recovery. Recent period of isolation or confinement is ended. Your light shines bright, you attract favorable notices and scenario will be lively with creativity and romance. Leo plays significant role.

Fair finishes with Exile, rodeo action

Entertainment for this final weekend of the 1984 Orange County Fair will feature the rock-turned-country group Exile performing at and 9 p.m.Saturday and a professional rodeo presented Saturday and Sunday

In addition rock music legend Johnny Rivers will sing at 7 and 9 tonight in the Arlangton Theater where Sunday will be highlighted by look-airke Rob Hanna's salute to Rod Stewart and Rain A Tribute to the Beaties.

All these events are included in the price of admission to the fairgrounds in Costa Mesa. Known for such hit singles as "Kiss tou All Over" and "The High Cost of Leaving." Exile made a sensational overnight," debut in the country music scene. However, Exile's songwriting talents are well-known in the music industry since they've created top tunes for Kenny Rogers, Alabama and Sheena Easton.

The rough and ready days of the Old West will come alive again at the rodeo at 4 and 8 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday. The action is divided between riding events (bareback, saddle brone and bull) and timed events (calf and team roping and steer wresting).

COVER PHOTO: Exciting rodeo contests to be presented Saturday and Sunday at the Orange County Fair Grandstands demand timing and precision on the part of both horses and riders.

Fair visitors also can experience the death-defying exploits of Wini McKay and Chester Cable in the King Kong Arena. She is a trapeze artist and he is a celebrated foot juggler who is listed in the Guinness Book of Records for juggling a 10-foot table with his feet. Performances are at 3:30, 6:30 and 8:30 p.m.

Hunters and jumpers will be in the spotlight Saturday in a Junior Horse Show held in the Equestrian Center. Western events — stock seat equitation. Western pleasure riding and trail horse class — will be held Sunday. Plus professional polomatches are scheduled for noon. 2 and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Junior Livestock Auctions Saturday will be topped by the presentation of the Ken Johnson Scholarship to the outstanding 4-H and FFA exhibitors. Sheep and swine will be sold at 1 p.m and beef will be auctioned at 7 p.m Saturday also will be 4-H Guide Dog Puppy Field Day on the 4-H Building lawn.

Special events and contests include performances by the Rams Cheerleaders at 8 and 10 p.m. on the Heritage Stage and a Junior Superman Contest in the Little Theater on both days. "Clones" of all descriptions will compete for prizes in Saturday's Look-alike Contest on the Heritage Stage at 3 p.m.

The Fair is open from 10 a.m. to midnight. Admission is $4 for adults and $1 for children, ages 6 to 12

Sinatra coming Tuesday

Frank Sinatra will appear in concert at Pacific Amphitheatre in Costa Mesa at 8 p.m. Tuesday as part of the Chrysle Concert Series.

Joining Sinatra will be his longtime friend Buody Rich and his band and comedian Tom Dreesen.

Sinatra and Rich, who first performed together with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra in the 1940s, most recently appeared for 10 days at Carnegie Hall and also in New York at Radio City Music Hall with Luciano Pavarotti, Diana Ross and John Williams in a benefit for Memorial Sioan-Kettering Cancer Center that raised $3 million.

Reserved tickets — priced at $25 or $10 for lawn seating — are available at the amphitheater box office and all Ticketron locations.

GOOD TASTES

Resort's La Palme leaves diners in happiest moods

Relaxed elegance, California cuisine are designed to please

By BEVERLY BUSH SMITH

From the day of its opening. La Palme in the New porter resort hotel has been a restaurant after my heart

I love its relaxed elegance, the garden vista, the terra cotta tile softened by palms and matching carpeting and the accent on contemporary ceramic works of Kenneth Price. And I can think of few restaurants which serve food as interesting and innovative as La Palme's "California cotsine."

But what, you may wonder, is happening there now with negotiations for the hotel's sale under way?

I'm happy to report that it is better than ever, with a new summertime menu which retains some of my favorites while adding lovely new tastes.

(alifornia Cuisine, of course, begins with fresh, native to-f alifornia products. The treatment, however, in the creative hands of 28-year-old chef Michael Watren, may be Mexican, Italian, French or Japanese. So the menu is full of surprises, all tempting and, all that we tasted, delicious

Some of the first items to greet us on the dinner menu were ceviche of scallops with jalapeno and cilantro ($3.50) and cray fish steamed in cabbage leaves with wine butter sauce ($4)

However, since we'd never tried Watren's famous jicama pancake, that was our choice. The shredded jicama, mixed with egg white to form the pancake, retains its crisp texture in the quick sauteeing a perfect counterpoint for the topping of smoked salmon and sour cream with golden

Further decisions were not easy, what with three soups, including lobster consomme with melon; such pastas as ravioli of stone crab with chive basil sauce.

There are now five salads — one with chicory, garlic croutons, smoked quail and Cabernet Sauvignon dressing; another with lobster, artichoke, pink grapefruit and fresh sorrel. Our choice, however, was limestone lettuce, avocado, shitake mushrooms and radish sprouts. This creative combination really is enough for two, and its

'Much Ado' cast works splendidly

Deliciously freewheeling production spices Grove Shakespeare Festival

The Grove Shakespeare Festival is off to a running — make that flying — start with a deliciously freewheeling production of one of the Bard's most accessible comedies, "Much Ado About Nothing."

As gleefully superficial as its title suggests, "Much Ado" combines contrived romance and villainy for its own sake into a frothy package wrapped with barbed wit and decorated with farcical flourish. It's the ideal vehicle to serve as a Shakespearean introductory course for audiences.

Insolar as setting is concerned, there are few ground rules in the comedies—the last local production of "Much Ado" (at South Coast Repertory) was set in early 19th century Orange County. Director Lee Shallat sets this one in its original Italy, but updated to 1912 where it swings to the strains of Scott

It's a fascinating concept (with all the thees and thous left intact), and it works splendidly thanks to Shallat's imaginative staging and a strong uniformly excellent cast. Scenes are changed with the aid of a bicyclist pedaling across the stage with the appropriate scenic information borne on the rear of the cycle, and Cliff Faulkner's gleaming, marble-like setting provides considerable enrichment.

Among the acting company. Kristoffer Tabori's silver-tongued Benedick certainly stands as the most memorable performance — the actor lures the playgoers into his confidence at the outset and keeps them there grinning as in some sort of inside joke. Gun-Marie Nilsson is a worthy adversary on the field of romantic battle as Beatrice, a fiesty damsel who matches Tabori's verbal thrusts and parries with ease.

James Marilley and Melissa Stern conduct their heart-catching romance with alacrity, while Wayne Alexander and James K. Lewis bring solid authority to their patriarchal roles as prince and governor, respectively. And Peter Mitchel is subtly skillful enough to draw hisses with an evil grin in a beautifully restrained bit of treachery.

Commanding the comedy as the cockeyed constable is Benjamin Stewart, ably assisted in officious buffoonery by the nebbish-like Ashton Root. Dan Cartmell makes a particularly oily villain's henchman and Laurie Stevens gives a fine account of Stern's giddy, bespectacled cousin.

"Much Ado About Nothing" may be just that in premise, but its execution is outstanding. Performances continue Thursdays through Sundays at 8:30 in the Festival Amphitheater, 12852 Main St., Garden Grove Call 636-7213 for reservations and ticket information.

"THE GREMLINS ARE ON THE MARCH INTO SCREEN LEGEND!"

"The season's most delicious surprise. A movie of wicked wit, startling invention and laughter." Peter Travers, PEOPLE

"It's the summer's most original picture! 'Gremlins' is what superior moviemaking is all about. A onefilm movie festival that is blessedly its own unique self. Dante's breakthrough film delivers two moods to create this season's funkiest fable."

Richard Corliss, TIME

"The most bracingly original movie of the year. Brilliant! Sheer virtuosity and malign wit illuminate 'Gremlins!"

Richard Freedman, NEWHOUSE NEWSPAPERS

"'Gremlins' is Frank Capra's 'It's a Wonderful Life' turned inside out, stood on its head and pickled in brine. It's an adolescent's 'Alien', a Technicolor Trivia game, a gold mine for people with old movies rattling around in their heads."

THE JOLLY ROGER Hits Home With Dodger Bat Boy/Girl Contest This summer, The Jolly Roger Restaurants are wearing Dodger Blue. In conjunction with KABC Radio, the popular family restaurant firm announces a Dodger Bat Boy and Bat Girl Contest. The winning boy and girl will appear at the July 29th game against the Cincinnati Reds at Dodger Stadium. In addition, the winners will wear team uniforms and be honored during the pre-game program. Their photographs will be taken, with time to talk to the Dodger players themselves.

Entry blanks for this once-in-a-lifetime contest are available at all Los Angeles and Orange County locations of The Jolly Roger up to July 15th.

While visiting The Jolly Roger, it's a great time to sample The Jolly Roger's brand new breakfast menu, and "all day" lunch and dinner menu. With a whole new approach emphasizing "freshness," everything on the menu is prepared fresh daily. Delicious new entrees have been added as well like freshly baked Chicken Pot Pie, fresh Croissant Sandwiches and all new fresh pasta selections. And for the first time ever, The Jolly Roger is introducing a complete wine list. The Jolly Roger Restaurants are a great place to take the entire family, with its warm and friendly atmosphere and outstanding value. And a very special Dodger game awaits a lucky boy or girl.

FOOTLOOSE: Rated PG. The dance sequences are but between them you'll have to endure a ponderous. edictable story about small-town morality and teen-age strations. Kevin Bacon shines in the lead role. John hgow makes the most of a thankless role as the strident n minister. Not as pretentious as "Flashdance," but as interesting to watch either.

INDIANA JONES AND THE TEMPLE OF DOOM: ed PG. Harrison Ford returns in a worthy follow-up to aiders of the Lost Ark." The film has trademark casfilm virtues: thrilling non-stop action, colorful ttings and state-of-the-art effects and stunt work. It also the Lucasfilm drawbacks of shallow characterization d simplistic plotting. Director Steven Spielberg skililly mixes the humorous and scary moments, especially ring a marvelous opening nightclub scene. The more olent scenes may be too frightening for younger GHOSTBUSTERS: Rated PG. A first-rate contemary comedy with superior special effects. Bill Murray. an Aykroyd and Harold Ramis are three bumbling rapsychologists trying to rid New York of ghosts. array's constant wisecracks are hilarious, and gourney Weaver, whose apartment is haunted, proves s more than an intellectual ice lady. GREMLINS: Rated PG. These little creatures start out e but eventually turn into dangerous mischief makers o wreak havoc in a small town at Christmastime. inging the Gremlins to vivid life is an amazing feat in Spielberg-produced film, directed by Joe Dante ("The owling"). But Dante and screenwriter Chris Columbus we so much fun with the Gremlins and with tributes to st movies that the human storylines are left sadly ndeveloped. Entertaining but forgettable.

THE KARATE KID: Rated PG. A predictable crowdaser for anyone who's ever been picked on by a bully. alph Macchio plays the new kid at a California school to becomes a target of teen martial arts experts. riyuki "Pat" Morita plays an eccentric custodian who ads Macchio through some offbeat karate training. rita and Macchio give fine performances, and director hn Avildsen pulls the right emotional strings, as he did

THE NATURAL: Rated PG. Robert Redford returns an appealing baseball fairy tale that youngsters and any adults will probably enjoy. More jaded moviegoers ay be put off by the self-conscious myth-making and avy-handed symbolism. A film with no gray areas. obert Duvall, Wilford Brimley, Kim Basinger and Glenn

Kate Capshaw meets daring archeologist Harrison Ford at Shanghai's Club Obi Wan and, below, saves Ke Huy Quan from falling through a rope bridge as they escape from the evil palace in "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

Close co-star. Barry Levinson ("Diner") directs.

POLICE ACADEMY: If you enjoyed "Animal House and "Porky's," you'll probably get a kick out this sendup of police training. A new woman mayor has opened the academy to all sorts of misfits, who turn out to be a loi pluckier than their no-nonsense training officer (G. W. Bailey) suspects. Lots of crude but funny gags. If you're taste runs to more sophisticated humor, don't bother with this one. Directed by Hugh Wilson, creator of "WKRP In SIXTEEN CANDLES: Rated PG. Molly Ringwald stars in this comedy about a teen-ager whose parents forget her special birthday. She also has a crush on a handsome senior but is pursued by a fast-talking. Geek. Writer-director John Hughes, who wrote National Lampoon's Vacation and Mr Mom. seems keenly aware of the awkwardness and frustration facing adolescents. Unfortunately, he also gives us lots of cheap and offensive gags. **

SPLASH: Rated PG. A delightful comedy about a New York produce dealer (Tom Hanks) who falls for a beautiful blond mermaid (Daryl Hannah). The mysterious mermaid sprouts legs on land and learns English from a bank of television sets at Bloomingdales. Actor Ron Howard directs with a sure hand, establishing a strong central love story and letting SCTV veterans John Candy and Eugene Levy handle some of the best loony bits. PPP

STAR TREE III - THE SEARCH FOR SPOCK: Rated PG. Admiral Kirk (William Shatner) and his aging sidekicks must steal the damaged starship Enterprise in a daring mission to revive the late Mr. Spock, whose body was left on the unstable Genesis planet. They also must face a band of bloodthirsty Klingons. Fans of the series should love it. Not quite as good as Star Trek II. though Leonard Nimoy (Spock) directs PPP

SWING SHIFT: Rated PG. A naive housewife (Goldie Hawn) matures on an aircraft assembly line during World War II and has an affair with a co-worker (Kurt Russell) Unfortunately, the film yeers wildly from comedy to soac opera to historical drama to feminist tract without resolving any theme satisfactorily. Disappointing, despite some charming moments. Directed by Jonathan Demov Meistin and Howard , PP

TERMS OF ENDEARMENT: Rated PG Debra Winger and Shirley MacLaine give Oscar-caliber per formances in this funny and four hing film, which traces a mother-daughter relationship over 30 years Nicholson, as a paunchy drunken astronaut, is superb. In pondering the entrees, we were pleased that the tamis of fresh fish and sea plants with sea urchin sabayon remains on the menu. We'd considered this bamboo basket filled with firm-fleshed fish from Hawaii or swordfish, and perhaps Santa Barbara prawns, the piece de resistance on a previous visit.

Our problem now, though, was to decide between the filet of white salmon with cream of parsley sauce ($14), roast squab with black currants, aged New York steak with Ficklin port and fresh peppercorn sauce ($16) and 10 other contress.

At last, I selected the Santa Barbara prawns with lemon and ginger and marveled at the light texture, the delicate flavor of these fresh water-bred beauties. Five expertly cooked fresh vegetables were a colorful foil for the entree.

My husband, who's conducting his own private halibut-tasting wherever he goes, opted for the halibut braised in Quail Ridge chardonnay. He pronounced it the best yet — moist and tender, handsomely sauced. However, he teased maitred d' Mark Le Vander about the "oakiness" of the chardonnay-based sauce. For Le Vander was formerly sommelier of La Palme, responsible for the fine wine list of 160 plus.

Now as maitred', he's the epitome of easy graciousness, and, of course, can give sound advice on all the wines. He steered us to the excellent Chateau St. Jean fume blanc.

Certainly La Palme has some of the finest desserts in town, including an incredibly lemony lemon tart, a chocolate torte with meringue center, a cornucopia of pastry filled with white chocolate mousse. We found a goblet of fresh blueberries and raspberries topped with amaretto ice cream the perfect finale.

The unamplified guitar artistry of Gregory Coleman is what dinner music should be: perfectly tuned to the room; you may listen or converse with equal ease.

La Palme's luncheons tempt with steamed vegetables in chilled consomme with pimiento sauce ($3), lambs lettuce and rugula with sun-dried tomatoes and Buffalo mozzarella ($4), Nicoise-type salad with fresh tuna, chilled tenderloin of beef with roasted peppers and seed mustard mousseline ($8.75), grilled swordfish with zinfandel and shallots ($14.50).

In an era of clones, it's good to find La Palme singing its own song — and singing it so well.

Burned boy gets grand tour

HB officers give David Rothenberg a helicopter ride, visit to police station

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN

Huntington Beach police officers are known for their tough, nononsense approach in dealing with lawbreakers. But Thursday, local officers opened their hearts to a frail, badly burned boy, giving him a grand tour of the city police station, a ride on an all-terrain beach vehicle and a flight along the coast in a police helicopter.

The recipient of the warm attention was David Rothenberg, the 8-yearold boy from Brooklyn who was nearly burned to death 16 months ago hen his father set fire to their Buena Park motel room. The youth attracted nationwide attention when he defied the odds and survived depsite his severe injuries.

Earlier this week, his mother, Marie Rothenberg, announced that she and David are moving to Orange County, in part to be closer to UC Irvine Medical Center, where David is scheduled for plastic surgery later this month. The Rothenbergs also have made many friends in Orange County during David's difficult months of recovery.

The youngster appeared in fine spirits Thursday as a guest of the Huntington Beach Police Department. His visit began with a modest proposal by Officer Nick Ekovich. whose sister, Dee Fraser, is David's nurse. Ekovich works the city's beach patrol, and he received permission to let David ride one of the three-wheel, all-terrain motorcycles used to police

Ekovich said things snowballed from there, especially when David was introduced to the shift's watch commander. "Lt. (Bruce) Young couldn't do enough for him," Ekovich said. "He set up the helicopter ride." Before the flight, David enjoyed a visit to the nearby Lake Street Fire Station. Ekovich said firefighters gave the youngster a lift in a snorkel unit, a

Having bought two $120 tickets for the July 28 opening day Olympic Games ceremonies at the Los Angeles Coliseum, Huntington Harbour resident Chuck Bennett set about to line up transporation to the event.

But he was shocked, he said, when he went to one of the 22 Ticketron outlets handling the bus reservations in Southern California and was told Rapid Transit District buses had been sold out for opening day.

"President Reagan will be there and it will be impressive. But I have a nagging coronary condition and wouldn't want to drive.

"I thought about taking out an ad...or something and selling my Olympic tickets.

Bennett persevered, however, and managed to buy two $10 bus tickets to the event for his wife and himself at the Sports Chalet in Huntington Beach, the only Ticketron Agency along the Orange Coast handling bus reservations.

Bennett may have just come in under the wire, according to RTD officials. Contacted in Los Angeles this morning, they acknowledged bus reservations for Orange County fans are indeed filling up fast. The City of Irvine intends to any tightening of the policy but strengthen its policies on prohibiting employees from accepting gifts in the near future to make sure there is no room for misinterpretation.

The changes come in the wake of this week's $250,000 out-of-court settlement with two inspectors who sued the city and an El Toro contractor for defamation and invasion of privacy. Under his leadership, Orange Coast grew to become the state's largest single-campus community college; Golden West College opened in Huntington Beach, public tele-vision station KOCE Channel 50 began broadcasting, and Coastline, an innovative college without a campus, was launched.

Although he has not been without critics in recent years, Watson's nationwide reputation as a leader in community college education is undisputed.

Last week, while clearing out his office in Costa Mesa, Watson reflected on his lengthy career, which parallels the history of the college

"Essentially, I came to Orange Coast Junior College (in 1952) for a one or two-year hitch," he said. " I didn't know much about junior colleges, as they were called then, but was persuaded to give it a try. And here I am 32 years later.

"I liked it. I became sold on the whole movement, the idea of secondchance institutions and opportunities for young people.

Watson is an Orange County native who graduated from Tustin High School. He attended Pomona College, USC and Claremont Graduate School before earning his doctorate in education at Stanford University. He taught English, speech, drama, history, journalism and other subjects at high schools in Chino and Fresno. For four years, he was superintendent of the Capistrano Union High School

"That's when I decided I wanted to be a big city administrator, head of a K-12 (kindergarten through high school) system," he explained.

Watson said he had never considered working in a college system before fate stepped in. At a meeting in Los Angeles, Watson found himself sitting next to Bill Priest, then an assistant superintendent at Orange Coast. The two chatted at the meeting and the next morning Priest offered Watson a job at the college.

Watson It was southern Orange County had burned down and his contract with the Capistrano district was expiring. He decided to accept a job at OCC as halftime assistant superintendent for vocational and adult education and half-time psychology teacher. On his first day, he was led to a tiny office and instructed to prepare some schedules and news releases.

At the time, OCC was a new junior college taking shape on grounds formerly occupied by the Santa Ana Army Air Base.

'There were only dirt roads around and the old green-frame buildings," Watson recalled. "Mud puddles all over the place. It was very difficult to get from one side of the campus to the other without getting your shoes and pants muddy. There were still dorms on the campus with people sleeping in them.

What now is the admissions and records building was built as the college library for a maximum of about 2,000 students, the retiring chancellor said. Today, OCC enrolls about 15 times that number each

In the early 1950s, there were two or three male OCC students to every semale student.

'At that time," Watson said, "the girls would come to Orange Coast College perhaps for six weeks or maybe a semester in order to meet someone and get married. Of course, things have changed radically since those days.

Today, women make up more than than half the enrollment.

Watson said one of his early responsibilities was recruiting and he found himself fighting the widespread belief that "junior colleges are just high schools with ash trays.

At the same time, Watson faced his own crossroads. He ended his teaching duties to concentrate on adminis-

educational needs of coastal Orange County, to make education available to a wider segment of the community and to offer a variety of learning

These goals seemed within reach because the boom years were beginning for two-year institutions.

"During the 1960s and early '70s. community colleges nationwide grew tremendously and rapidly," Watson recalled. "A lot of students couldn't afford to go to the four-year institutions, so community college enrollments grew very rapidly. During that period, one new community college on the average would develop every week in the United States.

trustees decided to sell some OCC acreage along Harbor Boulevard and to use the money to establish a second college in Huntington Beach. Some OCC faculty members opposed the move, fearing it would drain resources from the Costa Mesa campus. Nonetheless, Golden West College opened in 1966. The college district paid $1.2 million for the 112-acre site. Last year, the district sold just three surplus Golden West acres for $1.5

"So what happens is you have a train coming in each direction straight at one another on the same track. Obviously, you're going to have a collision.

In the Coast District, that collision took the form of massive layoffs, an unsuccessfull drive to recall district trustees and finally the election last November of three trustees supported by a district teachers union. After the election, Watson announced he would retire in June. though he claimed it was not because of the election

Before the election, Watson said he believed the teachers were trying to gain control of the district's governing board. Asked now whether his worst fears are coming true, the retiring chancellor's brief response was, "Only time will tell."

Regarding the community college movement, Watson said, "I think it's at a crossroads. The old boom days are gone forever. I think the colleges may need to strike out in new directions now. These center around increased cooperation between business and industry and the community colleges, more re-training of people who are technologically displaced. And I think the community colleges should have an increased role in developing adult literacy."

Watson is critical of California legislators who want community colleges to return to minimal junior college goals of vocational training and preparation for four-year schools.

And regarding the Coast District that he's helped build over the past 32 years. Watson said, "I feel concerned about whether we can continue the fine repuation we've had locally and nationally. I hope we can. I believe it's

At 68, Watson said he's not ready for the rocking chair. He plans to maintain a home in Orange County and do college consulting work. He will have the honorary title of Chancellor Emeritus but, he foresees no further involvement with the Coast District. He's satisfied with the achievements he will leave behind. "I think I've accomplished more than I thought I would," he said.

bacteria that causes gastrointestinal illnesses has been found in Newport Harbor but water quality officials do not have enough test results yet to judge whether there is a public health hazard.

"This is the question: do these numbers consititute a health hazard? We don't know yet. It is too early in the game," said Gordon Anderson, the environmental program manager with the Santa Ana Region of the state Regional Water Quality Control

Biologists with the water board

were scheduled today to announce they have identified the bacteria in the harbor's waters. The water board was to meet at Newport Beach City Hall this afternoon. The bacteria, enterococcus, a subroup of Fecal Streptococcus, comes from the waste of warm blooded animals such as humans, horses and dogs. The water board is testing water in the bay to see if waste discharge from boaters is polluting the water. Recent studies by the Environmental Protection Agency discoverd that the bacteria was a better indicator of bacterial pollution than coliform, the bacteria the county health department uses to check the quality of Newport Harbor waters.

Parts of the Upper Newport Bay such as Dover Shores and North Star Beach are closed to protect swimmers because of the high concentrations of coliform bacteria.

Testing started two weeks ago at 14 locations in the bay and will continue until August. A more complete report on the test program will be presented to the water board at its September meeting.

Patches may replace pills for blood pressure patients New dosage of hypertension medicine developed by UC Irvine medical researchers

By ANDREA ADELSON Of the Dally Pllot Staff

Hypertension patients may soon give up popping pills forever and instead substitute a skin patch that UC Irvine researchers have shown can safely deliver a week's dose of medication

The patch, which could be in use as early as this fall, probably will prove most popular with the elderly, who have trouble remembering to take medications, and those wanting to avoid side effects brought on by quickly absorbed pills, Dr. Michael Weber, director of the UCI Hypertension Center in Long Beach, said.

"If we can do a better job treating hypertension, we can save lives," said Weber, a professor of medicine who coordinated a national study of the

More than 50 million Americans suffer from some form of high blood pressure, which increases the risks of heart attacks and strokes. Only 50 percent of patients treated for high blood pressure are believed to be taking their medications as prescribed. Twice daily is the typical dose, he said.

"A non-fatal stroke is an awful way to finish life," added the researcher, who treats some of the 150 patients a week referred to the hypertension center at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Long Beach

The flesh-toned patch should be on the market this fall after gaining expected Food and Drug Administration approval, Weber said.

The patch isn't a better product than the 20 to 30 blood pressure medications currently prescribed by doctors, he said. "The beauty of this is it's only once week," Weber said.

The skin patch, about the size of a thumbnail and thinner than a bandage, is impregnated with a clonidine hydrocloride, a widely prescribed but potent anti-hypertensive medication,

It is designed so medication diffuses slowly through the skin of the chest or arm for seven days and can withstand exposure to exercise and

Weber said the concept of regulating dosage isn't a new one. UCI researchers are pioneers in developing a sophisticated pump for diabetics which injects the proper insulin dose while monitoring blood sugar level. Far simpler self-adhesive patches

doused with drugs also have been used to treat motion sickness and angina, a heart disorder. None, however, are able to deliver a steady dose for up to a week, he said. There's a limit on how much medication can be pushed through the skin," Weber said, pointing out that the amount of clonidine prescribed for a week is tiny. measured in fractions of a milligram.

The medical breakthrough was developed jointly by Palo Alto-based Alza Inc., a bio-medical research firm, and drug maker Boehringer Ingelheim Ltd., of Connecticut.

Friday 13th, full moon good luck, some claim

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) - A full moon on Friday the 13th may make some cringe, but those who claim to practice witchcraft are coupling solemn ceremonies and joyous celebrations because of today's rare

Miguel Serrano, who operates an herb shop known as a botanica in this southern New Jersey community, said sales of witches' supplies -Lucky 13 Oil and Fast Luck 13 candles, for example — boomed because this month's full moon comes on Friday the 13th.

"For some people, Friday the 13th is a lucky day," Serrano said. "Business is booming in the occult everywhere, and I'm sure the botanicas will sell a lot of "13" items," said Gavin Frost, who heads the School of Wicca in New Bern, N.C., that mails literature to about 20,000 witches in covens across the country.

Frost said a full moon on Friday the 13th "adds a little to the festivities. We're having an extra party. Having the full moon and the 13th is kind of a festive occasion."

Watson leaves his mark on Coast College District

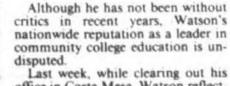

New black letters adorn the face of the Orange Coast College library. The building has been renamed in honor of Norman E. Watson, the Coast Community College District chancellor who retired this month.

The new sign stands as a permanent tribute to him. After 32 years with the college district, including 21 as its chief administrator, Watson leaves behind other, less visible but no less important personal stamps on the institutions he guided.

Under his leadership, Orange Coast grew to become the state's largest single-campus community college; Golden West College opened campus, was launched.

BURNED BOY IN HUNTINGTON...

old boy from Brooklyn who was nearly burned to death 16 months ago when his father set fire to their Buena Park motel room. The youth attracted nationwide attention when he defied the odds and survived depsite his severe injuries.

Earlier this week, his mother, Marie Rothenberg, announced that Tshe and David are moving to Orange County, in part to be closer to UC Drvine Medical Center, where David scheduled for plastic surgery later this month. The Rothenbergs also have made many friends in Orange County during David's difficult months of recovery

The youngster appeared in fine spirits Thursday as a guest of the Huntington Beach Police Department. His visit began with a modest proposal by Officer Nick Ekovich. whose sister. Dee Fraser, is David's nurse. Ekovich works the city's beach patrol, and he received permission to let David ride one of the three-wheel. all-terrain motorcycles used to police the beaches.

Ekovich said things snowballed from there, especially when David was introduced to the shift's watch commander

"Lt. (Bruce) Young couldn't do enough for him," Ekovich said. "He set up the helicopter ride.

Before the flight, David enjoyed a visit to the nearby Lake Street Fire Ekovich said firefighters gave the youngster a lift in a snorkel unit, a adder-like device used for fighting high-rise fires. The firefighters also took David on a fire truck ride and let him hear a siren.

They put a (fire) jacket and hat on him, and he got to hold the hose," Nurse Fraser said.

After the fire station visit, David and his nurse were strapped into a Huntington Beach police helicopter with Officer Jim Lail in the pilot's

"We ended up flying over Long Beach, looking at the naval shipyards and the Queen Mary," Lail said. "I think David waved to every person on the beach.

David said he enjoyed the flight and didn't get airsick

After a few minutes rest at the police station. David was preparing to conclude his busy day with dinner at a Chuck E. Cheese restaurant.

David said he's excited about the move to Orange County.

"I'm going to try school in Septem-ber," he said. He and his mother are living in Fullerton, and David will enter the third grade at Eastside Christian School.

David, 8, still must wear a pressurized garment over his body and a face mask to aid his skin grafts. He faces years of reconstructive surgery.

He suffered burns over 90 percent of his body in a fire set by Charles David Rothenberg, 43, in a Buena Park motel room March 3, 1983. David's father had promised to take him to nearby Disneyland during a trip from their New York home. But he later admitted he set the fire because his divorced wife wouldn't let him see the boy anymore.

The elder Rothenberg is serving a 13-year sentence in California's Soledad Prison after pleading guilty in June 1983 to attempted murder.

WATSON LEAVES MARK ON DISTRICT... From A1

here I am 32 years later.

"I liked it. I became sold on the whole movement, the idea of secondchance institutions and opportunities for young people.

*Watson is an Orange County native who graduated from Tustin High School. He attended Pomona College, USC and Claremont Graduate School before earning his doctorate in education at Stanford University. He laught English, speech, drama, history, journalism and other subjects at high schools in Chino and Fresno. For four years, he was superintendent of the Capistrano Union High School District

That's when I decided I wanted to be a big city administrator, head of a K-12 (kindergarten through high school) system," he explained.

Watson said he had never considered working in a college system before fate stepped in AI a meeting in Los Angeles. Watson found himself sitting next to Bill Priest, then an assistant superintendent at Orange Coast. The two chatted at the meeting and the next morning Priest offered Watson a job at the college

It was 1952. Watson's house in southern Orange County had burned down and his contract with the Capistrano district was expiring. He decided to accept a job at OCC as halftime assistant superintendent for vocational and adult education and half-time psychology teacher. On his first day, he was led to a tiny office and instructed to prepare some schedules and news releases.

At the time, OCC was a new junior college taking shape on grounds formerly occupied by the Santa Ana

Army Air Base. "There were only dirt roads around and the old green-frame buildings." Watson recalled, "Mud puddles all over the place. It was very difficult to get from one side of the campus to the other without getting your shoes and pants muddy. There were still dorms on the campus with people sleeping in

What now is the admissions and records building was built as the college library for a maximum of about 2.000 students, the retiring chancellor said. Today, OCC enrolls about 15 times that number each semester

In the early 1950s, there were two or three male OCC students to every temale student.

'At that time " Watson said, "the girls would come to Orange Coast College perhaps for six weeks or maybe a semester in order to meet someone and get married. Of course. things have changed radically since those days.

Today, women make up more than than half the enrollment

Watson said one of his early responsibilities was recruiting and he found himself fighting the widespread belief that "junior colleges are just high schools with ash travs.

At the same time. Watson faced his own crossroads. He ended his teaching duties to concentrate on administration. When OCC President Basil Peterson retired in 1963, Watson was named to the post. The following year, when plans were made to open a second college, Watson was named chancellor of the district.

He said his goals were to meet the educational needs of coastal Orange County, to make education available to a wider segment of the community and to offer a variety of learning

These goals seemed within reach because the boom years were beginning for two-year institutions.

"During the 1960s and early '70s, community colleges nationwide grew tremendously and rapidly," Watson recalled. "A lot of students couldn't afford to go to the four-year institutions, so community college enrollments grew very rapidly. During that period, one new community college on the average would develop every week in the United States.

In the mid-60s, Coast District trustees decided to sell some OCC acreage along Harbor Boulevard and to use the money to establish a second college in Huntington Beach. Some OCC faculty members opposed the move, fearing it would drain resources from the Costa Mesa campus. Nonetheless, Golden West College opened in 1966. The college district paid $1.2 million for the 112-acre site. Last year, the district sold just three surplus Golden West acres for $1.5

Watson said he soon learned an important lesson; when you provide people with convenient access to education, they'll take advantage of "The year after Golden West started, the percentage of students from Westminster who attended community college tripled," he said.

When Golden West was being built, college officials wanted to allow students to view televised educational programs in various campus locations. District officials learned that Orange County had been allocated an educational television channel, but no one had applied to

The Coast District did and KOCE Channel 50, based at Golden West, began broadcasting in 1972. Watson said there was little initial opposition to the television station. He said the criticism grew when state funding began dwindling and some instructors saw the TV station as a rival for the same remaining resources.

The district's third college. Coastline, was launched in 1976 with a record opening enrollment of 2,000 and a unique design. The college has no central campus but offers classes at rented community locations. It is tailored to older, parttime students. Watson said its design has been copied by other institutions.

Watson denies the district spent too lavishly during the boom period, saying the district did not levy the maximum tax rate permitted. But the lower rate was frozen when Proposition 13, the 1978 tax reform measure, was passed by voters.

"If we had levied the maximum tax at that time, we would have been much better off today," he said.

The retiring chancellor admitted the past few years have been his most difficult ones. Proposition 13 gave the state more control over local programs. A "hit list" eliminated state funds for numerous classes.

And collective bargaining was permitted for college faculty members.

"That came at about the same time as resources were shrinking," Watson said. "So here you had a (union), which had an interest in more wages, shorter working hours and better working conditions, at the same time as you had less and less money available.

So what happens is you have a train coming in each direction straight at one another on the same track. Obviously, you're going to have a collision.

In the Coast District, that collision took the form of massive layoffs, an unsuccessfull drive to recall district trustees and finally the election last November of three trustees supported by a district teachers union. After the election, Watson announced he would retire in June. though he claimed it was not because of the election.

Before the election. Watson said he believed the teachers were trying to gain control of the district's governing board. Asked now whether his worst fears are coming true, the retiring chancellor's brief response was, "Only time will tell."

Regarding the community college movement, Watson said, "I think it's at a crossroads. The old boom days are gone forever. I think the colleges may need to strike out in new directions now. These center around increased cooperation between business and industry and the community colleges, more re-training of people who are technologically displaced. And I think the community colleges should have an increased role in developing adult literacy."

Watson is critical of California legislators who want community colleges to return to minimal junior college goals of vocational training and preparation for four-year

And regarding the Coast District that he's helped build over the past 32 years. Watson said, "I feel concerned bout whether we can continue the fine repuation we've had locally and nationally. I hope we can. I believe it's possible

At 68, Watson said he's not ready for the rocking chair. He plans to maintain a home in Orange County and do college consulting work. He will have the honorary title of Chancellor Emeritus but, he foresees no further involvement with the Coast District. He's satisfied with the achievements he will leave behind.

"I think I've accomplished more than I thought I would," he said.

Illness-causing bacteria found in Newport Harbor

By JERRY HIRSCH Of the Dally Pllot Staff

A bacteria that causes gastrointestinal illnesses has been ound in Newport Harbor but water quality officials do not have enough test results yet to judge whether there is a public health hazard.

'This is the question: do these numbers consititute a health hazard? We don't know yet. It is too early in the game," said Gordon Anderson, the environmental program manager with the Santa Ana Region of the state Regional Water Quality Control

were scheduled today to announce they have identified the bacteria in the harbor's waters. The water board was to meet at Newport Beach City Hall this afternoon.

The bacteria, enterococcus, a subgroup of Fecal Streptococcus, comes from the waste of warm blooded animals such as humans, horses and dogs. The water board is testing water in the bay to see if waste discharge from boaters is polluting the water.

Recent studies by the Environmental Protection Agency discoverd that the bacteria was a better indicator of bacterial pollution than coliform, the bacteria the county health department uses to check the quality of Newport Harbor waters.

Parts of the Upper Newport Bay such as Dover Shores and North Star Beach are closed to protect swimmers because of the high concentrations of coliform bacteria. Testing started two weeks ago at 14 locations in the bay and will continue until August. A more complete report on the test program will be presented to the water board at its September

'We just can't draw any conclusions yet because we don't have enough information." Anderson
