Irvine Co. taxes skyrocket

Company's land assessment tripled to $40 million; ruling will be appealed

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

What do you do if your taxes go from about $12 million one year to nearly $40 million the next? If you are the Irvine Co., you appeal. And if that fails, you go to court.

Monday the Irvine Co. announced the results of Orange County Tax Assessor Bradley L. Jacobs' revaluation of the company's real estate. The assessor determined the company's holdings are worth about $3 billion compared to the Irvine Co.'s most recent valuation of about $1.1 billion.

If the assessor's ruling stands, property taxes for the Irvine Co. will at least triple.

The county decided to revalue the 68,000-acre land development company after Newport Beach tycoon Donald Bren's bought controlling interest in the firm in April 1983.

Irvine Co. president Thomas Nielsen said the company will appeal the ruling and if the company isn't satisfied, it is prepared to go to court.

"It could go on for four and five years and there are likely to be matters of law that arise from the appeal that will have to be settled in court," Nielsen said.

"We fully estimate there will be a substantial reduction," Gary Hunt, Irvine Co. vice president, said.

Company officials believe the company's correct assessed valuation should be between $1.1 billion and $2 billion.

The Irvine Co. appeal will be based on two points:

•First, Nielsen contends that Proposition 13 calls for a revaluation only when real estate is sold. What Bren purchased was controlling interest in the shares of a real estate holding company, not the actual real estate and the purchase should not have triggered a revaluation, Nielsen said.

Santa Ana firemen probe rubble of hotel collapse which killed one construction worker and injured another early today.

Worker killed in wall plunge

Slab collapses near Holly Sugar site in Santa Ana

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A construction worker was killed and a second man injured early today when the sixth floor of a partially completed hotel in Santa Ana collapsed, raining tons of concrete to the floors below.

A team of firefighters armed with jackhammers, torches and saws worked feverishly to cut through the rubble trying to extract the body of the worker, Santa Ana Fire Department Capt. Tim Graber said.

The workman's body was retrieved from the rubble shortly before 9 a.m.

The site of the 6:32 a.m. disaster was the under-construction Granada Royale Homotel, off the Costa Mesa Freeway on Dyer Road near Grand Avenue. The hotel is to be 12 stories tall.

Colleges playing by new rules now

August startup, tuition added to community schools

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Registration for fall classes is already under way at several local community colleges — with a few new twists.

For the first time, all eight community colleges in Orange County will begin classes in August, rather than September. The change was made to coordinate two-year schools with the California State University and University of California schedules, making it easier to transfer between schools at mid-year.

In addition, community college students will face tuition fees for the first time during the fall semester, as a result of new legislation supported by Gov. George Deukmejian and approved by state lawmakers.

Students enrolling for fewer than six units must pay $5 per unit. For six or more units, a flat $50 fee must be paid. Financial aid is available for students unable to pay the fees.

Although tuition will be charged, health fees and class materials fees have been eliminated. Students who wish to leave their vehicles in school lots will still have to pay parking fees.

Shotgun-wielding bandits hit three hotels in county

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A trio of bandits reportedly went a crime spree late Monday, robbing hotels in Costa Mesa and Laguna Hills and shooting a businessman from Seattle outside a third hotel in Anaheim.

Ralph Paulman, 41, of Seattle was wounded in the side by a shotgun blast Monday evening as he walked across a parking lot outside the Grand Hotel in Anaheim, police said.

Officers said the out-of-state businessman was walking toward the hotel lobby when three men — one apparently carrying a shotgun — ordered him to stop.

Paulman made a run for the lobby but was hit by gunfire before he could reach safety, police said.

The Seattle resident was treated for his wounds at UCI Medical Center in Orange. He was listed in good condition today.

The 10 p.m. shooting in Anaheim reportedly was the first of three stops the bandits made in Orange County during the late evening hours.

Two men entered the La Quinta Inn in Costa Mesa at about 10:35 p.m. and approached employees at the front counter, according to Costa Mesa Lt. Tom Lazar. One of the men brandished a shotgun, Lazar said.

"If they move, shoot them," one bandit reportedly instructed his partner, according to police reports. A clerk handed over cash from the motel register and the pair fled to a car, where a third man apparently was waiting.

At 11:12 p.m., two men walked into the Holiday Inn in Laguna Hills and ordered a lone employee to hand over everything from the cash register's till, said Orange County Sheriff's Lt. Richard Olson.

Olson said one of the two bandits was armed with a shotgun. He said a third man waited outside in the getaway car, an older model vehicle described as silver and maroon in color.

Authorities were unsure how much money the bandits stole.

In each incident, the men were described as being in their early 20s, black and dressed in dark clothing.

Parking tickets pay off

Costa Mesa's first parking permit system, designed to ease traffic problems caused by the Pacific Amphitheatre, may not deter cars from jamming residential streets but it is filling city coffers, officials said.

In the month since the permit system was set up, Costa Mesa traffic officers have issued more than $3,000 — and possibly a lot more — in parking tickets in the College Park neighborhood around the county

Coast's cities warming up to welcome Olympic Torch

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

American flags, flashlights to show the way and at least one band will greet the Olympic Torch runners as the relay moves through the Orange Coast Wednesday and Thursday.

The torch is scheduled to arrive in Laguna Beach on Pacific Coast Highway about 8 p.m. Wednesday, according to relay organizers.

The Olympic flame will continue along the highway, arriving in Corona del Mar about 9 p.m.

The Corona del Mar Chamber of Commerce plans to line the street with American flags and is urging spectators to bring flashlights to illuminate the route.

A special open house featuring Sam the Olympic Eagle will be held at the First Interstate Bank branch in Corona del Mar starting at 8 p.m.

The torch will continue north on Pacific Coast Highway, making a right turn at Newport Center Drive about 9:15 p.m.

Jim Dale, president of the Newport Harbor Area Chamber of Commerce, announced at the Newport City Council meeting Monday night, that Newport Center will be the official greeting site of the Olympic Torch in the city.

He urged spectators to gather there because of convenient parking facilities and the planned festivities.

Henry Brandon and his 17-piece brass band will tune up about 7:30 p.m., according to Pacific Mutual spokeswoman Carol Beekman, one of the greeting's organizers.

The band will be followed by special guest speaker Dick Stevens, the Olympic Commissioner for the Modern Pentathlon event to be held in Irvine and Coto de Caza. Stevens will bring 800 volunteers who are

Little bit of W. Germany comes to Fountain Valley

Visiting athletes train for Olympic Games in Los Caballeros Racquet Club facilities

Members of the Los Caballeros Racquet and Sports Club didn't have to go far to get an advance look at some Olympic athletes during the past few weeks.

Twice each day, members of the West German men's and women's Olympic swim teams were within easy view, perfecting their strokes in the Fountain Valley club's 50-meter pool. During a pre-Olympic workout period that ended Saturday, the German athletes also lived in hotel-condominium units at Los Caballeros.

The U.S. women's Olympic basketball team has also been training and living at Los Caballeros in recent weeks. The team's checkout date is Friday.

And, members of the U.S. women's Olympic volleyball team have been honing their skills in a Los Caballeros gymnasium. Members of the volleyball team have been living in homes throughout Orange County during the Olympic warmup period.

What has this Olympic invasion meant to the local sports complex?

Members faced a little inconvenience. During the German athletes' two-hour afternoon workouts, club members could not swim in the main pool. Morning workouts took place from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., before the pool is normally open to members.

Yet if anyone was annoyed by this restriction, the word didn't reach Kevin Bove, general manager of Los Caballeros.

"I haven't received any complaints," Bove said, "because the magnitude of this visit is obvious, and I think our members understand that. In fact, (our members) have gone beyond just being hospitable to the athletes. They've enjoyed watching the workouts, but they've also showed respect for their privacy."

Most of the athletes are college-age students, but Bove said he didn't have to worry about "Animal House" antics in the club's brand new condominiums.

"These are very serious athletes engaged in the most important part of their training — just before the Olympics," he said.

regimen, many of the athletes went to bed quite early anyway, another Los Caballeros official said. Still, she said some coaches requested a price list for condo furnishings to alert athletes to the costs in case anything did break during their stay.

If Los Caballeros members came to appreciate the athletes' visit, the teams in turn seemed to enjoy the accommodations. Bove said other teams had to endure numerous bus rides during pre-Olympic weeks, shuttling between sleeping, eating and training areas. At Los Caballeros, the athletes could do all three without leaving the grounds. A catering service at the club provided meals according to coaches' specifications.

"These facilities are very fine," Dr. Jurgen Kozel, manager of the West German swim teams, said as his athletes were concluding their stay. "It's a good pool, there are good facilities in the weight room, and the apartments are very nice."

Kozel discovered Los Caballeros last August, when his athletes were competing in an earlier contest in Los Angeles. Kozel and a coach were looking for an Olympic training camp fairgrounds where the amphitheater is located.

A Costa Mesa traffic bureau spokesman said during the closing weekend of the Orange County Fair, when evening traffic was heavy and the fairgrounds parking lot was filled, about 175 parking tickets were issued.

With a parking ticket comes a $17 fine, the spokesman said. If the fine is not paid within 10 days, the amount is raised to $22.

City Manager Fred Sorsabal said a percentage of the fines collected goes to the courts, to help cover court costs, and the rest is returned to the city's general fund. He said he did not know how much money had been generated.

The expense of running the permit system is minimal, he said. "The initial cost of the ('permit parking only') signs and the poles and everything probably cost about $5,000," Sorsabal said.

The Pacific Amphitheatre's operators, the Nederlander organization, suggested the parking permit program and agreed to pay for its operation on the nights when the amphitheater is hosting a concert, he added.

Nederlander also picked up the initial tab for the signs and for printing permit stickers.

The traffic spokesman said about nine people are assigned to amphitheater traffic control, although only five or so work the neighborhood, patrolling and issuing tickets, on concert nights.

The traffic bureau spokesman said between eight and 10 tickets are issued during an average concert night at the amphitheater.

IRVINE CO. WAGES TAX FIGHT...

Second, the company believes the assessor's revaluation of the company's 2,200 parcels was completed without a full knowledge of the land's value.

Hunt said much of the company's undeveloped property was valued at what it would sell for as subdivided land, complete with streets, sewers and other urban improvement.

Most of the land, however, is open fields and hills lacking paved roads or any other improvements and is worth considerably less than what the county says, Hunt said.

For example, the 9,421 acres of the Irvine Coast area was last valued at $37 million. The new assessment for the proposed site of a resort and residential development places the value at $390 million.

"From my knowledge of the (Irvine Coast) project, and I have been working on it for six years, I don't know how one arrives at the higher figure," Nielsen said.

Webster Guillory, a spokesman for the assessor's office said the Irvine Co. is welcome to contest the valuation but "we figured the value

according to law. We do this every day and we know the values well."

The new assessment came as a jolt to the Irvine Co. which will have to come up with about $25 million in cash for every year the valuation is under appeal. The money will be placed in escrow for the county until the controversy is settled.

Nielsen said finding the cash will result in "difficult planning" but the company should be able to continue with its major programs and projects without any interruptions.

HOTEL COLLAPSE KILLS WORKER...

Workers reportedly were lowering the prefabricated sixth floor slab into place early today when the concrete slab broke loose, firefighters said. The cause of the accident was unknown.

The huge slab reportedly crashed down through the hotel's skeletal structure, slamming through the fifth and fourth floors, a spokesman explained.

A construction worker apparently assisting with the work on the sixth floor suffered injuries to his arms and legs when the slab broke away, firefighters said. The unidentified worker was taken to Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana after being rescued nearly an hour after the mishap.

A second construction crew member, believed to have been working on the third or fourth floor, reportedly was crushed by the falling concrete. His identity was not released.

"He was buried under the rubble," Graber said.

Authorities would not release the name of the contractor working on the hotel. The hotel, near the site of the historic Holly Sugar factory that was torn down last year, is to be one of seven hotels built on the site, according to a city official.

"The construction site's been shut down until this gets settled," Graber said. He said city building inspectors and a California Occupational Safety, Health Administration representative were at the scene.

College admissions officials say the new schedule and the new fee system have created fresh challenges for them, but early reports indicate registration is proceeding smoothly.

Signup by appointment began Monday at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa. Open or walk-in registration runs Aug. 16 through Aug. 24.

Coastline College, based in Fountain Valley but offering classes in numerous neighborhood locations, also has begun its registration, which is conducted primarily by mail. In-person registration for Coastline classes can be completed at the College Center in Fountain Valley or at Coastline's three learning centers: Peterson in Huntington Beach, Mesa Verde in Costa Mesa and Finley in Westminster.

Registration by appointment at Golden West College in Huntington Beach begins Monday. Walk-in registration starts Aug. 16.

Classes at Orange Coast, Coastline

and Golden West begin Aug. 20.

Saddleback College's campuses in Irvine and Mission Viejo will register continuing students from Aug. 7 to Aug. 14. New students can register by appointment from Aug. 15 to Sept. 7. Saddleback classes begin Aug. 27.

John Buller, dean of admissions and records at Orange Coast, said his office deliberately scheduled fewer registration appointments than usual Monday to test the new system for collecting tuition fees.

helping with the Pentathlon.

Newport Beach Mayor Evelyn Hart will then make a brief speech and everyone will await the torch. Newport Center Drive will be decorated with flags, and Beekman says the atmosphere will be festive.

The torch will then take San Miguel Drive to Ford Road to MacArthur Boulevard to Campus Drive in Irvine to University Drive back to Campus Drive to Jamboree Road to Pacific Coast Highway.

The torch will cut across Newport Bay at Dover Drive before taking Westcliff Drive to Irvine Avenue to head into Costa Mesa sometime after 1 a.m.

The torch relay caravan, made up of about 75 people, will spend the night at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa, according to Bill Fredrickson, one of the relay's organizers.

In Costa Mesa Thursday, early morning runners will be greeted by city officials during their 4 a.m. briefing and then treated to a breakfast reception about 8 a.m. after they run their kilometers.

Werner Escher, publicity spokesman for the South Coast Plaza Mall, said he hopes to have a tent set up in the Denny's parking lot at Bristol Street and Red Hill Avenue where City Council members and city staff members can greet the runners and their families after the torch moves out of Costa Mesa.

Most of the running in Costa Mesa will take place on Bristol Street past the South Coast Plaza between about 6 a.m. and 8 a.m. Thursday.

City officials in both Irvine and Laguna Beach said no official greetings were planned.

GERMAN ATHLETES TRAIN IN VALLEY...

when a friend referred them to the Fountain Valley club. This month, 13 men and 11 women swimmers from West Germany arrived at Los Caballeros with their coaches.

The team manager said there were several reasons for training in California just before the Olympics. First, the weather in Germany might have limited the athletes to indoor pool training.

"At the time of our departure from Germany, it was very cold," Kozel said.

Another important reason was matter of time zones. Nine hours difference exists between time in Germany and Los Angeles. The Fountain Valley training period allowed the German athletes to adjust to the California Olympics clock.

The routine was not all work and no play.

One of the swimmers, 22-year-old Dirk Korthals of Gladbeck, West Germany, said team members had a chance to visit Knotts Berry Farm, Venice, area shopping centers and the oceanfront along Huntington Beach and Long Beach.

"It's a bit different (from Germany), but I like it," said Korthals who hopes "to make a medal in the 400- and 800-meter relays and to reach the finals in the 100-meter free-style."

Team manager Kozel said West Germany's star swimmer is Michael Gross, 20, a world record-holder in the 200-meter free-style and 200-meter butterfly events.

This will be the first Olympics competition for Gross and for most of the other West German swimmers. Kozel said. Many were prepared to compete in Moscow in 1980, but West Germany, like the United States, boycotted the Olympics that year.

He said his athletes were a bit disappointed by the Soviet Union's decision not to attend this year's Olympics, a move followed by other Communist nations.

"We would like to have all the good athletes here in Los Angeles," Kozel said. "But it's not a decision of sports, it's a decision of politics. It's a pity. We have very good friends on the East German team, and we know many of the Russian athletes."

Kozel said his West German swimmers were not dwelling on the boycott but instead were looking forward to moving into quarters in the Olympic Village on the USC campus. Competitions will take place in the USC Olympic Swim Stadium.

Their cheering section may even include a few people who watched them train at Los Caballeros.

Club manager Bove believes the West German swimmers and the other Olympic athletes gave a boost to the club and the community as a whole.

"Our staff has been under a more significant strain," he admitted. "But they don't perceive it as that. They see it as the opportunity of a lifetime."

Assessment ruling may aid lawsuit by Irvine heiress

By JERRY HIRSCH

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Orange County tax assessor isn't the only person questioning the worth of the Irvine Co.

Joan Irvine Smith, the feisty Irvine heiress who battled Newport Beach tycoon Donald Bren for control of the company last year, also believes the land development firm is worth much more than company officials claim.

When Bren bought controlling interest in the company in April of 1983, one of the deals he offered Smith was $110 million for the 11 percent of the company's stock she controls with her mother, Athalie Clarke.

The figure was based upon a $1 billion valuation of the company. Smith said it was worth a lot more and the county apparently agrees.

Tax Assessor Bradley L. Jacobs increased the valuation of the Irvine

Co. from about $1.1 billion to $3 billion. The company plans to appeal the county assessment.

Smith, who lost a bid last year to keep Bren from merging the Irvine Co. with his personal holding company, is suing the company to force it to pay her more for her stock.

The case will be held in Michigan where Bren's corporation papers are filed.

Irvine Co. officials say the new assessment will have no impact on Smith's suit, which was filed last year.

The assessment determines the value of the real estate held by the company and the lawsuit will determine the value of Smith's minority shares in the corporation — two separate things, according to Irvine Co. vice president Gary Hunt.

One of Smith's lawyers with the Los Angeles law firm of Loeb & Loeb does not agree.

"We have not reviewed what the assessor has done but at the minimum it would only confirm Mrs. Smith's view that Mr. Bren and the Irvine Co. have undervalued the company," said Loeb & Loeb attorney, Robert Meyer.

"It is correct that the issue in our case is the value of the stock but fundamental to that is an analysis of what the assets of the company are worth. In this case the prime asset of the Irvine Co. is real estate," Meyer said.

"This can only be good for me and bad for the company. It will be very valuable to our fight," Smith said.

Irvine Co. officials claim the value of the stock should be based upon what Bren paid for his share of the company from Detroit shopping center developer Alfred Taubman and a group of East Coast investors. That would place the value of the company in the neighborhood of about $1 billion.

Motorcyclist, 14, killed as bike hits pickup truck

A 14-year-old Mission Viejo boy was killed Monday when the motorcycle he was riding slammed into a pickup truck on a residential road near the Mission Viejo Golf Course, authorities said.

Richard Stenton apparently suffered a broken neck in the 3 p.m. collision on Goleta Drive. He died later at Mission Community Hospital in Mission Viejo, according to California Highway Patrol Officer Ken Daley.

Although the boy was legally too young to be driving, officers said preliminary indications reveal the youth may not have been at fault in the mishap.

The motorcycle slammed into the side of a pickup truck driven by Brian O'Brien, 25, of Costa Mesa. Daley said. The truck reportedly made a left turn onto Bodega Lane in front of the young motorcyclist.

It was not immediately clear whether the youth was wearing a helmet.

O'Brien was uninjured in the accident. Lori Neeley, a 14-year-old Mission Viejo girl riding as a passenger on the motorcycle, sustained a broken left leg and numerous lacerations, Daley said.

The accident is still under investigation.

$3 million city shelter caters to animals just like they were home — but they're not

By ANDREA ADELSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Irvine's long-awaited $3.3 million "pet palace" is finally open for business.

The three-building facility is a modern wonder for an animal shelter. It was designed with some of the same architectural ideas that make buildings appealing to people.

Banks of high windows fill the shelter with natural lighting. Big fans draw out hot air. And each of the cats and dogs that occupy the 70 runs have an outdoor porch where they can sniff fresh air and sun themselves.

"Animals are a lot like people. They prefer the outside even in hot weather," said Carl Pagano, Irvine's animal control services supervisor.

Pagano and his staff of four operate one of only four city-run animal shelters in Orange County. Nineteen other cities contract with the county's facility to shelter four-legged creatures picked up elsewhere.

Irvine strays were moved recently from cramped quarters in Laguna Canyon, a shelter converted from a horse stable, to the "pet palace."

Jet noise is one feature the old stable didn't have. "I thought listening to 40 dogs was loud," Pagano said. However, the critters seem to have adjusted more easily than the humans, he said.

Pagano has taken care of Irvine's animals since 1976. "Before that, I was a guy who had all sorts of personal pets," he said.

The "Doggie Hilton" is so nice, conscience-stricken animal owners from Tustin and San Clemente wanting to relinquish their pets have tried to drop them off at the new Irvine shelter.

Pagano's answer is "no" to everyone but Irvine residents. The shelter is intended to be supported with $18 to $24 per dog annual license fees. The fees are the highest in the county, he said.

Other features at the shelter include:

•Spartan "get acquainted" rooms with only a linoleum bench. Would-be pet takers can play with the animals there.

•A concrete path in the dirt yard where leashed dogs can be tried out.

•A large outdoor cage where every dog is allowed a 20-minute romp every day with other animals.

The extra features are intended to promote pet adoption in two ways, Pagano explained.

Not only is the shelter a clean and airy place that people seem to like visiting, but its openness keeps animals socialized. Dogs don't cower or launch into a barking, jumping frenzy when humans approach.

"We wanted to have a humane philosophy," he explained.

The shelter sets no time limit on how long an animal will be held before being euthanized. But strays are kept depending on space and adoptability, meaning the animal's health, age and disposition.

The facility, scaled back to two kennels from four and without a spay-neuter clinic, is designed to accommodate Irvine's needs for the next 25 years. Last year, about 900 animals were brought to the old shelter.

Olympic park & ride lots opened in county

A series of 21 temporary park-and-ride lots has been established throughout Orange County to help ease traffic congestion during the Olympics, officials of the Orange County Transit District have announced.

Most of the locations are at school parking lots, where there will be no charge for parking. The temporary service will continue through Aug. 17, according to John Trausch, OCTD spokesman.

There will be no bus service provided from the park-and-ride lots, Trausch said. They are meant to serve as meeting points for commuters who can use car pools or van pools to drive to and from work.

"They are aimed at anyone who commutes," he said. "People who go into Los Angeles make up a large percentage of that group, but there will also be people, for example, who live in Anaheim and want to car pool to work in Santa Ana."

Commuters can identify others from their areas to carpool with by calling OCTD's Rideshare program at 636-RIDE.

In the Orange Coast area, Irvine is the only city where temporary park-and-ride lots have been opened. They are at Irvine High School, Rancho San Joaquin Intermediate School, S.E.L.F. Alternative School and Woodbridge High School.

The Rideshare program has 35,000 commuters on file, Trausch said.

Dentist just ignored risk, DA tells jury

Prosecutor claims arrogance, greed led to patients' deaths

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Costa Mesa dentist Tony Protapappas should be found guilty of second-degree murder because he is an arrogant, greedy man who knowingly disregarded the risks of giving lethal doses of anesthetic drugs to three patients, an Orange County prosecutor told a Superior Court jury on Monday.

Deputy District Attorney James Cloninger urged a six-man, six-woman jury to return a guilty verdict against the 39-year-old former dentist because he acted with "conscious disregard" for the lives of patients Kim Andressen, Patricia Craven and Cathryn Jones, the three women he is accused of killing by administering anesthetic overdoses.

"No one ever said he intended to do it. The crux of the case is that he just didn't do much to avoid it," said Cloninger during his three-hour-long closing statement. "He's an arrogant man who had structured his business around anesthesia and was making a lot of money."

Protapappas, as he has since the trial began in March, listened calmly to the prosecutor, sometimes rocking in a chair and sometimes scribbling notes on a legal pad supplied by one of his two defense attorneys.

Defense attorneys Robert Tuller and Hollis Dyer were to argue the defense's case today. Then, Judge Luis Cardenas was to instruct the jury on the applicable law before jury deliberations began.

If convicted on the murder charges, Protapappas could be sentenced to a maximum 15-year-to-life state prison term.

Cloninger explained to jurors the difference between second-degree murder and involuntary manslaughter, arguing that the evidence he meticulously presented during the long trial indicated Protapappas was guilty of murder.

"The difference is in realizing the risk," the prosecutor explained. "If he acted with knowledge of the risk but in total disregard of the risk, then, he's guilty of murder."

He said that Protapappas "intentionally injected lethal drugs into people that he knows could cause death without great care being taken."

He said the three deaths represented the medical equivalent of a man randomly shooting a gun into a crowd. "The roster of the crowd were those in his drug book. He always was running the risk of encountering people who couldn't handle it," Cloninger told jurors.

Cloninger repeatedly called the anesthetic drug regimen Protapappas used at his high-volume Costa Mesa dental clinic and the lack of monitoring performed on patients "crazy." He added, "it was in complete contradiction of medical good sense."

He also said he structured his case so that Protapappas would have to take the witness stand in his own defense. "The story of this case was the defendant himself... The defendant giving massive doses of drugs to make them (patients) manageable, part of the profit thing. The wrong part is when you start sacrificing safety for profit."

Man stabbed in jail brawl

From staff and wire reports

A 23-year-old inmate was stabbed twice with a homemade knife Monday during a lunchtime brawl involving about 125 inmates at the Orange County jail, sheriff's deputies said.

Sheriff's Lt. Doug Storm identified the wounded inmate as Mario Batton. Batton is awaiting trial on burglary charges.

Batton's assailant has not been identified, Storm said. Batton was listed in stable condition at the UCI Medical Center in Orange, the lieutenant said.

A resident of the 15700 block of Sunflower Lane told police she advertised to sell her black 1977 Dodge van. A man who responded to the ad asked to take it to a mechanic a week ago and never returned. The loss was estimated at $3,000.

Someone broke into a white Datsun 260Z parked Monday on the 15500 block of Huntington Village. The loss included a camera worth $140, a briefcase worth $60 and a suit worth $150.

Death of Irvine man 'natural'

A probe into the death of an Irvine man was halted late Monday when an autopsy revealed the 59-year-old man died Sunday of natural causes, police said today.

Clifford E. Smith Jr. died when a main artery to his heart ruptured, officials said. Smith was found at his University Park home by a son.

Irvine police initially said the death was suspicious but did not elaborate. "We were just being careful," Irvine Sgt. Dick Bowman said today.

ESCONDIDO — The Olympic flame blazed a trail of thrills and tears across three Southern California counties as runners carried the torch to the cheers of rural and urban residents on its route to the Summer Games. Relay runners carried the flame out of Los Angeles County, where it was met Monday by streetfuls of people who blocked impatient motorists but parted for the relay. Eastward bound, the flame entered San Bernardino County, turned southward into Riverside County and on toward San Diego.

Afghan offensive launched by Soviets

NEW DELHI, India — Soviet occupation troops have launched a major offensive against anti-Marxist rebels in northeast Afghanistan, bombing several districts and killing numerous civilians, a Western diplomatic source said today. "There was a heavy loss of civilian life," said the source.

Soviet chemical ban plan assailed

GENEVA, Switzerland — The Soviet Union dismissed U.S. efforts to force a new treaty banning chemical weapons and today issued a counterproposal that verification and inspection of chemical weapons stocks be decided by consensus. The proposal by Soviet Ambassador Viktor L. Issraelyan to the U.N. Conference on Disarmament was immediately criticized by a Western diplomat as "cynical." The source, said consensus decision-making would stymie enforcement, allowing the superpowers vetoes similar to those that often paralyze the U.N. Security Council.

Napoleon booty recovered at sea

CAIRO, Egypt — Divers have recovered 127 French silver coins and 55 letters from an old printing press on board one of Napoleon Bonaparte's ships that was sunk by the British in 1798, officials report. The announcement, made in Alexandria, said the relics were discovered earlier this month by a French-Egyptian expedition searching for the remains of Napoleon's fleet.

Consumer costs barely increase

By The Associated Press

Consumer prices rose 0.2 percent in June, matching May's slight gain, as inflation was held in check by the first monthly drop in gasoline prices since February, the Labor Department said today.

Food prices nudged up 0.1 percent, but would have fallen except for a 22.5 percent surge in the price of oranges, the government said.

The moderation in inflation came despite continued general vigor in the economy. On Monday, the Commerce Department said economic activity grew at a surprisingly strong 7.5 percent annual clip in the second quarter.

But not all sectors are maintaining that growth.

The Commerce Department said today that factory orders for durable goods — items such as cars, appliances and military hardware — fell 3.2 percent in June, the second decline in the last three months.

On the inflation front, the Labor Department said consumer prices which rose at a 5 percent annual rate in the first three months of the year slowed to a 3.3 percent annual rate in the second quarter and were rising at a 2 percent annual rate in June.

While overall economic growth has been spurring, so has the trade gap. A Commerce Department report Monday said that the United States, which posted its worst foreign trade performance in 1983, could nearly double the red ink this year and run abnormally high deficits for the foreseeable future.

9 die, 23 hurt, 7 missing in explosion at refinery

ROMEOVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Rescue workers searched today for seven Union Oil Co. workers still missing following a refinery explosion that killed at least nine people, injured 23 others, cracked concrete foundations 15 miles away and cut off power to 10,000 homes.

The blast Monday evening was felt for 35 miles and left the refinery looking like "a giant erector set that had been stepped on," said Romeoville police Lt. Andy Barto.

Rescue workers were hampered for hours from recovering charred bodies at the site by the choking smoke and intense heat.

There was speculation that the blast inside the refinery's coke plant may have been touched off by a spark from a welder's torch but "the people who know the actual cause of the blast may be dead," said Sgt. Richard Nugent of the Romeoville Police Department.

Firefighters from about 30 communities battled five separate fires which sent smoke swirling thousands of feet into the air. By early today, only one fire was still burning, and that was under control, Nugent said.

New Miss America to 'uplift' image of pageant

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Miss America promised to spend her 7½-week reign trying to "uplift" the pageant's image after her predecessor, Vanessa Williams, reluctantly surrendered her beauty crown over the publication of sexually explicit photographs of her.

"Probably right now I feel relieved because I got a chance to say my side of the story ...," Miss Williams said this morning on NBC's "Today" show. "I feel very outraged, bitter, but the support that I've gotten by the country ... that makes it bearable. It took literally 72 hours" to decide to give up her crown rather than fight to keep it.

"I needed all the time that I could because there were a lot of things to figure out and weigh for my future especially and for the future of a lot of young women," she said. "I don't want to have any kind of battle or fight or division with the people that have supported me."

At a news conference Monday, a poised and smiling Miss Williams said she had wanted to complete her year as the 1984 titleholder, but realized that "because of all that has happened during the past week, it would be difficult for me to make an appearance as Miss America."

Suzette Charles, 21, of May Landing, N.J., the first runner-up in September's pageant, is also black. She said she was "excited about becoming the 58th Miss America."

Human error investigated in crash of Amtrak trains

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK — Investigators were trying to determine whether a broken signal or human error caused two passenger trains to collide head-on, killing one rider and injuring 115 in Amtrak's fourth fatal accident this month, officials said. The collision Monday on elevated tracks in the borough of Queens occurred when the Boston-bound Zip failed to wait for the southbound Shoreliner to pass, said Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black. The trains were traveling on the same track because of repairs, he said. The impact derailed both locomotives and four cars on each train. Firefighters had to break windows to rescue trapped passengers, and the most severely injured were lowered in cherry pickers 80 feet from the tracks waiting ambulances below.

Teen maintains she's Soviet BRAINERD, Minn. — Although she has been confronted with her real background, a 21-year-old woman with "some heavy problems" insists she is actually a teen-age Soviet hockey player abandoned in the United States, authorities said. Wendy Ann Devin, who grew up in the Boston suburb of Braintree, had passed herself off at a Minnesota hockey camp as 14-year-old Valeria Skvortsov, a native of Kiev in the Soviet Union, said Sgt. Frank Ball, an investigator for the Crow Wing County sheriff's office. When she was told Monday that authorities had learned her identity, Devin stood by her story and refused to return to Massachusetts to seek psychiatric help.

No weapons talks through press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union says it wants the United States to join in declaring a halt to testing and deployment of space weapons, but Washington says any joint work on such a statement should be conducted in private "rather than through press releases." A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, Vladimir Lomeiko, told a news conference Monday that the Soviets last week proposed such a statement but that the United States had not yet responded.

'Arab shieks' bust prostitutes

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Detectives disguised as Arab shieks being driven around this resort town by another officer posing as a chauffeur proved an effective lure for prostitutes, 40 of whom got a limousine ride to jail, police said. But the operation had to be cut short after just 6½ hours "because we couldn't put any more in our jail," police Capt. Peter Mucci said Monday. "We couldn't keep the girls out of the back seat," said Mucci, who orchestrated the undercover operation.

Black superintendent getting boot

CHICAGO — The Chicago Board of Education on Monday night voted against renewing the contract of Ruth B. Love, the first black to serve as superintendent of the nation's third-largest public school system. The 6-5 vote against Miss Love, the nation's highest-paid school superintendent, was mainly along racial lines. "Our opposition to Dr. Love should not be misconstrued as a racist attack, but rather as a statement against Dr. Love's administrative incompetencies and educational policies, which have severely deteriorated the quality of education for all children in the Chicago Public Schools system," said Juan Morales of the South Lawndale Coalition of Schools before the vote.

Union's demand to Ford

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union took its demands for job security and higher wages to Ford Motor Co. today as labor negotiations began at the No. 2 U.S. automaker.

The Ford talks, covering 115,000 workers, began one day after the UAW presented its demands to industry leader General Motors Corp., which employs 350,000 UAW members.

GM and the UAW made some progress right away on health care, but job security and wages still loom as possible strike issues.

At the ceremonial opening of the talks, UAW President Owen Bieber reached across the main bargaining table this morning and shook hands with Ford's top negotiator, Vice President Peter Pestillo.

The UAW is seeking to replace its historic 1982 contracts with Ford and GM which provided union concessions to the then-ailing auto-makers.

Both contracts expire Sept. 14. They were reached more than two years ago while the U.S. auto industry struggled through its worst slump since the Depression.

But Detroit came roaring back last year, with GM making a record $3.73 billion profit and Ford a record $1.87 billion. Both companies paid their top executives millions of dollars in bonuses based on those profits, and the industry is expected to double its black ink this year.

"GM workers are in fact entitled to and deserve" wage increases, said Bieber, who came out forcefully against GM on the union's No. 1 issue: the importing of cars and car parts from overseas.

Ferraro returns to the office

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big welcome awaited Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro today with her first appearance among colleagues in the House of Representatives since receiving the nomination.

Ferraro tended to correspondence in her Queens congressional office on Monday and flew to Washington today, where she was expected to make brief remarks before the House at her second triumphant homecoming in less than a week.

Asked on the flight about reports the Republicans will attempt to portray her as one of the most liberal members of Congress, Ferraro said that if someone considered her liberal for working to save the financially ailing Social Security system, "so be it."

She had been at her Queens home since leaving San Francisco last Friday after the Democratic National Convention. During the weekend, hometown residents hailed her return, displaying pride at her accomplishment as the first woman to run for vice president.

Setting about work in her office Monday, she shooed away reporters and photographers, saying, "I still have a congressional office to run."

Gunman fires rounds in pizza parlor

SAN JOSE (AP) — A disgruntled, former employee of a Shakey's Pizza Parlor kept police at bay for nearly eight hours last night after he entered the restaurant with two guns, ordered everyone out and started shooting. No one was hurt as about 15 shots were fired during the night before the man gave up at about 6:15 this morning after police threatened to use tear gas to flush him out, said Lt. Dan Bullock of the San Jose Police Department.

Police cordoned off a four-block area around the restaurant shortly after the man entered the pizza place at 10:30 p.m. carrying a rifle and a handgun, a police dispatcher said. When police first arrived on the scene the man, identified as Samuel Oastler, 19, of San Jose, fired seven or eight shots from the restaurant.

Police spent the next several hours trying to make contact with the gunman.

"He never would pick up the telephone and talk to our negotiator," Bullock said.

At about 6:15 this morning police decided to make a move since Oastler was still not answering calls to negotiate.

"We told him we were prepared to use tear gas and canines and at that point he came out with his hands on his head," Bullock said.

Reagan hopeful for Labor victory in Israeli voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Praising Israel for its commitment to a democratic society, the Reagan administration says close U.S.-Israeli ties will continue regardless of which party — Likud or Labor — succeeds in forming a government after Monday's extremely tight general election.

Although Labor held an edge in the number of seats in the Israeli parliament, it appeared it would take several days at least before it would be known which party could form a government. The winner would have to form a coalition with minority parties, requiring compromises that could result in a weak Israeli government.

Administration officials were careful during the campaign not to voice any public preference between Likud, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, and Labor, led by Shimon Peres. Washington wanted to avoid any charge of election meddling that could have become an election issue in itself.

But privately, many administration officials expressed a belief that a Labor victory would be in U.S. interests because it would open the door to possible long-range solutions to Middle East problems, particularly the Arab-Israeli conflict.

It is a virtual certainty, officials say, that if Reagan is re-elected in November, he will renew his peace initiative that was rejected by the Likud-led Israeli government of former Prime Minister Menachem Begin soon after it was unveiled in Sept. 1, 1982.

Peres, who would head a labor government, is expected to be more flexible toward a Reagan peace initiative, which focuses on providing some form of self-government for Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in association with Jordan.

Likud is adamantly opposed to any solution that would lead to yielding sovereignty over the West Bank. Peres is expected to at least agree to negotiate with neighboring Jordan over the future of the West Bank.

Peres also is thought more likely to bring about a quick withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon. The 1982 invasion of Lebanon was engineered by the Likud-led government of Begin.

A Labor government might also provide fewer unpleasant surprises for Washington, such as the Lebanese invasion, the Israeli bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor, the annexation of the Golan Heights and the pre-invasion bombing of Beirut.

Happy 25th, Hawaii, Alaska

Author got a 'beat' and a salmon up north

Two days from now, Thursday, July 26, is the 25th anniversary of Alaska and Hawaii as the forty-ninth and fiftieth states of the United States.

I'm sure most of you are old enough to remember that day. But I'll bet you a cookie to an ice cream cone, that you don't remember a day barely five years later, when an event occurred that shook not only Alaska but the entire Pacific Coast — physically and mentally.

WALTER BURROUGHS

It was an earthquake. Not a little one but a really big one. Bigger than the San Francisco quake of 1906.

Our big Southern California shake that leveled most of Long Beach and also damaged a lot of our Orange Coast was in 1932. But even that was not as spectacular as the Anchorage, Alaska temblor.

Yes, I was there. Not on the day of the quake but a short time later.

I seem to have a penchant for covering catastrophes by accident. I'm just there, and because of my former association with U.P.I., I fill in when it appears they lack coverage.

Anchorage has a fine newspaper which is a member of the Associated Press and, under the membership rules, was required to file a "quake bulletin." So, as the world was learning of the earthquake, there was a dearth of visiting newsmen and I got a "beat" after all.

Beautiful homes were poised on the bluff above Cook Inlet. Cook Inlet has one of the highest tides in the world. At times as high as 37 feet, equal to the Bay of Fundy.

The quake shook the bluff so hard it collapsed and the houses fell down to the beach below. Also fallen were what appeared to be huge chunks of rock. "Boulders" was the way they were described by the opposition.

I was suspicious that they weren't "boulders," so I climbed down and picked one up and tried to knead it. Voila! I was right. Just chunks of thisotropic clay. I'd encountered it before when a bridge over the "Narrows" near Tacoma, Washington fell down.

A local geologist on the Orange Coast told me later that we have some here — but not on any bluff.

The reason I "happened" to be there was that I had joined a DOCA trip to study Alaska defense.

Flying to Kodiak a few days later, the pilot of the plane pointed out an active volcano that wasn't on any chart.

At Kodiak I wandered up a road and encountered a brown bear. He politely turned around and went the other way. So did I.

We took off into fog and landed in Nome. Next day we went to Katzebe above the Arctic Circle, then back to King Salmon. I fished on the Nak-nak River, got a 39-pound salmon. That turned out to be a very much photographed fish. Other guys in the party less fortunate wanted pictures with my fish.

All of which isn't intended to be a travelogue. It simply is testimony that Seward's folly is, probably, the most intelligent government action ever taken by the federal government.

No need to tell you how prudent it was to make Hawaii a state. Most of you have seen it first hand. But I want to say you have a real treat in store for you if you take a trip to Alaska — not just Juneau and Glacier Bay. That's fine too. But the big Alaska — Mount McKinley, Point Barrow and the north slope.

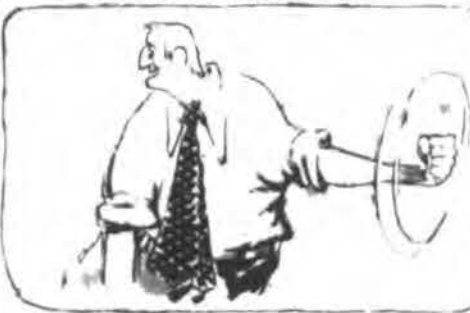

So Alaska and Hawaii, happy anniversary.

Promoter of African pipeline gave money to senator's wife

WASHINGTON — Antoinette Hatfield, the wife of Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., received substantial payments during 1982 and 1983 from a Greek arms merchant who had enlisted the senator's support in promoting a trans-African oil pipeline. My sources say the checks Mrs. Hatfield got from Basil Tsakos totaled at least $40,000.

The senator acknowledged that his wife received money from Tsakos, but said this had absolutely nothing to do with his efforts on behalf of the Greek munitions dealer's pipeline project. Hatfield said the money was paid to his wife in connection with a real estate transaction, but declined to discuss the matter in detail on grounds that it was private business.

Hatfield said he was speaking for his wife, but my associate Corky Johnson attempted to speak with her anyway. He was informed that she would not be made available for comment.

According to the senator, the money was a "finder's fee" paid after his wife, a real estate agent in the District of Columbia, located the Watergate condominium that Tsakos purchased. Some of the money was for consulting work related to the remodeling of the apartment, the senator said.

Real estate professionals told my associate that payments for such consulting work are not unusual. But apparently there was no formal contract, and according to sources Tsakos made several payments in a mysterious fashion long after the real estate transaction was closed. The sources said there was no consistency to the payments, which appeared to be made at Tsakos' whim.

Furthermore, a real estate agent in the Watergate building claimed that she had made the introductions that led to Tsakos' purchase of the condominium. She was unaware of any involvement by Mrs. Hatfield in the transaction.

Two of the checks were written in August 1982, six months after the apartment sale. Both checks were issued on the same day by the Watergate branch of the Riggs National Bank of Washington, and each was for $7,500. The checks were recorded in Tsakos' ledger with the notation, "A.H. — for business purposes."

Another check to Mrs. Hatfield — for $15,000 — was written on Tsakos' bank account in Luxembourg in mid-1982. A fourth check — for $10,000 — was written on a Riggs Watergate-branch account in December 1983.

When asked about the checks, Tsakos told his accountant and associates that he was in fact making payments to Mrs. Hatfield, but he gave no explanation for them. Mrs. Hatfield reportedly told Tsakos about several other real estate listings, none of which he bought.

The senator declined to disclose the total amount of money his wife received from the Greek arms dealer, but said she had recorded the payments properly on her income tax returns.

Last December, a greeting card was sent to Tsakos with a handwritten note saying, "Thank you so very much for the help!" The note was signed, "Antoinette."

The Hatfields maintained cordial relations with Tsakos and his wife during the period when the checks were written, though the senator had been warned that Tsakos had a dubious background. A friend of Hatfield, Washington attorney Carl Shipley, gave the senator an intelligence document that disclosed Tsakos' criminal record in Greece.

When Hatfield asked Tsakos about the dossier, the arms dealer told him it was false; he said the only thing on his record was a minor traffic violation. Hatfield had an attorney check into Tsakos and was informed that he was "clean." So the senator continued to use his influence on behalf of the Greek's proposed pipeline, which would carry oil across Africa from the Red Sea to the Atlantic Ocean.

Sources agreed that the senator sincerely believed the pipeline project was a viable option for the administration's policy of guaranteeing an uninterrupted flow of Middle East oil, through military action, if necessary.

In future columns, I will report on other Washington insiders who have had dealings with Tsakos.

Court ruling grounds anti-marijuana campaign

Attorney general fighting to maintain air surveillance of illegal pot farms

County Sheriffs around California are putting out appeals for help in the newest round of their long and seemingly hopeless struggle against this state's marijuana growers — illicit farmers whose crop is worth an estimated $1.5 billion a year.

And state Attorney General John K. Van de Kamp says he'll renew his aggressive 37-county Campaign Against Marijuana Planting (CAMP), which last year confiscated more than $100 million worth of pot.

But no matter how much lawmen talk about the large number of tips they get from private citizens or their plans for eradicating the 1984 crop, they somehow can't manage to keep a hollow tone out of their pronouncements.

That's because the sheriffs and their allies will be working this year with one hand tied behind their backs. Their use of airplanes and helicopters will probably be cut back severely this year, despite Van de Kamp's attempts to get it expanded.

The first blow to the 1984 CAMP came from a state Court of Appeals in Sacramento, which last spring overturned the conviction of a Trinity County man arrested after federal agents saw illegal plants while flying over a field he owned 200 feet from his home.

The court ruled that aerial discovery of that pot patch so close to the man's home was "an intolerable imposition upon one's liberty and privacy," even though officers got a search warrant before making the actual arrest and eradicating the plants.

Van de Kamp is still appealing that decision. But so long as its eventual outcome is still undecided, officers will clearly have to be more careful about where they conduct airborne marijuana searches. No court has quarreled with law enforcement's right to conduct flyovers of public lands, which have long been the scene of much pot growing, so that may be where the helicopters, U-2 spy planes and small aircraft concentrate their efforts this summer and fall.

But there won't be as many aircraft involved this year, no matter what. The Pentagon — which cooperated with CAMP for the first time last year

'Arab money' buys nothing but reproach

All you need to know about it is: It's green

SAN FRANCISCO — It is said of Bert Lance, redolent with scandal and unloved by his party, that he has taken something called Arab money. This charge has been leveled with the utmost gravity, whispered in hotel hallways and uttered from the floor during the Democratic convention, printed in the papers and reported on the air. There is, it seems, no money worse than Arab money. It buys you nothing but reproach.

But what, after all, is wrong with Arab money? And even more to the point, what is meant by the term? Are we talking about Arab governments or individuals who happen to be Arabs? If it is the latter — and it seems to be with Lance — then what is wrong with what he's done?

For some time now, Arab-American groups have been complaining about the way the word "Arab" gets used to mean something like un-American. It is as if there is nothing more to say, as if Arab is either the moral or the political equivalent of "communist" — as if the word tells it all. But it really tells you nothing — nothing about the source of the money, the reason it was given or even, in most cases, whether you are talking about individuals or governments.

Regrettably, in some cases it is Jews who bandy about the term "Arab" when they themselves scream bloody murder if anyone talks about "Jewish money" — an odious term, heavy with anti-Semitic overtones. It implies another agenda, a conspiracy of sorts, something that runs counter to the real interest of America and Americans — an attempt to influence the United States on behalf of a foreign government. The term "Arab money" is weighted with the same pejorative themes.

In Lance's case, he sold his interest in the National Bank of Georgia to a Saudi Arabian financier, Ghaiath Pharoan, for $20 a share — double the value of the stock. Later, Lance joined a group of Arab investors who bought control of Financial General Bankshares. One of his associates was the crown prince of Abu Dhabi and another was the former head of the Saudi foreign-intelligence agency.

There is plenty wrong with Lance and there is plenty suspicious with the bank deal. You are entitled to ask why anyone would pay double the market price for a Georgia bank that could hardly have been the hot talk of the Middle East bourse. You are even entitled to conclude that the Arab investors were really buying into Bert Lance and not his bank and that they thought the former director of the Office of Management and Budget could be of use to them. If that is what they thought, they — and Walter F. Mondale — were alone in thinking that Bert Lance had a political future.

RICHARD COHEN

But all those questions — the reason for doing business with Lance, the reason for paying double — could be raised no matter what the nationality, religion or ethnic group of the investors. If they were trying to buy Bert Lance and with him Jimmy Carter then that — and only that — is what matters. And it would not matter then if the investors were Swiss, Greek or from Cleveland, Ohio.

But somehow that is not the case when it comes to Arab money. So far, there is no proof that any of the individuals involved represented their governments and it's hard to figure out why it would matter all that much even if they did. Bert Lance, until Mondale resurrected him, was a discredited political figure, identified with an ex-President who, if it is possible, is supposed to have less standing and prestige today than he had in the White House.

No matter. The cry of "Arab money" has such authority that it makes you think that somehow Walter Mondale, the political and spiritual heir of Hubert Humphrey, a man whose support of Israel has been unstinting and even (some would say) unthinking, will trash his long-held foreign-policy views just because Lance did business with some Arabs. If that is the case, then the cause of Israel is doomed in the United States. After all, Lance's former Georgia bank is hardly unique. The American banking system is lubricated with Arab petro-dollars and the banks involved could swallow the National Bank of Georgia with one dip into their petty-cash drawers.

"Arab" is just a scare word based on prejudice that explains nothing all by itself. Arab money, like any money, is green. That's all you need to know.

Politics can be deadly

Politics reportedly played some part in the gunfight at the O.K. Corral on Oct. 26, 1881, at Tombstone, Ariz. On one side of the shootout were Wyatt, Virgil and Morgan Earp and Doc Holliday, all Republicans. On the other side were Ike and Billy Clanton, and Tom and Frank McLaury, all Democrats.

Q. Has President Ronald Reagan always pronounced his last name RAY-gun?

A. No, before he married Nancy Davis, he called himself REE-gun, but she thought RAY-gun sounded classier. Or so say those who claim to know.

Q. Can you verify that the great golfer Bobby Jones never won a penny playing golf?

A. His titles came through amateur tournaments without purses, true, but I wouldn't bet on the widespread claim he never won any money out there, would you?

Add noteworthy lines from country lyrics: I only miss you on the days that end in Y. Where are you going, Virginia, and Virginia, how far will you go? I'm going to put a bar in my car and drive myself to drink. It's morning and I still love you. She borrowed my last dime and called my wife.

THOMAS ELIAS

as a result of recent changes in the 19th Century Posse Comitatus Act — now says its helicopters will be too busy with other assignments this year to help the drug enforcement effort.

Federal authorities came up with a special $800,000 fund to help replace the military aircraft, but that won't be enough even to bring the effort up to last year's levels.

This means a diminished haul from CAMP is likely, but there is at least some hope that military aircraft will be available in future years.

So the eventual fate of the Sacramento court's privacy decision is the most pressing of the drug fighters' long-range problems.

Chief Assistant Attorney General Stephen White says use of aircraft in CAMP is of "critical importance." Requiring search warrants for airborne surveillance, he said, would cause "any effort to address the huge marijuana problem in California to come to a halt."

White compared the aircraft to use of patrol cars in policing cities. "The officers in patrol cars have a right to be there," he said. "If they see a crime, they have a duty to act. It simply does not follow to say that if they should see a crime and they're flying in a plane, it is inappropriate for them to act."

But the state Supreme Court has yet to decide whether that analogy will hold up. If not, anti-drug efforts here will be permanently hampered.

For this year, at least, the combination of that uncertainty and the military's priorities will mean that illicit marijuana farmers can breathe easier.

New diet drug shows good results

By SUSAN MONAHAN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Dr. Sidney Rosenblatt probably had no trouble getting people to volunteer for the study he is conducting. The Newport Beach endocrinologist has been administering an experimental drug to his subjects to determine its effectiveness as an appetite-suppressant.

But Rosenblatt isn't recruiting. "With a few exceptions, I'm including only those of my patients who have a medical need to lose weight ... I'm not running a fat farm," he said.

The drug — which is called fluoxetine and is taken in capsule form — has already been tested as an antidepressant on more than 2,000 patients. "But I'm the only one using it for appetite suppression," he added.

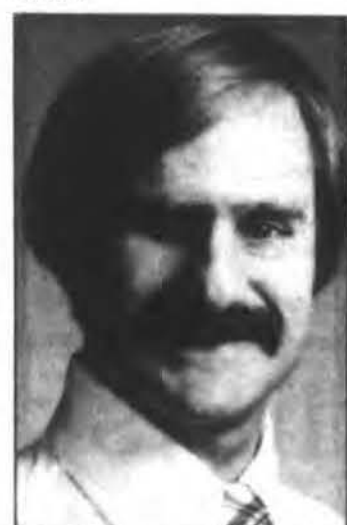

The common denominator, he explained, is serotonin, one of the brain's neurotransmitters. "The drug affects the serotonin, which has been associated with appetite and depression."

Patients suffering from depression are not participating in this experiment because "we (only) want to look at the drug's effect on appetite control."

He emphasized that fluoxetine is not an amphetamine or a stimulant, and does not alter the body's metabolism. "People are losing weight because they are eating less."

Rosenblatt is conducting the study in conjunction with Indianapolis-based Eli Lilly Pharmaceuticals, the drug's manufacturer. Forty-five subjects have taken the drug so far, and 100 will have been tested by the study's end.

"The preliminary results look very favorable," he said, noting that one patient has lost 25 pounds in five weeks.

In fact, he says that most of the subjects have lost weight, although only half of them are getting fluoxetine. The others are swallowing a placebo. But the study is double-blind, meaning that neither Rosenblatt nor his subjects know who is actually taking the drug.

They can make a pretty safe guess, however. "When you compare medicine like this to a placebo, you can tell who's on the active drug ... Those patients on the placebo say they don't feel like they're getting anything," said Rosenblatt.

He attributes the weight loss of the control group to the reinforcement they get from their office visits. Conversely, Rosenblatt assumes that patients who are skipping meals are taking the fluoxetine because "they're not starving themselves; they're eating — but they're eating a lot less."

Rosenblatt says that women who are pregnant or might get pregnant are not in the study group; most of the subjects are over 40 years of age. Ninety percent are at least 20 percent over their ideal body weight. In addition, the majority of these patients have diabetes, elevated blood pressure or blood fats (high cholesterol, for example).

But Rosenblatt estimates that only 10 to 15 percent of his patients suffer "extremely tolerable" side-effects from the fluoxetine. Slightly increased perspiration, some restlessness and mild nausea are the most common complaints.

"But no patient wants to discontinue the treatment," he said. "People sleep well, think well and carry on their jobs well."

And they are carefully monitored, he added. The patients are given a weekly supply of 20 milligram pills and, depending on the individual reaction, take from 20 to 80 milligrams a day. "We've seen patients gain a pound one week, and then lose two to three pounds a week on a higher dosage," explained Rosenblatt.

When patients come to the office for their weekly checkups, Rosenblatt has them account for the pills — "to make sure they've taken them all and not given any to friends."

The fluoxetine is taken once or twice a day — "We can often control any nausea by splitting the dosage" — daily for eight weeks.

Each patient is assigned a number, which is also used to code his or her pills. These numbers will be used to identify the experimental and the control subjects. Rosenblatt expects his part of the project to be completed by December; Eli Lilly will then analyze the data.

The future of the drug will depend not only on the results of this study, but also on FDA approval. Based on what he's seen so far, though, Rosenblatt says, "It looks like a fabulous compound that will help thousands of people."

He says it will not replace programs that emphasize modification of eating habits, "but hopefully it will keep people away from unethical treatments."

It's still too early, he says, to tell how well these subjects will maintain their weight loss. "The problem with obesity is that it is not an eight-week disease ... We need long-term studies on obesity," he said.

Rosenblatt, who has also conducted studies involving anti-hypertensive medication and human insulin, pointed out that the subjects are not being charged for the treatment. "And they're saving money on food, too."

Benefits of vigorous run outweigh risks to joggers

Experts says Fixx's death was probably delayed by exercise

NEW YORK (AP) — When Fred Lebow heard that Jim Fixx, who helped launch the running craze in the United States, had died from a heart attack while jogging, Lebow walked up 13 flights of hotel stairs to fetch his running shoes.

And then he ran nine miles along Lake Shore Drive in Chicago.

"I believe more people die on the golf course than on the running paths," Lebow said.

Lebow, the 52-year-old director of the New York City Marathon, said Fixx's death at age 52 won't deter him from pursuing the sport he shares with an estimated 35 million other people. Few runners die of heart attacks, compared to people who don't exercise regularly, he said.

He said his running organization, which sponsors more than 100 events a year and has more than 23,000 members, recorded no deaths from heart attacks during races for the first 24 of its 26 years. Two members have died since in races, he said.

Fixx, author of "The Complete Book of Running," had been a member of Lebow's organization for 14 years. "I wonder, if he wasn't involved in the sport of running, perhaps the attack might have come much earlier," Lebow said.

Fixx's heart attack was caused by serious heart disease that blocked off two arteries to the heart, an autopsy showed. He collapsed while on a solitary run last Friday in Hardwick, Vt., and was found by a passing motorcyclist about 50 feet from the motel he checked into an hour earlier.

Like Lebow, a medical researcher said Sunday that Fixx's death should not overshadow the benefits of vigorous exercise for the heart.

"Overall, people seem to do better if they exercise than if they don't," said Dr. David Siscovick, an internal medicine specialist at the University of North Carolina Department of Medicine in Chapel Hill.

Siscovick, chief author of a 1982 study that found vigorous exercise helps protect against sudden heart failure, said Fixx's death shows there is a risk in jogging and other vigorous exercise.

To put Fixx's death in perspective, one would have to consider everyone who exercises and the hours they spend at it, and compare them to people who don't exercise, he said.

BAD BITE

Health-fitness trends can grate on your teeth

Some health-conscious individuals who are involved in swimming, jogging and dieting may be unwittingly damaging their teeth while they're getting in shape, according to dentists.

Long distance runners who suck on a salt-drenched lemon wedge to combat dryness of the mouth and throat can cause damage to the thin layer of enamel covering the teeth.

"Joggers' tooth" shows up as severe erosion of the enamel, usually of the upper front teeth, most often in avid runners. A good, healthy set of teeth can deteriorate to the point of needing extensive, costly dental treatment after continued exposure to the acid in lemon juice.

Swimmers who spend a lot of time in gas-chlorinated pools may also suffer dental enamel erosion, according to the Centers for Disease Control. In high-chlorine level pools, the treated water has been known to etch untreated cement surfaces and corroded metal objects.

Though gas-chlorination is a more economical way to treat swimming pools, the gas interacts with water to form dilute hydrochloric acid, which acts to erode the teeth when acid-water levels pass a certain point.

Teeth stripped of their enamel are often sensitive to hot and cold, and more susceptible to decay. The enamel is the protective layer that covers teeth, and one of the hardest substances that occur in nature.

Obsessive dieters, who practice voluntary vomiting to control their weight, may be seriously affecting their future dental health by subjecting their teeth to harmful stomach acid attacks several times a day.

The eating disorder, called bulimia, is epidemic; experts estimate that it is rampant among girls and women aged 11 to 42.

Often the dentist has the best shot at unmasking bulimia. Erosion of the upper front teeth will be evident, though the bulimic usually will not admit their problem during a health history. It is a dentist's obligation to intervene and refer bulimics for help, just as they would refer a diabetic or blow the whistle in instances of child abuse.

You can have your chocolate cake and eat it, too, and not worry about high cholesterol.

Members of the Orange County Heart Institute, a new support group at Hoag, also found out you could have a delicious gourmet meal with the cholesterol and sodium levels low.

The dining and educational affair took place in the Ritz with owner Hans Prager making an appearance to explain how the dishes were made prepared.

The group dined on sliced chicken on a bed of greenery, veal with mushrooms and the chocolate cake (it was flourless) served with fruit that had been Grand Marniered.

Prager is a new board member of the institute and following the dining experience he was presented a one-year membership in the group by co-founders Dr. Joel Manchester and Dr. John Drews.

The dinner was the first social event of the organization that began two years ago as an educational and philanthropic group. Physicians from around the world attended its February medical symposium. Also, planned are seminars on heart disease for the public.

Among the 69 attending the "friend-raiser" were Joe Obegi, president, with wife Ann, Sally Phillips representing board member husband Al Phillips, Earl and Hester Hardage, Jean and John Macnab, Vin and Nora Jorgensen, Irene and Dr. William Matthews, Janet Kelly, Norris and Susan Battin, Dee and Bob Crevier, Anne and Charles Steinman, Susan Vose with Dr. Manchester and Carolyn Drews, wife of Dr. D.

HELP YOURSELF

First aid begins with knowledge

In an emergency, dial 911, then proceed as follows ...

Prompt attention is important in any medical emergency. For emergencies that threaten life or limb, paramedics can be reached in Orange County by dialing 911 on any telephone. If the problem is minor or medical attention is not immediately available, these first aid suggestions can be used.

BRENNAN
CASSIDY

BURNS

Remove any clothing over the affected area. Immerse the burned area in cold water. Do not use ice. If the burn is on an area of the body that cannot be immersed, apply clean towels or washcloths soaked in cold water or ice water. Periodically, the water should be recoiled. Keep the burned area immersed until pain diminishes to a tolerable level.

BLEEDING

In almost all wounds, bleeding can be controlled by applying direct pressure on the wound to stop the bleeding. Use a sterile gauze pad or clean dry cloth. If the bleeding is not profuse, the wound may be cleaned with mild soap and large quantities of water for irrigation.

If bleeding is significant, it can be controlled by elevating the wounded area above the level of the heart and applying direct pressure on the wound. If bleeding continues even with direct pressure, it may be possible to compress the artery above the area bleeding. Most bleeding, however, can be controlled with direct pressure on the wound.

A tourniquet or any constricting band around an extremity should not be used unless there is no other way to control the bleeding and it is severe. If a tourniquet is applied, it should be loosened every 15 minutes to allow blood flow to that area.

If the bleeding occurs from the nose, the victim should be seated in a slightly forward position. The nose can then be pinched and the victim can breathe through the mouth. If the bleeding continues, medical assistance will be necessary to control it.

ANIMAL BITES

The wound should be cleaned with mild soap and water. If other than a puncture wound, sutures may be necessary. A tetanus booster may also be necessary as outlined above.

INSECT BITES

The stinger of a stinging insect should be removed from the skin if possible. This can be done by gently scraping with a clean razor blade. The wound should then be cleaned with soap and water and cold compresses or ice compresses can be applied to reduce the swelling and itching.

Allergic reaction to stinging insects can occur such as hives of "wheals," generalized itching, wheezing or swelling in the mouth or throat that causes difficulty in breathing. If these symptoms occur, it should be considered a medical emergency and the paramedics should be called immediately.

In my next column, we will discuss the proper first aid procedures for poisonings, chemical burns, fainting, seizures, choking and sprained extremities.

HELP YOURSELF

Love is alive, wonderful in presence of another

Love. The ecstasy and the agony. Most everyone yearns for it. Nobody can really define love, and yet, in its quest, lots of people get into all kinds of trouble.

"I broke up with my girlfriend," said Dave, "because she started using four letter words like ... LOVE and RING."

Dave was joking, but Gary wasn't when he wondered if the "compassionate, comfortable, low key, friendly affection" he felt for his wife was "true love." Challenged by the more passionate and powerful emotion he felt for a young protegee, he asked the familiar question: "What is love anyway?"

I asked the man and woman on the street:

"Love gives me the shivers."

"Love is feeling alive and wonderful in the presence of another person."

"Love means that I care about the object of my love as I care about myself."

"Love is caring and respect and passion and commitment and fun."

"Love means being free."

"Love means unconditional commitment and lack of freedom."

"Love means stability and station wagons spiced with sex and family satisfactions."

"Love is scary."

LINDA

want to be free."

"Love is what I feel for my girlfriend ... please don't tell my wife."

"Love is what I feel for my wife ... please don't tell my girlfriend."

Love, like beauty is more a quality and reflection of the person doing the loving. The lovee, in this sense, is less important than the lover.

Love is all these things. It is passion, power, security, knowledge, caring, respect, sex, commitment, children, fun, laughter and friendship.

Love is comfortable. Without love life is lonely. Feeling loved and desired come not far behind water, food, clothing, and shelter as basic human needs.

What is especially nice is that those who fulfill these needs and give positive strokes to the ones they love are likely to share in the dividends. In spite of all the sexual experimentation going on outside of marriage, most of us still cling to the romantic ideal of monogamy. Even extra-marital sex has the monogamous intention of keeping the romantic ideal of love and stability alive.

It probably doesn't matter very much whether you think that at the moment you are "in love," "in like," "in lust," or "in-between." Most likely, you'll have several turns at each ... sometimes within the same relationship.

Women's independence provocation for abuse?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was horrified to read a recent study on dating. According to a report published by a sociologist at Moorhead State University in Moorhead, Minn., 17 percent of the 2,000 students, or about one in six, experienced at least one violent incident while dating.

You wouldn't think a woman would go out a second time with men who are violent, yet the girls who dated frequently were the ones who were beat up most often. This is liberation?

The researcher said the hitting usually began in high school and was prompted by jealousy or the reluctance of the girl to agree to sex. The violence ranged from a slap in the face to an assault with a weapon. Why would a girl stand for such treatment?

Has the mania for independence among the new breed of women angered men and made them hostile? Any answers out there? —LIKED IT BETTER BEFORE

DEAR BEFORE: Girls who continue to date males who are abusive were probably hit by their fathers and accept such treatment as "normal."

While the women's movement may have made some men hostile, it has made others more admiring and respectful.

ANN

Turn back the clock? No, thanks. The status of women has improved vastly in the last 35 years, and there are encouraging signs that it is going to continue.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding that 19-year-old boy in Rowley, Mass., who died after guzzling five beers and a quart of whiskey:

You wrote: "That lad must have been in desperate need of recognition if he would attempt to distinguish himself by drinking five beers and a quart of whiskey. Too bad someone didn't anticipate the danger and put a stop to the young man's macho demonstration. What a price to pay for being a crowd-pleaser."

Ann, what about planned events, such as pie-eating contests, watermelon-wolfing and pizza-pigouts, held throughout the country with prizes awarded to the person who shovels the largest quantity of food into his mouth within a stipulated period of time?

I have always thought people who enter these contests were sick. But what about the promoters and the spectators? The concept of stuffing one's self with excessive quantities of food seems obscene. Why aren't they stopped? —EDMONTON, ALBERTA

DEAR ED: I would be in favor of putting an end to these gross competitions, but apparently the public enjoys them.

Until a death results from this weird exhibitionism, nothing will be done. Even then, don't bet the rent. The American Medical Association trying to pass legislation that would protect prizefighters from getting their brains scrambled in the ring is a you would not believe the opposition they've encountered. Apparently people love to see physical violence and bizarre overindulgence, which violence in another form. We need some new heroes.

Speaking skills contrast

Someone has just figured out that there is a difference between the way men and women communicate. I knew that.

Although by tradition, men have had more experience with speaking than women, it is my biased opinion that women get right to the point faster.

My husband will walk into the house and I will say, "Why do you want me dead?" This not only gets his attention, it gets right to the heart of the matter as to why he insists on setting the air conditioning to 82. The man has eaten steaks cooked at a lower temperature than that.

Anyone who has ever read the Constitution will know that men are not tight with a phrase. First, my husband will say, "Had a busy day? I see you took the car out. Any problems?"

ERMA

Fifteen minutes later, he will get to, "Why is the right headlight hanging out of the car?"

For some reason, men are not direct. This possibly comes with games businessmen play where they answer every question with another question.

I say, "How do you like my dress?" He answers, "Are they wearing that style this year?"

I ask, "How do you like my haircut?"

"Are you pleased with it?" he asks.

It's also been pointed out that a vocabulary is different. When women ask, "What do you think of the casserole?" "Interesting" is not a reaction we are looking for. On the other hand, when men point out a greatest quarterback who ever lived and we remark he has a "cute tush," it is not exactly the response he is looking for.

If you think there's no mystique about men who communicate, just listen to them on the phone some time. They will carry on an intense conversation with a phantom voice for 20 minutes responding with, "No I don't believe it. How could that have happened? What kind numbers are we talking about? Wipe out, huh? Keep me posted. Call in the middle of the night if you have to. When he hangs up you ask, 'What was that all about?' He shrugs and says, 'Nothing.'

One of the traits I've never been able to figure out is why men look like they're hanging onto you every word, when in reality they have tuned you out and have no idea what you have just said. Women have been trained to listen. When I asked my husband about this he said, "This is true because if women stopped listening, they might miss something very important."

I don't know why more women don't get their own column. It's the only way I've survived.

"TONIGHT WE'LL GO WILD AND TURN ON THE DISHWASHER"

Thanks for giving your appliances the afternoon off.

"I know what you're thinking. Where do I get my energy? The same place you do, Southern California Edison. I just use it wisely.

"It's hot, so I'm giving my appliances the afternoon off. I use them before noon and after 6 p.m. Because if I don't, Edison has to build costly new power plants. I don't want them to do that. I'd rather help them save money, so I'll have more to spend on skydiving.

"So why don't you join me. Give your appliances the afternoon off. Tonight we'll go wild and turn on the dishwasher."

Obviously, North South adhered to this practice, so the result was a three no trump contract with a pronounced weakness in spades. After some thought, East decided declarer was more likely to have started with three spades than two, so East elected to overtake the jack of spades. As a result, the suit was blocked and the defenders could cash only four spade tricks. Declarer had no trouble making

Dvorak quarterbacks U.S. team

Ex-Laguna Beach High star is setter for American Olympic volleyball team

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Special to the Daily Pilot

Dusty Dvorak is America's volleyball quarterback and is enthused about the chances of his team in the upcoming XXIIIrd Olympiad in Long Beach — although he would prefer to see Brazil or Japan as the favorites.

Dvorak, who played high school volleyball at Laguna Beach High under the sport's Olympic Commissioner, Rolf Engen, has been a member of the U.S. National team for five years and has been the starting setter on the squad all of that time.

"I have never sat on the bench since I joined the team," Dvorak says. "As a setter, I call all of the plays and lead the team. I try to take advantage of opponents' weaknesses."

"The setter, like a good quarterback, may not be the best athlete on the team but it is a position that requires experience and the mental capacity to cope with any situation, more so than other positions."

"We spent three weeks in Pullman," says Dvorak. Our coaching staff felt we needed to get away from our regular site in San Diego for the fine tuning necessary for the Olympics, and Pullman is pretty much out in the middle of nowhere. There really isn't anything to do but practice."

Dvorak married Wendi Tilton two years ago but travel time for three to six months out of each year for Dusty hasn't given the couple much time for raising a family. Dusty and his father-in-law, Roger Tilton, are producing a feature-length moving picture that will be released soon after the Olympic Games end.

"It is called Spiker and it is based around the team somewhat," Dusty says. "We hired a script writer after feeling it could be done and now it is almost ready for release. It is a full-length feature film and I have a few lines to say in it, but my primary involvement is behind the camera as an associate producer.

"Right now we are reading scripts for our next movie and it will quite possibly deal with sports but that will have to wait until after the Games." Dvorak will celebrate his 26th birthday Sunday, the day the U.S. team opens play in the Olympics at Long Beach against Argentina.

"I'll celebrate partially that night but the big celebration will have to wait until Aug. 11 when we win the gold medal," he says.

"As a young child, I used to watch the Olympics on television and I wanted to be a part of an Olympic Games. When I was in high school, I was late maturing, and, being short I got into setting. Rolf (Engen) was a great setter when he played and he helped me a great deal."

Dvorak is now 6-2 and as a freshman at USC on a volleyball scholarship, he tried out for the basketball team and made the varsity only to have his volleyball coach issue

Trials gone wrong

Some athletes expected to qualify ... but they didn't

LOS ANGELES (AP) — These athletes expected to win but they didn't. The defeat came at the wrong time, in the wrong place, and it denied them a chance at competing in the Olympics.

Racked by second-guessing, they'll look back on this summer's Games, ponder their absence and remember Trials gone wrong and grope for some sort of answer.

"You go through a lot of thoughts," said swimmer Bill Barrett in an interview with the Times. "You think, 'Oh God, am I a loser or what?'"

For the UCLA swimmer, almost a sure-bet in the 200 meters, his defeat in the trials in Indianapolis last month brought, along with his self-doubting, questions.

"You think about what happened. And you think why did it happen, how did it happen," Barrett said.

The defeat, in such a critical test, meant the end of years of dreaming, coupled with years of training.

"That's eight years," said Proverb Jacobs, who coaches 800-meter runner James Robinson, who finished fourth, beaten in a photo finish, in the Olympic Trials which sent only three to the Games.

"Eight years of planning and working, wiped off by less than the width of the paper you're writing on," says Jacobs to a reporter. And there's no recourse. There's just the finality, he said.

Stephanie Hightower placed fourth in the finals of the 100-meter hurdles in Los Angeles. She finished just one-hundredth of a second behind the winner. She has tried to explain her loss, but can't.

"It was the worst race of my season," said Hightower, "and I don't know why. I still can't figure out what I did wrong."

"None of those girls had beaten me before," she added. "I've just never had anything like this happen before. At the very least, it was the wrong day for this to have happened."

Hightower, 26, had made an Olympic gold medal in 1984 "a 100 percent goal, pretty much so" ever since her chances were for one in 1980 were dashed by the U.S. boycott.

Barrett had "worked harder for this than he's ever worked," said Mark Celeb, an assistant swim coach at UCLA.

The timing of the loss made Barrett's defeat all the more devastating, Celeb said.

"You've got to get it done in that one race, and he (Barrett) didn't get it done," Celeb said.

Athletes, hardened by years of competition, deal with defeat individually. Lee Kemp, 28, who has been wrestling for 14 years only to lose in the finals of the Trials, has tried to put it into perspective.

"I feel positive," he said. "So much emphasis is put on this last competition (the Trials), and I feel very fortunate to have accomplished what I have. I am fortunate to have been in four world championships and won three of them. This one? It's just the way it worked out for me."

Newest Magee for Anteaters

Forward Dexter Magee of South Pike High in Magnolia, Miss., has signed a scholarship grant-in-aid to play basketball at UC Irvine during the coming season, it was announced Monday.

The 6-7, 200-pound Magee is the younger brother of Kevin Magee, a two-time All-American at UC Irvine in 1980-82.

"He's not at the same stage of development that Kevin was at this age," said UC Irvine Coach Bill Mulligan of the younger Magee. "We expect to red-shirt him this season."

Tracy Caulkins practices at the Olympic swim stadium Monday, preparing for the upcoming Games. She's won more national titles than any U.S. swimmer ever.

HB's Nitzkowski: He's got it all on the line

Veteran U.S. Olympic water polo coach would like to retire with a gold medal

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They're all going for gold — some with a 15-year-old's brashness, some with the experience of earning a spot to compete, only to be told "wait 'til next time" and some after going for it and coming up short.

Few, however, go into the XXIIIrd Olympiad at Los Angeles with quite as much on the line as Monte Nitzkowski, the United States national water polo coach from Huntington Beach.

This is it for Nitzkowski. He's on his final lap with 35 years of playing and coaching under his belt, including 12 years with the national team.

He's had some success — a bronze medal at the Munich Games — and, like the team he has coached — some frustrations.

His team at the Mexico City Games in 1968 finished fifth, but then came on to collect the bronze at Munich four years later. It appeared the United States was on its way — but he retired from the sport at that spot and things went downhill very quickly.

The U.S. failed to even qualify for a berth at the Montreal Games in 1976, and Nitzkowski was beckoned back, where he has since built a world power in the game, as evidenced by a recent 16-1-1 mark in three major European tournaments.

It enters the Games at Pepperdine University as the field's No. 1 seed and it's a team which appears to have no holes.

There is, of course, a great deal more to it than that, but in essence, Nitzkowski, 54, has built his team to get it done with those thoughts in mind and it enters with a more than confident attitude.

"Mental discipline will be a controlling factor," says Nitzkowski. "We're going in with the idea of consistency, every day to be ready to play. We want to control the tempo and not be overly-affected by (officials') calls."

"We have to control things on the deck level, too. We have to adapt and be better and we're aware, too, that our kids haven't faced an Olympic pressure since 1972 (which eliminates everyone on the team except Nitzkowski)."

Nitzkowski was not involved when the disappointment of 1976 materialized with the humiliation of not even a berth at the Olympics, but he was there in 1980 when he had built the best team in U.S. history, only to

Rams dealt a big blow: Johnson out

Rams defensive back Johnny Johnson broke two bones in his left ankle Monday during a passing drill at the team's training camp at Cal State Fullerton and will be out at least 10 weeks and maybe the season.

Dr. Clarence Shields will perform surgery on Johnson today at Centinela Hospital in Inglewood.

In other news, the Rams traded seldom-used running back Robert Alexander to the San Diego Chargers Monday in exchange for an undisclosed 1985 draft choice.

A 10th-round draft choice in 1981, the 6-0, 190-pound Alexander had carried the ball just eight times in two seasons with the Rams.

Offensive tackle Jackie Slater, who had held out for four days because he wanted his contract renegotiated, reported to camp late Monday night.

The Rams also put five players on waivers, dropping the number of players in camp to 88.

The five free-agent rookies were: Allen Pierce, defensive back from Azusa Pacific; Darryl Richard, wide receiver from North Carolina-Charlotte; Ralph Caldwell, linebacker from Indiana; Bob Dumont, linebacker from Rutgers; Vince Emanuel, running back from San Diego State.

Witt brings back fond memories

Angel standout strikes out 16 in beating Seattle

By RICHARD DUNN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Add the name Mike Witt to the list of perennial strikeout pitchers in baseball history.

Well — maybe not to history, but at least to the 1984 figures. And from that, there won't be any argument from the Seattle Mariners, to whom he planted his record upon, or the 23,967 fans who witnessed his 16 strikeout performance, which set a major league-high this season.

Overshadowed by Witt's nifty five-hitter was the fact that the Angels snapped a four-game losing streak with a 7-1 win over the Mariners. And although they broke out of it with a detonating 13-hit attack, the hitting seemingly appearing in sight, it was merely a sideshow.

Witt brought back fond memories to the fans at Anaheim Stadium — memories of the Nolan Ryan days, when crowds boomed if a ball was hit fair, even for an out during one of Ryan's high-strikeout performances — and went wild every time a batter had two strikes.

It was that way Monday night. And, with recording some impressive numbers against Seattle, his season totals keep piling up — up to where you can also add him to the list of possible Cy Young Award candidates for '84.

Indeed, that would not be jumping the gun. He won for the fifth straight time and perhaps erased any doubts as to him still being too immature — as Angel manager John McNamara feels he once was, not so long ago.

Witt, the winningest pitcher on the Angels' staff at 11-7, upped his American League-leading strikeout total to 128, the third best in the majors.

The 16 strikeouts topped Fernando Valenzuela's previous major league high 15-strikeout performance against the Phillies on May 23, and tied Ryan's June 9, 1979 effort for the most by an American League since that date.

It can't be said any more that Witt's just now "coming into his own," so to speak — he has already established himself. He fanned 13 White Sox on June 12, the previous top mark in the American League this season, he has allowed just one home run in his last 51½ innings of work, and his ERA is down to a more-than-respectable 3.36.

Also keep in mind that Witt has more than doubled his home win total of last year, and that in three of his losses this year, the club has been shut out.

So has Witt finally reached the Malavasi ousted, but how it went is open question

From AP dispatches

LOS ANGELES — Ray Malavasi is no longer the defensive coordinator for the Los Angeles Express, but the two parties disagree as to who initiated the parting.

The United States Football League club issued a press release announcing Malavasi's departure from the organization because he "expressed interest in pursuing other avenues of coaching."

Was it really Malavasi's decision?

"No," said Malavasi via telephone from his Huntington Beach residence.

Malavasi said that he was let go because "they (the Express) don't have any money."

Express President and General Manager Donald Klosterman said that the club's monetary situation was not behind the move and that the team did not initiate Malavasi's departure.

"We didn't let him go," Klosterman said of Malavasi. "He came here on an interim basis."

The press release said that Malavasi had been hired as a consultant, though his role during the season in which the club advanced to the conference finals before losing to the Arizona Wranglers.

After the team lost to Oakland in the second week of the season, Express Coach John Hadl dismissed his defensive coordinator Pokey Allen. Hadl hired Malavasi to replace Allen as defensive coordinator.

Malavasi, 53, had been fired by Oakland earlier in the season. He served as the head coach for the Rams until being let go in 1982 and had been the National Football League team's defensive coordinator from 1973-77.

Klosterman said that Malavasi had signed his contract on a monthly basis, something Klosterman doesn't normally allow.

"We did that because he wanted to explore other opportunities," said Klosterman.

"If he said that (he was fired), then I'm sorry. If he sees it one way, that's not the way it was intended," Klosterman added.

President's son sets record

SAN FRANCISCO — Mike Reagan, President Reagan's oldest son, Monday set a powerboat endurance record, breaking the old record by about two hours on a run from Long Beach to San Francisco.

Reagan, driving a 38-foot Wellcraft Scarab powered by three V-8 Evinrude engines, set out from Long Beach at 5:14 a.m. and cruised under the Golden Gate Bridge at 2:30 p.m.

The time put him about two hours ahead of the previous world record of 11:25 set in 1966.

ABC picks up football package

NEW YORK — ABC, the pre-eminent college football network for most of the past decade, has once again grabbed up the major portion of college football telecasts by acquiring the rights to schools represented by the College Football Association.

The network announced Saturday that it had reached agreement with the CFA, which represents 63 major football-playing colleges on a deal for 1984 which will allow it to televise 20 games over 14 weeks, starting Sept. 8 with an evening telecast between Boston College and Alabama.

Earlier, CBS, which had shared college football telecasts with ABC the past two years, had signed an agreement with the Big Ten and Pacific-10 conferences, the only football majors not in the CFA, to carry 14 games over 10 weekends.

Both agreements are an outgrowth of the U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding a lower court ruling that threw out the NCAA's contract with the two networks as a violation of antitrust laws.

Man buys horse: $8.25 million

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Robert Sangster, the British sportsman credited perhaps more than any other man for driving up thoroughbred yearling prices in recent years, paid $8.25 million Monday night for a colt by fabled sire Northern Dancer at the Keeneland July Selected Yearling Sale.

It was the second highest sum ever paid for a thoroughbred yearling at public auction.

Later in the sale, Sheikh Mohammed al Maktoum bid a record $3.75 million for a filly by 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, out of the mare Fine Prospect, topping the previous mark for a filly by $1.25 million. The filly had been the property of Spendthrift Farm of Lexington, where Seattle Slew stands at stud.

The sheikh also paid $6.5 million for a colt by Seattle Slew, out of the mare Desiree. The colt was consigned by Spendthrift Farm as agent for Louis E. Wolfson and his wife, Patrice, and Ethel D. Jacobs.

Sangster's bay colt, out of the mare Ballade, is a half brother to Devil's Bag, last year's 2-year-old champion, and to Glorious Song, a filly that won 17 races and more than $1 million in 34 starts. The colt was sold by Windfields Farm.

Sangster usually bids against one or more of the Arab interests with which he has dominated the sale recently.

Reporters, officials arrive despite Communists' boycott

From AP dispatches

LOS ANGELES — Despite the Soviet bloc boycott of the Los Angeles Olympics, at least 36 reporters and about 80 sports officials from the absent Communist countries have registered to attend the Games, officials of the International Olympic Committee said Monday.

The Olympics officials, who asked that their names not be used, said the sports officials, referees and umpires from the boycotting countries were taking part in the Games under the auspices of the IOC or the international sports federations.

The officials include Vitaly Smirnov and Constantin Andrianov, the two Soviet IOC members. But Marat Gramov, the president of the Soviet Olympic Committee who played a prominent role in last-minute negotiations to head off the boycott, has not appeared in Los Angeles.

The Soviet Union and 13 other nations said they refused to take part in the Los Angeles Games because of alleged threats to the Soviet teams and alleged violations of Olympic rules by the organizers.

Following the May 8 announcement of the boycott, the IOC cut the original press and photo contingent of the boycotting countries from 167 to less than 90. The number of credentials for the Soviet Union, East Germany and Hungary — originally 35, 32 and 22 respectively — were cut to 18, 16 and 11.

The officials said Hungary apparently decided to send to Los Angeles its full contingent of 11 reporters, while the Soviet Union delegated only six of its 18-member contingent — including two men of the Soviet news agency Tass — and East Germany took up only five places of the 16 it was allowed.

Bulgaria also took its full number of press places — six — while Cuba sent four and Poland and Czechoslovakia three each.

U.S. cyclist Grewal gets reinstated

DENVER — U.S. Olympic cyclist Alexi Grewal — suspended for 30 days last week after a banned substance was reportedly found in a urine test — was reinstated Monday to race in the Summer Games at Los Angeles following an all night hearing by a U.S. Cycling Federation jury.

Grewal had been suspended after a test by Coors International Bicycle Classic officials revealed a prohibited substance of the phenylethylamine class in his sample.

"He's ecstatic. His comment was he's now on an American mission for gold," beginning Sunday at the Games, said the racer's manager, Len Pettyjohn on Monday.

China's Jianhua Zhu vies at Mt. SAC

WALNUT — Jianhua Zhu of China, the world record-holder in the high jump, will be among more than 300 athletes competing in a pre-Olympic track meet at Mt. San Antonio College Wednesday.

Zhu, who will compete in the Olympic Games, cleared a record 7-10 earlier this year.

A meet official said that more than 50 U.S. Olympians and athletes from 43 foreign countries will take part in the competition, which begins at 4:30 p.m. The meet is called Summer Games II.

The doping message: It's loud and clear

Sophisticated system is set: If it's there, it'll be found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The message to Olympic athletes, says the medical director of the Olympic Organizing Committee, should be loud and clear: "Don't come and try to test our system."

The system is the most sophisticated in the history of the Games for the testing and detection of drugs, Dr. Anthony Daly said Monday.

"What we want is a drug-free Olympics, where everyone competes to the best of their own natural ability," he said.

The athletes have good reason to heed Daly's warning. A year ago, at the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, they were cautioned beforehand that newer drug-detecting techniques would be used — a caution ignored by some.

As a result, 15 athletes including U.S. weightlifter Jeff Michaels were found to have taken banned substances and 21 medals were taken away, some from multiple winners. Several other U.S. athletes returned home before competing, although they never said their departure had anything to do with the drug testing.

"We hope that because of Caracas the athletes now know we have the sophisticated equipment that can pick up the drugs and that deciding, 'Well, I'll stop taking this a couple of days before I compete or a couple of weeks before' won't work any more," Daly said at a news briefing.

"There are enough substitutes for the athletes to take that are not on the banned list. They do not have to go without proper medication. The purpose of all this testing is to protect the athletes from themselves, to keep them from taking dangerous drugs, and to prevent other athletes from trying to gain an unfair advantage."

Another health concern is Los Angeles' famous smog, the greenish, brownish haze that often blankets the inland areas of the city and generally is at its worst from noon to 4 p.m.

The smog is most likely to affect the endurance events,

Daly said. For that reason, the women's marathon will begin at 8 a.m. and the men's marathon at 5:15 p.m. And, rather than starting and ending at the downtown Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum — traditionally the marathon begins and ends at the main stadium — each will start near the beach in Santa Monica.

"Keep in mind," Daly said, "that the two worst smog cities in the world are Tokyo and Mexico City. Both of these places have held Olympics without problems. If you want to think of a worst-case scenario, it should have been Mexico City with smog and its 7,000-foot altitude. They had no problems, not at the Olympics in 1968, not at the Pan-American Games in 1975. So we don't feel the smog will have an adverse affect on the athletes' health or on their performance."

Drug testing for stimulants at the Olympics was begun in Mexico City, expanded somewhat at Munich in 1972 and widened still more at Montreal in 1976 to include anabolic steroids. "In 1984," Daly said, "we want to close the loop even further."

cord-holder in the 100 freestyle, and Carey is a double world record-holder in backstroke and almost a shoo-in for three gold medals.

Moffet set a 100 breaststroke world record at the U.S. Trials to beat Lundquist, who also was under his own previous world mark.

But those swimmers with plenty of international experience aren't the only ones with speed in the water.

Names like Pablo Morales, George DiCarlo, Mike Heath and Jenna Johnson are relatively unknown now, but by the second week of August they could be American heroes.

Morales set a 100 butterfly world record in the Trials. Johnson beat Meagher in the 100 butterfly as the pair posted the two best times of the year. DiCarlo set American records in the two distance freestyle events. Heath established an American mark in the 200 freestyle.

The individual swimming star of the Games, however, might not be wearing a U.S. uniform. Other than Carey, who has dominated backstroke the last two years, the two best swimmers in Los Angeles could be a pair of foreigners who hold two world records apiece.

Michael Gross of West Germany owns the world mark at 200 meters in both freestyle and butterfly and will pose a formidable challenge to Morales and Heath. The two Americans have made dramatic improvement in Gross' specialties this year to get within shouting distance of his top times.

Gross also is a gold-medal threat in the 100 butterfly, 400 freestyle and 800 freestyle relay.

Alex Baumann of Canada has established himself as the world's best all-around swimmer with world marks in both men's individual medley events.

The boycott has cost men's swimming some stars, including Soviet Vladimir Salnikov and a handful of East German men. But it will have a far more profound effect on the women's side, where the East Germans would have been favored in all but two events, the 100 and 200 butterfly.

With the boycott, the American women could fare better than the men.

But if Heath again beats Gaines in the 100 freestyle to earn a spot in the finals of the 400 medley relay, he could surpass Caulkins and Carey as the swimmer with the best chance for multiple gold medals.

It's official: Zola Budd eligible

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Zola Budd, the 18-year-old barefoot runner, has emerged victorious from the political arena, winning the right to face American Mary Decker and other Olympic rivals in the 3,000 meters in Los Angeles.

Budd, a South African-born British citizen, was officially declared eligible Sunday for the Olympics when the International Olympic Committee director said she will not be affected by IOC restrictions on naturalized athletes.

Budd, whose grandfather was born in England, was granted British citizenship on March 25. "She is a British citizen by descent and not by naturalization," Director Monique Berlioux said.

"I am absolutely delighted," Charles Stuart Palmer, chairman of the British Olympic Association, said Monday. "I expect her to go ahead now and win her share of gold medals for Britain."

Budd will be entered in the 3,000 meters, the race that will feature Decker, considered by many the best women's middle distance runner in the world.

Decker holds the American record in the 3,000. Budd bettered world marks while running for South Africa, but the marks were not recognized because of sanctions against South Africa stemming from its racial apartheid policies. Decker is generally favored because of her competitive drives and Budd's inexperience.

Last week, Budd cruised to a world record in the 2,000, a distance not run in the Olympics.

In Budd's new country, the announcement of her eligibility was not welcomed by all.

John Ryman, a member of the opposition Labor Party in Parliament, said Budd should be dropped from the British Olympic team to avoid offending African nations.

MONTE NITZKOWSKI...

From C1

see it all flushed away by Jimmy Carter, who decided a boycott of the Soviet Games was in order because of the Afghanistan invasion by the USSR.

Nitzkowski will tell you of the deeply affected U.S. team, four years of work for nothing, but what he doesn't dwell on are his own frustrated feelings.

Nor does he really come out and say he and this team are going for the gold. "We just want to showcase water polo," he'll tell you.

Jim Kruse, a former player under Nitzkowski and an analyst for ABC-Television when these Games begin, however, sheds some insight: "That's (the gold medal) all he talks about. There's no doubt why he gets out of bed in the morning."

This hasn't been a "presto, we're here" type of situation, such as in basketball where Bobby Knight inherits a nation's production of talent, picks the blue chips out and molds them into a cohesive unit in six or eight weeks.

This one began in 1976 with the national water polo program in a shambles, with dissension, jealousies, bickering and a decided lack of success.

Nitzkowski is considered one of the world's great technicians, and is known as one of the real innovators of the game, including the introduction of the "pic" in 1972 and the collapsing defense, almost to the point of a matchup zone, as in basketball.

But there's another side to him.

He's a user and a manipulator. There was plenty of talent available on the support level and he took advantage of every opportunity, turning every negative into a positive.

He has that ability to use, yet everyone involved is grateful to be involved.

A coach at Long Beach City College, no one could find fault with his selections, simply because there was nothing for him to gain, as opposed to an NCAA coach, who might be charged with favoritism because it could help him in other ways.

In addition to putting together a staff, both on the deck and behind the scenes, he involved a number of respected college and high school coaches within a national building concept.

The "B" team is handled by Newport Harbor High's Bill Barnett (in Southern California) and Steve Heaston (in Northern California). An out-of-state developmental camp has been handled by former Texas A&M Coach Dennis Fosdick and a 19-and-under developmental program, which brings together the top 10 players from five separate sections of the country (outside of California) convenes in Colorado Springs annually for an intensive clinic and in-water training program.

Fosdick has since become an administrator with Barnett, Heaston, Jim Sprague, Rich Corso and others involved in the coaching.

"Really," says Nitzkowski, "we're interested in the whole picture, so we've developed this umbrella organization."

It has included a "coaching pool" to keep several coaches involved, not locked out.

The major innovation has been the "B" program, the step between 17-and-unders and the national team, the stepping stone to give talented prospects major tournament play on a consistent basis to provide the national team a farm system to build on.

"You can't have a kid come out of 17-and-under and have no place to go at 18," says Nitzkowski.

"It's almost equally as bad to have a 21-year-old, just finishing his university career and a good future possibility as far as a national player, but at that point just not strong enough to break into the field of 16, with no place to go."

"You have to have players that aren't going to quit."

When they hoist the flags for the three medalists Aug. 10, it's Nitzkowski's finale, at least as the national coach.

Monte Nitzkowski isn't just a coach, he's a virtual institution in water polo. And, there are no holes in his armor. He has every base covered, even press relations. Nobody, in any sport, is more cooperative or congenial.

Example: Steve Brand, a former Daily Pilot sports writer now with the San Diego Union, visited Pepperdine University recently for a press conference.

He misread the release and arrived hours early. He introduced himself to Nitzkowski at 10 a.m. and spoke to him briefly.

Four hours later, when the press conference began, Nitzkowski spotted Brand within the group and said, "Hi Steve."

That may not sound like much — but it's typical of Monte Nitzkowski.

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Nearly a year ago, teenager Aaron Krickstein went to the U.S. Open as the national boys' 18-and-under champion.

He'll return late next month as the youngest U.S. Pro Tennis champion in the tournament's 58-year history.

Krickstein, the 16-year-old son of a Grosse Pointe, Mich. doctor, won his first major title Monday night, rallying for a 7-6, 3-6, 6-4 victory over two-time champion Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina.

Trailing 3-0 after losing his service twice in the third set, the kid with an explosive forehand figured, "I'd go for broke."

"In the second set, I didn't hit too many winners, but I didn't think I was playing too badly," he said. "But I didn't start attacking until after I fell behind 3-0. When I broke him at 3-1, that was the key game. It got me going."

And, except for a brief lapse, he kept going. He collected his biggest pay check, $34,000, and became only the fourth American to win the U.S. Pro since the bankrupt tournament was rescued in 1964.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg won the first of three U.S. Pro crowns here at the age of 18 in 1974. Krickstein won't be 17 until Aug. 2.

Clerc, 25 and bidding for his third U.S. Pro title in four years, had his consecutive set winning streak ended at 17 as Krickstein completely dominated the first set tie-breaker.

However, he took charge in the second set with his slashing shots from the baseline. He appeared to be too tough for the kid from Michigan.

However, Krickstein — who upset teen-age pal and practice partner Jimmy Arias, the No. 1 seed, in the quarterfinals — dug deep after nearly being blown out at the outset of the deciding set.

At 3-2, he broke Clerc in the sixth game, pulling into a 3-3 tie with the help of his whipping forehand.

In a long seventh game, which went to deuce six times, Krickstein's forehand betrayed him and he was broken again. Clerc appeared set to wrap up another championship.

But Krickstein stunned the South American, breaking him at love in the eighth game. After holding service, he finished the three-hour match by breaking Clerc again at love in the 10th game.

"The momentum definitely swung my way when I got to 3-1," Krickstein said. "Until then it was a little discouraging. Then he became a little discouraged."

"At 3-all, I thought I had lost the match," Clerc said. "I feel like I serve like a lady."

U.S. Olympic nine rolls to 14-2 win

Catcher Bob Caffrey and third baseman Corey Snyder each belted two-run homers Monday as the United States Olympic baseball team slugged out a 14-2 victory in six innings over an Orange County All-Star aggregation.

The triumph, in a game at Anaheim Stadium that was called because of a time limit, put the Olympians record at 27-4-1 in their pre-Olympic Games outings.

Caffrey, who played for NCAA-champion Cal State Fullerton, drilled his home run in the second inning off Damen Allen, who also a member of the Fullerton team that won the title Snyder, from Brigham Young University, added his blast in the fourth off reliever Bob Nettles.

Bill Witt, a freshman at the University of Oklahoma, hurled perfect ball during the three innings he worked, striking out five, to raise his record with the team to 3-0. He was followed by Don August, from Chapman College, who pitched the fourth inning and Pat Pacilio of Seton Hall, who gave up two runs in the fifth.

For the Olympians, hard-hitting first baseman Mark McGwire from the University of Southern California scored three times, collecting a double, single and two walks in the abbreviated game.

Chris Gwynn of San Diego State, who rejoined the Olympians after an arthroscopic knee operation last month, had two hits as did Shane Mack of UCLA, McGwire, Snyder and Barry Larken from the University of Michigan.

Italians beat Sockers

CERRITOS (AP) — A pair of goals by Maurizio Iorio fueled a second half spree that helped the Italian Olympic team to a 6-0 shutout of the San Diego Sockers in an exhibition soccer match.

The Sockers compete in the North American Soccer League.

Iorio's heroics sparked a five-goal outburst in the final period Monday evening that salted away the match. Also scoring for Italy were Franco Baresi, Salvatore Bagni, Daniele Massaro and Aldo Serena.

Greer headed for stardom?

Ex-Marina, GWC standout captures amateur crown

Brad Greer, a graduate of Marina High School and a former student at Golden West College, won the Southern California Golf Association (SCGA) amateur championship this past weekend.

Greer won the Costa Mesa City championship in 1982 but hasn't distinguished himself otherwise in major tournament play in the area.

Will he be following in the footsteps of Mark O'Meara and Paul O'Shea when he moves on to the national amateur championships? O'Meara won the U.S. Amateur title and O'Shea was second to Nathaniel Crosby another year.

Greer has the credentials to make him an outstanding player and will complete his college eligibility at USC before turning pro.

Greer plays out of Mission Viejo Country Club. He had to have a little luck to win the SCGA title. He was in the lead going into the final round but faltered and Sam Randolph took over the top spot in the tourney at San Gabriel Country Club.

Randolph, from Santa Barbara, had a one-shot lead going to the 72nd and final hole.

Both players missed short putts of three to four feet on the final hole, Greer making a par and Randolph a double-bogey.

Greer shot 69-72-72-71—205 for the four days, one over par.

It wasn't surprising to see Kathy Whitworth win her 85th professional victory at the Rochester International tournament in New York last weekend. She has played consistently throughout her career and it was only a matter of time until she would surpass Sam Snead as the winningest pro golfer of all time.

Snead compiled 84 victories on the PGA circuit. Whitworth, a Hall-of-Famer at 44, plays at Mesa Verde CC every time the LPGA comes to Costa Mesa. She won the Rochester event in a sudden-death playoff. Whitworth had a par on the extra hole to win over Rosie Jones, a young player still seeking her first tour victory after finishing second each of the past two weeks.

Golfers with a 2-or-less handicap interested in trying for a PGA tour card have until Sept. 1 to get their entry blank in for regional qualifying.

IOC acts to thwart Six NHL clubs sue over TV dispute boycotts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The International Olympic Committee moved Monday toward making participation in future Olympic Games compulsory for all member nations, but postponed a decision on how to enforce the new rule.

The requirement could be in effect in time for the 1988 Games in Seoul, South Korea. The Soviet Union and its allies have threatened a boycott in Seoul of their boycott of the upcoming Los Angeles Games.

The IOC's nine-member executive board unanimously approved in principle Monday a change in the Olympic rules under which national Olympic committees would be penalized for failing to participate in future Olympic Summer Games.

The Winter Games presumably would not be affected by the new rule. The Summer and Winter Games are held in the same year every four years.

The principle of compulsory participation was expected to be ratified by a full session of the 88-member IOC beginning Tuesday in Los Angeles under the chairmanship of IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch.

Under the proposal, the IOC would devote part of its large, television-funded resources to subsidize teams from poorer countries so that compulsory Olympic participation would not be a financial burden for them. The Olympics at present comprises 154 nations.

TORONTO (AP) — Six Canadian-based National Hockey League clubs filed suit Monday, demanding $22 million in damages from league executives, the remaining 15 NHL teams and Carling O'Keefe Breweries of Canada, because of a plan to show NHL games from American cities on CTV this season.

Bucks sign Kenny Fields

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks announced today they had signed their 1984 first-round draft choice, 6-7 forward Kenny Fields of UCLA, to a four-year contract.

The signing took place in Los Angeles with head coach Don Nelson in attendance. Terms of the pact were not disclosed.

Fields finished his four-year career ranked sixth among UCLA's all-time scoring leaders behind Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar), Bill Walton, David Greenwood, Gail Goodrich and Marques Johnson. In his senior season, he averaged 17.4 points and 6.9 rebounds per game.

He was the 21st player chosen in the first round of this year's collegiate draft.

"He's a talented player who can play our style of basketball," Nelson said.

A regional event will be held at Butte Creek Country Club in Chico Oct. 2-5 over 72 holes. This is one of four early segment tournaments throughout the country. A late segment event includes Bear Creek Golf Club in Temecula Oct. 30-Nov. 2.

Professional golfers or amateurs seeking to qualify must get an entry blank in by the deadline date along with $1,000 to compete in one segment or $1,750 for both segments. If successful in the initial qualifying round, a golfer will get a $750 refund.

The final qualifying round will be held at Mission Hills CC and La Quinta Hotel Golf Club in the Palm Springs area, Dec. 12-17. The final event will have a field of 100 players from the two segments vying for 50 spots.

For further information contact Karen Rose, PGA tour, Sawgrass, Fla. 32082 or call (904) 285-3700.

When the 552 Club turned over its check to Hoag Memorial Hospital from last year's Crosby Southern Program tournament, it amounted to $71,527, an increase of almost $18,000 over the previous year. The money is used by the hospital for high priority medical equipment and the renovation and expansion of hospital facilities.

The 1985 tourney will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 9-10 at Irvine Coast Country Club. It will be opposite the Hawaiian Open. Jake Rehner is general chairman of the event.

Intermart Inc., a holding company that carries on business as Canadian Sports Network and produces Hockey Night In Canada, is involved in the suit, filed in the Supreme Court of Ontario. The NHL teams involved are the Vancouver Canucks, Edmonton Oilers, Calgary Flames, Winnipeg Jets, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

The defendants are the 14-American based NHL teams plus the Quebec Nordiques, the principal executives of those clubs, three league executives (President John Ziegler, Vice President and General Counsel Gil Stein and Vice President-Broadcasting Joel Nixon) and Carling O'Keefe.

"It is a bitter war," said an unidentified NHL governor. "I have never known relations between the American and Canadian clubs to be so poor."

The governors had to have a July meeting after their June meeting and the matter still isn't solved. That should tell you how serious it is."

The Toronto Globe and Mail said representatives from the two sides, including Frank Griffiths, the Canucks' chairman of the board, and Nordiques President Marcel Aubut, will try to reach a compromise at a meeting sometime this week.

The primary point of contention is whether or not Canadian Sports Network has a monopoly to distribute NHL games in Canadian NHL cities.

WHERE TO GO AND HOW TO GET THERE IN THE MIDST OF THE OLYMPIC CHAOS.

Beaches will be crammed — as usual

Olympic visitors shouldn't increase already heavy crowds

Marine safety officials contend there's been quite a lot of "over-reaction" to the Olympic Games and there shouldn't be much of a crowd spillover on county shores.

"We're going to be packed," Huntington Beach Lifeguard Lt. Bill Richardson said, "but we're always packed. Most of our visitors are between the ages of 13 and 21 and they will be coming to the beach whether it's during the Olympics or not."

"People may be coming to the Olympic Games and look for a place at the beach to cool off if they can't get tickets. But we're a little far down the coast for that."

Richardson said beach attendance is higher than ever this year because of unusually warm weather. He said about six million visitors are slated to visit the one-mile city beach and the section of beach in nearby Sunset Beach that Huntington Beach lifeguards patrol.

At Newport Beach, there will be normal lifeguard staffing, Capt. Buddy Belshe said. He expects the usual crowds of 120,000 a day on a hot weekend and 55,000-85,000 on a week day to continue, Olympic or no Olympics.

It also will be business as usual at Huntington State Beach and Bolsa Chica Beach except that state parks and recreation officials are going to open a portion of the park to full-time camping for people coming to the Olympics.

Lifeguard Supervisor Nick Sopha said the decision to permit parking at the beach was reached when it was anticipated that area lodging accommodations would be strained.

Officials have permitted overnight enroute parking at the beach for travelers and this will be the first time camping will be available for an extended time.

Campers will have to sleep inside their vehicles. Public restrooms and fire rings will be available at the beach.

Sopha said people can make reservations at the Ticketron outlet in Los Angeles. The fee will be $6 per night.

The U.S. Coast Guard is expecting to have a busy couple of weeks patrolling and providing security in coastal waters but the effort for the most part will be concentrated in the Long Beach area.

However, some sailing and yachting events are going to extend into the Seal Beach-Surfside area in the vicinity of Anaheim Bay.

The Coast Guard has called 700 extra people to duty for the Olympics and will be patrolling with about 140 patrol boats to keep racing areas clear of curiosity seekers and to protect against acts of violence.

The Orange County Harbor Patrol doesn't plan anything extra except to check out Orange County waters during the days that races involving Olympic sailors or boaters cross the county line from the Los Angeles-Long Beach area.

Scalpers find slim picking at the Olympics this year

Let's see here. If people — some people at any rate — are willing to put up $750 to see Michael Jackson and his brothers sing and dance, what would they pay to see Carl Lewis, Mary Decker and Haven Moses put on their moves?

Well, probably not as much as some get-rich-quick artists had counted on.

One man who invested his modest life savings in Olympic tickets has discovered he'll only be able to scalp his track and field tickets for $10 over the face value. That means $70.

Seeing Lewis, Decker or Moses go for the gold apparently is not bringing in the gold for the scalpers.

One Orange Coast homeowner is offering free rowing and canoeing tickets to anyone who rents a room. The charge is only $35 a night. Cerritos Ford is offering free tickets to anyone who buys a new car. Wow.

The real money, it seems, is being made in other arenas — like parking, for instance. Service station owners near the Coliseum claim they'll be charging $50 or more for a single day of parking. Resident in the area hint they'll be asking about $30 per day and figure they can squeeze up to 25 cars on a front lawn.

Of course Olympic spectators can leave the driving to someone else. Limo drivers, for instance, are charging about $350 for a roundtrip to any of the venues. The wet bar is stocked naturally.

Or one can hitch a ride aboard a yacht in Newport Beach and watch the whole thing on television. That's only $250 a person. Snacks and drinks are included.

Then there's the Olympic paraphernalia. Venues will be jammed with concession booths selling official Olympic T-shirts, hats, pins, buttons and almost everything and anything else imaginable. Even some things you might not have imagined.

The summer games, of course, are a hot ticket. There's an official Olympic grocery store, an official snack food, an official lip balm, an official tissue paper, an official camera film and the list goes on and on.

One newspaper columnist even proposed — jokingly it seems — that he be named the official Olympic columnist. To his amazement, the proposal was taken seriously although it ultimately was rejected.

Police and Los Angeles and Orange County say they expect the usual assortment of pickpockets, small-time thieves and hucksters to take advantage of the swarm of spectators.

To that end, the Los Angeles Police Department has printed a handy booklet advising summer visitors not to leave $100 bills hanging out of their pocket or leave their keys in the car ignition or their hotel rooms unlocked. It's printed in seven languages.

"It's the usual words of wisdom," said police spokesman Don Cook. "There will be some victims of course but a con job can only work if the victim is greedy."

Cook, like others, thinks the media is worrying too much about the risks and dangers of attending the summer games.

Private automobiles discouraged in LA during Olympic Games

Getting around to the Olympic events for area residents figures to be a problem for all concerned, something that has not gone unnoticed for relatives of athletes competing in the Games.

Some have solved the problem, such as Brian Lewis, father of Olympic rower Brad Allen Lewis.

"We've been fortunate," says Lewis. "We've made motel reservations in the area for that week. It's one less headache when the Games roll around."

Others are not looking forward to the extra hassles that will go with attending the Olympics later this month. The competition sites encompass a 4,500-square-mile area from Ventura County north to San Diego County south, east from inland San Bernardino County to the beach town of Malibu.

The use of private automobiles in the busiest areas will be discouraged, with parking at or near competition sites virtually impossible during the Games.

Traffic tieups could delay the arrival of athletes, officials and fans at the competition sites.

"We're going to have to leave early, that's all," said one parent, who said efforts for lodging have failed.

Lewis, a graduate of Corona del Mar High, is just one of four area rowers who will begin competition July 31 at Lake Casitas. He'll compete in double sculls.

Others include CdM graduate Curtis Fleming in quadruple sculls; Costa Mesa resident Bruce Ibbetson in the eights; and Newport Harbor High product David DeRuff in the pairs without coxswain.

Shiela Conover, a Newport Harbor High product, competes in women's kayaking, which begins Aug. 6. Conover will row in the women's fours and possibly in either singles or doubles.

In volleyball, Laguna Beach High graduate Dusty Dvorak and former Newport Harbor High standout Steve Timmons begin working toward a possible medal when the U.S. squad opens Sunday, July 29, against Argentina in a 6:30 match at the Long Beach Arena.

The water polo squad features a trio of area residents, including Kevin Robertson (Newport Harbor High); Peter Campbell (University High and UC Irvine) and Gary Figueroa (UCI). And the coach, Monte Nitzkowski, resides in Huntington Beach. The Americans meet Greece Aug. 1, 3 o'clock at Pepperdine in the Olympic opener.

The United States is also pinning much of its hopes for swimming medals on area standouts. John Moffet, a Newport Harbor High graduate and a resident of Costa Mesa, enters as a favorite in the

Another Costa Mesa resident, Mike O'Brien (from Newport Christian High), is participating in the 1,500 freestyle event, slated for Saturday, Aug. 4.

The oldest member of the women's gymnastics team is Kathy Johnson from Huntington Beach. Johnson finished third

Remodeled LA Airport ready for crush

Air travelers who must use Los Angeles International Airport during the Olympic games should find getting around the newly remodeled facility a breeze, airport officials are hoping.

Two new terminals, a 50 percent increase in the number of parking spaces and extra shuttle buses added during an extensive $220 million remodeling project has dramatically changed the face of one of the nation's busiest airports.

While an extra 350,000 Olympic travelers — the extended Olympic family of athletes, officials and spectators — are expected to walk through LAX turnstiles between July 28 and Aug. 12, non-Olympic travel is expected to fall during the games, airport spokesman Lee Nichols said.

"It's not that big an increase. Spread over three weeks, it's about the same as Christmas," he said, traditionally airports' busiest season.

The Los Angeles Visitors and Convention Bureau has forecast a drop in business and vacation travel in the Los Angeles area, similar to the drop in tourism experienced by other Olympic cities such as Montreal in 1972, Nichols said.

"Maybe it won't totally counterbalance, but the worst days will be afterwards. That will be the heaviest time as arrivals are more spread out," he said.

Post-Olympic dates Aug. 13-15 are the days Nichols would recommend that business and vacation travelers consider using an alternative airport, such as John Wayne in Orange County or Ontario in San Bernardino County.

"We don't feel there will be that much crowding," said Nichols, adding that the airport presently accommodates 100,000 people a day. Last year, 33 million people used the airport.

Those who do catch flights or pick up visitors in Los Angeles are likely to find an airport that looks a bit unfamiliar.

Now, those arriving or departing are separated by a double-decked $60 million access road, a horseshoe shaped loop funneling visitors into the dozens of terminals.

Nichols recommends those with departing tickets who haven't visited the airport in the last year call the airline before hand and find out which terminal their plane leaves from. "It may mean the difference between making the plane and missing it," he said.

Buses to Games available, but they're getting full fast

While many Southern Californians have vowed to stay home, hibernate or leave the country during the upcoming Summer Olympics, there are a few hardy souls who plan to actually attend the games.

In fact, there are five million hardy souls expected to attend, half coming from the Southern California area.

The good news is, even as Olympic fever mounts, few Olympics have actually sold out and the 1984 Summer Games are no exception. It's not too late to get tickets, according to Olympic officials.

Locally, Olympic tickets are being sold at the Olympic Service Center at Newport Center-Fashion Island, near Robinson's Department Store. According to supervisor Gail Pitts, tickets to the following events are still available:

Baseball, basketball, boxing, canoeing, equestrian, hockey, marathon, shooting, soccer, track and field, water polo, weightlifting and wrestling. For information on other tickets available, call (213) 305-8383 or (213) 741-6789.

Once you have your tickets, the biggest obstacle of the games will simply be getting to the venue sites through traffic that is predicted to be monumental.

Fortunately for most people, the Los Angeles Rapid Transit District has assigned 550 buses to its special Olympic fleet. RTD officials say between 84,000 and 333,000 spectators are expected to ride the Olympic buses every day.

"We're being counted on to transport 40 percent of all spectators attending events in the Exposition Park area and UCLA," said Nick Patsaouras, RTD board president.

He said bus service will be concentrated in Exposition Park, where the Coliseum, Sports Arena and McDonald's Swim Stadium are located. Severe traffic congestion and parking shortages are forecast for that area.

The advantages of taking the buses are many, according to Marc Littman, RTD spokesman. Bus drivers will use preferential bus lanes on surface streets and bus-only freeway offramps leading to major venues, particularly around the Coliseum and UCLA, he said.

Two bus-staging areas at Coliseum entrances will allow bus riders to disembark and board without having to hassle parking and walking long distances to their cars.

The bad news, for Orange Coast residents, is that the park/ride lot serving Orange County is filling up quickly.

"Cerritos has turned out to be busiest lot," Littman said. "Of the 101,000 park/ride reservations we've taken through Ticketron, so far 32,000-plus are for Cerritos. An analysis of ticket holders shows 16 to 17 percent of all ticket holders live in Orange County."

Littman said that as of July 18, the Cerritos park/ride lot was booked for Opening Ceremonies on July 28 and for Aug. 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10 and 11.

"There's still some room on July 29, 30 and 31 and Aug. 1, 2, 3, 7 and 12, but it's going fast," Littman said.

From the Cerritos lot, you can get to Exposition Park, Long Beach and Anaheim, he said.

Another alternative from Orange County is to get an express bus at the Anaheim Convention Center and go from there to the downtown Los Angeles bus station at 1st and Spring streets.

From downtown, spectators can take shuttle buses or non-stop express buses to the Rose Bowl, UCLA, the Forum, Long Beach and Santa Anita, Littman said.

"People need to make reservations early or it's going to be too late," he said. For detailed information on Olympic bus service, a free RTD brochure can be obtained by calling (714) 635-6010 or (213) 972-6235.

To make park/ride reservations at Cerritos College or at any of the other six park/ride lots in the Los Angeles area, call Ticketron at (714) 634-1300 or (213) 410-1062.

Park/ride reservations can also be made in person at two local Ticketron outlets: Sports Chalet, 16242 Beach Blvd., in Huntington Beach; and Tower Records, 23811 El Toro Road, El Toro.

Buses to be used for Olympic events will be air conditioned and equipped with wheelchair lifts if handicapped persons let the RTD know they will need wheelchair facilities.

Littman said some people will be accommodated on a standby basis at the park/ride lots if events are sold out. "But if you come on standby, you'll literally be standing all the way," he said.

The park/ride and express buses will run two hours after events let out or longer to make sure all spectators have transportation back home, Littman added.

Additional tips for those braving the games: there are no bus racks for packages or food hampers so do not bring on more baggage than will comfortably fit on the floor in front of your seat or on your lap.

Eating and drinking on the bus is prohibited by law, but it is all right to bring refreshments or pack picnic lunches if they are not eaten on the bus.

If you must go by car, call for pool advice

There is only one sure way to beat traffic during the Olympics — don't drive.

But for those of us who want to get where we're going without having to slide behind the wheel everyday, the Orange County Transit District has cooked up just the solution.

In an effort to reduce the number of cars on local freeways and provide an alternative for county residents who prefer the automobile to commuting by bus both during the Olympics and after, OCTD has stepped up its high-tech Ridesharing Program, according to program manager Gary Edson.

The program — aimed at increasing the number of car pools and conversely decreasing the number of rush hour cars commuting to and from the workplace each day — is a simple one. And it's free.

A person calls OCTD's ridesharing office (636-RIDE), answers a few basic questions about where they live, where they work and what time of day they normally arrive and depart from their job, Edson explained.

Then, the information is fed into a computer and matched against similar information provided by the 30,000 people who currently are signed up for the program.

The computer selects the names of up to 15 other people who live nearby and are interested or already are involved in car or van pooling. Those who live the closest to the call-in client are placed at the top of the list, Edson continued.

Once the list is delivered, it's left up to the individual to contact the people and make the carpool arrangements, Edson said.

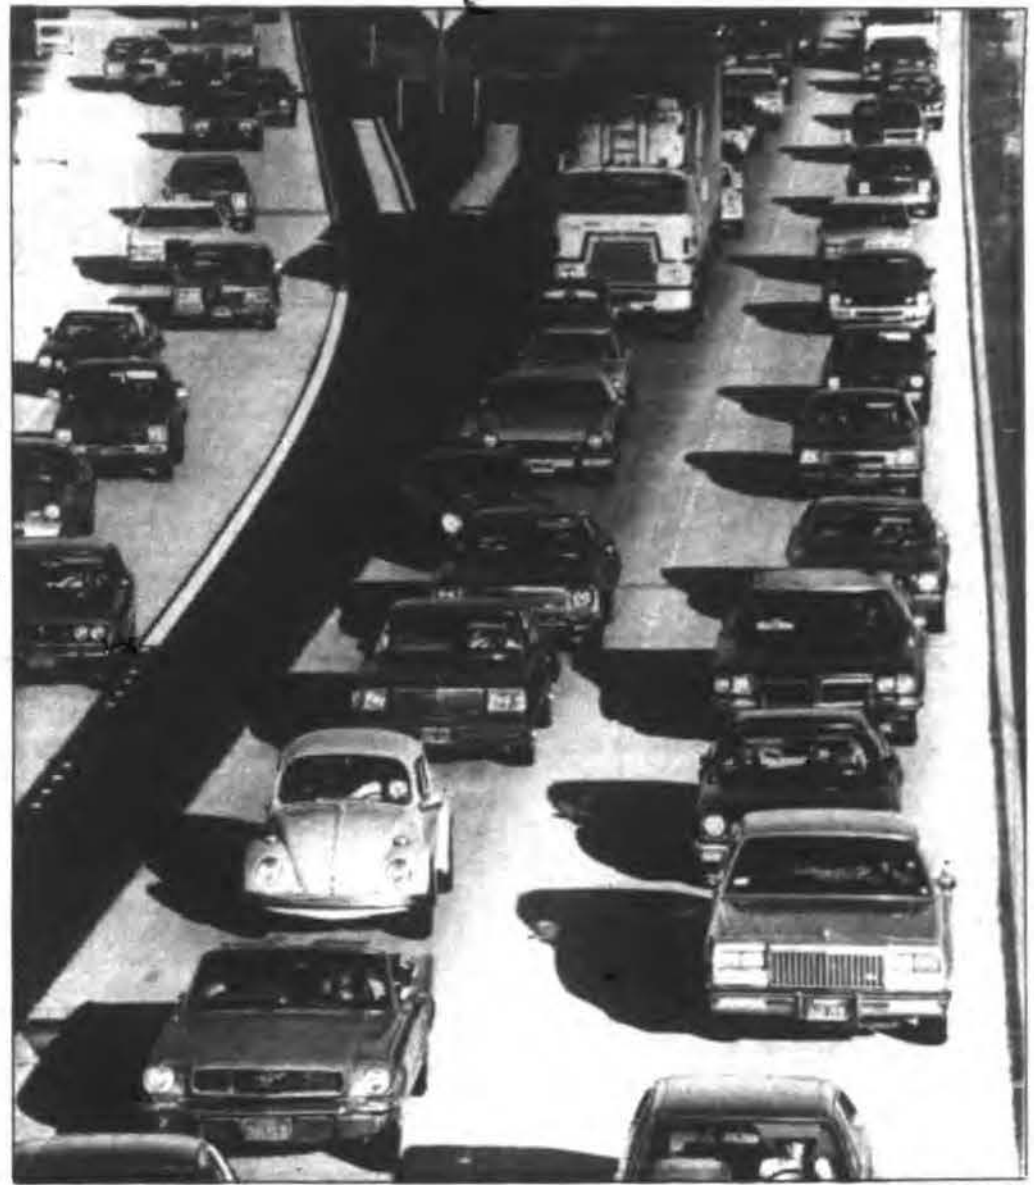

As part of the Olympics push, the transit official also said about 150 area business firms agreed to sponsor in-house car pool programs. He said their response to the program has been overwhelmingly favorable.

The firms solicited interested employees who filled out questionnaires that then were fed into the OCTD computer and matched. Individuals were asked whether they were interested in riding buses or joining car pools and van pools.

Edson said OCTD still is seeking other county firms interested in joining the program. But he said since it takes about three weeks to complete a trip planning program for a business it wouldn't be ready by the time the Olympic flame reaches Los Angeles.

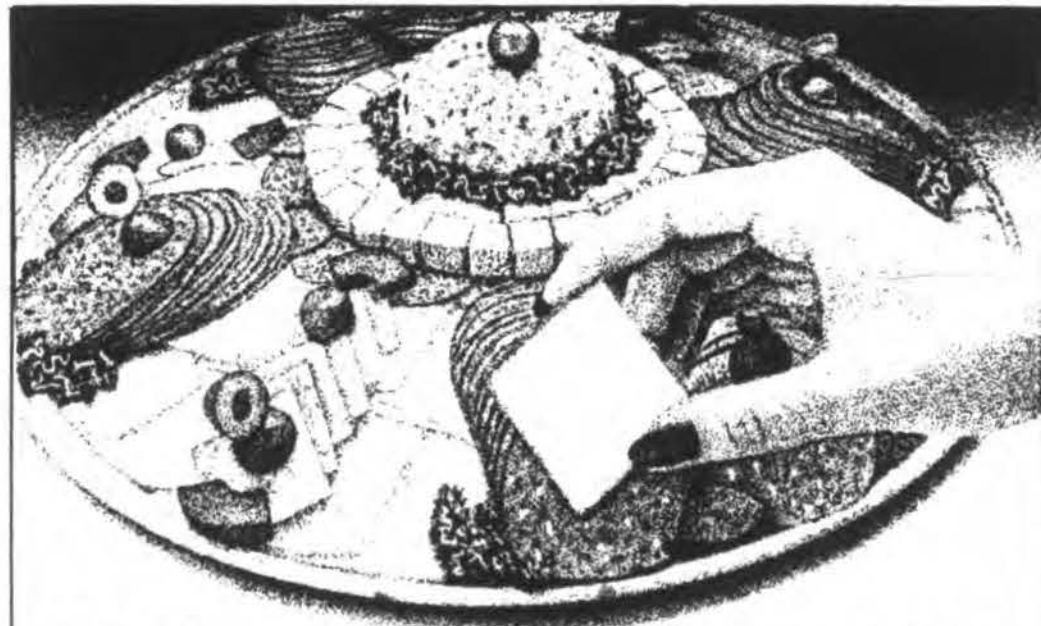

Calls into the ridesharing office have increased dramatically in recent months as the games draw closer and now average 22 per day for the five-person staff, Edson said.

He also pointed out that car pooling does have particular advantages. He said that although most people are apprehensive about sharing their cars when they first join the program, they quickly become ridesharing boosters. "One thing it enables you to do," he said, "is catch some extra sleep on the way to work in the morning."

Wouldn't you rather car pool and catch a nap through this?

Olympic visitors can bank on us

Bank employees in Orange and Los Angeles counties are preparing to cope with foreign currencies, unfamiliar traveler's checks and non-English-speaking customers — all anticipated during the busy Summer Olympics period.

Olympic events will draw athletes, coaches, journalists and thousands of spectators to Southern California, including many visitors from other states and other nations. Area banks have been training and temporarily reassigning employees to deal with this influx, but bank officials insist that regular customers should have no difficulty obtaining normal financial services.

"I think we're capable of a accommodating everyone," said Suzie Lewis, a corporate spokeswoman for First Interstate Bank of California. "We don't want to lose any of our regular customers."

First Interstate has entered into a sponsorship arrangement with the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. It is the only financial institution that can promote itself as the "Official Bank of the 1984 Olympics."

In keeping with this status, the bank is offering expanded service during the Olympics period, Lewis said. First Interstate has opened five temporary branches at centers of Olympic activities: UCLA, USC, UC Santa Barbara, the main press center at the Los Angeles Convention Center and Olympic Committee headquarters at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles.

Lewis said these special branches will be open for extended hours seven days a week through mid-August.

In addition, 26 First Interstate branches near Olympic event sites have been specially prepared to deal with an influx of visitors. Lewis said these include Orange County branches in Fullerton, Anaheim and Mission Viejo. Extra employees will be placed at these branches to staff Olympics information centers and to assist in other areas.

She said employees have been trained to recognize more than 30 types of traveler's checks that might be cashed during the Olympics, along with checks from First Interstate affiliate banks in 13 Western states.

Lewis said the bank also has identified employees who can speak 23 different languages. These employees can be contacted by any branch if a language problem surfaces involving an Olympics visitor.

Though First Interstate is the only official sponsor bank, other financial institutions are gearing up in similar fashion to meet additional customer needs during the Olympics.

Mary Trigg, senior public information officer for Security Pacific National Bank, said her firm has targeted 160 Southern California branches that are likely to be affected by the Olympics, including perhaps 50 in Orange County.

She said employees have viewed a training film and have received guidebooks concerning foreign currencies, traveler's checks and passports (used to verify identification). Like First Interstate, Security Pacific has lined up bilingual employees to offer telephone assistance when language problems occur.

Kurt Beier, first vice president of Security Pacific, said individual branch managers can decide to keep their office open for additional hours, with the approval of their regional vice president. He said this would allow a branch in a particularly busy Olympic area to serve visitors as well as more familiar people.

"Our number one priority is to take care of our regular customers," Beier said.

He said Security Pacific will operate a central "hotline" to answer employee questions about unusual transactions. In addition, standby employees have been lined up for relief at any office that encounters more Olympic business than anticipated.

Olympic rumors quashed

By the Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Did you hear about ... ? Officials want to squash any baseless rumors during the Olympic Games, so the Olympic Security Planning Committee and the Los Angeles County Commission on Human Relations have set up a Rumor Control Center.

"We've developed a network of community contacts to verify or deny rumors," said Lionel Martinez, spokesman for the commission.

The center plans to deal mostly with reports of demonstrations, political parades or policies, and will not answer questions about any suspected acts of terrorism, Martinez said.

We may have to change our lifestyles

By SUSAN McCALLUM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They'll come from LAX, Ontario and John Wayne airports and swarm the Southland freeways, beaches, hotels, restaurants and sports arenas like nothing anybody's ever seen.

The crowds that will inundate Orange and Los Angeles counties for the Olympics haven't gotten here yet, but they're already almost legendary. Countians shudder to think of the masses that everybody knows will take over the region for two weeks.

Many have stated their intention to leave Southern California during that time. And many have said they want to stay home as much as possible, leaving the sunny coast free for those who don't get here often. For those whose business and scholastic interests can be put on hold while they vacation at home, the weeks need not be boring.

Whipping up a gourmet meal and serving it for two on china, crystal and silver or creating a backyard picnic can be a fun alternative to dining out. One can test culinary mastery and improve skills by trying new recipes. Why not try a friendly cooking contest among friends?

But for those who want to dine out during the Olympic weeks, a few suggestions should be followed. A restaurant should be called a few days ahead of time to see how business has been, and even if it is slow, reservations should be made then. One never knows when an influx of reservations will come in.

Local restaurateurs have expressed differing opinions on how they think business will be. Todd Loomis, assistant manager of Reuben E. Lee's, Newport Beach's floating restaurant, said he expects throngs.

"You should definitely call a day or two in advance for the weekends, and at least by noon on the weekdays," he said. "But this place is a real tourist attraction, so it's hard to give a figure."

He said the restaurant is being recommended to thousands of foreign tourists in the area by travel agencies and tour sponsors.

But Robert Barnes, controller of Maxwell's By the Sea in Huntington Beach, said crowds could possibly diminish.

"Regular tourists are staying away because they've heard of the impending crush of people, but Olympic visitors are not coming in the numbers expected," he said. "Also, the strong dollar cuts down on foreign visitors."

Tim Aingworth, controller of Rex of Newport, said "I anticipate a very minimal effect, but you should call a week in advance, like normal."

Other restaurateurs expressed confusion about what will happen. Karen Schwartz, manager of the Velvet Turtle in El Toro, which is near the cycling and modern pentathlon events, said "we're shooting in the dark."

"One day, supposedly 100,000 people will be in the area," Schwartz said. "But unless you're right there next to the events, I don't know how it will turn out. We could either get killed or we could have the greatest two weeks of our lives."

But people can't eat all the time, and other activities can keep a person occupied while staying away from the madness. Green thumbs can plan a new garden or beautify an existing one. Interior decorators can experiment with new looks for their homes. Or maybe a furious antiseptic attack on cobwebs, dustballs and other messy spots in the home is in order.

Idlers can catch up on favorite soaps or spend a day lying around watching television. The Olympic events could be at the top of the viewing list. Or they can read the newspaper from cover to cover. Who ever has time to do that?

It might be fun to rent a movie from a video store, pop some popcorn and invite friends for a movie-and-chat session. Some in-demand films are "Terms of Endearment," "The Right Stuff," "Educating Rita," "Silkwood," "All The Right Moves," "Scarface" and "Gorky Park."

A roomful of people can enjoy a movie for between $1 and $7 a night. This is a lot less expensive than going out, and you won't get your feet stuck in spilled Coke and Junior Mints on the theater floor.

Some video stores in the area are Video Station in Newport Beach/Irvine, Video Warehouse in Huntington Beach, Video Crossroads in Laguna Hills, Pacific Coast Audio Video in Corona Del Mar, All Video Movies in El Toro and Star Home Video in Fountain Valley.

Another popular videocassette is "Jane Fonda's Workout," an alternative to crowded health clubs. The tapes come in beginning and advanced exercises and exercises for pregnant women. One can play the tape and go along with Jane's moves, or make up new ones. And if one can't follow the music and falls down, don't worry — nobody's watching.

A visit to a bookstore can be fruitful when seeking something to absorb attention for a few days as only a book can. Some popular titles are "The Name of the Rose" by Umberto Eco, "Sacajawea" by Anna Lee Waldo, "Idaho" by Dana Fuller Ross, "Thurston House" by Danielle Steele,

If you plan to dine out, better have reservations.

"Summer of Katya" by John Trevanian, "Hollywood Wives" by Jackie Collins and "Exocet" by Jack Higgins.

Some local bookstores to snoop around in are B. Dalton Booksellers in Mission Viejo, Crown Books in Newport Beach, Waldenbooks in Laguna Hills and the Balboa Island Book Shoppe. And if you don't mind secondhand items, the Orange Coast is loaded with used bookstores.

And since the weather, of course, will be hot, pool swimming and backyard sunbathing can while away the hours. Vacationers should set aside one day for a potluck pool party for the neighbors.

But whatever anybody does, it sure beats bumper-to-bumper traffic.

The simple rule for avoiding heavy Olympic traffic along the Orange Coast is: Stay off the Santa Ana Freeway on Orange County event days. Traffic heading toward the Anaheim Convention Center should be as heavy as it would be for any other convention center event, and it will be worse on August 2, 3, 9 and 10 when the Angels play night games at Anaheim Stadium. Traffic on the freeway toward Mission Viejo should be very heavy for the bike race, especially from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. and after 6 p.m. The Modern Pentathlon events are not expected to create serious traffic problems.

Irvine Co. taxes hiked $40 M

Company's land assessment tripled, will appeal ruling, may go to court

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

What do you do if your taxes go from about $12 million one year to nearly $40 million the next? If you are the Irvine Co., you appeal. And if that fails, you go to court.

Monday the Irvine Co. announced the results of Orange County Tax Assessor Bradley L. Jacobs' revaluation of the company's real estate. The assessor determined the company's holdings are worth about $3 billion compared to the Irvine Co.'s most recent valuation of about $1.1 billion.

If the assessor's ruling stands, property taxes for the Irvine Co. will at least triple.

The county decided to revalue the 68,000-acre land development company after Newport Beach tycoon Donald Bren's bought controlling interest in the firm in April 1983.

Irvine Co. president Thomas Nielsen said the company will appeal the ruling and if the company isn't satisfied, it is prepared to go to court.

"It could go on for four and five years and there are likely to be matters of law that arise from the appeal that will have to be settled in court," Nielsen said.

"We fully estimate there will be a substantial reduction," Gary Hunt, Irvine Co. vice president, said.

Company officials believe the company's correct assessed valuation should be between $1.1 billion and $2 billion.

The Irvine Co. appeal will be based on two points:

•First, Nielsen contends that Proposition 13 calls for a revaluation only when real estate is sold. What Bren purchased was controlling interest in the shares of a real estate holding company, not the actual real estate and the purchase should not have triggered a revaluation, Nielsen said.

Worker killed in wall plunge

Slab collapses near Holly Sugar site in Santa Ana

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A construction worker was killed and a second man injured early today when the sixth floor of a partially completed hotel in Santa Ana collapsed, raining tons of concrete to the floors below.

A team of firefighters armed with jackhammers, torches and saws worked feverishly to cut through the rubble trying to extract the body of the worker, Santa Ana Fire Department Capt. Tim Graber said.

The workman's body was retrieved from the rubble shortly before 9 a.m.

The site of the 6:32 a.m. disaster was the under-construction Granada Royale Homelot, off the Costa Mesa Freeway on Dyer Road near Grand Avenue. The hotel is to be 12 stories tall.

Colleges playing by new rules now

August startup, tuition added to community schools

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Registration for fall classes is already under way at several local community colleges — with a few new twists.

For the first time, all eight community colleges in Orange County will begin classes in August, rather than September. The change was made to coordinate two-year schools with the California State University and University of California schedules, making it easier to transfer between schools at mid-year.

In addition, community college students will face tuition fees for the first time during the fall semester, as a result of new legislation supported by Gov. George Deukmejian and approved by state lawmakers.

Students enrolling for fewer than six units must pay $5 per unit. For six or more units, a flat $50 fee must be paid. Financial aid is available for students unable to pay the fees.

Although tuition will be charged, health fees and class materials fees have been eliminated. Students who wish to leave their vehicles in school lots will still have to pay parking fees.

Shotgun-wielding bandits hit three hotels in county

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A trio of bandits reportedly went on a crime spree late Monday, robbing hotels in Costa Mesa and Laguna Hills and shooting a businessman from Seattle outside a third hotel in Anaheim.

Ralph Paulman, 41, of Seattle was wounded in the side by a shotgun blast Monday evening as he walked across a parking lot outside the Grand Hotel in Anaheim, police said.

Officers said the out-of-state businessman was walking toward the hotel lobby when three men — one apparently carrying a shotgun — ordered him to stop.

Paulman made a run for the lobby but was hit by gunfire before he could reach safety, police said.

The Seattle resident was treated for his wounds at UCI Medical Center in Orange. He was listed in good condition today.

The 10 p.m. shooting in Anaheim reportedly was the first of three stops the bandits made in Orange County during the late evening hours.

Two men entered the La Quinta Inn in Costa Mesa at about 10:35 p.m. and approached employees at the front counter, according to Costa Mesa Lt. Tom Lazar. One of the men brandished a shotgun, Lazar said.

"If they move, shoot them," one bandit reportedly instructed his partner, according to police reports. A clerk handed over cash from the motel register and the pair fled to a car, where a third man apparently was waiting.

At 11:12 p.m., two men walked into the Holiday Inn in Laguna Hills and ordered a lone employee to hand over everything from the cash register's till, said Orange County Sheriff's Lt. Richard Olson.

Olson said one of the two bandits was armed with a shotgun. He said a third man waited outside in the getaway car, an older model vehicle described as silver and maroon in color.

Authorities were unsure how much money the bandits stole.

In each incident, the men were described as being in their early 20s, black and dressed in dark clothing.

Someone stole her memories

By ROBERT BARKER

Sharon Wingelink wore a head-to-toe, champagne-colored wedding gown that sparkled with satin and pearl beads when she got married 17 years ago at St. Paul's Cathedral in Park Ridge, Ill.

A 34-inch satin train trailed her down the aisle as she walked to the altar to exchange vows with her husband-to-be, Ken.

It was one of those once-in-a-lifetime moments.

Bove said other teams had to endure numerous bus rides during pre-Olympic weeks, shuttling between sleeping, eating and training areas. At Los Caballeros, the athletes could do all three without leaving the grounds. A catering service at the club provided meals according to coaches' specifications.

"These facilities are very fine," Dr. Jurgen Kozel, manager of the West German swim teams, said as his athletes were concluding their stay. "It's a good pool, there are good facilities in the weight room, and the apartments are very nice."

Kozel discovered Los Caballeros last August, when his athletes were competing in an earlier contest in Los Angeles. Kozel and a coach were looking for an Olympic training camp

Coast's cities warming up to welcome Olympic Torch

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

American flags, flashlights to show the way and at least one band will greet the Olympic Torch runners as the relay moves through the Orange Coast Wednesday and Thursday.

The torch is scheduled to arrive in Laguna Beach on Pacific Coast Highway about 8 p.m. Wednesday, according to relay organizers.

The Olympic flame will continue along the highway, arriving in Corona del Mar about 9 p.m.

The Corona del Mar Chamber of Commerce plans to line the street with American flags and is urging spectators to bring flashlights to illuminate the route.

A special open house featuring Sam the Olympic Eagle will be held at the First Interstate Bank branch in Corona del Mar starting at 8 p.m.

The torch will continue north on Pacific Coast Highway, making a right turn at Newport Center Drive about 9:15 p.m.

Jim Dale, president of the Newport Harbor Area Chamber of Commerce, announced at the Newport City Council meeting Monday night, that Newport Center will be the official greeting site of the Olympic Torch in the city.

He urged spectators to gather there because of convenient parking facilities and the planned festivities.

Henry Brandon and his 17-piece brass band will tune up about 7:30 p.m., according to Pacific Mutual spokeswoman Carol Beekman, one of the greeting's organizers.

The band will be followed by special guest speaker Dick Stevens, the Olympic Commissioner for the Modern Pentathlon event to be held in Irvine and Coto de Caza. Stevens will bring 800 volunteers who are

Little bit of W. Germany comes to Fountain Valley

Visiting athletes train for Olympic Games in Los Caballeros Racquet Club facilities

Members of the Los Caballeros Racquet and Sports Club didn't have to go far to get an advance look at some Olympic athletes during the past few weeks.

Twice each day, members of the West German men's and women's Olympic swim teams were within easy view, perfecting their strokes in the Fountain Valley club's 50-meter pool. During a pre-Olympic workout period that ended Saturday, the German athletes also lived in hotel-condominium units at Los Caballeros.

The U.S. women's Olympic basketball team has also been training and living at Los Caballeros in recent weeks. The team's checkout date is Friday.

And, members of the U.S. women's Olympic volleyball team have been honing their skills in a Los Caballeros gymnasium. Members of the volleyball team have been living in homes throughout Orange County during the Olympic warmup period.

What has this Olympic invasion meant to the local sports complex?

Members faced a little inconvenience. During the German athletes' two-hour afternoon workouts, club members could not swim in the main pool. Morning workouts took place from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., before the pool is normally open to members.

Yet if anyone was annoyed by this restriction, the word didn't reach Kevin Bove, general manager of Los Caballeros.

"I haven't received any complaints," Bove said, "because the magnitude of this visit is obvious, and I think our members understand that. In fact, (our members) have gone beyond just being hospitable to the athletes. They've enjoyed watching the workouts, but they've also showed respect for their privacy."

Most of the athletes are college-age students, but Bove said he didn't have to worry about "Animal House" antics in the club's brand new condominiums.

"These are very serious athletes engaged in the most important part of their training — just before the Olympics," he said.

WEDDING GOWN STOLEN...

From A1

lifetime occasions that a person can treasure forever. And part of the fun is to share the happy time with others.

The Wingelniks now have three daughters and it's always been Sharon's hopes to keep the gown that she purchased from a now-forgotten store for them.

That's why she always took special pains to keep her gown safely tucked away in a metal closet in the garage of her home in the 16000 block of Caribou Street in Fountain Valley.

But Wingelnik sometimes is kept pretty busy between running errands for her daughters while also working as a clerk in a child's clothing store at Westminster Mall.

One day recently, things were more hectic than usual and Wingelnik forgot to close the garage. That was the same time that someone came into her garage and stole her wedding gown, which she told police had a dollar value of about $400.

"It's not the money, but it's very sentimental and something I can't replace. It's the aggravation."

Wingelnik, who said she can't imagine the gown having any monetary value to others, said she believes someone may have stolen it "out of spite."

"It wasn't the first thing that's been stolen from me and it probably won't be the last."

"It's no big deal, but people can be real stinky."

IRVINE CO. WAGES TAX FIGHT...

Second, the company believes the assessor's revaluation of the company's 2,200 parcels was completed without a full knowledge of the land's value.

Hunt said much of the company's undeveloped property was valued at what it would sell for as subdivided land, complete with streets, sewers and other urban improvement.

Most of the land, however, is open fields and hills lacking paved roads or any other improvements and is worth considerably less than what the county says, Hunt said.

For example, the 9,421 acres of the Irvine Coast area was last valued at $37 million. The new assessment for the proposed site of a resort and residential development places the value at $390 million.

"From my knowledge of the (Irvine Coast) project, and I have been working on it for six years, I don't know how one arrives at the higher figure," Nielsen said.

Webster Guillory, a spokesman for the assessor's office said the Irvine Co. is welcome to contest the valuation but "we figured the value

according to law. We do this every day and we know the values well."

The new assessment came as a jolt to the Irvine Co. which will have to come up with about $25 million in cash for every year the valuation is under appeal. The money will be placed in escrow for the county until the controversy is settled.

Nielsen said finding the cash will result in "difficult planning" but the company should be able to continue with its major programs and projects without any interruptions.

HOTEL COLLAPSE KILLS WORKER...

Workers reportedly were lowering the prefabricated sixth floor slab into place early today with a crane when the concrete slab broke loose, firefighters said. The cause of the accident was unknown.

The huge slab reportedly crashed down through the hotel's skeletal structure, slamming through the fifth and fourth floors, a spokesman explained.

A construction worker apparently assisting with the work on the sixth floor suffered injuries to his arms and legs when the slab broke away, firefighters said. The unidentified worker was taken to Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana after being rescued nearly an hour after the mishap.

A second construction crew member, believed to have been working on the third or fourth floor, reportedly was crushed by the falling concrete. His identity was not released.

"He was buried under the rubble," Graber said.

Authorities would not release the name of the contractor working on the hotel. The hotel, near the site of the historic Holly Sugar factory that was torn down last year, is to be one of seven hotels built on the site, according to a city official.

"The construction site's been shut down until this gets settled," Graber said. He said city building inspectors and a California Occupational Safety, Health Administration representative were at the scene.

COLLEGES ENROLLING EARLIER...

College admissions officials say the new schedule and the new fee system have created fresh challenges for them, but early reports indicate registration is proceeding smoothly.

Signup by appointment began Monday at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa. Open or walk-in registration runs Aug. 16 through Aug. 24.

Coastline College, based in Fountain Valley but offering classes in numerous neighborhood locations, also has begun its registration, which is conducted primarily by mail. In-person registration for Coastline classes can be completed at the College Center in Fountain Valley or at Coastline's three learning centers: Peterson in Huntington Beach, Mesa Verde in Costa Mesa and Finley in Westminster.

Classes at Orange Coast, Coastline

and Golden West begin Aug. 20.

Saddleback College's campuses in Irvine and Mission Viejo will register continuing students from Aug. 7 to Aug. 14. New students can register by appointment from Aug. 15 to Sept. 7. Saddleback classes begin Aug. 27.

John Buller, dean of admissions and records at Orange Coast, said his office deliberately scheduled fewer registration appointments than usual Monday to test the new system for collecting tuition fees.

COAST TIES TO CHEER TORCH...

helping with the Pentathlon.

Newport Beach Mayor Evelyn Hart will then make a brief speech and everyone will await the torch. Newport Center Drive will be decorated with flags, and Beekman says the atmosphere will be festive.

The torch will then take San Miguel Drive to Ford Road to MacArthur Boulevard to Campus Drive in Irvine to University Drive back to Campus Drive to Jamboree Road to Pacific Coast Highway.

The torch will cut across Newport Bay at Dover Drive before taking Westcliff Drive to Irvine Avenue to head into Costa Mesa sometime after 1 a.m.

The torch relay caravan, made up of about 75 people, will spend the night at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa, according to Bill Fredrickson, one of the relay's organizers.

In Costa Mesa Thursday, early morning runners will be greeted by city officials during their 4 a.m. briefing and then treated to a breakfast reception about 8 a.m. after they run their kilometers.

Werner Escher, publicity spokesman for the South Coast Plaza Mall, said he hopes to have a tent set up in the Denny's parking lot at Bristol Street and Red Hill Avenue where City Council members and city staff members can greet the runners and their families after the torch moves out of Costa Mesa.

Most of the running in Costa Mesa will take place on Bristol Street past the South Coast Plaza between about 6 a.m. and 8 a.m. Thursday.

City officials in both Irvine and Laguna Beach said no official greetings were planned.

GERMAN ATHLETES TRAIN IN VALLEY...

From A1

when a friend referred them to the Fountain Valley club. This month, 13 men and 11 women swimmers from West Germany arrived at Los Caballeros with their coaches.

The team manager said there were several reasons for training in California just before the Olympics. First, the weather in Germany might have limited the athletes to indoor pool training.

"At the time of our departure from Germany, it was very cold," Kozel said.

Another important reason was matter of time zones. Nine hours difference exists between time in Germany and Los Angeles. The Fountain Valley training period allowed the German athletes to adjust to the California Olympics clock.

The routine was not all work and no play.

One of the swimmers, 22-year-old Dirk Korthals of Gladbeck, West Germany, said team members had a chance to visit Knotts Berry Farm, Venice, area shopping centers and the oceanfront along Huntington Beach and Long Beach.

"It's a bit different (from Germany), but I like it," said Korthals who hopes "to make a medal in the 400- and 800-meter relays and to reach the finals in the 100-meter free-style."

Team manager Kozel said West Germany's star swimmer is Michael Gross, 20, a world record-holder in the 200-meter free-style and 200-meter butterfly events.

This will be the first Olympics competition for Gross and for most of the other West German swimmers. Kozel said Many were prepared to compete in Moscow in 1980, but West Germany, like the United States, boycotted the Olympics that year.

He said his athletes were a bit disappointed by the Soviet Union's decision not to attend this year's Olympics, a move followed by other Communist nations.

"We would like to have all the good athletes here in Los Angeles," Kozel said. "But it's not a decision of sports, it's a decision of politics. It's a pity. We have very good friends on the East German team, and we know many of the Russian athletes."

Kozel said his West German swimmers were not dwelling on the boycott but instead were looking forward to moving into quarters in the Olympic Village on the USC campus. Competitions will take place in the USC Olympic Swim Stadium.

Their cheering section may even include a few people who watched them train at Los Caballeros.

Club manager Bove believes the West German swimmers and the other Olympic athletes gave a boost to the club and the community as a whole.

"Our staff has been under a more significant strain," he admitted. "But they don't perceive it as that. They see it as the opportunity of a lifetime."

Assessment ruling may help lawsuit by Irvine heiress

By JERRY HIRSCH

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Orange County tax assessor isn't the only person questioning the worth of the Irvine Co.

Joan Irvine Smith, the feisty Irvine heiress who battled Newport Beach tycoon Donald Bren for control of the company last year, also believes the land development firm is worth much more than company officials claim.

When Bren bought controlling interest in the company in April of 1983, one of the deals he offered Smith was $110 million for the 11 percent of the company's stock she controls with her mother, Athalie Clarke.

The figure was based upon a $1 billion valuation of the company. Smith said it was worth a lot more and the county apparently agrees.

Tax Assessor Bradley L. Jacobs increased the valuation of the Irvine

Co. from about $1.1 billion to $3 billion. The company plans to appeal the county assessment.

Smith, who lost a bid last year to keep Bren from merging the Irvine Co. with his personal holding company, is suing the company to force it to pay her more for her stock.

The case will be held in Michigan where Bren's corporation papers are filed.

Irvine Co. officials say the new assessment will have no impact on Smith's suit, which was filed last year.

The assessment determines the value of the real estate held by the company and the lawsuit will determine the value of Smith's minority shares in the corporation — two separate things, according to Irvine Co. vice president Gary Hunt.

One of Smith's lawyers with the Los Angeles law firm of Loeb & Loeb does not agree.

"We have not reviewed what the assessor has done but at the minimum it would only confirm Mrs. Smith's view that Mr. Bren and the Irvine Co. have undervalued the company," said Loeb & Loeb attorney, Robert Meyer.

"It is correct that the issue in our case is the value of the stock but fundamental to that is an analysis of what the assets of the company are worth. In this case the prime asset of the Irvine Co. is real estate," Meyer said.

"This can only be good for me and bad for the company. It will be very valuable to our fight," Smith said.

Irvine Co. officials claim the value of the stock should be based upon what Bren paid for his share of the company from Detroit shopping center developer Alfred Taubman and a group of East Coast investors. That would place the value of the company in the neighborhood of about $1 billion.

Hotel floor collapse kills worker in SA

Santa Ana firemen probe rubble of hotel collapse which killed one construction worker and injured another early today.

Slab breaks loose in 12-story building under construction

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A construction worker was killed and a second man injured early today when the sixth floor of a partially completed hotel in Santa Ana collapsed, raining tons of concrete to the floors below.

A team of firefighters armed with jack hammers, torches and saws worked feverishly to cut through the rubble trying to extract the body of the worker, Santa Ana Fire Department Capt. Tim Graber said.

The workman's body was retrieved from the rubble shortly before 9 a.m.

The site of the 6:32 a.m. disaster was the under-construction Granada Royale Hotel, off the Costa Mesa Freeway on Dyer Road near Grand Avenue. The hotel is to be 12 stories tall.

Workers reportedly were lowering the prefabricated sixth floor slab into place early today with a crane when the concrete slab broke loose, firefighters said. The cause of the accident was unknown.

The huge slab reportedly crashed down through the hotel's skeletal structure, slamming through the fifth and fourth floors, a spokesman explained.

A construction worker apparently assisting with the work on the sixth floor suffered injuries to his arms and legs when the slab broke away, firefighters said. The unidentified worker was taken to Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana after being

Colleges playing by new rules now

August startup, tuition added to community schools

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Registration for fall classes is already under way at several local community colleges — with a few new twists.

For the first time, all eight community colleges in Orange County will begin classes in August, rather than September. The change was made to coordinate two-year schools with the California State University and University of California schedules, making it easier to transfer between schools at mid-year.

In addition, community college students will face tuition fees for the first time during the fall semester, as a result of new legislation supported by Gov. George Deukmejian and approved by state lawmakers.

Students enrolling for fewer than six units must pay $5 per unit. For six or more units, a flat $50 fee must be paid. Financial aid is available for students unable to pay the fees.

Although tuition will be charged, health fees and class materials fees have been eliminated.

Irvine Co. stung by tax increase, plans to appeal

Assessment raised from $12 million to $40 million

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

What do you do if your taxes go from about $12 million one year to nearly $40 million the next? If you are the Irvine Co., you appeal, and if that fails, you go to court.

Monday the Irvine Co. announced the results of Orange County Tax Assessor Bradley L. Jacobs' revaluation of the company's real estate. The assessor determined the company's holdings are worth about $3 billion compared to the Irvine Co.'s most recent valuation of about $1.1 billion. If the assessor's ruling stands, property taxes for the Irvine Co. will at least triple.

The county decided to revalue the 68,000-acre land development company after Newport Beach tycoon Donald Bren's bought controlling interest in the firm in April 1983.

Irvine Co. president Thomas Nielsen said the company will appeal the ruling and if the company isn't satisfied, it is prepared to go to court.

"It could go on for four and five years and there are likely to be matters of law that arise from the appeal that will have to be settled in court," Nielsen said.

"We fully estimate there will be a substantial reduction," Gary Hunt, Irvine Co. vice president, said. Company officials believe the company's correct assessed valuation should be between $1.1 billion and $2 billion.

The Irvine Co. appeal will be based on two points:

•First, Nielsen contends that Proposition 13 calls for a revaluation only when real estate is sold. What Bren purchased was controlling interest in the shares of a real estate holding company, not the actual real estate and the purchase should not have triggered a revaluation, Nielsen said.

Coast's cities warming up to welcome Olympic Torch

By JERRY HIRSCH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

American flags, flashlights to show the way and at least one band will greet the Olympic torch runners as the relay moves through the Orange Coast Wednesday and Thursday.

The torch is scheduled to arrive in Laguna Beach on Pacific Coast Highway about 8 p.m. Wednesday, according to relay organizers.

The Olympic flame will continue along the highway, arriving in Corona del Mar about 9 p.m.

The Corona del Mar Chamber of Commerce plans to line the street with American flags and is urging spectators to bring flashlights to illuminate the route.

A special open house featuring Sam the Olympic Eagle will be held at the First Interstate Bank branch in Corona del Mar starting at 8 p.m.

The torch will continue north on Pacific Coast Highway, making a right turn at Newport Center Drive about 9:15 p.m.

Jim Dale, president of the Newport Harbor Area Chamber of Commerce, announced at the Newport City Council meeting Monday night, that Newport Center will be the official greeting site of the Olympic Torch in the city.

He urged spectators to gather there because of convenient parking facilities and the planned festivities.

Henry Brandon and his 17-piece brass band will tune up about 7:30 p.m., according to Pacific Mutual spokeswoman Carol Beekman, one of the greeting's organizers.

The band will be followed by special guest speaker Dick Stevens, the Olympic Commissioner for the Modern Pentathlon event to be held in Irvine and Coto de Caza. Stevens will bring 800 volunteers who are

Little bit of W. Germany comes to Fountain Valley

Visiting athletes train for Olympic Games in Los Caballeros Racquet Club facilities

Members of the Los Caballeros Racquet and Sports Club didn't have to go far to get an advance look at some Olympic athletes during the past few weeks.

Twice each day, members of the West German men's and women's Olympic swim teams were within easy view, perfecting their strokes in the Fountain Valley club's 50-meter pool. During a pre-Olympic workout period that ended Saturday, the German athletes also lived in hotel-condominium units at Los Caballeros.

The U.S. women's Olympic basketball team has also been training and living at Los Caballeros in recent weeks. The team's checkout date is Friday.

And, members of the U.S. women's Olympic volleyball team have been honing their skills in a Los Caballeros gymnasium. Members of the volleyball team have been living in homes throughout Orange County during the Olympic warmup period.

What has this Olympic invasion meant to the local sports complex?

Members faced a little inconvenience. During the German athletes' two-hour afternoon workouts, club members could not swim in the main pool. Morning workouts took place from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., before the pool is normally open to members.

Yet if anyone was annoyed by this restriction, the word didn't reach Kevin Bove, general manager of Los Caballeros.

"I haven't received any complaints," Bove said, "because the magnitude of this visit is obvious, and I think our members understand that. In fact, (our members) have gone beyond just being hospitable to the athletes. They've enjoyed watching the workouts, but they've also showed respect for their privacy."

Most of the athletes are college-age students, but Bove said he didn't have to worry about "Animal House" antics in the club's brand new condominiums.

"These are very serious athletes engaged in the most important part of their training — just before the Olympics," he said.

In keeping with their training regimen, many of the athletes went to bed quite early anyway, another Los Caballeros official said. Still, she said some coaches requested a price list for condo furnishings to alert athletes to the costs in case anything did break during their stay.

If Los Caballeros members came to appreciate the athletes' visit, the teams in turn seemed to enjoy the accommodations.

Bove said other teams had to endure numerous bus rides during pre-Olympic weeks, shuttling between sleeping, eating and training areas. At Los Caballeros, the athletes could do all three without leaving the grounds. A catering service at the club provided meals according to coaches' specifications.

"These facilities are very fine," Dr. Jurgen Kozel, manager of the West German swim teams, said as his athletes were concluding their stay. "It's a good pool, there are good facilities in the weight room, and the apartments are very nice."

Kozel discovered Los Caballeros last August, when his athletes were competing in an earlier contest in Los Angeles. Kozel and a coach were looking for an Olympic training camp
