Crews battle canyon fire, winds

Fast work credited with stopping blaze in Trabuco; downed power line blamed

By PAUL ARCHIPLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A quick response by more than 200 firefighters was credited for the successful containment of a 125-acre Trabuco Canyon blaze that was whipped up by 60 mph winds Wednesday.

Investigators are blaming a downed power line for igniting the fire at about 8:20 p.m. near the intersection of Rose Canyon and Trabuco Canyon roads, said Kathleen Cha of the Orange County Fire Department.

Fanned by Santa Ana winds that gusted to 60 mph, the fire spread into the hills northeast of Rancho Santa Margarita.

About 50 houses along Mountain View and Sycamore roads were evacuated as flames lapped homeowners' yards, Cha said.

Firefighters also made an early stand around the Joplin Youth Center, a county facility for boys, that was threatened.

However, no structures were damaged and no one was injured, she said.

Despite the fierce winds, firefighters were able to contain the fire by 11:30 p.m. They remained on the scene throughout the night to douse hot spots.

Residents were allowed to return to their homes beginning at about 11:30 p.m., Cha said.

Livestock that was set free at the height of the blaze also had to be corralled.

The quick response by firefighters and recent rains helped prevent disaster, she said. In addition, winds slowed to about 30 mph later in the evening.

"Instead of being a dry brush fire it was a green grass fire. It could've been a lot worse," Cha said.

She said 220 Orange County firefighters were assisted by several city fire departments, as well as the California Division of the U.S. Department of Forestry.

Elsewhere in Southern California, winds reaching 80 mph destroyed a tethered blimp and forced closure of Ontario International Airport.

The Airships Inc. blimp moored at Ontario International was shredded by the high winds, leaving little more than its nose cone attached to its anchor pole, airport security Capt. Jerry Davis told the Associated Press. No one was injured.

Officials closed all runways there at about 9:30 p.m., diverting flights to Long Beach and Los Angeles international airports.

Even as the gusting winds caused havoc throughout the Southland, the Orange Coast was spared major

LA policeman charged with gun violations

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Los Angeles police officer has been charged with aiming a gun at a motorist while leaning out the sunroof of a moving limousine, then firing into the air during a wild night of celebrating his upcoming marriage.

Shots were reportedly fired along Pacific Coast Highway between Laguna Beach and Corona del Mar and again as the limousine traveled along the Costa Mesa Freeway.

The seven-month investigation by the Orange County district attorney's office concluded Officer Whitney Van Devander, 36, of Artesia, and his companions, Anaheim chiropractor Michael Blau and fellow off-duty Officer Christopher Ilizaliturri, made stops at several Orange County bars on the night of July 17 when Van Devander brandished the weapon and fired it into the air.

Deputy District Attorney Creighton Laz said Wednesday that Blau and Ilizaliturri had been cleared of any wrongdoing.

There were no reports of injuries in the incident.

Several people contacted authorities to report the gunfire, seen coming from the sunroof of the limo.

Executive Limousine Service, based in Fountain Valley, reportedly picked up the three men at Blau's Anaheim office at 6:30 p.m. and dropped them off well past midnight near Blau's Santiago Canyon home.

"The gun was pointed directly at me," said Edward Carraccioli, driver of the car behind the limousine. "I said, 'Oh, my God' ... and let off the gas pedal."

Carraccioli said he then watched as Van Devander fired four shots in the air, according to police reports.

Van Devander is a patrol officer in the Los Angeles Police Department's Southwest Division, but has been on extended sick leave since the shooting incident, Police Capt. Tom Elfmont said.

The department is conducting its own investigation and Van Devander could face disciplinary measures, including termination, Elfmont said.

Limousine chauffeur Robert Miller said the men assured him the shoot-

Panel rejects earlier beach curfews

Oceanfront residents in Newport plan to appeal decision of parks commission

By IRIS YOKOI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A request by oceanfront residents to begin closing city beaches at 10 p.m. rather than the current midnight curfew has been voted down by the Newport Beach Parks, Beaches and Recreation Commission.

Commissioners cited concerns about enforcing the earlier closure time and restricting use of the beach in voting 4-2 against the change. The vote, however, is advisory only and not necessarily the final word on the matter.

Representatives of the Central Newport Beach Community Association, the Balboa Peninsula Point Association and the West Newport Beach Homeowners' Association said they will appeal the decision to the City Council.

The boards of the three homeowners' groups support closing all beaches at 10 p.m. except the Balboa Pier area where fire rings are provided, citing noise and other problems created by people on the beaches at night. The problems worsen during the summer because of the influx of tourists, residents say.

"We all have the same problems, not just with noise but with people not being able to find restrooms," said Phil Schonlau, a resident on Ocean Front in Balboa.

Closing the beach earlier will not solve all the problems, but "it's a step in the right direction," Schonlau said. "If the number of people on the beach is reduced by 50 percent, it's a step in the right direction."

An identical request was rejected by city officials five years ago, but Dayna Pettit, president of the Peninsula Point Association, said the idea warrants a fresh look because the number of tourists coming to Newport Beach continues to increase.

"The beaches are dark at night," she said. "There's no real reason people should be out on the beach."

Newport Beach Police Patrol Capt. Mike Blitch told the commission his officers haven't had much problem enforcing the 10 p.m. closing time at Corona del Mar State Beach because of its restricted access.

"But closing ocean beaches ... we're seldom completely successful at closing them down during the summer," he said.

Blitch did not have a definite recommendation on the issue, but said residents would have to understand that nightly sweeps of the beaches would be difficult because of lack of manpower.

"Were there no other problems in the city, then we'd have the manpower to do it," he said.

The main problem area is the

TV soap proves 'Balboa Island' is 99.44% fun

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The camera zooms in on a group of sunbathers on the sandy beach of Corona del Mar. Suddenly, a muscular young man notices a strange red light flashing in the distant waters. Glancing up to the bluffs, he observes a second flash of red.

And when three of the sunworshipers surreptitiously climb the bluffs to investigate — lo and behold — they witness two Russian agents engrossed in a sinister tale.

The plot thickens when one dark-haired girl is caught by the Russians and whisked away at gunpoint.

No, it's not "Moonlighting," this is Orange County's own nighttime soap opera, "Balboa Island." The 30-minute series is aired on public access cable stations at different times during the month.

The soap, now in its fourth year, is loosely patterned after the long-running "Dallas" and can be viewed by cable in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley, Costa Mesa and, of course, Balboa and the rest of Newport Beach.

"Balboa Island" is the brainchild of teacher-actor-director Robert Michael Conrad of Newport Beach, not to be confused with Hollywood's Robert Conrad.

The soap opera has all the ingredients viewers long for: romance, intrigue and murder.

Conrad is a theater arts teacher at Coastline Community College and a professional actor who has had small parts on several TV shows.

His Hollywood contacts have been a plus for the show. Randy Corday, a director of the "Bob Newhart Show," "Easy Street" and "Coming of Age," has directed several of the shows. Dale White, who has directed episodes of "Hill Street Blues," "Heart Beat" and "O'Hara," also has done some of the directing.

One particular show starred Adam West, the actor who became famous portraying Batman, as a Vietnam POW who returns home to find he has a teen-age son who doesn't know of his existence.

There are some glaring differences between the glitzy sizzling "Dallas," and the no-budget, PG-rated "Balboa Island," however.

Unlike the fabled television soap, "Balboa Island" airs monthly, making it difficult for viewers to follow a continuing story. Each show has a beginning and ending and does not involve a

Newport students disciplined for circular

By PAUL ARCHIPLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Administrators are disciplining a group of Newport Harbor High School students who distributed a publication on campus that was described as pornographic and obscene.

Dr. Dennis Evans, principal at Newport Harbor, said he wouldn't "dignify" the tract by calling it a newspaper. "It was full of obscenities and pornographic pictures," he said.

Students had cut out pictures from X-rated newspapers and magazines and directed comments in the circular toward other students and members of the faculty, Evans said.

They distributed about a hundred copies of the handout on the Friday before Christmas vacation. Faculty members were able to retrieve most of them, Evans said.

Administrators launched an investigation when schools reopened last week.

Evans couldn't say how many students were involved. They are being disciplined on an individual basis, he said. None have been expelled.

Participants were unable to explain why they did it, Evans said.

"I imagine at one time they thought it was humorous," he said.

"But the reason they gave finally was that they had made a terrible mistake."

Chamber of Commerce's manager quits in Laguna

By LESLIE EARNEST
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The general manager of the Laguna Beach Chamber of Commerce, whose contract was not up for renewal until April, resigned suddenly Tuesday, according to Cheryl Ryan, who was recently named managing director of the chamber.

"It happened all of a sudden," Ryan said. "He resigned and perhaps he's going on to bigger and better things. I don't know."

Gary Bosley had been general manager since January 1988. However, a new top executive post of managing director was recently created for Ryan.

She was once a member of the Committee for Public Relations, a chamber faction organized in 1986 to oust what members considered ineffective chamber leadership.

Chamber president Chad Foutz had said late last week that Bosley's position was not threatened by the change in leadership.

"I can't ever commit that he's going to be there for life and I can't commit that he won't be," Foutz said. "His contract comes up for renewal in April. Whether that's renewed, I don't know at this point."

Bosley was not available for comment and Ryan chose not to discuss whether her being named managing director had anything to do with his departure.

"I came in to oversee the workings of the chamber and Gary was to do special projects, projects which he has expertise in and seemed to enjoy," Ryan said. "Then evidently he decided, well, as I say, perhaps he's found bigger and better things."

Neither Bosley nor Foutz were available for comment.

Ryan said she has not decided whether she will hire someone to replace Bosley.

"After being here three weeks, I'm going through files and looking into reorganizing a little bit," Ryan said. "Whether I hire somebody or not, I'm still not sure."

LA smog proposal praised

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A local effort to clean up the notoriously filthy air blanketing the nation's second-largest city has won the endorsement of an environmentalist who said an example is being set that the rest of the world should follow.

Mayor Tom Bradley recently proposed the cleanup plan, which includes such far-reaching proposals as planting 2 million to 5 million trees throughout the city during the next five years and sharply curtailing driving.

The 63-point proposal represents the first urban effort to curb the worldwide greenhouse effect, said Jeremy Rifkin, director of the Foundation on Economic Trends.

"This landmark project, initiated in a major American metropolis, will focus on the urban areas throughout the world," Rifkin said. "It is vital for the future of the planet that we begin to sharply reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other gases that contribute to the greenhouse effect."

Scientists use the term greenhouse effect to describe a condition they say continued air pollution could cause by creating a roof of pollutants that will form over the Earth's atmosphere. That pollution layer in turn will trap heat in the atmosphere, causing the Earth's temperature to rise several degrees, which in turn could have a catastrophic effect on the Earth's environment.

Bradley, who joined Rifkin at a City Hall news conference Wednesday, said he intends to ask mayors of cities throughout the world to emulate efforts undertaken by Los Angeles to reduce its air pollution.

Five-car collision snarls PCH traffic

An Encino man faces felony charges of drunken driving for his alleged contribution to a five-car crash that tied up rush-hour traffic on Pacific Coast Highway late Wednesday, Huntington Beach police said today.

Kevin C. Gysler allegedly drove his Toyota into the rear of a Chevrolet Blazer in the westbound lanes near the Bolsa Chica bluffs about 5 p.m., Officer Brian Davidson said.

Gysler's car and the Blazer both crossed over the center divider after impact and into the eastbound lanes where they collided head-on with three vehicles heading in the opposite direction, Davidson said.

"Four of the five vehicles received major damage," Davidson said. "We were lucky that nobody was seriously hurt," Davison said.

The multiple collision slowed busy coastal traffic to a trickle for about two hours while the wreckage and debris were cleared from the road.

Davidson said it appeared that Gysler, 36, who was arrested by police, ran into the rear of the vehicle in front of him while both cars were in motion.

Superior Court expansion OK'd

By The Associated Press

Orange County supervisors approved a spending plan to add more judges to the backlogged Superior Court system and more support workers for the crowded Municipal Courts.

Under the spending plan approved Wednesday, the county's court system will receive a $13 million, 175-employee expansion over the next 18 months.

The Municipal and Superior courts will divide up to $3.8 million in improvements between now and June 30 and $8.5 million worth of improvements in fiscal year 1989-90.

Also approved was a $3,500-a-year bonus for each of the county's 101 judges — a benefit that will cost the county $707,000 over the next 18 months.

ing was "all right" because they were police officers.

Miller said when the gun when off "my heart went into my throat" but he didn't put two and two together because of the solid partition separating the driver from the passengers.

He told investigators the three men were drinking and grew more inebriated as the evening progressed.

None of the limo passengers could be reached for comment, but Van Devander reportedly told investigators what was reported as gunshots were actually exploding firecrackers thrown from the limo.

Misdemeanor charges of brandishing a firearm and discharging a weapon on a highway were filed Tuesday in Orange County Municipal Court in Santa Ana, Laz said.

Van Devander is scheduled to be arraigned Feb. 2 in Municipal Court in Santa Ana.

Operations at John Wayne Airport were not affected, said spokeswoman Kathleen Rutherford.

"The people at operations said everything was tied down tight. They did say there is not much general aviation activity," she said.

Winds at the airport were clocked at 25 mph, with gusts to 40 mph, Rutherford said.

Mike Martin of Southern California Edison Co. said power outages were reported throughout Orange County, but none along the Orange Coast.

About 25,000 county customers experienced some power loss during the night, from 30 seconds to several hours, Martin said.

The bulk of the trouble was reported in the central county area. About 2,000 customers there were still without power this morning, he said.

The Sheriff's Harbor Patrol reported northeast winds to 40 mph in Newport Harbor, but no trouble, said Lt. Dick Olson. "They're watching everything very closely," he said.

Neither did the Highway Patrol find any troubles beyond the typical commuter headaches, said Officer Keith Thornhill.

"We did have a report of a downed motorcyclist on the 5 freeway, but it turned out he had pulled off and set the bike down until the winds died," Thornhill said. "That's not unusual."

Local officials also reported few wind-related troubles, although numerous alarms were set off.

"We've had nothing serious here, other than it kept everyone awake," said Lt. John Foster of the Huntington Beach Police Department.

The wind sent a falling tree crashing into a Chicago Pizza delivery truck at the corner of Barranca Parkway and East Yale Loop in Irvine. The truck was not seriously damaged and the driver was not injured.

Clear skies and decreasing winds were forecast for Friday throughout the region, according to the National Weather Service.

Wedge, located at the end of the Peninsula, and officers have increased enforcement there, Blitch said. Hundreds of people were arrested at the Wedge last summer, he said.

"The Wedge, we've put a lot of attention on because of the complaints," he said.

Commissioners Clyda Brenner and Virginia Herberts, who voted for the homeowners' request, said they were in favor of at least giving the earlier closure a try.

But other commissioners admitted to enjoying the beach at night themselves and said the beaches are a fairly safe, concentrated area where young people can congregate.

"It's not all tourists using the beaches," said Commissioner Jo Vandervort, who voted against the proposal along with Commissioners Taylor Grant, John Conwiser and Diana Springer.

"We need to enforce, it sounds like, the rules that exist," Grant said.

Commissioner A.Z. Taft abstained.

No one wins lotto jackpot

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State lottery officials said today that Saturday's lotto prize pool could reach $10 million to $12 million because nobody won the mid-week $5.6 million jackpot.

Six tickets bore five winning numbers plus the bonus to earn their holders $253,319 each, lottery officials said. The cities where those tickets were sold weren't immediately disclosed.

Another 283 tickets with five correct numbers are worth $2,767 each. Owners of 16,954 tickets with four numbers will receive $41 each. An automatic $5 goes to the holders of 295,126 tickets with three numbers.

The winning numbers picked Wednesday night in the twice-weekly "Lotto 6-49" game were: 5, 8, 12, 24, 47, 23 and the bonus number, 48.

The numbers were chosen by lotto machine during a television broadcast originating in Sacramento.

Sales for Wednesday night's drawing totaled $14.238 million.

'BALBOA ISLAND' SOAP IS TELEVISED...

continuing cast of characters.

"This is an act of love," Conrad said. "Everyone is volunteering their time, but we do keep it rather professional. We have a gaffer, lighting person, soundman, cameraman; the whole crew goes out."

All the actors have auditioned and most are theater majors from local colleges.

Conrad said the actors sometimes are required to learn 15 pages of script because the show is taped only once a month over a two-day period.

And unlike prime time soaps, you won't find seemingly nude lovers cavorting inside a steamy shower.

"Because of public access regulations this is fairly clean with no hot and heavy bedroom scenes. Of course, it is no 'Highway to Heaven' either," he said, referring to the syrupy television show about an angel who does good deeds.

Though some scenes are shot in the studios of Copley Colony Cable in Costa Mesa or Rogers Cable Television in Huntington Beach, the crew often travels around Orange County capturing familiar sights.

Portions of the show have been taped in a Rusty Pelican restaurant, the Westin South Coast Plaza hotel, local city halls and along the Balboa and Newport piers.

"This is a great learning experience for directors and actors who want to move up to Hollywood," Conrad said. "They are able to work in a somewhat professional atmosphere."

People like Christy Clarke, now a regular on "Days of Our Lives," started in "Balboa" and Conrad boasts that the show has been recognized in the national publication Soap Opera Digest.

Conrad said the cast often changes from month to month and that each show is not necessarily a cliffhanger to be continued.

"We probably have a cast of 1,000," he said, laughing. "We usually have eight principal characters and I'll bring in groups of extras."

Unlike Hollywood, Conrad treats the extras like stars, giving them on-screen credits.

"It's true we have no budget and we work long days, but we all have a lot of fun doing it," he said.

Cable TV firms train would-be producers

Bryan Walulik says it only takes six hours of instruction to become a local TV producer.

Walulik, access coordinator for Rogers Cable Television, said the free workshop is conducted at the Huntington Beach public access studio at Seacliff Village for local residents.

"The process starts in the workshop where we teach how to use our ½-inch video equipment and how to edit a program on the air," he said. "The class includes hands-on work and understanding the regulations. Once you take the class and I can see your video literate, you do the first production in the studio."

The show's material then can be shot on location or in the studio, Walulik said. The equipment is available at no cost. The show is aired on channel 30.

"If there was money involved it wouldn't be public access," he said. "There is no advertising, no slander, no game show give-a-ways and no obscene materials. As long as the people abide by those rules, they can do whatever they want."

The shows range from five minutes to one hour. The videos air between 3:30 and 5 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The better the show's quality, the more air time it receives, he said.

Walulik said about 10 people usually show up for the workshops. Five people usually return to do a show, and about two stay as steady producers.

"It's a hobby," he said. "Some people ride horses and some people make videos."

The Oscar Mayer Co. has resurrected a once-popular idea, and quite frankly, it's a wiener.

The well-known foods company has brought back the Wienermobile — a converted Chevrolet van shaped like a huge Oscar Mayer frankfurter — used extensively from 1936 into the 1960s as a promotional tool.

Wednesday, the Wienermobile rolled in for a stop at the Newport Beach Police Department after three police dispatchers wrote the company, asking for Wiener Whistles — another popular promotional item.

As soon as I heard the Wienermobile was coming to town, I high-tailed it over to the police station. As a former proud owner of a Wiener Whistle and consumer of many pounds of the franks, I knew I couldn't miss seeing the famed wiener-on-wheels.

As I rounded the corner of Jamboree Road and Santa Barbara Drive, a gleaming, giant orange and yellow wiener loomed into view.

A smiling young couple, looking as all-American as — what else? — hot dogs and apple pie, welcomed me as I approached the Wienermobile.

"Hi, I'm Greg Zacurri," the blond young man said exuberantly. A delicate young woman chimed in, "I'm Leslie Grove."

Zacurri and Grove are "hotdoggers," official drivers of the Wienermobile, experts on the vehicle's history and general goodwill ambassadors for Oscar Mayer. "We're ambassadors of fun," said Grove.

Zacurri, 24, and Grove, 22, were selected for the one-year hotdogger position from a nationwide pool of college students. Oscar Mayer officials interviewed dozens of outgoing, friendly communications majors at various universities and chose Zacurri, a Costa Mesa native and student at Cal State Fullerton, and Grove, a student at the University of Texas, Austin, to be the Western-region hotdoggers.

This was all in preparation for a renewed Wienermobile campaign, launched seven months ago.

Oscar Mayer's Wienermobile, with the character "Little Oscar" distributing hot dog-shaped whistles, toured the nation for several decades and became a memorable part of many baby boomers' childhoods. However, with the advancement of technology in the 1970s came an emphasis on television promotions, and Oscar Mayer officials decided the Wienermobile couldn't cut the mustard.

While many miss Little Oscar, the loss of the Wienermobile was the coldest cut of all. So, after a nostalgia tour in 1986 in honor of the Wienermobile's 50th anniversary and another nationwide summer tour in 1987 proved so successful, Oscar Mayer ordered a fleet of six new Wienermobiles, locating one in each region of the country.

The Western-region vehicle travels 11 states for parades, sporting events, school events, business grand openings, "anything and everything," Zacurri said. Those interested in having the Wienermobile at an event cansimply contact the Oscar Mayer Co.

Susie Mays (left), Tina Vanderhorst and Peri Ropke warm up to the Wienermobile.

"It's an '88 wiener," said Zacurri of the vehicle that has a license plate that reads "BIG BUN." The Wienermobile is equipped with a microwave, refrigerator, cellular phone, seating for six or more people and a sound system from which filtered the well-loved tune, "I wish I were an Oscar Mayer wiener." A microphone can also be hooked up to the system if someone wants to sing along.

The catchy and nostalgic tune quickly drew Newport Beach Police dispatchers Tina Vanderhorst, Susie Mays and Peri Ropke into singing along.

Over Christmas, Vanderhorst spotted the Wienermobile in its local parking place at the Skate Ranch off Main Street in Santa Ana. When she mentioned what she saw to her co-workers, she touched off a long session of reminiscing about childhoods filled with hot dogs and Wiener Whistles.

"We were being nostalgic," said Mays. "Here we were, a couple of 30-year-olds sitting around, singing the (Wiener) song."

Ropke subsequently wrote to the Oscar Mayer Co., "asking for whistles for a bunch of big kids," she said. Her letter delighted company officials, who sent the Wienermobile to deliver the whistles.

The usually mature and respected adults of the Police Department and I acted like excited, giggly kids as we inspected the meaty-looking mobile and tooted our whistles.

"Looks like an unsafe vehicle to me," joked motorcycle officer Ed Walsh.

The hotdoggers said they often get pulled over by curious police officers while driving the Wienermobile, which by the way, gets 13 miles to the gallon.

Despite Walsh's skepticism about the vehicle's safety, the dispatchers and I accepted Zacurri's offer for a quick spin in the Wienermobile. As the humungous wiener rolled around Newport Center, Zacurri honked the horn and waved at smiling onlookers, while Vanderhorst and Ropke stuck their heads out the sunroof.

As the ride ended, I felt like I do when I come to the last bite of a hot dog — satisfied, but a bit disappointed. And although I was also slightly taken aback by the new Wiener Whistles, which are shaped like a whole pack of wieners rather than the ol' single-frank model, I nonetheless enjoyed reliving the fun.

I even considered quitting journalism to become a full-time hotdogger, a job I know I'd relish as much as Zacurri and Grove clearly do. Interviews for next year's hotdoggers will be in February at Cal State Fullerton, they tell me.

And being 4-foot-10, I'd even make a great "Little Oscar"...

No takers?

It may not look like it, but the new car-pool lane on the northbound San Diego Freeway in Westminster and Seal Beach was opened Wednesday. The special lane was also closed briefly, as this photograph shows, on its inaugural day because of a car accident. The CHP estimated about 2,000 motorists used it between 8 and 10 a.m. Wednesday.

HB man who saved teen's life invited to inauguration

By The Associated Press

A Huntington Beach allergist who saved the life of a 16-year-old girl during a campaign rally for George Bush last October has been invited to the President-elect's inauguration.

Dr. Max Benis inserted a 5-inch-long plastic airway tube into the throat of Christine Rybold, a member of the Corona High School color guard, who collapsed during the Oct. 14 rally in Cerritos.

Afterward, Benis recalled, "Mr. Bush said, 'If I get elected, I want you as my guest at the inauguration.'"

The 62-year-old physician said in a recent interview that he was standing about 10 feet from the stage when Miss Rybold collapsed and fell backward off the platform.

Bush continued to speak, and Benis was among those who rushed forward to help.

Benis said the girl had stopped breathing and was starting to turn blue. He looked into her throat and saw it was blocked with mucus.

"She had a bronchial infection which had been causing mucus to build up," Benis said. "She had held back from coughing because she was just a few feet from where Mr. Bush was speaking."

The doctor says he carries the airway tube on his key chain for just such an emergency. He inserted the tube in her throat, and the girl immediately began breathing through the cleared airway.

Benis' invitation to Bush's swearing-in ceremony, as well as separate invitations to two inaugural balls and other events, arrived in the mail last week.

The doctor said he will take his 16-year-old daughter Allison to Washington for the Jan. 20 ceremony.

"I've got my tux and top hat ready to go," Benis said.

Woman hit by truck had premonition of accident

By LESLIE EARNEST

A Roto-Rooter truck struck two women walking in a Laguna Beach crosswalk Wednesday and dragged one of them about 20 feet before the driver realized the women had been hit, Laguna Beach police reported.

Judy Friesen, a 45-year-old Laguna Beach resident, was in stable condition at Mission Hospital in Mission Viejo, where she was being treated for cuts, bruises and a possible concussion. Amy Manfreni, a Laguna Niguel resident, was treated for minor injuries at the hospital and released.

"I'm just real sore," Friesen said in an interview today. "I feel like I got hit by a truck."

The driver of the truck, 34-year-old Jerry Whittaker of Dana Point, was going west on Park Drive and preparing to turn left on Glenneyre Street when he hit the women, Officer John O'Connor said.

"He just did not see them," O'Connor said. "Partly, I think, because of the shadow of the building, and the light was in his eyes."

Manfreni was struck by the right front side of the truck, O'Conner said. The driver was apparently watching the woman fall backward when he hit Friesen. Firefighters were called to rescue Friesen, pinned under the truck after being dragged about 20 feet.

"I was aware of being hit and I remember thinking, 'Am I going to live through this?'" said Friesen, director of psychology at Ahimsa Care Center on Glenneyre. "I feel so thankful to be alive."

Friesen said she and Manfreni walked through the same crosswalk shortly before on their way to lunch and talked about media accounts of people being hit in crosswalks.

"They both had a premonition," O'Connor said. "That's the first thing they both told me, 'We were just talking about getting hit in a crosswalk.'"

Former partner a suspect in Mickey Thompson slaying

Los Angeles Sheriff's detectives examined the billing records of a Southern California cellular telephone customer called by a onetime bitter rival of slain auto racing promoter Mickey Thompson, according to a published report.

Calls placed to Los Angeles by Thompson rival Michael Goodwin from a yacht off the South Carolina coast led authorities to obtain a search warrant for telephone company records, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported in Thursday's editions.

Thompson, 59, and his wife Trudy, 41, were fatally gunned down March 16 outside their suburban home in what authorities termed a professional assassination.

Thompson's sister, Collene Campbell of San Juan Capistrano, is now running her brother's business. Campbell, whose own son was slain and tossed from an airplane over the ocean near Catalina Island, is a victims' rights activist.

In an affidavit accompanying a Dec. 9 search warrant request, sheriff's investigator Cheryl Lyons wrote that she believed "the name of the subscriber ... will assist in obtaining further evidence of persons involved in the death of the Thompsons."

Goodwin's attorney, Ron Coulombe, couldn't be reached for comment.

Goodwin also could not be contacted. There was no telephone directory listing for Goodwin, who reportedly lives in Laguna Beach.

Thompson, who was awarded $514,388 in a 1986 lawsuit stemming from the bitter breakup of his partnership with Goodwin, told friends he received numerous death threats before he was slain.

Los Angeles Coliseum General Manager Joel Ralph told investigators he heard from a reliable source that Goodwin allegedly issued a contract for Thompson's slaying, the affidavit said.

And Lee Haslam, a construction employee, said Goodwin allegedly threatened to kill Thompson if he hurt Goodwin financially, the documents said.

Sheriff's investigators served another search warrant on phone records at Goodwins' Laguna Beach home last summer.

Subsequent investigation revealed Goodwin bought a 57-foot yacht and installed a telephone aboard while staying in South Carolina last summer.

The telephone call that prompted the latest search warrant came July 7, the affidavit said.

Marina employees in South Carolina working on the Goodwin boat were ordered ashore whenever the telephone rang on the boat, said Bob Utusy, manager of Dauby Marine.

Child takes gun to class

NEW YORK (AP) — A kindergarten student brought a loaded automatic handgun to his school and handed it barrel-first to his teacher, who was surprised to find it wasn't a toy, authorities said.

The 5-year-old boy, whose name was not released, told school authorities that "an unknown man put the gun in his pocket on the way to school," said police spokeswoman Sgt. Diane Kubler.

Police contacted the boy's mother and were trying to determine where the gun came from.

Gang task force urges war against urban terrorists

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. George Deukmejian's task force on gangs Wednesday issued 100 recommendations, including adult trials for 16- and 17-year-olds accused of violence or drug dealing.

The task force also suggested using vacant military bases as prisons to create more space for gang members, using the California National Guard to patrol the Mexican border for drug smugglers and imposing mandatory life terms on people committing assaults with machine guns.

"Today's gangs are urban terrorists," Robert Philibosian, chairman of the State Task Force on Gangs and Drugs, said at a Capitol news conference. "Heavily armed and more violent than before, they are quick to use terror and intimidation to seize and protect their share of the lucrative 'crack' cocaine market as well as markets for other drugs."

Deukmejian in 1986 named a task force on youth gang violence, which made recommendations that included tougher sentences for gang-related activities. The governor last summer asked the task force to reconvene to study the expansion of gang and drug activities because of the recent rise in availability of "crack" cocaine.

Philibosian, a former Los Angeles County district attorney, said the task force held five hearings and heard from dozens of witnesses, including many gang members.

"What we found was an alarming situation," he said. "We found it, unfortunately, to be worse than our expectations."

He said most gang members are under 18 and leaders are recruiting children as young as 9 or 10 as foot soldiers to deliver drugs and act as lookouts.

"The criminal justice system has been far too lenient with youthful offenders," he said. "The gangs know that."

Among the recommendations:

- Mandate life imprisonment for persons convicted of assault with a machine gun.

Robert Philibosian

- Use vacant military bases as state prisons or county jails to house nonviolent offenders and free up prison space for violent gang members and drug dealers.
- Use the California National Guard in surveillance of the California-Mexico border to help local law enforcement catch drug smugglers.
- Require public schools to teach gang and drug prevention programs.
- Train school teachers and administrators about gangs and drugs.

Armenian quake survivors discovered under building

MOSCOW (AP) — Six people who survived on canned vegetables, fruit and pickles for 35 days after the Armenian earthquake were pulled alive from the basement of a collapsed apartment building in Leninakan, Tass reported today.

The survivors were rescued Wednesday, Tass said, the 35th day after the Dec. 7 earthquake that killed an estimated 25,000 people in northwest Armenia. Rescuers last pulled a person alive from the wreckage Dec. 26, Tass said.

The six men were found under the rubble in the basement of a nine-story apartment building which had collapsed on them, the official Soviet news agency, said in a report from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia.

They survived because there was plenty of canned food stored in the basement, Tass said. All are hospitalized in Yerevan but none are in danger, doctors told the news agency.

Tass did not say how the six men were found or who rescued them. Officials had ended the search for survivors weeks ago, saying it was necessary to clear away the rubble to prevent disease spreading from decayed bodies.

Authorities have been demolishing buildings that could not be rebuilt after the earthquake.

One of the six survivors, Aikaz Akopyan, had medical training and administered massages to the others to relieve the pain of their injuries, Tass said. The first reports said one of the men, Karin Sarkissyan, had a broken arm, but there were no immediate details on their others' injuries.

The quake leveled much of Leninakan, Armenia's second-largest city 10 miles east of the Turkish border and left thousands homeless.

Once home to more than 280,000 people, Leninakan today has only 100,000 inhabitants, thousands of whom now live in tents. Many residents have been evacuated.

Fleets of 737s checked for faulty fire alarm warning

LONDON (AP) — British airlines today checked engines and fire alarm wiring on aircraft similar to the crashed Boeing 737 as officials tried to determine why the jet's starboard engine was shut down when its port engine was ablaze.

The Civil Aviation Authority's order Wednesday prompted experts to speculate that a faulty alarm system misled the crew of the British Midland Airways jet into shutting down the wrong engine, causing the crash Sunday that killed 44 people and injured 82.

"It points to a possibly spurious warning being given to the flight deck," said Freddie Yetman, technical secretary of the British Airline Pilots Association.

In the United States, the Federal Aviation Administration late Wednesday similarly gave U.S. airlines three days to check cross-wiring on 300 Boeing 737s. "We think this is not a very likely scenario, but it's a check that can be done very, very quickly without disrupting service," said FAA spokesman John Leyden.

"We certainly believe it's a prudent measure to go out and check to make sure there's nothing wrong with the fleet," Boeing spokesman Craig Martin said in Seattle. "But certainly this precautionary measure does not imply there has been any cause identified" for the crash.

British investigators said the starboard engine and its warning systems had to be examined minutely and detailed evidence taken from the pilot and co-pilot before the reason for the shutdown would be known.

Pilot Kevin Hunt, who broke his back in the crash, was questioned for 45 minutes by investigators on Wednesday as U.S. media and Britain's tabloids blamed him for shutting down the wrong engine on Flight BD92, which was en route from London to Belfast.

The new Boeing 737-400, flying only on the fire-damaged port engine, crashed on the embankment of England's main north-south M1 highway about a half-mile short of East Midlands Airport, where it was trying to make an emergency landing.

LA mayor will try for a fifth term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley embarked on his campaign to win an unprecedented fifth term when he was the first to file in a field unexpectedly cleared by the withdrawal last week of his strongest potential challenger.

The 71-year-old Democrat was first in line outside the city clerk's office when it opened Wednesday, the first day candidates could declare their intent to run in the April 11 election.

Forty other people filed for various offices, in the first of four days for politicians to declare their intent to run for city office. City Attorney James Hahn and City Controller Rick Tuttle both filed for re-election for races that drew no challengers by the day's end.

Eight City Council members who represent odd-numbered districts have said they will seek re-election and five of them filed Wednesday. Most of them face opposition.

Winter storms have not reduced drought danger

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Despite storms that are greening California and draping the peaks with snow, officials say winter has yet to drop enough water to avert a third consecutive drought year.

Reservoirs that have shrunk nearly one-fourth in volume in a year have yet to receive much runoff from rain or melting snow, Bill Helms, spokesman for the state Department of Water Resources, said in a recent telephone interview.

"We haven't received hardly any (reservoir) storage yet and that's the key to this whole thing," Helms said.

The 153 major reservoirs that bank most of California's water contained 20.1 million acre-feet a year ago, but have dropped to 15.2 million acre-feet — 68 percent of average and only 40 percent full, Helms said.

Wednesday, a lively storm swelled north coast rivers, including the Smith River in Del Norte County which crested less than two feet below the 30-foot flood stage.

But Smith River, which empties into the ocean between Crescent City and the Oregon border, adds little to the state's water supply, and little runoff reached streams filling Shasta or Trinity reservoirs.

Helms said little water is filling the state's reservoirs because dry soils have soaked up much of the rain and cold weather has kept snow from melting.

Precipitation so far has been normal to above-normal in Northern California, which supplies a majority of the state's water, but officials caution that the rainy season is less than halfway over and still could change dramatically.

"We don't have enough snow up there right now to meet the needs," said Gary Hester, a Water Resources Department forecaster. "If you began melting that snow today, we'd fall short."

Mexican oil workers returning to their jobs after union protest

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Oil refinery workers nationwide began returning to work Wednesday, ending a series of strikes and rallies to protest the bloody arrest of their union bosses on weapons and corruption charges.

The government continued its crackdown on Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, leader of the powerful Oil Workers Union. He and about 50 associates have been arrested on fraud, weapons and tax evasion charges, said a spokesman for the attorney general's office, Fernando Arias Perez.

Meanwhile, authorities said two of Hernandez Galicia's bodyguards — who were arrested in the sweep — reported that their boss ordered the 1983 slaying of a mayor who headed a union local, officials said.

The attorney general's office said in a statement late Wednesday that Hernandez Galicia told investigators he purchased scores of weapons in the United States.

Hernandez Galicia told investigators the weapons were brought into Mexico by his "good friend," Jose Cruz Contreras, a former mayor of Reynosa, the statement said. Cruz Contreras gave the weapons to Hernandez Galicia on Dec. 10, it said.

Reynosa, which has a refinery and petrochemicals plant, lies across the U.S. border from McAllen, Texas. It is a stronghold of oil workers allied with Hernandez Galicia.

Strikes by refinery workers broke out Tuesday night after the arrests began. The union corruption investigation is widely seen as a challenge to the union by the new administration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Guards were posted at gas stations and refineries and many motorists, fearing shortages, formed 30- and 40-car lines to fill up their tanks at stations in Mexico City, Tampico and other cities.

But petroleum workers began showing up at their jobs later Wednesday after a union official called for the strikes to end.

Israeli settlers demanding end to West Bank uprising

By The Associated Press

BRAKHA, Occupied West Bank — Angry settlers shouted down Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today and demanded that the government do more to quell the Palestinian uprising. In the West Bank town of Tulkarem, troops shot and killed an 11-year-old Palestinian during clashes following the funeral of a Palestinian teen-ager who died of wounds suffered earlier, Arab doctors said. The army confirmed both deaths. Shamir, who spoke at a mourning ceremony in Brakha for a slain Jewish settler, was confronted by a crowd of 200 settlers. They screamed demands that he put an end to attacks on Jews by Palestinians and chanted: "You are doing nothing."

Soviet visitors will receive AIDS test

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union says it will try to maintain its minuscule AIDS rate by screening foreigners for the deadly virus, even forcing mandatory tests of some visitors who cannot provide proper medical proof. Foreigners who want to stay in the country for three months or more will be subject to testing for the disease beginning next month, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said. "Here, there cannot be any discrimination," Gerasimov said. "We conduct tests of our own people and besides, statistics show the Soviet Union is sharply lagging behind other countries, say the United States, in the number of ill people (with AIDS). And we just don't want to catch up." The Soviets once regarded AIDS as a disease spawned by Western sexual depravity and drug use. One Soviet newspaper's account had even claimed the virus was the result of a U.S. biological warfare experiment gone haywire.

Moslem guerrillas repel attack in Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon — Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem guerrillas outnumbered 2-to-1 drove back a three-pronged assault on their south Lebanon mountain stronghold today in fierce fighting with pro-Syrian rivals. Police said a 1,000-strong force from the mainstream Shiite Amal militia lost five fighters killed and seven wounded in the failed attack against fundamentalist Hezbollah members entrenched in Jbaa village southeast of Sidon.

Allies back U.S. action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, Britain and France joined in vetoing a Security Council resolution that "deplored" the U.S. Navy's downing of two Libyan military jets over the Mediterranean on Jan. 4.

Just hours before Wednesday's vote, U.S. officials said the Navy had canceled missile tests in the Mediterreanan planned for next week that Libyan Ambassador Ali A. Treiki had called provocative. The officials gave no hint the cancellation was linked with the resolution.

Libyan officials have claimed for weeks that the United States is preparing public opinion for a U.S. attack on a factory near Tripoli that Washington claims has been built for the manufacture of poison gas.

U.S. officials said the cancellation of the Jan. 16-17 missile tests is intended to reduce tensions between the United States and Libya, which Washington accuses of fostering international terrorism.

Canada joined the allies Wednesday in voting against the resolution.

The vote was 9-4, with the Soviet Union, China, Ethiopia, Colombia, Malaysia, Algeria, Nepal, Senegal and Yugoslavia voting in favor. Finland and Brazil abstained.

OBITUARIES

Services held for Mabel Smith, 88

A memorial service was held Tuesday for Mabel M. Smith, longtime Newport Beach resident, who died Jan. 5 in her Balboa Island home. She was 88.

Born Nov. 2, 1900, in Boulder, Mont., Smith married Hal Will Smith of Whittier, and the couple moved to Balboa Island in 1925.

In those days, the island was barely more than a sandbar. Residential streets were unpaved and residents traveled to and from the island on the ferry or their own boats.

Smith worked with her husband in his real estate office on the island from 1927 until their retirement in 1955.

They were among the pioneers who worked to shape the residential and family character of the island community.

As the first islanders many prospective residents met, the couple became "first and special friends" to many, easing their transition into the new community, said Michael Smith, a son.

Smith also was a member of the Newport Beach Ebell Club and Newport Harbor Panhellenic.

She is survived by two son, Michael and Hal Smith Jr., both of Costa Mesa; a sister, Eleanor Lyman of Balboa Island; five grandchildren; and a great-granddaughter.

Services were held Tuesday at Community Church in Corona del Mar. The family requests that donations be made to the American Cancer Society.

NATION

Reagan says farewell, asks followers to support Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's handing the nation over to the "good hands" of George Bush, advising his successor to keep a wary eye on the Soviet Union and warning against "an erosion of the American spirit."

In a folksy Oval Office speech bidding adieu to the nation, Reagan boasted Wednesday of his accomplishments and ignored many of the difficulties that arose during his eight years in office.

"We meant to change a nation, and instead, we changed a world," he said.

Yet Reagan also admitted that his self-styled conservative revolution left many things unchanged, and he asked his followers to stick around and help his successor.

"If we're to finish the job, Reagan's Regiments will have to become the Bush Brigades," Reagan said. "Soon he'll be the chief, and he'll need you every bit as much as I did."

The president said he was leaving office with the central message of his political life strengthened — that an unfettered economy, a strong defense and a free citizenry forged a nation "respected in the world, and looked to for leadership."

"Democracy, the profoundly good, is also the profoundly productive," he said. "Because we are a great nation, our challenges seem complex. It will always be this way. But as long as we remember our first principles and believe in ourselves, the future will always be ours."

The president and his wife Nancy were scheduled to receive a farewell accolade today from the Department of Defense, which arranged an elaborate ceremony featuring fly-overs and military bands at Andrews Air Force Base. Every four-star general and admiral in uniform was invited to attend.

Reagan addressed the nation from his Oval Office desk, his left hand in a splint and swathed in bandages from weekend surgery on a finger.

Speaking nine days before his retirement to California, Reagan called his departure "sweet sorrow." But he also said he looks forward to a renewal of personal freedom, contending a modern president must live "somewhat apart. You spend a lot of time going by too fast in a car someone else is driving."

Another regret, Reagan said, was his failure to tame the nation's deficit. But that merited only a paragraph in the roughly 21-minute speech. "I've been talking a great deal about that lately, but tonight isn't for arguments and I'm going to hold my tongue," he said.

The national debt almost tripled in Reagan's term and he ran up the biggest budget deficits in history. His final budget proposal, released earlier this week for the 1990 fiscal year starting Oct. 1, projects a deficit of $92.5 billion.

The president's remarks were void of any mention of such national tragedies as the barracks bombing that killed more than 241 servicemen in Beirut, the Challenger disaster or the Americans held hostage in the Middle East.

There was no word of the trade deficits or the scandals that tarnished his administration, such as the sale of arms to Iran and use of the proceeds to fund the Contra rebels in Nicaragua illegally. The Contras, subject of so many Reagan speeches, were not mentioned at all.

As triumphs Reagan listed the nation's economic recovery, its low unemployment and inflation, and its bolstered military.

The president who warned early in his tenure of the "evil empire" in the Soviet Union took credit at the end of his presidency for forging "a satisfying new closeness" with the Soviets. He said the new relationship helped bring about the first U.S.-Soviet treaty to eliminate an entire class of nuclear weapons, as well as "a new peacefulness around the globe."

Derwinski endangered spy's life, paper says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edward Derwinski, President-elect Bush's choice to run the new Department of Veterans Affairs, endangered the life of a South Korean spy with a leak to a Korean official about the man's planned defection, it was reported today.

Unpublished records of a 1983 congressional hearing show that Derwinski admitted giving the possibly life-threatening confidential information to a Korean diplomat in a 1977 telephone call, the Los Angeles Times reported. He had publicly denied doing so before.

The incident came during the so-called Koreagate scandal involving alleged covert payments to congressional figures by the South Korean government in exchange for favorable U.S. treatment.

The Korean intelligence agent, Sohn Ho Young, wanted to defect because of an impending transfer from New York City to Korea and U.S. officials wanted to interview him regarding his government's involvement in the alleged bribe scheme.

"This guy, the Korean defector, would have been severely punished or killed, as well as his family," an unnamed senior law enforcement official told the newspaper. The official added that Sohn was spared when FBI agents arrived at his New Jersey home and escorted him to safety only a half hour before Korean CIA agents showed up.

Derwinski, a Republican from Chicago who served 24 years in Congress, publicly denied 1978 allegations that he leaked the information and refused to testify in the matter before a federal grand jury.

Reagan leadership cited for restoring pride, strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department staged an unusual "farewell review" for President Reagan today, and the military services were told to absorb the undisclosed cost of the pageant.

"Your vision of a strong America assuming its rightful role on the world stage has produced lasting results. Our nation has moved from self-doubt to self-confidence," Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci told Reagan in a ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland.

Much of the fanfare was canceled because of a steady rain that fell throughout the morning, and the ceremonies were held inside a 14-story tall hangar designed to hold the two new Boeing 747 airliners being delivered later this year for presidential use.

First lady Nancy Reagan canceled plans to attend the salute because she has "a touch of laryngitis," said a spokeswoman, Wendy Toler. "She just isn't feeling well and decided not to got out in the cold," Toler said.

Inside the hanger were the Air Force's new B-1B bomber, as well as jet fighters and helicopters, many of them purchased during Reagan's trillion-dollar military buildup.

"Mr. President, the pride people feel today — certainly the pride felt by the men and women in our armed forces — is a direct result of the leadership you have provided as commander-in-chief," Carlucci said.

"You have restored not only our national strength — but also our sense of purpose," he said.

"Your vigorous defense of our nation's ideals and institutions has reminded all Americans that freedom is a concept worth defending — and its defense is a sacred duty each and every member of the armed forces has freely undertaken."

Carlucci's predecessor, Caspar Weinberger, also was on hand and greeted Reagan as he sat down to watch a military review that included the Army's Colonial Fife and Drum Corps dressed in Revolutionary War garb.

Among the outdoor events canceled were fly-overs of 17 aircraft from the four armed services plus the Coast Guard and the static display of 19 different aircraft and weapons on the ground.

The Marine Band provided music and the Joint Service Honor Guard marched before the president. Every four-star general and admiral was invited to attend, along with about 1,400 VIPs and government officials.

Watkins, Bennett named to fill last top-level posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush is rounding out the top ranks of his administration by nominating retired Adm. James D. Watkins as energy secretary and former Education Secretary William J. Bennett as drug czar, transition and congressional sources said today.

Bush was to announce the selections at a news conference a few hours before holding a late-afternoon dress-rehearsal meeting of his Cabinet at Blair House, the historic residence across from the White House.

Sources who declined to be identified confirmed that Watkins, formerly the Navy's top uniformed officer, would be tapped for the energy post and that Bennett would get the job of coordinating the government's war on drugs.

CBS News first reported on Watkins' selection and The New York Times had disclosed Bennett's new role.

Bush had a hard time filling both jobs, the last top-level posts that were vacant. Aides suggested that he vacillated on the energy post between an oil-state candidate and one with experience in nuclear energy.

Top court examines death penalty of retarded killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is examining the constitutionality of imposing capital punishment on a convicted murderer described as having the mind of a child.

The justices heard 60 minutes of arguments Wednesday on whether they will allow the execution of Johnny Paul Penry, 32, a convicted rapist-murderer sentenced to die in Texas.

Penry is said to have the mental capacity of a 7-year-old.

Assistant Attorney General Charles A. Palmer of Texas argued that executing Penry would not violate the Constitution's ban against cruel and inhuman punishment.

"He knew what he was doing," Palmer said. Penry raped Pamela Moseley Carpenter on Oct. 15, 1979, in Livingston, Texas, then stabbed her to death. She was 22.

Curtis C. Mason, a lawyer representing Penry, spent little time arguing that all retarded murderers should be spared. Instead, Mason challenged the Texas death penalty law on narrower grounds.

Catering to obese child is a form of child abuse

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I comment on the letter from the mother of the 11-year-old obese child with the rash between her thighs? She was furious with the doctor's nurse who said, "The trouble with this child is that she is too fat."

Both my mother and my sister were grossly obese. Mom catered to her because "Sis" could never run or play like other children. Kids can be cruel, so Mom overcompensated.

Sis is now a very unpleasant adult. In the last two years she has broken three chairs to my dinette set. We've had many arguments because she sneaks food from my cupboards and eats out of the pots on the stove.

Parents who stuff their children so they grow up so fat that they can't live normal lives should be charged with cruelty; they face high blood pressure and early death, the difficulty of buying clothes and shoes, fitting into desks at schools, theater seats and so on. — OHIO SISTER

Dear Ohio: I agree with you although many readers did not; they were mothers of overweight children.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We live in an automobile-dominated world. Frightening the hell out of the driver won't help.

You see them every day, up-tight people hunched up with the grasp that the instructor taught them. Good drivers should be relaxed yet alert, ready for an unexpected move by another driver.

Please remember that driving is not a social occasion. When you drive, shut up. And shut up the children, your friends and the dog. Big packages belong in the trunk, don't talk on the phone or try to drink a cup of coffee. With common sense, you'll get from here to there alive. Sign me — 40,000 MILES WITHOUT AN ACCIDENT (And mostly on the Dan Ryan Expressway — Chicago)

DEAR DAN: I wish everyone on the Dan Ryan Expressway drove like you. Ditto for the San Diego Freeway and the New Jersey Turnpike. Thanks for the wise counsel.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A stranger approached me at the supermarket today and said, "Triplets! How can you stand it?" and then walked off.

Every time I go out with my three well-behaved children someone makes an uncalled-for comment such as, "My God, I sure feel sorry for you," or "You have my sympathy, dear." It burns me up.

How should I respond to these insensitive, rock-headed fools? I need to express my outrage, but I don't want to upset my darling youngsters. — SANDRA H. in La Grange, Ky.

Dear Sandra: The best response is a broad smile and a positive comment such as "These are wonderful children. We feel blessed."

She sniffing at Japan's answer to stress at work

ERMA BOMBECK

If there is a designer disease of the '80s, it's "stress."

You can dress it up or down. You can take it with you to the club. You can suffer from it and still play tennis. The higher your income and the more powerful you become, the worse it gets.

You won't hear any of the women on "Roseanne" sitting around a bar saying, "I'm stressed out." No siree.

Well, the Japanese have been experimenting with ways to combat pressure in the marketplace, and they've come up with a theory: Fragrant aromas reduce stress. Here's the plan. They're going to pump various scents into the air conditioning system of office buildings and gas 'em into mellow.

According to their research, the fresh smell of a forest is supposed to help workers deal with being uptight, while lemon and jasmine are said to have a rejuvenating effect, helping workers overcome post-lunch drowsiness.

My first reaction is one of suspicion. A few years ago, for whatever reason, they came out with an "auto perfume." Remember? For an extra buck, the folks at your local carwash squirted a scent on the carpet of your car. There were lemon-lime, cinnamon, floral, orange blossom, northern pine, strawberry, cherry, and even one called "new car" to choose from. The latter was a leather scent, but someone said it smelled more like a new car and it had more market appeal.

Anyway, I'm here to tell you the smell my husband had spritzed in my car didn't relieve my stress. It created it. I don't know what scent it was. My guess was a cross between an overripe cantaloupe and a possum in heat. I drove with the windows down for two solid weeks, and whenever I thought he forgot about it, I reminded him.

That is not to say there might not be some merit to the Japanese theory. I'm not ready to admit smells can bring down your hypertension, but they can certainly make you have a better, more relaxed outlook on things. It's no great secret that if you're trying to sell your house, just set a bowl of yeast bread under a towel and a prospective buyer will send for the kids. And if you want your husband to be in a good mood when he opens the door at night, have an onion in the oven.

I guess we can look for all kinds of spinoffs on the market to reduce stress. Look for a new cologne for men called "Faithful Husband" or a car perfume called "Paid in Full," or even a home deodorizer called "No Termites."

It'll be interesting to know if the Japanese experiment works. Will the fresh smell of the great outdoors relieve stress? Or will people figure out that before they spend all that money, all they have to do is open a window?

Before Victoria, bathing was a communal affair

Taking a bath has been a private matter only for about 200 years. From the Roman Empire to Queen Victoria's England, people bathed together. Communities. Families. Couples. So says one historian. As previously reported, many an English lady of the Court received callers as she bathed. Such a visitor, maybe a fellow in a velvet collar, sat above the bubbles and read verse, I gather.

The last will and testament wherein Alfred Nobel left $9 million to finance the world's most prestigious prizes was written in a casual manner without benefit of a lawyer.

Hardly anybody ate broccoli before World War II. In fact, old surveys show a majority didn't even know what it was.

Home builders have not yet designed houses with self-cleaning bathrooms, but our Chief Prognosticator thinks they will. Exit, close the door, flip a switch. The whole room will go through a sort of car-wash procedure. Surveys among homemakers show they'd rather have an automatic bathroom cleaner than any other sort of household robot.

Krill is what the whalebone whales eat down around the Antarctic. Men have been killing a lot of those whales. So krill is multiplying. Adelie penguins and certain seals eat krill, too. They likewise are multiplying. Swiftly, swiftly.

Q. At what age does a baby start to see in three dimensions?
A. Three months.

Whales beach themselves, when they do that sad thing, almost always on gently inclined sandy shores, never along rugged rocky coasts. Theorists think sloping soft sand fails to echo the whales' depth-finding signals.

In 1903, a chemist named Edouard Benedictus dropped a flask. It cracked but didn't break apart. He noted it had contained a solution of celluloid in acetone which had dried up. Swift fellow, Edouard. At that moment, he invented safety glass.

A. No, sir. Peter Mark Roget, author of Roget's Thesaurus.

Those who deal in spices rank the pungency of same on something called the Heal-Allsop Hotness Scale. Highest designation is "volcanic." Descending to "incendiary," "fiery," "burning," and so on. One spice — the world's hottest — ranks as "volcanic." It's called siling labuyo — "sill-ling-la-buy-oh." Undiluted, it causes large pain and leaves scar tissue.

All I know about George F. Grant of Boston, Mass., is on Dec. 12, 1899, he got Patent No. 638,920 for the world's first golf tee. Must not have been a marketing genius. Wasn't until decades later that golfers used ready-made tees. Even when your granddad was a lad, golfers as often as not hand shaped their tees out of damp dirt.

Q. What was the first book printed in English?
A. A chess manual. Caxton's "Game and Play of Chess." In 1474.

Q. What was the first town?
A. First we know about was Jarmo in what's now northern Iraq. About 5,000 B.C.

Bjorn Borg to wed Italian rock star

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Bjorn Borg, known for the silent, determined style he displayed in winning five Wimbledon titles from 1976-80, plans to marry a colorful, Italian rock star, according to published reports.

Swedish newspapers reported that the 32-year-old Swede will marry Italian singer Loredana Berte on Feb. 26 in Milan.

The Aftonbladet daily said Borg had asked Loredana, a 38-year-old rock star known for her wild and explicit stage appearances, several times to become his wife before she agreed last December.

"Now Bjorn comes first and my career second," Loredana told the newspaper Expressen. "I am here in Sweden because I am in love, for the rest of my life."

Borg, who has retired from active competition, earlier was married to Romanian-born tennis player Mariana Simionescu. In 1984, he met Jannike Bjorling, then 17 years old. She gave birth to their son, Robin, a year later. They lived together until 1987.

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley said he sympathizes with an area high school student, but banning the novel "Huckleberry Finn" because of its racial content could constitute censorship.

"What we really need to worry about is what is censorship," said Haley, who won the Pulitzer Prize for literature for "Roots."

"That is the thing that can harm a whole culture, and very swiftly," he said in an interview with The Knoxville News-Sentinel.

The Sevier County High School's review committee voted to temporarily suspend teaching "Huckleberry Finn" pending a study of how the book written in 1876 is used in the classroom.

The action came after a student, junior Jacquie McDermott, protested that the Mark Twain book, which makes frequent use of a racial slur, was offensive and demeaning.

Haley, who lives in a neighboring eastern Tennessee county, said he understands the student's concern.

"But I think that what we really need to look at is the greater good, the greater responsibility to the public," Haley said.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Robert D. Orr, who has issued hundreds of "Sagamore of the Wabash" citations, received his own "Sagamore" — compliments of the press corps.

On Orr's final working day in office, reporters staged a surprise ceremony for the governor, who received the first "Sagamore of the Press Corps" award.

The parody of the state's highest civilian honor praised Orr, a frequent traveler during his two terms, for the qualities he's gained roaming "China, Japan, Taiwan, South Korea, Germany, Holland, Colorado and even some parts of Indiana."

The Republican governor was succeeded Monday by Democrat Evan Bayh.

One of the more important developments of the recent Fall North American Championships was the formation of an organization for young bridge players. In this respect the American Contract Bridge League has trailed far behind the rest of the world. The Europeans stage regular junior international matches and they have a European Junior Championship. The 1988 Alpwater award for the best-played hand by a junior was won by a 21-year-old Scot, Alistair MacDonald.

At this vulnerability, an opening bid of four spades was an accurate description of his holding. His hand was long on offense, especially since he had a fair second suit, and short on defense.

West's lead of the seven of clubs was obviously from a short suit. Paying little heed to the warning signals, most declarers won in hand and tried to draw trumps. The defenders in the East seat were able to win the ace and then return their lowest club when giving partner a club ruff. Heeding the suit preference signal, West underled the ace of diamonds, allowing East to win the king and give his partner another ruff for down one.

MacDonald saw the threat. He won the first club trick in dummy, cashed the ace of hearts and continued with the jack. When East could not cover, declarer cut the defenders' communications by discarding his diamond loser. When East eventually gained the lead with the ace of trumps he was still able to give his partner a club ruff, but he had no entry back to his hand to allow the defense to score a second ruff. With the help of what is known in the trade as a "Scissors Coup," declarer was able to hold his losers to three—a trump, a heart and a club ruff.

Tax breaks spurred S&L rescues

American Savings & Loan acquisition is worth $217.5 million to Bass Group

By MICHAEL DOYLE
McClatchy News Service

WASHINGTON — The purchasers of Stockton-based American Savings and Loan will enjoy tax breaks worth $217.5 million to sweeten the acquisition, a congressional panel has learned.

For the Robert M. Bass Group of Texas, these tax benefits represent part of American Savings' allure. Other thrift buyers saw a similar allure through the hectic month of December, as the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pushed through 34 merger deals involving 75 insolvent institutions.

Hurried through before tax provisions changed on Dec. 31, these 34 deals will provide purchasers a little over $2 billion in tax benefits along with much more in direct federal aid, bank board figures show. Lawmakers greeted news of the deals and accompanying tax breaks on Tuesday with occasionally harsh skepticism.

"Yes it's true, in this great country of ours, that you can buy a toaster and get a thrift for free," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

Schumer and other members of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee criticized several aspects of the bank board's dealings. In sometimes passionate tones, they charged bank board negotiators with giving away too much to savvy dealmakers and allowing wealthy investors to benefit at the expense of American taxpayers.

"The bank board's year-end rush represents a backdoor raid on the U.S. treasury," said Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa. "The dealmakers who are walking away with more cash than they put in are laughing all the way to the piggybank."

Leach presented his own figures Tuesday, obtained from Treasury Department officials, showing that the 222 insolvent-thrift deals worked out by the bank board in all of 1988 will result in $8 billion in tax breaks for the investors. Total government assistance for these purchases amounted to $36 billion during the year.

The tax benefits represent losses from the acquired thrifts that the investor can write off. The Bass Group can apply its tax writeoffs against profits made by several newly-created American Savings entities, but can't use them for other Bass businesses, according to Bass spokesmen.

The tax breaks taken by the Bass Group are the third largest of all the 34 deals completed in December, according to figures presented Tuesday. As part of the agreement, Bass officials will also share some of the American Savings tax breaks with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

The split gives the government 75 percent of the total tax benefits, amounting to $652 million. The $217.5 million going to Bass make up the remaining 25 percent in total tax benefits. Formally completed on Dec. 28, the American Savings deal requires the Bass Group to put up $350 million immediately and another $150 million later. The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. is putting up $1.7 billion as its part of the American Savings purchase.

Bank Board officials insisted Tuesday that the American Savings purchase, and the others completed last month, represented a better deal for taxpayers than closing the thrift and paying off insured depositors.

ProTek Environmental announces cleanup project

ProTek Environmental Inc. has been awarded a site mitigation and cleanup contract by U.S. Gypsum Co.

The Huntington Beach-based ProTek will employ its "active" biological treatment process to clean 400 cubic yards of diesel-contaminated soil resulting from a leaking underground storage tank at U.S. Gypsum's drywall manufacturing plant in Santa Fe Springs.

Company officials project that their proven on-site treatment process, which uses "Advanced BioCulture" micro-organisms, will bring the contamination level from an estimated 1,800 parts per million to a "certified clean" level of less than 100 ppm in less than 90 days.

Joe Mathewson, president of ProTek, commented, "This kind of a project, because it is a small-scale job, has a special significance for small business owners with underground tanks.

"The price of other cleanup methods can be devastating, even on a project of this size. But, U.S. Gypsum is going to save about $42,000 by opting for bioremediation over hauling and off-site disposal."

Not only is this method economical, but it is also the most environmentally sound mitigation measure available, he explained. The final result is a "certified clean" soil with no long-term liabilities for the property owner.

ProTek is a full-service environmental engineering contractor and offers complete "turn-key" bioremediation, vapor extraction and chemical fixation technologies for on-site treatment and decontamination of hazardous sludges. Established in 1987, the firm is a subsidiary of Enviroguard Inc. of Houston, Texas.

Most workers never tested for drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty percent of all American workers are now employed by companies that test for drug use, but only one employee in 100 actually is tested in a 12-month period, the government reports.

Ninety-one percent of employers have neither testing nor counseling programs, the Labor Department said Wednesday, but larger companies are much more likely to have such programs.

Job applicants are far more likely to be tested than employees, the department said. It billed its survey of 7,500 establishments as the most extensive study to date on drug testing in the workplace.

Among establishments with testing programs, about two-thirds tested only those workers suspected of drug use, while one-fourth had programs that subjected all employees to possible testing.

In the 12 months prior to the Labor Department survey, taken last summer, establishments with testing programs reported testing slightly fewer than 1 million workers — or about 1 percent of all workers. Of those, about 9 percent tested positive for drug use, the study said. Of 3.9 million applicants who were tested, 12 percent tested positive for drug use.

In another study, released Tuesday, researchers said 31 drug testing laboratories that follow industry guidelines had an overall accuracy rate of 97 percent in testing urine samples for narcotics.

"Inaccuracies should not be used as an argument against drug testing," said Christopher S. Frings, director of the study conducted by the American Association of Clinical Chemistry.

However, he conceded that not all labs adhere to proper procedures.

The Labor Department, in the study released today, said there appears to be no rush among employers to launch testing programs. Only 4 percent of the employers without programs said they were considering establishing one in the next year.

A breakdown by industry found the highest rate of positive test results — about 20 percent — among employees in wholesale and retail trade.

That industry also had the highest rate of positive test results among job applicants, 17 percent for wholesale trade and 24 percent for the retail sector.

The lowest rate of positive test results among employees was in transportation, 5.6 percent, a statistic influenced by mandatory testing in many sectors of the industry. Nearly 10 percent of applicants for transportation jobs tested positive for drugs, the study found.

The rate of positive test results among applicants was lowest, at 5.5 percent, in communications and public utilities. Nearly 8 percent of workers in those industries who were checked tested positive for drugs.

Mining, communications and public utilities, and transportation establishments were most likely to have drug-testing programs.

Size was by far the largest determining factor in whether an establishment had drug-testing programs and some form of employee assistance program.

Of the nation's largest establishments, those with 1,000 employees or more, 43 percent had drug testing and 76 percent offered counseling or some other form of assistance. But only about 2 percent of the smallest establishments, those with fewer than 50 workers, had testing programs and 9 percent had employee assistance programs.

THURSDAY'S 11 A.M. (PST) PRICES

Dow climbs 21 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices jumped ahead today, extending the early-1989 rally that has carried the market to its highest levels since the 1987 crash.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 21.07 to 2,227.50 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 7 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 871 up, 511 down and 520 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were encouraged by the market's drive Wednesday past the 2,200 level in the Dow after a weeklong struggle.

In addition, they cited a developing "bandwagon" effect as investors who had been bearish on the outlook for months felt increasing pressure to join in the rally.

The market's steady advance since last fall has come without any support from interest rates, which have been rising.

Calendar art a snap for photographer

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer, I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

Library chooses design winners

The results are in!

Newport Beach Public Library Children's Services Coordinator Judy Kelley announced the winners of the Design a Bookmark contest that was held during the Children's Book Week in November.

Winners are:

Brandy Pesner, Shannon Keehan, Beth Sims, Tommy Zavala, Blake Sinclair and Jennifer Lewis from Newport Elementary School.

Amanda Smith, Cindy Barnes, Meghan Fitzpatrick and Nick Shaumburg from Harbor View School.

Vivian Lin, Anderson School and Olivia Hargrave, Bennett-Hicks Private School.

The children incorporated the theme of reading books into their clever artwork. Kelley encourages children and adults alike to come to any of the branch libraries and pick up bookmarks designed by the talented young local artists.

Looks as if Grubb & Ellis' Newport Beach residential brokerage office was busy over Christmas with a worthy cause.

In an effort to provide Orange County's hungry and homeless with Christmas dinners, the Newport Harbor/Costa Mesa Board of Realtors, in conjunction with the Salvation Army, sponsored its annual Christams Can Tree project in which individual real estate offices competed to build canned food trees.

The board presented Grubb & Ellis with the award for the most cans per capita and the most creative tree.

"The level of concern and participation was tremendous," said Tom Queen, senior vice president and district manager of Gubb & Ellis' Newport Beach office. "We averaged more than 108 cans of food for each person in our office."

The office contains 49 sales associates and staff who collected more than 4,519 cans of food to build a tree 10 feet tall by 10 feet wide.

The remainder of the collection was used to construct a fireplace next to the tree.

"It's a pleasure to be able to give something back to the community, especially during the holidays which is a difficult time for many," said Bruce Barsamian, vice president and sales manager at the Newport office.

Martha Macnab served as Grubb & Ellis' chairwoman while Sandie Fix and Sara Hinman were co-chairwoman.

Famous faces are HB artist's canvas

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Originally, Winterfest started as a small hand arts festival, which only

Margaret Stover delivers groceries via wheelchair.

Food delivered via wheelchair

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing, turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

Owning a boat not necessary to enjoy sailing at this club

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dick and Gayle Nelson of Yorba Linda sometimes travel to Newport Beach every other weekend to enjoy a day of sailing.

They board a 25-footer, 35-footer or whatever suits their fancy — because they don't own their own boat.

They are members of the Lido Sailing Club in Newport Beach, a club designed for sailors who don't want the responsibility or financial burden of owning their own vessel.

Owner Norm Rest

"It's just a wonderful idea," Gayle Nelson said. "It's hard enough to find a mooring — and very expensive. You don't have to worry about maintenance or cleanup because it's all done for you.

"They keep their boats in excellent condition," she said.

Norm Rest, club owner, said membership is a "viable alternative to owning your own boat."

Founded in 1971, Rest said the club's service lends to recreation, knowledge and entertainment.

"We have 35 boats ranging from 25- to 45-feet that are owned by individuals and leased back to the club," he said. "We've taught more than 600 members to sail, whether it be beginning, intermediate or advanced."

New members pay a one-time fee of $190 and thereafter monthly dues. The fee includes 15 hours of sailing instructions with group and crew.

"Members learn safety, rules of the water, rigging, sail trimming, etiquette, navigation ... and overboard procedures," Rest said.

Monthly dues are $60, and $40 of that goes on account like a savings account. The money accumulates for usage of any size boat that ranges from $40 to $300 a day.

Boats are available for a 24-hour period and they are insured from Newport Beach to the Mexican border, Rest said.

Nelson said she and her husband love to spend the night aboard their leased-boat and sail the next day. She said there's lots of ways to spend a Saturday or Sunday aboard.

"Sometimes we'll fill our soup jug at the Crab Cooker and take friends aboard in the wintertime," she said. "Other times we've had Tony Roma deliver ribs."

Rest said owners make enough money to pay for their slip rent and are provided with free maintenance.

Lido Sailing Club is designed for people who want to sail but don't want the responsibility of owning a boat.

FV officer receives department honor

Paul Sorrell has been named the Fountain Valley Police Department's 1988 Officer of the Year.

The annual honor is voted on by the police department's 61 members who select an officer for his or her accomplishments in law enforcement, community service and interpersonal skills.

Sorrell has served seven and one-half years with the police department. For the last two years his assignment with the narcotics division has resulted in numerous arrests of narcotic offenders and seizures of illegal drugs. He is also a member of the department's SWAT team in which he coordinates and directs much of the training for the speciality unit.

"It been a lot of hard work this year in the field of narcotics," he said. "We have had several real good cases and that is probably the biggest reason I received the award. It is very nice to be recognized by my peers."

Police Chief Elvin Miali described the qualifications representative of the award.

"The officer is not only chosen for his leadership, outstanding performance in the field and rapport with peers," he said, "but because he is a coach, a friend and available when needed."

Sorrell has a bachelor's degree from Cal State Fullerton and advanced certificates in police training.

"He was selected for his ability in enforcement in narcotics and vice," Miali said. "It takes a special breed and a lot of dedication because of the hours. There is no set schedule.

"It is quite an honor and he is a well-deserved recipient," Miali said.

Sorrell is the father of two small children. Because of his undercover work, a photo was not released for publication.

And speaking of awards...

Matt G. Baker and Wade Tift of Newport Beach were presented with the Outstanding Youth Achievement Award from the R. G. Canning Corp., a Los Angeles-based promotional firm.

R. G. Canning said he becomes personally involved with helping youth of today. He feels recognition for their accomplishments builds self-confidence and courage that will be an important asset later in life for guidance and direction.

"During the summer months I spend most of my time escorting selected youth on world-travel trips," said Canning.

"It gives me the opportunity and satisfaction to do for others," he added.

CALENDAR ART DEVELOPS FOR NB PHOTOGRAPHER...

models can be a hard and sometimes painfull process, she said. Starting the selection as late as December, Gershenson is forced to make her decisions in time to meet the Jan. 1 deadline.

"What is really hard about picking models is that I sometimes have to turn them down," she said. It is really hard for some guys to take rejection because of the way they look. "And they are going to look that way for the rest of their lives."

She also believes that featuring males in the calendar has given her some new insight on how to better understand men. Calling it a "mini-psychology lesson," Gershenson said the calendar often creates large egos.

"When I get some of these guys to pose for me, it makes them feel real good about themselves," she said. "There is a lot more than just muscles and good looks to some. But sometimes, they can really get stuck on themselves. I won't put up with that."

Craig Runnalls, a 23-year-old economics major and co-captain of the varisty rowing team, is featured on this year's calendar. Recommended to Gershenson by another model, Runnalls was quickly chosen for the cover page. However, he says the honor did not go to his head.

"I got a lot of teasing from my friends about it," said the Newport Beach resident. "I was really pleased to be in the calendar, but I didn't get stuck on myself. Kim is right when she says we are just born this way. How can you be conceited about something you had nothing to do with."

While Gershenson sees a potential for some of her models to turn professional, many of them make the venture fun. In return for modeling, everyone in the calendar receives a free hair cut and pictures to add to his portfolio.

Gershenson gets little financial benefits from producing the calendar. It is the financial end of producing the calendar, including developing and publicity, that takes up most of her time. She has set up autograph-signing parties and "win-a-date" contests to help battle the $3,500 printing cost, which comes out of her own pocket.

"I am not really looking to get anything out of this because I know that there is not very much money to be made," she said. "It has opened up some doors for me, with people asking me to take pictures for them and put together calendars.

"Actually, I am just in it for the friendship. I enjoy helping people out by taking their picture, making them feel real good about themselves."

themselves and just feeling good."

French said she focuses on teaching women how to become their own makeup artist, and how to select products that work for them. She takes into consideration lifestyle, the image to be projected, facial bone structure, and skin type.

She charges $75 for a consultation that includes a detailed individualized workbook.

"I cover all the learning senses," she said. "They watch me apply the makeup, I explain as I go along and they read about it in the workbook.

"This is geared to the individual. I do require a follow-up, that is like fine tuning. If they don't follow up that frustrates me. I can only do as much as people let me."

French also sells a line of cosmetics she has carefully selected. Her background in working with most of the major cosmetic companies has given her an understanding of the product ingredients and formulas.

"They are all good basic skin care producs at less than over-the-counter prices," she said. "Once you have been trained to put on the makeup, you don't have to look at it the rest of the day."

French also works with several Orange County plastic surgeons in teaching post cosmetic surgery patients how to apply makeup to their new look.

And like any other artist, it is hard for French not to look at people and silently create a new image.

"When I meet someone it takes me about 15 seconds to make them over in my mind. Then I'm satisfied and can forget about it," French said smiling.

attracted a few spectators. While popularity of the summer festivals grew each year, attendance for Winterfest quickly became overshadowed. According to Rowan, the "potential has always been there, but the way to do it hasn't.

"The chamber wants the festival to grow just like the summer counterparts have," she said. "We have taken several approaches to accomplish this. The biggest is expansion of the show."

Typically, Winterfest has been an arts and crafts show held at the Festival of Arts grounds. Exhibitors are allowed to rent a booth for four days, displaying their hand arts.

The 1989 festival will still follow this tradition, but will add an athletic side to the event by featuring such events as surfing, bodybuilding, skateboarding and golf.

"Sometimes, art is just not enough to carry a festival. Adding sports has opened up new doors," said Rowan.

This year, corporate sponsorships have become a priority. Already, companies such as Gotcha Sports and Pacific Telephone have made pledges to fund the event.

"Marketing seems to be paying off," she said. "At this point, we have received calls from as far away as Pheonix to participate in the festival. We have been really getting the word out."

Superintendent is entitled to say 'I told you so'

John Nicoll has good reason to feel a little proud of himself.

Nicoll, superintendent of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District, has not always enjoyed the comfort of saying, "I told you so." His tenure at the district has been rocked with controversy and a steady dose of grumbling over the woes of education and the state of local schools.

For instance, when Nicoll decided to switch assignments between two popular high school principals, many parents, teachers and students wanted to hang his scalp from the lodge pole, if there were such a thing in Newport Beach or Costa Mesa.

The principal swap saw a letter-writing campaign that overset the letters-to-the-editor columns of local papers. There were several stormy school board sessions and arguments on the streets and during coffee breaks. Students even staged a protest.

The furor of the principal swap has faded except with several people who harbor political aspirations and those who like to cherish their grudges. But its success is not the reason for the satisfaction Nicoll should be enjoying.

Newport-Mesa school officials found themselves in a unique situation this week. They are beginning to take a look at reopening an elementary school. That's right, reopen a school.

The possibility is rare because many districts are still wrestling with declining enrollments and the always unpopular decision to close schools.

But that's not the situation in Newport Beach and Costa Mesa. District projections released this week show that the children of a local mini-baby boom several years back are just about school age.

School trustees were told the district's elementary schools will be at capacity in the not-too-distant future. The most immediate concern is the Estancia attendance zone, which includes four elementary schools — California, Pomona, Whittier and Wilson. This area, according to the report, will go over classroom capacity this year.

Trustees have several options. They can go the portable classroom route, consolidate Estancia High School to include 7th through 12th grades and shift students who live south of 19th Street to the Newport Harbor attendance area, or they could reopen a school.

Reopening a school is a sweet option and the trustees have that option because Nicoll won his battle to retain ownership of schools the district had to close several years ago. At that time, the action was criticized. People who thought the schools should be sold to bolster the district's sagging budget pointed to other districts that sold their closed schools. But Nicoll and his allies were successful, convincing trustees that the district should hang onto the schools.

Even those who argued against that decision years ago will now have to admit that Nicoll had his eye on the future and finger on the pulse of a trend that he was sure would reverse itself.

If Nicoll is not wearing a smug grin this week, he should be. He has earned the right.

Agenda for 1989

The start of a new year is an appropriate time to set an agenda of issues for 1989... They are topics so large and multi-faceted that a mountain of well-intentioned editorials chock-full of advice could not come close to solving the problems inherent in them.

...We'll aim for spunk and insight this year in tackling:

GROWTH:...We'll study how development of all kinds should be controlled in ways that keep our area's economy vital and housing stock "affordable," whatever that is these days. We'll follow the local election campaigns that will be tied so closely to the issue.

DRUG ABUSE: ...Trafficking in crack, the cocaine derivative, has turned whole inner-cities into war zones, has put a whole generation at risk. Violence goes hand-in-glove with the business — machine guns are commonplace now. So are almost-random drive-by shootings tied to gangs and drugs. ...We need to fight it, and fast, through education and treatment.

TRANSPORTATION: ...Traffic jams as have never been seen before are now commonplace on both freeways and surface streets. The bus system operated by the (Southern California Rapid Transit District)... is in administrative chaos. While light rail and subways are somewhere in the future, there are no panacea... An all-encompassing strategy must be forged by counties, transportation agencies, cities, businesses and citizens. Studying the idea of new forms of regional government is integral to creating this strategy...

EDUCATION: There is no question that in this last topic are the answers to all problems. ...A surge in enrollment is coming because of immigration and a new baby boom. Tight budgets and competing financial needs are forcing tough decisions. At the college level, if we don't build new universities, we'll turn tens of thousands of qualified students away. And at the secondary level, if we don't create a fascination with learning, we're in danger of becoming a society filled with second-rate minds....

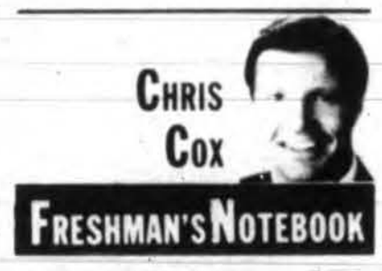
Congress can use a raise, but method is not sincere



CHRIS COX
FRESHMAN'S NOTEBOOK

Earlier this week, President Reagan submitted his final budget to Congress. And just as they have done in each of the last several years, the liberals who control the Congress immediately pronounced this massive document "irrelevant."

Of course, none of them took the time to read it. That would have required days or weeks of study.

Perhaps the best rejoinder came from Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady. He pronounced the claims of irrelevance as themselves irrelevant.

Witticisms aside, it is obvious that the congressional budget process is badly broken when the entire executive branch is required to exhaust itself for months to produce a Budget of the United States, only to have its work product dismissed out of hand by the majority in Congress.

There is one part of the president's budget, however, to which House Speaker Jim Wright and crew are paying great deference. In fact, so "relevant" is the budget in this one particular that the congressional Democrats want it to become law automatically — without even so much as a vote of Congress.

Just which part of the budget is so deserving of this near reverence? You guessed it — the 50 percent pay raise for members of Congress.

Under a clever arrangement adopted by the Congress in 1985, pay hikes recommended by a congressional commission and included in the budget automatically go into effect unless Congress passes a joint resolution of disapproval within 30 days.

So by avoiding a vote between now and Feb. 8 (during most of which time Congress won't even be in session), the salaries of liberal millionaires Teddy Kennedy, D.-Mass., and Howard Metzenbaum, D.-Ohio, will go from $89,500 to $135,000. Speaker Jim Wright, D.-Tex., who is under investigation for a number of serious ethical and legal charges, will get an additional $60,000 on top of the $115,000 he's already making.

Now, it's one thing to raise your own pay. But it's quite another to do so dishonestly, through the back door. Sadly, the entire purpose of this Rube Goldberg mechanism set up by the Congress — the so-called "Quadrennial Commission on Executive, Legislative, and Judicial Salaries" — is to permit members of Congress to avoid accountability to the voters.

The arrogance of this scheme to arrange pay hikes without a recorded vote is evident in the unabashed way in which the liberal leadership in the House speak openly about their plans to prevent a resolution of disapproval from even coming to the floor of the House.

On the very first day of this session, after Jim Wright finished his speech about "ethics" and "bipartisanship," this is the plan he hatched: within the 30-day period, the Senate will vote to disapprove the pay raises. Then, just after the 30-day deadline, the House will also vote its disapproval. But because the vote will be tardy, it won't count.

Sound familiar? That's exactly what Wright did in 1987, when he deliberately waited until the 31st day before permitting a vote on the then-pending 16 percent congressional pay raise. As a result, Wright and other liberals went home to their constituents and told them they'd voted against the pay raise — but in fact, they took the money and ran.

Republican legislation to prevent this abuse has been bottled up by Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright for over six years. The bill, introduced by Rep. Tom Tauke, R.-Iowa, would require members of Congress to cast a recorded vote on all pay raises. It would also prohibit them from mixing a pay raise in the same legislation with other political issues.

Just as importantly, the Republican legislation would prevent congressional pay increases from taking effect until after the next House election and the start of a new Congress. One of the principal arguments of those in favor of the pay raise is that without it, the Congress won't attract the most highly qualified people. But the 101st Congress has already been sworn in — so a pay raise that takes effect immediately can have no impact on the composition of its membership. Instead, it serves as a windfall for members who thought they were running for a job that pays $89,500.

The Commission's recommendations, which relied heavily on this flawed argument, were ill-conceived in other respects as well. The panel — chaired by Jimmy Carter's White House counsel — stated that due to inflation, congressional salaries "have declined in constant dollars to approximately 65-70 percent of their salaries in 1969."

In fact, however, the choice of 1969 as the base year was designed to skew the result. That year, as it happens, was the high-water mark for congressional salaries in this century, adjusting for inflation. That's because in 1969, Congress had just received a 40 percent boost in salary.

The National Taxpayer's Union has pointed out that, when inflation is taken into account, the average congressional pay for the period 1900-1985 was $76,500. Thus, the current level of $89,500 is fully 17 percent above the historical inflation-adjusted norm.

Economist Arthur Laffer has advanced an enlightened proposal that may solve the whole problem: merit pay for Congress. If the Congress balances the budget without a tax increase, who would begrudge each member a $100,000 bonus? The taxpayers, the economy and the country would all be a lot better off.

Proposed 50 percent pay raise a study in arrogance

STEVE MARBLE

Look over there in the corner.

See that man in the Brooks Brothers' suit, swilling coffee and pumping hands like a well-oiled machine?

That's right. That's your congressman. He's hard at work.

And do you know what he needs. He needs a raise. Who doesn't?

How much of a raise, you wonder. Try 50 percent. I'll repeat that...50 percent.

Now I might not be the most worldly man, and I don't prowl Wall Street or hang out at the Stock Exchange, but a 50 percent pay raise seems just a mite steep. Aside from Orel Hershisher and a few recent Lotto winners, does anybody out there anticipate a 50 percent raise this year?

Just to put it on the record, congressmen make $89,500 a year. A 50 percent raise would put their salary at $135,000.

Now to some people, that's enough money to just about drown in. To be honest, it would give me a heart attack. But to others, it's a reasonable sum. Enough to make the mortgage, pay the green fees, the tennis club dues, the Nordstrom card, and so on.

But a 50 percent raise, if nothing else, tells you that the person receiving it must have done one heck of a good job.

Has your congressman done one heck of a good job at something, besides getting elected?

Most local teachers this past year received about a 3 percent raise, though some soared as high as 5 percent. Teachers in one local district got a 2½ percent boost. Now these are the people we trust with getting our children ready for the world. Some of them are the very same people who taught American history, literature and math to those congressmen now on the brink of a 50 percent raise.

How about our police force, the people we put our trust in when things take a nasty turn, the people we count on when some bozo puts a knife to the throat of a clerk at the local 7-Eleven, the people we matter-of-factly figure will risk their lives when some poor soul holds up in a house with a high-powered rifle and terrorizes a neighborhood.

Try 5 percent in Newport Beach. Or 6 percent in Huntington Beach. You get the picture.

A 50 percent raise is saying something.

"Hey pal, you helped erase the national deficit, the homeless are no longer that, our Social Security system is going gangbusters and assured for years to come.

Right? Well, not entirely.

Maybe our congressmen should get a raise based on accomplishments. Cure a problem, get a raise.

But the reason for the proposed raise, I suspect, has nothing do to with accomplishments. No, it has more to do with honorariums.

You see, for years congressmen have been permitted to accept pay for speaking to businessmen, farmers, stock brokers and aerospace engineers. They get paid for going out to breakfast.

On an annual haul, some get $20,00, $30,000. Some get even more.

But the word from on high is that's got to go. The free lunch may not be gone, but the free lunch with a four figure tip is.

The proposed pay hike is still smoldering on the back burner to now. But I suspect the heat will be cranked up a notch or two before long.

One television commentator recently likened the proposed pay hike to taxation without representation, since none of us will have a say in the matter.

This newscaster, drawing on the fabled Boston Tea Party, suggested that constituents mail each congressman a tea bag. Just one. A small one if you like.

Well, that's sort of a silly idea. The sort of idea we are accustomed to seeing on television.

But if it's symbolism we want, then this proposed pay hike is a fairly ample target.

How can Congress increase its pay by 50 percent when we have people — entire families, perhaps — sleeping in a cloak of cardboard behind a closed-down elementary school in Costa Mesa?

How can Congress increase its pay by 50 percent when the national deficit is heading south quicker than an escaped felon?

If it's symbolism you want, that's pretty bleak stuff.

Seawalls not best way to protect beach

To the Editor:

I think that many Laguna businessmen, city council persons, and perhaps other city officials may tend to overlook the fact that Laguna's sandy beaches are both a priceless and an endangered resource.

Sandy beaches provide attractive areas requiring little care, which are useful for a wide variety of general rest and recreational activities. Beaches provide extensive playgrounds for young children, game and surfing areasfor older youths (thus keeping them off the streets) and attractive sun bathing areas for adults. Also, sandy beaches have considerable commercial value because they attract out-of-town visitors; they require little maintenance, and they help protect adjacent bluffs from wave erosion.

Unfortunately, during the last few decades our beaches have become significantly narrower because of gradual and often unnoticed sand losses. Furthermore, there are several good reasons for believing that man's actions, and natural occurrences will accelerate, our beach sand losses during future years.

Because of the sand losses already experienced, a number of beachfront property owners now want to construct new sea walls to protect their bluffs from wave attack. However many (perhaps most) of the relatively few bluff failures that have occurred have been due to overwatering and/or improper drainage — not to recent wave erosion. Furthermore (most experts tell us) the placement of seawalls along our bluffs will increase the rate of sand losses in the future, thus further narrowing out sandy beaches.

For example (in a report prepared for the City of Del Mar) coastal engineer Ron Noble stated that during severe storms, the natural wave erosion occurring in front of a concrete seawall will cause 3-5 feet of vertical erosion of the sand. This would reduce the width of the beach by 30-50 feet or more.

Most experts on coastal erosion have concluded that while seawalls may provide some protection to the lower bluffs, such walls will actually damage the beaches by accelerating erosion. Fortunately, there are other alternatives, such as sand replenishment, which will protect both the beaches and the bluffs.

City officials should be urged to seriously consider such alternatives.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Jan. 12, the 12th day of 1989. There are 353 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 12, 1945, during World War II, German forces in Belgium retreated in the Battle of the Bulge.

On this date:

In 1773, the first public museum in America was established, in Charleston, S.C.

In 1915, the House of Representatives rejected a proposal to give women the right to vote.

In 1932, Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway became the first woman elected to the Senate.

In 1945, aircraft from U.S. Task Force 38 sank about 40 Japanese ships off Indochina.

In 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson said in his State of the Union address that the United States should stay in South Vietnam until communist aggression there ended.

In 1986, the shuttle Columbia blasted off with a crew that included Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and the first Hispanic-American in space, Dr. Franklin R. Chang-Diaz.

In 1987, Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite arrived in Lebanon on his latest mission to win the release of hostages, a journey that would result in his own disappearance.

Ten years ago: The State Department, fearing a possible military coup in Iran, issued an appeal to the Iranian military, saying a seizure of power would inhibit an "orderly and constructive approach" to the establishment of stability.

Five years ago: A business-oriented efficiency panel chaired by J. Peter Grace issued its report on deficits which said federal spending could be slashed by $424.4 billion over three years.

Today's Birthdays: Journalist Martin Agronsky is 74. Singer Ray Price is 63. The "Amazing Kreskin" is 54. Actress Kirstie Alley is 34.

Strauss Orchestra too serious

By MICHAEL RYDZYNSKI
Daily Pilot Correspondent

No one was dancing in the aisles, but the Orange County Performing Arts Center sellout of 2,902 patrons enthusiastically received the Vienna Johann Strauss Orchestra and conductor Alfred Eschwe on their county debut Monday evening.

Presented by the Orange County Philharmonic Society, the Strauss Orchestra offered (what else?) an all-Strauss program of mostly waltzes and polkas.

Eschwe, who more than bears a passing resemblance to Johann Strauss II, "The Waltz King" himself, led the chamber orchestra of 40 in the type of concert its namesake played almost 140 years ago. While the programming may have been similar and the playing technically first rate, the spirit of the performances too often was lacking.

One usually encounters — especially in pops concerts — great liberties taken with the fun that's normally inherent in many Strauss scores: overly tremendous stretching of ritardandi, use of real whips for slapsticks or cannons for popguns, and so on. But Eschwe had the orchestra give too straightforward an account of most of the 17 selections (including three encores) it played.

Thus, slightly long yet dramatic pauses were elided in the Overture to "Die Fledermaus." All the fun went out of the quadrille "Kuenstler" ("Artist"), Op. 201, a normally witty pastische of borrowed tunes — such as the "Wedding March" from Felix Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and the opening of Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor (among many other snippets) — that was played with utter seriousness instead. And not even Johann and Josef Strauss' joint "Pizzicato Polka" was treated lightly, with tempo rubato (a unstrict keeping of time) virtually absent.

Of course, not every Strauss tune is ripe for "fun," most notably and famously "An der Schoenen Blauen Donau" ("On the Beautiful Blue Danube"), Op. 314. In this pleasantly-but-not-outstandingly performed work, Eschwe took more repeats than one normally encounters in a live performance of it, yet it was far from being complete.

Still, there were some shenanigans that were properly under control. Josef Strauss' "Buchstaben" ("Typographical Characters") polka had some of the performers occasionally recite the alphabet from A to G and end with A again. The same composer's frenetically paced "Plappermaeulchen" polka was even more deliciously realized, with a ratchet obbligato, the two lead second-violinists arguing several times and the oboist having the final say by standing up to play her note and bow.

The encores were among the most enjoyably rendered. The polka "No Problems" had the orchestra "Ha-ha"ing; and even Eschwe (finally) got into the spirit of things by pulling down on an imaginary cord for the timpanist to play his booming one-note solo. Johann I's "Sigh" galop indeed had the beleaguered players "struggling" to keep pace with this whirlwind of a piece, give out a very tired sigh near the end. And the same Strauss' most famous work, "The Redetzky March," saw the orchestra play most of it without the conductor, who walked away after starting it off and came back on for the final refrain.

AZOC reception tonight

An opening reception for artists Bijan Bahar, Jim Merritt, Steve Lustig, Ruth Jameson, Tom Licari and Greg Tate will be held from 7 to 10 tonight at the Art Zone of the Contemporary, 3443 Via Lido, Newport Beach.

The public is invited, admission is free and a jazz band will perform.

TV to chronicle Oliver North saga

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Production will begin this week on CBS' miniseries "Guts & Glory: The Rise and Fall of Oliver North."

David Keith will star as Lt. Col. North, with Barnard Hughes playing CIA Director William Casey, Peter Boyle as National Security Council Adviser John Poindexter and Paul Dooley as NSC Adviser Robert McFarlane. Newcomer Amy Stock-Poynton will be featured as secretary Fawn Hall.

The four-hour special, whose broadcast date wasn't announced, is based on the book by newspaper reporter Ben Bradlee Jr.

It will be filmed in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

Cleo Laine plays a witch who changes from ugly to beautiful in "Into the Woods."

Cleo Laine likes to sing Sondheim

'Into the Woods' arrives March 7

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grammy-winning singer Cleo Laine admires Stephen Sondheim's music so much she recorded an album of it — and then was asked to star in the national tour of his latest musical.

"I've always liked his music and it's always a challenge," the British singer said by telephone from a home she and her husband maintain in Sonoma, Calif., where she spent the holidays.

"Most of the things Sondheim has created could be considered classical theater now ... I think it is almost the equivalent of Shakespeare in the 1980s."

"Into the Woods," starring Laine and Charlotte Rae, will run through March 5 at the Ahmanson Theater of the Los Angeles Music Center. It will then tour to the Orange County Performing Arts Center (March 7-12) and to Denver.

An exploration of what happens to certain fairy-tale characters after living "happily ever after," the musical won 1988 Tony Awards for Sondheim for best score and James Lapine best book of a musical.

The pivotal character of the witch attracted Laine. "It's an interesting acting role," she said, explaining that in the first act "I'm very ugly with a hump and a long nose and scraggly hair." In Act Two, she becomes beautiful, "but every now and again you bring the ugly witch back into it."

Laine, who won a 1987 Grammy for best female jazz vocal for "Cleo at Carnegie: The 10th Anniversary Concert," had previously starred in a production of Sondheim's "A Little Night Music." Her stage credits also include a 1986 Tony Award-nominated role in the musical "The Mystery of Edwin Drood."

Her album, "Cleo Sings Sondheim," on RCA, features one song from "Into the Woods," the keynote piece "No One Is Alone." It was recorded before she knew she would be playing the witch. In the show, the song is sung by Cinderella after her prince has disappeared.

Currently, the singer, noted for her wide range of musical and theatrical interests, is recording an album tentatively titled "Woman to Woman," a collection of songs composed exclusively by female songwriters.

C(d)M defense tops Uni

Corona del Mar suffocates Trojans' in opener, 46-31

By PAT LARKIN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Defense has always been synonymous with Corona del Mar High basketball and Wednesday night's show did nothing to dispell the notion.

The Sea Kings rode their defense to the CIF Division VI football title and CdM's five-man version proved nearly as tough as they whipped University 46-31 in the Sea View League opener for both schools.

The visiting Sea Kings used a swarming man-to-man defense to stuff the Trojans highly-touted inside game, holding 6-foot-9 forward Stefan Mumaw to just seven free throws and 6-foot-6 center Pat Ferrell scoreless. Corona's collapsing traps frustrated the Trojans all night forcing University into turnovers and bad shots.

"We hang our hats around here on tough man-to-man defense," Corona del Mar Coach Paul Orris said. "We did an pretty good job of shutting down their inside game."

Pretty good?

Orris' Sea Kings, now 11-4 overall, held University scoreless for the first 4:37 of the game, gave up a three-point play and then held University, 5-10, scoreless for the rest of the period. At one point Corona denied the Trojans four straight times underneath the basket after kicking the ball outside for their fifth attempt, but a layup was blown off a nice backdoor pass from Junior Oliver.

"We were just flat tonight," University Coach Lee Jackson said. "We've only had one good game wire-to-wire this year and that's when Corona (Riverside County) made us look good."

Eagles give Saddleback scare, 58-55

Estancia strong, but loses close one to top county team

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They shot just 17 percent through the first half, their 3-point production was limited to nothing and they were even only once — at the tipoff. But in the end, Estancia High basketball coach Tim O'Brien was able to walk off the floor with a certain amount of satisfaction Wednesday night.

His upset-minded Eagles dropped their opener in Sea View League basketball, 58-55, but considering the circumstances, it wasn't one of those nights where you shut yourself in a locker room and search for answers.

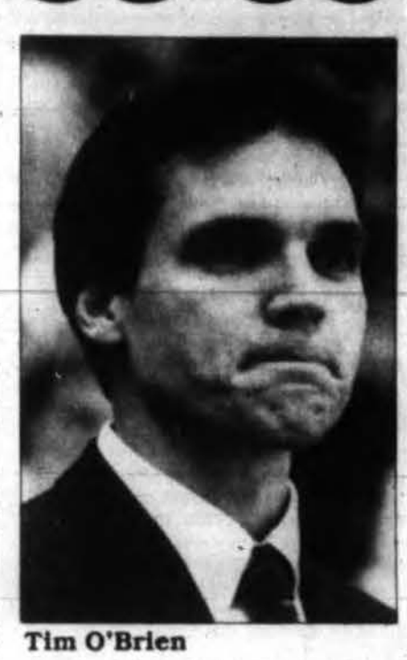
Despite an ice-cold start and a backs-to-the-way effort to the finish, the Eagles came to within a prayer shot at the buzzer of shoving the game into overtime against Orange County's No. 1-rated quintet, Saddleback's visiting Roadrunners.

"They just intimidated us in the first half," said O'Brien, "but we were still in the game and had a chance to win it in the last 10 seconds. It was a nice comeback."

Estancia, which had fallen behind by as many as 13 in the first half, pulled to within 53-51 with 55 seconds left on Tim Kjar's drive through the lane, and to within 55-53 with 26 seconds left on Andy Scholes' inside shot off a rebound.

Sean Simon's free throw gave Saddleback a 56-53 lead with 24 seconds left, but Augustin Heredia's effort to draw a foul as he moved inside with six seconds left found him getting the bucket, but no foul came and the Eagles were down by a 56-55 count.

Tony Agnew was fouled with two seconds left and made good on both attempts for the final margin, leaving the Eagles just a prayer half-court shot by Mike Curtis, which went unrewarded as time expired.



Tim O'Brien

For Saddleback it was a near-miss and Roadrunners' Coach Pat Quinn commented, "Nobody said this is going to be easy."

What made it appear easy for some time was the defense of Craig Marshall, who held the high-scoring Curtis to no field goals in the first half and 15 overall, as well as the sharp-shooting and rebounding of Malru Dottin, who led all scorers with 28.

"Marshall did a good job on Curtis," said Quinn, "but it took a lot out of him offensively."

It was a streaky game with Estancia unable to score for the first 7:17 of the game and Saddleback suffering a 1-for-10 effort in the third quarter as the

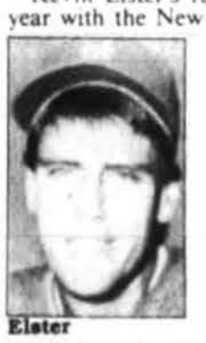
Elster building on a foundation

Outlook appears bright for product of Marina, GWC

By JON FERGUSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Kevin Elster's results in his first year with the New York Mets were mixed — some were impressive while others showed inconsistency.



Elster

But one constant seems to be the coaches' continued optimism for the future of the 24-year-old shortstop, a longtime resident of Huntington Beach who prepped at Marina High and attended Golden West College before being drafted by the Mets in 1984.

"He had a great defensive year and a frustrating offensive year," said Bud Harrelson, the Mets' dugout coach who managed Elster during his first year of pro ball at Class A Little Falls in 1984. "He knows it will come. He is as good a shortstop as there is in the league, and he will get better."

Manager Davey Johnson called 1988 a learning experience for Elster "about what it takes," but that "the best is yet to come.

"I know he felt he could do a lot better, but I felt he had a fine year. He has a few adjustments to make, but I'm sure he'll make them."

Elster started 122 games at shortstop for the National League East Division champions, and only outfielder Darryl Strawberry played in more games overall with the Mets than Elster's 149. In the field, he went the final 61 games without an error, making his last miscue on July 19.

"I've established myself, built a foundation," Elster said. "Now I can build on it."

Most of the construction will come at the plate, where he showed flashes of brilliance around many dry spells, many clutch hits around many games where he was used only as a defensive replacement after falling into short slumps.

The final numbers included a .214 batting average, nine home runs and 37 RBI. He had the lowest on-base percentage (.282) of any full-time player, yet six game-winning RBI, a two-homer outing vs. the Dodgers and a four-hit game.

"I told him I really feel he'll hit at least 30 or so points higher and drive in 20 more runs (next season)," Johnson said. "It's a learning experience, and he's getting used to different pitchers and different strike zones, and he played very well."

AP Laserphoto

The future appears bright for Mets' shortstop Kevin Elster, formerly of Marina High and Golden West College.

The four-hit outing against the Braves came within a two-week stretch when he hit .412 with six RBI during late April and early May. He was hitting .146 up to that binge, had only five hits in the 36 at-bats which followed, but then went 5 for 16 and one week later. A few days after that, he drove an 11th-inning homer to beat the Dodgers.

"He had an up-and-down year," said Bill Robinson, the Mets' batting and first base coach. "One thing that I admire about him is it never has affected his attitude. He has a good mental approach. He accepts when he goes 0 for 4 and we win the ballgame. He never really gets down on himself."

Elster fashioned 19 multiple-hit games; 10 multiple-RBI games, and his 12 intentional walks were the most for a National League middle infielder, although he usually batted in front of the pitcher.

"I never really was consistent," Elster said. "I had a lot of cluth hits. About all I had were clutch hits. I'm happy with the year. My defense was awesome. That's what I wanted to do."

Pirates overcome lapse, win, 56-49

Saddleback defense causes long lull, but Coast pulls out win

By JON FERGUSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange Coast College Coach Tandy Gillis can't complain about being 2-0 and atop the Orange Empire Conference men's basketball standings, but if the Pirates are to stay there he knows they can't afford the kind of lapse they had Wednesday night too often.

In a 56-49 victory over the same Saddleback College team which upset Riverside Saturday, the Pirates went from dominating the game with hot shooting at the start to a six-point second-half deficit, then back to the lead for good.

"I can't complain about (being 2-0)," Gillis said. "But I think we can play better. We have to play better. They had a good aggressive zone and we got a little lazy. We'll take the win, but we didn't play very well. Their defense made us look bad."

Dareck Crane finished with 16 points to lead Orange Coast, 17-4 overall, while Chip Hanlon added 15 points and nine rebounds, including seven in the second half. Derek Johnson hit three treys in the first half en route to netting 11 points. Saddleback, 8-11, 1-2, was led by Wun Versher's 14 points.

After taking a 20-8 lead with 10:42 remaining in the first half, Orange Coast managed just eight points in the next 15 minutes to fall behind 34-28 with 16:04 remaining in the game. The Pirates had 23 turnovers in the game, and 16 of them came on 25 possessions during that 15-minute span.

"We turned the ball over 12 times in the first half, then at the start of the second half we go three minutes without a shot," Gillis said. "They did a good job."

The shooting of Crane, Johnson and Hanlon sparked the Pirates to the early lead as OCC hit nine of its first 13 shots.

A vote for Rebels as favorites

BILL MULLIGAN

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

We have now played UNLV and UC Santa Barbara on the road and they are the two favorites in the Big West Conference.

Lost by 15 to UNLV and by 16 to UCSB. How do they compare? I like the Runnin' Rebels. Why? They have more big-time athletes and are well coached.

UCSB is well coached and has good athletes, but not as many as UNLV. Now if you are smart, you will not listen to me, because none of the teams I picked for the "Final Four" last March made it that far. Saw Pacific play the Rebels on TV Monday night and thought the Tigers were a pretty good team, yet they were never in the game.

Utah State won at New Mexico State last Sunday and even though the teams are comparable, I did not feel that Utah State could win at Las Cruces.

At the beginning of the season, we all thought that Utah State's Dan Conway was one of the five best players in the conference and he is averaging seven points per game.

Ron Adams, in his third year as head coach at Fresno State, won one road game during his first two years, and this season he has already picked up wins at Utah State and San Jose State.

His job is on the line and right now, it looks as if he is saving it. Ron is a really nice guy and I hope he has success this year.

John Sneed at Cal State Fullerton is doing a nice job as interim coach, but at this moment, it probably is not

Barons get past Edison

Corcoran paces Fountain Valley to 75-67 triumph

By RICHARD DUNN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Coming in, the billing of strength and height went to Edison High while speed and quickness was Fountain Valley's forte.

It became an upbeat kind of night for the Barons, just the way they like it as they danced to the beat of Edison on the Chargers' basketball floor.

Junior guard Derrick Corcoran, Fountain Valley's 5-11, 160-pound blitzer of a shooter, led a surge to open the gap in the third quarter as the Barons prevailed, 75-67, in a Sunset League game Wednesday night.

Corcoran scored all of his 15 points on 3-pointers, including four in the third quarter as the Barons took a 10-point lead (49-39) with 4:01 left in the period.

Merli

Fountain Valley's muscle came from Mike Merli, who scored 20 points and grabbed a game-high 14 rebounds, including seven in the fourth quarter.

Edison's front line of 6-9 center Bill Martineau and forwards Steve Thobe (6-4½) and Bryan Murphy (6-4) proved, in the end, they were no match for the rabbits of Fountain Valley, who upped their league mark to 2-0 and overall record to 14-2.

Merli, a 6-5 junior forward, and center Mike Cook (6-5) are as big as the Barons get. They rely heavily on sharp-shooting guards Corcoran and Tom Weaver and the presence of

Oilers rally past Marina 62-61 in Sunset opener; Seahawks cruise, 88-27

Huntington Beach High Coach Roy Miller must have been wondering what else his team could possibly do after holding down 6-foot-10 Marina center Cherokee Parks but still trailing by eight in the fourth quarter.

What the Oilers did was hang tough and rally to pull out a 62-61 Sunset League boys basketball victory over the Vikings on Jeff Long's tipin at the final buzzer. The Oilers improved to 1-1 in league, 6-9 overall, while Marina fell to 1-1, 8-9.

Parks was limited to 14 points and five rebounds, but the backcourt duo of Tuan Nguyen and Francis Carreon scored 22 and 17 points respectively as Marina hit 22 of 28 field goal attempts in the game for 79 percent, including six of 11 3-point shots. Both guards registered season highs. Nguyen hit five of six 3-point attempts.

"We ran a box-and-one and that pretty much took Cherokee out of the game, but their perimeter players came thorugh — Carreon and Nguyen — and shot the lights out," said Miller, adding that in the second half he knew his squad could not afford to extend on the outside shooters and give Parks an opportunity.

Huntington Beach hit 56 percent from the floor, shooting mostly inside, and enjoyed a 31-20 advantage on the boards, including 13 offensive rebounds. Long, who scored 21 points, benefitted from many of those, grabbing 11 rebounds, five of them offensive. Yet despite those stats, Marina's shooting nearly carried the Vikes to victory.

Marina led at each stop and built an eight-point advantage, its largest of the game, with about five minutes to play. But Huntington stepped up its defensive pressure and forced some turnovers to rally for a 60-59 lead with a minute left. Parks hit a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left.

CdM...

never in doubt, except for the first five minutes of the second quarter when University got as close as two, the focus turned to how low CdM could hold University on the scoreboard.

The Sea Kings raced out to a 11-0 lead after the opening tipoff led by senior point-man Matt Cwiertnia. Cwiertnia canned two three-pointers, the first to open the contest and the second followed Chris Pliha's turnaround from six, to give CdM a 8-0 lead. Warren Johnson followed Cwiertnia's cue and hit another from long range to put Corona up 11-0 with 3:38 left in the first quarter.

Erik Glassen finally put the Trojans on the board five seconds later on a nice play. Glassen went high for a rebound then drew the foul from Pliha on a turnaround from eight. Glassen converted the free throw and Uni trailed by eight.

But Matt Herrington answered from 18 on the other end to push the lead back to 10. Brian Spratt hit a free throw to give CdM a 14-3 first quarter lead.

Johnson led the Sea Kings with 13 points while Herrington added nine and Cwiertnia had 8. The Trojans were led by Glassen's 10 and Mumaw's seven.

"This first win is a big leg up for us," Orris said. "Now we've got Newport Harbor Friday night and that's going to be an all-out war."

University did manage to control the first part of the second quarter when the Trojans went on a 9-0 run the first five minutes of the period. After a Mumaw free throw, Glassen hit from 3-point country, cutting the lead to 14-7. Glassen then drew the foul from Herrington while making a seven-foot running jump hook. The ensuing free throw cut the lead to four.

Brian Spratt missed the layin on the other end and then fouled Mumaw. Mumaw hit both ends of a one-and-one and it looked like University might make a game of it.

The Sea Kings answered however on a 13-footer from Herrington and five free throws to take a 20-13 lead into halftime.

From there it was all CdM. The Sea Kings took their biggest advantage at 41-23 with just under two minutes left. They would have held the Trojans under 30 points, but Jason Harris' concession layin at the buzzer prevented that.

Newport falls short

Newport Harbor High found a 15-point deficit in the third quarter too much of a hill to climb and dropped its Sea View League opener to visiting Tustin, 70-61, Wednesday night.

The Sailors, who trailed most of the way, were down 55-40 in the third quarter before staging a comeback. Newport, 11-5 overall, scored the next 10 points to make it 55-50, then rallied to close within 64-61 in the late stages before Tustin sealed it by scoring the final six points at the free-throw line.

Paig Parish fueled the rally by putting down four 3-pointers in the second half. Scott Gray led Newport with 16 points and 16 rebounds, while Parish finished with 14 points and Chris Lee 12.

Jason Moore was the top scorer for Tustin, 10-5, with 18 points.

Sophomore Paul McDaniels moves through close quarters in Estancia's 58-55 loss to Saddleback Wednesday night.

EAGLES FALL, 58-55...

From B1

Eagles fought back to make a game of it.

Estancia's quick hands helped force 21 Saddleback turnovers, a season high, but Quinn's biggest concern was the number of unforced turnovers his team committed (about half of them).

"We missed some easy shots," said Quinn, "but sometimes when you get the early lead things snowball and you start going conservative."

Estancia's quickness was nothing new for Quinn and his Roadrunners, who had seen plenty of it in a romp over Riverside North in tournament play, but as Quinn said, "Riverside was quick, but not smart."

Estancia entered with a sound game plan and went after Saddleback with a tight zone geared to stop Dottin and Marshall with the emphasis placed on forcing the other Roadrunners to beat the Eagles.

But Dottin was equal to the task throughout with a solid game. His 28 points was a season-high and nearly doubled his average of 14.9 per game.

"I just want them to feel they played hard, smart and together," said O'Brien prior to the game. "The league championship won't be won or lost tonight."

As it turned out, his Eagles didn't play their game with the poor first half, but O'Brien wasn't disappointed.

Estancia's second-half production included 17 of 29 from the floor (58.6 percent), but playing catch-up, it was also a foul and hope situation and Saddleback took advantage at the line.

The Roadrunners connected on 22 of 33 attempts from the line, including their last five points. Additionally, the Eagles lost two players on fouls, as well as the services of Kjar for a number of minutes because of foul trouble.

The victory was Saddleback's 15th in 16 decisions this season, while Estancia falls to 13-2 overall.

Leading the Eagles was Heredia with 20 points.

SUNSET...

From B1

The Oilers came down court and missed, but the ball went out of bounds off a Marina player underneath. Huntington inbounded to Andy Thompson, who missed an outside jumper, but Long was there to convert the tip.

Thompson finished with 12 points. Steve Lucas had 11 and Scott Drake 10.

Ocean View 88, Westminster 27: The Seahawks dominated in every phase, scoring more in the first quarter, 28, than the Lions managed in the game.

Ocean View, 11-5, 1-1, jumped to a 10-0 lead and never looked back in bouncing back from Friday's opening night loss to Fountain Valley. Westminster, 3-11, 0-2, netted two field goals in the first quarter.

All but two Ocean View players scored, with Mike Frohn leading the way with 13 points. Darren Ernst chipped in with 11 and Greg Evans and John Pruess added 10, a season-high for Pruess.

Memory of brother gives Aztec player added incentive

From The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Every time Mitch McMullen steps onto the basketball court, the San Diego State center is keeping faith with his dead brother.

"Before he did pass away, I told him I wanted to dedicate what I did in basketball to him," McMullen said of a hospital room promise he made to Corey McMullen the week before he died of leukemia in summer 1987.

"Corey was really weak at the time. He basically told me that he appreciated it and he loved me for it. When I do go out there and play, I'm doing it for him."

Corey McMullen was the eldest of three brothers. He died at age 25, some 3½ years after doctors diagnosed the disease near the end of his senior year at Arizona State, where he played two seasons of basketball.

Mitch McMullen, five years Corey's junior, was a 17-year-old star at Hart High School in Newhall when he learned of his brother's illness.

The news sent the younger McMullen into a tailspin that nearly destroyed him as he began using drugs.

"I just couldn't face the reality that he was going to die," McMullen said. "Then I decided, 'Hey, look, I've got to make the best of it for him.' My parents, everybody in my family, were strong Christians, so I just kind of hung on to that to get me through those hard times.

"Our whole family is close," he said. "If we weren't close, who knows? I'd probably be a drug addict on the streets. That's why family is so important. When you've got a strong family, it holds you together. And obviously, if I wanted to keep playing basketball, I had to clean up my act."

Quote of the day

Misc.

SAN FRANCISCO — Athletic scholarships will be tougher to get for some incoming freshmen under a toughened Proposition 48 provision approved Wednesday by Division I schools at the NCAA convention.

By a 163-154 vote, delegates approved a measure they defeated 151-159 the day before. The new rule eliminates the partial qualifier and significantly tightens the Proposition 48 freshman eligibility requirements.

The rule takes effect in 1990 and does not affect anyone currently enrolled.

A partial qualifier is a high school graduate with a 2.0 overall grade point who does not meet other Proposition 48 requirements such as minimum test scores or a 2.0 average in college prepatory courses.

Previously, partial qualifiers could receive full scholarship aid but had to sit out their freshman year and then have only three years of eligibility left.

Non-qualfiers now must pay their own way their freshman year and still sit out without playing or practicing.

Manson, who had only one goal last season, scored his 13th at 8:33 of the final period . . . Joe Nieuwendyk scored five goals to set a Calgary record, including four in the second period that tied the NHL record, leading the Flames past visiting Winnepeg, 8-3.

Couples takes early Hope lead

PALM DESERT — Fred Couples shot a 7-under-par 65 Wednesday to take the first-round lead in the five-day Bob Hope Classic.

Couples made nine birdies in his round at Indian Wells, the shortest and easiest of the four desert resort courses used for the first 72 holes of the 90-hole event.

The format calls for the 128 pros to play one round on each of the courses, each with a different team of three amateurs, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Bermuda Dunes on Sunday.

Jim Gallagher, Brad Bryant and Peter Jacobsen, the other first-round pace-setters, all played at the 6,478-yard Indian Wells course.

Gallagher birdied four of his last five holes for a 66, while Bryant and Jacobsen shot 67s.

About half the large group at 68 also played at Indian Wells.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Rebels outlast Fresno State for 83-77 win

From The Associated Press

Stacey Augmon scored 18 points, including the go-ahead basket with 2:44 remaining, and No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fresno State, 83-77, Wednesday night in the Big West Conference.

Stacey Augmon

Augmon rebounded his own missed shot and put in a layup for a 75-74 lead. Moses Scurry then stole a pass and scored on a layup with 2:31 left for a three-point lead.

UNLV, now 6-0 in conference and 11-2 overall, trailed most of the game and was down 41-37 at halftime. Forward Jervis Cole led Fresno with 26 points, including 16 in the first half. Fresno is 7-5 and 2-1.

In other games involving top 20 teams:

Duke 100, William & Mary 38: Christian Laettner scored 13 points to lead six players in double figures as top-ranked Duke breezed. Duke, 12-0, scored almost at will while forcing the Tribe, 2-10, into 27 turnovers.

Georgetown 76, Pittsburgh 57: Charles Smith scored 19 points and No. 7 Georgetown held Pittsburgh to 19 points in the first half for the Big East victory. Georgetown, which never trailed, improved to 11-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference.

North Carolina 88, Maryland 72: Kevin Madden scored 25 points and Rick Fox had 18 to lead No. 8 North Carolina to the Atlantic Coast Conference victory. J.R. Reid, still playing as a reserve since his return to action from foot surgery, scored 17 points as North Carolina raised its record to 14-2 in its league opener.

In West Coast Athletic Conference openers:

Pepperdine 72, Santa Clara 63: Dexter Howard scored 21 points and Tom Lewis added 17 to pace the Waves.

Loyola Marymount 113, San Francisco 95: Center Hank Gathers scored 36 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead the Lions.

Edison turns back Barons

Mike Hawks scored the tie-breaking goal 30 minutes into the second half to lift the Edison High boys soccer team to a 2-1 decision over visiting Fountain Valley Wednesday.

Hawks' goal came on a throw-in from Brian Higgins and kept the Chargers' record unblemished in Sunset League play after two matches.

Higgins had scored the first goal 17 minutes into the match to give the Chargers, 8-3-1 overall, a 1-0 lead at the half. Derek Mahoney knotted the score for the Barons, 12-6-1, 0-2, at 24 minutes of the second half on an assist by P.J. Polowski.

Elsewhere in the Sunset League:

Marina 4, Huntington Beach 0: The Vikings also improved to 2-0 in league play, scoring a pair of goals in each half. Christian MacKenney, Mike Kazack, Lance Barker and Eric Oudmayer each tallied as Marina improved to 10-4-2 overall with a 6 o'clock showdown against Edison set for Friday evening at Westminster.

In the Sea View League:

Corona del Mar 2, University 1: Chris Smith's breakaway goal in the second half broke a 1-1 tie and lifted the Sea Kings to the victory in the league opener. Matt Brown had the other goal for CdM, 6-3-4.

Sea King goalie Chris Connelly, whose knee injury prevented him from kicking the ball for much of the game, made a game-saving diving stop of a University shot late in the game.

Newport Harbor 0, Tustin 0: The Sailors had to settle for the scoreless deadlock in their league opener, despite outshooting the host Tillers, 9-5. Newport is 4-2-3 overall, while Tustin moves to 4-3-6.

Laguna Hills wears down Artists, 67-49

Hawks' 20-0 spurt puts Laguna Beach away

By ED ZINTEL
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Laguna Beach High's lack of depth caught up with it and so did the Laguna Hills High Hawks who cruised by the Artists in the third quarter and kept on going en route to a 67-49 win Wednesday night in a Pacific Coast League boys basketball opener at Laguna Hills.

Laguna Beach (6-8 overall), trailing 28-26 at the half, took a 32-30 edge early in the third quarter. But the Hawks, behind guard Chris Sheff, center Pat Nelson and reserve forward Trent DeVreugd, scored 20 straight points to blow it open, 50-32.

Nelson led Laguna Hills (9-6) with 15 points, followed by Sheff and DeVreugd with 11 each and forward Bill Schellenberg who scored 10.

Laguna Beach was led by forwards Dain Blanton and John Trevino with 13 each. Guard John McKeown added 12.

Laguna Hills outscored Laguna Beach, 18-6, in the third quarter and the rest was a breeze.

"That's the story of our team, we don't have depth and so we end up getting tired," said Laguna Beach Coach Ed Bowen. "They took us right out of our defense and forced us to foul. They just punched us out in the third quarter."

Indeed, the Artists saw it all explode in their faces just as they seemed to take over momentum.

A close fought first half saw Laguna Hills take a 16-12 first-quarter lead behind the play of Nelson who scored seven points, including a 3-point shot. But Laguna Beach's McKeown led a second quarter comeback. His third basket of the quarter tied it, 20-20.

Two baskets by Blanton and one by Sean Stafford gave the Artists the lead, 32-20, two minutes into the third quarter.

Then, following a timeout, the Hawks went to work. Nelson scored three baskets and DeVreugd added two to key the onslaught. But it was Sheff's two three-point plays following his own steals that broke the Artists' backs.

Sheff, the Laguna Hills' leading career scorer averaging 18 points this season, converted free throws after being fouled on his layups. Sheff also had eight assists and three steals to lead his team.

"When Sheff penetrated the middle and dumped it off, it was all ovewr for us," Bowen said. "There just wasn't much we could do when they started their fast break because my guys have to play the whole way and they just get gassed."

Woodbridge rallies, 56-51

Woodbridge High's Warriors, down by eight with three minutes left to upstart Costa Mesa, got some come-through efforts from Eric Lekas off the bench, tied it on one of five Bo Ashkenazy 3-pointers at 48 and went on to record the Pacific Coast League victory on their home floor in boys basketball Wednesday night.

Costa Mesa's quickness, and the return of Jose Casas after missing eight games because of a return to Spain, spearheaded the Mustangs' near-upset.

"The kids played their hearts out," said Mesa Coach Dean Cooper, whose hopes were dealt a severe blow when Timmy Nguyen fouled out early in the fourth quarter after scoring 18 points.

Woodbridge had foul problems too with Joey Cohen in constant trouble, but the Warriors were able to get out of it with the emergence of Lekas, whose four points in the fourth quarter, hustle and six rebounds kept them going.

In another PCL game:

Trabuco Hills 80, Orange 57: Rick Swanwick scored 27 points and had 14 rebounds and Chad Poulos and Luis Arenado each had seven assists as the Mustangs routed host Orange to improve to 9-5 overall, 1-0 in league.

Monarchs foil delay tactics

Mater Dei High withstood the four-corner delay tactics of visiting Bishop Montgomery and claimed a 71-42 boys basketball victory Wednesday night in the Angelus League.

The Knights, who were able to take two minutes off the clock at one point in the first quarter, held the Monarchs to just eight points in the period. However, the visitors went 0 for 8 from the floor and were shut out in the quarter.

The pace was nearly as slow in the second quarter with Mater Dei expanding its lead to 22-9 by halftime.

As the third quarter began, the Knights scrapped their plan and Mater Dei was able to begin building on its lead. Guard David Boyle pumped in 10 of his 14 points in the second half, hitting 7 of 9 from the field.

Derek Stone was 6 of 7 from the floor and finished with 13 points, while point guard Jason Quinn was credited with nine assists.

Mater Dei, 2-0 in the Angelus League and 17-2 overall, converted 26 of 44 field goal tries (59 percent).

Irvine bursts to 52-35 win over Dolphins

Irvine High's Vaqueros continued their winning ways in methodical fashion Wednesday night as the hosts put South Coast League rival Dana Hills away, 52-35, in boys basketball to improve to 16-2, overall, 2-0 in league.

Dana Hills crept to within 30-24 through three periods, but Irvine dropped in 16 of 18 from the line in the fourth quarter to seal it.

"Dana Hills was 12-3 and ranked in Orange County about 10 days ago, but they've lost four in a row and went to man-to-man defense, which is a little out of character for them," said Irvine Coach Steve Keith.

"They made a run and got it down to four, but Todd Trout had six points in a run near the start of the fourth quarter, which was real important, and Steve Dunmeyer hit 6 of 8 free throws."

BARONS...
From B1

Doug Weaver coming off the bench — just as they did in this one.

The Barons played to the tempo of their liking — fast. And when possible, faster.

"That's just what we wanted to do, that's the game we wanted to play," said Fountain Valley Coach Dave Brown. "However, they did an excellent job of dogging us the whole way. But with the tempo that high, it's certainly in our favor."

Cook produced 17 points for the Barons, including 11 in the fourth quarter. He also pulled down five rebounds.

Edison's big-play man was Martineau, who poured in a game-high 26 points while grabbing 13 rebounds — 10 of which came in the second half.

OCC...
From B1

"Then we got lax and took bad shots because we had hit the outside shots," Gillis said. "We got no offensive rebounds. That tells you something. We got complacent and took some bad shots, because we thought we had the game won. They came back to their credit."

The Gauchos made 12 turnovers in the first 15 minutes of the game — including a 5½-minute scoreless stretch — which left them trailing 23-10. But Saddleback's defense picked up its intensity, forced turnovers and capitalized with baskets off six of them down the stretch of the first half.

Versher had eight points in a 14-3 run which pulled Saddleback within two, 26-24, at the half.

"We started in a man and they hit four in a row, so we went to a zone which we had worked on especially for a set we thought they would run against us," said Saddleback Coach Ernie Carr. "They didn't run it. That's when they started out to a big lead.

"Then we went to our regular zone. We had started so badly, I put three or four subs in and they got our level of intensity back up. Then I put the starters back in and (the intensity) carried through into the second half for a six-point lead. Then we just couldn't hit any baskets."

After forcing OCC turnovers on five of the Pirates' first six possessions of the second half and building a 34-28 edge with 16:04 remaining, Saddleback hit just six baskets the remainder of the game.

Johnson converted a pair of free throws for Coast and center Alan Schlines, who has been a key factor in the Pirates' success but had only two points Wednesday, added two more free throws to make it 34-32. From that point, OCC's turnovers disappeared and its hot hand returned as the Pirates began to penetrate the Gauchos' zone.

Saddleback took a 38-34 advantage on Versher's coast-to-coast drive, but OCC scored 11 straight — including five by Hanlon, four by Crane and two by LaMont Speed — to take the lead for good, 45-38.

"Marland Love came in and penetrated to the goal very well and got the ball off to Dareck Crane," Gillis said.

Carr summed up, "Allowing 56 points should be enough to win a basketball game. Our defense did its job. But they started to solve it in the middle of the second half. Fifty-six points should be enough to at least be right there at the end. But it's to their credit that they defended well."

good enough to keep the job on a permanent basis.

Maybe the Titans will come back as the season progresses. I hope so for John's sake.

The Loyola Marymount-USIU game had to be a classic last Saturday. USIU scored 144 points and lost rather handily.

Loyola is good, but there are some teams in the WCAC who can give them all they want this season. St. Mary's lost to Stanford by one point and USF defeated Notre Dame by four — yes Virginia, the USF team that beat us by two.

Pepperdine and Santa Clara are also good teams. The WCAC has gotten better. Loyola's Jeff Fryer, who is an ex-Corona del Mar player, is doing a great job. When the Lions get Bo Kimble back, they'll be even better.

OTHER LOCALS DOING WELL: Hawaii is enjoying a good season and one of its best players, Vincent Smalls, was at Saddleback College last year... Adam Keefe is doing very well at Stanford. Here's an Irvine guy (Woodbridge High) who we wanted very badly — he would have been a big star in our program and probably will be very soon at Stanford... Gylan Dottin from Saddleback High is starting at the University of San Diego at point guard and is averaging 14 points per game... UCLA's Kevin Walker almost chose UCI out of high school and would have been a big-time player for us. He is a young Johnny Rogers. We have been the second choice in a lot of recruiting wars. Close does not cut it, though, does it?

I was honored at the Irvine Marriott Sunday night and inducted into the Champions Hall of Fame. It was a nice affair and I would like to thank them for honoring me.

Special thanks to Lee Ramos and all the people at the Marriott. My favorite writer, John Hall of the Register, was also there. John has done a column for so long — it never ceases to amaze me that he and other columnists can write one five days a week. I have an awful time just trying to do one a week.

I received a nice note from our chancellor on our win over UCLA. He indicated that he is with us, win or lose, but winning is much better. He sounded like a booster, but not the ones I wrote about last week — you remember, the high school boosters.

UC Santa Barbara deserves to be ranked in the nation's top 20. At this point, they and UNLV deserve to be considered two of the 20 best teams in the country. Arizona and Stanford also belong in that category.

On the road again in beautiful downtown San Jose Saturday night and exciting Logan, Utah, Monday night. The only way to play this game is to have all home games. We will finally be home on the 19th against Fresno State.

You can catch our games this weekend on Saturday night at 7:30 and Monday night at 6:30 on KPZE radio, with Rob Halvaks calling the action.

ELSTER...

From B1

Defense kept him in the lineup many times, while at others 28-year-old Howard Johnson would shift to shortstop and 26-year-old Dave Magadan took over at third base.

"Every time I went into a little slump, Howard would start at shortstop," Elster said. "Davey knows it's a pain for me, but what can he do? There's so much pressure on this team from the media. When we're winning, we have to keep doing well.

"If I was on a different club, I'd play every day," Elster said.

"I have Magadan and some others, and (Elster) still got over 400 at-bats," Davey Johnson said. "It's not as if he didn't play a lot. The only reason he lost playing time is because we needed to get (some more punch in the lineup at times)."

With the arrival of 21-year-old infielder Greg Jefferies' potent bat in September and with 25-year-old infielder Keith Miller pushing his way to the big leagues for stints throughout the season, the Mets are stocked with young and talented infielders.

Enough talent that 29-year-old second baseman Wally Backman, who hit .303, was traded to Minnesota during the wealth of deals at the winter meetings. Johnson's name was mentioned in numerous deals, none of which materialized. Elster's name turned up in the rumor mill, but the Mets called him at home to assure the reports were not rooted within the organization.

While he desires to play in Southern California, that day doesn't appear to be in the near future.

He was marked for a major league uniform since the Mets drafted him, and his rapid climb included stints with the club during its World Championship season in 1986 and in September of 1987. After an all-star season at Tidewater in '87, New York was convinced his time had arrived and incumbent Rafael Santana was dealt.

"He did a better job all around than Santana did," Davey Johnson said. "He drove in a lot of key runs, played better defense and had better range than Rafael. In another two years' time, he'll be one of the top shortstops in the league, all around. That's how much we think of him."

Elster, who isn't short on confidence, began to feel more relaxed at the plate late in the season, and knows that will be a key factor this season in Davey Johnson's occasional switch to Howard Johnson at shortstop. But while the team is loaded with strong hitters, Elster is the only true shortstop and ranks well above the rest when it comes to handling ground balls.

AP Laserphoto

Kevin Elster's first season with New York ended in disappointment after the Dodgers eliminated the Mets in the playoffs.

"I don't feel anyone pushing me," Elster said. "He can't go with HoJo at shortstop every game. I know I can play anywhere (in the league). I know there's a lot of clubs out there that would want me. It's one of those things. I understand it, and I'm not going to worry about it."

Elster, who returns this weekend from a Mets promotional cruise in the Caribbean, has always been a hard worker. He recently bought a home in Huntington Beach and works out with former teammate Shane Flores during the off-season at Golden West, where he hit .338 in 1983 and .349 in 1984 with the Rustlers under Coach Fred Hoover.

He alternates days at the diamond taking batting practice and ground balls with days at a local health club pumping free weights.

"He's a good kid, a good worker," said Robinson. "He'll do a lot of extra hitting if I ask him. When I really suggested that he needed to do extra hitting and to be there at a certain time, he's there."

With no doubts surrounding his fielding ability, 1989 will present a different challenge.

"I've accomplished what I wanted to do defensively," Elster said. "Hopefully, I'll accomplish what I want to with my hitting next year."

At Tidewater in '87, he finished fifth in the league in hitting at .311, led the league and set a club record for hits, had 53 multiple-hit games, 74 RBI and never allowed his average to drop below .300 after May 22. It's developing the same kind of consistency which provides Elster's major challenge.

Harrelson said Elster's biggest adjustment comes from hitting near the top of the order in the minors to batting eighth in the potent Mets lineup.

"He's been a little pull conscious," Harrelson said. "And when you're hitting eighth, it's (a matter of) not striking out (47 times in '88).

"I think it's self-induced pressure. I think he's altered his swing a bit. If he is to hit over .300, which he did in the minors, you have to use the whole field. On this ball club, he's hitting eighth. He had trouble adjusting to that, and it's tough for him to get out of that."

Robinson calls Elster's steady demeanor his strength.

"His biggest asset is when he gets three strikeouts in a game, he'll turn around and pop one the next time," Robinson said. "He's hit some big home runs. He gives us drives in a shortstop that very few people have. He probably has more power than any shortstop we've had. He can hit the ball in the gap."

Robinson said he believes the consistency will come with more at bats, and Elster is ironing out his flaws, "slowly but surely.

"He has some things to work on... a little more kill in his swing. His swing is not always short and compact. A few times, he'll give in to a pitch. He doesn't have that total confidence in every pitch."

Elster said he tried to guess pitchers too often at the plate, leaving himself tentative in the process "instead of just concentrating and swinging at the ball."

In the game of baseball, a world under the microscope of constant outside critiques, Elster remains focused and exudes a cocky confidence.

"I'd like to see that confidence manifest itself at the plate," Robinson said. "I'd like to see him go up totally confident and cocky every at bat. I don't believe he's a .215, .216 hitter. I believe he can hit over .250 if he starts to hit the ball where the ball is pitched on the plate."

Harrelson summed it up pretty succinctly.

"He can hit, and he will hit."

Ballew takes over SCYA helm

Yachting group names officers for upcoming year

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

For more than six decades, the Southern California Yachting Association (SCYA) has been the governing body of yachting activity in Southern California.

As of now, it represents more than 70 yacht clubs from San Diego to Fresno, plus clubs in Nevada and Arizona.

Last Saturday at Balboa Yacht Club, John Ballew of Laguna Beach took over the helm of the burgeoning organization, relieving Roger Wilson of Marina del Rey.

Before a packed house at Balboa Yacht Club, the evening was highlighted by the appearance of the women's 470 Class gold medalists in the 1988 Olympics, Allison Jolly and Lynn Jewell, who were presented with the Amy Gram Olympic Trophy, a beautiful silver bowl.

John Ballew

Yours truly was awarded the Jim Webster Award for outstanding contribution to yachting.

Installed as vice commodore was Burton Jay of San Diego. Others taking office for 1989 were George Hively, rear commodore; Gene O'Connell, secretary; Jerry Olson, treasurer; Justin McCarthy, judge advocate; Alan V. Andrews, fleet surgeon; Don Becker, fleet captain; Cec Hubbard, port captain, and Roger Wilson, junior staff commodore.

Ballew has been commodore of Capistrano Bay Yacht Club, president of the Newport Ocean Sailing Association, and is currently a director in Balboa Yacht Club.

The first big event of SCYA is the Midwinter Regatta, scheduled for Feb. 18-20 which annually draws upwards of 900 boats in over 70 classes. Rod Woods is chairman of this year's "Midwinters."

Woods reported several changes in this year's Midwinters. There will be an inclusion of an Ancient Mariner Class (old wooden boats), and a class of Prindle catamarans at Cabrillo Beach Yacht Club.

NOTICE OF DEATH AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF TEDDY L. FALK aka Ted L. Falk aka Teddy Lambert Falk
CASE NO. A146241

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of Teddy L. Falk aka Ted L. Falk, aka Teddy Lambert Falk.

A PETITION has been filed by La Vern Carlson Aiello in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange, requesting that La Vern Carlson Aiello be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority allows the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain actions, however, the personal representative is required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to this petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on January 19, 1989, at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. #3 located at 700 Civic Center Drive, in the City of Santa Ana, California 92701.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisement of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner: KEENE AND DION, Attorneys at Law, 350 E. 17th St. #111, Costa Mesa, CA 92627, (714) 645-4044.

good enough to keep the job on a permanent basis.

Maybe the Titans will come back as the season progresses. I hope so for John's sake.

The Loyola Marymount-USIU game had to be a classic last Saturday. USIU scored 144 points and lost rather handily.

Loyola is good, but there are some teams in the WCAC who can give them all they want this season. St. Mary's lost to Stanford by one point and USF defeated Notre Dame by four — yes Virginia, the USF team that beat us by two.

Pepperdine and Santa Clara are also good teams. The WCAC has gotten better. Loyola's Jeff Fryer, who is an ex-Corona del Mar player, is doing a great job. When the Lions get Bo Kimble back, they'll be even better.

OTHER LOCALS DOING WELL: Hawaii is enjoying a good season and one of its best players, Vincent Smalls, was at Saddleback College last year... Adam Keefe is doing very well at Stanford. Here's an Irvine guy (Woodbridge High) who we wanted very badly — he would have been a big star in our program and probably will be very soon at Stanford... Gylan Dottin from Saddleback High is starting at the University of San Diego at point guard and is averaging 14 points per game... UCLA's Kevin Walker almost chose UCI out of high school and would have been a big-time player for us. He is a young Johnny Rogers. We have been the second choice in a lot of recruiting wars. Close does not cut it, though, does it?

I was honored at the Irvine Marriott Sunday night and inducted into the Champions Hall of Fame. It was a nice affair and I would like to thank them for honoring me.

Special thanks to Lee Ramos and all the people at the Marriott. My favorite writer, John Hall of the Register, was also there. John has done a column for so long — it never ceases to amaze me that he and other columnists can write one five days a week. I have an awful time just trying to do one a week.

I received a nice note from our chancellor on our win over UCLA. He indicated that he is with us, win or lose, but winning is much better. He sounded like a booster, but not the ones I wrote about last week — you remember, the high school boosters.

UC Santa Barbara deserves to be ranked in the nation's top 20. At this point, they and UNLV deserve to be considered two of the 20 best teams in the country. Arizona and Stanford also belong in that category.

On the road again in beautiful downtown San Jose Saturday night and exciting Logan, Utah, Monday night. The only way to play this game is to have all home games. We will finally be home on the 19th against Fresno State.

You can catch our games this weekend on Saturday night at 7:30 and Monday night at 6:30 on KPZE radio, with Rob Halvaks calling the action.

ELSTER...

From B1

Defense kept him in the lineup many times, while at others 28-year-old Howard Johnson would shift to shortstop and 26-year-old Dave Magadan took over at third base.

"Every time I went into a little slump, Howard would start at shortstop," Elster said. "Davey knows it's a pain for me, but what can he do? There's so much pressure on this team from the media. When we're winning, we have to keep doing well.

"If I was on a different club, I'd play every day," Elster said.

"I have Magadan and some others, and (Elster) still got over 400 at-bats," Davey Johnson said. "It's not as if he didn't play a lot. The only reason he lost playing time is because we needed to get (some more punch in the lineup at times)."

With the arrival of 21-year-old infielder Greg Jefferies' potent bat in September and with 25-year-old infielder Keith Miller pushing his way to the big leagues for stints throughout the season, the Mets are stocked with young and talented infielders.

Enough talent that 29-year-old second baseman Wally Backman, who hit .303, was traded to Minnesota during the wealth of deals at the winter meetings. Johnson's name was mentioned in numerous deals, none of which materialized. Elster's name turned up in the rumor mill, but the Mets called him at home to assure the reports were not rooted within the organization.

While he desires to play in Southern California, that day doesn't appear to be in the near future.

He was marked for a major league uniform since the Mets drafted him, and his rapid climb included stints with the club during its World Championship season in 1986 and in September of 1987. After an all-star season at Tidewater in '87, New York was convinced his time had arrived and incumbent Rafael Santana was dealt.

"He did a better job all around than Santana did," Davey Johnson said. "He drove in a lot of key runs, played better defense and had better range than Rafael. In another two years' time, he'll be one of the top shortstops in the league, all around. That's how much we think of him."

Elster, who isn't short on confidence, began to feel more relaxed at the plate late in the season, and knows that will be a key factor this season in Davey Johnson's occasional switch to

AP Laserphoto

Kevin Elster's first season with New York ended in disappointment after the Dodgers eliminated the Mets in the playoffs.

Howard Johnson at shortstop. But while the team is loaded with strong hitters, Elster is the only true shortstop and ranks well above the rest when it comes to handling ground balls.

"I don't feel anyone pushing me," Elster said. "He can't go with HoJo at shortstop every game. I know I can play anywhere (in the league). I know there's a lot of clubs out there that would want me. It's one of those things. I understand it, and I'm not going to worry about it."

Elster, who returns this weekend from a Mets promotional cruise in the Caribbean, has always been a hard worker. He recently bought a home in Huntington Beach and works out with former teammate Shane Flores during the off-season at Golden West, where he hit .338 in 1983 and .349 in 1984 with the Rustlers under Coach Fred Hoover.

He alternates days at the diamond taking batting practice and ground balls with days at a local health club pumping free weights.

"He's a good kid, a good worker," said Robinson. "He'll do a lot of extra hitting if I ask him. When I really suggested that he needed to do extra hitting and to be there at a certain time, he's there."

With no doubts surrounding his fielding ability, 1989 will present a different challenge.

"I've accomplished what I wanted to do defensively," Elster said. "Hopefully, I'll accomplish what I want to with my hitting next year."

At Tidewater in '87, he finished fifth in the league in hitting at .311, led the league and set a club record for hits, had 53 multiple-hit games, 74 RBI and never allowed his average to drop below .300 after May 22. It's developing the same kind of consistency which provides Elster's major challenge.

Harrelson said Elster's biggest adjustment comes from hitting near the top of the order in the minors to batting eighth in the potent Mets lineup.

"He's been a little pull conscious," Harrelson said. "And when you're hitting eighth, it's (a matter of) not striking out (47 times in '88).

"I think it's self-induced pressure. I think he's altered his swing a bit. If he is to hit over .300, which he did in the minors, you have to use the whole field. On this ball club, he's hitting eighth. He had trouble adjusting to that, and it's tough for him to get out of that."

Robinson calls Elster's steady demeanor his strength.

"His biggest asset is when he gets three strikeouts in a game, he'll turn around and pop one the next time," Robinson said. "He's hit some big home runs. He gives us drives in a shortstop that very few people have. He probably has more power than any shortstop we've had. He can hit the ball in the gap."

Robinson said he believes the consistency will come with more at bats, and Elster is ironing out his flaws, "slowly but surely.

"He has some things to work on... a little more kill in his swing. His swing is not always short and compact. A few times, he'll give in to a pitch. He doesn't have that total confidence in every pitch."

Elster said he tried to guess pitchers too often at the plate, leaving himself tentative in the process "instead of just concentrating and swinging at the ball."

In the game of baseball, a world under the microscope of constant outside critiques, Elster remains focused and exudes a cocky confidence.

"I'd like to see that confidence manifest itself at the plate," Robinson said. "I'd like to see him go up totally confident and cocky every at bat. I don't believe he's a .215, .216 hitter. I believe he can hit over .250 if he starts to hit the ball where the ball is pitched on the plate."

Harrelson summed it up pretty succinctly.

"He can hit, and he will hit."

Ballew takes over SCYA helm

Yachting group names officers for upcoming year

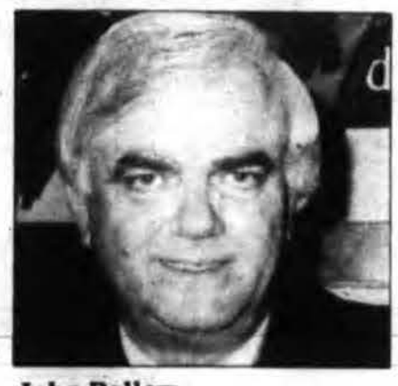
By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

For more than six decades, the Southern California Yachting Association (SCYA) has been the governing body of yachting activity in Southern California.

As of now, it represents more than 70 yacht clubs from San Diego to Fresno, plus clubs in Nevada and Arizona.

Last Saturday at Balboa Yacht Club, John Ballew of Laguna Beach took over the helm of the burgeoning organization, relieving Roger Wilson of Marina del Rey.

Before a packed house at Balboa Yacht Club, the evening was highlighted by the appearance of the women's 470 Class gold medalists in the 1988 Olympics, Allison Jolly and Lynn Jewell, who were presented with the Amy Gram Olympic Trophy, a beautiful silver bowl.



John Ballew

Yours truly was awarded the Jim Webster Award for outstanding contribution to yachting.

Installed as vice commodore was Burton Jay of San Diego. Others taking office for 1989 were George Hively, rear commodore; Gene O'Connell, secretary; Jerry Olson, treasurer; Justin McCarthy, judge advocate; Alan V. Andrews, fleet surgeon; Don Becker, fleet captain; Cec Hubbard, port captain, and Roger Wilson, junior staff commodore.

Ballew has been commodore of Capistrano Bay Yacht Club, president of the Newport Ocean Sailing Association, and is currently a director in Balboa Yacht Club.

The first big event of SCYA is the Midwinter Regatta, scheduled for Feb. 18-20 which annually draws upwards of 900 boats in over 70 classes. Rod Woods is chairman of this year's "Midwinters."

Woods reported several changes in this year's Midwinters. There will be an inclusion of an Ancient Mariner Class (old wooden boats), and a class of Prindle catamarans at Cabrillo Beach Yacht Club.

NOTICE OF DEATH AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF TEDDY L. FALK, aka Ted L. Falk, aka Teddy Lambert Falk
CASE NO. A146241

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of Teddy L. Falk, aka Ted L. Falk, aka Teddy Lambert Falk.

A PETITION has been filed by La Vern Carlson Aiello in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange, requesting that La Vern Carlson Aiello be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority allows the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain actions, however, the personal representative is required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to this petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on January 19, 1989, at 1:45 p.m. in Dept #3 located at 700 Civic Center Drive, in the City of Santa Ana, California 92701.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisement of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner: KEENE AND DION, Attorneys at Law, 350 E. 17th St., #111, Costa Mesa, CA 92627, (714) 645-4044.

STARTING A NEW BUSINESS??

The Legal Department at the Daily Pilot is pleased to announce a new service now available to new businesses.

We will now SEARCH the name for you at no extra charge, and save you the time and the trip to the Court House in Santa Ana. Then, of course, after the search is completed we will file your fictitious business name statement with the County Clerk, publish once a week for four weeks as required by law and then file your proof of publication with the County Clerk.

Please stop by to file your fictitious business statement at the Daily Pilot Legal Department, 330 West Bay, Costa Mesa, California. If you can not stop by, please call us at (714) 642-4321, Extension 315 or 316 and we will make arrangements for you to handle this procedure by mail.

If you should have any further questions, please call us and we will be more than glad to assist you.

Good luck in your new business!!

Personals 3002

O Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you, I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked.

Say three Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I had my request granted.
MCP

PRAYER to the Holy Spirit. Holy Spirit, you Who make me see everything and Who show me the way to reach my ideals; You Who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and You who are in all the instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You no matter how great material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Thank You for Your Love toward me and my loved ones. Amen
Persons may pray this prayer 3 consecutive days. After the third day, your wish will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted. MCP

This show going to dogs

If you are a dog lover who is sure your pet is the "best," then grab a leash and mosey over to the Best of the Show at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa on Saturday and Sunday.

More than 2,000 dogs will by vying for various titles, and 150 breeds will be shown. The Shoreline Dog Fanciers Association of Orange County will sponsor the competition that has attracted the most prestigious judges in the country, according to a fairground representative.

Dr. Harry Smith, with 25 years experience in judging dogs, will decide which is the best. Michele Billings with more than 30 years experience will judge all breeds.

In addition to the best of show, there will be competitions for sporting, working, hound, terrier, toy, non-sporting, herding, obedience, junior showmanship and other miscellaneious classes.

The Junior Showmanship matches handlers in 8 to 16 age groups. The public can ask questions to Dr. John Hammil, the show's veterinarian, who will be on hand both days.

The show runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults, $2.50 for children under 12 and seniors over 65. For additional information, call Freeman Claus, 544-9372.

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five-years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer, I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

Famous faces are HB artist's canvas

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

Instructor is Laura Woods, president of an advertising agency.

A simple, accurate recordkeeping system will be explained during another OCC workshop, slated from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Presenters Linda Pinson and Jerry Jinnett are small business owners, consultants and co-authors of four business textbooks.

For more information, phone 432-5880.

Owning a boat not necessary to enjoy sailing at this club

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dick and Gayle Nelson of Yorba Linda sometimes travel to Newport Beach every other weekend to enjoy a day of sailing.

They board a 25-footer, 35-footer or whatever suits their fancy — because they don't own their own boat.

They are members of the Lido Sailing Club in Newport Beach, a club designed for sailors who don't want the responsibility or financial burden of owning their own vessel.

Owner Norm Rest

"It's just a wonderful idea," Gayle Nelson said. "It's hard enough to find a mooring — and very expensive. You don't have to worry about maintenance or cleanup because it's all done for you.

"They keep their boats in excellent condition," she said.

Norm Rest, club owner, said membership is a "viable alternative to owning your own boat."

Founded in 1971, Rest said the club's service lends to recreation, knowledge and entertainment.

"We have 35 boats ranging from 25- to 45-feet that are owned by individuals and leased back to the club," he said. "We've taught more than 600 members to sail, whether it be beginning, intermediate or advanced."

New members pay a one-time fee of $190 and thereafter monthly dues. The fee includes 15 hours of sailing instructions with group and crew.

"Members learn safety, rules of the water, rigging, sail trimming, etiquette, navigation ... and overboard procedures," Rest said.

Monthly dues are $60, and $40 of that goes on account like a savings account. The money accumulates for usage of any size boat that ranges from $40 to $300 a day.

Boats are available for a 24-hour period and they are insured from Newport Beach to the Mexican border, Rest said.

Nelson said she and her husband love to spend the night aboard their leased-boat and sail the next day. She said there's lots of ways to spend a Saturday or Sunday aboard.

"Sometimes we'll fill our soup jug at the Crab Cooker and take friends aboard in the wintertime," she said. "Other times we've had Tony Roma deliver ribs."

Rest said owners make enough money to pay for their slip rent and are provided with free maintenance.

Lido Sailing Club is designed for people who want to sail but don't want the responsibility of owning a boat.

FV officer receives department honor

Paul Sorrell has been named the Fountain Valley Police Department's 1988 Officer of the Year.

The annual honor is voted on by the police department's 61 members who select an officer for his or her accomplishments in law enforcement, community service and interpersonal skills.

Sorrell has served seven and one-half years with the police department. For the last two years his assignment with the narcotics division has resulted in numerous arrests of narcotic offenders and seizures of illegal drugs. He is also a member of the department's SWAT team in which he coordinates and directs much of the training for the speciality unit.

"It been a lot of hard work this year in the field of narcotics," he said. "We have had several real good cases and that is probably the biggest reason I received the award. It is very nice to be recognized by my peers."

Police Chief Elvin Miali described the qualifications representative of the award.

"The officer is not only chosen for his leadership, outstanding performance in the field and rapport with peers," he said, "but because he is a coach, a friend and available when needed."

Sorrell has a bachelor's degree from Cal State Fullerton and advanced certificates in police training.

"He was selected for his ability in enforcement in narcotics and vice," Miali said. "It takes a special breed and a lot of dedication because of the hours. There is no set schedule.

"It is quite an honor and he is a well-deserved recipient," Miali said.

Sorrell is the father of two small children. Because of his undercover work, a photo was not released for publication.

CALENDAR ART DEVELOPS FOR NB PHOTOGRAPHER...

From A9

models can be a hard and sometimes painfull process, she said. Starting the selection as late as December, Gershenson is forced to make her decisions in time to meet the Jan. 1 deadline.

"What is really hard about picking models is that I sometimes have to turn them down," she said. It is really hard for some guys to take rejection because of the way they look. "And they are going to look that way for the rest of their lives."

She also believes that featuring males in the calendar has given her some new insight on how to better understand men. Calling it a "mini-psychology lesson," Gershenson said the calendar often creates large egos.

"When I get some of these guys to pose for me, it makes them feel real good about themselves," she said. "There is a lot more than just muscles and good looks to some. But sometimes, they can really get stuck on themselves. I won't put up with that."

Craig Runnalls, a 23-year-old economics major and co-captain of the varisty rowing team, is featured on this year's calendar. Recommended to Gershenson by another model, Runnalls was quickly chosen for the cover page. However, he says the honor did not go to his head.

"I got a lot of teasing from my friends about it," said the Newport Beach resident. "I was really pleased to be in the calendar, but I didn't get stuck on myself. Kim is right when she says we are just born this way. How can you be conceited about something you had nothing to do with."

While Gershenson sees a potential for some of her models to turn professional, many of them make the venture fun. In return for modeling, everyone in the calendar receives a free hair cut and pictures to add to his portfolio.

Gershenson gets little financial benefits from producing the calendar. It is the financial end of producing the calendar, including developing and publicity, that takes up most of her time. She has set up autograph-signing parties and "win-a-date" contests to help battle the $3,500 printing cost, which comes out of her own pocket.

"I am not really looking to get anything out of this because I know that there is not very much money to be made," she said. "It has opened up some doors for me, with people asking me to take pictures for them and put together calendars.

"Actually, I am just in it for the friendship. I enjoy helping people out by taking their picture, making them feel real good about themselves."

themselves and just feeling good."

French said she focuses on teaching women how to become their own makeup artist, and how to select products that work for them. She takes into consideration lifestyle, the image to be projected, facial bone structure, and skin type.

She charges $75 for a consultation that includes a detailed individualized workbook.

"I cover all the learning senses," she said. "They watch me apply the makeup, I explain as I go along and they read about it in the workbook.

"This is geared to the individual. I do require a follow-up, that is like fine tuning. If they don't follow up that frustrates me. I can only do as much as people let me."

French also sells a line of cosmetics she has carefully selected. Her background in working with most of the major cosmetic companies has given her an understanding of the product ingredients and formulas.

"They are all good basic skin care products at less than over-the-counter prices," she said. "Once you have been trained to put on the makeup, you don't have to look at it the rest of the day."

French also works with several Orange County plastic surgeons in teaching post cosmetic surgery patients how to apply makeup to their new look.

And like any other artist, it is hard for French not to look at people and silently create a new image.

"When I meet someone it takes me about 15 seconds to make them over in my mind. Then I'm satisfied and can forget about it," French said smiling.

attracted a few spectators. While popularity of the summer festivals grew each year, attendance for Winterfest quickly became overshadowed. According to Rowan, the "potential has always been there, but the way to do it hasn't.

"The chamber wants the festival to grow just like the summer counterparts have," she said. "We have taken several approaches to accomplish this. The biggest is expansion of the show."

Typically, Winterfest has been an arts and crafts show held at the Festival of Arts grounds. Exhibitors are allowed to rent a booth for four days, displaying their hand arts.

The 1989 festival will still follow this tradition, but will add an athletic side to the event by featuring such events as surfing, bodybuilding, skateboarding and golf.

"Sometimes, art is just not enough to carry a festival. Adding sports has opened up new doors," said Rowan.

This year, corporate sponsorships have become a priority. Already, companies such as Gotcha Sports and Pacific Telephone have made pledges to fund the event.

"Marketing seems to be paying off," she said. "At this point, we have received calls from as far away as Pheonix to participate in the festival. We have been really getting the word out."

Walk or run to aid homeless shelters

It seems like charity for the homeless has extended quite a bit past the holidays.

In Irvine, hundreds are expected to turn out to raise money for Christian Temporary Housing Facilities Inc. on Saturday. The non-profit organization provides housing for homeless families in Orange County.

A 13.1-mile Half-Marathon run and 5K Walk to benefit the homeless will take place on the old Lion Country Safari grounds. The run will be held on Irvine Center Drive, while the walk will be within the park.

Other activities include a Health and Fitness Fair, with booths displaying products of local merchants. A post-race brunch is also scheduled for the participants.

The goal is to raise $30,000 for the organization's two shelters. The corporation, which also offers more than 2,000 people each month an opportunity for counseling and job opportunity assistance, is looking for corporate sponsors for the event.

Information can be received by calling Christian Temporary Housing Facilities at 556-0636.

Fast work credited with stopping blaze in Trabuco; downed power line blamed

By PAUL ARCHIPLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A quick response by more than 200 firefighters was credited for the successful containment of a 125-acre Trabuco Canyon blaze that was whipped up by 60 mph winds Wednesday.

Investigators are blaming a downed power line for igniting the fire at about 8:20 p.m. near the intersection of Rose Canyon and Trabuco Canyon roads, said Kathleen Cha of the Orange County Fire Department.

Fanned by Santa Ana winds that gusted to 60 mph, the fire spread into the hills northeast of Rancho Santa Margarita.

About 50 houses along Mountain View and Sycamore roads were evacuated as flames lapped homeowners' yards, Cha said.

Firefighters also made an early stand around the Joplin Youth Center, a county facility for boys, that was threatened.

However, no structures were damaged and no one was injured, she said.

Despite the fierce winds, firefighters were able to contain the fire by 11:30 p.m. They remained on the scene throughout the night to douse hot spots.

Residents were allowed to return to their homes beginning at about 11:30 p.m., Cha said.

Livestock that was set free at the height of the blaze also had to be corralled.

The quick response by firefighters and recent rains helped prevent disaster, she said. In addition, winds slowed to about 30 mph later in the evening.

"Instead of being a dry brush fire it was a green grass fire. It could've been a lot worse," Cha said.

She said 220 Orange County firefighters were assisted by several city fire departments, as well as the California Division of the U.S. Department of Forestry.

Elsewhere in Southern California, winds reaching 80 mph destroyed a tethered blimp and forced closure of Ontario International Airport.

The Airships Inc. blimp moored at Ontario International was shredded by the high winds, leaving little more than its nose cone attached to its anchor pole, airport security Capt. Jerry Davis told the Associated Press. No one was injured.

Officials closed all runways there at about 9:30 p.m., diverting flights to Long Beach and Los Angeles international airports.

LA policeman charged with gun violations

A Los Angeles police officer has been charged with aiming a gun at a motorist while leaning out the sunroof of a moving limousine, then firing into the air during a wild night of celebrating his upcoming marriage.

Shots were reportedly fired along Pacific Coast Highway between Laguna Beach and Corona del Mar and again as the limousine traveled along the Costa Mesa Freeway.

The seven-month investigation by the Orange County district attorney's office concluded Officer Whitney Van Devander, 36, of Artesia, and his companions, Anaheim chiropractor Michael Blau and fellow off-duty Officer Christopher Ilizaliturri, made stops at several Orange County bars on the night of July 17 when Van Devander brandished the weapon and fired it into the air.

Deputy District Attorney Creighton Laz said Wednesday that Blau and Ilizaliturri had been cleared of any wrongdoing.

There were no reports of injuries in the incident.

Several people contacted authorities to report the gunfire, seen coming from the sunroof of the limo.

Executive Limousine Service, based in Fountain Valley, reportedly picked up the three men at Blau's Anaheim office at 6:30 p.m. and dropped them off well past midnight near Blau's Santiago Canyon home.

"The gun was pointed directly at me," said Edward Carraccioli, driver of the car behind the limousine. "I said, 'Oh, my God' ... and let off the gas pedal."

Carraccioli said he then watched as Van Devander fired four shots in the air, according to police reports.

Van Devander is a patrol officer in the Los Angeles Police Department's Southwest Division, but has been on extended sick leave since the shooting incident, Police Capt. Tom Elfmont said.

The department is conducting its own investigation and Van Devander could face disciplinary measures, including termination, Elfmont said.

Panel rejects earlier beach curfews

Oceanfront residents in Newport plan to appeal decision of parks commission

By IRIS YOKOI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A request by oceanfront residents to begin closing city beaches at 10 p.m. rather than the current midnight curfew has been voted down by the Newport Beach Parks, Beaches and Recreation Commission.

Commissioners cited concerns about enforcing the earlier closure time and restricting use of the beach in voting 4-2 against the change. The vote, however, is advisory only and not necessarily the final word on the matter.

Representatives of the Central Newport Beach Community Association, the Balboa Peninsula Point Association and the West Newport Beach Homeowners' Association said they will appeal the decision to the City Council.

The boards of the three homeowners' groups support closing all beaches at 10 p.m. except the Balboa Pier area where fire rings are provided, citing noise and other problems created by people on the beaches at night. The problems worsen during the summer because of the influx of tourists, residents say.

"We all have the same problems, not just with noise but with people not being able to find restrooms," said Phil Schonlau, a resident on Ocean Front in Balboa.

Closing the beach earlier will not solve all the problems, but "it's a step in the right direction," Schonlau said. "If the number of people on the beach is reduced by 50 percent, it's a step in the right direction."

An identical request was rejected by city officials five years ago, but Dayna Pettit, president of the Peninsula Point Association, said the idea warrants a fresh look because the number of tourists coming to Newport Beach continues to increase.

"The beaches are dark at night," she said. "There's no real reason people should be out on the beach."

Newport Beach Police Patrol Capt. Mike Blitch told the commission his officers haven't had much problem enforcing the 10 p.m. closing time at Corona del Mar State Beach because of its restricted access.

"But closing ocean beaches ... we're seldom completely successful at closing them down during the summer," he said.

Blitch did not have a definite recommendation on the issue, but said residents would have to understand that nightly sweeps of the beaches would be difficult because of lack of manpower.

"Were there no other problems in the city, then we'd have the manpower to do it," he said.

The camera zooms in on a group of sunbathers on the sandy beach of Corona del Mar. Suddenly, a muscular young man notices a strange red light flashing in the distant waters. Glancing up to the bluffs, he observes a second flash of red.

And when three of the sun-worshipers surreptitiously climb the bluffs to investigate — lo and behold — they witness two Russian agents engrossed in a sinister tale.

The plot thickens when one dark-haired girl is caught by the Russians and whisked away at gunpoint.

No, it's not "Moonlighting." this is Orange County's own nighttime soap opera, "Balboa Island." The 30-minute series is aired on public access cable stations at different times during the month.

The soap, now in its fourth year, is loosely patterned after the long-running "Dallas" and can be viewed by cable in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley, Costa Mesa and, of course, Balboa and the rest of Newport Beach.

"Balboa Island" is the brainchild of teacher-actor-director Robert Michael Conrad of Newport Beach, not to be confused with Hollywood's Robert Conrad.

The soap opera has all the ingredients viewers long for: romance, intrigue and murder.

Conrad is a theater arts teacher at Coastline Community College and a professional actor who has had small parts on several TV shows.

His Hollywood contacts have been a plus for the show. Randy Corday, a director of the "Bob Newhart Show," "Easy Street" and "Coming of Age," has directed several of the shows. Dale White, who has directed episodes of "Hill Street Blues," "Heart Beat" and "O'Hara," also has done some of the directing.

One particular show starred Adam West, the actor who became famous portraying Batman, as a Vietnam POW who returns home to find he has a teen-age son who doesn't know of his existence.

There are some glaring differences between the glitzy sizzling "Dallas," and the no-budget, PG-rated "Balboa Island," however.

Unlike the fabled television soap, "Balboa Island" airs monthly, making it difficult for viewers to follow a continuing story. Each show has a beginning and ending and does not involve a

Newport students disciplined for circular

By PAUL ARCHIPLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Administrators are disciplining a group of Newport Harbor High School students who distributed a publication on campus that was described as pornographic and obscene.

Dr. Dennis Evans, principal at Newport Harbor, said he wouldn't "dignify" the tract by calling it a newspaper. "It was full of obscenities and pornographic pictures," he said.

Students had cut out pictures from X-rated newspapers and magazines and directed comments in the circular toward other students and members of the faculty, Evans said.

They distributed about a hundred copies of the handout on the Friday before Christmas vacation. Faculty members were able to retrieve most of them, Evans said.

Administrators launched an investigation when schools reopened last week.

Evans couldn't say how many students were involved. They are being disciplined on an individual basis, he said. None have been expelled.

Participants were unable to explain why they did it, Evans said.

"I imagine at one time they thought it was humorous," he said.

"But the reason they gave finally was that they had made a terrible mistake."

Shots were reportedly fired along Pacific Coast Highway between Laguna Beach and Corona del Mar and again as the limousine traveled along the Costa Mesa Freeway.

The seven-month investigation by the Orange County district attorney's office concluded Officer Whitney Van Devander, 36, of Artesia, and his companions, Anaheim chiropractor Michael Blau and fellow off-duty Officer Christopher Ilizaliturri, made stops at several Orange County bars on the night of July 17 when Van Devander brandished the weapon and fired it into the air.

Deputy District Attorney Creighton Laz said Wednesday that Blau and Ilizaliturri had been cleared of any wrongdoing.

There were no reports of injuries in the incident.

Several people contacted authorities to report the gunfire, seen coming from the sunroof of the limo.

Executive Limousine Service, based in Fountain Valley, reportedly picked up the three men at Blau's Anaheim office at 6:30 p.m. and dropped them off well past midnight near Blau's Santiago Canyon home.

"The gun was pointed directly at me," said Edward Carraccioli, driver of the car behind the limousine. "I said, 'Oh, my God' ... and let off the gas pedal."

Carraccioli said he then watched as Van Devander fired four shots in the air, according to police reports.

Van Devander is a patrol officer in the Los Angeles Police Department's Southwest Division, but has been on extended sick leave since the shooting incident, Police Capt. Tom Elfmont said.

The department is conducting its own investigation and Van Devander could face disciplinary measures, including termination, Elfmont said.

Limousine chauffeur Robert Miller said the men assured him the shoot-

Panel rejects earlier beach curfews

Oceanfront residents in Newport plan to appeal decision of parks commission

By IRIS YOKOI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A request by oceanfront residents to begin closing city beaches at 10 p.m. rather than the current midnight curfew has been voted down by the Newport Beach Parks, Beaches and Recreation Commission.

Commissioners cited concerns about enforcing the earlier closure time and restricting use of the beach in voting 4-2 against the change. The vote, however, is advisory only and not necessarily the final word on the matter.

Representatives of the Central Newport Beach Community Association, the Balboa Peninsula Point Association and the West Newport Beach Homeowners' Association said they will appeal the decision to the City Council.

The boards of the three homeowners' groups support closing all beaches at 10 p.m. except the Balboa Pier area where fire rings are provided, citing noise and other problems created by people on the beaches at night. The problems worsen during the summer because of the influx of tourists, residents say.

"We all have the same problems, not just with noise but with people not being able to find restrooms," said Phil Schonlau, a resident on Ocean Front in Balboa.

Closing the beach earlier will not solve all the problems, but "it's a step in the right direction," Schonlau said. "If the number of people on the beach is reduced by 50 percent, it's a step in the right direction."

An identical request was rejected by city officials five years ago, but Dayna Pettit, president of the Peninsula Point Association, said the idea warrants a fresh look because the number of tourists coming to Newport Beach continues to increase.

"The beaches are dark at night," she said. "There's no real reason people should be out on the beach."

Newport Beach Police Patrol Capt. Mike Blitch told the commission his officers haven't had much problem enforcing the 10 p.m. closing time at Corona del Mar State Beach because of its restricted access.

"But closing ocean beaches ... we're seldom completely successful at closing them down during the summer," he said.

Blitch did not have a definite recommendation on the issue, but said residents would have to understand that nightly sweeps of the beaches would be difficult because of lack of manpower.

"Were there no other problems in the city, then we'd have the manpower to do it," he said.

The main problem area is the

TV soap proves 'Balboa Island' is 99.44% fun

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The camera zooms in on a group of sunbathers on the sandy beach of Corona del Mar. Suddenly, a muscular young man notices a strange red light flashing in the distant waters. Glancing up to the bluffs, he observes a second flash of red.

And when three of the sun-worshipers surreptitiously climb the bluffs to investigate — lo and behold — they witness two Russian agents engrossed in a sinister tale.

The plot thickens when one dark-haired girl is caught by the Russians and whisked away at gunpoint.

No, it's not "Moonlighting;" this is Orange County's own nighttime soap opera, "Balboa Island." The 30-minute series is aired on public access cable stations at different times during the month.

The soap, now in its fourth year, is loosely patterned after the long-running "Dallas" and can be viewed by cable in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley, Costa Mesa and, of course, Balboa and the rest of Newport Beach.

"Balboa Island" is the brainchild of teacher-actor-director Robert Michael Conrad of Newport Beach, not to be confused with Hollywood's Robert Conrad.

The soap opera has all the ingredients viewers long for: romance, intrigue and murder.

Conrad is a theater arts teacher at Coastline Community College and a professional actor who has had small parts on several TV shows.

His Hollywood contacts have been a plus for the show. Randy Corday, a director of the "Bob Newhart Show," "Easy Street" and "Coming of Age," has directed several of the shows. Dale White, who has directed episodes of "Hill Street Blues," "Heart Beat" and "O'Hara," also has done some of the directing.

One particular show starred Adam West, the actor who became famous portraying Batman, as a Vietnam POW who returns home to find he has a teen-age son who doesn't know of his existence.

There are some glaring differences between the glitzy sizzling "Dallas," and the no-budget, PG-rated "Balboa Island," however.

Unlike the fabled television soap, "Balboa Island" airs monthly, making it difficult for viewers to follow a continuing story. Each show has a beginning and ending and does not involve a

Newport students disciplined for circular

By PAUL ARCHIPLEY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Administrators are disciplining a group of Newport Harbor High School students who distributed a publication on campus that was described as pornographic and obscene.

Dr. Dennis Evans, principal at Newport Harbor, said he wouldn't "dignify" the tract by calling it a newspaper. "It was full of obscenities and pornographic pictures," he said.

Students had cut out pictures from X-rated newspapers and magazines and directed comments in the circular toward other students and members of the faculty, Evans said.

They distributed about a hundred copies of the handout on the Friday before Christmas vacation. Faculty members were able to retrieve most of them, Evans said.

Administrators launched an investigation when schools reopened last week.

Evans couldn't say how many students were involved. They are being disciplined on an individual basis, he said. None have been expelled.

Participants were unable to explain why they did it, Evans said.

"I imagine at one time they thought it was humorous," he said.

"But the reason they gave finally was that they had made a terrible mistake."

Chamber of Commerce's manager quits in Laguna

By LESLIE EARNEST
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The general manager of the Laguna Beach Chamber of Commerce, whose contract was not up for renewal until April, resigned suddenly Tuesday, according to Cheryl Ryan, who was recently named managing director of the chamber.

"It happened all of a sudden," Ryan said. "He resigned and perhaps he's going on to bigger and better things. I don't know."

Gary Bosley had been general manager since January 1988. However, a new top executive post of managing director was recently created for Ryan.

She was once a member of the Committee for Public Relations, a chamber faction organized in 1986 to oust what members considered ineffective chamber leadership.

Chamber president Chad Foutz had said late last week that Bosley's position was not threatened by the change in leadership.

"I can't ever commit that he's going to be there for life and I can't commit that he won't be," Foutz said. "His contract comes up for renewal in April. Whether that's renewed, I don't know at this point."

Bosley was not available for comment and Ryan chose not to discuss whether her being named managing director had anything to do with his departure.

"I came in to oversee the workings of the chamber and Gary was to do special projects, projects which he has expertise in and seemed to enjoy," Ryan said. "Then evidently he decided, well, as I say, perhaps he's found bigger and better things."

Neither Bosley nor Foutz were available for comment.

Ryan said she has not decided whether she will hire someone to replace Bosley.

"After being here three weeks, I'm going through files and looking into reorganizing a little bit," Ryan said. "Whether I hire somebody or not, I'm still not sure."

LA smog proposal praised

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A local effort to clean up the notoriously filthy air blanketing the nation's second-largest city has won the endorsement of an environmentalist who said an example is being set that the rest of the world should follow.

Mayor Tom Bradley recently proposed the cleanup plan, which includes such far-reaching proposals as planting 2 million to 5 million trees throughout the city during the next five years and sharply curtailing driving.

The 63-point proposal represents the first urban effort to curb the worldwide greenhouse effect, said Jeremy Rifkin, director of the Foundation on Economic Trends.

"This landmark project, initiated in a major American metropolis, will focus on the urban areas throughout the world," Rifkin said. "It is vital for the future of the planet that we begin to sharply reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other gases that contribute to the greenhouse effect."

Scientists use the term greenhouse effect to describe a condition they say continued air pollution could cause by creating a roof of pollutants that will form over the Earth's atmosphere. That pollution layer in turn will trap heat in the atmosphere, causing the Earth's temperature to rise several degrees, which in turn could have a catastrophic effect on the Earth's environment.

Bradley, who joined Rifkin at a City Hall news conference Wednesday, said he intends to ask mayors of cities throughout the world to emulate efforts undertaken by Los Angeles to reduce its air pollution.

Five-car collision snarls PCH traffic

An Encino man faces felony charges of drunken driving for his alleged contribution to a five-car crash that tied up rush-hour traffic on Pacific Coast Highway late Wednesday, Huntington Beach police said today.

Kevin C. Gysler allegedly drove his Toyota into the rear of a Chevrolet Blazer in the westbound lanes near the Bolsa Chica bluffs about 5 p.m., Officer Brian Davidson said.

Gysler's car and the Blazer both crossed over the center divider after impact and into the eastbound lanes where they collided head-on with three vehicles heading in the opposite direction, Davidson said.

"Four of the five vehicles received major damage," Davidson said. "We were lucky that nobody was seriously hurt," Davison said.

The multiple collision slowed busy coastal traffic to a trickle for about two hours while the wreckage and debris were cleared from the road.

Davidson said it appeared that Gysler, 36, who was arrested by police, ran into the rear of the vehicle in front of him while both cars were in motion.

Superior Court expansion OK'd

By The Associated Press

Orange County supervisors approved a spending plan to add more judges to the backlogged Superior Court system and more support workers for the crowded Municipal Courts.

Under the spending plan approved Wednesday, the county's court system will receive a $13 million, 175-employee expansion over the next 18 months.

The Municipal and Superior courts will divide up to $3.8 million in improvements between now and June 30 and $8.5 million worth of improvements in fiscal year 1989-90.

Also approved was a $3,500-a-year bonus for each of the county's 101 judges — a benefit that will cost the county $707,000 over the next 18 months.

ing was "all right" because they were police officers.

Miller said when the gun when off "my heart went into my throat" but he didn't put two and two together because of the solid partition separating the driver from the passengers.

He told investigators the three men were drinking and grew more inebriated as the evening progressed.

None of the limo passengers could be reached for comment, but Van Devander reportedly told investigators what was reported as gunshots were actually exploding firecrackers thrown from the limo.

Misdemeanor charges of brandishing a firearm and discharging a weapon on a highway were filed Tuesday in Orange County Municipal Court in Santa Ana, Laz said.

Van Devander is scheduled to be arraigned Feb. 2 in Municipal Court in Santa Ana.

problems.

Operations at John Wayne Airport were not affected, said spokeswoman Kathleen Rutherford.

"The people at operations said everything was tied down tight. They did say there is not much general aviation activity," she said.

Winds at the airport were clocked at 25 mph, with gusts to 40 mph, Rutherford said.

Mike Martin of Southern California Edison Co. said power outages were reported throughout Orange County, but none along the Orange Coast.

About 25,000 county customers experienced some power loss during the night, from 30 seconds to several hours, Martin said.

The bulk of the trouble was reported in the central county area. About 2,000 customers there were still without power this morning, he said.

The Sheriff's Harbor Patrol reported northeast winds to 40 mph in Newport Harbor, but no trouble, said Lt. Dick Olson. "They're watching everything very closely," he said.

Neither did the Highway Patrol find any troubles beyond the typical commuter headaches, said Officer Keith Thornhill.

"We did have a report of a downed motorcyclist on the 5 freeway, but it turned out he had pulled off and set the bike down until the winds died," Thornhill said. "That's not unusual."

Local officials also reported few wind-related troubles, although numerous alarms were set off.

"We've had nothing serious here, other than it kept everyone awake," said Lt. John Foster of the Huntington Beach Police Department.

The wind sent a falling tree crashing into a Chicago Pizza delivery truck at the corner of Barranca Parkway and East Yale Loop in Irvine. The truck was not seriously damaged and the driver was not injured.

Clear skies and decreasing winds were forecast for Friday throughout the region, according to the National Weather Service.

Wedge, located at the end of the Peninsula, and officers have increased enforcement there, Blitch said. Hundreds of people were arrested at the Wedge last summer, he said.

"The Wedge, we've put a lot of attention on because of the complaints," he said.

Commissioners Clyda Brenner and Virginia Herberts, who voted for the homeowners' request, said they were in favor of at least giving the earlier closure a try.

But other commissioners admitted to enjoying the beach at night themselves and said the beaches are a fairly safe, concentrated area where young people can congregate.

"It's not all tourists using the beaches," said Commissioner Jo Vandervort, who voted against the proposal along with Commissioners Taylor Grant, John Conwiser and Diana Springer.

"We need to enforce, it sounds like, the rules that exist," Grant said.

Commissioner A.Z. Taft abstained.

No one wins lotto jackpot

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State lottery officials said today that Saturday's lotto prize pool could reach $10 million to $12 million because nobody won the mid-week $5.6 million jackpot.

Six tickets bore five winning numbers plus the bonus to earn their holders $253,319 each, lottery officials said. The cities where those tickets were sold weren't immediately disclosed.

Another 283 tickets with five correct numbers are worth $2,767 each. Owners of 16,954 tickets with four numbers will receive $41 each. An automatic $5 goes to the holders of 295,126 tickets with three numbers.

The winning numbers picked Wednesday night in the twice-weekly "Lotto 6-49" game were: 5, 8, 12, 24, 47, 23 and the bonus number, 48.

The numbers were chosen by lotto machine during a television broadcast originating in Sacramento.

Sales for Wednesday night's drawing totaled $14.238 million.

'BALBOA ISLAND' SOAP IS TELEVISED...

From A1

continuing cast of characters.

"This is an act of love," Conrad said. "Everyone is volunteering their time, but we do keep it rather professional. We have a gaffer, lighting person, soundman, cameraman; the whole crew goes out."

All the actors have auditioned and most are theater majors from local colleges.

Conrad said the actors sometimes are required to learn 15 pages of script because the show is taped only once a month over a two-day period.

And unlike prime time soaps, you won't find seemingly nude lovers cavorting inside a steamy shower.

"Because of public access regulations this is fairly clean with no hot and heavy bedroom scenes. Of course, it is no 'Highway to Heaven' either," he said, referring to the syrupy television show about an angel who does good deeds.

Though some scenes are shot in the studios of Copley Colony Cable in Costa Mesa or Rogers Cable Television in Huntington Beach, the crew often travels around Orange County capturing familiar sights.

Portions of the show have been taped in a Rusty Pelican restaurant, the Westin South Coast Plaza hotel, local city halls and along the Balboa and Newport piers.

"This is a great learning experience for directors and actors who want to move up to Hollywood," Conrad said. "They are able to work in a somewhat professional atmosphere."

People like Christy Clarke, now a regular on "Days of Our Lives," started in "Balboa" and Conrad boasts that the show has been recognized in the national publication Soap Opera Digest.

Conrad said the cast often changes from month to month and that each show is not necessarily a cliffhanger to be continued.

"We probably have a cast of 1,000," he said, laughing. "We usually have eight principal characters and I'll bring in groups of extras."

Unlike Hollywood, Conrad treats the extras like stars, giving them on-screen credits.

"It's true we have no budget and we work long days, but we all have a lot of fun doing it," he said.

Cable TV firms train would-be producers

Bryan Walulik says it only takes six hours of instruction to become a local TV producer.

Walulik, access coordinator for Rogers Cable Television, said the free workshop is conducted at the Huntington Beach public access studio at Seacliff Village for local residents.

"The process starts in the workshop where we teach how to use our ¾-inch video equipment and how to edit a program on the air," he said. "The class includes hands-on work and understanding the regulations. Once you take the class and I can see your video literate, you do the first production in the studio."

The show's material then can be shot on location or in the studio, Walulik said. The equipment is available at no cost. The show is aired on channel 30.

"If there was money involved it wouldn't be public access," he said. "There is no advertising, no slander, no game show give-a-ways and no obscene materials. As long as the people abide by those rules, they can do whatever they want."

The shows range from five minutes to one hour. The videos air between 3:30 and 5 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The better the show's quality, the more air time it receives, he said.

Walulik said about 10 people usually show up for the workshops. Five people usually return to do a show, and about two stay as steady producers.

"It's a hobby," he said. "Some people ride horses and some people make videos."

Hot dog, the Wienermobile is back in town

By IRIS YOKOI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The Oscar Mayer Co. has resurrected a once-popular idea, and quite frankly, it's a wiener.

The well-known foods company has brought back the Wienermobile — a converted Chevrolet van shaped like a huge Oscar Mayer frankfurter — used extensively from 1936 into the 1960s as a promotional tool.

Wednesday, the Wienermobile rolled in for a stop at the Newport Beach Police Department after three police dispatchers wrote the company, asking for Wiener Whistles — another popular promotional item.

As soon as I heard the Wienermobile was coming to town, I high-tailed it over to the police station. As a former proud owner of a Wiener Whistle and consumer of many pounds of the franks, I knew I couldn't miss seeing the famed wiener-on-wheels.

As I rounded the corner of Jamboree Road and Santa Barbara Drive, a gleaming, giant orange and yellow wiener loomed into view.

A smiling young couple, looking as all-American as — what else? — hot dogs and apple pie, welcomed me as I approached the Wienermobile.

"Hi, I'm Greg Zacurri," the blond young man said exuberantly. A delicate young woman chimed in, "I'm Leslie Grove."

Zacurri and Grove are "hotdoggers," official drivers of the Wienermobile, experts on the vehicle's history and general goodwill ambassadors for Oscar Mayer. "We're ambassadors of fun," said Grove.

Zacurri, 24, and Grove, 22, were selected for the one-year hotdogger position from a nationwide pool of college students. Oscar Mayer officials interviewed dozens of outgoing, friendly communications majors at various universities and chose Zacurri, a Costa Mesa native and student at Cal State Fullerton, and Grove, a student at the University of Texas, Austin, to be the Western-region hotdoggers.

This was all in preparation for a renewed Wienermobile campaign, launched seven months ago.

Oscar Mayer's Wienermobile, with the character "Little Oscar" distributing hot dog-shaped whistles, toured the nation for several decades and became a memorable part of many baby boomers' childhoods. However, with the advancement of technology in the 1970s came an emphasis on television promotions, and Oscar Mayer officials decided the Wienermobile couldn't cut the mustard.

While many miss Little Oscar, the loss of the Wienermobile was the coldest cut of all. So, after a nostalgia tour in 1986 in honor of the Wienermobile's 50th anniversary and another nationwide summer tour in 1987 proved so successful, Oscar Mayer ordered a fleet of six new Wienermobiles, locating one in each region of the country.

The Western-region vehicle travels 11 states for parades, sporting events, school events, business grand openings, "anything and everything," Zacurri said. Those interested in having the Wienermobile at an event can simply contact the Oscar Mayer Co.

Susie Mays (left), Tina Vanderhorst and Peri Ropke warm up to the Wienermobile.

"It's an '88 wiener," said Zacurri of the vehicle that has a license plate that reads "BIG BUN." The Wienermobile is equipped with a microwave, refrigerator, cellular phone, seating for six or more people and a sound system from which filtered the well-loved tune, "I wish I were an Oscar Mayer wiener." A microphone can also be hooked up to the system if someone wants to sing along.

The catchy and nostalgic tune quickly drew Newport Beach Police dispatchers Tina Vanderhorst, Susie Mays and Peri Ropke into singing along.

Over Christmas, Vanderhorst spotted the Wienermobile in its local parking place at the Skate Ranch off Main Street in Santa Ana. When she mentioned what she saw to her co-workers, she touched off a long session of reminiscing about childhoods filled with hot dogs and Wiener Whistles.

"We were being nostalgic," said Mays. "Here we were, a couple of 30-year-olds sitting around, singing the (Wiener) song."

Ropke subsequently wrote to the Oscar Mayer Co., "asking for whistles for a bunch of big kids," she said. Her letter delighted company officials, who sent the Wienermobile to deliver the whistles.

The usually mature and respected adults of the Police Department and I acted like excited, giggly kids as we inspected the meaty-looking mobile and tooted our whistles.

"Looks like an unsafe vehicle to me," joked motorcycle officer Ed Walsh.

The hotdoggers said they often get pulled over by curious police officers while driving the Wienermobile, which by the way, gets 13 miles to the gallon.

Despite Walsh's skepticism about the vehicle's safety, the dispatchers and I accepted Zacurri's offer for a quick spin in the Wienermobile. As the humungous wiener rolled around Newport Center, Zacurri honked the horn and waved at smiling onlookers, while Vanderhorst and Ropke stuck their heads out the sunroof.

As the ride ended, I felt like I do when I come to the last bite of a hot dog — satisfied, but a bit disappointed. And although I was also slightly taken aback by the new Wiener Whistles, which are shaped like a whole pack of wieners rather than the ol' single-frank model, I nonetheless enjoyed reliving the fun.

I even considered quitting journalism to become a full-time hotdogger, a job I know I'd relish as much as Zacurri and Grove clearly do. Interviews for next year's hotdoggers will be in February at Cal State Fullerton, they tell me.

And being 4-foot-10, I'd even make a great "Little Oscar"...

No takers?
It may not look like it, but the new car-pool lane on the northbound San Diego Freeway in Westminster and Seal Beach was opened Wednesday. The special lane was also closed briefly, as this photograph shows, on its inaugural day because of a car accident. The CHP estimated about 2,000 motorists used it between 8 and 10 a.m. Wednesday.

HB man who saved teen's life invited to inauguration

By The Associated Press

A Huntington Beach allergist who saved the life of a 16-year-old girl during a campaign rally for George Bush last October has been invited to the President-elect's inauguration.

Dr. Max Benis inserted a 5-inch-long plastic airway tube into the throat of Christine Rybold, a member of the Corona High School color guard, who collapsed during the Oct. 14 rally in Cerritos.

Afterward, Benis recalled, "Mr. Bush said, 'If I get elected, I want you as my guest at the inauguration.'"

The 62-year-old physician said in a recent interview that he was standing about 10 feet from the stage when Miss Rybold collapsed and fell backward off the platform.

Bush continued to speak, and Benis was among those who rushed forward to help.

Benis said the girl had stopped breathing and was starting to turn blue. He looked into her throat and saw it was blocked with mucus.

"She had a bronchial infection which had been causing mucus to build up," Benis said. "She had held back from coughing because she was just a few feet from where Mr. Bush was speaking."

The doctor says he carries the airway tube on his key chain for just such an emergency. He inserted the tube in her throat, and the girl immediately began breathing through the cleared airway.

Benis' invitation to Bush's swearing-in ceremony, as well as separate invitations to two inaugural balls and other events, arrived in the mail last week.

The doctor said he will take his 16-year-old daughter Allison to Washington for the Jan. 20 ceremony.

"I've got my tux and top hat ready to go," Benis said.

Woman hit by truck had premonition of accident

By LESLIE EARNEST
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A Roto-Rooter truck struck two women walking in a Laguna Beach crosswalk Wednesday and dragged one of them about 20 feet before the driver realized the women had been hit, Laguna Beach police reported.

Judy Friesen, a 45-year-old Laguna Beach resident, was in stable condition at Mission Hospital in Mission Viejo, where she was being treated for cuts, bruises and a possible concussion. Amy Manfreni, a Laguna Niguel resident, was treated for minor injuries at the hospital and released.

"I'm just real sore," Friesen said in an interview today. "I feel like I got hit by a truck."

The driver of the truck, 34-year-old Jerry Whittaker of Dana Point, was going west on Park Drive and preparing to turn left on Glenneyre Street when he hit the women, Officer John O'Connor said.

"He just did not see them," O'Connor said. "Partly, I think, because of the shadow of the building, and the light was in his eyes."

Manfreni was struck by the right front side of the truck, O'Conner said. The driver was apparently watching the woman fall backward when he hit Friesen. Firefighters were called to rescue Friesen, pinned under the truck after being dragged about 20 feet.

"I was aware of being hit and I remember thinking, 'Am I going to live through this?'" said Friesen, director of psychology at Ahimsa Care Center on Glenneyre. "I feel so thankful to be alive."

Friesen said she and Manfreni walked through the same crosswalk shortly before on their way to lunch and talked about media accounts of people being hit in crosswalks.

"They both had a premonition," O'Connor said. "That's the first thing they both told me, 'We were just talking about getting hit in a crosswalk.'"

Former partner a suspect in Mickey Thompson slaying

Los Angeles Sheriff's detectives examined the billing records of a Southern California cellular telephone customer called by a onetime bitter rival of slain auto racing promoter Mickey Thompson, according to a published report.

Calls placed to Los Angeles by Thompson rival Michael Goodwin from a yacht off the South Carolina coast led authorities to obtain a search warrant for telephone company records, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported in Thursday's editions.

Thompson, 59, and his wife Trudy, 41, were fatally gunned down March 16 outside their suburban home in what authorities termed a professional assassination.

Thompson's sister, Collene Campbell of San Juan Capistrano, is now running her brother's business. Campbell, whose own son was slain and tossed from an airplane over the ocean near Catalina Island, is a victims' rights activist.

In an affidavit accompanying a Dec. 9 search warrant request, sheriff's investigator Cheryl Lyons wrote that she believed "the name of the subscriber ... will assist in obtaining further evidence of persons involved in the death of the Thompsons."

Goodwin's attorney, Ron Coulombe, couldn't be reached for comment.

Goodwin also could not be contacted. There was no telephone directory listing for Goodwin, who reportedly lives in Laguna Beach.

Thompson, who was awarded $514,388 in a 1986 lawsuit stemming from the bitter breakup of his partnership with Goodwin, told friends he received numerous death threats before he was slain.

Los Angeles Coliseum General Manager Joel Ralph told investigators he heard from a reliable source that Goodwin allegedly issued a contract for Thompson's slaying, the affidavit said.

And Lee Haslam, a construction employee, said Goodwin allegedly threatened to kill Thompson if he hurt Goodwin financially, the documents said.

Sheriff's investigators served another search warrant on phone records at Goodwins' Laguna Beach home last summer.

Subsequent investigation revealed Goodwin bought a 57-foot yacht and installed a telephone aboard while staying in South Carolina last summer.

The telephone call that prompted the latest search warrant came July 7, the affidavit said.

Marina employees in South Carolina working on the Goodwin boat were ordered ashore whenever the telephone rang on the boat, said Bob Utusy, manager of Dauby Marine.

Child takes gun to class

NEW YORK (AP) — A kindergarten student brought a loaded automatic handgun to his school and handed it barrel-first to his teacher, who was surprised to find it wasn't a toy, authorities said.

The 5-year-old boy, whose name was not released, told school authorities that "an unknown man put the gun in his pocket on the way to school," said police spokeswoman Sgt. Diane Kubler.

Police contacted the boy's mother and were trying to determine where the gun came from.

Gang task force urges war against urban terrorists

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. George Deukmejian's task force on gangs Wednesday issued 100 recommendations, including adult trials for 16- and 17-year-olds accused of violence or drug dealing.

The task force also suggested using vacant military bases as prisons to create more space for gang members, using the California National Guard to patrol the Mexican border for drug smugglers and imposing mandatory life terms on people committing assaults with machine guns.

"Today's gangs are urban terrorists," Robert Philibosian, chairman of the State Task Force on Gangs and Drugs, said at a Capitol news conference. "Heavily armed and more violent than before, they are quick to use terror and intimidation to seize and protect their share of the lucrative 'crack' cocaine market as well as markets for other drugs."

Deukmejian in 1986 named a task force on youth gang violence, which made recommendations that included tougher sentences for gang-related activities. The governor last summer asked the task force to reconvene to study the expansion of gang and drug activities because of the recent rise in availability of "crack" cocaine.

Philibosian, a former Los Angeles County district attorney, said the task force held five hearings and heard from dozens of witnesses, including many gang members.

"What we found was an alarming situation," he said. "We found it, unfortunately, to be worse than our expectations."

He said most gang members are under 18 and leaders are recruiting children as young as 9 or 10 as foot soldiers to deliver drugs and act as lookouts.

"The criminal justice system has been far too lenient with youthful offenders," he said. "The gangs know that."

Among the recommendations:

- Mandate life imprisonment for persons convicted of assault with a machine gun.

Robert Philibosian

- Use vacant military bases as state prisons or county jails to house nonviolent offenders and free up prison space for violent gang members and drug dealers.
- Use the California National Guard in surveillance of the California-Mexico border to help local law enforcement catch drug smugglers.
- Require public schools to teach gang and drug prevention programs.
- Train school teachers and administrators about gangs and drugs.

Armenian quake survivors discovered under building

MOSCOW (AP) — Six people who survived on canned vegetables, fruit and pickles for 35 days after the Armenian earthquake were pulled alive from the basement of a collapsed apartment building in Leninakan, Tass reported today.

The survivors were rescued Wednesday, Tass said, the 35th day after the Dec. 7 earthquake that killed an estimated 25,000 people in northwest Armenia. Rescuers last pulled a person alive from the wreckage Dec. 26, Tass said.

The six men were found under the rubble in the basement of a nine-story apartment building which had collapsed on them, the official Soviet news agency said in a report from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia.

They survived because there was plenty of canned food stored in the basement, Tass said. All are hospitalized in Yerevan but none are in danger, doctors told the news agency.

Tass did not say how the six men were found or who rescued them. Officials had ended the search for survivors weeks ago, saying it was necessary to clear away the rubble to prevent disease spreading from decayed bodies.

Authorities have been demolishing buildings that could not be rebuilt after the earthquake.

One of the six survivors, Aikaz Akopyan, had medical training and administered massages to the others to relieve the pain of their injuries, Tass said. The first reports said one of the men, Karin Sarkissyan, had a broken arm, but there were no immediate details on their others' injuries.

The quake leveled much of Leninakan, Armenia's second-largest city 10 miles east of the Turkish border and left thousands homeless.

Once home to more than 280,000 people, Leninakan today has only 100,000 inhabitants, thousands of whom now live in tents. Many residents have been evacuated.

Fleets of 737s checked for faulty fire alarm warning

LONDON (AP) — British airlines today checked engines and fire alarm wiring on aircraft similar to the crashed Boeing 737 as officials tried to determine why the jet's starboard engine was shut down when its port engine was ablaze.

The Civil Aviation Authority's order Wednesday prompted experts to speculate that a faulty alarm system misled the crew of the British Midland Airways jet into shutting down the wrong engine, causing the crash Sunday that killed 44 people and injured 82.

"It points to a possibly spurious warning being given to the flight deck," said Freddie Yetman, technical secretary of the British Airline Pilots Association.

In the United States, the Federal Aviation Administration late Wednesday similarly gave U.S. airlines three days to check cross-wiring on 300 Boeing 737s. "We think this is not a very likely scenario, but it's a check that can be done very, very quickly without disrupting service," said FAA spokesman John Leyden.

"We certainly believe it's a prudent measure to go out and check to make sure there's nothing wrong with the fleet," Boeing spokesman Craig Martin said in Seattle. "But certainly this precautionary measure does not imply there has been any cause identified" for the crash.

British investigators said the starboard engine and its warning systems had to be examined minutely and detailed evidence taken from the pilot and co-pilot before the reason for the shutdown would be known.

Pilot Kevin Hunt, who broke his back in the crash, was questioned for 45 minutes by investigators on Wednesday as U.S. media and Britain's tabloids blamed him for shutting down the wrong engine on Flight BD92, which was en route from London to Belfast.

The new Boeing 737-400, flying only on the fire-damaged port engine, crashed on the embankment of England's main north-south M1 highway about a half-mile short of East Midlands Airport, where it was trying to make an emergency landing.

LA mayor will try for a fifth term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley embarked on his campaign to win an unprecedented fifth term when he was the first to file in a field unexpectedly cleared by the withdrawal last week of his strongest potential challenger.

The 71-year-old Democrat was first in line outside the city clerk's office when it opened Wednesday, the first day candidates could declare their intent to run in the April 11 election.

Forty other people filed for various offices, in the first of four days for politicians to declare their intent to run for city office. City Attorney James Hahn and City Controller Rick Tuttle both filed for re-election for races that drew no challengers by the day's end.

Eight City Council members who represent odd-numbered districts have said they will seek re-election and five of them filed Wednesday. Most of them face opposition.

Winter storms have not reduced drought danger

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Despite storms that are greening California and draping the peaks with snow, officials say winter has yet to drop enough water to avert a third consecutive drought year.

Reservoirs that have shrunk nearly one-fourth in volume in a year have yet to receive much runoff from rain or melting snow, Bill Helms, spokesman for the state Department of Water Resources, said in a recent telephone interview.

"We haven't received hardly any (reservoir) storage yet and that's the key to this whole thing," Helms said.

The 153 major reservoirs that bank most of California's water contained 20.1 million acre-feet a year ago, but have dropped to 15.2 million acre-feet — 68 percent of average and only 40 percent full, Helms said.

Wednesday, a lively storm swelled north coast rivers, including the Smith River in Del Norte County which crested less than two feet below the 30-foot flood stage.

But Smith River, which empties into the ocean between Crescent City and the Oregon border, adds little to the state's water supply, and little runoff reached streams filling Shasta or Trinity reservoirs.

Helms said little water is filling the state's reservoirs because dry soils have soaked up much of the rain and cold weather has kept snow from melting.

Precipitation so far has been normal to above-normal in Northern California, which supplies a majority of the state's water, but officials caution that the rainy season is less than halfway over and still could change dramatically.

"We don't have enough snow up there right now to meet the needs," said Gary Hester, a Water Resources Department forecaster. "If you began melting that snow today, we'd fall short."

Mexican oil workers returning to their jobs after union protest

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Oil refinery workers nationwide began returning to work Wednesday, ending a series of strikes and rallies to protest the bloody arrest of their union bosses on weapons and corruption charges.

The government continued its crackdown on Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, leader of the powerful Oil Workers Union. He and about 50 associates have been arrested on fraud, weapons and tax evasion charges, said a spokesman for the attorney general's office, Fernando Arias Perez.

Meanwhile, authorities said two of Hernandez Galicia's bodyguards — who were arrested in the sweep — reported that their boss ordered the 1983 slaying of a mayor who headed a union local, officials said.

The attorney general's office said in a statement late Wednesday that Hernandez Galicia told investigators he purchased scores of weapons in the United States.

Hernandez Galicia told investigators the weapons were brought into Mexico by his "good friend," Jose Cruz Contreras, a former mayor of Reynosa, the statement said. Cruz Contreras gave the weapons to Hernandez Galicia on Dec. 10, it said.

Reynosa, which has a refinery and petrochemicals plant, lies across the U.S. border from McAllen, Texas. It is a stronghold of oil workers allied with Hernández Galicia.

Strikes by refinery workers broke out Tuesday night after the arrests began. The union corruption investigation is widely seen as a challenge to the union by the new administration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Guards were posted at gas stations and refineries and many motorists, fearing shortages, formed 30- and 40-car lines to fill up their tanks at stations in Mexico City, Tampico and other cities.

But petroleum workers began showing up at their jobs later Wednesday after a union official called for the strikes to end.

Israeli settlers demanding end to West Bank uprising

By The Associated Press

BRAKHA, Occupied West Bank — Angry settlers shouted down Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today and demanded that the government do more to quell the Palestinian uprising. In the West Bank town of Tulkarem, troops shot and killed an 11-year-old Palestinian during clashes following the funeral of a Palestinian teen-ager who died of wounds suffered earlier, Arab doctors said. The army confirmed both deaths. Shamir, who spoke at a mourning ceremony in Brakha for a slain Jewish settler, was confronted by a crowd of 200 settlers. They screamed demands that he put an end to attacks on Jews by Palestinians and chanted: "You are doing nothing."

Soviet visitors will receive AIDS test

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union says it will try to maintain its minuscule AIDS rate by screening foreigners for the deadly virus, even forcing mandatory tests of some visitors who cannot provide proper medical proof. Foreigners who want to stay in the country for three months or more will be subject to testing for the disease beginning next month, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said. "Here, there cannot be any discrimination," Gerasimov said. "We conduct tests of our own people and besides, statistics show the Soviet Union is sharply lagging behind other countries, say the United States, in the number of ill people (with AIDS). And we just don't want to catch up." The Soviets once regarded AIDS as a disease spawned by Western sexual depravity and drug use. One Soviet newspaper's account had even claimed the virus was the result of a U.S. biological warfare experiment gone haywire.

Moslem guerrillas repel attack in Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon — Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem guerrillas outnumbered 2-to-1 drove back a three-pronged assault on their south Lebanon mountain stronghold today in fierce fighting with pro-Syrian rivals. Police said a 1,000-strong force from the mainstream Shiite Amal militia lost five fighters killed and seven wounded in the failed attack against fundamentalist Hezbollah members entrenched in Jbaa village southeast of Sidon.

Allies back U.S. action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, Britain and France joined in vetoing a Security Council resolution that "deplored" the U.S. Navy's downing of two Libyan military jets over the Mediterranean on Jan. 4.

Just hours before Wednesday's vote, U.S. officials said the Navy had canceled missile tests in the Mediterreanan planned for next week that Libyan Ambassador Ali A. Treiki had called provocative. The officials gave no hint the cancellation was linked with the resolution.

Libyan officials have claimed for weeks that the United States is preparing public opinion for a U.S. attack on a factory near Tripoli that Washington claims has been built for the manufacture of poison gas.

U.S. officials said the cancellation of the Jan. 16-17 missile tests is intended to reduce tensions between the United States and Libya, which Washington accuses of fostering international terrorism.

Canada joined the allies Wednesday in voting against the resolution.

The vote was 9-4, with the Soviet Union, China, Ethiopia, Colombia, Malaysia, Algeria, Nepal, Senegal and Yugoslavia voting in favor. Finland and Brazil abstained.

OBITUARIES

Services held for Mabel Smith, 88

A memorial service was held Tuesday for Mabel M. Smith, longtime Newport Beach resident, who died Jan. 5 in her Balboa Island home. She was 88.

Born Nov. 2, 1900, in Boulder, Mont., Smith married Hal Will Smith of Whittier, and the couple moved to Balboa Island in 1925.

In those days, the island was barely more than a sandbar. Residential streets were unpaved and residents traveled to and from the island on the ferry or their own boats.

Smith worked with her husband in his real estate office on the island from 1927 until their retirement in 1955.

They were among the pioneers who worked to shape the residential and family character of the island community.

As the first islanders many prospective residents met, the couple became "first and special friends" to many, easing their transition into the new community, said Michael Smith, a son.

Smith also was a member of the Newport Beach Ebell Club and Newport Harbor Panhellenic.

She is survived by two son, Michael and Hal Smith Jr., both of Costa Mesa; a sister, Eleanor Lyman of Balboa Island; five grandchildren; and a great-granddaughter.

Services were held Tuesday at Community Church in Corona del Mar. The family requests that donations be made to the American Cancer Society.

NATION

Reagan says farewell, asks followers to support Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's handing the nation over to the "good hands" of George Bush, advising his successor to keep a wary eye on the Soviet Union and, warning against "an erosion of the American spirit."

In a folksy Oval Office speech bidding adieu to the nation, Reagan boasted Wednesday of his accomplishments and ignored many of the difficulties that arose during his eight years in office.

"We meant to change a nation, and instead, we changed a world," he said.

Yet Reagan also admitted that his self-styled conservative revolution left many things unchanged, and he asked his followers to stick around and help his successor.

"If we're to finish the job, Reagan's Regiments will have to become the Bush Brigades," Reagan said. "Soon he'll be the chief, and he'll need you every bit as much as I did."

The president said he was leaving office with the central message of his political life strengthened — that an unfettered economy, a strong defense and a free citizenry forged a nation "respected in the world, and looked to for leadership."

"Democracy, the profoundly good, is also the profoundly productive," he said. "Because we are a great nation, our challenges seem complex. It will always be this way. But as long as we remember our first principles and believe in ourselves, the future will always be ours."

The president and his wife Nancy were scheduled to receive a farewell accolade today from the Department of Defense, which arranged an elaborate ceremony featuring fly-overs and military bands at Andrews Air Force Base. Every four-star general and admiral in uniform was invited to attend.

Reagan addressed the nation from his Oval Office desk, his left hand in a splint and swathed in bandages from weekend surgery on a finger.

Speaking nine days before his retirement to California, Reagan called his departure "sweet sorrow." But he also said he looks forward to a renewal of personal freedom, contending a modern president must live "somewhat apart. You spend a lot of time going by too fast in a car someone else is driving."

Another regret, Reagan said, was his failure to tame the nation's deficit. But that merited only a paragraph in the roughly 21-minute speech. "I've been talking a great deal about that lately, but tonight isn't for arguments and I'm going to hold my tongue," he said.

The national debt almost tripled in Reagan's term and he ran up the biggest budget deficits in history. His final budget proposal, released earlier this week for the 1990 fiscal year starting Oct. 1, projects a deficit of $92.5 billion.

The president's remarks were void of any mention of such national tragedies as the barracks bombing that killed more than 241 servicemen in Beirut, the Challenger disaster or the Americans held hostage in the Middle East.

There was no word of the trade deficits or the scandals that tarnished his administration, such as the sale of arms to Iran and use of the proceeds to fund the Contra rebels in Nicaragua illegally. The Contras, subject of so many Reagan speeches, were not mentioned at all.

As triumphs Reagan listed the nation's economic recovery, its low unemployment and inflation, and its bolstered military.

The president who warned early in his tenure of the "evil empire" in the Soviet Union took credit at the end of his presidency for forging "a satisfying new closeness" with the Soviets. He said the new relationship helped bring about the first U.S.-Soviet treaty to eliminate an entire class of nuclear weapons, as well as "a new peacefulness around the globe."

Derwinski endangered spy's life, paper says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edward Derwinski, President-elect Bush's choice to run the new Department of Veterans Affairs, endangered the life of a South Korean spy with a leak to a Korean official about the man's planned defection, it was reported today.

Unpublished records of a 1983 congressional hearing show that Derwinski admitted giving the possibly life-threatening confidential information to a Korean diplomat in a 1977 telephone call, the Los Angeles Times reported. He had publicly denied doing so before.

The incident came during the so-called Koreagate scandal involving alleged covert payments to congressional figures by the South Korean government in exchange for favorable U.S. treatment.

The Korean intelligence agent, Sohn Ho Young, wanted to defect because of an impending transfer from New York City to Korea and U.S. officials wanted to interview him regarding his government's involvement in the alleged bribe scheme.

"This guy, the Korean defector, would have been severely punished or killed, as well as his family," an unnamed senior law enforcement official told the newspaper. The official added that Sohn was spared when FBI agents arrived at his New Jersey home and escorted him to safety only a half hour before Korean CIA agents showed up.

Derwinski, a Republican from Chicago who served 24 years in Congress, publicly denied 1978 allegations that he leaked the information and refused to testify in the matter before a federal grand jury.

Reagan leadership cited for restoring pride, strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department staged an unusual "farewell review" for President Reagan today, and the military services were told to absorb the undisclosed cost of the pageant.

"Your vision of a strong America assuming its rightful role on the world stage has produced lasting results. Our nation has moved from self-doubt to self-confidence," Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci told Reagan in a ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland.

Much of the fanfare was canceled because of a steady rain that fell throughout the morning, and the ceremonies were held inside a 14-story tall hangar designed to hold the two new Boeing 747 airliners being delivered later this year for presidential use.

First lady Nancy Reagan canceled plans to attend the salute because she has "a touch of laryngitis," said a spokeswoman, Wendy Toler. "She just isn't feeling well and decided not to got out in the cold," Toler said.

Inside the hanger were the Air Force's new B-1B bomber, as well as jet fighters and helicopters, many of them purchased during Reagan's trillion-dollar military buildup.

"Mr. President, the pride people feel today — certainly the pride felt by the men and women in our armed forces — is a direct result of the leadership you have provided as commander-in-chief," Carlucci said.

"You have restored not only our national strength — but also our sense of purpose," he said.

"Your vigorous defense of our nation's ideals and institutions has reminded all Americans that freedom is a concept worth defending — and its defense is a sacred duty each and every member of the armed forces has freely undertaken."

Carlucci's predecessor, Caspar Weinberger, also was on hand and greeted Reagan as he sat down to watch a military review that included the Army's Colonial Fife and Drum Corps dressed in Revolutionary War garb.

Among the outdoor events canceled were fly-overs of 17 aircraft from the four armed services plus the Coast Guard and the static display of 19 different aircraft and weapons on the ground.

The Marine Band provided music and the Joint Service Honor Guard marched before the president. Every four-star general and admiral was invited to attend, along with about 1,400 VIPs and government officials.

Watkins, Bennett named to fill last top-level posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush is rounding out the top ranks of his administration by nominating retired Adm. James D. Watkins as energy secretary and former Education Secretary William J. Bennett as drug czar, transition and congressional sources said today.

Bush was to announce the selections at a news conference a few hours before holding a late-afternoon dress-rehearsal meeting of his Cabinet at Blair House, the historic residence across from the White House.

Sources who declined to be identified confirmed that Watkins, formerly the Navy's top uniformed officer, would be tapped for the energy post and that Bennett would get the job of coordinating the government's war on drugs.

CBS News first reported on Watkins' selection and The New York Times had disclosed Bennett's new role.

Bush had a hard time filling both jobs, the last top-level posts that were vacant. Aides suggested that he vacillated on the energy post between an oil-state candidate and one with experience in nuclear energy.

Top court examines death penalty of retarded killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is examining the constitutionality of imposing capital punishment on a convicted murderer described as having the mind of a child.

The justices heard 60 minutes of arguments Wednesday on whether they will allow the execution of Johnny Paul Penry, 32, a convicted rapist-murderer sentenced to die in Texas.

Penry is said to have the mental capacity of a 7-year-old.

Assistant Attorney General Charles A. Palmer of Texas argued that executing Penry would not violate the Constitution's ban against cruel and inhuman punishment.

"He knew what he was doing," Palmer said. Penry raped Pamela Moseley Carpenter on Oct. 15, 1979, in Livingston, Texas, then stabbed her to death. She was 22.

Curtis C. Mason, a lawyer representing Penry, spent little time arguing that all retarded murderers should be spared. Instead, Mason challenged the Texas death penalty law on narrower grounds.

Catering to obese child is a form of child abuse

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I comment on the letter from the mother of the 11-year-old obese child with the rash between her thighs? She was furious with the doctor's nurse who said, "The trouble with this child is that she is too fat."

Both my mother and my sister were grossly obese. Mom catered to her because "Sis" could never run or play like other children. Kids can be cruel, so Mom overcompensated.

Sis is now a very unpleasant adult. In the last two years she has broken three chairs to my dinette set. We've had many arguments because she sneaks food from my cupboards and eats out of the pots on the stove.

Parents who stuff their children so they grow up so fat that they can't live normal lives should be charged with cruelty; they face high blood pressure and early death, the difficulty of buying clothes and shoes, fitting into desks at schools, theater seats and so on. — OHIO SISTER

Dear Ohio: I agree with you although many readers did not; they were mothers of overweight children.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We live in an automobile-dominated world. Frightening the hell out of the driver won't help.

You see them every day, up-tight people hunched up with the grasp that the instructor taught them. Good drivers should be relaxed yet alert, ready for an unexpected move by another driver.

Please remember that driving is not a social occasion. When you drive, shut up. And shut up the children, your friends and the dog. Big packages belong in the trunk, don't talk on the phone or try to drink a cup of coffee. With common sense, you'll get from here to there alive. Sign me — 40,000 MILES WITHOUT AN ACCIDENT (And mostly on the Dan Ryan Expressway — Chicago)

DEAR DAN: I wish everyone on the Dan Ryan Expressway drove like you. Ditto for the San Diego Freeway and the New Jersey Turnpike. Thanks for the wise counsel.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A stranger approached me at the supermarket today and said, "Triplets! How can you stand it?" and then walked off.

Every time I go out with my three well-behaved children someone makes an uncalled-for comment such as, "My God, I sure feel sorry for you," or "You have my sympathy, dear." It burns me up.

How should I respond to these insensitive, rock-headed fools? I need to express my outrage, but I don't want to upset my darling youngsters. — SANDRA H. in La Grange, Ky.

Dear Sandra: The best response is a broad smile and a positive comment such as "These are wonderful children. We feel blessed."

She sniffing at Japan's answer to stress at work

ERMA BOMBECK

If there is a designer disease of the '80s, it's "stress."

You can dress it up or down. You can take it with you to the club. You can suffer from it and still play tennis. The higher your income and the more powerful you become, the worse it gets.

You won't hear any of the women on "Roseanne" sitting around a bar saying, "I'm stressed out." No siree.

Well, the Japanese have been experimenting with ways to combat pressure in the marketplace, and they've come up with a theory: Fragrant aromas reduce stress. Here's the plan. They're going to pump various scents into the air conditioning system of office buildings and gas 'em into mellow.

According to their research, the fresh smell of a forest is supposed to help workers deal with being uptight, while lemon and jasmine are said to have a rejuvenating effect, helping workers overcome post-lunch drowsiness.

My first reaction is one of suspicion. A few years ago, for whatever reason, they came out with an "auto perfume." Remember? For an extra buck, the folks at your local carwash squirted a scent on the carpet of your car. There were lemon-lime, cinnamon, floral, orange blossom, northern pine, strawberry, cherry, and even one called "new car" to choose from. The latter was a leather scent, but someone said it smelled more like a new car and it had more market appeal.

Anyway, I'm here to tell you the smell my husband had spritzed in my car didn't relieve my stress. It created it. I don't know what scent it was. My guess was a cross between an overripe cantaloupe and a possum in heat. I drove with the windows down for two solid weeks, and whenever I thought he forgot about it, I reminded him.

That is not to say there might not be some merit to the Japanese theory. I'm not ready to admit smells can bring down your hypertension, but they can certainly make you have a better, more relaxed outlook on things. It's no great secret that if you're trying to sell your house, just set a bowl of yeast bread under a towel and a prospective buyer will send for the kids. And if you want your husband to be in a good mood when he opens the door at night, have an onion in the oven.

I guess we can look for all kinds of spinoffs on the market to reduce stress. Look for a new cologne for men called "Faithful Husband" or a car perfume called "Paid in Full," or even a home deodorizer called "No Termites."

It'll be interesting to know if the Japanese experiment works. Will the fresh smell of the great outdoors relieve stress? Or will people figure out that before they spend all that money, all they have to do is open a window?

Before Victoria, bathing was a communal affair

Taking a bath has been a private matter only for about 200 years. From the Roman Empire to Queen Victoria's England, people bathed together. Communities. Families. Couples. So says one historian. As previously reported, many an English lady of the Court received callers as she bathed. Such a visitor, maybe a fellow in a velvet collar, sat above the bubbles and read verse, I gather.

The last will and testament wherein Alfred Nobel left $9 million to finance the world's most prestigious prizes was written in a casual manner without benefit of a lawyer.

Hardly anybody ate broccoli before World War II. In fact, old surveys show a majority didn't even know what it was.

Home builders have not yet designed houses with self-cleaning bathrooms, but our Chief Prognosticator thinks they will. Exit, close the door, flip a switch. The whole room will go through a sort of car-wash procedure. Surveys among homemakers show they'd rather have an automatic bathroom cleaner than any other sort of household robot.

Krill is what the whalebone whales eat down around the Antarctic. Men have been killing a lot of those whales. So krill is multiplying. Adelie penguins and certain seals eat krill, too. They likewise are multiplying. Swiftly, swiftly.

Q. At what age does a baby start to see in three dimensions?
A. Three months.

Whales beach themselves, when they do that sad thing, almost always on gently inclined sandy shores, never along rugged rocky coasts. Theorists think sloping soft sand fails to echo the whales' depth-finding signals.

In 1903, a chemist named Edouard Benedictus dropped a flask. It cracked but didn't break apart. He noted it had contained a solution of celluloid in acetone which had dried up. Swift fellow, Edouard. At that moment, he invented safety glass.

All I know about George F. Grant of Boston, Mass., is on Dec. 12, 1899, he got Patent No. 638,920 for the world's first golf tee. Must not have been a marketing genius. Wasn't until decades later that golfers used ready-made tees. Even when your granddad was a lad, golfers as often as not hand shaped their tees out of damp dirt.

Q. What was the first book printed in English?
A. A chess manual. Caxton's "Game and Play of Chess." In 1474.

Q. What was the first town?
A. First we know about was Jarmo in what's now northern Iraq. About 5,000 B.C.

Bjorn Borg to wed Italian rock star

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Bjorn Borg, known for the silent, determined style he displayed in winning five Wimbledon titles from 1976-80, plans to marry a colorful, Italian rock star, according to published reports.

Swedish newspapers reported that the 32-year-old Swede will marry Italian singer Loredana Berte on Feb. 26 in Milan.

The Aftonbladet daily said Borg had asked Loredana, a 38-year-old rock star known for her wild and explicit stage appearances, several times to become his wife before she agreed last December.

"Now Bjorn comes first and my career second," Loredana told the newspaper Expressen. "I am here in Sweden because I am in love, for the rest of my life."

Borg, who has retired from active competition, earlier was married to Romanian-born tennis player Mariana Simionescu. In 1984, he met Jannike Bjorling, then 17 years old. She gave birth to their son, Robin, a year later. They lived together until 1987.

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley said he sympathizes with an area high school student, but banning the novel "Huckleberry Finn" because of its racial content could constitute censorship.

"What we really need to worry about is what is censorship," said Haley, who won the Pulitzer Prize for literature for "Roots."

"That is the thing that can harm a whole culture, and very swiftly," he said in an interview with The Knoxville News-Sentinel.

The Sevier County High School's review committee voted to temporarily suspend teaching "Huckleberry Finn" pending a study of how the book written in 1876 is used in the classroom.

The action came after a student, junior Jacquie McDermott, protested that the Mark Twain book, which makes frequent use of a racial slur, was offensive and demeaning.

Haley, who lives in a neighboring eastern Tennessee county, said he understands the student's concern.

"But I think that what we really need to look at is the greater good, the greater responsibility to the public," Haley said.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Robert D. Orr, who has issued hundreds of "Sagamore of the Wabash" citations, received his own "Sagamore" — compliments of the press corps.

On Orr's final working day in office, reporters staged a surprise ceremony for the governor, who received the first "Sagamore of the Press Corps" award.

The parody of the state's highest civilian honor praised Orr, a frequent traveler during his two terms, for the qualities he's gained roaming "China, Japan, Taiwan, South Korea, Germany, Holland, Colorado and even some parts of Indiana."

The Republican governor was succeeded Monday by Democrat Evan Bayh.

One of the more important developments of the recent Fall North American Championships was the formation of an organization for young bridge players. In this respect the American Contract Bridge League has trailed far behind the rest of the world. The Europeans stage regular junior international matches and they have a European Junior Championship. The 1988 Alpwater award for the best-played hand by a junior was won by a 21-year-old Scot, Alistair MacDonald.

At this vulnerability, an opening bid of four spades was an accurate description of his holding. His hand was long on offense, especially since he had a fair second suit, and short on defense.

West's lead of the seven of clubs was obviously from a short suit. Paying little heed to the warning signals, most declarers won in hand and tried to draw trumps. The defenders in the East seat were able to win the ace and then return their lowest club when giving partner a club ruff. Heeding the suit preference signal, West underled the ace of diamonds, allowing East to win the king and give his partner another ruff for down one.

MacDonald saw the threat. He won the first club trick in dummy, cashed the ace of hearts and continued with the jack. When East could not cover, declarer cut the defenders' communications by discarding his diamond loser. When East eventually gained the lead with the ace of trumps he was still able to give his partner a club ruff, but he had no entry back to his hand to allow the defense to score a second ruff. With the help of what is known in the trade as a "Scissors Coup," declarer was able to hold his losers to three—a trump, a heart and a club ruff.

Tax breaks spurred S&L rescues

American Savings & Loan acquisition is worth $217.5 million to Bass Group

By MICHAEL DOYLE
McClatchy News Service

WASHINGTON — The purchasers of Stockton-based American Savings and Loan will enjoy tax breaks worth $217.5 million to sweeten the acquisition, a congressional panel has learned.

For the Robert M. Bass Group of Texas, these tax benefits represent part of American Savings' allure. Other thrift buyers saw a similar allure through the hectic month of December, as the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pushed through 34 merger deals involving 75 insolvent institutions.

Hurried through before tax provisions changed on Dec. 31, these 34 deals will provide purchasers a little over $2 billion in tax benefits along with much more in direct federal aid, bank board figures show. Lawmakers greeted news of the deals and accompanying tax breaks on Tuesday with occasionally harsh skepticism.

"Yes it's true, in this great country of ours, that you can buy a toaster and get a thrift for free," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

Schumer and other members of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee criticized several aspects of the bank board's dealings. In sometimes passionate tones, they charged bank board negotiators with giving away too much to savvy dealmakers and allowing wealthy investors to benefit at the expense of American taxpayers.

"The bank board's year-end rush represents a backdoor raid on the U.S. treasury," said Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa. "The dealmakers who are walking away with more cash than they put in are laughing all the way to the piggybank."

Leach presented his own figures Tuesday, obtained from Treasury Department officials, showing that the 222 insolvent-thrift deals worked out by the bank board in all of 1988 will result in $8 billion in tax breaks for the investors. Total government assistance for these purchases amounted to $36 billion during the year.

The tax benefits represent losses from the acquired thrifts that the investor can write off. The Bass Group can apply its tax writeoffs against profits made by several newly-created American Savings entities, but can't use them for other Bass businesses, according to Bass spokesmen.

The tax breaks taken by the Bass Group are the third largest of all the 34 deals completed in December, according to figures presented Tuesday. As part of the agreement, Bass officials will also share some of the American Savings tax breaks with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

The split gives the government 75 percent of the total tax benefits, amounting to $652 million. The $217.5 million going to Bass make up the remaining 25 percent in total tax benefits. Formally completed on Dec. 28, the American Savings deal requires the Bass Group to put up $350 million immediately and another $150 million later. The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. is putting up $1.7 billion as its part of the American Savings purchase.

Bank Board officials insisted Tuesday that the American Savings purchase, and the others completed last month, represented a better deal for taxpayers than closing the thrift and paying off insured depositors.

ProTek Environmental announces cleanup project

ProTek Environmental Inc. has been awarded a site mitigation and cleanup contract by U.S. Gypsum Co.

The Huntington Beach-based ProTek will employ its "active" biological treatment process to clean 400 cubic yards of diesel-contaminated soil resulting from a leaking underground storage tank at U.S. Gypsum's drywall manufacturing plant in Santa Fe Springs.

Company officials project that their proven on-site treatment process, which uses "Advanced BioCulture" micro-organisms, will bring the contamination level from an estimated 1,800 parts per million to a "certified clean" level of less than 100 ppm in less than 90 days.

Joe Mathewson, president of ProTek, commented, "This kind of a project, because it is a small-scale job, has a special significance for small business owners with underground tanks.

"The price of other cleanup methods can be devastating, even on a project of this size. But, U.S. Gypsum is going to save about $42,000 by opting for bioremediation over hauling and off-site disposal."

Not only is this method economical, but it is also the most environmentally sound mitigation measure available, he explained. The final result is a "certified clean" soil with no long-term liabilities for the property owner.

ProTek is a full-service environmental engineering contractor and offers complete "turn-key" bioremediation, vapor extraction and chemical fixation technologies for on-site treatment and decontamination of hazardous sludges. Established in 1987, the firm is a subsidiary of Enviroguard Inc. of Houston, Texas.

THURSDAY'S 11 A.M. (PST) PRICES

Dow climbs 21 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices jumped ahead today, extending the early-1989 rally that has carried the market to its highest levels since the 1987 crash.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 21.07 to 2,227.50 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 7 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 871 up, 511 down and 520 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were encouraged by the market's drive Wednesday past the 2,200 level in the Dow after a weeklong struggle.

In addition, they cited a developing "bandwagon" effect as investors who had been bearish on the outlook for months felt increasing pressure to join in the rally.

The market's steady advance since last fall has come without any support from interest rates, which have been rising.

By JOE BEL BRUNO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five-years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer. I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

Library chooses design winners

The results are in!

Newport Beach Public Library Children's Services Coordinator Judy Kelley announced the winners of the Design a Bookmark contest that was held during the Children's Book Week in November.

Winners are:

Brandy Pesner, Shannon Keehan, Beth Sims, Tommy Zavala, Blake Sinclair and Jennifer Lewis from Newport Elementary School.

Amanda Smith, Cindy Barnes, Meghan Fitzpatrick and Nick Shaumburg from Harbor View School.

Steven Saftig, Melissa Blakely, Peter Kim and Arelia Rose McSwain, Mariners School.

Vivian Lin, Anderson School and Olivia Hargrave, Bennett-Hicks Private School.

The children incorporated the theme of reading books into their clever artwork. Kelley encourages children and adults alike to come to any of the branch libraries and pick up bookmarks designed by the talented young local artists.

Looks as if Grubb & Ellis' Newport Beach residential brokerage office was busy over Christmas with a worthy cause.

In an effort to provide Orange County's hungry and homeless with Christmas dinners, the Newport Harbor/Costa Mesa Board of Realtors, in conjunction with the Salvation Army, sponsored its annual Christams Can Tree project in which individual real estate offices competed to build canned food trees.

The board presented Grubb & Ellis with the award for the most cans per capita and the most creative tree.

"The level of concern and participation was tremendous," said Tom Queen, senior vice president and district manager of Gubb & Ellis' Newport Beach office. "We averaged more than 108 cans of food for each person in our office."

The office contains 49 sales associates and staff who collected more than 4,519 cans of food to build a tree 10 feet tall by 10 feet wide.

The remainder of the collection was used to construct a fireplace next to the tree.

"It's a pleasure to be able to give something back to the community, especially during the holidays which is a difficult time for many," said Bruce Barsamian, vice president and sales manager at the Newport office.

Martha Macnab served as Grubb & Ellis' chairwoman while Sandie Fix and Sara Hinman were co-chairwoman.

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Originally, Winterfest started as a small hand arts festival, which only

Margaret Stover delivers groceries via wheelchair.

Food delivered via wheelchair

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing, turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

BULLETIN BOARD

Competitors attracted to horse shows at OC Fairgrounds

A hunter-jumper show will open the year's events at the Orange County Fair Equestrian Center, Costa Mesa.

The show will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, according to Pam Gimple, center manager.

A western horse show is planned from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Jan. 28, and a Valentine Horse Show is set for Feb. 11.

For more information on equestrian events, call 641-1328.

Volunteers at riding center

If you enjoy horses and children, your talents are wanted by the Orange County Riding Center in San Juan Capistrano to assist disabled individuals to ride hores.

Volunteers are needed Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings. An orientation will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday for anyone who is interested. For more information, call the Volunteer Center of Orange County-Central/South at 953-5757 or 582-3176.

Art introduction class in Irvine

An introduction to art from cave paintings to the most contemporary will be presented in a 10-week course beginning Tuesday at the Irvine Fine Arts Center, 14321 Yale Ave.

Participants will learn the mysteries of the Great Pyramids, the reasons why impressionism was scandalous in its day, and some insights into today's art.

Instructor Pat Craig teaches art history at Cal State Fullerton, Cypress College and Long Beach City College.

The class meets from 7 to 9:30 p.m. For further information, call the arts center at 552-1018.

UCI sailing classes open

Beginning to advanced sailing classes under the UCI Sailing Program will open to the public Tuesday. Classes are offered on Lido 14s and 30-foot Shields class boats on weekends and weekdays at the intercollegiate rowing and sail base, 1801 W. Coast Highway.

The program also offers basic scuba, Red Cross lifesaving and kayaking courses. For a complete listing call the campus recreation office at 856-5346.

Beginning sign language class

Beginning American Sign Language will be taught from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays through March 21 at Deerfield Community Park, Irvine.

The classes will cover a basic understanding of the language, survival vocabulary and the deaf culture and community. No pre-skills are needed.

For more information, call David Anderson at 660-3920.

Winter art classes to begin

A variety of art classes for children and adults will be offered by the Irvine Fine Arts Center in the winter quarter that begins Monday.

Classes focus on a range of art disciplines, including watercolor, ceramics, drawing, video, calligraphy, stained glass and photography.

Most classes meet once a week for four to 10 weeks. For more information, call the center at 552-1018.

Networking for fame, fortune

A seminar, entitled "Networking for Fame and Fortune," will be offered from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Little Inn on the Bay, 617 Lido Park Drive, Newport Beach.

The class will focus on how to network to increase sales, for job or career change and for the entrepreneur. Instructor will be Susan Linn, a public relations writer.

For more information, call Linn at 786-1320.

Retired federal workers meet

Saddleback Valley Chapter of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet at 2 p.m. Monday at Glendale Federal Savings Community Room, 23221 Calle de la Louisa, Laguna Hills.

The meeting is open to retired federal civilian employees, their spouses, survivors of annuitants, active federal employees and guests.

Hospital volunteers to install

Orange County Council of Hospital Volunteers will install officers at a 9 a.m. meeting on Monday at the Turnip Rose restaurant, Orange County Medical Association building, 300 S. Flower St., Orange.

Current trends in cosmetic and plastic surgery will be examined by Donald Altman, M.D., diplomate of the American Board of Plastic Surgery and active staff physician at Healthcare Medical Center in Tustin.

Saleswomen to convene

Orange County chapter, National Association for Professional Saleswomen will meet at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Red Lion Inn, 3050 Bristol St., Costa Mesa.

"The Art of Powerspeak" will be discussed by Mimi Schweid.

Advertising, record classes

Small business owners can learn how to make the right advertising decisions at an Orange Coast College workshop to be presented from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Instructor is Laura Woods, president of an advertising agency.

A simple, accurate recordkeeping system will be explained during another OCC workshop, slated from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Presenters Linda Pinson and Jerry Jinnett are small business owners, consultants and co-authors of four business textbooks.

Owning a boat not necessary to enjoy sailing at this club

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dick and Gayle Nelson of Yorba Linda sometimes travel to Newport Beach every other weekend to enjoy a day of sailing.

They board a 25-footer, 35-footer or whatever suits their fancy — because they don't own their own boat.

They are members of the Lido Sailing Club in Newport Beach, a club designed for sailors who don't want the responsibility or financial burden of owning their own vessel.

Owner Norm Rest

"It's just a wonderful idea," Gayle Nelson said. "It's hard enough to find a mooring — and very expensive. You don't have to worry about maintenance or cleanup because it's all done for you.

"They keep their boats in excellent condition," she said.

Norm Rest, club owner, said membership is a "viable alternative to owning your own boat."

Founded in 1971, Rest said the club's service lends to recreation, knowledge and entertainment.

"We have 35 boats ranging from 25- to 45-feet that are owned by individuals and leased back to the club," he said. "We've taught more than 600 members to sail, whether it be beginning, intermediate or advanced."

New members pay a one-time fee of $190 and thereafter monthly dues. The fee includes 15 hours of sailing instructions with group and crew.

"Members learn safety, rules of the water, rigging, sail trimming, etiquette, navigation ... and overboard procedures," Rest said.

Monthly dues are $60, and $40 of that goes on account like a savings account. The money accumulates for usage of any size boat that ranges from $40 to $300 a day.

Boats are available for a 24-hour period and they are insured from Newport Beach to the Mexican border, Rest said.

Nelson said she and her husband love to spend the night aboard their leased-boat and sail the next day. She said there's lots of ways to spend a Saturday or Sunday aboard.

"Sometimes we'll fill our soup jug at the Crab Cooker and take friends aboard in the wintertime," she said. "Other times we've had Tony Roma deliver ribs."

Rest said owners make enough money to pay for their slip rent and are provided with free maintenance.

Lido Sailing Club is designed for people who want to sail but don't want the responsibility of owning a boat.

FV officer receives department honor

Paul Sorrell has been named the Fountain Valley Police Department's 1988 Officer of the Year.

The annual honor is voted on by the police department's 61 members who select an officer for his or her accomplishments in law enforcement, community service and interpersonal skills.

Sorrell has served seven and one-half years with the police department. For the last two years his assignment with the narcotics division has resulted in numerous arrests of narcotic offenders and seizures of illegal drugs. He is also a member of the department's SWAT team in which he coordinates and directs much of the training for the speciality unit.

"It been a lot of hard work this year in the field of narcotics," he said. "We have had several real good cases and that is probably the biggest reason I received the award. It is very nice to be recognized by my peers."

Police Chief Elvin Miali described the qualifications representative of the award.

"The officer is not only chosen for his leadership, outstanding performance in the field and rapport with peers," he said, "but because he is a coach, a friend and available when needed."

Sorrell has a bachelor's degree from Cal State Fulllerton and advanced certificates in police training.

"He was selected for his ability in enforcement in narcotics and vice," Miali said. "It takes a special breed and a lot of dedication because of the hours. There is no set schedule.

"It is quite an honor and he is a well-deserved recipient," Miali said.

Sorrell is the father of two small children. Because of his undercover work, a photo was not released for publication.

And speaking of awards...

Matt G. Baker and Wade Tift of Newport Beach were presented with the Outstanding Youth Achievement Award from the R. G. Canning Corp., a Los Angeles-based promotional firm.

R. G. Canning said he becomes personally involved with helping youth of today. He feels recognition for their accomplishments builds self-confidence and courage that will be an important asset later in life for guidance and direction.

"During the summer months I spend most of my time escorting selected youth on world-travel trips," said Canning.

"It gives me the opportunity and satisfaction to do for others," he added.

The corporation officials believe that honoring the youth of today for their accomplishments gives them needed reassurance.

CALENDAR ART DEVELOPS FOR NB PHOTOGRAPHER...

From A9

models can be a hard and sometimes painfull process, she said. Starting the selection as late as December, Gershenson is forced to make her decisions in time to meet the Jan. 1 deadline.

"What is really hard about picking models is that I sometimes have to turn them down," she said. It is really hard for some guys to take rejection because of the way they look. "And they are going to look that way for the rest of their lives."

She also believes that featuring males in the calendar has given her some new insight on how to better understand men. Calling it a "mini-psychology lesson," Gershenson said the calendar often creates large egos.

"When I get some of these guys to pose for me, it makes them feel real good about themselves," she said. "There is a lot more than just muscles and good looks to some. But sometimes, they can really get stuck on themselves. I won't put up with that."

Craig Runnalls, a 23-year-old economics major and co-captain of the varisty rowing team, is featured on this year's calendar. Recommended to Gershenson by another model, Runnalls was quickly chosen for the cover page. However, he says the honor did not go to his head.

"I got a lot of teasing from my friends about it," said the Newport Beach resident. "I was really pleased to be in the calendar, but I didn't get stuck on myself. Kim is right when she says we are just born this way. How can you be conceited about something you had nothing to do with."

While Gershenson sees a potential for some of her models to turn professional, many of them make the venture fun. In return for modeling, everyone in the calendar receives a free hair cut and pictures to add to his portfolio.

Gershenson gets little financial benefits from producing the calendar. It is the financial end of producing the calendar, including developing and publicity, that takes up most of her time. She has set up autograph-signing parties and "win-a-date" contests to help battle the $3,500 printing cost, which comes out of her own pocket.

"I am not really looking to get anything out of this because I know that there is not very much money to be made," she said. "It has opened up some doors for me, with people asking me to take pictures for them and put together calendars.

"Actually, I am just in it for the friendship. I enjoy helping people out by taking their picture, making them feel real good about themselves."

themselves and just feeling good."

French said she focuses on teaching women how to become their own makeup artist, and how to select products that work for them. She takes into consideration lifestyle, the image to be projected, facial bone structure, and skin type.

She charges $75 for a consultation that includes a detailed individualized workbook.

"I cover all the learning senses," she said. "They watch me apply the makeup, I explain as I go along and they read about it in the workbook.

"This is geared to the individual. I do require a follow-up, that is like fine tuning. If they don't follow up that frustrates me. I can only do as much as people let me."

French also sells a line of cosmetics she has carefully selected. Her background in working with most of the major cosmetic companies has given her an understanding of the product ingredients and formulas.

"They are all good basic skin care producs at less than over-the-counter prices," she said. "Once you have been trained to put on the makeup, you don't have to look at it the rest of the day."

French also works with several Orange County plastic surgeons in teaching post cosmetic surgery patients how to apply makeup to their new look.

And like any other artist, it is hard for French not to look at people and silently create a new image.

"When I meet someone it takes me about 15 seconds to make them over in my mind. Then I'm satisfied and can forget about it," French said smiling.

attracted a few spectators. While popularity of the summer festivals grew each year, attendance for Winterfest quickly became overshadowed. According to Rowan, the "potential has always been there, but the way to do it hasn't.

"The chamber wants the festival to grow just like the summer counterparts have," she said. "We have taken several approaches to accomplish this. The biggest is expansion of the show."

Typically, Winterfest has been an arts and crafts show held at the Festival of Arts grounds. Exhibitors are allowed to rent a booth for four days, displaying their hand arts.

The 1989 festival will still follow this tradition, but will add an athletic side to the event by featuring such events as surfing, bodybuilding, skateboarding and golf.

"Sometimes, art is just not enough to carry a festival. Adding sports has opened up new doors," said Rowan.

This year, corporate sponsorships have become a priority. Already, companies such as Gotcha Sports and Pacific Telephone have made pledges to fund the event.

"Marketing seems to be paying off," she said. "At this point, we have received calls from as far away as Pheonix to participate in the festival. We have been really getting the word out."

Superintendent is entitled to say 'I told you so'

John Nicoll has good reason to feel a little proud of himself.

Nicoll, superintendent of the Newport-Mesa Unified School District, has not always enjoyed the comfort of saying, "I told you so." His tenure at the district has been rocked with controversy and a steady dose of grumbling over the woes of education and the state of local schools.

For instance, when Nicoll decided to switch assignments between two popular high school principals, many parents, teachers and students wanted to hang his scalp from the lodge pole, if there were such a thing in Newport Beach or Costa Mesa.

The principal swap saw a letter-writing campaign that overset the letters-to-the-editor columns of local papers. There were several stormy school board sessions and arguments on the streets and during coffee breaks. Students even staged a protest.

The furor of the principal swap has faded except with several people who harbor political aspirations and those who like to cherish their grudges. But its success is not the reason for the satisfaction Nicoll should be enjoying.

Newport-Mesa school officials found themselves in a unique situation this week. They are beginning to take a look at reopening an elementary school. That's right, reopen a school.

The possibility is rare because many districts are still wrestling with declining enrollments and the always unpopular decision to close schools.

But that's not the situation in Newport Beach and Costa Mesa. District projections released this week show that the children of a local mini-baby boom several years back are just about school age.

School trustees were told the district's elementary schools will be at capacity in the not-too-distant future. The most immediate concern is the Estancia attendance zone, which includes four elementary schools — California, Pomona, Whittier and Wilson. This area, according to the report, will go over classroom capacity this year.

Trustees have several options. They can go the portable classroom route, consolidate Estancia High School to include 7th through 12th grades and shift students who live south of 19th Street to the Newport Harbor attendance area, or they could reopen a school.

Reopening a school is a sweet option and the trustees have that option because Nicoll won his battle to retain ownership of schools the district had to close several years ago. At that time, the action was criticized. People who thought the schools should be sold to bolster the district's sagging budget pointed to other districts that sold their closed schools. But Nicoll and his allies were successful, convincing trustees that the district should hang onto the schools.

Even those who argued against that decision years ago will now have to admit that Nicoll had his eye on the future and finger on the pulse of a trend that he was sure would reverse itself.

If Nicoll is not wearing a smug grin this week, he should be. He has earned the right.

Agenda for 1989

The start of a new year is an appropriate time to set an agenda of issues for 1989... They are topics so large and multi-faceted that a mountain of well-intentioned editorials chock-full of advice could not come close to solving the problems inherent in them.

...We'll aim for spunk and insight this year in tackling:

GROWTH:...We'll study how development of all kinds should be controlled in ways that keep our area's economy vital and housing stock "affordable," whatever that is these days. We'll follow the local election campaigns that will be tied so closely to the issue.

DRUG ABUSE: ...Trafficking in crack, the cocaine derivative, has turned whole inner-cities into war zones, has put a whole generation at risk. Violence goes hand-in-glove with the business — machine guns are commonplace now. So are almost-random drive-by shootings tied to gangs and drugs. ...We need to fight it, and fast, through education and treatment.

TRANSPORTATION: ...Traffic jams as have never been seen before are now commonplace on both freeways and surface streets. The bus system operated by the (Southern California Rapid Transit District)... is in administrative chaos. While light rail and subways are somewhere in the future, there are no panacea... An all-encompassing strategy must be forged by counties, transportation agencies, cities, businesses and citizens. Studying the idea of new forms of regional government is integral to creating this strategy...

EDUCATION: There is no question that in this last topic are the answers to all problems. ...A surge in enrollment is coming because of immigration and a new baby boom. Tight budgets and competing financial needs are forcing tough decisions. At the college level, if we don't build new universities, we'll turn tens of thousands of qualified students away. And at the secondary level, if we don't create a fascination with learning, we're in danger of becoming a society filled with second-rate minds....

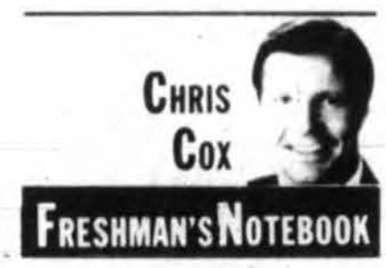
Congress can use a raise, but method is not sincere



Earlier this week, President Reagan submitted his final budget to Congress. And just as they have done in each of the last several years, the liberals who control the Congress immediately pronounced this massive document "irrelevant."

Of course, none of them took the time to read it. That would have required days or weeks of study.

Perhaps the best rejoinder came from Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady. He pronounced the claims of irrelevance as themselves irrelevant.

Witticisms aside, it is obvious that the congressional budget process is badly broken when the entire executive branch is required to exhaust itself for months to produce a Budget of the United States, only to have its work product dismissed out of hand by the majority in Congress.

There is one part of the president's budget, however, to which House Speaker Jim Wright and crew are paying great deference. In fact, so "relevant" is the budget in this one particular that the congressional Democrats want it to become law automatically — without even so much as a vote of Congress.

Just which part of the budget is so deserving of this near reverence? You guessed it — the 50 percent pay raise for members of Congress.

Under a clever arrangement adopted by the Congress in 1985, pay hikes recommended by a congressional commission and included in the budget automatically go into effect unless Congress passes a joint resolution of disapproval within 30 days.

So by avoiding a vote between now and Feb. 8 (during most of which time Congress won't even be in session), the salaries of liberal millionaires Teddy Kennedy, D.-Mass., and Howard Metzenbaum, D.-Ohio, will go from $89,500 to $135,000. Speaker Jim Wright, D.-Tex., who is under investigation for a number of serious ethical and legal charges, will get an additional $60,000 on top of the $115,000 he's already making.

Now, it's one thing to raise your own pay. But it's quite another to do so dishonestly, through the back door. Sadly, the entire purpose of this Rube Goldberg mechanism set up by the Congress — the so-called "Quadrennial Commission on Executive, Legislative, and Judicial Salaries" — is to permit members of Congress to avoid accountability to the voters.

The arrogance of this scheme to arrange pay hikes without a recorded vote is evident in the unabashed way in which the liberal leadership in the House speak openly about their plans to prevent a resolution of disapproval from even coming to the floor of the House.

On the very first day of this session, after Jim Wright finished his speech about "ethics" and "bipartisanship," this is the plan he hatched: within the 30-day period, the Senate will vote to disapprove the pay raises. Then, just after the 30-day deadline, the House will also vote its disapproval. But because the vote will be tardy, it won't count.

Sound familiar? That's exactly what Wright did in 1987, when he deliberately waited until the 31st day before permitting a vote on the then-pending 16 percent congressional pay raise. As a result, Wright and other liberals went home to their constituents and told them they'd voted against the pay raise — but in fact, they took the money and ran.

Republican legislation to prevent this abuse has been bottled up by Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright for over six years. The bill, introduced by Rep. Tom Tauke, R.-Iowa, would require members of Congress to cast a recorded vote on all pay raises. It would also prohibit them from mixing a pay raise in the same legislation with other political issues.

Just as importantly, the Republican legislation would prevent congressional pay increases from taking effect until after the next House election and the start of a new Congress. One of the principal arguments of those in favor of the pay raise is that without it, the Congress won't attract the most highly qualified people. But the 101st Congress has already been sworn in — so a pay raise that takes effect immediately can have no impact on the composition of its membership. Instead, it serves as a windfall for members who thought they were running for a job that pays $89,500.

The Commission's recommendations, which relied heavily on this flawed argument, were ill-conceived in other respects as well. The panel — chaired by Jimmy Carter's White House counsel — stated that due to inflation, congressional salaries "have declined in constant dollars to approximately 65-70 percent of their salaries in 1969."

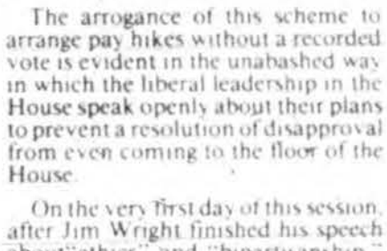
In fact, however, the choice of 1969 as the base year was designed to skew the result. That year, as it happens, was the high-water mark for congressional salaries in this century, adjusting for inflation. That's because in 1969, Congress had just received a 40 percent boost in salary.

The National Taxpayer's Union has pointed out that, when inflation is taken into account, the average congressional pay for the period 1900-1985 was $76,500. Thus, the current level of $89,500 is fully 17 percent above the historical inflation-adjusted norm.

Economist Arthur Laffer has advanced an enlightened proposal that may solve the whole problem: merit pay for Congress. If the Congress balances the budget without a tax increase, who would begrudge each member a $100,000 bonus? The taxpayers, the economy and the country would all be a lot better off.

Chris Cox is the congressman for the 40th Congressional District.

Proposed 50 percent pay raise a study in arrogance



Look over there in the corner.

See that man in the Brooks Brothers' suit, swilling coffee and pumping hands like a well-oiled machine?

That's right. That's your congressman. He's hard at work.

And do you know what he needs. He needs a raise. Who doesn't?

How much of a raise, you wonder. Try 50 percent. I'll repeat that...50 percent.

Now I might not be the most worldly man, and I don't prowl Wall Street or hang out at the Stock Exchange, but a 50 percent pay raise seems just a mite steep. Aside from Orel Hershisher and a few recent Lotto winners, does anybody out there anticipate a 50 percent raise this year?

Just to put it on the record, congressmen make $89,500 a year. A 50 percent raise would put their salary at $135,000.

Now to some people, that's enough money to just about drown in. To be honest, it would give me a heart attack. But to others, it's a reasonable sum. Enough to make the mortgage, pay the green fees, the tennis club dues, the Nordstrom card, and so on.

But a 50 percent raise, if nothing else, tells you that the person receiving it must have done one heck of a good job.

Has your congressman done one heck of a good job at something besides getting elected?

Most local teachers this past year received about a 3 percent raise, though some soared as high as 5 percent. Teachers in one local district got a 2½ percent boost. Now these are the people we trust with getting our children ready for the world. Some of them are the very same people who taught American history, literature and math to those congressmen now on the brink of a 50 percent raise.

How about our police force, the people we put our trust in when things take a nasty turn, the people we count on when some bozo puts a knife to the throat of a clerk at the local 7-Eleven, the people we matter-of-factly figure will risk their lives when some poor soul holds up in a house with a high-powered rifle and terrorizes a neighborhood.

Try 5 percent in Newport Beach. Or 6 percent in Huntington Beach. You get the picture.

A 50 percent raise is saying something.

"Hey pal, you helped erase the national deficit, the homeless are no longer that, our Social Security system is going gangbusters and assured for years to come.

Right? Well, not entirely.

Maybe our congressmen should get a raise based on accomplishments. Cure a problem, get a raise.

But the reason for the proposed raise, I suspect, has nothing do to with accomplishments. No, it has more to do with honorariums.

You see, for years congressmen have been permitted to accept pay for speaking to businessmen, farmers, stock brokers and aerospace engineers. They get paid for going out to breakfast.

On an annual haul, some get $20,00..$30,000. Some get even more.

But the word from on high is that's got to go. The free lunch may not be gone, but the free lunch with a four figure tip is.

The proposed pay hike is still smoldering on the back burner to now. But I suspect the heat will be cranked up a notch or two before long.

One television commentator recently likened the proposed pay hike to taxation without representation, since none of us will have a say in the matter.

This newscaster, drawing on the fabled Boston Tea Party, suggested that constituents mail each congreesman a tea bag. Just one. A small one if you like.

Well, that's sort of a silly idea. The sort of idea we are accustomed to seeing on television.

But if it's symbolism we want, then this proposed pay hike is a fairly ample target.

How can Congress increase its pay by 50 percent when we have people — entire families, perhaps — sleeping in a cloak of cardboard behind a closed-down elementary school in Costa Mesa?

How can Congress increase its pay by 50 percent when the national deficit is heading south quicker than an escaped felon?

If it's symbolism you want, that's pretty bleak stuff.

Seawalls not best way to protect beach

To the Editor:

I think that many Laguna businessmen, city council persons, and perhaps other city officials may tend to overlook the fact that Laguna's sandy beaches are both a priceless and an endangered resource.

Sandy beaches provide attractive areas requiring little care, which are useful for a wide variety of general rest and recreational activities. Beaches provide extensive playgrounds for young children, game and surfing areasfor older youths (thus keeping them off the streets) and attractive sun bathing areas for adults. Also, sandy beaches have considerable commercial value because they attract out-of-town visitors, they require little maintenance, and they help protect adjacent bluffs from wave erosion.

Unfortunately, during the last few decades our beaches have become significantly narrower because of gradual and often unnoticed sand losses. Furthermore, there are several good reasons for believing that man's actions, and natural occurrences will accelerate our beach sand losses during future years.

Because of the sand-losses already experienced, a number of beachfront property owners now want to construct new sea walls to protect their bluffs from wave attack. However many (perhaps most) of the relatively few bluff failures that have occurred have been due to overwatering and/or improper drainage — not to recent wave erosion. Furthermore (most experts tell us) the placement of seawalls along our bluffs will increase the rate of sand losses in the future, thus further narrowing out sandy beaches.

For example (in a report prepared for the City of Del Mar) coastal engineer Ron Noble stated that during severe storms, the natural wave erosion occurring in front of a concrete seawall will cause 3-5 feet of vertical erosion of the sand. This would reduce the width of the beach by 30-50 feet or more.

Most experts on coastal erosion have concluded that while seawalls may provide some protection to the lower bluffs, such walls will actually damage the beaches by accelerating erosion. Fortunately, there are other alternatives, such as sand replenishment, which will protect both the beaches and the bluffs.

City officials should be urged to seriously consider such alternatives.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Jan. 12, the 12th day of 1989. There are 353 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 12, 1945, during World War II, German forces in Belgium retreated in the Battle of the Bulge.

On this date:

In 1773, the first public museum in America was established, in Charleston, S.C.

In 1915, the House of Representatives rejected a proposal to give women the right to vote.

In 1932, Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway became the first woman elected to the Senate.

In 1945, aircraft from U.S. Task Force 38 sank about 40 Japanese ships off Indochina.

In 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson said in his State of the Union address that the United States should stay in South Vietnam until communist aggression there ended.

In 1986, the shuttle Columbia blasted off with a crew that included Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and the first Hispanic-American in space, Dr. Franklin R. Chang-Diaz.

In 1987, Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite arrived in Lebanon on his latest mission to win the release of hostages, a journey that would result in his own disappearance.

Ten years ago: The State Department, fearing a possible military coup in Iran, issued an appeal to the Iranian military, saying a seizure of power would inhibit an "orderly and constructive approach" to the establishment of stability.

Five years ago: A business-oriented efficiency panel chaired by J. Peter Grace issued its report on deficits which said federal spending could be slashed by $424.4 billion over three years.

Today's Birthdays: Journalist Martin Agronsky is 74. Singer Ray Price is 63. The "Amazing Kreskin" is 54. Actress Kirstie Alley is 34.

Strauss Orchestra too serious

By MICHAEL RYDZYNSKI
Daily Pilot Correspondent

No one was dancing in the aisles, but the Orange County Performing Arts Center sellout of 2,902 patrons enthusiastically received the Vienna Johann Strauss Orchestra and conductor Alfred Eschwe on their county debut Monday evening.

Presented by the Orange County Philharmonic Society, the Strauss Orchestra offered (what else?) an all-Strauss program of mostly waltzes and polkas.

Eschwe, who more than bears a passing resemblance to Johann Strauss II, "The Waltz King" himself, led the chamber orchestra of 40 in the type of concert its namesake played almost 140 years ago. While the programming may have been similar and the playing technically first rate, the spirit of the performances too often was lacking.

One usually encounters — especially in pops concerts — great liberties taken with the fun that's normally inherent in many Strauss scores: overly tremendous stretching of ritardandi, use of real whips for slapsticks or cannons for popguns, and so on. But Eschwe had the orchestra give too straightforward an account of most of the 17 selections (including three encores) it played.

Thus, slightly long yet dramatic pauses were elided in the Overture to "Die Fledermaus." All the fun went out of the quadrille "Kuenstler" ("Artist"), Op. 201, a normally witty pastische of borrowed tunes — such as the "Wedding March" from Felix Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and the opening of Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor (among many other snippets) — that was played with utter seriousness instead. And not even Johann and Josef Strauss' joint "Pizzicato Polka" was treated lightly, with tempo rubato (a unstrict keeping of time) virtually absent.

Of course, not every Strauss tune is ripe for "fun," most notably and famously "An der Schoenen Blauen Donau" ("On the Beautiful Blue Danube"), Op. 314. In this pleasantly-but-not-outstandingly performed work, Eschwe took more repeats than one normally encounters in a live performance of it, yet it was far from being complete.

Still, there were some shenanigans that were properly under control. Josef Strauss' "Buchstaben" ("Typographical Characters") polka had some of the performers occasionally recite the alphabet from A to G and end with A again. The same composer's frenetically paced "Plappermaeulchen" polka was even more deliciously realized, with a ratchet obbligato, the two lead second-violinists arguing several times and the oboist having the final say by standing up to play her note and bow.

The encores were among the most enjoyably rendered. The polka "No Problems" had the orchestra "Ha-ha"ing; and even Eschwe (finally) got into the spirit of things by pulling down on an imaginary cord for the timpanist to play his booming one-note solo. Johann I's "Sigh" galop indeed had the beleaguered players "struggling" to keep pace with this whirlwind of a piece, give out a very tired sigh near the end. And the same Strauss' most famous work, "The Redetzky March," saw the orchestra play most of it without the conductor, who walked away after starting it off and came back on for the final refrain.

Cleo Laine plays a witch who changes from ugly to beautiful in "Into the Woods."

AZOC reception tonight

An opening reception for artists Bijan Bahar, Jim Merritt, Steve Lustig, Ruth Jameson, Tom Licari and Greg Tate will be held from 7 to 10 tonight at the Art Zone of the Contemporary, 3443 Via Lido, Newport Beach.

The public is invited, admission is free and a jazz band will perform.

TV to chronicle Oliver North saga

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Production will begin this week on CBS' miniseries "Guts & Glory: The Rise and Fall of Oliver North."

David Keith will star as Lt. Col. North, with Barnard Hughes playing CIA Director William Casey, Peter Boyle as National Security Council Adviser John Poindexter and Paul Dooley as NSC Adviser Robert McFarlane. Newcomer Amy Stock-Poynton will be featured as secretary Fawn Hall.

The four-hour special, whose broadcast date wasn't announced, is based on the book by newspaper reporter Ben Bradlee Jr.

It will be filmed in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

Cleo Laine likes to sing Sondheim

'Into the Woods' arrives March 7

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grammy-winning singer Cleo Laine admires Stephen Sondheim's music so much she recorded an album of it — and then was asked to star in the national tour of his latest musical.

"I've always liked his music and it's always a challenge," the British singer said by telephone from a home she and her husband maintain in Sonoma, Calif., where she spent the holidays.

"Most of the things Sondheim has created could be considered classical theater now ... I think it is almost the equivalent of Shakespeare in the 1980s."

"Into the Woods," starring Laine and Charlotte Rae, will run through March 5 at the Ahmanson Theater of the Los Angeles Music Center. It will then tour to the Orange County Performing Arts Center (March 7-12) and to Denver.

An exploration of what happens to certain fairy-tale characters after living "happily ever after," the musical won 1988 Tony Awards for Sondheim for best score and James Lapine best book of a musical.

The pivotal character of the witch attracted Laine. "It's an interesting acting role," she said, explaining that in the first act "I'm very ugly with a hump and a long nose and scraggly hair." In Act Two, she becomes beautiful, "but every now and again you bring the ugly witch back into it."

Laine, who won a 1987 Grammy for best female jazz vocal for "Cleo at Carnegie: The 10th Anniversary Concert," had previously starred in a production of Sondheim's "A Little Night Music." Her stage credits also include a 1986 Tony Award-nominated role in the musical "The Mystery of Edwin Drood."

Her album, "Cleo Sings Sondheim," on RCA, features one song from "Into the Woods," the keynote piece "No One Is Alone." It was recorded before she knew she would be playing the witch. In the show, the song is sung by Cinderella after her prince has disappeared.

Currently, the singer, noted for her wide range of musical and theatrical interests, is recording an album tentatively titled "Woman to Woman," a collection of songs composed exclusively by female songwriters.

C(d)M defense tops Uni

Corona del Mar suffocates Trojans in opener, 46-31

By PAT LARKIN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Defense has always been synonymous with Corona del Mar High basketball and Wednesday night's show did nothing to dispell the notion.

The Sea Kings rode their defense to the CIF Division VI football title and CdM's five-man version proved nearly as tough as they whipped University 46-31 in the Sea View League opener for both schools.

The visiting Sea Kings used a swarming man-to-man defense to stuff the Trojans highly-touted inside game, holding 6-foot-9 forward Stefan Mumaw to just seven free throws and 6-foot-6 center Pat Ferrell scoreless. Corona's collapsing traps frustrated the Trojans all night forcing University into turnovers and bad shots.

"We hang our hats around here on tough man-to-man defense," Corona del Mar Coach Paul Orris said. "We did an pretty good job of shutting down their inside game."

Pretty good?

Orris' Sea Kings, now 11-4 overall, held University scoreless for the first 4:37 of the game, gave up a three-point play and then held University, 5-10, scoreless for the rest of the period. At one point Corona denied the Trojans four straight times underneath the basket after kicking the ball outside for their fifth attempt, but a layup was blown off a nice backdoor pass from Junior Oliver.

"We were just flat tonight," University Coach Lee Jackson said. "We've only had one good game wire-to-wire this year and that's when Corona (Riverside County) made us look good."

With the outcome of the contest

Eagles give Saddleback scare, 58-55

Estancia strong, but loses close one to top county team

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

They shot just 17 percent through the first half, their 3-point production was limited to nothing and they were even only once — at the tipoff. But in the end, Estancia High basketball coach Tim O'Brien was able to walk off the floor with a certain amount of satisfaction Wednesday night.

His upset-minded Eagles dropped their opener in Sea View League basketball, 58-55, but considering the circumstances, it wasn't one of those nights where you shut yourself in a locker room and search for answers.

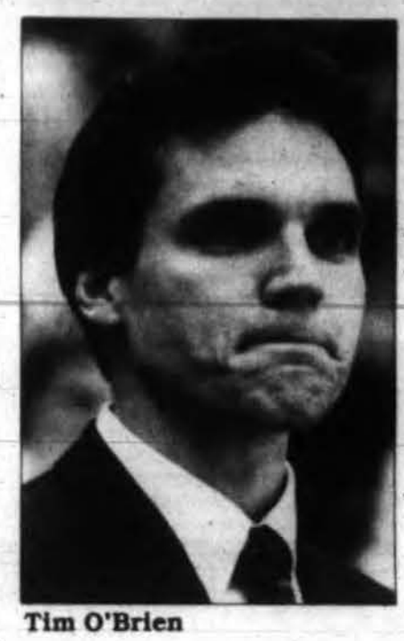
Despite an ice-cold start and a backs-to-the-way effort to the finish, the Eagles came to within a prayer shot at the buzzer of shoving the game into overtime against Orange County's No. 1-rated quintet, Saddleback's visiting Roadrunners.

"They just intimidated us in the first half," said O'Brien, "but we were still in the game and had a chance to win it in the last 10 seconds. It was a nice comeback."

Estancia, which had fallen behind by as many as 13 in the first half, pulled to within 53-51 with 55 seconds left on Tim Kjar's drive through the lane, and to within 55-53 with 26 seconds left on Andy Scholes' inside shot off a rebound.

Sean Simon's free throw gave Saddleback a 56-53 lead with 24 seconds left, but Augustin Heredia's effort to draw a foul as he moved inside with six seconds left found him getting the bucket, but no foul came and the Eagles were down by a 56-55 count.

Tony Agnew was fouled with two seconds left and made good on both attempts for the final margin, leaving the Eagles just a prayer half-court shot by Mike Curtis, which went unrewarded as time expired.



Tim O'Brien

For Saddleback it was a near-miss and Roadrunners' Coach Pat Quinn commented, "Nobody said this is going to be easy."

What made it appear easy for some time was the defense of Craig Marshall, who held the high-scoring Curtis to no field goals in the first half and 15 overall, as well as the sharp-shooting and rebounding of Malru Dottin, who led all scorers with 28.

"Marshall did a good job on Curtis," said Quinn, "but it took a lot out of him offensively."

It was a streaky game with Estancia unable to score for the first 7:17 of the game and Saddleback suffering a 1-for-10 effort in the third quarter as the

Elster building on a foundation

Outlook appears bright for product of Marina, GWC

By JON FERGUSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Kevin Elster's results in his first year with the New York Mets were mixed — some were impressive while others showed inconsistency.

Elster

But one constant seems to be the coaches' continued optimism for the future of the 24-year-old shortstop, a longtime resident of Huntington Beach who prepped at Marina High and attended Golden West College before being drafted by the Mets in 1984.

"He had a great defensive year and a frustrating offensive year," said Bud Harrelson, the Mets' dugout coach who managed Elster during his first year of pro ball at Class A Little Falls in 1984. "He knows it will come. He is as good a shortstop as there is in the league, and he will get better."

Manager Davey Johnson called 1988 a learning experience for Elster "about what it takes," but that "the best is yet to come.

"I know he felt he could do a lot better, but I felt he had a fine year. He has a few adjustments to make, but I'm sure he'll make them."

Elster started 122 games at shortstop for the National League East Division champions, and only outfielder Darryl Strawberry played in more games overall with the Mets than Elster's 149. In the field, he went the final 61 games without an error, making his last miscue on July 19.

"I've established myself, built a foundation," Elster said. "Now I can build on it."

Most of the construction will come at the plate, where he showed flashes of brilliance around many dry spells, many clutch hits around many games where he was used only as a defensive replacement after falling into short slumps.

The final numbers included a .214 batting average, nine home runs and 37 RBI. He had the lowest on-base percentage (.282) of any full-time player, yet six game-winning RBI, a two-homer outing vs. the Dodgers and a four-hit game.

"I told him I really feel he'll hit at least 30 or so points higher and drive in 20 more runs (next season)," Johnson said. "It's a learning experience, and he's getting used to different pitchers and different strike zones, and he played very well."

AP Laserphoto

The future appears bright for Mets' shortstop Kevin Elster, formerly of Marina High and Golden West College.

The four-hit outing against the Braves came within a two-week stretch when he hit .412 with six RBI during late April and early May. He was hitting .146 up to that binge, had only five hits in the 36 at-bats which followed, but then went 5 for 16 and one week later. A few days after that, he drove an 11th-inning homer to beat the Dodgers.

"He had an up-and-down year," said Bill Robinson, the Mets' batting and first base coach. "One thing that I admire about him is it never has affected his attitude. He has a good mental approach. He accepts when he goes 0 for 4 and we win the ballgame. He never really gets down on himself."

Elster fashioned 19 multiple-hit games, 10 multiple-RBI games, and his 12 intentional walks were the most for a National League middle infielder, although he usually batted in front of the pitcher.

"I never really was consistent," Elster said. "I had a lot of cluth hits. About all I had were clutch hits. I'm happy with the year. My defense was awesome. That's what I wanted to do."

Pirates overcome lapse, win, 56-49

Saddleback defense causes long lull, but Coast pulls out win

By JON FERGUSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Orange Coast College Coach Tandy Gillis can't complain about being 2-0 and atop the Orange Empire Conference men's basketball standings, but if the Pirates are to stay there he knows they can't afford the kind of lapse they had Wednesday night too often.

In a 56-49 victory over the same Saddleback College team which upset Riverside Saturday, the Pirates went from dominating the game with hot shooting at the start to a six-point second-half deficit, then back to the lead for good.

"I can't complain about (being 2-0)," Gillis said. "But I think we can play better. We have to play better. They had a good aggressive zone and we got a little lazy. We'll take the win, but we didn't play very well. Their defense made us look bad."

Dareck Crane finished with 16 points to lead Orange Coast, 17-4 overall, while Chip Hanlon added 15 points and nine rebounds, including seven in the second half. Derek Johnson hit three treys in the first half en route to netting 11 points. Saddleback, 8-11, 1-2, was led by Wun Versher's 14 points.

After taking a 20-8 lead with 10:42 remaining in the first half, Orange Coast managed just eight points in the next 15 minutes to fall behind 34-28 with 16:04 remaining in the game. The Pirates had 23 turnovers in the game, and 16 of them came on 25 possessions during that 15-minute span.

"We turned the ball over 12 times in the first half, then at the start of the second half we go three minutes without a shot," Gillis said. "They did a good job."

The shooting of Crane, Johnson and Hanlon sparked the Pirates to the early lead as OCC hit nine of its first 13 shots.

A vote for Rebels as favorites

More 'big-time' athletes give UNLV edge over Gauchos

BILL MULLIGAN

We have now played UNLV and UC Santa Barbara on the road and they are the two favorites in the Big West Conference.

Lost by 15 to UNLV and by 16 to UCSB. How do they compare? I like the Runnin' Rebels. Why? They have more big-time athletes and are well coached.

UCSB is well coached and has good athletes, but not as many as UNLV. Now if you are smart, you will not listen to me, because none of the teams I picked for the "Final Four" last March made it that far. Saw Pacific play the Rebels on TV Monday night and thought the Tigers were a pretty good team, yet they were never in the game.

Utah State won at New Mexico State last Sunday and even though the teams are comparable, I did not feel that Utah State could win at Las Cruces.

At the beginning of the season, we all thought that Utah State's Dan Conway was one of the five best players in the conference and he is averaging seven points per game.

Ron Adams, in his third year as head coach at Fresno State, won one road game during his first two years, and this season he has already picked up wins at Utah State and San Jose State.

His job is on the line and right now, it looks as if he is saving it. Ron is a really nice guy and I hope he has success this year.

John Sneed at Cal State Fullerton is doing a nice job as interim coach, but at this moment, it probably is not

Barons get past Edison

Corcoran paces Fountain Valley to 75-67 triumph

By RICHARD DUNN
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Coming in, the billing of strength and height went to Edison High while speed and quickness was Fountain Valley's forte.

It became an upbeat kind of night for the Barons, just the way they like it as they danced to the beat of Edison on the Chargers' basketball floor.

Junior guard Derrick Corcoran, Fountain Valley's 5-11, 160-pound blitzer of a shooter, led a surge to open the gap in the third quarter as the Barons prevailed, 75-67, in a Sunset League game Wednesday night.

Corcoran scored all of his 15 points on 3-pointers, including four in the third quarter as the Barons took a 10-point lead (49-39) with 4:01 left in the period.

Fountain Valley's muscle came from Mike Merli, who scored 20 points and grabbed a game-high 14 rebounds, including seven in the fourth quarter.

Edison's front line of 6-9 center Bill Martineau and forwards Steve Thobe (6-4½) and Bryan Murphy (6-4) proved, in the end, they were no match for the rabbits of Fountain Valley, who upped their league mark to 2-0 and overall record to 14-2.

Merli, a 6-5 junior forward, and center Mike Cook (6-5) are as big as the Barons get. They rely heavily on sharp-shooting guards Corcoran and Tom Weaver and the presence of

Oilers rally past Marina 62-61 in Sunset opener; Seahawks cruise, 88-27

Huntington Beach High Coach Roy Miller must have been wondering what else his team could possibly do after holding down 6-foot-10 Marina center Cherokee Parks but still trailing by eight in the fourth quarter.

What the Oilers did was hang tough and rally to pull out a 62-61 Sunset League boys basketball victory over the Vikings on Jeff Long's tipin at the final buzzer. The Oilers improved to 1-1 in league, 6-9 overall, while Marina fell to 1-1, 8-9.

Parks was limited to 14 points and five rebounds, but the backcourt duo of Tuan Nguyen and Francis Carreon scored 22 and 17 points respectively as Marina hit 22 of 28 field goal attempts in the game for 79 percent, including six of 11 3-point shots. Both guards registered season highs. Nguyen hit five of six 3-point attempts.

"We ran a box-and-one and that pretty much took Cherokee out of the game, but their perimeter players came thorugh — Carreon and Nguyen — and shot the lights out," said Miller, adding that in the second half he knew his squad could not afford to extend on the outside shooters and give Parks an opportunity.

Huntington Beach hit 56 percent from the floor, shooting mostly inside, and enjoyed a 31-20 advantage on the boards, including 15 offensive rebounds. Long, who scored 21 points, benefitted from many of those, grabbing 11 rebounds, five of them offensive. Yet despite those stats, Marina's shooting nearly carried the Vikes to victory.

Marina led at each stop and built an eight-point advantage, its largest of the game, with about five minutes to play. But Huntington stepped up its defensive pressure and forced some turnovers to rally for a 60-59 lead with a minute left. Parks hit a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left.

CdM...
From B1

never in doubt, except for the first five minutes of the second quarter when University got as close as two, the focus turned to how low CdM could hold University on the scoreboard.

The Sea Kings raced out to a 11-0 lead after the opening tipoff led by senior point-man Matt Cwiertnia. Cwiertnia canned two three-pointers, the first to open the contest and the second followed Chris Pliha's turn-around from six, to give CdM a 8-0 lead. Warren Johnson followed Cwiertnia's cue and hit another from long range to put Corona up 11-0 with 3:38 left in the first quarter.

Erik Glassen finally put the Trojans on the board five seconds later on a nice play. Glassen went high for a rebound then drew the foul from Pliha on a turnaround from eight. Glassen converted the free throw and Uni trailed by eight.

But Matt Herrington answered from 18 on the other end to push the lead back to 10. Brian Spratt hit a free throw to give CdM a 14-3 first quarter lead.

Johnson led the Sea Kings with 13 points while Herrington added nine and Cwiertnia had 8. The Trojans were led by Glassen's 10 and Mumaw's seven.

"This first win is a big leg up for us," Orris said. "Now we've got Newport Harbor Friday night and that's going to be an all-out war."

University did manage to control the first part of the second quarter when the Trojans went on a 9-0 run the first five minutes of the period. After a Mumaw free throw, Glassen hit from 3-point country, cutting the lead to 14-7. Glassen then drew the foul from Herrington while making a seven-foot running jump hook. The ensuing free throw cut the lead to four.

Brian Spratt missed the layin on the other end and then fouled Mumaw. Mumaw hit both ends of a one-and-one and it looked like University might make a game of it.

The Sea Kings answered however on a 13-footer from Herrington and five free throws to take a 20-13 lead into halftime.

From there it was all CdM. The Sea Kings took their biggest advantage at 41-23 with just under two minutes left. They would have held the Trojans under 30 points, but Jason Harris' concession layin at the buzzer prevented that.

Newport falls short

Newport Harbor High found a 15-point deficit in the third quarter too much of a hill to climb and dropped its Sea View League opener to visiting Tustin, 70-61, Wednesday night.

The Sailors, who trailed most of the way, were down 55-40 in the third quarter before staging a comeback. Newport, 11-5 overall, scored the next 10 points to make it 55-50, then rallied to close within 64-61 in the late stages before Tustin sealed it by scoring the final six points at the free-throw line.

Paig Parish fueled the rally by putting down four 3-pointers in the second half. Scott Gray led Newport with 16 points and 16 rebounds, while Parish finished with 14 points and Chris Lee 12.

Jason Moore was the top scorer for Tustin, 10-5, with 18 points.

Sophomore Paul McDaniels moves through close quarters in Estancia's 58-55 loss to Saddleback Wednesday night.

EAGLES FALL, 58-55...
From B1

Eagles fought back to make a game of it.

Estancia's quick hands helped force 21 Saddleback turnovers, a season high, but Quinn's biggest concern was the number of unforced turnovers his team committed (about half of them).

"We missed some easy shots," said Quinn, "but sometimes when you get the early lead things snowball and you start going conservative."

Estancia's quickness was nothing new for Quinn and his Roadrunners, who had seen plenty of it in a romp over Riverside North in tournament play, but as Quinn said, "Riverside was quick, but not smart."

Estancia entered with a sound game plan and went after Saddleback with a tight zone geared to stop Dottin and Marshall with the emphasis placed on forcing the other Roadrunners to beat the Eagles.

But Dottin was equal to the task throughout with a solid game. His 28 points was a season-high and nearly doubled his average of 14.9 per game.

"I just want them to feel they played hard, smart and together," said O'Brien prior to the game. "The league championship won't be won or lost tonight."

As it turned out, his Eagles didn't play their game with the poor first half, but O'Brien wasn't disappointed.

Estancia's second-half production included 17 of 29 from the floor (58.6 percent), but playing catch-up, it was also a foul and hope situation and Saddleback took advantage at the line.

The Roadrunners connected on 22 of 33 attempts from the line, including their last five points. Additionally, the Eagles lost two players on fouls, as well as the services of Kjar for a number of minutes because of foul trouble.

The victory was Saddleback's 15th in 16 decisions this season, while Estancia falls to 13-2 overall.

Leading the Eagles was Heredia with 20 points.

SUNSET...

The Oilers came down court and missed, but the ball went out of bounds off a Marina player underneath. Huntington inbounded to Andy Thompson, who missed an outside jumper, but Long was there to convert the tip.

Thompson finished with 12 points, Steve Lucas had 11 and Scott Drake 10.

Ocean View 88, Westminster 27: The Seahawks dominated in every phase, scoring more in the first quarter, 28, than the Lions managed in the game.

Ocean View, 11-5, 1-1, jumped to a 10-0 lead and never looked back in bouncing back from Friday's opening night loss to Fountain Valley. Westminster, 3-11, 0-2, netted two field goals in the first quarter.

All but two Ocean View players scored, with Mike Frohn leading the way with 13 points. Darren Ernst chipped in with 11 and Greg Evans and John Pruess added 10, a season-high for Pruess.

Memory of brother gives Aztec player added incentive

From The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Every time Mitch McMullen steps onto the basketball court, the San Diego State center is keeping faith with his dead brother.

"Before he did pass away, I told him I wanted to dedicate what I did in basketball to him," McMullen said of a hospital room promise he made to Corey McMullen the week before he died of leukemia in summer 1987.

"Corey was really weak at the time. He basically told me that he appreciated it and he loved me for it. When I do go out there and play, I'm doing it for him."

Corey McMullen was the eldest of three brothers. He died at age 25, some 3½ years after doctors diagnosed the disease near the end of his senior year at Arizona State, where he played two seasons of basketball.

Mitch McMullen, five years Corey's junior, was a 17-year-old star at Hart High School in Newhall when he learned of his brother's illness.

The news sent the younger McMullen into a tailspin that nearly destroyed him as he began using drugs.

"I just couldn't face the reality that he was going to die," McMullen said. "Then I decided, 'Hey, look, I've got to make the best of it for him.' My parents, everybody in my family, were strong Christians, so I just kind of hung on to that to get me through those hard times.

"Our whole family is close," he said. "If we weren't close, who knows? I'd probably be a drug addict on the streets. That's why family is so important. When you've got a strong family, it holds you together. And obviously, if I wanted to keep playing basketball, I had to clean up my act."

Quote of the day

Misc.

SAN FRANCISCO — Athletic scholarships will be tougher to get for some incoming freshmen under a toughened Proposition 48 provision approved Wednesday by Division I schools at the NCAA convention.

By a 163-154 vote, delegates approved a measure they defeated 151-159 the day before. The new rule eliminates the partial qualifier and significantly tightens the Proposition 48 freshman eligibility requirements.

The rule takes effect in 1990 and does not affect anyone currently enrolled.

A partial qualifier is a high school graduate with a 2.0 overall grade point who does not meet other Proposition 48 requirements such as minimum test scores or a 2.0 average in college prepatory courses.

Previously, partial qualifiers could receive full scholarship aid but had to sit out their freshman year and then have only three years of eligibility left.

Non-qualfiers now must pay their own way their freshman year and still sit out without playing or practicing.

Clippers lose in final second

Kenny Smith hit a 20-foot jumper with one second left in the game, capping a 23-point performance and lifting the Sacramento Kings over the Los Angeles Clippers, 106-104. The shot ended a nine-game road losing streak for the Kings, who got 18 points from Rodney McCray . . . In other NBA games: Charles Barkley scored 25 points as Philadelphia defeated New Jersey, 103-94, at the Spectrum . . . Chuck Person scored 29 points and rookie Rik Smits hit for an NBA career-high 21 as Indiana whipped Boston, 127-108, for its first victory in 16 road games this season . . . In Charlotte, Michael Jordan scored 22 of his 24 points in the second half to lead Chicago to a 106-101 victory over the Hornets . . . Mark Jackson scored four of his 19 points in the final 1:04 to pace a 7-0 burst that gave visiting New York a 100-93 victory over Detroit . . . In Milwaukee, Larry Krystkowiak scored a career-high 27 points as the Bucks beat Denver, 123-106, for their fourth straight victory . . . In San Antonio, Purvis Short scored six of his 26 points in overtime, and Houston defeated the Spurs, 122-117, after blowing a 27-point lead . . . Larry Nance scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half as Cleveland snapped Phoenix's 11-game winning streak at home, 124-121 . . . In Oakland, Winston Garland's 10-foot jumper with one second remaining gave Golden State a 107-106 victory over Dallas and extended the Mavericks' losing string to five games.

Montreal extends home streak

Brian Hayward stopped 25 shots and Mats Naslund scored the game's only goal midway through the second period as Montreal extended its home unbeaten streak to 16 with a 1-0 victory over New Jersey in the NHL. It was the Canadiens' fourth shutout of the season . . . Elsewhere: John Druce scored twice as Washington, unbeaten in six games, beat the Maple Leafs in Toronto, 3-2, to move back into first place in the Patrick Division . . . Dave Manson's power-play goal midway through the final period gave Chicago a 2-2 tie at home with Detroit. Manson, who had only one goal last season, scored his 13th at 8:33 of the final period . . . Joe Nieuwendyk scored five goals to set a Calgary record, including four in the second period that tied the NHL record, leading the Flames past visiting Winnepeg, 8-3.

Couples takes early Hope lead

PALM DESERT — Fred Couples shot a 7-under-par 65 Wednesday to take the first-round lead in the five-day Bob Hope Classic.

Couples made nine birdies in his round at Indian Wells, the shortest and easiest of the four desert resort courses used for the first 72 holes of the 90-hole event.

The format calls for the 128 pros to play one round on each of the courses, each with a different team of three amateurs, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Bermuda Dunes on Sunday.

Jim Gallagher, Brad Bryant and Peter Jacobsen, the other first-round pace-setters, all played at the 6,478-yard Indian Wells course.

Gallagher birdied four of his last five holes for a 66, while Bryant and Jacobsen shot 67s.

About half the large group at 68 also played at Indian Wells.

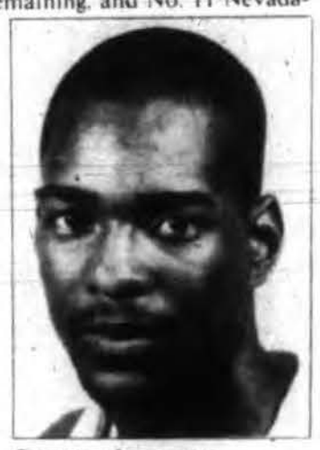
Rebels outlast Fresno State for 83-77 win

From The Associated Press

Stacey Augmon scored 18 points, including the go-ahead basket with 2:44 remaining, and No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fresno State, 83-77, Wednesday night in the Big West Conference.



Stacey Augmon

Augmon rebounded his own missed shot and put in a layup for a 75-74 lead. Moses Scurry then stole a pass and scored on a layup with 2:31 left for a three-point lead.

UNLV, now 6-0 in conference and 11-2 overall, trailed most of the game and was down 41-37 at halftime. Forward Jervis Cole led Fresno with 26 points, including 16 in the first half. Fresno is 7-5 and 2-1.

In other games involving top 20 teams:

Duke 100, William & Mary 38: Christian Laettner scored 13 points to lead six players in double figures as top-ranked Duke breezed. Duke, 12-0, scored almost at will while forcing the Tribe, 2-10, into 27 turnovers.

Georgetown 76, Pittsburgh 57: Charles Smith scored 19 points and No. 7 Georgetown held Pittsburgh to 19 points in the first half for the Big East victory. Georgetown, which never trailed, improved to 11-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference.

North Carolina 88, Maryland 72: Kevin Madden scored 25 points and Rick Fox had 18 to lead No. 8 North Carolina to the Atlantic Coast Conference victory. J.R. Reid, still playing as a reserve since his return to action from foot surgery, scored 17 points as North Carolina raised its record to 14-2 in its league opener.

In West Coast Athletic Conference openers:

Pepperdine 72, Santa Clara 63: Dexter Howard scored 21 points and Tom Lewis added 17 to pace the Waves.

Loyola Marymount 113, San Francisco 95: Center Hank Gathers scored 36 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead the Lions.

Edison turns back Barons

Mike Hawks scored the tie-breaking goal 30 minutes into the second half to lift the Edison High boys soccer team to a 2-1 decision over visiting Fountain Valley Wednesday.

Hawks' goal came on a throw-in from Brian Higgins and kept the Chargers' record unblemished in Sunset League play after two matches.

Higgins had scored the first goal 17 minutes into the match to give the Chargers, 8-3-1 overall, a 1-0 lead at the half. Derek Mahoney knotted the score for the Barons, 12-6-1, 0-2, at 24 minutes of the second half on an assist by P.J. Polowski.

Elsewhere in the Sunset League:

Marina 4, Huntington Beach 0: The Vikings also improved to 2-0 in league play, scoring a pair of goals in each half. Christian MacKenney, Mike Kazack, Lance Barker and Eric Oudmayer each tallied as Marina improved to 10-4-2 overall with a 6 o'clock showdown against Edison set for Friday evening at Westminster.

In the Sea View League:

Corona del Mar 2, University 1: Chris Smith's breakaway goal in the second half broke a 1-1 tie and lifted the Sea Kings to the victory in the league opener. Matt Brown had the other goal for CdM, 6-3-4.

Sea King goalie Chris Connelly, whose knee injury prevented him from kicking the ball for much of the game, made a game-saving diving stop of a University shot late in the game.

Newport Harbor 0, Tustin 0: The Sailors had to settle for the scoreless deadlock in their league opener, despite outshooting the host Tillers, 9-5. Newport is 4-2-3 overall, while Tustin moves to 4-3-6.

Laguna Hills wears down Artists, 67-49

Hawks' 20-0 spurt puts Laguna Beach away

By ED ZINTEL
Daily Pilot Correspondent

Laguna Beach High's lack of depth caught up with it and so did the Laguna Hills High Hawks who cruised by the Artists in the third quarter and kept on going en route to a 67-49 win Wednesday night in a Pacific Coast League boys basketball opener at Laguna Hills.

Laguna Beach (6-8 overall), trailing 28-26 at the half, took a 32-30 edge early in the third quarter. But the Hawks, behind guard Chris Sheff, center Pat Nelson and reserve forward Trent DeVreugd, scored 20 straight points to blow it open, 50-32.

Nelson led Laguna Hills (9-6) with 15 points, followed by Sheff and DeVreugd with 11 each and forward Bill Schellenberg who scored 10.

Laguna Beach was led by forwards Dain Blanton and John Trevino with 13 each. Guard John McKeown added 12.

Laguna Hills outscored Laguna Beach, 18-6, in the third quarter and the rest was a breeze.

"That's the story of our team, we don't have depth and so we end up getting tired," said Laguna Beach Coach Ed Bowen. "They took us right out of our defense and forced us to foul. They just punched us out in the third quarter."

Indeed, the Artists saw it all explode in their faces just as they seemed to take over momentum.

A close fought first half saw Laguna Hills take a 16-12 first-quarter lead behind the play of Nelson who scored seven points, including a 3-point shot. But Laguna Beach's McKeown led a second quarter comeback. His third basket of the quarter tied it, 20-20.

Two baskets by Blanton and one by Sean Stafford gave the Artists the lead, 32-20, two minutes into the third quarter.

Then, following a timeout, the Hawks went to work. Nelson scored three baskets and DeVreugd added two to key the onslaught. But it was Sheff's two three-point plays following his own steals that broke the Artists' backs.

Sheff, the Laguna Hills' leading career scorer averaging 18 points this season, converted free throws after being fouled on his layups. Sheff also had eight assists and three steals to lead his team.

"When Sheff penetrated the middle and dumped it off, it was all ovewr for us," Bowen said. "There just wasn't much we could do when they started their fast break because my guys have to play the whole way and they just get gassed."

Woodbridge rallies, 56-51

Woodbridge High's Warriors, down by eight with three minutes left to upstart Costa Mesa, got some come-through efforts from Eric Lekas off the bench, tied it on one of five Bo Ashkenazy 3-pointers at 48 and went on to record the Pacific Coast League victory on their home floor in boys basketball Wednesday night.

Costa Mesa's quickness, and the return of Jose Casas after missing eight games because of a return to Spain, spearheaded the Mustangs' near-upset.

"The kids played their hearts out," said Mesa Coach Dean Cooper, whose hopes were dealt a severe blow when Timmy Nguyen fouled out early in the fourth quarter after scoring 18 points.

Woodbridge had foul problems too with Joey Cohen in constant trouble, but the Warriors were able to get out of it with the emergence of Lekas, whose four points in the fourth quarter, hustle and six rebounds kept them going.

In another PCL game:

Trabuco Hills 80, Orange 57: Rick Swanwick scored 27 points and had 14 rebounds and Chad Poulos and Luis Arenado each had seven assists as the Mustangs routed host Orange to improve to 9-5 overall, 1-0 in league.

Monarchs foil delay tactics

Mater Dei High withstood the four-corner delay tactics of visiting Bishop Montgomery and claimed a 71-42 boys basketball victory Wednesday night in the Angelus League.

The Knights, who were able to take two minutes off the clock at one point in the first quarter, held the Monarchs to just eight points in the period. However, the visitors went 0 for 8 from the floor and were shut out in the quarter.

The pace was nearly as slow in the second quarter with Mater Dei expanding its lead to 22-9 by halftime.

As the third quarter began, the Knights scrapped their plan and Mater Dei was able to begin building on its lead. Guard David Boyle pumped in 10 of his 14 points in the second half, hitting 7 of 9 from the field.

Derek Stone was 6 of 7 from the floor and finished with 13 points, while point guard Jason Quinn was credited with nine assists.

Mater Dei, 2-0 in the Angelus League and 17-2 overall, converted 26 of 44 field goal tries (59 percent).

Irvine bursts to 52-35 win over Dolphins

Irvine High's Vaqueros continued their winning ways in methodical fashion Wednesday night as the hosts put South Coast League rival Dana Hills away, 52-35, in boys basketball to improve to 16-2, overall, 2-0 in league.

Dana Hills crept to within 30-24 through three periods, but Irvine dropped in 16 of 18 from the line in the fourth quarter to seal it.

"Dana Hills was 12-3 and ranked in Orange County about 10 days ago, but they've lost four in a row and went to man-to-man defense, which is a little out of character for them," said Irvine Coach Steve Keith.

"They made a run and got it down to four, but Todd Trout had six points in a run near the start of the fourth quarter, which was real important, and Steve Dunmeyer hit 6 of 8 free throws."

BARONS...

From B1

Doug Weaver coming off the bench — just as they did in this one.

The Barons played to the tempo of their liking — fast. And when possible, faster.

"That's just what we wanted to do, that's the game we wanted to play," said Fountain Valley Coach Dave Brown. "However, they did an excellent job of dogging us the whole way. But with the tempo that high, it's certainly in our favor."

Cook produced 17 points for the Barons, including 11 in the fourth quarter. He also pulled down five rebounds.

Edison's big-play man was Martineau, who poured in a game-high 26 points while grabbing 13 rebounds — 10 of which came in the second half.

OCC...

From B1

"Then we got lax and took bad shots because we had hit the outside shots," Gillis said. "We got no offensive rebounds. That tells you something. We got complacent and took some bad shots, because we thought we had the game won. They came back to their credit."

The Gauchos made 12 turnovers in the first 15 minutes of the game — including a 5½-minute scoreless stretch — which left them trailing 23-10. But Saddleback's defense picked up its intensity, forced turnovers and capitalized with baskets off six of them down the stretch of the first half.

Versher had eight points in a 14-3 run which pulled Saddleback within two, 26-24, at the half.

"We started in a man and they hit four in a row, so we went to a zone which we had worked on especially for a set we thought they would run against us," said Saddleback Coach Ernie Carr. "They didn't run it. That's when they started out to a big lead.

"Then we went to our regular zone. We had started so badly, I put three or four subs in and they got our level of intensity back up. Then I put the starters back in and (the intensity) carried through into the second half for a six-point lead. Then we just couldn't hit any baskets."

After forcing OCC turnovers on five of the Pirates' first six possessions of the second half and building a 34-28 edge with 16:04 remaining, Saddleback hit just six baskets the remainder of the game.

Johnson converted a pair of free throws for Coast and center Alan Schlines, who has been a key factor in the Pirates' success but had only two points Wednesday, added two more free throws to make it 34-32. From that point, OCC's turnovers disappeared and its hot hand returned as the Pirates began to penetrate the Gauchos' zone.

Saddleback took a 38-34 advantage on Versher's coast-to-coast drive, but OCC scored 11 straight — including five by Hanlon, four by Crane and two by LaMont Speed — to take the lead for good, 45-38.

"Marland Love came in and penetrated to the goal very well and got the ball off to Dareck Crane," Gillis said.

Carr summed up, "Allowing 56 points should be enough to win a basketball game. Our defense did its job. But they started to solve it in the middle of the second half. Fifty-six points should be enough to at least be right there at the end. But it's to their credit that they defended well."

good enough to keep the job on a permanent basis.

Maybe the Titans will come back as the season progresses. I hope so for John's sake.

The Loyola Marymount-USIU game had to be a classic last Saturday. USIU scored 144 points and lost rather handily.

Loyola is good, but there are some teams in the WCAC who can give them all they want this season. St. Mary's lost to Stanford by one point and USF defeated Notre Dame by four — yes Virginia, the USF team that beat us by two.

Pepperdine and Santa Clara are also good teams. The WCAC has gotten better. Loyola's Jeff Fryer, who is an ex-Corona del Mar player, is doing a great job. When the Lions get Bo Kimble back, they'll be even better.

OTHER LOCALS DOING WELL: Hawaii is enjoying a good season and one of its best players, Vincent Smalls, was at Saddleback College last year . . . Adam Keefe is doing very well at Stanford. Here's an Irvine guy (Woodbridge High) who we wanted very badly — he would have been a big star in our program and probably will be very soon at Stanford . . . Gylan Dottin from Saddleback High is starting at the University of San Diego at point guard and is averaging 14 points per game . . . UCLA's Kevin Walker almost chose UCI out of high school and would have been a big-time player for us. He is a young Johnny Rogers. We have been the second choice in a lot of recruiting wars. Close does not cut it, though, does it?

I was honored at the Irvine Marriott Sunday night and inducted into the Champions Hall of Fame. It was a nice affair and I would like to thank them for honoring me.

Special thanks to Lee Ramos and all the people at the Marriott. My favorite writer, John Hall of the Register, was also there. John has done a column for so long — it never ceases to amaze me that he and other columnists can write one five days a week. I have an awful time just trying to do one a week.

I received a nice note from our chancellor on our win over UCLA. He indicated that he is with us, win or lose, but winning is much better. He sounded like a booster, but not the ones I wrote about last week — you remember, the high school boosters.

UC Santa Barbara deserves to be ranked in the nation's top 20. At this point, they and UNLV deserve to be considered two of the 20 best teams in the country. Arizona and Stanford also belong in that category.

On the road again in beautiful downtown San Jose Saturday night and exciting Logan, Utah, Monday night. The only way to play this game is to have all home games. We will finally be home on the 19th against Fresno State.

You can catch our games this weekend on Saturday night at 7:30 and Monday night at 6:30 on KPZE radio, with Rob Halvaks calling the action.

ELSTER . . .

From B1

Defense kept him in the lineup many times, while at others 28-year-old Howard Johnson would shift to shortstop and 26-year-old Dave Magadan took over at third base.

"Every time I went into a little slump, Howard would start at shortstop," Elster said. "Davey knows it's a pain for me, but what can he do? There's so much pressure on this team from the media. When we're winning, we have to keep doing well.

"If I was on a different club, I'd play every day," Elster said.

"I have Magadan and some others, and (Elster) still got over 400 at-bats," Davey Johnson said. "It's not as if he didn't play a lot. The only reason he lost playing time is because we needed to get (some more punch in the lineup at times)."

With the arrival of 21-year-old infielder Greg Jefferies' potent bat in September and with 25-year-old infielder Keith Miller pushing his way to the big leagues for stints throughout the season, the Mets are stocked with young and talented infielders.

Enough talent that 29-year-old second baseman Wally Backman, who hit .303, was traded to Minnesota during the wealth of deals at the winter meetings. Johnson's name was mentioned in numerous deals, none of which materialized. Elster's name turned up in the rumor mill, but the Mets called him at home to assure the reports were not rooted within the organization.

While he desires to play in Southern California, that day doesn't appear to be in the near future.

He was marked for a major league uniform since the Mets drafted him, and his rapid climb included stints with the club during its World Championship season in 1986 and in September of 1987. After an all-star season at Tidewater in '87, New York was convinced his time had arrived and incumbent Rafael Santana was dealt.

"He did a better job all around than Santana did," Davey Johnson said. "He drove in a lot of key runs, played better defense and had better range than Rafael. In another two years' time, he'll be one of the top shortstops in the league, all around. That's how much we think of him."

Elster, who isn't short on confidence, began to feel more relaxed at the plate late in the season, and knows that will be a key factor this season in Davey Johnson's occasional switch to

Kevin Elster's first season with New York ended in disappointment after the Dodgers eliminated the Mets in the playoffs.

Howard Johnson at shortstop. But while the team is loaded with strong hitters, Elster is the only true shortstop and ranks well above the rest when it comes to handling ground balls.

"I don't feel anyone pushing me," Elster said. "He can't go with HoJo at shortstop every game. I know I can play anywhere (in the league). I know there's a lot of clubs out there that would want me. It's one of those things. I understand it, and I'm not going to worry about it."

Elster, who returns this weekend from a Mets promotional cruise in the Caribbean, has always been a hard worker. He recently bought a home in Huntington Beach and works out with former teammate Shane Flores during the off-season at Golden West, where he hit .338 in 1983 and .349 in 1984 with the Rustlers under Coach Fred Hoover.

He alternates days at the diamond taking batting practice and ground balls with days at a local health club pumping free weights.

"He's a good kid, a good worker," said Robinson. "He'll do a lot of extra hitting if I ask him. When I really suggested that he needed to do extra hitting and to be there at a certain time, he's there."

With no doubts surrounding his fielding ability, 1989 will present a different challenge.

"I've accomplished what I wanted to do defensively," Elster said. "Hopefully, I'll accomplish what I want to with my hitting next year."

At Tidewater in '87, he finished fifth in the league in hitting at .311, led the league and set a club record for hits, had 53 multiple-hit games, 74 RBI and never allowed his average to drop below .300 after May 22. It's developing the same kind of consistency which provides Elster's major challenge.

Harrelson said Elster's biggest adjustment comes from hitting near the top of the order in the minors to batting eighth in the potent Mets lineup.

"He's been a little pull conscious," Harrelson said. "And when you're hitting eighth, it's (a matter of) not striking out (47 times in '88).

"I think it's self-induced pressure. I think he's altered his swing a bit. If he is to hit over .300, which he did in the minors, you have to use the whole field. On this ball club, he's hitting eighth. He had trouble adjusting to that, and it's tough for him to get out of that."

Robinson calls Elster's steady demeanor his strength.

"His biggest asset is when he gets three strikeouts in a game, he'll turn around and pop one the next time," Robinson said. "He's hit some big home runs. He gives us drives in a shortstop that very few people have. He probably has more power than any shortstop we've had. He can hit the ball in the gap."

Robinson said he believes the consistency will come with more at bats, and Elster is ironing out his flaws, "slowly but surely.

"He has some things to work on . . . a little more kill in his swing. His swing is not always short and compact. A few times, he'll give in to a pitch. He doesn't have that total confidence in every pitch."

Elster said he tried to guess pitchers too often at the plate, leaving himself tentative in the process "instead of just concentrating and swinging at the ball."

In the game of baseball, a world under the microscope of constant outside critiques, Elster remains focused and exudes a cocky confidence.

"I'd like to see that confidence manifest itself at the plate," Robinson said. "I'd like to see him go up totally confident and cocky every at bat. I don't believe he's a .215, .216 hitter. I believe he can hit over .250 if he starts to hit the ball where the ball is pitched on the plate."

Harrelson summed it up pretty succinctly.

"He can hit, and he will hit."

Ballew takes over SCYA helm

Yachting group names officers for upcoming year

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

For more than six decades, the Southern California Yachting Association (SCYA) has been the governing body of yachting activity in Southern California.

As of now, it represents more than 70 yacht clubs from San Diego to Fresno, plus clubs in Nevada and Arizona.

Last Saturday at Balboa Yacht Club, John Ballew of Laguna Beach took over the helm of the burgeoning organization, relieving Roger Wilson of Marina del Rey.

Before a packed house at Balboa Yacht Club, the evening was highlighted by the appearance of the women's 470 Class gold medalists in the 1988 Olympics, Allison Jolly and Lynn Jewell, who were presented with the Amy Gram Olympic Trophy, a beautiful silver bowl.

John Ballew

Yours truly was awarded the Jim Webster Award for outstanding contribution to yachting.

Installed as vice commodore was Burton Jay of San Diego. Others taking office for 1989 were George Hively, rear commodore; Gene O'Connell, secretary; Jerry Olson, treasurer; Justin McCarthy, judge advocate; Alan V. Andrews, fleet surgeon; Don Becker, fleet captain; Cec Hubbard, port captain, and Roger Wilson, junior staff commodore.

Ballew has been commodore of Capistrano Bay Yacht Club, president of the Newport Ocean Sailing Association, and is currently a director in Balboa Yacht Club.

The first big event of SCYA is the Midwinter Regatta, scheduled for Feb. 18-20 which annually draws upwards of 900 boats in over 70 classes. Rod Woods is chairman of this year's "Midwinters."

Woods reported several changes in this year's Midwinters. There will be an inclusion of an Ancient Mariner Class (old wooden boats), and a class of Prindle catamarans at Cabrillo Beach Yacht Club.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of Teddy L. Falk, aka Ted L. Falk, aka Teddy Lambert Falk.

A PETITION has been filed by La Vern Carlson Aiello in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange, requesting that La Vern Carlson Aiello be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority allows the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain actions, however, the personal representative is required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to this petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on January 19, 1989, at 1:45 p.m., in Dept. #3 located at 700 Civic Center Drive, in the City of Santa Ana, California 92701.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisement of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner: KEENE AND DION, Attorneys at Law, 350 E. 17th St., #111, Costa Mesa, CA 92627, (714) 645-4044.

good enough to keep the job on a permanent basis.

Maybe the Titans will come back as the season progresses. I hope so for John's sake.

The Loyola Marymount-USIU game had to be a classic last Saturday. USIU scored 144 points and lost rather handily.

Loyola is good, but there are some teams in the WCAC who can give them all they want this season. St. Mary's lost to Stanford by one point and USF defeated Notre Dame by four — yes Virginia, the USF team that beat us by two.

Pepperdine and Santa Clara are also good teams. The WCAC has gotten better. Loyola's Jeff Fryer, who is an ex-Corona del Mar player, is doing a great job. When the Lions get Bo Kimble back, they'll be even better.

OTHER LOCALS DOING WELL: Hawaii is enjoying a good season and one of its best players, Vincent Smalls, was at Saddleback College last year... Adam Keefe is doing very well at Stanford. Here's an Irvine guy (Woodbridge High) who we wanted very badly — he would have been a big star in our program and probably will be very soon at Stanford... Gylan Dottin from Saddleback High is starting at the University of San Diego at point guard and is averaging 14 points per game... UCLA's Kevin Walker almost chose UCI out of high school and would have been a big-time player for us. He is a young Johnny Rogers. We have been the second choice in a lot of recruiting wars. Close does not cut it, though, does it?

I was honored at the Irvine Marriott Sunday night and inducted into the Champions Hall of Fame. It was a nice affair and I would like to thank them for honoring me.

Special thanks to Lee Ramos and all the people at the Marriott. My favorite writer, John Hall of the Register, was also there. John has done a column for so long — it never ceases to amaze me that he and other columnists can write one five days a week. I have an awful time just trying to do one a week.

I received a nice note from our chancellor on our win over UCLA. He indicated that he is with us, win or lose, but winning is much better. He sounded like a booster, but not the ones I wrote about last week — you remember, the high school boosters.

UC Santa Barbara deserves to be ranked in the nation's top 20. At this point, they and UNLV deserve to be considered two of the 20 best teams in the country. Arizona and Stanford also belong in that category.

On the road again in beautiful downtown San Jose Saturday night and exciting Logan, Utah, Monday night. The only way to play this game is to have all home games. We will finally be home on the 19th against Fresno State.

You can catch our games this weekend on Saturday night at 7:30 and Monday night at 6:30 on KPZE radio, with Rob Halvaks calling the action.

ELSTER...

From B1

Defense kept him in the lineup many times, while at others 28-year-old Howard Johnson would shift to shortstop and 26-year-old Dave Magadan took over at third base.

"Every time I went into a little slump, Howard would start at shortstop," Elster said. "Davey knows it's a pain for me, but what can he do? There's so much pressure on this team from the media. When we're winning, we have to keep doing well.

"If I was on a different club, I'd play every day," Elster said.

"I have Magadan and some others, and (Elster) still got over 400 at-bats," Davey Johnson said. "It's not as if he didn't play a lot. The only reason he lost playing time is because we needed to get (some more punch in the lineup at times)."

With the arrival of 21-year-old infielder Greg Jefferies' potent bat in September and with 25-year-old infielder Keith Miller pushing his way to the big leagues for stints throughout the season, the Mets are stocked with young and talented infielders.

Enough talent that 29-year-old second baseman Wally Backman, who hit .303, was traded to Minnesota during the wealth of deals at the winter meetings. Johnson's name was mentioned in numerous deals, none of which materialized. Elster's name turned up in the rumor mill, but the Mets called him at home to assure the reports were not rooted within the organization.

While he desires to play in Southern California, that day doesn't appear to be in the near future.

He was marked for a major league uniform since the Mets drafted him, and his rapid climb included stints with the club during its World Championship season in 1986 and in September of 1987. After an all-star season at Tidewater in '87, New York was convinced his time had arrived and incumbent Rafael Santana was dealt.

"He did a better job all around than Santana did," Davey Johnson said. "He drove in a lot of key runs, played better defense and had better range than Rafael. In another two years' time, he'll be one of the top shortstops in the league, all around. That's how much we think of him."

Elster, who isn't short on confidence, began to feel more relaxed at the plate late in the season, and knows that will be a key factor this season in Davey Johnson's occasional switch to

AP Laserphoto

Kevin Elster's first season with New York ended in disappointment after the Dodgers eliminated the Mets in the playoffs.

Howard Johnson at shortstop. But while the team is loaded with strong hitters, Elster is the only true shortstop and ranks well above the rest when it comes to handling ground balls.

"I don't feel anyone pushing me," Elster said. "He can't go with HoJo at shortstop every game. I know I can play anywhere (in the league). I know there's a lot of clubs out there that would want me. It's one of those things. I understand it, and I'm not going to worry about it."

Elster, who returns this weekend from a Mets promotional cruise in the Caribbean, has always been a hard worker. He recently bought a home in Huntington Beach and works out with former teammate Shane Flores during the off-season at Golden West, where he hit .338 in 1983 and .349 in 1984 with the Rustlers under Coach Fred Hoover.

He alternates days at the diamond taking batting practice and ground balls with days at a local health club pumping free weights.

"He's a good kid, a good worker," said Robinson. "He'll do a lot of extra hitting if I ask him. When I really suggested that he needed to do extra hitting and to be there at a certain time, he's there."

With no doubts surrounding his fielding ability, 1989 will present a different challenge.

"I've accomplished what I wanted to do defensively," Elster said. "Hopefully, I'll accomplish what I want to with my hitting next year."

At Tidewater in '87, he finished fifth in the league in hitting at .311, led the league and set a club record for hits, had 53 multiple-hit games, 74 RBI and never allowed his average to drop below .300 after May 22. It's developing the same kind of consistency which provides Elster's major challenge.

Harrelson said Elster's biggest adjustment comes from hitting near the top of the order in the minors to batting eighth in the potent Mets lineup.

"He's been a little pull conscious," Harrelson said. "And when you're hitting eighth, it's (a matter of) not striking out (47 times in '88).

"I think it's self-induced pressure. I think he's altered his swing a bit. If he is to hit over .300, which he did in the minors, you have to use the whole field. On this ball club, he's hitting eighth. He had trouble adjusting to that, and it's tough for him to get out of that."

Robinson calls Elster's steady demeanor his strength.

"His biggest asset is when he gets three strikeouts in a game, he'll turn around and pop one the next time," Robinson said. "He's hit some big home runs. He gives us drives in a shortstop that very few people have. He probably has more power than any shortstop we've had. He can hit the ball in the gap."

Robinson said he believes the consistency will come with more at bats, and Elster is ironing out his flaws, "slowly but surely.

"He has some things to work on... a little more kill in his swing. His swing is not always short and compact. A few times, he'll give in to a pitch. He doesn't have that total confidence in every pitch."

Elster said he tried to guess pitchers too often at the plate, leaving himself tentative in the process "instead of just concentrating and swinging at the ball."

In the game of baseball, a world under the microscope of constant outside critiques, Elster remains focused and exudes a cocky confidence.

"I'd like to see that confidence manifest itself at the plate," Robinson said. "I'd like to see him go up totally confident and cocky every at bat. I don't believe he's a .215, .216 hitter. I believe he can hit over .250 if he starts to hit the ball where the ball is pitched on the plate."

Harrelson summed it up pretty succinctly.

"He can hit, and he will hit."

Ballew takes over SCYA helm

Yachting group names officers for upcoming year

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

For more than six decades, the Southern California Yachting Association (SCYA) has been the governing body of yachting activity in Southern California.

As of now, it represents more than 70 yacht clubs from San Diego to Fresno, plus clubs in Nevada and Arizona.

Last Saturday at Balboa Yacht Club, John Ballew of Laguna Beach took over the helm of the burgeoning organization, relieving Roger Wilson of Marina del Rey.

Before a packed house at Balboa Yacht Club, the evening was highlighted by the appearance of the women's 470 Class gold medalists in the 1988 Olympics, Allison Jolly and Lynn Jewell, who were presented with the Amy Gram Olympic Trophy, a beautiful silver bowl.

John Ballew

Yours truly was awarded the Jim Webster Award for outstanding contribution to yachting.

Installed as vice commodore was Burton Jay of San Diego. Others taking office for 1989 were George Hively, rear commodore; Gene O'Connell, secretary; Jerry Olson, treasurer; Justin McCarthy, judge advocate; Alan V. Andrews, fleet surgeon; Don Becker, fleet captain; Cec Hubbard, port captain, and Roger Wilson, junior staff commodore.

Ballew has been commodore of Capistrano Bay Yacht Club, president of the Newport Ocean Sailing Association, and is currently a director in Balboa Yacht Club.

The first big event of SCYA is the Midwinter Regatta, scheduled for Feb. 18-20 which annually draws upwards of 900 boats in over 70 classes. Rod Woods is chairman of this year's "Midwinters."

Woods reported several changes in this year's Midwinters. There will be an inclusion of an Ancient Mariner Class (old wooden boats), and a class of Prindle catamarans at Cabrillo Beach Yacht Club.

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE OF DEATH AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF TEDDY L. FALK
aka Ted L. Falk aka Teddy Lambert Falk
CASE NO. A146241

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of Teddy L. Falk aka Ted L. Falk, aka Teddy Lambert Falk.

A PETITION has been filed by La Vern Carlson Aiello in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange, requesting that La Vern Carlson Aiello be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority allows the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain actions, however, the personal representative is required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to this petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on January 19, 1989, at 1:45 p.m., in Dept. #3 located at 700 Civic Center Drive, in the City of Santa Ana, California 92701.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisement of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner: KEENE AND DION, Attorneys at Law, 350 E. 17th St., #111, Costa Mesa, CA 92627, (714) 645-4044.

O Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you, I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked.

Say three Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I had my request granted.
MCP

PRAYER to the Holy Spirit. Holy Spirit, you Who make me see everything and Who show me the way to reach my ideals; You Who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and You who are in all the instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You no matter how great material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Thank You for Your Love toward me and my loved ones. Amen
Persons may pray this prayer 3 consecutive days. After the third day, your wish will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted. MCP

This show going to dogs

If you are a dog lover who is sure your pet is the "best," then grab a leash and mosey over to the Best of the Show at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa on Saturday and Sunday.

More than 2,000 dogs will by vying for various titles, and 150 breeds will be shown. The Shoreline Dog Fanciers Association of Orange County will sponsor the competition that has attracted the most prestigious judges in the country, according to a fairground representative.

Dr. Harry Smith, with 25 years experience in judging dogs, will decide which is the best. Michele Billings with more than 30 years experience will judge all breeds.

In addition to the best of show, there will be competitions for sporting, working, hound, terrier, toy, non-sporting, herding, obedience, junior showmanship and other miscellaneious classes.

The Junior Showmanship matches handlers in 8 to 16 age groups. The public can ask questions to Dr. John Hammil, the show's veterinarian, who will be on hand both days.

The show runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults, $2.50 for children under 12 and seniors over 65. For additional information, call Freeman Claus, 544-9372.

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five-years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer, I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

Famous faces are HB artist's canvas

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Originally, Winterfest started as a small hand arts festival, which only

Margaret Stover delivers groceries via wheelchair.

Food delivered via wheelchair

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing, turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

BULLETIN BOARD

Competitors attracted to horse shows at OC Fairgrounds

A hunter-jumper show will open the year's events at the Orange County Fair Equestrian Center, Costa Mesa.

The show will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, according to Pam Gimple, center manager.

A western horse show is planned from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Jan. 28, and a Valentine Horse Show is set for Feb. 11.

For more information on equestrian events, call 641-1328.

Volunteers at riding center

If you enjoy horses and children, your talents are wanted by the Orange County Riding Center in San Juan Capistrano to assist disabled individuals to ride hores.

Volunteers are needed Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings. An orientation will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday for anyone who is interested. For more information, call the Volunteer Center of Orange County-Central/South at 953-5757 or 582-3176.

Art introduction class in Irvine

An introduction to art from cave paintings to the most contemporary will be presented in a 10-week course beginning Tuesday at the Irvine Fine Arts Center, 14321 Yale Ave.

Participants will learn the mysteries of the Great Pyramids, the reasons why impressionism was scandalous in its day, and some insights into today's art.

Instructor Pat Craig teaches art history at Cal State Fullerton, Cypress College and Long Beach City College.

The class meets from 7 to 9:30 p.m. For further information, call the arts center at 552-1018.

UCI sailing classes open

Beginning to advanced sailing classes under the UCI Sailing Program will open to the public Tuesday. Classes are offered on Lido 14s and 30-foot Shields class boats on weekends and weekdays at the intercollegiate rowing and sail base, 1801 W. Coast Highway.

The program also offers basic scuba, Red Cross lifesaving and kayaking courses. For a complete listing call the campus recreation office at 856-5346.

Beginning sign language class

Beginning American Sign Language will be taught from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays through March 21 at Deerfield Community Park, Irvine.

The classes will cover a basic understanding of the language, survival vocabulary and the deaf culture and community. No pre-skills are needed.

For more information, call David Anderson at 660-3920.

Winter art classes to begin

A variety of art classes for children and adults will be offered by the Irvine Fine Arts Center in the winter quarter that begins Monday.

Classes focus on a range of art disciplines, including watercolor, ceramics, drawing, video, calligraphy, stained glass and photography.

Most classes meet once a week for four to 10 weeks. For more information, call the center at 552-1018.

Networking for fame, fortune

A seminar, entitled "Networking for Fame and Fortune," will be offered from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Little Inn on the Bay, 617 Lido Park Drive, Newport Beach.

The class will focus on how to network to increase sales, for job or career change and for the entrepreneur. Instructor will be Susan Linn, a public relations writer.

For more information, call Linn at 786-1320.

Retired federal workers meet

Saddleback Valley Chapter of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet at 2 p.m. Monday at Glendale Federal Savings Community Room, 23221 Calle de la Louisa, Laguna Hills.

The meeting is open to retired federal civilian employees, their spouses, survivors of annuitants, active federal employees and guests.

Hospital volunteers to install

Orange County Council of Hospital Volunteers will install officers at a 9 a.m. meeting on Monday at the Turnip Rose restaurant, Orange County Medical Association building, 300 S. Flower St., Orange.

Current trends in cosmetic and plastic surgery will be examined by Donald Altman, M.D., diplomate of the American Board of Plastic Surgery and active staff physician at Healthcare Medical Center in Tustin.

Saleswomen to convene

Orange County chapter, National Association for Professional Saleswomen will meet at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Red Lion Inn, 3050 Bristol St., Costa Mesa.

"The Art of Powerspeak" will be discussed by Mimi Schweid.

Advertising, record classes

Small business owners can learn how to make the right advertising decisions at an Orange Coast College workshop to be presented from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Instructor is Laura Woods, president of an advertising agency.

A simple, accurate recordkeeping system will be explained during another OCC workshop, slated from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Presenters Linda Pinson and Jerry Jinnett are small business owners, consultants and co-authors of four business textbooks.

For more information, phone 432-5880.

By JOE BEL BRUNO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five-years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer. I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

The process of finding the right

This show going to dogs

If you are a dog lover who is sure your pet is the "best," then grab a leash and mosey over to the Best of the Show at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa on Saturday and Sunday.

More than 2,000 dogs will by vying for various titles, and 150 breeds will be shown. The Shoreline Dog Fanciers Association of Orange County will sponsor the competition that has attracted the most prestigious judges in the country, according to a fairground representative.

Dr. Harry Smith, with 25 years experience in judging dogs, will decide which is the best. Michele Billings with more than 30 years experience will judge all breeds.

In addition to the best of show, there will be competitions for sporting, working, hound, terrier, toy, non-sporting, herding, obedience, junior showmanship and other miscellaneious classes.

The Junior Showmanship matches handlers in 8 to 16 age groups. The public can ask questions to Dr. John Hammil, the show's veterinarian, who will be on hand both days.

The show runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults, $2.50 for children under 12 and seniors over 65. For additional information, call Freeman Claus, 544-9372.

Famous faces are HB artist's canvas

By JOYCE BODLOVICH
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Originally, Winterfest started as a small hand arts festival, which only

Margaret Stover delivers groceries via wheelchair.

Food delivered via wheelchair

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing, turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

Competitors attracted to horse shows at OC Fairgrounds

A hunter-jumper show will open the year's events at the Orange County Fair Equestrian Center, Costa Mesa.

The show will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, according to Pam Gimple, center manager.

A western horse show is planned from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Jan. 28, and a Valentine Horse Show is set for Feb. 11.

For more information on equestrian events, call 641-1328.

Volunteers at riding center

If you enjoy horses and children, your talents are wanted by the Orange County Riding Center in San Juan Capistrano to assist disabled individuals to ride hores.

Volunteers are needed Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings. An orientation will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday for anyone who is interested. For more information, call the Volunteer Center of Orange County-Central/South at 953-5757 or 582-3176.

Art introduction class in Irvine

An introduction to art from cave paintings to the most contemporary will be presented in a 10-week course beginning Tuesday at the Irvine Fine Arts Center, 14321 Yale Ave.

Participants will learn the mysteries of the Great Pyramids, the reasons why impressionism was scandalous in its day, and some insights into today's art.

Owning a boat not necessary to enjoy sailing at this club

By KATY BOUCHER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dick and Gayle Nelson of Yorba Linda sometimes travel to Newport Beach every other weekend to enjoy a day of sailing.

They board a 25-footer, 35-footer or whatever suits their fancy — because they don't own their own boat.

They are members of the Lido Sailing Club in Newport Beach, a club designed for sailors who don't want the responsibility or financial burden of owning their own vessel.

Owner Norm Rest

"It's just a wonderful idea," Gayle Nelson said. "It's hard enough to find a mooring — and very expensive. You don't have to worry about maintenance or cleanup because it's all done for you.

"They keep their boats in excellent condition," she said.

Norm Rest, club owner, said membership is a "viable alternative to owning your own boat."

Founded in 1971, Rest said the club's service lends to recreation, knowledge and entertainment.

"We have 35 boats ranging from 25- to 45-feet that are owned by individuals and leased back to the club," he said. "We've taught more than 600 members to sail, whether it be beginning, intermediate or advanced."

New members pay a one-time fee of $190 and thereafter monthly dues. The fee includes 15 hours of sailing instructions with group and crew.

"Members learn safety, rules of the water, rigging, sail trimming, etiquette, navigation ... and overboard procedures," Rest said.

Monthly dues are $60, and $40 of that goes on account like a savings account. The money accumulates for usage of any size boat that ranges from $40 to $300 a day.

Boats are available for a 24-hour period and they are insured from Newport Beach to the Mexican border, Rest said.

Nelson said she and her husband love to spend the night aboard their leased-boat and sail the next day. She said there's lots of ways to spend a Saturday or Sunday aboard.

"Sometimes we'll fill our soup jug at the Crab Cooker and take friends aboard in the wintertime," she said. "Other times we've had Tony Roma deliver ribs."

Rest said owners make enough money to pay for their slip rent and are provided with free maintenance.

FV officer receives department honor

Paul Sorrell has been named the Fountain Valley Police Department's 1988 Officer of the Year.

The annual honor is voted on by the police department's 61 members who select an officer for his or her accomplishments in law enforcement, community service and interpersonal skills.

Sorrell has served seven and one-half years with the police department. For the last two years his assignment with the narcotics division has resulted in numerous arrests of narcotic offenders and seizures of illegal drugs. He is also a member of the department's SWAT team in which he coordinates and directs much of the training for the speciality unit.

"It been a lot of hard work this year in the field of narcotics," he said. "We have had several real good cases and that is probably the biggest reason I received the award. It is very nice to be recognized by my peers."

Police Chief Elvin Miali described the qualifications representative of the award.

"The officer is not only chosen for his leadership, outstanding performance in the field and rapport with peers," he said, "but because he is a coach, a friend and available when needed."

Sorrell has a bachelor's degree from Cal State Fullerton and advanced certificates in police training.

"He was selected for his ability in enforcement in narcotics and vice," Miali said. "It takes a special breed and a lot of dedication because of the hours. There is no set schedule.

"It is quite an honor and he is a well-deserved recipient," Miali said.

Sorrell is the father of two small children. Because of his undercover work, a photo was not released for publication.

CALENDAR ART DEVELOPS FOR NB PHOTOGRAPHER...

From A9

models can be a hard and sometimes painfull process, she said. Starting the selection as late as December, Gershenson is forced to make her decisions in time to meet the Jan. 1 deadline.

"What is really hard about picking models is that I sometimes have to turn them down," she said. It is really hard for some guys to take rejection because of the way they look. "And they are going to look that way for the rest of their lives."

She also believes that featuring males in the calendar has given her some new insight on how to better understand men. Calling it a "mini-psychology lesson," Gershenson said the calendar often creates large egos.

"When I get some of these guys to pose for me, it makes them feel real good about themselves," she said. "There is a lot more than just muscles and good looks to some. But sometimes, they can really get stuck on themselves. I won't put up with that."

Craig Runnalls, a 23-year-old economics major and co-captain of the varisty rowing team, is featured on this year's calendar. Recommended to Gershenson by another model, Runnalls was quickly chosen for the cover page. However, he says the honor did not go to his head.

"I got a lot of teasing from my friends about it," said the Newport Beach resident. "I was really pleased to be in the calendar, but I didn't get stuck on myself. Kim is right when she says we are just born this way. How can you be conceited about something you had nothing to do with."

While Gershenson sees a potential for some of her models to turn professional, many of them make the venture fun. In return for modeling, everyone in the calendar receives a free hair cut and pictures to add to his portfolio.

Gershenson gets little financial benefits from producing the calendar. It is the financial end of producing the calendar, including developing and publicity, that takes up most of her time. She has set up autograph-signing parties and "win-a-date" contests to help battle the $3,500 printing cost, which comes out of her own pocket.

"I am not really looking to get anything out of this because I know that there is not very much money to be made," she said. "It has opened up some doors for me, with people asking me to take pictures for them and put together calendars.

"Actually, I am just in it for the friendship. I enjoy helping people out by taking their picture, making them feel real good about themselves."

themselves and just feeling good."

French said she focuses on teaching women how to become their own makeup artist, and how to select products that work for them. She takes into consideration lifestyle, the image to be projected, facial bone structure, and skin type.

She charges $75 for a consultation that includes a detailed individualized workbook.

"I cover all the learning senses," she said. "They watch me apply the makeup, I explain as I go along and they read about it in the workbook.

"This is geared to the individual. I do require a follow-up, that is like fine tuning. If they don't follow up that frustrates me. I can only do as much as people let me."

French also sells a line of cosmetics she has carefully selected. Her background in working with most of the major cosmetic companies has given her an understanding of the product ingredients and formulas.

"They are all good basic skin care producs at less than over-the-counter prices," she said. "Once you have been trained to put on the makeup, you don't have to look at it the rest of the day."

French also works with several Orange County plastic surgeons in teaching post cosmetic surgery patients how to apply makeup to their new look.

And like any other artist, it is hard for French not to look at people and silently create a new image.

"When I meet someone it takes me about 15 seconds to make them over in my mind. Then I'm satisfied and can forget about it," French said smiling.

attracted a few spectators. While popularity of the summer festivals grew each year, attendance for Winterfest quickly became overshadowed. According to Rowan, the "potential has always been there, but the way to do it hasn't.

"The chamber wants the festival to grow just like the summer counterparts have," she said. "We have taken several approaches to accomplish this. The biggest is expansion of the show."

Typically, Winterfest has been an arts and crafts show held at the Festival of Arts grounds. Exhibitors are allowed to rent a booth for four days, displaying their hand arts.

The 1989 festival will still follow this tradition, but will add an athletic side to the event by featuring such events as surfing, bodybuilding, skateboarding and golf.

"Sometimes, art is just not enough to carry a festival. Adding sports has opened up new doors," said Rowan.

This year, corporate sponsorships have become a priority. Already, companies such as Gotcha Sports and Pacific Telephone have made pledges to fund the event.

"Marketing seems to be paying off," she said. "At this point, we have received calls from as far away as Pheonix to participate in the festival. We have been really getting the word out."

Calendar art a snap for photographer

Recent newspaper headlines about Kim Gershenson scream out like those found in a supermarket tabloid.

Though she has had several articles written about her in the past five years, one headline sticks in her mind most of all. It read: "Gershenson Shoots 14 Guys, Hangs Them On Her Wall."

"Sometimes the newspapers do things like that," said the 23-year-old Newport Beach resident. "They made me out to sound like a serial killer, I think that is really funny."

Despite the media hype, Gershenson has not killed or hanged any men. However, she does shoot more than 14 men each year — with her camera.

Since 1985, Gershenson has been marking the New Year with her annual "Men of UCI Calendar."

The $9.95 publication is approved by the university's publications office and is sold in the college book store. It has also received shelf space at Elements, a novelty shop located across the street from UCI in the Marketplace. The calendar features 14 male students between the ages of 18 and 23, most of them modeling for the first time.

Though she meets many men throughout the year for this venture, her main thrust is not for dating purposes. Gershenson said it is the satisfaction of creating the product that fuels her to do it annually.

"Sometimes girls will come up to me and tell me that I am the luckiest girl in the world, just because I get to work with all these guys," said Gershenson, who balances her time between the calendar and her managerial position at Nautilus Plus in Norwalk. "Though I have dated some of the guys, there is much more to it all that makes me do it each year."

The idea of starting a calendar for students came when she was a student at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo. Wanting to test her skills as a photographer and as a businesswoman, she played with the idea of launching it. Seeing very little opportunity to market it at the junior college, Gershenson approached UCI with the idea.

"UCI is just such a strict school, very presitigious," she said. "I never thought they would go for it. They told me I could do it, and even set me up with a booth to sell it on campus."

Walk or run to aid homeless shelters

It seems like charity for the homeless has extended quite a bit past the holidays.

In Irvine, hundreds are expected to turn out to raise money for Christian Temporary Housing Facilities Inc. on Saturday. The non-profit organization provides housing for homeless families in Orange County.

A 13.1-mile Half-Marathon run and 5K Walk to benefit the homeless will take place on the old Lion Country Safari grounds. The run will be held on Irvine Center Drive, while the walk will be within the park.

Other activities include a Health and Fitness Fair, with booths displaying products of local merchants. A post-race brunch is also scheduled for the participants.

The goal is to raise $30,000 for the organization's two shelters. The corporation, which also offers more than 2,000 people each month an opportunity for counseling and job opportunity assistance, is looking for corporate sponsors for the event.

Information can be received by calling Christian Temporary Housing Facilities at 556-0636.

Famous faces are HB artist's canvas

Terry French is an artist; her canvas is the faces of Washington notables, beauty queens and working women.

For the last 14 years French, 37, has been creating new facial images through the skillful application of cosmetics. Her step-by-step training program teaches how to create a more attractive appearance after completing a 1½ hour consultation in her Huntington Beach studio.

She has worked as a free-lance makeup artist for more than 15 top cosmetic lines. She toured nationally as a promotional artist for Revlon's book, "The Art of Beauty," making guest appearances on TV and radio programs.

Before relocating her studio to Orange County more than a year ago, French used her talents on the many faces of Washington D.C. and San Diego women.

Fawn Hall, former secretary to Col. Oliver North who gained TV notoriety in last year's Iran-Contra hearings, underwent one of French's transformations.

"She came to see me in May 1985 for a more professional look," French said. "I did a complete makeover."

French has the kind of looks most women would kill for: clear skin, auburn hair and aquamarine eyes. She said the opportunity to learn makeup design came in high school.

"I signed up for a self-improvement course at a modeling school in Florida. The only problem was that I ended up not having the money to pay for it. The owner said I could repay the fee by working for the school."

For the next two years she apprenticed under a talented makeup artist at the school.

French married a career Navy officer, had two daughters and used her makeup skills on officers' wives. As the family relocated to different Navy bases, French began to develop a clientele. Soon she built a reputation as an artist who creates a new and workable style for any woman.

"I think what I try to do is create confidence, style and beauty," she said. "When they (clients) walk out of my studio it is with more confidence knowing what to do to improve

Winterfest attendance pushed in LB

Competing for attention with city art festivals held in the summer, Laguna Beach's Winterfest has employed some new tactics in drawing crowds before it opens on Tuesday.

Because it's held off season, the festival has been battling an identity crisis for its 25 years. This year, the Chamber of Commerce enlisted the marketing experience of Patricia Rowan to popularize the event.

Rowan, who owns her own marketing firm in Laguna Beach, has made several changes to mark the festival's silver anniversary. Through a large publicity campaign and expanded events, Rowan expects a record turnout for the annual chamber fundraiser.

"Winterfest is now just starting to come into its own," said Rowan. "We are learning how to market it just like the Sawdust Festival and Pageant of the Masters in the summer. We are projecting a record turnout this year."

Originally, Winterfest started as a small hand arts festival, which only

Food delivered via wheelchair

Nothing deters Margaret Stover from helping her friends and neighbors.

Stover, a resident of Lido Mobile Home Park in Newport Beach, is considered vital to several of her elderly neighbors, who count on the 38-year-old woman to do their grocery shopping.

She carries out the weekly routine all by herself — in a wheelchair.

"She was born with cerebral palsy," said Willie Stover, her mother. "She's just amazing."

Stover is a graduate of Orange Coast College and is still taking classes.

"I'm just so proud of her," her mother added.

Indeed she's not the only one.

Helen Anderson, who lives in the park, recalls when she'd take Stover with her in the car just for her company.

"I'm 86 years old," she said. "Margaret and I would go to the store and buy groceries together. Two years ago I gave up my car — not that I had to, but I thought it would be pretty scary to find someone my age still driving."

The twist, Anderson said, was what had started out as a friendly outing, turned into a necessity and she now depends on Stover to deliver fresh products for her.

"She's just such a pleasure," Anderson said. "Everyone loves her. Some things are hard for her to reach at the market, but she always gets assistance."

Anderson isn't the only one who feels that way.

June Wright said Stover has been doing her grocery shopping for the last six months.

"She's very accommodating and tries to get everything just right, and she usually does," Wright said. "She's just a tremendous help. I have my mother with me and she's quite ill, so it's hard for me to get out."

While her daughter takes her duties seriously, it's really a social thing for her, Stover's mother said.

Though Halloween might be a little down the road, children in the city of Irvine won't have to wait too long to get decked out in a costume again. An old-fashioned dress-up-party is in the offing for children who attend "Grandma's Attic" next week.

The event will encourage children to find old costumes, funny hats and old clothes and wigs in their attics at home. Activities will include making crazy hair-dos, dressing up, skits and games. Information can be received by calling Deerfield Community Park at 551-8638. There is a $15 fee per child.

CALENDAR ART DEVELOPS FOR NB PHOTOGRAPHER...

models can be a hard and sometimes painfull process, she said. Starting the selection as late as December, Gershenson is forced to make her decisions in time to meet the Jan. 1 deadline.

"What is really hard about picking models is that I sometimes have to turn them down," she said. It is really hard for some guys to take rejection because of the way they look. "And they are going to look that way for the rest of their lives."

She also believes that featuring males in the calendar has given her some new insight on how to better understand men. Calling it a "mini-psychology lesson," Gershenson said the calendar often creates large egos.

"When I get some of these guys to pose for me, it makes them feel real good about themselves," she said. "There is a lot more than just muscles and good looks to some. But sometimes, they can really get stuck on themselves. I won't put up with that."

Craig Runnalls, a 23-year-old economics major and co-captain of the varisty rowing team, is featured on this year's calendar. Recommended to Gershenson by another model, Runnalls was quickly chosen for the cover page. However, he says the honor did not go to his head.

"I got a lot of teasing from my friends about it," said the Newport Beach resident. "I was really pleased to be in the calendar, but I didn't get stuck on myself. Kim is right when she says we are just born this way. How can you be conceited about something you had nothing to do with."

While Gershenson sees a potential for some of her models to turn professional, many of them make the venture fun. In return for modeling, everyone in the calendar receives a free hair cut and pictures to add to his portfolio.

Gershenson gets little financial benefits from producing the calendar. It is the financial end of producing the calendar, including developing and publicity, that takes up most of her time. She has set up autograph-signing parties and "win-a-date" contests to help battle the $3,500 printing cost, which comes out of her own pocket.

"I am not really looking to get anything out of this because I know that there is not very much money to be made," she said. "It has opened up some doors for me, with people asking me to take pictures for them and put together calendars.

"Actually, I am just in it for the friendship. I enjoy helping people out by taking their picture, making them feel real good about themselves."

Gymnastics their sport

For Irvine High freshman Kori Ebbing and 9-year-old Jenelle Elefante, gymnastics just comes easy.

Ebbing competed last Sunday at the Third Class III Compulsory Preliminary Meet at Studio West in Rolling Hills. Elefante also had an impressive effort on Sunday, competing at the Eric Will Gymnastics Center in La Habra.

Ebbing, competing in the 13 to 14-year-old division, finished with 35.4 points for third place in the all-around competition. She also placed third on floor with 8.9; fourth on bars and beams with 9.1 and 8.3, respectively; and fifth on vault with 9.1, her best of the year.

She was competing in her age division for the Mission Flites team from Mission Viejo.

Elefante, also competing for Mission Flites, was the 9-year-old district champion in vault with a score of 9.15. She added a fourth-place finish on uneven bars with 8.65 and fourth in all-around with 34.25. All scores were her best of the season.

themselves and just feeling good."

French said she focuses on teaching women how to become their own makeup artist, and how to select products that work for them. She takes into consideration lifestyle, the image to be projected, facial bone structure, and skin type.

She charges $75 for a consultation that includes a detailed individualized workbook.

"I cover all the learning senses," she said. "They watch me apply the makeup, I explain as I go along and they read about it in the workbook.

"This is geared to the individual. I do require a follow-up, that is like fine tuning. If they don't follow up that frustrates me. I can only do as much as people let me."

French also sells a line of cosmetics she has carefully selected. Her background in working with most of the major cosmetic companies has given her an understanding of the product ingredients and formulas.

"They are all good basic skin care producs at less than over-the-counter prices," she said. "Once you have been trained to put on the makeup, you don't have to look at it the rest of the day."

French also works with several Orange County plastic surgeons in teaching post cosmetic surgery patients how to apply makeup to their new look.

And like any other artist, it is hard for French not to look at people and silently create a new image.

"When I meet someone it takes me about 15 seconds to make them over in my mind. Then I'm satisfied and can forget about it," French said smiling.

WINTERFEST ATTENDANCE PUSHED...

attracted a few spectators. While popularity of the summer festivals grew each year, attendance for Winterfest quickly became overshadowed. According to Rowan, the "potential has always been there, but the way to do it hasn't.

"The chamber wants the festival to grow just like the summer counterparts have," she said. "We have taken several approaches to accomplish this. The biggest is expansion of the show."

Typically, Winterfest has been an arts and crafts show held at the Festival of Arts grounds. Exhibitors are allowed to rent a booth for four days, displaying their hand arts.

The 1989 festival will still follow this tradition, but will add an athletic side to the event by featuring such events as surfing, bodybuilding, skateboarding and golf.

"Sometimes, art is just not enough to carry a festival. Adding sports has opened up new doors," said Rowan.

This year, corporate sponsorships have become a priority. Already, companies such as Gotcha Sports and Pacific Telephone have made pledges to fund the event.

"Marketing seems to be paying off," she said. "At this point, we have received calls from as far away as Pheonix to participate in the festival. We have been really getting the word out."
