• SPACE MAGIC! Why is there a smile on the face of the man in the moon, at right? Because he feels sure that you can perform this amazing feat of space magic.

Beginning with the letter M, connect dots with straight lines proceeding in the order M-A-G-I-C.

Result will be another familiar sky figure.

• SUM TWIST! Double this number, turn the result upside down and divide by three. If the answer is 327, what is the original number?

FOLD AND TEAR WITS TESTER

See if you can solve this in your head — that is, without actually doing what's suggested: Suppose you take a sheet of paper and fold it in half, then fold it in half again, at right angles to the first fold. Four thicknesses will result.

Now, suppose you tear these four thicknesses in half. Question: How many separate pieces of paper will result?

Remember, you are to try to think this exercise through without using paper.

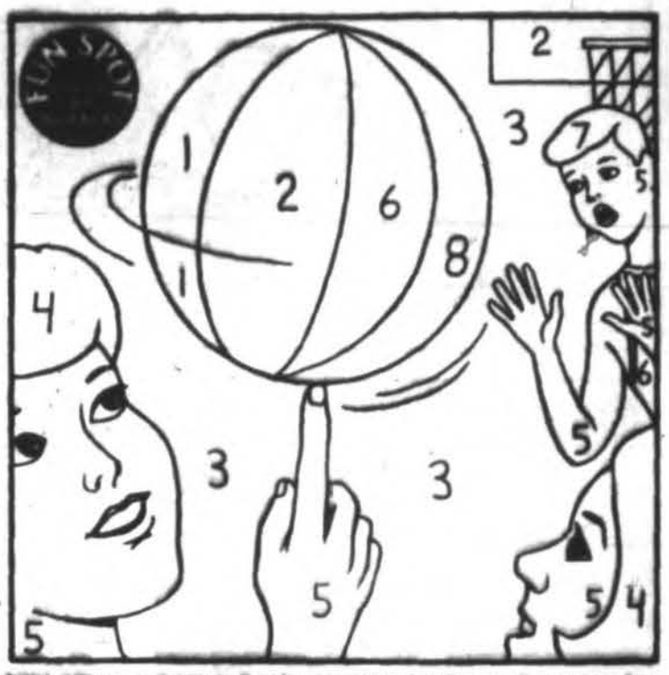

What's the answer?

Three separate pieces

ROCKS O' LUCK! If lucky, you may find as many as 16 or more faces chiselled in stone, above. What's your count?

news WHO'S

ALBERT FERREIRA, Duo

Rivera and his wife, C.C. Dyer, at a celebrity cook-off in New York

Q Is Geraldo Rivera's actual name Jerry Rivers? If so, when and why did he change it?

Brenda Maciel, Hanford, Calif.

Rivera, 47, denies that he ever used "Rivers." He says the name-switch story started in 1973, when Rivera was a TV reporter in New York City: A disc jockey, Alex Bennett, ad-libbed: "I wonder if his name really is Jerry Rivers." For years Rivera has been dogged by rumors that he changed his name for the exotic Hispanic effect. Rivera's mother is Jewish; his father is Puerto Rican.

Q Does Iraq's Saddam Hussein have a wife and kids?

Naomi Davis Strayer, Freedom, Pa.

He is married to Sajida Kheirullah, a first cousin. They have two sons and three daughters. In 1988, Saddam, now 53, ordered eldest son Odai tried for the murder of a presidential aide. Odai, who's in his mid-20s, was freed when most political prisoners were granted amnesty. Because of the subservience of women in Islamic Iraq, little is known about the dictator's wife and daughters.

Q Did Jaleel White, who plays nerdy neighbor Steve Urkel on ABC's "Family Matters," act in a sitcom a few years back with Flip Wilson and Gladys Knight? I bet my husband that he did.

Mary Johnson, Alton, Ill.

You win. In 1985, Jaleel, now 14, appeared with Wilson and Knight in the short-lived sitcom Charlie & Company on CBS. Although Jaleel was seen in just nine episodes of Family Matters in the '89-'90 season, this season he'll appear far more often: His bumbling, lovesick character is a big hit.

GARY HERSE, OUTLINE

Gawky 'Steve Urkel' adds a touch of slapstick to 'Family Matters.'

Q As I read "The Prince of Tides," by Pat Conroy, I kept thinking it should be made into a movie. Now I've heard that a film is in the works. True?

Cindy Hightower, Baytown, Texas

Yes. Barbra Streisand directs and co-stars, with Nick Nolte. Look for Jason Gould, Streisand's 23-year-old son by ex-husband Elliott Gould, in a small role. Columbia Pictures expects to release the movie, with the same title as the dramatic novel's, this summer.

Q In NASCAR auto racing, what percentage of the winnings is claimed by the owners? The drivers?

Nancy Hutchens, Mocksville, N.C.

NASCAR says that, according to its rules, the split of the prize money is strictly up to the owner of the car, the driver and the pit crew involved.

Q I'm a veteran who read your Nov. 23-25 Who's News item on "Major Dad's" Gerald McRaney and his MIA bracelets. Where does he get them?

Milton Kellum, Oxford, Ala.

From the non-profit organization Task Force Omega, which offers information on prisoners of war and men declared missing in action in the Vietnam War. The Pentagon lists 1,190 men missing in that conflict. For information or an MIA bracelet, send $9 ($8 for the bracelet, $1 for postage; literature is free) to Task Force Omega, 3595 Parman Rd., Stockbridge, Mich. 49285.

BARRY LEWIS

Presidential retiree Jerry Ford at the Celebrity Cup Awards in Vail, Colo.

Q Just how much money could the federal government save if the taxpayers were not required to provide retired presidents and their families with pensions, security and so forth?

Betty Walther, Coos Bay, Ore.

A lot, though the USA feels obliged to pamper its former chief executives. In 1989, the last year for which full information is available, Congress approved more than $1.8 million in expenses for Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon and their families, as well as for Lady Bird Johnson, the widow of Lyndon Johnson. The breakdown: Reagan, $559,500; Carter, $387,800; Ford, $426,800; Nixon, $426,700; and Johnson, $22,200. And that's on top of the standard annual presidential pension of $150,000. Expenses include round-the-clock Secret Service protection for life (although Nixon, to save the government money, has employed his own security guards since 1985), funds to cover the transition from the White House to private life (the Reagans' move to Los Angeles cost a record $1.25 million) and free postage. The 1989 tab was larger than any previous total, partly because it was an inaugural year and partly because George Bush is the first president in this century to have four retired presidents looking over his shoulder. Abraham Lincoln had five.

PEEKING AROUND THE BUSHES

WAKE UP, SIP COFFEE, SPEND THE DAY WITH GEORGE AND BARBARA BUSH AS THEY CELEBRATE THEIR 46TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY THIS WEEKEND

It's 6 a.m. in the White House.

And if Millie, the first spaniel, hasn't already whipped her long silky ears back and forth in their sleeping faces, George and Barbara Bush are roused to a new day by the yelp of a battered old clock-radio, held together with tape and tuned to a country music station.

After exactly 46 years of marriage (they were wed Jan. 6, 1945) and almost 2 years in the White House, the daily routine is pretty much set:

Barbara jumps up, throws her clothes on and, most days, races down three flights of stairs.

"She walks me around the South Lawn drive," Millie writes in her best-selling Millie's Book, "brings me back in, feeds me and climbs back into bed to read the papers with the Prez and drink coffee and juice."

By this time, George already is inky-fingered from some of the seven newspapers the couple skim together in bed. As Barbara reads items of interest aloud, George wields the TV remote control to catch what's happening on the morning shows.

Like wives everywhere, the president's wife squawks at this macho habit. "I'd love to go back in time," she has said, "and take that darned clicker out of his hand. I'll say, 'George, I was watching that.' And he'll say he's sorry and flip back. Then he'll do it again."

By 7 a.m., the president's fully dressed and heading downstairs to the Oval Office, Millie trotting at his heels. Up-to-the-minute briefings on intelligence, national security and staff affairs usually are finished by 9. Then begins the off-the-record presidential schedule that drives the press crazy with curiosity: meetings with members of Congress, supporters and representatives of special-interest groups and charities.

There are howdies from visiting celebrities — actress Bo Derek made an unheralded "courtesy call" one crisp fall day — and endless telephone calls to and from officials and friends. In his spare moments, the president slips into a small adjoining hall he has had converted into a private retreat, where he types his famous thank-you and congratulations notes. "SELF-TYPED," he taps out on each sheet, lest friends think he just had a secretary knock them off — the easy way.

On the other side of his nook, in Michael Deaver's former office, Bush has installed a comfortable private dining room, the setting for the most coveted invitation in Washington: a spur-of-the-moment lunch with the president.

Barbara prefers to lunch in the private quarters with girlfriends like Andy Stewart, widow of Supreme Court justice Potter Stewart; Anne Richardson, mate of ex-attorney general Elliot Richardson; or Toni Hatfield, the Oregon senator's lady — or with people involved with her favorite causes.

LUNCH WITH HIS CRYSTAL BALL

Others on the Bush Chums List may get a phone call as late as 11:30 a.m.: "The president doesn't want you to change any plans you might have today," a secretary says, coyly, "but if you're available for lunch at noon . . ."

Of course, lunch dates are dropped with a clang all over Washington. Who would miss this?

A typical lunch table might be set for eight friends and associates. Unlike most politicians, the Bushes don't make sharp distinctions between political and personal friends.

A luncher could expect to meet a Bush family member, a White House staffer or two, perhaps a fellow Yalie like Thomas W. Mosely, or a house-guest like Will Farish, the Texas money man and Kentucky horse-breeder who also handles the Bush blind trust.

It's a fun lunch. Bush shows first-timers the talking crystal ball he keeps near his typewriter: Ask it a question and a sepulchral voice intones "It Shall Be Done" or some other fortuneteller-ish vague response.

This president, recall, adores gags and gadgets. He once played the old dropped-dollar-on-a-string joke at a dinner at the Chinese Embassy. He and the ambassador choked with laughter as a waiter bent to pick up the bill and Bush jerked it away on a fishing line.

On a particularly pleasant day, Barbara and friends might lunch on the Truman balcony, overlooking the

BY DIANA McLELLAN · ILLUSTRATED BY BARRY BLITT

South Lawn, the scene of those oft-televised helicopter landings, while George's lunch bunch gathers in the "secret garden," created right off the Oval Office during the Reagan years.

Ronald Reagan used to feed the squirrels there. Unfortunately, Millie is more interested in being fed by the squirrels. At last count, she had killed four squirrels, three rats and a pigeon.

A note: Some people think Millie's diet, including the rats, is a lot more healthful than George Bush's. His idea of dieting, his wife says, is a load of chips-and-dip washed down by a "Lendl," a homemade, high-protein sludge drink that is named after tennis champ Ivan Lendl.

So while lunch guests tend to order artery-aware fish and salads from the White House mess, Bush goes for a cholesterol fest: fries, barbecued ribs, burgers, chili, hot dogs or tacos and nachos, all drenched in fiery Tabasco.

Incidentally, although Bush is a social drinker, alcohol is not usually served at lunch. Neither, of course, is broccoli, nor Brussels sprouts. Another presidential peeve: cold pasta. "They forgot to cook it again," he'll stage-whisper to Barbara if anyone serves it.

Eating dinner out once a month, the first body is inclined to load up on the lard. Favorites in Washington area restaurants: sirloin steak, onion rings, cheesecake, snails swimming in garlic butter, cheese enchiladas, Peking duck.

"If the Bushes didn't exercise, they'd either be dead or as fat as pigs," proclaimed food writer Roberta Sabban.

But exercise they do.

One classic George Bush workout at Camp David, Md., had even Arnold Schwarzenegger goggling in wonder: an hour-long run, a half-hour on the StairMaster, 20 minutes of sit-ups. Bush "even makes golf an aerobic exercise," one exhausted partner told The New York Times.

The president no longer runs an average 5 miles; he has to be kinder and gentler to his knees these days, so at most he runs 2 miles in 19 minutes, 2 or 3 days a week. He's more likely to hop aboard the treadmill in the White House pool house; or his StairMaster; or his Schwinn Air-Dyne exercise bike, which works arms as well as legs.

Barbara, too, uses the Schwinn. Since her brush with illness, she has given up her earlier running and her twice-weekly tennis games with Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. When there's time, as at the huge summer "cottage" at Kennebunkport, Maine, she follows a stretch-and-bend workout videotape. Every day, summer and winter, she tries to swim her regular mile in the heated — but uncovered — pool on the White House grounds.

The setting is idyllic — close to George's horseshoe court and the barbecue — but not without surprises. One evening, in midlap, she noticed a dark companion, too small to be Millie, swimming merrily past her mask. It turned out to be a large rat. Barbara scrambled out of the pool. George, who was playing horseshoes, heard her screams and raced to the rescue with a pool scoop, capturing and personally drowning the intruder.

BEST FACE FORWARD

Since that evening adventure, Barbara usually swims in the mornings. Afterward, her favorite hairdresser, Yves Graux, meets her in the White House beauty parlor (which was installed for Pat Nixon and which survived its 1989 stint as Millie's puppy nest) to arrange the first lady's thick, snowy hair.

Is there a public event or a photo session on her schedule? A makeup artist applies a smooth tan foundation, lip liner and a bright lipstick, light eyebrow color and mascara.

Barbara will spend some time in her office upstairs in the southwest corner of the East Wing, updating her diary, answering her mail, working on her computer. (You didn't think Millie wrote that best seller alone, did you?) From her window, she can peer down and see George at his Oval Office desk.

"I don't think I've ever been closer to George," she has said. "He'll call and say, 'Look out the window; there's a friend of yours.' I can look right out here and see who is in his office, and we'll wave hankies back and forth."

When she became first lady, Barbara vowed, "I'm going to get out a lot. . . . I think there's a danger of getting trapped in the White House." Two years later, she finds she is trapped.

"I miss going shopping," she has moaned. "You have to get someone else to go buy your underwear!" This Christmas, someone else was sent to shop for her grandchildren's presents.

Though Barbara seldom complains — a lady does not whine — she hates the fuss and commotion that accompany a first lady wherever she goes.

More than anything, she hates pitying publicity about her Graves' disease. Barbara Bush doesn't want anybody to feel sorry for her. "Life is full of small adversities, and this is not a large adversity," she says, shrugging off the hyperthyroid condition, which last year caused her to drop at least two dress sizes and made her blue eyes bug.

"I'm Popeye the Sailor Man," she sang gallantly to a photographer who caught them at their poppingest.

In private, Barbara can be as tart-tongued about others as she is about herself. It could be she keeps a low profile lest some of her amazingly candid remarks slip into print, as did her famous "rhymes with rich" line about Geraldine Ferraro a couple of campaigns back. Bush friends swear that the president's flip comment when he decided that taxes had to be raised — "Read my hips" — was born on her lips.

Certainly, most people would be astonished to know that the grandmotherly Barbara Bush is a brilliant mimic. She can have friends and family hooting with laughter at her wicked imitations of, as sister-in-law Nancy Ellis says, "anybody — a grandchild, a brother or sister — or Gorbachev."

The 12 grandchildren (the Bushes call them "the grands") are strong presences in the Bush household. In George's upstairs office, a canvas container crammed with toys awaits their visits. "Don't trip over the grands," the president warns boozier friends as they leave the White House after a cookout.

The grands by three of his five children are scattered in Florida and Texas. They get together only for the great family Augusts in Kennebunkport. But the Bushes' stockbroker son, Marvin, 33, has lived for years with his two children in the nearby Virginia suburb of Alexandria. And last summer, with no fanfare at all, daughter Doro Bush LeBlond, 31, moved to Washington from Cape Elizabeth, Maine, with 6-year-old Sam and 3-year-old Ellie, special Bush favorites who are being taught to say "Yes, ma'am" and "Yes, sir" by Ganny and Gampy.

STAND BY YOUR MEN

In the summer of '89, insiders say, Barbara lobbied hard for her daughter to do as she has done: hang onto, and ride out the troubles of, her marriage. It has worked for Barbara: early in her marriage, when the death of their first daughter almost drove the Bushes apart; and as late as the '88 presidential campaign, when their marriage weathered rumors of infidelity by George.

Even after Doro's husband was arrested that fall and charged with drunken driving and marijuana possession (the pot charge was later dismissed), she thought Doro should stay, perhaps straighten him out. But Doro and Billy LeBlond divorced on the grounds of "irreconcilable differences."

It was said that Doro, the apple of her father's eye, longed to move into the White House but that Barbara Bush thought it would be "unhealthy."

Instead, Doro has moved within easy driving distance and taken a flexible-hours job, for the sake of the children, organizing events for Washington's National Rehabilitation Hospital.

Friends wonder when Barbara, a matchmaker for friends' daughters — "Now why can't we find a nice man for you?" she says upon finding out that a young woman she likes is single — will move into that role for Doro.

At this writing, Doro is managing quite well herself, being squired around by David Dreier, 38, an eligible Republican congressman from L.A. County.

Perhaps, by now, Dreier has joined the evening scene at the 29th home George and Barbara Bush have shared in their 46 years together.

The real action chez Bush often begins at 6 p.m., when the president calls it a day at the office. He could be headed for a cookout, complete with a horseshoes tourney, out by the pool. Or a sit-down dinner for 30 in the private dining room upstairs, with its splendid hand-painted wallpaper, its French Impressionist paintings on the walls, its glittering sconces and crystal. Or a buffet supper, followed by a movie in the red-carpeted White House theater, with its comfy slipcovered armchairs.

Unless it's a state dinner downstairs, the Bushes' guest list is never made public. Barbara Bush considers all unofficial events "private," none of the taxpayers' business. But it's no secret that the Bushes entertain more dinner guests — and houseguests — than any previous presidential household.

PILLOW TALK

After their long day of work and play, George and Barbara Bush usually are ready for bed by 10 p.m.

Country music plays on the radio as they ease out of their dress shoes.

Barbara puts on her flats and announces, "I'm going to walk Millie one last walk." If George isn't reading, or on the phone, he'll say, "Well, I'll go, too," and they both stroll quietly into the magical garden.

Afterward, back in the bedroom, Millie flops down, and both George and Barbara pray aloud before settling in for the night.

And what of pillow talk? Maybe this is where they hash out disagreements, of which Barbara has said, "We do it quietly, where no one can hear." Certainly, this would be the time for Barbara to advise her husband, as she says she does, "by osmosis."

One thing is sure: After 46 years of marriage, Barbara and George Bush still have plenty to talk about when the lights go out.

Armchair quarterbacks

This weekend, pro football playoffs begin. As you settle in to watch, know this: You are what you sit in. Here's what experts suggest about your choice of chairs; rapper Will Smith, aka the Fresh Prince, demonstrates four types.

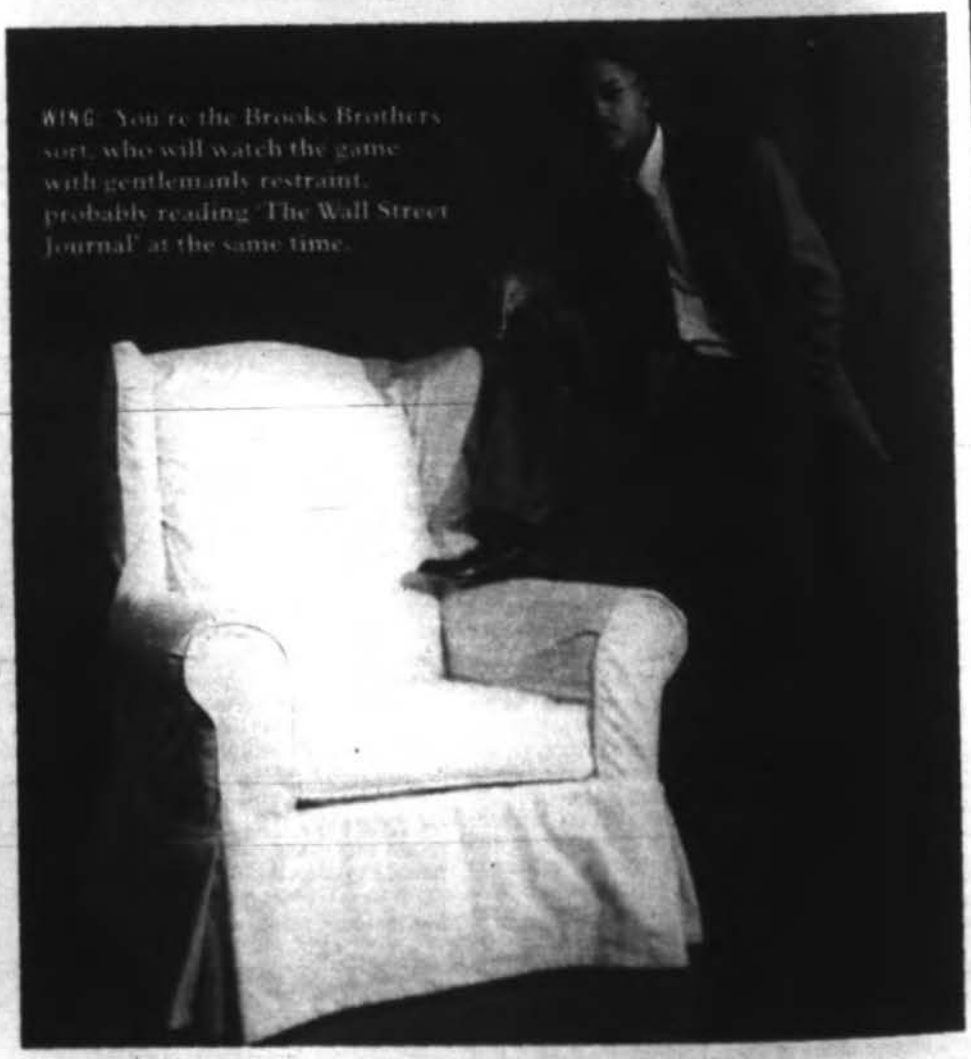

CLUB You're ultra-hip, have money on the game, but, hey, football's just not happening. You'll glance at the game, but would prefer an art film.

BUTTERFLY You're contemporary and social with an active social schedule. Will you even be able to sit still long enough to watch a game? Doubtful.

RECLINER You're [illegible] parked on the [illegible]. You'll recline when the game is close, but other things are tempting you to get out of your seat.

WING You're the Brooks Brothers sort, who will watch the game with gentlemanly restraint, probably reading 'The Wall Street Journal' at the same time.

Luck, stock and barrels

As rodeo season kicks off, a pro offers an easy-to-follow guide (and all the dirt)

When it comes to rodeo, Jim Shoulders has earned his spurs. He's a member of the Rodeo Hall of Fame, with more world championships — 16 — than any other cowboy in history. The Oklahoman looks and sounds the part of the rough-and-ready cowpoke.

"To really be tough in major-league rodeo, you've got to be able to stand some pain," says Shoulders, who retired in '59 and raises rodeo livestock. "I bought a few teeth and broke some arms and legs and a hip and ribs and had a couple-three knee operations, some shoulder operations. Nothing serious."

STEVEN CRANE

Jim Shoulders: Our rodeo expert, 62, won 16 titles.

Starting Monday, almost half a million serious rodeo fans are expected for the National Western Stock Show in Denver, the USA's largest rodeo. About 15 million people attend U.S. rodeos each year. But rodeo is not a sport with blanket appeal. Some find it barbaric (see box at right), while others don't see the point of risking life or limb.

Pros like Shoulders defend the sport, saying it takes skill, courage, respect for animals — and a little luck. Here is his guide to watching major rodeo events.

Bareback, bronc and bull riding

In all three of rodeo's riding events, the cowboy stays on for 8 seconds, if he can. Two judges award equal points to rider and animal (for how fiercely it bucks). Perfect is 100 points; a score in the 80s often wins; 90 and up is spectacular.

In bareback and bronc riding, the rider must come out of the chute with his feet high above the horse's shoulders, giving the horse the advantage on its first jump. "Spurring," in which the rider repeatedly moves his spurs (dulled to avoid injury) over the horse's neck and shoulders, helps rack up points. Watch for a rider who keeps his feet high, giving the horse a better chance to buck him off.

Lively horses help a lot, if the cowboy can hang on. "That's why I'd rather have a little luck than all the ability in the world, because you could make a 25-point ride on a 5-point horse, and still only end up with 60 points from the judges." So watch for a high-bucking horse, not just a rider who looks good.

As for bull riding — that seemingly insane activity in which a 2,000-pound bull tries to grind the rider into hamburger — the public perception is right: "You're just hanging on for your life."

Calf roping

Calves used in this event average about 350 pounds, 6 months old. The cowboy on horseback charges after a running calf, ropes it, dismounts, upends the calf by hand and ties its feet together. The roper must tie any three feet; the calf must stay tied 6 seconds. The fastest time, from release of the calf to the cowboy raising his hands, wins (about 10 seconds or less).

Keep one eye on the horse. It's trained to stop on a dime when the calf is roped and to keep the rope taut. If it pulls the calf over, the cowboy starts again.

"Part of the skill is training the horse well. If he can't stop quick, it can be another second longer, and that can take you out of the money."

Steer wrestling

As in calf roping, the steer — a 2- to 4-year-old castrated animal — gets a head start. But rather than roping it, the cowboy catches up to it, dismounts, grips the horns and digs in his boot heels as a brake. He wrestles the steer to the ground with all four legs pointed straight in the same direction. Fastest time wins.

Watch the cowboy dismount; if he knocks the steer down or trips it, he must get up and throw it again.

"Most of (the steers) weigh about 600 pounds, and are running at least 20-25 miles an hour. Most of the money is won in less than 5 seconds. You don't have

Animal-rights activists: the flip side

In an era of greater attention to animal rights, rodeo's in the hot seat.

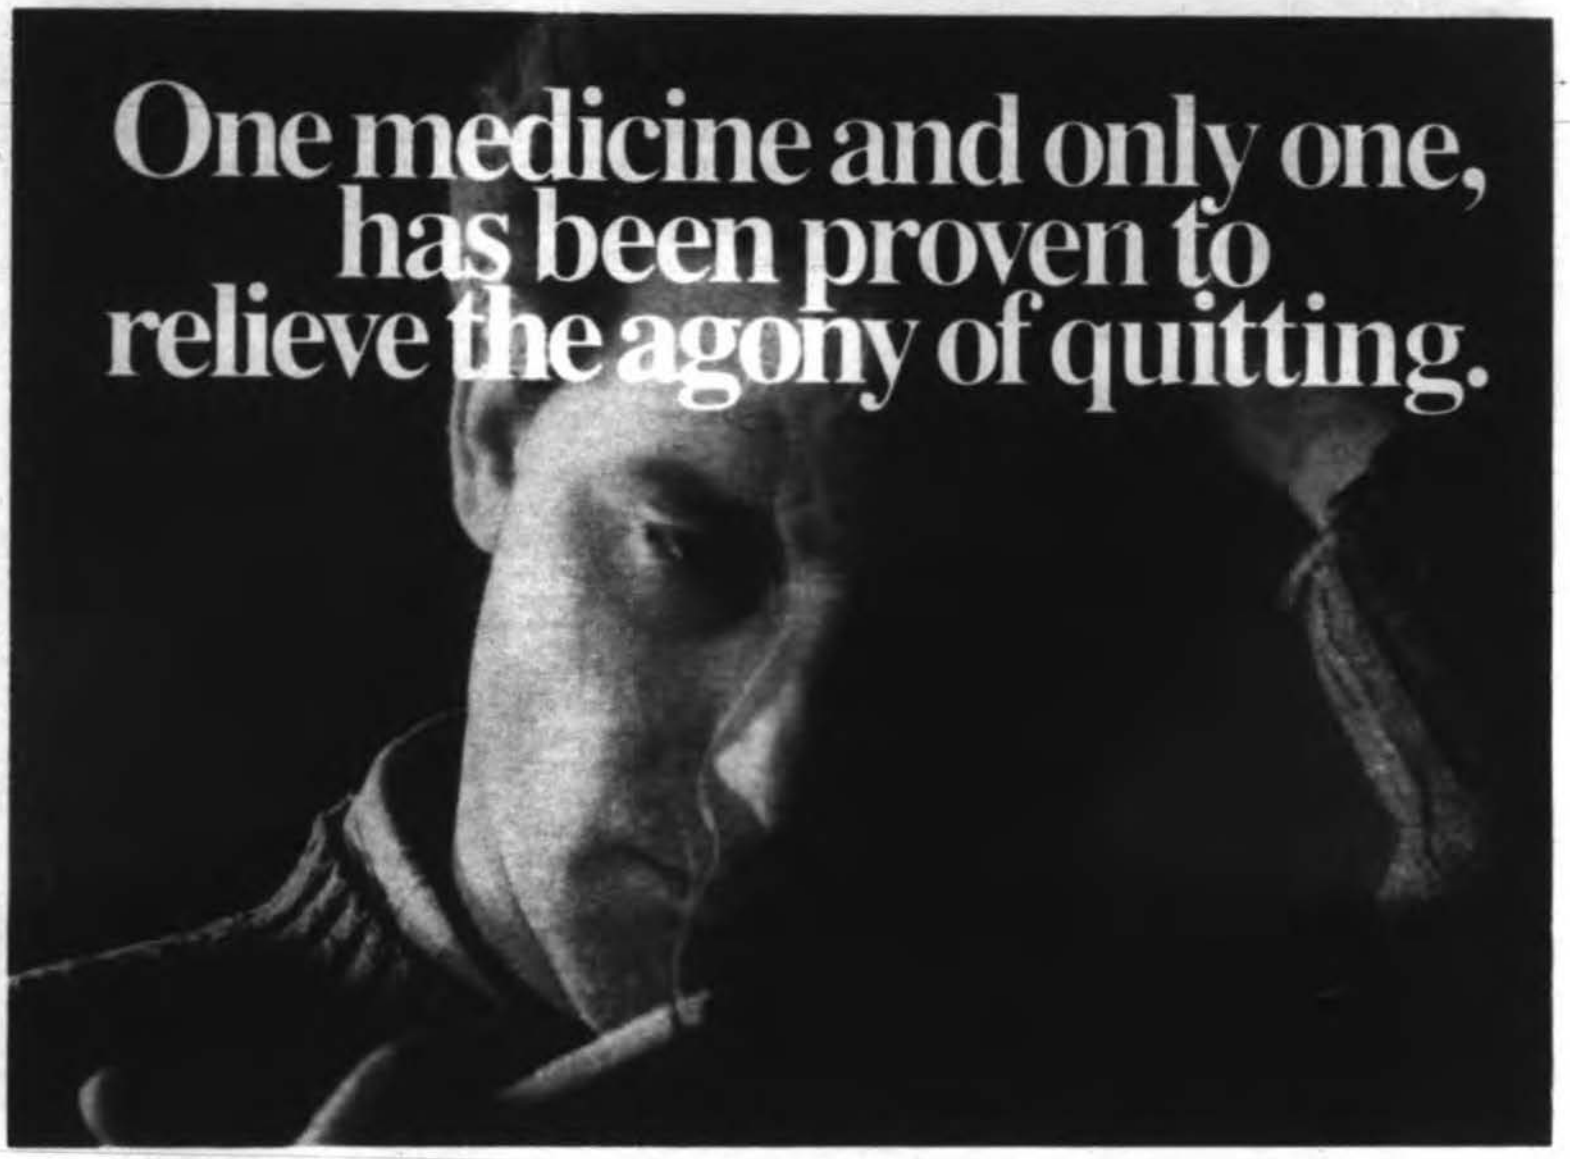

Last week in Pittsburgh, a law took effect banning the "flank strap," a belt that encourages bucking, and requiring a veterinarian at rodeos. The council was outraged by video of a bull who broke his leg and wasn't destroyed for hours.

"If you'd have seen the break, it would have made you sick to your stomach," says David Wills, investigations director for the Humane Society, who testified in Pittsburgh. "Just imagine a small calf at 27 miles an hour roped and slammed to the ground." Rodeo "has no place in modern society. It's a brutally exploitive sport."

Rodeo backers face the controversy head-on. The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association produced a 28-page book "Humane Facts," which cites an '88 survey that the injury rate for rodeo animals was statistically negligible.

"Rodeo's critics may argue that the animals have no choice about being used . . . but there's evidence most enjoy what they're doing."

Says Hall-of-Famer Jim Shoulders: "A bucking horse is the smartest animal going. He works 8 seconds twice a week for 40 weeks . . . and doesn't even have to take a bath like those poodle dogs do."

One medicine and only one, has been proven to relieve the agony of quitting.

It's not easy to quit cigarette smoking. But if you really want to stop, there is help. It's called Nicorette and it's available only with a doctor's prescription. Ask your doctor whether Nicorette is right for you. Nicorette is the only medicine proven to help make quitting less painful.

Why most attempts to quit smoking fail. Quitting may be one of the hardest things you'll ever do. The reason? Your body's addiction to nicotine. The irritability, jumpiness and anxiety you feel when you try to quit are common. Nicotine addiction can be a serious medical problem. It needs a medical solution.

Only one medicine has been proven to relieve the agony of quitting. Nicorette is the only nicotine gum. And only Nicorette has been clinically proven to help relieve the discomfort of quitting.

Properly used in a treatment program, Nicorette can double your chances of quitting permanently. In fact, millions around the world have used Nicorette to quit successfully.

See your doctor and ask about Nicorette, the one medicine that has been proven effective. Available only by prescription.

BRIEF SUMMARY

Nicorette® (nicotine polacrilex)

CAUTION: Federal law prohibits dispensing without prescription.

DESCRIPTION: Each piece of Nicorette contains nicotine polacrilex equivalent to 2 mg nicotine and also contains flavors, glycerin, gum base, sodium bicarbonate, sodium carbonate, and sorbitol.

INDICATION AND USAGE: Nicorette is indicated as a temporary aid to the cigarette smoker wishing to give up his or her smoking habit while participating in a behavioral modification program under medical or dental supervision. For further information, please see Full Prescribing Information.

CONTRAINDICATIONS: Nicorette is contraindicated in non-smokers.

Nicorette is contraindicated in patients during the immediate post myocardial infarction period, patients with life-threatening arrhythmias, and patients with severe or worsening angina pectoris. (See WARNINGS.)

Also, Nicorette is contraindicated in patients with active temporomandibular joint disease.

Current medical opinion indicates that nicotine in any form may be harmful to an unborn child. Nicorette and cigarettes both contain nicotine.

Nicorette may cause fetal harm when administered to a pregnant woman.

Use of cigarettes or Nicorette during the last trimester has been associated with a decrease in fetal breathing movements. These effects may be the result of decreased placental perfusion caused by nicotine. Rare reports of intrauterine hypoxia have been received, and a relationship to drug therapy as a contributing factor cannot be excluded. Studies in pregnant rhesus monkeys have shown that maternal nicotine administration produced acidosis, hypoxia and hypercarbia in the fetus.

Nicotine has been shown to be teratogenic in mice treated subcutaneously with 25 mg/kg, which is approximately 300 times the human buccal dose. Studies in rats and monkeys have not demonstrated a teratogenic effect of nicotine in doses which would occur during cigarette smoking.

Nicorette is therefore contraindicated in women who are or may become pregnant, and female patients should be advised to take adequate precautions to avoid becoming pregnant. The physician may wish to consider a pregnancy test before instituting therapy with Nicorette. If this drug is used during pregnancy, or if the patient becomes pregnant while taking this drug, the patient should be apprised of the potential hazard to the fetus.

WARNINGS: The risks of nicotine in patients with certain cardiovascular and endocrine diseases should be carefully weighed against the benefits of including Nicorette in a smoking cessation program in these patients. Specifically, patients with coronary heart disease (history of myocardial infarction and/or angina pectoris), serious cardiac arrhythmias, or vasospastic diseases (Buerger's disease, Prinzmetal variant angina) should be carefully screened and evaluated before Nicorette is prescribed. Occasional reports of tachyarrhythmias occurring in association with the use of Nicorette have been reported; therefore, if an increase in cardiovascular symptoms occurs with the use of Nicorette, it should be discontinued.

As the action of nicotine on the adrenal medulla (release of catecholamines) does not appear to be affected by tolerance, Nicorette should be used with caution in patients with hyperthyroidism, pheochromocytoma or insulin-dependent diabetes. Cigarette smoking is felt to play a perpetuating role in hypertension and peptic ulcer disease. Therefore, Nicorette should be used in patients with systemic hypertension or peptic ulcer (active or inactive) only when the benefits of including Nicorette in a smoking cessation program outweigh the risks.

PRECAUTIONS: Nicorette should be used with caution in patients with oral or pharyngeal inflammation and in patients with a history of esophagitis or peptic ulcer. The dosage form of Nicorette dictates that it be used with caution in patients whose dental problems might be exacerbated by chewing gum. In such patients prior dental evaluation may be advisable.

Nicorette is sugar-free and has been formulated to minimize stickiness. As with other gums, however, the degree to which Nicorette may stick to dentures, dental caps or partial bridges may depend on the materials from which they are made and other factors such as amount of saliva produced, possible interaction with denture adhesives, denture-cleaning compounds, dryness of mouth due to other causes and salivary constituents. Should an excessive degree of stickiness to dental work occur, there is the possibility that as with other gums, Nicorette may damage dental work; if this should occur, the patient should discontinue its use and consult a physician or dentist.

The sustained use of Nicorette by ex-smokers is not to be encouraged because the chronic consumption of nicotine is toxic and addicting. The physician must, however, weigh the relative risks of a possible return to smoking versus continued, long-term use of the gum.

Information for Patients: The patient instruction sheet is attached at the end of the professional labeling text. It is intended for detachment by the pharmacist and inclusion in the package of Nicorette dispensed to the patient. It contains important, selected information on patient selection, risks and adverse effects and instructions on how to use Nicorette properly.

Drug Interactions: Smoking cessation, with or without nicotine substitution, may alter response to concomitant medication in ex-smokers. Smoking is considered to increase metabolism and thus lower blood levels of drugs such as phenacetin, caffeine, theophylline, imipramine and pentazocine, through enzyme induction. Cessation of smoking may result in increased levels of these drugs. Absorption of glucantime may be decreased, and the "first pass" metabolism of propoxyphene may be decreased by smoking cessation. Other reported effects of smoking, which do not involve enzyme induction, include reduced diuretic effects of furosemide and depressed cardiac output, and increased blood pressure with propranolol, which may also relate to the hormonal effects of nicotine. Smoking cessation may reverse these actions.

Both smoking and nicotine can increase circulating cortisol and catecholamines. Therapy with adrenergic agonists or with adrenergic blockers may need to be adjusted according to changes in nicotine therapy or smoking status.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility: Nicotine was not mutagenic in the Ames Salmonella test.

Literature reports indicate that nicotine is neither an initiator nor a tumor-promotor in mice. There is inconclusive evidence to suggest that cotinine, an oxidized metabolite of nicotine, may be carcinogenic in rats. Cotinine was not mutagenic in the Ames Salmonella test.

Studies have shown a decrease of litter size in rats treated with nicotine during the time of fertilization.

Pregnancy: Pregnancy Category X. (See CONTRAINDICATIONS.)

Nursing Mothers: Nicotine passes freely into the breast milk. Because of the potential for serious adverse reactions in nursing infants from nicotine, a decision should be made whether to discontinue nursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother.

Pediatric Use: Safety and effectiveness in children and adolescents who smoke have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS: Adverse reactions reported in association with the use of Nicorette include both local effects and systemic effects representing the pharmacologic action of nicotine. Rare reports of an apparent severe allergic reaction have been received.

Local side effects: Mechanical effects of gum chewing include traumatic injury to oral mucosa or teeth, jaw aches, and erucitation secondary to air swallowing. These side effects may be minimized by modifying chewing technique. Oral mucosal changes such as stomatitis, glossitis, gingivitis, pharyngitis, and aphthous ulcers, in addition to changes in taste perception, can occur during smoking cessation efforts with or without the use of Nicorette.

Systemic side effects: Although the systemic effects seen in trials were generally similar, the reported frequency of adverse drug effects was highly variable, as illustrated by the variation observed in adverse event incidences extrapolated from the results of two well-controlled studies (one performed in the United States, and the other in England) designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of Nicorette. Rare reports of intoxications have been received, and a relationship to drug therapy as a contributing factor cannot be excluded.

DRUG ABUSE AND DEPENDENCE/OVERDOSE/TREATMENT OF OVERDOSAGE: For further information, please see full prescribing information.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION: Most patients require approximately 10 to 12 pieces of gum per day during the first month of treatment. Patients should be instructed not to exceed 30 Nicorette pieces per day. Patients should be assessed after one month of treatment to determine smoking status, and the use of Nicorette as an adjunct should be reevaluated. Gradual withdrawal from Nicorette should be initiated after 3 months' usage and completed by 6 months. The use of Nicorette beyond 6 months is not recommended.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE

IMPORTANT!

YOU MUST READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS CAREFULLY BEFORE USING NICORETTE GUM.
THE CORRECT USE OF THIS MEDICATION IS DIFFERENT FROM CHEWING OTHER GUMS.

THE FOLLOWING GIVES IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT NICORETTE. IT DOES NOT GIVE ALL INFORMATION ABOUT THIS DRUG. IF YOU HAVE QUESTIONS, CALL YOUR DOCTOR.

WARNINGS:
- NICORETTE IS USED AS PART OF A PROGRAM TO HELP YOU STOP SMOKING. IT IS A DRUG. IT HAS BEEN PRESCRIBED FOR YOU BY YOUR DOCTOR. DO NOT LET ANYONE ELSE USE IT.
- YOU MUST BE 18 YEARS OLD OR OLDER.
- YOU MUST BE A SMOKER.
- KEEP THIS AND ALL OTHER DRUGS AWAY FROM CHILDREN.
- FEMALES: NICORETTE CONTAINS NICOTINE. NICOTINE MAY CAUSE HARM TO THE UNBORN BABY WHEN TAKEN BY A PREGNANT WOMAN. DO NOT TAKE NICORETTE IF YOU ARE PREGNANT OR NURSING A CHILD. AVOID BECOMING PREGNANT WHILE USING NICORETTE. IF YOU THINK YOU ARE PREGNANT, STOP USING NICORETTE AT ONCE. TELL YOUR DOCTOR IMMEDIATELY.

HOW TO USE NICORETTE:
READ ALL OF THE FOLLOWING STEPS BEFORE USING NICORETTE. REFER TO THESE INSTRUCTIONS OFTEN TO MAKE SURE YOU ARE USING NICORETTE CORRECTLY.

1. Starting now, you must give up smoking completely.
2. When you want to smoke, put 1 piece of Nicorette in your mouth. Nicorette will taste different from other gums.
3. Chew Nicorette very slowly.
4. Stop chewing when you have a peppery taste or feel a slight tingling in your mouth. (This happens after about 15 chews. The number of chews is not the same for all people.)
5. "Park" the gum between the cheek and gums.
6. Start to chew slowly again when the taste or tingling is almost gone (about 1 minute). When the peppery taste or tingling returns, stop chewing.
7. "Park" the gum again in a different part of the mouth.
8. Repeat steps 3–7 until most of the nicotine is gone from the gum (about 30 minutes).

DO NOT USE MORE THAN 30 PIECES OF NICORETTE A DAY.
MOST PEOPLE FIND THAT 10-12 PIECES OF NICORETTE A DAY WILL CONTROL THEIR URGE TO SMOKE.
DO NOT USE NICORETTE FOR MORE THAN 6 MONTHS.

SOME WAYS TO STOP YOUR USE OF NICORETTE:
(This is often called "weaning.")

As your urge to smoke fades, gradually use fewer pieces of Nicorette. This may be possible in 2–3 months.

There are many possible ways for you to reduce your use of Nicorette. Below are some plans. Choose the plan or combination of plans that works best for you.

As you reduce your use of Nicorette, you should continue proper chewing procedures. See "HOW TO USE NICORETTE"—STEPS 1–8.

—Every 4 to 7 days, reduce by 1 the number of pieces you use each day.
For example: If you are using 12 pieces of Nicorette a day, begin to use 11 pieces a day. Four to 7 days later, begin to use 10 pieces a day, and so on.
—Use some pieces of Nicorette for only 15 or 18 minutes instead of 30 minutes before throwing the gum away. Maintain the shorter time for each piece and also begin to gradually reduce the number of pieces used. (See the above example.)
—Use some sugarless gum in place of Nicorette. Increase the number of sugarless pieces every 4 to 7 days.
For example: If you are using 12 pieces of Nicorette a day, begin to use 11 pieces of Nicorette and 1 piece of sugarless gum.
Four to 7 days later, use 10 pieces of Nicorette and 2 pieces of sugarless gum.
Keep using 1 more piece of sugarless gum and 1 less piece of Nicorette every 4 to 7 days.

STOP USING NICORETTE WHEN YOU ARE SATISFIED WITH 1 OR 2 PIECES A DAY—UNLESS YOUR DOCTOR TELLS YOU OTHERWISE.
IF YOU HAVE TROUBLE IN REDUCING YOUR USE OF NICORETTE, CALL YOUR DOCTOR.
CARRY NICORETTE WITH YOU AT ALL TIMES IN CASE YOU FEEL THE URGE TO SMOKE AGAIN.
ONE CIGARETTE IS ENOUGH TO START YOUR SMOKING HABIT AGAIN.

SOME POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS:
Some people find it hard to stop using Nicorette. This may occur for people who have depended on the nicotine in cigarettes. They may transfer that dependence to the nicotine in Nicorette.
—Do not chew Nicorette too fast or too hard. Doing this may cause the same effects as inhaling a cigarette for the first time or smoking too fast.
Some of these effects are:
light-headedness, nausea, vomiting, throat and mouth soreness, hiccups, and upset stomach.
—Some other effects which may occur especially during the first few days of using Nicorette include:
mouth sores, headaches, heart palpitations (fluttering), and more saliva in the mouth.
Most side effects can be controlled by chewing more slowly. Go over steps 3–7 under "HOW TO USE NICORETTE."
If you swallow a piece of Nicorette, you probably will have no side effects.

There are other side effects with the use of Nicorette which have been reported. Your doctor can answer questions you may have about side effects. Report any problems to your doctor.

OVERDOSE:
—OVERDOSE may occur if you chew many pieces of Nicorette at one time.
—OVERDOSE may occur if you chew many pieces, one right after another.

OR
IF A CHILD CHEWS OR SWALLOWS ONE OR MORE PIECES OF NICORETTE, CONTACT YOUR DOCTOR OR LOCAL POISON CONTROL CENTER AT ONCE!

OTHER INFORMATION:
When you chew Nicorette properly, nicotine is released slowly. It is absorbed through the lining of your mouth. You may adjust the amount of nicotine you receive by changing how fast you chew Nicorette and how much time you wait before chewing another piece.
If you use cigarettes while you use Nicorette, you may not succeed in your goal to quit smoking. You are also more likely to have side effects.

PLEASE NOTE:
Like other gums, chewing Nicorette may cause:
—injury to your teeth
—injury to the lining of your mouth
—jaw ache
—belching when air is swallowed

Proper use of Nicorette may reduce the chance that these effects may occur.
—Any gum may stick to your dentures, dental caps, or partial bridges. This may depend on the materials used in the dental work and other factors.
—Nicorette is sugar free and has been made in such a way as to reduce stickiness. If Nicorette often sticks to your dental work, there may be damage to the dental work. Stop using Nicorette, and contact your doctor or dentist.
—Store Nicorette at room temperature, below 86°F (30°C). Remember the trunk and glove box of your car can reach temperatures much higher than this in the summer.
—Protect Nicorette from light.

TO REMOVE GUM

time to make any mistakes."

Steer wrestling is the only event in which the solo competitor has a helper — the hazer, who steers the steer straight and shares any prize money.

Team roping

A minor event, Shoulders says, but increasingly popular. One cowpoke ropes a running steer by the horns; a partner ropes its hind feet. The ropes are then wrapped around the horns of the cowpokes' saddles; they can't be tied (so fingers can get mashed). Fastest time wins. This is the one category in which women can compete with men.

Barrel racing

For women only. Riders race in a cloverleaf pattern around three barrels; fastest circuit wins. Knocking over a barrel adds a 5-second penalty.

The winners "take care of their horses just like guys at the racetrack. The key is how far to push it. You don't just . . . let the horse do it all."

Send in the clowns

Clowns are a fallen cowboy's best friend when they distract a raging bull. Many rodeo clowns now have their own "bull-fighting" contest.

"It's a little misleading. It should really be called bull-dodging." The trick here is to turn in a tight circle, tighter than the bulky bull can turn as it chases you. The clowns are judged on how well they control the bull and perform stunts in 70 seconds.

Getting poked by a bull is bad, but not as bad as getting trampled, which causes most of rodeo's fatalities. (Deaths have averaged fewer than [illegible] per year over the past decade, according to the 10,000-member Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.)

"If you're up and running and he hits you with his horns, there's some give; he might knock some teeth out and break a rib. But when you're flat on the ground and one of 'em comes around and steps on you . . ."

It's the last roundup, pardner.

Patients should be assessed after one month of treatment to determine smoking status, and the use of Nicorette as an adjunct should be reevaluated. Gradual withdrawal from Nicorette should be initiated after 3 months' usage and completed by 6 months. The use of Nicorette beyond 6 months is not recommended.

Clowns are a fallen cowboy's best friend when they distract a raging bull. Many rodeo clowns now have their own "bull-fighting" contest.

Systemic side effects: Although the systemic effects seen in trials were generally similar, the reported frequency of adverse drug effects was highly variable, as illustrated by the variation observed in adverse event incidences estimated from the results of two well controlled studies (one performed in the United States, and the other in England) designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of Nicorette. (See table, above.) Given this variability, the table can be used only as an indication of the relative frequency of adverse events reported in representative clinical trials. It can not predict expected incidences of these effects during the course of usual medical practice.

The only potentially serious systemic adverse effect observed among the 152 patients evaluated in the controlled clinical trials used to support the efficacy of Nicorette was cardiac irritability: a patient displayed what may have been nicotine-induced, but reversible, atrial fibrillation. Cardiac irritability is a well known consequence of cigarette smoking.

A 46-year-old male patient participating in a clinical trial of Nicorette was reported to have developed nicotine intoxication requiring his hospitalization. After 4 days, he was discharged, fully recovered. He died suddenly one month later. Nicorette was not used during this one-month interval. The relationship of the patient's death to his prior treatment is undetermined.

Since the marketing of Nicorette in the U.S., reports of several other deaths and reports including myocardial infarction, congestive heart failure, cerebrovascular accident and cardiac arrest have been received. A cause and effect relationship between these reports and the use of Nicorette has not been established.

In addition to the reported effects listed above, the following events have been reported: CARDIOVASCULAR—edema, flushing, hypertension, palpitations, tachyarrhythmias, tachycardia; CNS—confusion, convulsions, depression, euphoria, numbness, paresthesia, syncope, tinnitus, weakness; DERMATOLOGIC—erythema, itching, rash, urticaria; GASTROINTESTINAL—elevation of liver function tests, constipation, diarrhea; RESPIRATORY—breathing difficulty, cough, hoarseness, sneezing, wheezing; OTHER—dry mouth, systemic nicotine intoxication.

Rare reports of miscarriages have been received, and a relationship to drug therapy as a contributing factor cannot be excluded.

DRUG ABUSE AND DEPENDENCE/OVERDOSE/TREATMENT OF OVERDOSAGE: For further information, please see full prescribing information.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION: Most patients require approximately 10 to 12 pieces of gum per day during the first month of treatment. Patients should be instructed not to exceed 30 Nicorette pieces per day. Patients should be assessed after one month of treatment to determine smoking status, and the use of Nicorette as an adjunct should be reevaluated. Gradual withdrawal from Nicorette should be initiated after 3 months' usage and completed by 6 months. The use of Nicorette beyond 6 months is not recommended.

It's a wrap! Editing tips from a film expert to perfect your holiday videos

Some 2.5 million people bought camcorders in 1990, and it's a good bet most of the high-tech toys were in use during the holidays. If yours was one — and you're now looking at a lot of disjointed tape footage — it's time to think about editing.

The necessary equipment is available at varying levels of technical sophistication and there's no doubt it enhances the editing process. But Academy and Emmy Award-winning film editor Alan Heim — currently at work on the film version of Billy Bathgate starring Dustin Hoffman — offers one basic tip that doesn't take technical expertise: "Whatever you do, don't bore the audience."

Avoid that all-too-common error at the start by getting organized. "You need to look closely at the footage you've shot and make sure that whatever you choose to keep is clear, detailed and interesting to the viewer," says Heim, whose work includes All That Jazz, Network and last summer's Quick Change.

How do you size up your footage? Look at the tape frame by frame, choosing what you want to cut and noting the moments you want to keep. (Use the counter on your VCR to keep track: Scribble down the number when a scene begins and ends.) Copy your unedited version onto another tape so you will always have a backup of your original. Then begin thinking, as Heim advises, of your final product as a series of small parts, each one a mini-story.

As you edit, "keep the storytelling short and to the point. Each segment should stand by itself. You'll maintain interest by using movement and change."

Your unedited version might have a long gift-opening sequence, for example. "Instead of showing Junior opening a present, then holding up the present, then having the family admire that same present, use a series of cuts back and forth to speed up the moment and hold the audience's attention.

"(As) Junior starts to open the gift, we cut to Grandma's happy face, then back to Junior holding up the opened gift. This makes that traditional present-opening sequence more dynamic."

Another of Heim's fundamental editing truths came from one of his director friends. "Mel Brooks once said to me, 'You have to be brutal with editing — you start out with a scalpel and end up using an ax!' " In other words, be willing to cut vast segments. You'll end up with a more watchable finished product.

Heim points out that even bad moments important to you can be saved. "Fix mistakes by using big sound effects over a bad cut or use jump shots (quick-cutting) to take chunks out of the middle of a terrible sequence. You can evoke a feeling without actually showing every moment that occurred. Sound effects and nice music really help in transition." You might want to add to the sound already on the tape.

"Take the audience where you want them to go." In other words, control the story as a director does, showing only what you want viewers to see.

Heim says film editors try to tell a story but "if you can change the order of your story to make the video more interesting, then do it."

For your future productions, Heim offers some solid advice on making editing easier from the start. While you're shooting, "don't move the camera too much. In fact, use a tripod if you have access to it. Making the picture as still as possible should be your first consideration. If you have to use the zoom feature, use it sparingly. Zooms are very hard to edit, so what you shoot is what you get.

"Don't make your shots too long, since audiences get bored very easily and shorter shots are easier to edit."

And easier to watch — which is, after all, the point.

By Jennifer Peters

Craig Blankenhorn

For America's finest home videos: Study each frame, says Oscar winner Alan Heim.

How to edit

First, study the instructions accompanying your equipment: either two VCRs or one VCR and a camcorder with editing functions. (Camcorders range from $800-$2,500. You can rent what you need at some stores.) Move the equipment near your TV monitor for hookup. Connect the VCR you are recording with to the monitor; insert a blank tape. Hook up the camera or second VCR (holding your unedited tape) into this VCR. Start copying, revising as you go.

For a more polished production, use a video signal processor. It corrects color, brightness and tint; the only problem it can't fix is out-of-focus footage.

Your new tape will have the original sound. To add music or narration, you'll need an audio cassette recorder. Hook it up to the VCR containing the new tape. Using the "audio dub" function on that VCR and the microphone on your audio recorder, overlay new sound.

JIMMY

BY ELKE HUTCHENS

Playing with his brand new toy train, he's as happy as a little boy can be!

It's hard to imagine anything more adorable than a little boy with his first toy train...especially when he's Jimmy, by award-winning doll artist Elke Hutchens! His eyes sparkle with joy...his face beams with delight. Now this darling new porcelain collector doll can be yours to cherish forever.

Lovingly sculpted by Elke Hutchens.

Jimmy is just as cute as can be! His sweet expression radiates all the innocent excitement of a young boy pretending he's the engineer of a speeding locomotive. You can almost hear his little voice exclaiming, "Toot, toot!"

His head, arms and lower legs are expertly crafted of fine bisque porcelain, and Jimmy's features are hand-painted in soft, natural colors. From his remarkably lifelike pose, to the dimple in his chin and the rosy tint of his plump cheeks and hands—Jimmy is a true collector's treasure.

A hand-tailored engineer's outfit.

His mother has dressed him up in an adorable engineer's outfit, and Jimmy's just thrilled with his little wooden train. His red and white striped cap, overalls, and colorful bandana look just like a real railroad engineer's. Fastened at the shoulders with shiny brass-colored hooks and buttons, the overalls are decorated with a brightly colored train appliqué. Jimmy also wears a blue jersey shirt, white ribbed socks and red lace-up sneakers with white stripes. His handcrafted wooden engine and coal car—included at no additional charge—add a final charming touch.

Attractively priced; satisfaction guaranteed.

Jimmy is priced at $88.50, payable in three monthly installments of $29.50 each which you may charge to your credit card. If not delighted, return your doll within 30 days for a replacement or refund. Send no money, but be sure to respond today!

The Real PATSY CLINE

Her Life Story... Her Unforgettable Songs... Rare original footage from TV and concert appearances

"If you love country music... Don't dare miss this fascinating video!"
-Elizabeth Kaye, Shopping Editor

PATSY CLINE SINGS • Crazy • I Fall To Pieces • Sweet Dreams • Walkin' After Midnight • and many more.

Dear Reader,

This remarkable video reminds us of just how special Patsy Cline really was. Surely one of the all-time greats of country music... Before Dolly and before Loretta, there was the incomparable Patsy. After evaluating the video, I asked my family to view it too. We all agreed, it's "thumbs up" all the way!

Travel back in time with this fascinating well-documented biography. For me, as a country music fan, it was such a pleasure to see and hear Patsy perform "live" via film clips from her TV appearances and concerts. Those songs— and that deep, dusky voice—can really tug on your heartstrings. You'll hear Sweet Dreams...I Fall To Pieces...and many more...Performed as only Patsy could sing them.

Here, at last, we have the complete, true story of her life. The triumphs, the loves, the laughs, the tears . . . and finally, a tragic plane crash. A fine biography of Patsy Cline is something the fans have been needing for a long time. It includes nostalgic interviews with those who knew and loved her best: her husband . . . her kids . . . And country greats like Loretta Lynn and Mel Tillis.

Full-Color video, with some vintage black & white clips, is beautifully produced in hi-fi sound. A new bestseller from CABIN FEVER™Entertainment, Inc., it is a video you'll enjoy viewing again and again. Approx. 1 hour; VHS only. Here is the perfect tribute to a great lady and a legendary performer.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Kaye

What's fusion food?

When it comes to ethnic cooking, the USA always has been a melting pot. But "fusion cooking" — the latest buzzword among restaurant chefs — promises to have the impact of a nuclear meltdown.

What is fusion cooking? A baffling bouillabaisse of ingredients, dishes and cooking techniques pulled from the world's diverse cuisines. It's gastronomic globe-trotting on a single menu, plate — or even in a mouthful.

Mixing the world's cuisines on one plate

At the trendiest mixed-ethnic eateries, intrepid diners can choose between Portuguese sausage with kimchee (the pungent Korean pickled cabbage) or Southwestern black beans with French goat cheese and Indian tomato chutney, before moving on to Italian risotto with Chinese-style lobster. But hold the Alka-seltzer. Cooks swear by this stuff. A sampling:

Miami: Chef Suki of Cafe Grand in the swank Grand Bay Hotel marinates lamb in soy sauce and serves it with an Italian Marsala wine sauce. He says the Cafe's melange of Mediterranean, Asian, Caribbean and even Danish influences pleases his international clientele.

Phoenix: RoxSand Scocos of the Paniolo Grill has melded Hawaiian and Southwestern cooking into an intriguing menu that includes Caribbean conch fritters, a huevos-avocado tostada and a roast pig that would feel at home on Oahu.

Los Angeles: Japanese-American chef Jeanette Holley of O'toto offers wonton ravioli with nasturtium blossom filling and goat cheese flan with grilled eggplant. She says chefs love blending ingredients; jaded eaters like the exotic mix.

But not everyone is swayed. Some fusion experiments are more dubious than delectable, says Los Angeles Times restaurant critic Colman Andrews. "If it's not done intelligently, then it becomes a real jumble: 'Let's put Italian vinegar and Japanese soy sauce and liver together.' "

Establishing and caring for the Church is a divine-human affair. God inspires and enables, his faithful men and women implement his plans. Our comics winners!

Here's the cream of a 2,800-plus crop

Years ago, as a game, Glenn McCoy and his brother drew comics into the wee hours of the morning. Paul Horvath just liked to doodle. Untold pencils later, the two men are the winners of our "Create the Comics of the '90s" contest.

Their prizes may help them take the "aspiring" out of "aspiring cartoonists". Both begin a week of study Monday in the Stamford, Conn., studio of master cartoonist Mort Walker, the creator of Beetle Bailey and Hi & Lois.

More than 2,800 readers entered this summer's contest, sponsored by USA WEEKEND and King Features, which syndicates comics. Dinosaurs, lions, snails — even a snakelike lawyer — populated the entries, yet the winners relied on human characters who projected, as Horvath puts it, "interesting personality."

More on the winners:

Glenn McCoy, 25, makes his living as the illustrator for The Belleville (Ill.) News-Democrat. His dream always was "to land a job in cartooning." McCoy was the top prize-winner in the single-panel category. (See sample above.)

Paul Horvath, 30, of Aurora, Ohio, works as a graphic designer. He carries a pocket calendar to record ideas for comics when they strike him. Tyler (sample below) was selected as the prize-winning strip. Horvath began developing Tyler years before he had real-life experience as a parent. Now he and his wife, Sandy, have two girls: Jamie, 2, and Jesse, 3 months.

The competition was stiff. The contestants submitted a week's worth of comics in either the strip or panel category, and judges checked for humor, quality of art, uniqueness and the consistency of the week's submissions.

GLENN McCOY

The judges were Walker, the cartoonist; Timothy McQuay, associate editor at USA WEEKEND; Jay Kennedy, comics editor for King Features; and Christina Bradford, managing editor of The Detroit News. "I was surprised to see such professional work from amateurs," Kennedy says. "I hope many of these people will consider a cartooning career in the '90s."

What are some of the lessons McCoy and Horvath hope to learn from Walker, whose Beetle Bailey has endured since the '50s?

"In a few boxes, you get a real feel for his characters," McCoy says. "I appreciate how easily he seems to pull it off. Yet it's not easy." Horvath wants to study how Walker paces himself. "You have to come up with ideas day in and day out. It blows me away that he's done it for so long. I've been reading Mort Walker since I was a kid."

Famous Consumer Rights Lawyer Reveals

HOW TO MAKE INSURANCE COMPANIES PAY YOUR CLAIMS

THOUSANDS OF HONEST CLAIMS ARE DENIED EVERY YEAR...Here's how to fight for your rights and win.

"This book is an important milestone in the fight for consumer rights."
Ralph Nader, from the Forward

"The average American spends 12 cents out of every dollar for insurance...Why not get what you're paying for!"
ELIZABETH KAYE, Shopping Editor

Dear Reader,

This book is an incredible eye-opener. Imagine paying insurance premiums for years, and then having your claims denied for some unfair, confusing reason. Sad to say, it happens all too often.

TRUE OR FALSE: YOUR INSURANCE AGENT IS YOUR FRIEND Sorry to report, this may very well be false. The 'friendly neighborhood insurance man' is not always someone we can depend on. As lawyer William Shernoff reminds us, the agent may be mostly concerned with the company's interests—not yours. And many insurers actually think of their clients as "the enemy"! This book explains how to adopt a "consumer beware" policy... how to recognize the standard ripoffs... and how to put up a fight for your rights if need be.

CONSUMER RIGHTS LAWYER WINS MILLIONS FROM GIANT INSURANCE COMPANIES William Shernoff knows whereof he speaks. After all, this man has won settlements of thousands, even millions of dollars— in suits against over 150 insurers. And he offers advice that is very clear and easy for the "average person" to understand. You've been sacrificing to pay those premiums...Now make sure your insurance company pays.

THE AMERICAN INSURANCE INDUSTRY: A NATIONAL SCANDAL? Yes,it is—according to Ralph Nader and many other consumer experts. Imagine being sick, disabled, or burned out of your home... and then not receiving the money you're entitled to. But with this inside information, you're much more able to make the insurance companies treat you right. The step-by-step guidebook is a handy paperback, over 200 pages, with easy-to-read larger print. Honestly, I believe this is one of the most valuable books you will ever read. Order today at no risk— Our usual money-back guarantee applies.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Kaye

"All my life I had a weight problem, then I lost 24 lbs."
—Cheri Browner

"I had been overweight all my life. But after my first pregnancy it got worse. I tried lots of diets but they never seemed to work. They just left me feeling hungry. Then my pharmacist told me about the Dexatrim* diet plan. With Dexatrim, I found I ate less because I wanted less. I just took one Dexatrim in the morning and I was fine all day. I didn't even feel like I was dieting. I could just say, 'no thank you' and mean it. I still ate most of the foods I loved—just less of them. For the first time, I was in control. But it was at a family wedding that I really felt proud. People hadn't seen me in months. My husband's whole family was there. They just couldn't believe it was really me. It was Dexatrim that made it possible. I never want to go back to the old me. And with Dexatrim, I won't."

Clinical studies show people on the Dexatrim diet plan were more successful losing weight than those who dieted without Dexatrim. It helps control your appetite so you eat less and lose weight. And it has no caffeine to make you nervous.

Fighting family fat

Expecting your kids to be tie to the TV set the next fe months? Winter is prim couch-potato season. The t ter tots are on your nerves, but there's better reason to get them moving: Studie show that too much time in front of th tube leads to an increased risk of obesity

Children ages 6-11 spend a hefty 2 hours a week in front of the television – and that doesn't include the time they de vote to video games and computers. To day one kid in four is overweight.

"Kids are getting fatter," says Lilia Cheung, director of the Harvard Nutri tion and Fitness Project. "Childhoo obesity has increased 54 percent since th 1960s, even though today's kids aren eating any more calories."

It stands to reason that they must b exercising less. The President's Counc on Physical Fitness and Sports says half o the USA's girls can't do one pull-up Thirty percent of boys ages 6-12 can run a mile in less than 10 minutes.

"The fitness boom hasn't trickle down to many youngsters," says th council's Steve Guback. He cites school dwindling gym programs, overworke parents who rely on the TV to baby-sit and decreasing space for play in cities.

Given a choice between TV and out door fun, most kids choose TV. Cheun calls TV a "pacifier" for bored children.

So get the family busy this winter:

- Encourage your kids to participate i organized athletics. Get involved your self. Attend tryouts, practices and game
- Take advantage of winter if you live i a cold climate. Sled, ice-skate or ski.
- Bowl. It's not a terrific calorie burne but bowling is entertaining.
- "Walk" to your favorite getaway. De termine the mileage between your hom and a vacation spot. Set weekly mileag goals, then plot your progress on a map
- Visit the mall. You'd be surprised hov much fat (more than 300 calories a hour) you burn as you shop.
- Clean out the attic or basement, mak ing it a family affair. Kids will spen hours looking at old photos and clothes
- Bake bread together. Form loaves int "animals," "trees" and other fun shapes

Picking up the King's scent

Latest Elvis sighting: at the cologne counter of your local J.C. Penney department store.

No, not the singer nor his ghost. There's a new men's fragrance named for the King, out just in time for Tuesday's celebration of what would have been the rock legend's 56th birthday.

For years, the King's loyal fans stocked up on Brut, which was rumored to be his favorite scent. Now they have another option. Elvis is described by its creators as a "fresh, contemporary blend of herbs, woods and amber." A 2.3-ounce spray cologne sells for $19.50 and will make its wearer smell "uniquely Elvis." What it won't do is give you that Presley pout or pocketbook.

Fashion-forward men think a head

What do Mikhail Gorbachev and Dick Tracy have in common? Their hats, of course. And head honchos predict that male fashion leaders also have hats in their future.

"Hats are an accessory whose time has come," says Gary Fray of Worth & Worth, New York's top men's hat shop and premier wholesale supplier, which has seen hat sales jump by 30 percent since last winter. Prices: $55-$200. The biggest buyers are "the younger crowd. They're buying hats for fashion, matching different styles to different coats."

Not-so-old antiques come of age

For those who can't afford real antiques and don't like brand-new antique reproductions, there's a compromise: "classic" furniture, the latest buying trend.

Classic is high-quality, all-wood furniture between 20 and 99 years old (therefore more affordable than true antiques, which generally are more than 100 years old).

Furniture Classics in Houston scouts pieces from continental Europe, Scandinavia, Britain and South America for its 75 stores nationwide, plus its retail store in Houston's Galleria. Classic trends include reproductions of "anything 18th-century — Louis XIV, Victorian, Edwardian," says company president Mark Rollins. The hottest of the hot: country French — simple, rustic styles in oak, walnut and mahogany. Best-selling items include oak draw-leaf tables ($299 and up), and armoires ($299-$400). "You probably couldn't buy the equivalent amount of firewood for that price," Rollins says. To find a Furniture Classics dealer in your area, call 1-800-888-0417.

Ecology in a teacup

The little things in life make a difference in saving the planet. Now many dining accessories from tea bags to napkins are "environmentally correct."

"We're trying to be responsible," says Susan Eastman of Celestial Seasonings, the Colorado tea maker now using only oxygen-bleached paper for its tea bags. Most bags don't have tags or strings, saving nearly 2 million pounds of trash per year.

Celestial Seasonings isn't alone. This month, McDonald's began replacing foam sandwich boxes with paper wrap and paperboard boxes and plans to use takeout bags made of recycled paper. Wendy's will bag its Kids' Meal boxes in favor of paper bags. It already uses napkins with recycled paper.

Fast food gets faster, byte by byte

Now you can order a meal via computer at a growing number of fast-food restaurants — which means service is even quicker than when only humans are involved. Instead of harried clerks, customers face touch-screen computers that tally orders and even prod with on-screen messages, like: "Would you like a cool soda?"

Restaurants say the Touch 2000 system is the wave of the future: It's twice as fast as clerks, encourages bigger orders and cuts labor costs. Customers like it because "there's no rude employee on the other side of the counter," says Mark Eagleton, vice president of Management Information Support in Lakewood, Colo. The company has terminals in about 11 of the 60 Arby's it owns.

High-tech waiters have been installed in about two dozen other restaurants nationwide, mostly Arby's, Carl's Jr. and Burger King.

Dullea's Odyssey

Any information regarding actor Keir Dullea, star of "2001: A Space Odyssey," would be greatly appreciated. - GLEN LOPES, WAREHAM, MASS.

Keir Dullea, 54, was born in Cleveland, Ohio. His parents later moved to New York where they owned a bookstore in Greenwich Village. Dullea attended Rutgers University and later San Francisco State College, where he studied theater arts. He made his film debut in "The Hoodlum Priest" (1961), rendering an outstanding performance as the disturbed delinquent. He followed that up with a similar role in 1963's "David and Lisa." In 1968, Dullea hit pay dirt as astronaut Dave Bowman in the box-office bonanza "2001: A Space Odyssey." A brilliant acting future appeared to be on the horizon, but his follow-up to "2001," the title role in the film "De Sade" (1969), flopped. In 1970 he made his Broadway debut in "Butterflies Are Free" with Blythe Danner, but Edward Albert nabbed the movie version with Goldie Hawn. By then, Dullea had two failed marriages, and he left Hollywood for London. In 1973, he married actress/director Susie Fuller, and he returned to the stage in the 1974 Broadway production of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." His performance was brilliant, but starring film roles eluded him, perhaps because he had been out of the mainstream too long. In 1978, he left Hollywood once again and settled in Westport, Conn. "2010," the 1984 sequel to "2001," was a success, but Dullea's brief cameo role in it didn't produce any big film offers. By 1986, he was reduced to a short-term guest role on daytime's "Guiding Light." More recently, the actor has come to grips with his roller-coaster career, and has been appearing on-stage in his Connecticut Theater Arts Workshop.

Keir Dullea: roller-coaster career

Queen of Sundays

I have a few questions concerning the wonderful star of "Murder, She Wrote," Angela Lansbury. Whom did she marry, and how many children does she have? Is she from a theatrical family? Has she ever written any books? Does she have any special interests? - E. MITCHELL, MONROVIA, MD.

Lansbury and her son, Anthony Shaw, in 1982

Lansbury was born Oct. 16, 1925, in London and lost her father when she was 9. Her mother was stage and screen actress Monya MacGill. With the advent of World War II, Lansbury and her mother evacuated to America, and Lansbury found work in Hollywood, where she worked for the next 20 years, usually cast as heavies and playing women decades older than she was. In 1966, however, she landed the starring role in "Mame" on Broadway and emerged as a star. That role won her the first of four Tony Awards for Best Actress in a Musical.

Lansbury has been married twice. Following a brief (nine-month) first marriage, Lansbury met a fellow Britisher, businessman Peter Shaw, on a blind date. They have been married since 1949 and have one son, now a director, and one daughter, who owns a Los Angeles eatery with her husband. Following the success of her best-selling exercise tape, Lansbury has penned a fitness book titled "Angela Lansbury's Positive Moves." Off the set, Lansbury enjoys tending her garden and spending time with her grandchildren.

Tarnished Tale

Somebody told me that Sophia on "Golden Girls" is dead. Is that true? - SARAH WALLIN, AURORA, ILL.

"Somebody" is pulling your leg. Actress Estelle Getty, who portrays the wisecracking Sophia Petrillo on "Golden Girls," is alive and kicking.

Tall Story

Is the actor who played "Jaws" in the James Bond films the same actor who played Lurch on TV series "The Addams Family"? I've been nominated to find the answer, and a $5 bet is riding on it. - KARON PATE, MARYSVILLE, CALIF.

Richard Kiel, a towering 7-foot-2-inch individual, is the actor best known as Bond's adversary Jaws. Kiel has also starred in such TV series as "The Barbary Coast" (1975-76) and "Van Dyke and Company" (1976). Actor Ted Cassidy, another towering hulk, portrayed Lurch and "Thing" on "The Addams Family" (1964-66). Cassidy died following open-heart surgery on Jan. 16, 1979.

Twin Star

What was actor Russ Tamblyn up to in between "West Side Story" and "Twin Peaks"? Is he currently married? Does he have any children? - MARIE WALKER, HOUSTON

Following the blockbuster success of the 1961 musical "West Side Story," Tamblyn starred in such films as "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" (1962), "How the West Was Won" (1962), "Follow the Boys" (1963), "The Haunting" (1963) and "The Long Ships" (1964). In 1964, the actor turned his attention to the fine arts. Tamblyn's art work has been exhibited in numerous galleries and at Los Angeles' County Museum of Art and Institute of Contemporary Art. Samples of his art and pottery may also be found in several international arts publications. A native of Hollywood, the 56-year-old actor returns to the stage as often as possible. In the early '80s, he co-wrote, co-starred in, and choreographed the rock noir feature "Human Highway" with longtime friends Dean Stockwell, Dennis Hopper and Neil Young. Tamblyn resides in Santa Monica, Calif., with his wife, Bonnie, and their young daughter, Amber Rose.

Tamblyn: He paints, too.

ON THE COVER

Dillinger by and large eschews its natural comedic-dramatic material in favor of a darker interpretation.

BY KIRK NICEWONGER

Harmon and Fenn as the frisky felon and the love of his life

According to legend, John Dillinger was gifted with two endowments that guaranteed him American folk-hero status.

The first was a talent for relieving financial institutions of their deposits with such panache that tales of Dillinger's flair during his final year of professional activity in 1933-34 have become storied chapters in American popular history.

The second was of a considerably more personal nature. So guess which is emphasized in "Dillinger," airing Sunday, Jan. 6, on ABC?

Dillinger unquestionably enjoyed and excelled at his chosen career. It was he who invented the technique of vaulting over barriers to get up close and personal with bank tellers. And the stories of Dillinger's style are legion, although many are doubtless apocryphal. In one, Dillinger leaves the scene of a robbery with some hostages. In the careering getaway car, one hostage tells Dillinger he is passing her house, and he drops her off at her door. Such anecdotes lend Dillinger a certain charm, although we doubt we would confuse a joker with a tommy gun clamped under our soft palate with, say, Perle Mesta.

But "Dillinger" by and large eschews such natural comedic-dramatic material in favor of a darker interpretation. It begins in Indiana in the summer of 1933 with Dillinger (Mark Harmon, in a brooding performance) just released from prison. Determined to help a fellow inmate, Dillinger plans a series of robberies with a gangster to raise money to smuggle guns inside. In the process, he seduces the hood's moll, Elaine (Amy Yasbeck), in a steamy scene in which Elaine seems more impressed than impassioned.

A gang coalesces around Dillinger, as does Jacqueline (Yvonne Suhor of "The Young Riders"), another hood's adulterous wife, who alternates between complimenting John on his amatory attributes and using him as a buffet table.

Somehow through all this, Dillinger finds the strength to rob some banks. "Dillinger" depicts a couple of the more famous anecdotes (Dillinger escaping from prison using a hand-carved wooden "gun"; Dillinger asking the score of a Cubs game in mid-holdup), but they're portrayed joylessly, as though we were watching "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" being directed by Roman Polanski.

"Dillinger" seems bent on making its subject into an existential anti-hero: The poor guy just wants to rob a few banks, but those shortsighted bureaucrats at the FBI, especially mean old J. Edgar Hoover (a doughy, all-but-unrecognizable Vince Edwards), just don't understand.

After the FBI is called into the chase and agent Melvin Purvis (Will Patton) is assigned to haul in Dillinger, the ring begins to close. Before it does, however, the frisky felon meets the great love of his life, Billie Frechette (Sherilyn Fenn of "Twin Peaks"), and they spend an idyllic Fourth of July vacation in Florida, during which she compliments him on ... well, the usual.

Although Dillinger and Billie continue to elude the FBI – at one point holding a picnic at Dillinger's father's farm right under the noses of the law – they are clearly doomed. But John is practically Jean-Paul Sartre under the circumstances, philosophizing at one point, "We're all gonna die, Billie. It doesn't matter. The only thing that matters is having fun." To which Billie, not to be outdone in insight, replies, "You're an angry man, Johnny." Wow! Which way to the party, you wacky kids?

The law catches up with Billie, and John, that lovesick puppy, pumps about a million tommy-gun rounds into a bank in his grief. Then he picks up Polly Hamilton (Patricia Arquette). Polly is our favorite Dillinger dalliance, because she alone restrains herself from awed cooing over his romantic accouterments.

But it is Polly who inadvertently leads Dillinger to his doom outside Chicago's Biograph Theater, where Purvis and his colleagues pour enough slugs into Dillinger to open a recycling center.

"Dillinger" is an odd piece of work. It chooses a subject of legend, then turns him into a moody guy scrambling for a buck like the rest of us. Its raison d'etre seems to be the sex scenes, but, as frank as they are by broadcast-television standards, they're more PG-13 than NC-17. Its portrayals of Dillinger as a beatnik philosopher and the FBI as a bunch of amoral dunderheads who couldn't catch a cold, let alone Public Enemy No. 1, are unpersuasive.

Like the Dillinger of legend, the Dillinger of real life proves to be as elusive as ever.

But then, he was always good at getaways.

12 alternatives to hurting your kid.

When the big and little problems of your everyday life pile up to the point where you feel like lashing out–stop. Take time out Don't take it out on your kid. Try any or all of these simple alternatives–whatever works for you.

1. Stop in your tracks. Step back. Sit down.
2. Take five deep breaths. Inhale. Exhale. Slowly, slowly.
3. Count to 10. Better yet, 20. Or say the alphabet out loud.
4. Phone a friend, a relative or go visit someone.
5. Still mad? Hug a pillow. Or munch on an apple.
6. Thumb through a magazine, book or newspaper.
7. Do some sit-ups.
8. Pick up a pencil and write down your thoughts.
9. Take a hot bath. Or cold shower.
10. Lie down on the floor, or just put your feet up.
11. Put on your favorite record, or radio program.
12. Write for parenting information to: Parenting, PO Box 2866, Chicago, IL 60690

INSIDE STORY

We will always love that Bob

Television boasts a long history of lecherous, leering-but-lovable characters.

Ted Danson's Sam Malone ("Cheers"), David Leisure's Charley ("Empty Nest"), Jere Burns' Kirk Morris ("Dear John"), Max Casella's Vinnie Delpino ("Doogie Howser, M.D.") – even Katherine Helmond's Mona Robinson ("Who's the Boss?") – are merely the latest in a continuing line. But the greatest exemplar of the character with One Thing on His Mind is still the man who in a sense invented it: Robert Cummings.

Cummings: one-track mind

Cummings, who died Dec. 2 at the age of 81, was already a respected film actor who had racked up credits in such movies as 1941's "It Started With Eve" and 1942's "King's Row" when he starred in his first TV series, "My Hero," in 1952, a nondescript comedy that disappeared the following year.

But with his next series, "The Bob Cummings Show" (renamed "Love That Bob" when it went into syndication), he hit persona pay dirt. As photographer Bob Collins, Cummings embodied a lighthearted, casual approach to sex that seems light-years away today. Bob squired beautiful models everywhere and seemed in a permanent, slightly dazed state of muted delight. Cummings' half-smile and speculative gaze were to become his most familiar trademark throughout the remainder of his career.

"The Bob Cummings Show" ran from 1955-59, and it proved to be a remarkable training ground for future sitcom stars. Dwayne Hickman ("The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis"), Ann B. Davis ("The Brady Bunch") and Nancy Kulp ("The Beverly Hillbillies") all had "The Bob Cummings Show" to thank for their first cast credit.

Cummings revived his persona in one of the most bizarre series ever to last a full season: 1964-65's "My Living Doll." In this forerunner to "I Dream of Jeannie" (which debuted in 1965), Cummings played an Air Force psychiatrist entrusted with a curvaceous but vacant robot (Julie Newmar) programmed to obey every order. You can pretty much take it from there.

Though he had additional cinematic successes (notably "Dial M for Murder" in 1954), Cummings may always be best-remembered as a TV star, one who introduced one of the medium's most enduring character types.

19th Street residents worry about traffic

They fear completed freeway extension will make things worse

By Bob van Eyken
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA — Residents of East 19th Street are worried the extension of the Costa Mesa Freeway is going to worsen an already nasty traffic situation on their once-peaceful drive, unless the city takes steps to slow things down.

City officials, meanwhile, say there may be little they can do short of a radical change in traffic patterns, which would require studies, hearings and action by both the City Council and county supervisors.

Last month, about 75 19th Street residents went before the city Transportation Commission to request a series of measures, including a ban on trucks, the erection of additional stop signs to slow traffic, construction of speed humps, the extension of the median strip, and increased law enforcement.

"I've been here 40 years and I've seen quite a change," 19th Street resident Al Eichler said. "The increased traffic has ruined our street and it's devaluing our property."

Jackie Gillis, a real estate broker who works in the area agreed that traffic has had a negative effect on property values.

"It probably makes a difference of $25,000 to $30,000 in the value of a home," she said. "I have listings that just won't sell because they're on 19th Street."

Robert Hoffman, another resident, said that when the Costa Mesa Freeway extension to 19th Street is completed, it will create an untenable situation for those who live on the street.

"I didn't pay $300,000 to live on an offramp," he said.

Peter Naghavi, Costa Mesa's manager of transportation services, said the request for additional stop signs will not be honored because traffic engineering studies have shown they're not a good means of slowing traffic.

"They're meant to prevent collisions, not to slow traffic," he said.

Naghavi said other measures, such as the extension of the median strip to cut out cross traffic cannot be done as long as the street is designated as a secondary thoroughfare on the Master Plan of Streets and Highways.

"We are studying whether we can downgrade it, but that would be for the City Council to decide," he said. "Downgrading would affect other streets in the area. The city of Newport Beach would have to have a say in the matter and the county would also have a strong say."

He said the city's transportation services

Driveway now a river of mud

Costa Mesa turns its back on problem

By Bob van Eyken
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA — Terry Vaage wishes he could turn the clock back to last summer. At least then he had a driveway. Now he's got a river of mud.

Vaage applied in 1989 for an interest-free home improvement loan for low and moderate income residents through the city of Costa Mesa's federal community development block grant program.

In July, city redevelopment officials OK'd the $10,000 loan for a set of improvements that included a resurfaced driveway.

"I had to get three bids from a city list of contractors; they approved the lowest bid and two days later I had a contractor there pouring concrete," Vaage said.

But that's when the problems began.

"It was totally unsatisfactory," Vaage said. "It sloped the wrong way. I had a city inspector come out and he said, 'You're going to have a lake in front of your house.' And it had no surface. It was so rough you'd hurt your feet if you walked on it."

Vaage said he contacted the city Redevelopment Agency about the unsatisfactory job, but found city officials uninterested in his problem.

"Even though I told them it was unsatisfactory, they went ahead and released the money to the contractor," he said.

Meanwhile, the contractor returned and removed the badly poured concrete, Vaage said, but then refused to redo the job.

"Now the city's telling me it's between me and the contractor," he said. "They won't release the rest of the $7,500 loan until the concrete's poured and they won't pay to have it done. Now the concrete's gone, so the evidence is gone. I feel like I'm in a Catch 22. I don't have the money to have it done myself. And I don't have the money to take anybody to court. It seems I have no recourse at all."

Alleged cab bandit linked to other jobs?

By Anna Cekola
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

NEWPORT BEACH — A Huntington Beach man arrested Friday night on suspicion of a New Year's Day robbery of a cab driver may also be connected to several recent liquor store robberies, police said Saturday.

Donald Alan Privett, 28, an unemployed door hanger, was booked into Newport Beach Jail on suspicion of the cab robbery Friday and is being held on $50,000 bail, Newport Beach Police Sgt. Andy Gonis said.

Police say they arrested Privett and Costa Mesa resident Thomas Keith Shannon, 26, at 7:15 p.m. Friday night, seconds before the two were allegedly going to rob a Victoria Street liquor store, Gonis said.

Shannon, an unemployed painter, was booked into Newport Beach Jail on suspicion of conspiracy to commit a robbery for his alleged role as the getaway driver and is also being held on $50,000 bail, Gonis said. Shannon is not believed to be connected to the cab robbery.

In that case, Privett allegedly robbed a cab driver of $220 in Newport Beach after leaving a Costa Mesa bar late Jan. 1 and fired a shot from a large .44-caliber revolver as the cabbie drove away, Gonis said.

Privett had been picked up by Newport Beach police on New Year's Eve on a petty offense and detectives later remembered that his description — including two earrings in his left ear and one in his right — matched that of the cab robber, Gonis said. Detectives also had an anonymous tip saying Privett has a revolver like the one used in the robbery, Gonis said.

The 43-year-old cab driver later identified Privett as his assailant in a photo lineup, Gonis said.

Undercover detectives had been staking out Privett's Clay Avenue apartment Friday evening, when they followed Privett and Shannon to H&S Liquor Mart at 1125 Victoria Street, Gonis said.

Detectives watched as Shannon waited in the car and Privett, carrying a handgun in his back pocket, walked in and bought a 12-pack of Coors beer before leaving, Gonis said. Fearing that Privett was going to go back in and rob the store, detectives arrested the two in the parking lot, he said.

Newport Auto suspension ends Tuesday

NEWPORT BEACH — An auto dealership owned by billionaire Donald Bren's son was closed Saturday for three days because it sold Porsches that failed to meet California's smog emission standards, officials said.

Aside from the shutdown of Newport Auto Center, owner Steve Bren was slapped with $11,000 fine as part of a settlement reached this fall with the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

The cars have since been sold out of state and the fines have been paid, Albert Spar, Bren's attorney, said.

The lot can open for business on Tuesday, but its license will remain on probation, DMV investiagtor Randy King said.

The dealership was cited by DMV officials in June after an anonymous tip led them to eight 1989 Porsche Speedsters parked on the lot, King explained.

The limited-edition, two-door convertibles with $100,000 price tags were stationed at the dealership that also sells Rolls-Royces, Bentleys and Corvettes, King said.

"They're just little roadrunners, kind of like little toys," King said. "They're hard to get."

Bren, a champion auto racer and son of Donald, chairman of the powerful Irvine Co., could not be reached for comment.

Spar called the matter a technical violation.

"What happened is that Newport Auto purchased some vehicles with the understanding they were legal in California," Spar said. "And it turned out they were not legal."

Employees at the auto center, 445 E. Coast Highway, declined to discuss the closing.

Morning fog to plague Orange Coast

The Orange Coast was scheduled to be reminded of that tropical storm which passed through the area late last week.

Although no rain is expected, the National Weather Service said Saturday the Coast will be partly coudy today with areas of fog in the morning.

And the Orange Coast, like the rest of Southern California, is still suffering from the lack of rainfall.

By this evening, the Weather Service said the wet weather and will have completly passed with fair weather expected tonight and Monday.

Temperatures will be in the mid to upper 60s and the lows will be in the 40s.

The storm that soaked parts of Southern California with nearly 3 inches of rain moved eastward Saturday, but it made up only a fraction of the region's rainfall deficit.

Rainfall totals since the front arrived late Wednesday averaged an inch in the Orange Coast areas to around 2 inches in the mountains, said meteorologist Bob Grebe of the National Weather Service.

The Los Angeles Civic Center recorded .83 inches of rain, while the Live Oak Dam reporting station in the San Gabriel Mountains had 2.99 inches, Grebe said today.

The precipitation total for the season was still well below the 4.81 inches that is normal for the area for the date.

Other coastal areas are also expecting patchy fog and low clouds this morning.

Marine base has hepatitis outbreak

EL TORO — Six cases of Hepatitis A have turned up among people associated with a children's center at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station and hundreds of vaccinations have been ordered.

About 80 people have been vaccinated since the first case of the virus was confirmed Dec. 11, said Master Sgt. Jake Rodriguez, a base spokesman.

So far, three adults and three children associated with the same classroom at the Child Development Center have tested positive for the virus, but none have required hospitalization.

"We'll be vaccinating between 800 and 2,000 people, everyone from children, to siblings, to parents and faculty," Rodriguez said.

The center cares for children ages 6 weeks to 5 years.

Children who have not been vaccinated will not be allowed to return to the center.

Hepatitis A can be a mild illness lasting one or two weeks, but in rare instances can cause a severely disabling illness lasting several months.

Rumps see their duty and do it

SANTA ANA — While some U.S. enlisted soldiers wonder what happened to the peacetime advantages of being in the military, the Rumps kids — 10 of 17 and still counting — continue to enthusiastically join the Marines.

The Rumpses say the crisis over Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait only makes them more anxious to get on board.

"They've all really wanted to serve," said father Barney Rumps, 59, an ex-Marine lieutenant who fought in Korea for three years.

The family is well appreciated at Marine Corps recruiting stations in Orange County.

"They make my job easy," said Staff Sgt. H.D. Martinez at a Santa Ana recruiting office.

Six-foot Vincent Rumps, 17, enlisted just three weeks after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. When he goes to boot camp in July he'll be the 10th Rumps sibling to have joined the Corps. And he'll soon be followed by sister Francesca, 18, who says she will join after graduating from Grambling State University.

At the moment, only their sister Camille, 22, is in Saudi Arabia with Operation Desert Shield, the multi-national military force deployed against Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's army.

It's too soon to tell if the youngest — Gabriella, 16, Nicholas, 14, and Philip, 10 — will join up, but there is still room for more Marine family portraits on the living room wall.

So far there are nine hanging between an American and Marine Corps flag.

Bush escalates war words

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Saturday his secretary of state will forgo secret diplomacy this week to demand that occupying Iraqi troops leave Kuwait "or face the terrible consequences."

The president, in a hardline radio address to the nation, issued his ultimatum that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein pull his troops out or face U.S. forces in battle.

"Time is running out," the president said. "It's running out because each day that passes brings real costs," as Saddam continues developing his biological and nuclear capability, entrenches his troops and disrupts the worldwide flow of oil.

NBC News reported Saturday night that Bush was sending a letter to Saddam through Secretary of State James A. Baker III, warning the Iraqi president to comply with United Nations resolutions calling for a pullout.

"You have only two choices: comply with the resolutions or risk the destruction of your country," the network quoted the letter as saying.

Killer storms hit Ireland, Britain

GALWAY, Ireland — Heavy rain and winds up to 100 mph swept across Ireland and the west coast of Britain on Saturday, causing at least 13 deaths and flooding some towns.

Gales whipped a huge oak into a van in County Galway, crushing to death six Swiss tourists and their Irish driver, police said. An eighth man in the group, on a salmon-fishing holiday, escaped injury.

Two more people were killed in Galway when high winds blew a wall down on top of another van, police said. Four more died around the area.

Sniper hits school bus, kills girl

Robyn Dabrowski

BOURNE, Mass. — A sniper hit a school bus near this Cape Cod town Saturday, killing a female high school basketball player and slightly injuring another, authorities said. A car was also hit by the gunfire.

Police searched woods bordering state Route 25 but there were no arrests. No one in the car was injured.

State Trooper Deborah Bruce said authorities did not believe the shootings were accidental because more than one vehicle was struck.

The bus was carrying 13 girls from a New Bedford High School freshman basketball team to a game at Falmouth, New Bedford Superintendent Constantine Nanopoulos said.

Fourteen-year-old Robyn Dabrowski was hit in the chest. She was taken to Tobey Hospital in Wareham, where she died, hospital officials said.

Israeli violence draws U.S. rebuke

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration Saturday rebuked Israel for increasing its firepower during clashes with Palestinian demonstrators in the occupied territories.

The number of protesters' deaths has grown in recent days as Israeli troops appear to have abandoned the more moderate tactics they adopted last summer. They are trying to quell a three-year Palestinian uprising against Israel's 23-year occupation.

Orange Coast Serial

ORANGE COAST'S ONLY FICTIONAL DRAMA SERIES

"You're darn right, that's part of my sweatsuit," snapped Katherine Bell, her tolerance with the Newport police long gone. "The Pot Belly Flasher almost skewered me with his knife."

"The same one that ended up in his belly? Boy, Ms. Bell, you're like Dirty Harry — killing every suspect you run across. Where do you find time to publish your little weekly newspaper?" asked an accusing Lt. Clarence Oldman.

What's he thinking? wondered Katherine.

She tracked down the Pot Belly Flasher, the overweight pervert who eluded the cops for weeks, and now the police think she killed the guy willfully?

"Lt. Oldman," answered Katherine in as patronizing a voice as she could muster.

"The man was flashing his goods. I tried to place him under citizen's arrest for you. He pulled a knife, tried to stab me, lost his footing and tumbled down the embankment, embedding the knife in his stomach in the process. Case closed."

She grabbed the torn and blood-stained pocket of her sweatsuit from Oldman and slammed the door of Jonathan Vitale's Back Bay mansion in the cop's face.

"I need a statement from you, Katherine!" yelled Oldman. "And I'm not leaving until I get it."

Oldman's voice could be heard loud and clear through the door, but Katherine wasn't listening. Her attention was turned to Jonathan Vitale, who sat on the foyer of his house, staring blankly at the hardwood floor.

Remember cruising along in your new, blue Balboa?

■ In Orange County: Would you drive a blue Balboa?

Two automobiles bearing that name were built in a Midway City plant around 1920. The Balboa was an early sports car, with a super-charged engine that was guaranteed to get 25 miles to the gallon, reach 30 in low and 50 in high.

The price was $3,000 and the company owner, Charles C.L. Leslie drove one until his death in 1934.

Reservist takes oath, but who pays for call?

FORREST CITY, Ark. — A chancery judge was thousands of miles from home when the day arrived for him to take the oath of office, so he picked up the phone.

Judge Ben Storey of Forrest City, a reservist who is on duty in the Persian Gulf, took the oath of office for his new term by telephone on New Year's Day.

Storey has been with the U.S. Army in Saudi Arabia since Dec. 4.

Judge John Pittman of Helena, also a chancery judge in eastern Arkansas, said he had expected Storey's call but didn't know what time it would come. Storey telephoned at 5 a.m.; Pittman administered the oath in his bathrobe.

"They are not allowed to phone often or give their location, but I knew hopefully that he was going to call on New Year's Day," Pittman said.

Storey has served as a chancery judge for eight years, Pittman said. He was elected to another term in November. A chancery judge handles civil matters such as lawsuits and wills.

An answer the world has been awaiting

Jerry Kobrin

Jerry Kobrin

THEY DON'T MAKE DOVES LIKE THAT ANYMORE — Let's end the excruciating suspense, and tell you the name of the burlesque queen who disrobed with the help of some very smart birds.

Her name was (and maybe still is) Rosita Royce.

Definitive word comes from Lido Isle's star-in-residence, Joey Bishop, who played with Miss Royce on several occasions; i.e., their acts appeared on the same vaudeville bill.

Bishop has a book, "Minsky's Burlesque," which feataures a photo of "Rosita Royce and Her Educated Doves." As I understand the procedure, her little feathered friends were trained to remove her gossamer garments on cue, which is a heckuva trick.

Other world-class strippers are shown in the book, including Zorita, and you'll never guess what she danced with.

As noted the other day, Joey has invited me over to his house for a close inspection of his art gallery — at which time I'll reveal the identity of Zorita's exotic dancing partner, but you ain't gonna believe it.

HEAVY STUFF — An Orange Coast man, who had been away for the holidays, spent Friday catching up with his mail.

In the stack was a Christmas card from his always-upbeat friend, Coach George Allen, who died Monday of cardiac arrest, at age 72. And this was the wording on Allen's final message:

"Season's Greetings. The future is now!"

HANG ON TO THAT C-NOTE, LADY, THESE ARE TOUGH TIMES — I have an eyewitness for this scene Wednesday afternoon outside an Orange Coast hotel:

An elegantly frocked and bejeweled matron, who had been a guest at a private luncheon, wasn't happy when told that her valet parking tab was $4.

"Four dollars," she shrilled. "That's outrageous!"

Then she turned to an acquaintance also waiting for her car and simpered: "Let me borrow four singles, dear. I don't want to break a hundred-dollar bill."

NOW, NOW, LET'S SHOW A LITTLE PROFESSIONAL COURTESY — When I recently referred to Atty. Bill Farris as a "fun-loving lawyer," it drew an objection from a retired Laguna Beach physician, who asked that his name be withheld. As evidence of the esteem doctors hold for many lawyers, he sent along this story:

A surgeon was being cross-examined about the death of a person. Questioning was directed to the cause of death.

"Doctor, isn't it true that you did not know my client?" asked the lawyer.

"True."

"Isn't it true that you never examined him?"

"True."

"And is it not also true that as far as you know, you don't even know if he is dead or alive?"

"That is true, Counsel. His brain is in a glass container in my office, but as far as I know, the rest of him may be out somewhere practicing law."

SPEAKING OF WHICH — I seem to recall this "definition of waste," submitted some time ago by the late Viron B. Casey:

"A busload of lawyers going off a cliff with two empty seats."

ONE MORE LEGAL BRIEF — Friday's piece about Senator John Seymour's shortage of physical stature prompted this call from Ray Guistwite of Costa Mesa:

"Remember what they said about former Rams quarterback Pat Haden, who became a lawyer after having trouble peering over the opponents' defensive wall. They said he was too short to be a lawyer."

PLEASE, NO MORE SHORT JOKES — Enough short stories have arrived in recent hours to stock a filing cabinet. A small one. But here's one that Senator Seymour, whose roots are in rural Pennsylvania, can use on the banquet circuit.

It's from Jay Cornelius of Newport Beach, who said that back home on the South Dakota farm, they had the world's shortest hired hand.

"How short was he?" I made the mistake of asking.

"He was so short," said Cornelius, "he could milk a cow while he was standing up."

Yacobozzi will stand trial in perjury case

NEWPORT BEACH — A Newport Beach attorney and former GOP congressional candidate was ordered to stand trial for allegedly trying to escape a paternity lawsuit by sending an imposter to a clinic for genetic testing.

William Yacobozzi, a criminal-defense attorney, will be tried in Orange County Superior Court on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice, preparing false evidence and perjury, a Municipal Court judge ruled Friday.

Yacobozzi, who ran for Congress in 1988, said he expected the ruling but called the evidence circumstantial.

The Newport Beach attorney denies being the father of the child in the paternity suit.

A blood test had indicated Yacobozzi was the father, so he requested a more precise DNA test to determine if he was genetically related.

Prosecutors allege that an imposter, wearing Yacobozzi's tie and carrying his driver's license, went to the test clinic. However, a photograph taken at the time of the test shows a man who is not Yacobozzi.

Trial was scheduled for Jan. 15. Yacobozzi is free on his own recognizanced.

Wilson 'compelled to spread the pain'

By Amy Chance
and William Endicott
McClatchy News Service

SACRAMENTO — Gov.-elect Pete Wilson is spending the weekend celebrating his inauguration at party after party, but he is already warning that the fun will stop once he is forced to address the state's gloomy financial condition.

Wilson will be sworn in to office Monday and later in the week will deliver his detailed agenda for California in the form of a State of the State address to the Legislature and a proposed 1991-92 budget.

In a recent interview at his K Street transition office, Republican Wilson noted that he will be "compelled to spread some pain" in the budget he presents. He suggested that the state's financial outlook will provide little room for major new initiatives, including any plan to offer health insurance to working Californians now without it.

He nevertheless signaled that he will seek to follow through with campaign commitments to increase the state's emphasis on prevention efforts in dealing with crime — at least where drug users are concerned.

Given the shortage of state resources, he said any money to rehabilitate drug offenders must first be spent to treat young women who use drugs, "because young men don't get pregnant."

Wilson was careful to choose conciliatory words in discussing Democratic legislative leaders, with whom he must negotiate solutions to the state's growing problems.

Saying that he is not dealing with the "same Legislature" that confronted his predecessor, Wilson predicted that growing frustration among legislators about the state's lack of progress means he will find lawmakers more willing to tackle problems than they were under Gov. George Deukmejian.

Wilson also discussed his views on a variety of other topics, including prospects for retaining school funding guarantees and his own political future.

Q: Is a health insurance proposal a priority for you?

A: Some of the questions that bear on what we may do have to do with what, if anything, the federal government is going to do in this same area. My guess is they're not going to do anything for the next two years. They may make the issue a political football.

The other thing is that obviously the budget I'm going to be putting out and sending to the Legislature is going to be one that's going to be very difficult as it is without major new expenditures of a kind that are necessarily contemplated by an expansion of health care coverage.

Q: People who work in the criminal justice system are saying that the practice of repeatedly jailing drug offenders is just not working. There's a preference on the part of even some prosecutors and judges now for prevention programs, treatment programs. Are there specific treatment programs and alternatives to incarceration that you're willing to look at?

A: There's obviously a big distinction between . . . users and sellers. As far as people who are major sellers, they are engaged in high crime for high profit and I am not very sympathetic to alternatives for them. I don't think you're going to deter them from engaging in that unless they see a cost that approaches what they see as an enormous profit from it.

If we're talking about people who are users, I think you've got to have user accountability. I think you can get it in a number of different ways. I am certainly willing to look at additional steps that I think that we do need to take.

Rehabilitation is very, very expensive. It is also uncertain in terms of its result. If you are going to engage in rehabilitation, it seems to me you are really compelled to give priority to young women users, for the very simple reason that if you don't have enough rehabilitation funds to deal with everybody, they are the constituency most in need of treatment. Because young men don't get pregnant. That is favoritism of the child, rather than the mother. What you're doing is hopefully getting the mother healthy again and producing a reformed addict who can still function as a parent. I'm not unsympathetic to rehabilitation of young men, but they simply are not the same priority. If you're in a position where you've got to make a decision, I think it's a pretty clear decision.

When you speak of prevention, that obviously is the real answer. I would much, much prefer to see something like a DARE program — in fact I would like to see us have not just a DARE program in every school, but I'd like to have a DARE program at, let's say, the fourth grade and another one at the seventh grade. I think every one of those programs needs to contain as an element an explicit appeal to girls.

I don't know whether you have been in a neonatal intensive care unit or one of those residential homes after they have come there for rehabilitation. Some of them have been honest enough to say to me, they've said to Gayle (Wilson), 'You ought to take me around to those schools and I'd tell those young girls how I hurt my baby, and he's not going to be what he ought to be, and I did that to him.' "

Restaurant reviewer search

Eating a total experience at Gianni

Allegra Stoltz

"No lunch?" the Captain shouted, "No lunch? But I always eat lunch!" He was somewhat mollified when I explained that we would be eating dinner at Gianni, the restaurant assigned to me for my second review, and that we should be really hungry in order to fully appreciate the many offerings of the restaurant. Grudgingly, he agreed.

Driving towards Crystal Court through the rain and Christmas traffic I wondered if I had picked a poor day to visit Gianni for the first time. After all, the restaurant IS in a shopping mall and four days before Christmas would undoubtedly be their busiest and most hectic times. Furthermore, by the time we found a parking place and were on the escalator — the restaurant is on the first floor — both the Captain and his stomach were grumbling. But as we walked past the spectacular Christmas tree and into the eating area filled with happy, contented sounds then smelled the aromas coming from the cooking arena, I knew the evening would be a TE (total experience).

Gianni really is smack dab in the middle of Crystal Court yet it has the feel of an outdoor Italian trattoria. On one side of the escalator are tables, the kitchen area and pastry display. Up three steps, almost like on a stage, is the Espresso Bar which is also surrounded by tables all covered with white cloths and napkins; no paper products used here.

We were seated on the upper level by a charming but harried Italian waiter who took our drink orders then disappeared into the maze of tables. The bus boy promptly brought water and a basket of the most heavenly bread — soft and tender with a slightly crisp crust. Two slices and a martini later, the Captain was ready for serious eating.

Gianni's menu, which is the same for lunch and dinner, does not intimidate: it offers a reasonable selection of Northern Italian foods written in Italian but with English subtitles. The chef's Specials of the Day are listed on a separate sheet in the menu rather than recited by the waiter — a great help to those of us who can remember only two or three of the described specials.

We chose to begin with a plate of Bresolla de Vollatini listed on the special menu. Bresolla, originally from the Lombardy area of Italy but now popular as an appetizer throughout the country, is beef which has been salted, air-dried and pressed then sliced very thinly. Gianni presents the beef in an attractive circle accompanied by only lemon wedges and drizzled with olive oil. The combination of the tangy beef and homemade bread is irresistable. Gianni's Focaccio (Italian bread appetizer) differs from most offered locally. Theirs is baked in the pizza oven so that it comes to the table hot and crisp topped with either olive oil or cheese.

All pastas are made on the premises and include my favorite of Paglia e Fieno (hay and straw) a white and green pasta tossed with peas, ham and cream. Unfortunately, the evening of our first visit the pastas were slightly overcooked and somewhat dry probably because they had been held too long before being served. On subsequent visits, however, the pastas were properly al dente. One particularly good combination, again from the specials of the day, was a fettuccini tossed with plump scampi, mushrooms, cream, and dill. Lovely.

Gianni and his family are from Voghera, a small town outside of Milan, and specialize in cooking from that area. Cotoletto Milanese, often listed on the daily menu, is a large veal chop that has had the meat stripped from the bone but still connected to the bottom of the chop. The veal is then pounded, dipped in bread crumbs and sauteed. The result is a golden brown cutlet crisp and flavorful on the outside, moist and tender on the inside. Entrees, "secondi" on the menu, come with either vegetables or pasta or sometimes both.

Choosing a dessert could have been a problem as the display case is filled with cakes and pastries luscious enough to tempt even the most determined dieter. But we had been anticipating Tiramisu and were not disappointed. The food Gurus who have said that Tiramisu is "out" for 1991 should taste Gianni's melody of ladyfingers, espresso, marscarpone cheese and chocolate.

As the Captain took his last sip of Espresso he declared, "This is not a restaurant. It is theater!" We had spent over two hours watching Christmas shoppers struggling with last minute purchases, listening unashamedly to fellow diners expound on a myriad of subjects and enjoying amiable waiters serving with courtesy and panache.

Gianni is not a place for a romantic interlude. It is not a place for old-world classic service. It is a place for fun and for pleasure — a true TE.

Gianni, 3333 Bear Street, Costa Mesa, 540-3365. Open Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Sunday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Minimum charge is $5 per person. Full bar on the upper level; beer and wine only on the lower level.

Scientists find that lean men make more attentive lovers

High-fat diet can make you sluggish, less aggressive and short of hormones

By Kathryn Eaker Perkins
McClatchy News Service

SACRAMENTO — If men need one more reason to watch their diets, researchers have found that a meal high in fat decreases the level of testosterone — the male hormone that plays a part in sex drive, energy, and aggressiveness.

"Very little is known about the influence of diet on sex hormones in men," said Dr. A. Wayne Meikle, professor of medicine at the University of Utah. "Part of this study was to see if we could decrease — modify — the production of testosterone. We found that some fatty acids would inhibit that."

In the study, which appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association this week, eight healthy young men were fed liquid breakfasts of 700 calories.

Half drank a beverage high in carbohydrates — a diet lemon-lime soda pop. The other half drank milkshakes, either a shake high in fat or one with a minimal amount.

None of the men smoked, used drugs or alcohol, and all were within 10 percent of ideal weight.

Within an hour after drinking the fatty meal, blood samples showed a dramatic drop in testosterone — about 30 percent. And that was maintained for the next four hours. But those who drank the soda or the low-fat milkshake only had a 10 percent drop during that time, said John Stringham, senior research specialist on the project.

Normally testosterone levels drop gradually over the course of the day, and a 30 percent drop is not unusual. But the effect in this study was immediate and much greater than could be accounted for by the typical daytime process, said Meikle.

The long-term consequences of a high-fat diet are unclear, he said, but it "could manifest itself in decreased sexual drive and energy levels and less aggressiveness — a quality some men might ... might not want to lose."

It is known that obese men, who tend to eat more fat, have reduced levels of the sex hormone and a lower sexual drive. Massively obese men sometimes are impotent, Meikle said.

It appears, he said, "that during the course of the day, as one consumes meals, we may be able to change testosterone levels by diet and that there could be secondary benefits beyond a state of well being and sex drive."

For example, the high fat Western diet may affect androgens — a class of sex steroids — and the development of some diseases, including prostate enlargement or cancer.

Meikle's analysis of fat and testosterone was part of a larger study of the relationship between diet, male sex hormones and prostate cancer.

Students plan peace mission

By Dale Maharidge
McClatchy News Service

SACRAMENTO — In the aftermath of the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, a mission of peace by a group of American students might seem inconsequential.

After all, the 15 students scheduled to leave for Baghdad Sunday won't have an effect on George Bush, Saddam Hussein, or any other world leader.

But that's precisely why Sean Clancy, 21, a student at California State University, Sacramento, says he feels the trip is so important. The trip is not about world leaders. It is about people.

"We all bleed the same color," said Clancy. The mission to meet with ordinary citizens of Iraq is sponsored by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an interfaith pacifist organization with some 30,000 members.

Clancy believes both sides are "demonizing" each other, that is, making them something less than human. He fears increased racial hatred toward Arabs in this country may result. He goal is to "show a willingness to listen to their perspectives and concerns in order to bring about a non-violent resolution to this crisis."

The Fellowship of Reconcilliation is devoted to overcoming hatred and bigotry through understanding of other people. The group, which helped found the American Civil Liberties Union before 1920, has a history of working for non-violence, from supporting World War I conscientious objectors, to opposing the war in Vietnam.

The Fellowship has sponsored two other trips to Iraq. This will be the first student delegation. Clancy was chosen from students all over the country for the 10-day trip. The group is partially subsidizing his expenses, but he still must come up with some $2,000 out of his own pocket if he cannot get donations.

"I'll probably have to miss school for a semester, but I always can go to school," he said.

Clancy wishes there was less enthusiasm for starting a war. He said sanctions should be given more of a chance. "He can't do anything with the oil," Clancy said of Hussein. "This is probably the best opportunity to use sanctions the world has had in a long time."

While he is too young to have memories of the animosity against Jane Fonda and others who went to North Vietnam during the Indochinese war, Clancy said he has not personally encountered similar opposition. "As far as I know, the State Department doesn't care."

Persian Gulf resisters find church shelters

SAN FRANCISCO — They sheltered Vietnam War resisters in the 1970s and Central Americans in the 1980s. Now, the same churches have extended their protection to soldiers refusing service in the Persian Gulf.

Three San Francisco Bay area parishes and the University Baptist Church in Seattle are believed to be the first U.S. congregations to publicly offer refuge to soldiers facing a desert war in the Middle East.

"We will be with them when they are told they have no alternatives left — they either go to jail, or AWOL or to war," said the Rev. Gustav Schultz of the University Lutheran Church in Berkeley, whose 150-member congregation voted unanimously in December to offer sanctuary.

The churches are prepared to house soldiers who are absent without leave.

"Shelter is the essence of what we would mean. That's the biblical understanding of sanctuary," said the Rev. Diana Gibson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Palo Alto, where the 15 governing body members unanimously approved the offer in December.

The Rev. Marilyn Chilcote of the Beacon Street Presbyterian Fellowship in Oakland called the shelter offer by her 25-member congregation "the best Christian education we can provide our children. They see the community responding according to the Gospel to the most critical issues of the day."

The Rev. Donovan Cook of University Baptist Church in Seattle said he has been contacted by at least three soldiers at Fort Lewis near Tacoma who want legal assistance.

Schultz's church is providing free legal assistance for National Guard reservist Liann Noble, 25, a Roman Catholic and the daughter of an Army recruiter, who applied for discharge as a conscientious objector.

"The church has been very supportive, just knowing they are there if all heck breaks loose. I've submitted my papers and so far no one is harassing me," said Noble, a San Francisco State University art therapy student, who still reports to the Guard.

Noble, a reserve medic, said reserve recruiters stressed civil defense work such as earthquake and flood relief.

Antics of drunk students have colleges looking at ways to bring back sobriety

By Jim Haynes
McClatchy News Service

Here's to sobriety, the new goal on college campuses across the nation — at least the goal of administrators and some students.

Within the past year, drunken students have rioted in Chico, San Luis Obispo and other college communities, resulting in injuries and mass arrests.

Soused students were also prevalent in a rowdy mob that closed Highway 50 through Stateline at South Lake Tahoe on New Year's Eve, officials said. Ten people were hurt and 55 arrested.

"It's usually the younger students who say 'Oh, I was so drunk.' They brag about how many kegs they went through," said Christine Chavarria, a health and community services major at California State University, Chico. "It's a stage they go through."

But now college administrators are acting to reduce the besotted hijinks that for many years were mostly winked at as part of the traditional college experience.

At the University of California, Los Angeles, student volunteers offer peer counseling to other students with alcohol problems.

The counselors are intended to counteract peer pressure from other students that encourages excessive boozing, said Kevin Malotte, UCLA's acting director of health education. "Alcohol abuse is the number one problem of substance abuse among college students," he said.

California State University, Sacramento, is also setting up a peer counseling program under a $152,000 federal grant aimed at combating alcohol and drug abuse, said Associate Dean Shirley Uplinger.

University of California, Davis, students who have had too much to drink can call the university-sponsored "Tipsy Taxi" to get a ride.

UC Davis also makes facilities available for meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous on the campus, said Pat Lindsay, the assistant director of the student health center.

New York City to warranty school grads

NEW YORK — City high school graduates will come with a one-year warranty beginning in 1992 under a plan being developed by Schools Chancellor Joseph Fernandez.

"We're willing to guarantee our product," Fernandez said Thursday.

The plan being worked out would allow any employer who finds that a high school graduate cannot read, write or calculate proficiently to return the worker to school at no cost to the employer or the student.

The employer, not the schools, would determine if a worker lacks the basic knowledge or skills to perform an entry-level job.

Employees would stay on the job but enter evening remedial classes run by the Board of Education.

Stanley Litow, deputy superintendent for operations, said the program might begin in pilot form with a few high schools.

"The diplomas ought to be a meaningful document to the employer," he said. There was no indication of how much the program would cost.

Seymour complaints coming in too early

It is pretty hard to believe that there are Republicans who are ready to flat-out embarrass Gov.-elect Pete Wilson.

The GOP worked pretty hard this past fall to convince voters of California that Wilson, not the Democratic nominee, should be the person in charge.

Now, the conservative segment of the Republican Party appears to be telling us that not only did we make a mistake with Wilson, they made a mistake supporting him.

All of this results from Wilson's decision to appoint State Sen. John Seymour, R-Anaheim, to the U.S. Senate seat he is vacating Monday when he is sworn in as governor.

The conservatives are outraged by the appointment.

They are stunned that Wilson, a moderate, would go to a mirror image of himself to fill the vacancy he is creating by accepting the governor's office.

The conservative concern may very well be valid.

But, it seems to us they are coming far too early to be taken seriously.

After all, if they do challenge Seymour in a primary, they are also challenging Wilson.

Wilson is the man they worked so hard to elect.

From the final results of that election, it took an all-out effort to bring Wilson home a winner.

Thus, we are puzzled by the fact that any segment of the GOP would go on record as saying they are ready to challenge Seymour.

Simply put, there is plenty of time to express outrage over the appointment. Conservative Republicans ought to react to performance rather than perception.

They ought to reserve the right to challenge Seyemour, and, of course Wilson, based on what the new senator has done rather than on fear of what he might do.

It's not fair to Seymour. It's not fair to Wilson. It's not even fair to the Republicans.

Most important, it's not fair to the voters who bought the argument the GOP candidate can best run this state.

They ought to give everyone a chance to perform before heaping on the criticism.

It could be their outrage is warranted. But, again, the time to embarrass the new governor over this incident is not now.

Wilson has tough choices, but can still become a hero

By William Endicott
McClatchy News Service

Despite the financial mess facing state government, Pete Wilson figures there's a pony in there somewhere and plans to deliver an upbeat inaugural address when he is sworn in Monday.

But Wilson, California's next governor, is no Pollyanna.

He knows there are tough choices ahead that could put him on a collision course with the Democratic-controlled Legislature, much as George Deukmejian was on that course for most of his eight years in office.

He will follow up the inaugural speech with a State of the State address to the Legislature on Wednesday and on Thursday will unveil his first budget proposal. There's no way he will be able to avoid some bad news.

There are several reasons, however, to be hopeful that Wilson can succeed where Deukmejian failed and reach some acceptable compromises with legislators, moving the state toward the next century with considerably more vision than his predecessor ever demonstrated.

In the first place, Wilson is less doctrinaire than Deukmejian and also will not hestitate to use the governor's office as a bully pulpit.

He'll be much more aggressive than Deukmejian ever was in going over the heads of lawmakers to mobilize public opinion.

"You have to go out and persuade and communicate," said Republican political consultant Sal Russo. "That was the part of the job (Deukmejian) detested."

Wilson won't make that mistake.

Secondly, he already is showing himself to be more compassionate than Deukmejian and is less likely to try to rip to shreds favorite Democratic social programs, such as family planning services.

He has said, for example, that as budget cuts are made he intends to protect the "truly needy" — the aged, blind and disabled. "Those are people who are really not able to fend for themselves," he said.

He's also proposing a farsighted program to ensure prenatal care for every pregnant woman in California and has spoken eloquently of the need for legislation to deal with the tragedy of babies born to drug-addicted mothers.

"I think we're going to have to have the money for that, because we are facing an epidemic as an alternative," he said.

Saddam Hussein still spouting diplomatic warnings of war

Rowland Evans

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein's message to the Iraqi diplomatic envoys brought back to Baghdad from around the world points straight to war: "Tell your host countries, no retreat of any kind."

That word to Mohamed al-Mashat, ambassador to Washington, and Baghdad's envoys to other members of the coalition coincides with an intelligence finding hand delivered to President Bush.

According to an Iraqi defector, Saddam will flood the Persian Gulf with 25 million barrels of crude oil from a new spur of Iraq's main pipeline (now filled with embargoed oil).

A CIA spy-satellite photograph supports the claim.

That much oil pouring into the gulf could wreck Saudi Arabia's desalination plants and deprive U.S. soldiers of their main water supplies.

It strengthens Saddam's defiance and illustrates why he laughs at U.S. forecasts of quick victory.

GOP Chairman

The unexpected rise of Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter to the top of the list for Republican national chairman can be attributed to a suggestion from Dan Quayle.

Yeutter's name first was mentioned to Chief of Staff John Sununu after William J. Bennett bowed out.

Like Bennett, Yeutter has never run for public office, or been operationally engaged in Republican politics. President Bush has made a firm decision to select a spokesman rather than a political mechanic.

Two others on the final list — Peter Secchia, U.S. ambassador to Italy, and Deputy Secretary of Energy Henson Moore — both have more political experience than Yeutter.

But it was felt at the White House that Yeutter, though clearly no hero of the right, came closer to the conservative coloration that Bennett would have provided.

Why Shevvy quit

Eduard Shevardnadze quit as Soviet foreign minister to thwart a bloody police crackdown on his native Georgia scheduled to start within 48 hours of his resignation speech warning of imminent dictatorship.

He correctly gauged that the speech's shock effect would stop or at least stall the crackdown.

Shevardnadze was secretly told the repression in Georgia would be followed by equally bloody blows in Lithuania, Latvia and Moldavia.

But Shevardnadze's resignation and his bold charge against Mikhail Gorbachev's regime will not delay the harsh measures indefinitely.

Friends say the Georgian is likely to say goodbye to Moscow soon and move back to his homeland to support its defense.

No Jesse in '92?

Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown is telling prominent Democrats privately they can rest assured Jesse Jackson will not make a third straight run for president in 1992.

Brown, who was Jackson's manager at the 1988 national convention, whispers that he has direct information.

If he is right, that leaves two alternative courses in the primaries for black voters swallowed up by Jackson in the last two campaigns.

Either Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder jumps in to pre-empt them, or there is a spirited competition among many candidates.

If New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo runs for president he would have the edge in competing for black voters.

Cuomo and Brown collaborated closely in guiding the 1992 Democratic convention to New York City, and the national chairman — though officially neutral — is regarded as firmly in the governor's camp.

Peace General

The senior U.S. official who was most upset by Lt. Gen. Calvin Waller's statement that American forces would not be ready to attack Iraq by the Jan. 15 deadline was the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell.

That's because Powell still holds high hopes that Saddam Hussein will withdraw from Kuwait without bloodshed.

He was concerned that the statement by Waller, deputy commander of the U.S. forces in the gulf, would be misread by the Iraqi dictator as diminished pressure on him.

But there was no movement at the Pentagon to get rid of Waller.

As a black, he is extremely popular with the sizable contingent of black troops in Operation Desert Shield.

In addition, he is considered one of the few generals around who can get along with the commander in the gulf, the demanding Gen. Norman Schwartzkopf.

Wrong choice Jim

I'm calling about Jim Wood. I am continually amazed at the lack of knowledge and understanding he poses.

Now he is an authority and prognosticator on politics. Wrong choice Jim. To wit, Mr. Seymour.

On sports, wrong choice Jim. On transportation, wrong choice Jim.

On big-screen entertainment, wrong choice Jim. Godfather is probably going to be the biggest smash of the year.

Why do you guys permit him to continually write this drivel? I hope he's not being paid.

For the record

I just want to say thank you for "For the Record" in the sports section. We like the odds that you've been running, particularly the football odds.

Fair to Shane

I just hope the practice of dousing coaches with Gatorade or ice water is thought about more seriously in the future.

Also, in reference to your placing that young SC quarterback's name on the front page because of his behavior in public. I think anyone who is drunk in public and is arrested for it, should be put on the front page.

The educational district has been trying for years to stop this practice of drinking — not drinking and driving but just drinking, period.

The young people are well educated in this level and so was Mr. Foley.

I hope this is the last time he is on the front page. Hopefully his name won't be mentioned in connection with a more serious accident.

I live in Newport Beach and I would like to say yes, I think you people are doing a good job and no, I don't think you crucified Shane Foley.

Good work Pilot

I just wanted to say thanks for a good local newspaper. The new Daily Pilot is the best it has ever been. It's innovative and fun to read. It is responsive and very professional. Keep up the good work.

No condoms

I'm calling to complain about teachers passing out condoms at Corona del Mar High School.

My daughter goes there and I'd file an official complaint, except I know what the school would do to her. I think it might be good for the Daily Pilot to look into the practices over there.

State political revival a must in new year

SACRAMENTO — No more Mr. Nice Guy.

For a decade, we Californians have tolerated a state Legislature that has spent a billion-plus dollars on itself, hired thousands of people to help it do its work, preened and pontificated for the television cameras, but utterly failed as a policy-making body.

Beyond failure, the Legislature has had a negative impact; many of the things it's done — savings-and-loan deregulation being a sickening example — have been more harmful than helpful.

While individual members often are intelligent and well-motivated, they have been unable to overcome the institution's tendency to elevate its own interests and those of a few influence-peddlers above the welfare of 30 million Californians.

No, the Legislature doesn't deserve all of the blame for the degeneration of California politics.

Disengaged governors, disinterest by many Californians in the political process, shaft-thy-neighbor attitudes by special interests, and a preoccupation with trivia by much of the news media have contributed to the mess.

Nevertheless, the state Legislature is the most dysfunctional of California's political institutions, and it's high time we stopped letting its members get away with it.

It's time for us to demand that lawmakers begin doing the admittedly difficult job they have been elected to do: finding some consensus within the social complexity of California, and enacting policies that reflect that consensus.

It's important to recognize a small differential within the Legislature.

The state Senate has evolved in the past couple of years under President Pro Tem David Roberti into a more effective body, although it still has its share of slackers and scumbuckets.

The state Assembly under Speaker Willie Brown, however, has gotten worse.

Most of the time, its members — of both parties — act as though they don't know what's happening outside the state Capitol and don't care.

Brown is saying these days that he wants a year of productive reform, however, Brown promises that almost every year.

California has a new governor who indicates by word and deed that he will not shrink from the daunting task.

Voters have expressed their disgust with the Legislature by passing, among other things, a tough term-limitation measure.

Federal prosecutors have done their bit by putting some of the less savory members of the Legislature in jail, and striking fear into the hearts of others.

The stage has been set for either a rebirth of the California Legislature as the effective policy apparatus it once was, or its continued degeneration into a laughingstock.

The time for excuses and copouts is over; what happens in 1991 will tell us whether there's any hope for renewal. And these are the urgent matters that the Legislature and the new governor must address:

- Some solution to the state's multibillion-dollar budget crisis that protects California's credit rating, preserves essential services, distributes the financial burden fairly, and at least begins the process of long-term budgetary reform.
- Management of California's explosive population growth, which has stretched public facilities to the cracking point and threatens to rip the state's social fabric.
- A looming crisis in health care that further divides Californians into haves and have-nots.
- An equally severe crisis in education that threatens to leave the state ill-equipped to participate in the fast-changing global economy.
- The redrawing of legislative and congressional districts to reflect not only changes in raw population, but the incredible social diversity of the state, and to encourage broader participation in politics.
- A fresh approach to the decades-long war over water that has needlessly divided the state.

Dan Walters is a Sacramento-based columnist for the McClatchy News Service.

Freezing rain, sleet, snow move across the Midwest

Freezing rain, sleet and snow moved across the Midwest on Saturday and a tropical storm that soaked parts of dry California headed eastward.

Rain-swollen rivers in southern Indiana continued to push out of their banks. The flooding is a remnant of melting snow and rain from a week ago that swelled nearly every major river in the state to flood stage.

President Bush declared parts of Indiana a disaster area on Saturday, making 11 counties eligible for extra federal relief money.

In southern Indiana, volunteers in Hazleton used sandbags to shore up a levee holding back the White River. Officials said they were satisfied with preparations for a flood crest.

"We had all kinds of warning that this was coming on, so we're prepared," said Randy Peil, a town board member.

"The city has done all that it can do," said Steve Schulz, SEMA's chief of field operations who was in Hazleton. "There's no threat to homes or residents or any of that thing."

The river was expected to crest Sunday or Monday at 11½ feet above flood stage. More than 2,000 people across the state fled their homes last week and more evacuees were expected as the White, Wabash and other rivers continue to rise.

Snow was falling Saturday in Illinois, and snow was forecast for Wisconsin and Michigan. The storm was expected to bring snow, sleet and freezing rain across the middle Mississippi Valley into the upper Great Lakes region.

An ice storm at dawn paralyzed St. Louis and closed Lambert-St. Louis airport. Police told people to stay off roads and interstates.

In Oklahoma, thousands of workers were sent home early Friday as roads iced up, as did the runways at Oklahoma City's Will Rogers Airport, forcing a few flight cancellations.

Southerly winds were pumping warmer air into Oklahoma early Saturday, but temperatures were expected to drop below freezing later and create a new layer of ice on roadways.

"Ice is the toughest challenge Mother Nature throws at us," said state Transportation Department spokesman Andy Oden. "Rain runs off, snow can be shoveled off, but ice is harder."

Icy conditions were blamed for at least three traffic deaths in Oklahoma on Friday, including a woman and her 10-year-old daughter who were killed when their pickup collided with a school bus. No one on the bus was hurt.

A 17-year-old girl was struck and killed in a traffic accident early Saturday in southern Illinois. She was hit by a car while pushing a disabled car off icy Interstate 55.

In Arkansas, two men and a women died after their car apparently became stalled in water on a flooded road next to the Current River in Randolph County and they left the car to get to higher ground. The three died of exposure, said state police investigator Steve Huddleston. Two bodies were found Friday a short distance from the car, and the third was found Saturday; the three had been missing since Tuesday.

Seven more people were reported killed in weather-related accidents in Texas on Thursday and Friday, and three in Missouri, including a farmer whose tractor went out of control and overturned.

The nearly 3 inches of rain that fell in Southern California did little to make up for the region's rainfall deficit.

Rainfall totals since the front arrived late Wednesday averaged an inch in the coastal and valley areas to around 2 inches in the mountains, said meteorologist Bob Grebe of the National Weather Service.

Water officials and farmers alike said they were disappointed with the storm's output.

In northern California, the problem was heavy fog, which closed the San Francisco International Airport for over an hour Saturday morning and was blamed for a multivehicle accident on the Dumbarton Bridge that links San Mateo and Alameda counties at the south end of the San Francisco Bay.

Autopsy doctor says Elvis died from drugs, not heart attack

By Michael Lollar
Scripps Howard News Service

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The death certificate still proclaims Elvis Presley died of a heart attack, but don't believe it, says Dr. Eric Muirhead, the retired pathology chief who helped perform the autopsy at Baptist Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Muirhead, who has never before talked publicly about his findings, said Presley "was a drug addict. We knew he was a drug addict because he had been at Baptist to be treated for that." And when he died in 1977, it was clearly a result of "polypharmacy," or death from drug interaction, said Dr. Muirhead.

Now in private practice, Dr. Muirhead recalled his shock at the official ruling by Memphis and Shelby County medical examiner Dr. Jerry Francisco.

He said Dr. Francisco preempted other members of the autopsy team, announcing his findings at a press conference minutes after the bulk of the autopsy was complete.

"We were appalled that he made that announcement. There were eight doctors there who disagreed with him," Dr. Muirhead said.

Dr. Francisco, who still insists Presley died of a heart attack, claims Dr. Muirhead did agree with him on the day of the autopsy.

"I said, 'What do you think about this?' He said, 'That's fine.'"

Not so, said Dr. Muirhead. "I disagree completely with him. I don't deny that the man (Presley) had some coronary artery disease and an enlarged heart. But he didn't even have enough to have a bypass."

And, based on Presley's hospital stays and history of drug abuse, Dr. Muirhead said the official finding should have awaited drug-screening toxicology tests. He said he vocally disagreed with Dr. Francisco, but to no avail.

Dr. Francisco said his official finding was "cardiac arrhythmia due to undetermined causes." Asked to specify the finding, he said: "Hypertensive cardiac disease associated with coronary disease."

Meaning? "A heart attack."

He said there were no ruptures or tears to indicate a massive heart attack.

Man falls from pier

NEWPORT BEACH — A 28-year-old Garden Grove man escaped injury when he fell off the end of the Balboa Pier Saturday afternoon, but he didn't escape having to go to jail for an outstanding traffic arrest warrant, police said.

When officers arrived to take a report in the 12:30 p.m. fall from the pier, they found that Robert Larry Wormuth had an outstanding traffic warrant out of Harbor Municipal Court, police said. He was booked into Newport Beach Jail on the warrant.

Wormuth was not reportedly injured in the fall from the end of the pier near Ruby's Diner, authorities said.

Gas heater fumes kill four people

LOS ANGELES — Four people were found dead in their apartment Saturday, apparent victims of poisonous fumes streaming from a gas heater, authorities said.

A fifth victim, a 46-year-old man, was in critical condition with carbon monoxide poisoning at Panorama Community Hospital, police dispatcher Connie Troutt said.

"At this time, it appears they are victims of asphyxiation due to a ventilation problem of a gas wall heater," Troutt said.

The identities of the victims, three males and one female in their early 20s, were not released pending notification of relatives.

area freeways during the rainfall, but no serious injuries were reported, said Officer Lydia Martinez, a spokeswoman for the California Highway Patrol.

"Wet, slippery pavement really throws people for a loop," Martinez said. "They drive too fast. They don't leave room enough to stop."

Water officials and farmers alike said they were disappointed with the storm's output.

"We've had about an inch and a quarter" of rain, said John Johnson, Casitas Municipal Water District general manager. "That's very minimal. It's not much at all."

The precipitation was "nice, but we need 20 times that. We need 19 more storms like this," said Terry Schaeffer, a weather service agricultural meteorologist in Santa Paula. "I'd rather see a deluge."

DRIVEWAY
From A1

Don Lamm, assistant city manager for development services, said he had no direct knowledge of Vaage's case. But he said he believed the city ahd very little authority to regulate the quality of concrete work that is not directly related to building safety.

"There isn't really a building code that applies to driveways," he said. "I'm afraid this sounds like more of a consumer affairs complaint."

Tony C'de Baca, Costa Mesa building official, agreed with Vaage that the driveway was not properly installed. But he also agreed with Lamm's assessment of the city's position.

"The first indication from the field indicated that it was very shoddy," he said. "But part of the problem is that there is no city code applying to the quality of surface work on a pre-existing driveway."

He said he did not know why money was paid to the contractor when neither the homeowner nor the inspectors, who performed a courtesy check, deemed the work satisfactory.

C'de Baca said he believed Vaage would now have to take the matter up with the state Contractors Licensing Board.

The contractor, Steve Houghton Construction, of Santa Ana, could not be reached for comment.

Ann Gyben, Redevelopment Agency director, said she could not comment on Vaage's case.

"But I can tell you we're trying to resolve it," she said. "We're doing everything we can to work this out between the homeowner and the contractor."

department has requested additional police service to monitor speeds and enforce a ban on large trucks.

And the Transportation Commission will decide Jan. 16 whether to recommend a study by a traffic consultant of possible long and short term measures for the street, Naghavi said.

Councilman Peter Buffa said he would like city traffic engineers to study putting a traffic diverter at 19th Street and Irvine Avenue to prevent the use of 19th Street as a shortcut to and from Pacific Coast Highway via Dover Drive.

He also said speed humps, similar to those installed on Country Club Drive, are also worth considering.

"That street was never meant to handle this volume of traffic," Buffa said. "Something's got to be done. That's the bottom line."

In at least three recent robberies in Costa Mesa and Newport Beach, police say a man has bought Coors beer before going back into the store and robbing it. A second man is always waiting in the parking lot for the getaway, Gonis said.

"Both of these guys are considered to definately be threats to the business community because of the number of robberies they're suspected of."

Detectives confiscated from Privett a loaded .22-caliber handgun and a Daily Pilot article about the cab robbery, Gonis said.

Another big game decided by zebras

Let's hear it for the Zebras.

Once again, the men in striped shirts decided the outcome of an important football game.

They did it one year ago by calling holding on Michigan against USC in the closing moments of the Rose Bowl. The chicken-bleep call cost Michigan the game.

They did it again one year later, dropping the hankie on the Rocket's dramatic touchdown run against Colorado in the Orange Bowl. The penalty gave Colorado one-half of the national championship.

Then they did it again on Sunday. They called holding on rookie David Szott of Kansas City as the Chiefs were driving (to the Miami 15) for a game-winning field goal in the AFC wild card playoff game.

The holding penalty — the kind which occurs, literally, on almost every play at the line of scrimmage — put KC's Nick Lowery out of field goal range and Miami won, 17-16.

Nice going, guys. You did it again. Focus the cameras and let's hear it for the Year of the Zebra.

Janeski's buzzer-beater lifts Mater Dei, 49-48

By Patrick Larkin
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

MISSION VIEJO — Being the best free throw shooter on the Mater Dei boys basketball team, a 10-footer is no big deal for Jason Janeski, unless the 10-footer happens to be at the buzzer of a game involving Orange County's two top-ranked teams.

It was Janeski's shot with no time left on the clock from the foul line that gave No. 1 Mater Dei (12-4) a 49-48 win over No. 2 Capistrano Valley (13-3) Saturday night before a packed house at Saddleback College.

Janeski's heroics spoiled the Cougars' upset bid as well as their shot at redemption from an earlier season loss to the Monarchs at the Orange Holiday Classic. But more importantly, it may give Mater Dei the upper hand at the end of the regular season.

"This is a pivotal win for us," Monarchs Coach Gary McKnight said. "This game could have implications as far as seeding goes in the 5-A playoffs since we're both in the same division.

Neither team was able to grab any sort of major advantage until Capo took a 48-47 lead on David Sedgwick's layin with nine seconds remaining in the game. Sedgwick's shot capped an 11-1 run by the Cougars in the last three minutes of the game.

The Monarchs called timeout and McKnight told his club to get the ball to half court and then call time again to set up a play. Mater Dei got the ball to the time line all right, but it wasn't without controversy as Kamaran Sufi called time while sliding across the floor. Capo Coach Bob Thornton argued for the travel, but it was to no avail.

Sufi inbounded the ball to Janeski, who was not covered at the top of the 3-point circle. Janeski dribbled to the corner of the foul line and released the game-winner that hit nothing but net.

"I was supposed to set a back pick for Reggie (Geary), but no one picked me up," Janeski said. "I kind of thought it would go in, but I wasn't sure. All I knew is that it was straight.

"There were some close calls at the end of the game but we overcame them for a big win. I think this puts us in pretty good shape for the rest of the year."

Though no one really stood out scoring-wise, both teams used a balanced attack. The Cougars' Brett McCorkle led all scorers with 16 points, while Sedgwick finished with 10 and Aaron Rhoades and

Seahawks put Saints away, 74-54

By Barry Faulkner
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

SANTA ANA — Though Ocean View High boys basketball coach Jim Harris is far from content with his Seahawks' play two games into the Sunset League schedule, he admits both victories and his team's stature alone atop the standings look good in the newspaper. Both have been by margins of 20 points.

The Seahawks added to their scrap book with a routine 74-54 win Saturday night at Santa Ana High to mark only the second time in five years Harris' squad has escaped the first two league games without a loss.

"Usually, we lose two of our first three (league games), then have to catch up," Harris said. "But I think we had our slump in December, losing five in a row for the first time in our history. We couldn't wait to get it going this year, so I'm glad we've started well."

The visitors started well against the Saints, who knocked off Marina in their opener the night before to make this a showdown for sole possession of first place. (Huntington Beach had a bye Saturday after opening with a win Friday night.)

After Santa Ana's Ramom Yerena opened the scoring with a 3-pointer, the Seahawks ripped off a 15-3 run, including five layups, which along with free throws proved to be their bread and butter.

Only six of Ocean View's 25 field goals came from outside four feet and when they weren't kissing short bank shots off the glass, they were heading to the foul line for two shots.

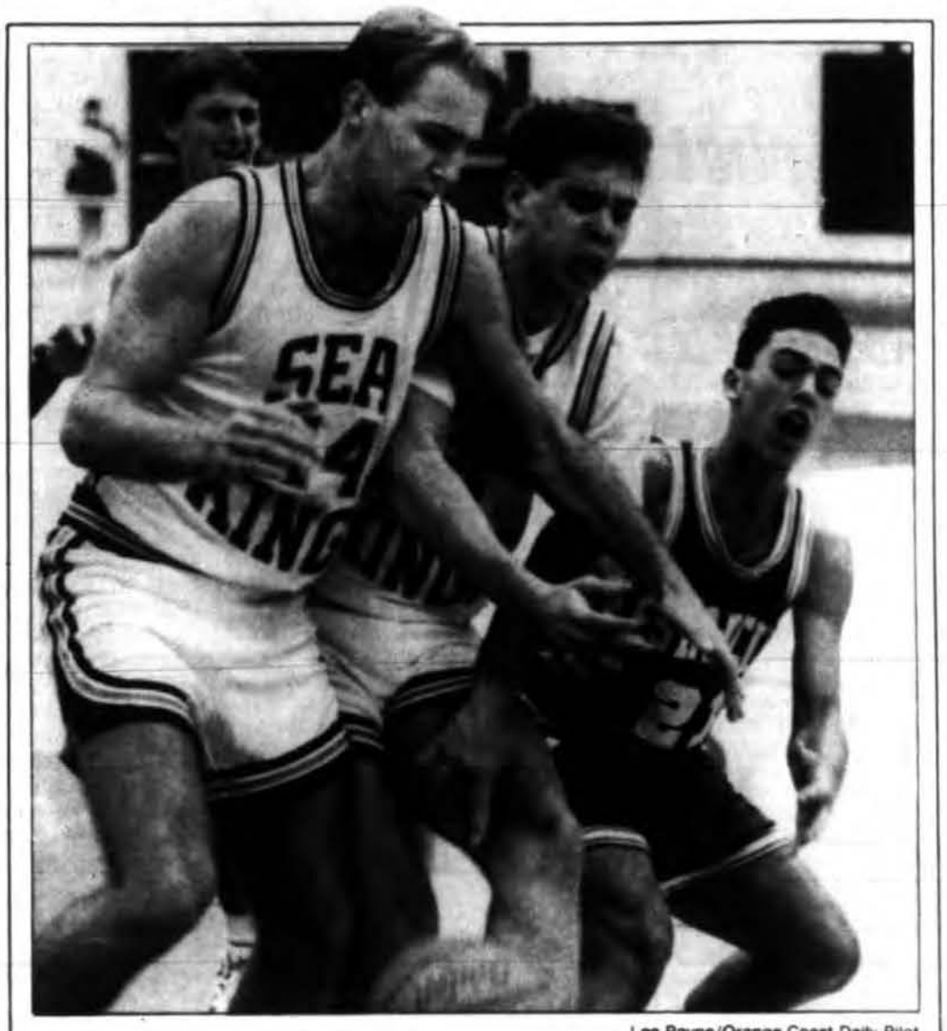

Ocean View hit 23 of 27 free throws as Martin, Jimmy Harris and Albert Fanoga each drilled all four of their attempts and Marcel TenBerge canned 9 of 11.

"They were very tight on us at the perimeter, so we really had to go inside," Jim Harris said.

Benefitting from the inside emphasis was the 6-foot-8 TenBerge, who hit 6 of 7 field goal attempts to amass a game-high 21 points. He also pulled down nine rebounds to help the Seahawks earn a 33-23 edge in that department.

Jimmy Harris, who had four of the five outside jumpers, including the team's lone 3-pointer, finished with 19 points.

CdM shocks Eagles

By Roger Carlson

NEWPORT BEACH — League play is just around the corner and any coach will tell you, forget December and its tournaments, now is when it starts to count.

And for Corona del Mar High's Sea Kings, well, they're taking their chips to the bank right now after shocking Estancia High's Eagles Saturday night in the winner's gym, 52-47, to round out non-league basketball play.

Seemingly in a continuing swirl of struggle since that night at Laguna Beach when the Sea Kings were thoroughly embarrassed by Estancia (how could anyone forget the night Estancia swept to a 29-4 halftime lead?), the Sea Kings turned it 180 degrees with the near wire-to-wire victory.

It was 12-2 Corona at the start and Estancia enjoyed the lead just once (37-36) for a span of 27 seconds.

Aside from that momentary lapse it was all Corona Saturday night as Paul Orris' Sea Kings, despite playing short-handed and under the weather, sent suddenly struggling Estancia (11-4) to its third straight loss.

It became evident that Edison High wasn't pleased with its Sunset League basketball opener, as the Chargers took out their disappointments on the visiting Fountain Valley Barons.

Edison, which utilized all 13 of its players, pounded Sunset foe Fountain Valley, 55-35, after leading 15-2 in the first quarter to improve to 1-1 in league and 11-4 overall.

"Fountain Valley is a solid, well-coached team," Edison Coach Jon Borchert said. "Before the year's over, they're going to upset some people."

Saturday night would not be one of those evenings for the Barons (0-2, 5-9), who crept to within eight (19-11) in the second period before the Chargers rolled in six straight to take another commanding lead.

Huntington Beach nipped Edison, 58-57, in the league lid-lifter Friday night, but the Chargers came back and showed no mercy in this one — limiting the Barons to 31 percent shooting (14 of 45) from the field and causing them to turn the ball over 16 times.

"I told the kids (Friday) night that when it's over, let's not think about it and go on to the next step," Borchert said. "Kids are resilient — they can

'Skins, Miami push on with wild card wins in run for Super Bowl

Hey Philly! Take a hike, you're gone with 20-6 elimination by Washington

AP Football Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Give Mark Rypien, Earnest Byner and a defense that shut down Randall Cunningham credit for Washington's 20-6 victory over Philadelphia on Saturday, moving the Redskins into the quarterfinals of the Super Bowl Sweepstakes.

But give as much credit to George Sladky, the replay official who made perhaps the most crucial call in the five years the NFL has used instant replay.

Rypien threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Art Monk and a 3-yarder to Gary Clark, and passed for 206 yards. Byner rushed for 44 yards and caught seven passes. And rookie Andre Collins led a defense that sacked Cunningham five times and even drove him from the game for a series in the third quarter in favor of Jim McMahon. Collins had 1½ sacks and a fumble recovery, and Tim Johnson had two sacks.

But the turning point was provided by Sladky with Washington leading 7-6 and 48 seconds left in the first half. It resulted in a 10-point swing.

From the Philadelphia 17, Rypien hit Byner in the flat, and he took it to the 6, where he was hit by Ben Smith and apparently fumbled. Smith then picked it up and took the ball back 89 yards for what officials on the field ruled was a touchdown.

But Sladky ruled that the ball came out when Byner hit the ground, and Washington got the ball back. The Eagles held, but Chip Lohmiller's 20-yard field goal gave Washington a 10-6 halftime lead and the momentum. Had Smith's return stood, the Eagles would have led 13-7.

"We had a good end zone television shot that clearly showed that he was contacted and came down with control and the ground caused the fumble," Sladky said.

The loss marked the third straight season the Eagles have lost their first playoff game and may have put coach Buddy Ryan's job in jeopardy. It also was the Eagles' ninth loss in 12 games to Washington, although the teams split this season.

The victory put the Redskins (11-6) into the NFC semifinals next week against either the New York Giants or San Francisco 49ers. Washington has lost six straight to New York, including two this year, and also lost in San Francisco this year.

The Eagles had all the early opportunities but could get only two field goals. And it coast them.

A 66-yard pass from Cunningham to Keith Jackson gave the Eagles a first down at the Washington 11. But Cunningham, who hit 15 of 29 passes for 205 yards and ran for another 80 yards, slipped on third down and the Eagles settled for Roger Ruzek's 37-yard field goal.

Then, early in the second period, Wes Hopkins recovered a Gerald Riggs fumble at the Washington 26.

But even a third-down holding call against Martin Mayhew of the Redskins couldn't get Philadelphia into the end zone.

NFL's 'brand new season' resumes today

Forget that New Orleans won four of its last six games. Chicago's three losses in its last four games mean nothing.

"Momentum doesn't have anything to do with it," Saints Coach Jim Mora said. "The playoffs are a brand new season."

The brand new season began Saturday with a pair of wild card games, and today the Saints meet the Bears at Chicago, and the Houston Oilers play at Cincinnati.

A look at today's games:

■ Saints at Bears: The Chicago-New Orleans game matches two defensive teams that have had trouble scoring points with their run-oriented offenses.

Mike Tomczak, subbing for the injured Jim Harbaugh, will guide Chicago, while Steve Walsh, acquired early in the season from the Dallas Cowboys, has stepped into the Saints' starting job.

"If we have to throw, we will throw," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said. "Mike has thrown well in the past."

The Saints (8-8) rely heavily on the running of Reuben Mayes and 260-pound Craig "Ironhead" Heyward. Neal Anderson posted his third

Dolphins deny Kansas City, 17-16, on two fourth-quarter touchdowns

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Because Nick Lowery's last-minute field goal attempt was just short, the Miami Dolphins' fourth-quarter rally was just enough.

A 52-yard try by Kansas City's All-Pro kicker fell a yard shy of the crossbar with 49 seconds left, allowing Miami to escape with a 17-16 win in Saturday's wild wild-card playoff game. The miss ended Lowery's streak of 24 consecutive field goals, including three earlier in the game.

"I think I hit it pretty well, but I wouldn't give it an A-plus," Lowery said. "The only thing I'd do differently is I'd run out to the 50 and try and convince myself the kick wasn't as far as it really was."

The Dolphins, who came back from fourth-quarter deficits to win three times during the regular season, mounted touchdown drives of 66 and 85 yards after falling behind 16-3 late in the third quarter. They took the lead with 3:28 left on Dan Marino's 12-yard touchdown pass to Mark Clayton.

"We all pulled together on offense," Clayton said. "We just said, 'Let's do it. There's no tomorrow.'"

"What a great feeling," said Coach Don Shula, whose club is in the playoffs for the first time in five seasons. "I'm very proud of the way this team came back."

Kansas City went home still without a postseason win since the 1969 Chiefs won the Super Bowl.

"We're disappointed as hell, but we're proud," Coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "We're frustrated because we didn't achieve the things we wanted to do, which was win a championship. We're going to hold our heads up and build from here."

Miami's second-round opponent will be determined by today's Houston-Cincinnati game. If the host Bengals win, the Dolphins will play Saturday at 9:30 p.m. PST at AFC East champion Buffalo. If Houston wins, the Dolphins will play Sunday at 1 p.m. against the AFC West champion Raiders in Los Angeles.

Miami's only score in the first three quarters came on Pete Stoyanvovich's 58-yard field goal, the longest in NFL playoff history. The Dolphins could not penetrate inside Kansas City's 39-yard line until they mounted a 10-play march capped by Marino's 1-yard touchdown pass to Tony Paige with 12:18 left.

A fourth-and-2 conversion — on Sammie Smith's 2-yard run to the Chiefs' 43 — kept that drive alive.

On the ensuing 11-play march, which began at the 15 with 10:39 left, the Dolphins converted three third-down situations. The touchdown came when cornerback Albert Lewis tried for an interception along the sideline and missed both the ball and Clayton, who made the catch at the 6 and stumbled into the end zone.

"He was going to make a play on the ball," Clayton said. "This game is a game of inches, and he was just one inch too short."

"I was committed to going for the interception," Lewis said.

After Miami went ahead, Kansas City moved quickly into Dolphins' territory. Christian Okoye carried for 12 yards to the 14, but a holding penalty on guard David Szott moved the ball back to the 37.

On fourth down, Lowery took the field. The longest of his 37 field goals this season was 45 yards, and this try was dead on but just short.

Clippers' skid hits six, 111-103

J.R. Reid scored 25 points and converted a crucial three-point play with 31 seconds left Saturday night as the Charlotte Hornets handed the visiting Los Angeles Clippers their sixth consecutive loss, 111-103.

It was only the Hornets' second win in 14 games.

The Clippers are one of only two teams the Hornets have winning records against in their three-year history. Charlotte is 5-2 against the Clippers.

With the Hornets clinging to a 104-102 lead, Reid scored on a short jumper in the lane and was fouled by Danny Manning. Reid then made the free throw for a 107-102 Charlotte advantage.

Johnny Newman and Rex Chapman each scored 22 points for Charlotte. Muggsy Bogues added 13 points, 15 assists and seven rebounds.

Elsewhere in the NBA Saturday:

■ Bucks 88, Suns 86: Frank Brickowski scored 24 points and Milwaukee rallied in the fourth quarter to stay unbeaten at home. The win was the 300th in the NBA for Coach Del Harris, who has led the Bucks to a 17-0 record at home.

■ Pistons 99, Nets 83: Reserve Mark Aguirre scored 25 points and Chuck Daly coached his 400th NBA victory as Detroit won its sixth straight. It was the sixth straight loss for the visiting Nets, who led by 14 points in the second quarter.

■ Trail Blazers 132, Heat 108: Cliff Robinson, starting in place of the injured Jerome Kersey, matched his season high with 20 points. The Trail Blazers, who lost their previous home game to the Lakers on Thursday, improved their homecourt record to 16-2. Miami is 3-14 on the road.

■ Jazz 106, Kings 98: Karl Malone scored 26 points as visiting Utah extended its winning streak to five games. Theodore Edwards scored 20 points and John Stockton added 19 and 19 assists. Wayman Tisdale led Sacramento with 22 points as the Kings lost their seventh game in the last eight.

■ Bulls 108, Cavaliers 92: In Chicago, Michael Jordan scored 30 points and B.J. Armstrong came off the bench with a season-high 18 as Cleveland suffered its seventh straight defeat. The loss also was the Cavaliers' 13th in the last 14 games.

■ Rockets 112, Pacers 99: Otis Thorpe took up the slack for the injured Akeem Olajuwon with 29 points and 13 rebounds, leading Houston to the win at home. Kenny Smith added 22 points for the Rockets, who will play without Olajuwon for at least a month with a fractured eye orbit. Indiana guard Vern Fleming also did not play after being disciplined for showing up only 45 minutes prior to game time.

■ Hawks 117, Timberwolves 112: John Battle scored five of his 27 points in overtime as Atlanta extended its winning streak to six. It was the Hawks' ninth consecutive victory at home and Minnesota's eighth straight setback on the road.

■ Spurs 107, Magic 90: Willie Anderson scored 27 points and host Orlando was held without a field goal in the final eight minutes.

■ 76ers 120, Nuggets 104: Charles Barkley scored 41 points, 11 of them during a 19-4 run in the first period that lifted Philadelphia to the road win.

Washington's Earnest Byner loses ball after catching pass Saturday. Later during play, Philadelphia's Ben Smith (background) picked up ball and ran it back for apparent score, but replay officials ruled ball lost on contact with ground and overruled touchdown.

Replay rescues Byner when he needed it

PHILADELPHIA — This time, Earnest Byner was rescued by the replay.

He had seen it before in an otherwise distinguished NFL career — a ball coming out of his arms into the hands of an opponent in a crucial situation.

But now, he was saved by a replay official named George Sladky. So were the Washington Redskins, who used the momentum from perhaps the most crucial call in the five-year history of instant replay to beat Philadelphia 20-6 and advance in the NFL playoffs.

There were 48 seconds left in the first half when Byner caught a pass from Mark Rypien and took it from the Philadelphia 17 to the 6, where he was hit by Ben Smith. The ball came loose, and Smith picked, returning it 89 yards for a touchdown that would have put Philadelphia ahead 13-7.

Referee Gene Barth announced: "The officials on the field ruled it a touchdown. The play is being reviewed."

It was. It was replayed on the message board several times while fans cheered and hooted alternately and 44 players watched, among them defensive linemen Charles Mann of Washington and Mike Golic of Philadelphia.

What were they talking about?

"We both live in Orlando," Mann said. "We talked about getting together to play golf after the season."

Sladky, meanwhile, wasn't interested in golf, only in the slow motion on the screens in front of him.

He watched from one angle and he couldn't tell.

Then, he saw another angle, and he knew.

No touchdown, Washington ball at the 6.

"We had a good end zone television shot that clearly showed that he was contacted and came down with control and that the ground caused the fumble," Sladky said.

Kite charges to two-shot lead at T of C

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

CARLSBAD — It's more than a new season for Tom Kite; more like a new beginning.

"Last year was a bit of a dud for me," said Kite, who finished out of golf's top-10 money-winners for the first time in five years and the second in 10.

Kite, 41, made up three strokes on leader Lanny Wadkins in eight holes and pulled away to a two-shot lead Saturday after three rounds of the Tournament of Champions, the first event on the PGA Tour season.

"This is almost like starting over again. I'm very excited about this year," he said. "You know how excited you are when you find something new.""

The "something new" is the return of his short game, the deft touch on and around the greens that has been the hallmark of a career that has made him golf's all-time leading money-winner.

"I didn't have it last year," he said. "Now it's back. I'm really excited about this year, no matter what happens tomorrow.

"No matter what happens tomorrow — even if I shoot 95 and I don't expect that to happen — I'm expecting a very good year."

That's attributable to a shorter, more compact and more powerful swing and a return to the unorthodox but efficient cross-handed putting style.

"I'm staying with the cross-hand," Kite said. "I'm convinced it's the right thing for me. I won't be shifting back and forth like I did last year."

With his left hand below his right on the putter, Kite had to make only one important putt, a 4-footer on the 16th, to avoid making a bogey this the cool cloudy day.

"It's kind of fun to have a round with no bogeys this early in the year," Kite said after a 4-under-par 68, his third consecutive effort in the 60's.

He completed three rounds at 203, 13 under par on the chilly, foggy La Costa course.

Wadkins, also 41 and the leader through the first 36 holes, made only one birdie in the third round and slipped to a 73 that left him at 205.

"The story of my day was that I just didn't make any of the putts I'd been making," said Wadkins, who missed a half-dozen times from 12 feet or less. "I had my chances but they just didn't go in."

Wadkins was tied at 11 under par, with Fred Couples. Couples, called "Boom Boom" by his fellow pros, closed up with a 67.

U.S. poloists rout Canada

PERTH, Australia — The U.S. men's water polo team routed Canada, 11-5, on the first day of competition at the VI World Championships here Saturday to begin a quest for one of six berths in the 1992 Olympics.

David Imbernino out of Newport Beach, Charlie Harris and Chris Humbert scored two goals apiece to lead the way for the U.S., which met France, a 9-4 loser to Australia on Saturday, earlier today at the Superdrome complex. The U.S. took a 3-0 first quarter lead and never trailed.

Craig Klass added a goal, two assists and impressive defensive play for the U.S, while two-time Olympian Terry Schroeder and UCI product Mike Evans also scored once.

Chaplain defends 'Canes

While the Miami Hurricanes' "bad boy" antics have drawn harsh criticism from the news media, fans and even their own coach, the team chaplain has risen to defend players he says are misunderstood.

"A good percentage of the team is black. They have a way of expressing their values, personalities and culture that a good part of society does not approve of," said the Rev. Leo Armbrust, a Roman Catholic priest.

"Why should it be a surprise to sportswriters that Miami could act in a way that seems taunting, aggressive, civilly offensive? Some people stand in support of 2 Live Crew because of the First Amendment rights and the freedom of expression. You can't defend it on one hand and criticize it on another."

Miami's 46-3 victory over Texas in the Cotton Bowl was overshadowed by their 202 yards in penalties, including nine calls for unsportsmanlike conduct or personal fouls.

Newspaper and television commentaries condemned the behavior of the players, particularly a taunting group dance at the end of the game.

In other sports news Saturday:

■ Rams quarterback coach Dick Coury appears likely to be named head coach of the new Orlando Thunder in the World League of American Football, The Orlando Sentinel reported today. Rams sources said that barring unexpected overtures from other NFL teams, Coury, a veteran of spring football leagues, will command the Thunder's staff.

■ Michael Stich of Germany rallied twice in the second set to upset No. 2 seed Jim Courier of the United States, 6-4, 7-6 (8-6), and reach the final of the Australian Hardcourt tennis championships in Adelaide. In today's final, Stich wil face Niclas Kulti of Sweden. Kulti, 19, defeated his compatriot and doubles partner Magnus Larsson, 7-5, 6-4, in the other semifinal.

straight 1,000-yard rushing season for Chicago (11-5).

The Bears, who won the NFC Central, didn't make the playoffs last year, their only miss in seven seasons, and are 1-3 in bowl games since winning the Super Bowl five years ago. The Saints, a wild-card team, made the playoffs once before, in 1987, and were eliminated in the first round by Minnesota, 44-10.

■ Oilers at Bengals: The Oilers (9-7) are another playoff team without their regular quarterback. Cody Carlson, however threw for a career-high three touchdowns as Houston won a wild-card playoff berth with a 34-14 victory over Pittsburgh on the final Sunday of the regular season.

It was against the Bengals a week earlier that Warren Moon, the Oilers regular quarterback, dislocated a thumb. James Brooks rushed for 201 yards and helped Cincinnati (9-7) win 40-20 en route to its AFC Central title.

The Oilers remember that game only too well, and they're determined not to let Brooks run amok again.

"We have a lot of pride, and we were very embarrassed by what he did," defensive lineman Ezra Johnson said. "I think it's safe to say you won't see that guy running through our defense like that again."

Mater Dei blanks Servite in soccer

ANAHEIM — Chris Campbell and Luis Cevallos scored goals to lead the Mater Dei High boys soccer team to a 2-0 victory over host Servite in an Angelus League opener Saturday.

Goalie Tom Evans stopped four shots for his fifth shutout of the season as Mater Dei improved to 11-3 with the Monarchs' 18th straight Angelus League win over Servite.

Campbell scored midway through the first half when his shot deflected off an opposing player and Cevallos made it 2-0 with seven minutes left in the game off Joe Ney's assist.

■ Why hasn't Lou Holtz bailed out at Notre Dame to become coach of the Minnesota Vikings? That's easy. His guy still doesn't have control of the team. Odds now favor Jerry Burns to remain one more season.

■ Why would anyone deliberately ski jump?

■ Please go away, Bud Bowl.

■ Tom Lasorda spent New Year's Eve at the Riviera in Las Vegas watchng Frank Sinatra and Pia Zadora sing. So did Vin Scully, Joe Ferguson, and others. Tommy doesn't travel without entourage.

■ Who will hire Howard Schnellenberger next?

■ Belated congratulations to jockey Gary Stevens, who rode horses earning only $13.8 million during 1990.

■ Is bowling still on TV? Oh.

■ Yes, I was surprised when the Lakers won the other night at Portland but I didn't think they'd win the next night at Golden State, which they didn't. Traveling life in the NBA doesn't let anybody get over-confident.

■ Those who perpetuated all the talk about George Allen's death being connected to a dousing celebration after Long Beach State's final game did a terrible, unthinking disservice to a group of young men.

■ Are they serious about playing another Pro Bowl this year?

■ If you like the Buffalo Bills, you'll like them more after this news: Jim Kelly will be back at QB if the Bills reach the AFC championship game.

■ Bye bye, Buddy Ryan.

Marina overcomes late deficit to win in OT, 59-57

HUNTINGTON BEACH — Westminster High led the entire way, including a seven-point edge with two minutes left in regulation, but Marina prevailed, 59-57, on a Darren Crooks layin with one minute left in overtime in a Sunset League boys basketball game Saturday at the Vikings' gym.

Marina, playing without All-American center Cherokee Parks (out with a sprained ankle), erased the seven-point deficit down the stretch with the help of five Westminster turnovers.

Sean Haselrig scored 13 of his team-high 15 points after halftime, and Brant Shelor tallied seven of his nine points after the break, including his team's first overtime bucket, which tied it at 57.

Westminster (4-9, 0-1), which was led by Jesse Gomez's 24 points, had a pair of chances to tie in the final moment, but both shot attempts failed.

Senior Dennis Winners, filling in for Parks, contributed 10 points to the victory.

Marina (7-8, 1-1) will get a bye Wednesday and is expected to have Parks back for Friday's game with Ocean View.

Artists tune up, 97-63

MOORPARK — The Laguna Beach High boys basketball team drilled host Moorpark, 97-63, Saturday in the Artists' final non-league tuneup.

Laguna's Josh Barella led the way with a game-high 32 points, while Tom Ravensburg drained five of the team's season-high 11 3-pointers to finish with 27.

Darren Gravley was right behind with 25 points as the Artists (9-6) earned their third straight victory by forcing the tempo with fullcourt pressure.

Ravensburg missed only two shots from beyond the 3-point arc, drilling 10 of 16 overall from the field.

Sea Kings Doug Hesse (44), Jon Upham (21) control the issue against Estancia's Mike Susson (22), Paul McDaniels (21) Saturday night.

CDM

From B1

"This was important to us," said Orris. "It's not just beating Estancia. We've been playing a tough schedule and the kids have been wondering if we're ever going to beat a good team."

The Sea Kings, now 7-9, got a 24-point performance from Jon Upham, 12 from Doug Hesse, a pair of treys within eight points from Jason Clark and six big counters from Dave Olsen, coming off the bench while fighting off the flu, as well as the Eagles.

Estancia appeared to be in a position to take control in the early going of the fourth quarter, paring the deficit to 41-40 with 5:00 left, but Olsen dropped one in from 10 feet, then Estancia's Paul McDaniels slipped and went down, turning his ankle. The ankle was OK, but the turnover was critical.

Upham followed that up with a bucket to push it to 45-40, then Clark came up with the defensive play of the night, stealing the ball and cashing in with a pair at the line to expand the lead to 47-40 with 1:07 left.

Matt Fuerbringer was Estancia's only double-digit scorer with 14 points. Son Ly, who scored 25 against CdM in the blowout at Laguna Beach, scored just five points — a trey coming at the buzzer.

"He (Ly) just killed us the first time," recalled Orris. "We just tried to force him to beat us from outside and tried to keep him from getting a running start."

The Sea Kings never did let Estancia get that running start, forcing a half-court game and controlling the tempo throughout.

"We were just really well-prepared going into this one," admitted Orris. "It was one of our better practices of the year. At this point it's pretty hard for either of us to fool the other very often. We just went over everything and did some things to make it a little harder for them."

Clearly the Sea Kings were waiting for the Estancia invasion after the early-December lacing.

Tim O'Brien's Eagles, however, came into the game at full strength for the first time this season, and with McDaniels, Fuerbringer, Ly, Mike Haas and Torrey Hammond in the starting lineup, who could blame any Eagle for feeling overconfident?

If that was the case, however, it didn't take long to become acquainted with reality. Clark opened with a trey and his second 3-point bomb with 4:11 left in the first quarter gave Corona a 12-2 lead.

It was a balanced effort by the Sea Kings through the first two periods, then Upham took charge in the third and fourth quarters, getting 15 of his 24 in the second half.

"He (Upham) has a tremendous legacy to live up to at the left forward spot," said Orris. "But when he plays within himself ..."

Orris didn't finish the statement. He just smiled. He had a lot to smile about Saturday night.

Fountain Valley tops Edison; Ocean View, Marina breeze

In the topsy-turvy world of Sunset League girls basketball, it's Fountain Valley High which has taken the early advantage.

The Barons (10-6, 2-0) won their second straight league decision in an enemy gym Saturday night, downing Edison, 49-40, to move into a tie for the Sunset lead with Marina.

The Chargers (11-5, 1-1) were coming off an impressive 63-51 victory at Huntington Beach on Thursday, while the Barons defeated Ocean View.

The game was decided in the third quarter when Fountain Valley limited the Chargers to just two points while expanding a four-point halftime lead to 20 entering the fourth quarter.

Despite a 20-9 edge in the final period, the Chargers could not seriously threaten down the stretch.

In other Sunset League games:

■ Ocean View 48, Santa Ana 22: The Seahawks broke open a 19-12 halftime edge by outscoring the host Saints, 19-5, en route to evening their Sunset League record at 1-1.

Kristen McCluskey scored seven of her eight points in the second-quarter spurt, while Tricia Lindquist (10 points) and Nikki Vivion (nine) led the winners, 9-6 overall.

Bridget Petersen added five points off the bench as all 10 Ocean View players played. Santa Ana fell to 5-6 overall, 0-2 in league.

■ Marina 84, Westminster 39: Leslie Ono scored 10 of her game-high 18 points in the first quarter to help stake the Vikings (11-4, 2-0) to a 30-7 lead after one period. Ono also recorded six assists.

Amy Periolat added 14 points, Colleen Hatch 12 and Gillian Bean 10 for the Vikings.

bounce back. They forgot Friday night and came back tonight."

Led by forward Brandon Jessie, a 6-foot-5 junior, the Chargers scored 13 unanswered points and never flinched. Jessie's 3-pointer with 5:41 to play in the first gave Edison a 9-2 bulge, then John Khamis, Todd Smyser and point guard Todd Harrell scored on fast-break layups to make it 15-2.

Fanoga, a junior guard, contributed 10 points and four rebounds off the bench.

After the initial 15-3 spurt, the two teams traded baskets for a 36-22 Ocean View lead at the half.

The Saints (9-5, 1-1) mounted a brief charge midway through the third period, outscoring the Seahawks, 10-2 and 13-4 to come within 44-37 with 3:24 left in the quarter.

"It wasn't really a 20-point game," Santa Ana Coach Todd Morse said. "We made a couple runs, but they held us off. Then it got away from us a little when we had to gamble and press defensively at the end."

Costa Mesa's Pham wins at 112 pounds

By Richard Dunn
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA — Christmas goodies certainly had an effect on Minh Pham of Costa Mesa High, but the 112-pound senior had enough of an appetite to carve away his opponents Saturday at the Estancia High 40-team wrestling tournament.

Pham, the Pacific Coast League champion last season at 105, added a few extra pounds during the holidays and subsequently was forced to wrestle at 112.

He decisioned Gilbert Zavala of Quartz Hill, 3-2, in the 112 final after beating Schurr's Vinnie Ly by decision (4-3) in the semifinals.

"I'm pretty surprised with the win because I was supposed to wrestle at 103 in this tournament," said Pham, a three-year letterman and two-time CIF qualifier. "Over Christmas, I gained so much weight that I had to wrestle at 112. I was up to 120 when I came back from Christmas vacation, so I had to lose eight pounds just to wrestle at 112."

In a conservative match, Pham held a 3-1 lead with one minute left against Zavala, who had one scoring move before the two tied each other up in last 30 seconds.

Pham, 28-2 this season, won five matches in the tournament. It was also his fourth tournament championship this season — adding to his first-place finishes in the 112-weight at the Bolsa Grande 9-Way, the Magnolia 9-Way and the Corona del Mar 6-Way tournaments.

"I tried to control (Zavala) and hold him up," said Pham, last year's team MVP. "I did it with a lot of work, desire and God's help. I'll cut down to 103 for the league finals, though."

Senior John Valencia took third place for Costa Mesa in the 125-pound championship bracket. Valencia, 21-3, won the 125-weight at the Corona del Mar 6-Way.

GWC holds off Fullerton, 96-93

It was a game in which Golden West couldn't feel comfortable, but the Rustlers emerged with a 96-93 victory over Fullerton in Orange Empire Conference men's basketball Saturday night in Huntington Beach.

Golden West (10-10, 2-0) was never really able to put the Hornets (11-9, 0-2) completely away as the Rustlers' largest cushion of the night was seven points (43-36). Golden West scored five straight points to open a 77-71 advantage and, for the most part, traded baskets with Fullerton the rest of the game.

Tom Dever came off the bench to share team scoring honors with Jason Vaughan with 18 points apiece. Ric Van Scoyoc sparked the Rustlers by notching all 14 of his points in the second half.

In a non-conference men's game:

■ Cerritos 81, Orange Coast 57: The host Falcons sprinted out to early leads of 15-4 and 22-8 in the early going of the non-conference matchup as the Pirates continued their habit of slow starts.

Orange Coast (9-9) did not get its first field goal until nearly five minutes of the game had elapsed, and finished just 20 of 70 from the floor against the state's 12th-ranked team.

Brian Spratt combined 15 points with eight rebounds, while Agustin Heredia had nine points and eight assists.

In college women's games:

■ Hawaii 67, UCI 55: In a late Friday night Big West Conference game in Hawaii, the Rainbow Wahines (7-2, 2-0) held off the Anteaters, who trailed 35-31 at the half. UCI's junior Kathy Lizarraga scored 23 points and sophomore Yvonne Catala added 16 points and six rebounds. UCI fell to 2-9 overall, 0-2 in conference.

■ SoCal College 60, Whittier 39: Suzanne Bakos, who was later named all-tournament, scored 10 points and had six rebounds as the Vanguards (6-7) earned consolation honors at the Poet Classic.

SoCal College's final tuneup for conference a success, 97-84

By Jon Ferguson
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

COSTA MESA — While the game wasn't a work of art overall, Southern California College Coach Bill Reynolds saw several developments he liked in the Vanguards' final Golden State Athletic Conference tuneup Saturday night at The Pit.

As for the score, SCC built a 20-point lead in the first half against Bethel College of Mishiwaka, Ind., and then held on for a 97-84 non-conference victory. SCC improved to 13-2 entering conference, while Bethel fell to 8-5.

As for the individuals, start with Elbert Davis, a 5-foot-11 senior guard who prepped at Santiago High and played two years at Golden West. A year ago, Davis, recruited as a point guard, played both guard positions for the Vanguards.

This season, he's settled in at off guard and is providing scoring beyond Reynolds' expectations. He had 23 points Saturday on 10-for-15 shooting and is the third leading scorer on the team.

"I think people underestimated his shooting ability," Reynolds said. "We did. He can nail that 12- to 15-foot jumper. He doesn't force any perimeter shots and goes to the basket well. That's a good combination. He's given us a big lift in that area."

He was also played a typically impressive defensive game (three steals), leading the Vanguards' pressure on the perimeter along with forward Mike Henjum and point guard Ron Scipio (filling in for Jason Quinn, ankle sprain) when Bethel was in the half-court game. The Pilots had averaged 103 points.

"It's a tribute to their defense," Bethel Coach Mike Lightfoot said. "They play great perimeter defense, and we did not adjust at all. We panicked because of their defense. We did not do a good job at all of handling their pressure."

Also, Davis is showing his background as a point guard makes him a valuable asset at the off-guard.

"Elbert Davis played well all the way around," Reynolds said. "He was the stabilizer. He played point a little tonight ... As a whole, he played the best game he's played in a long time. He's been shooting well and playing defense, but ... his decision making has improved."

Mike West, who became eligible four games ago after transferring from Point Loma, scored 16 points and grabbed six rebounds as the team's sixth man. Overall in the second half, Reynolds was more pleased with the reserves play.

"The second string kids off the bench gave us a better lift that some of the starters," Reynolds said. "Mike West is so close to being a starter. When he gets in the flow, he may be a starter. It's a young team that's very aggressive, but when we slacked off a little bit, they came right back."

Henjum finished with 16 points and seven rebounds, while Aubrey Walton had 10 points and six rebounds off the bench.

Bethel, which shot 46 percent for the game, made eight of its nine 3-pointers in the second half, including the first three by Robby Prenkert (17 points) and the next four by Ron Chrobot (22 points) in pulling within 85-73 with 4:56 to play. But SCC scored seven of the next eight points, including five by West, to hold them off.

Bethel's 6-foot-3 center Dave Troyer scored 19 points inside on 6-7 SCC center Jeff Bickmore, pointing to a weakness in the Vanguard standout's game he needs to shore up, Reynolds said.

UCLA tops Louisville, now 12-1

LOS ANGELES — Don MacLean scored 18 of his 26 points in the first half and Darrick Martin fueled an 11-0 second-half run with five points Saturday as 10th-ranked UCLA beat Louisville 88-81.

Gerald Madkins scored all of his 11 points in the second half for the Bruins (12-1), off to their best start since the 1982-83 squad went 13-1. Mitchell Butler added 18 points.

Everick Sullivan scored 20 of his 27 points in the first half and LaBradford Smith added 19 as Louisville (5-4) lost its third straight game.

The Cardinals tied the score eight times and could have taken their first lead with 15:07 remaining. But Smith missed one of two free throws and UCLA ran off the next 11 points in a 4:22 span to snap a tie at 51 and restore its biggest lead with 10:16 left.

After Martin began the rally with two free throws, Shon Tarver hit a reverse layup and MacLean followed with a 10-footer. He then capped a fast break with an assist on Butler's slam dunk before Martin ended the rally by converting a driving layup into a three-point play.

No. 3 Syracuse handed first loss of season by Villanova

USIU player scores 72

LOS ANGELES — Kevin Bradshaw of U.S. International scored 72 points Saturday night to break Pete Maravich's NCAA Division I single-game scoring record, but Loyola Marymount set an NCAA team scoring record in defeating the Gulls, 186-140.

Bradshaw broke Maravich's record of 69 points set against Alabama on Feb. 7, 1970. Loyola Marymount broke its own single-game record set on Jan. 31, 1989, in a 181-150 victory against U.S. International.

With 1:27 left to play, Bradshaw made two free throws to tie and then break Maravich's record.

Then, with one minute left, Rahim Harris stole a pass and went in for a slam dunk that gave Loyola a 182-138 lead and the NCAA record.

Bradshaw played all 40 minutes, making 23 of 59 shots from the field, including 7 of 22 from the 3-point stripe, and 19 of 23 free throws. He also had 10 rebounds.

Bradshaw's previous career high was 54 on Dec. 7, 1989, in a 152-137 loss to the Lions. He also had 10 rebounds.

Acura Legend has undergone complete facelift for 1991

Damian Geddry

It was only five model years ago that Acura, Honda's upscale division, made its jump past the $20,000 point to compete where Japanese sedans had never strayed before.

Acura's Civic-derived Integra presented a competent and refined vehicle in its own right, but it was the "luxury and performance-oriented" Legend sedan and coupe that really caught the attention of the automotive press and, ultimately, the driving public.

The first Legend sedan was warmly received, but not as a Eurosedan or American-style luxury car. Instead, the Legend sedan was viewed more as the world's finest Buick — a comfortable and competent sedan with enough power and cornering ability to keep it from being boring.

Since the Legend's introduction in 1986, more than 250,000 U.S. drivers have found this combination to be just what their garage needed, and J.D. Power's Customer Satisfaction Index has placed Acura at the top of its list year after year.

So it may come as some surprise that Acura has gone ahead and completely redesigned the popular, successful, and by now profitable Legend sedan and coupe. And I mean completely redesigned. The 1991 Legend is no minor facelift of an existing car, as the entire vehicle is new.

The wheelbase has been stretched to a huge 114.6 inches, nearly half a foot longer than the original Legend. To put the new Legend's wheelbase in perspective, it is now longer than that of the Infiniti Q45, Lexus LS400 and even the full-sized Ford Country Squire station wagon.

And, although the wheelbase is expansive, the car isn't. Compared to last year's Legend, the 1991 version is just 4.3 inches longer and, thankfully, 2.4 inches wider. The Saab 9000, Audi 200, Cadillac Seville, Mercedes-Benz 300E and BMW 535i are all now relative peers to the new Legend.

Where the Acura compares most favorably to all of these cars, though, is in price, where its range of $26,000 to $33,000 between base sedan and top-line LS models resides.

Much of the Legend's longer wheelbase is needed for the most unusual feature of this new model — a longitudinally mounted 3.2-liter V-6 engine. Where most every manufacturer of front-wheel-drive cars places the engine sideways between the front wheels, Acura has chosen to align the engine front to rear.

Damian Geddry's automotive column appears in the Orange Coast Daily Pilot every Sunday.

There appears to be problems connected with the new year

Roy E. Gold

Just what can we expect from the new year? Unfortunately, we have some problems.

The dramatic decline in economic activity in the fourth quarter of 1990 can be expected to spill over to at least the first quarter of 1991. Consumer spending had been the dominant force in the strong economy of the '80s, and was the major factor that enabled us to avoid a down-turn for an unusually long period of time.

In prior commentaries I indicated that so long as employment remained strong, we would not have a recession. I stated that consumers had little disposable income, and would therefore not, voluntarily significantly reduce their consumption. The unbelievable costs associated with the savings and loan bail-out shook consumer confidence, nevertheless consumers went right on spending.

However, times have changed. The ability of the consumer to spend money has been devastated by recent events. Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and our response of boycotting Iraq sent energy costs soaring, the fear of recession has lead to major layoffs by businesses across the country; and the new taxes being imposed by state and federal governments is about to finish the job.

Regardless of their desires, consumers will no longer have the financial wherewithal and therefore will no longer be able to spend like they used to.

Domestic economic activity is now significantly lower. The question is what is going to change to enable us to recover after the economy has landed?

The Federal Reserve Board can be expected to continue to reduce short term interest rates in an attempt to expand credit in the domestic economy. However, except for the Federal Government itself, few are looking to borrow money at the present time.

In past down turns, renewed employment resulting from real estate construction and new home sales has been a major stimulus to get more money in the hands of the consumer. This worked because recent prior recessions were caused by restrictive monetary policies by the Fed and the resultant inability of the consumer to obtain mortgage loans. Since it was the Fed that turned off the spigot, it was easy for them to turn it back on whenever they wanted to stimulate the economy. This time the Fed had little to do with the economic downturn.

So long as both commercial and residential vacancy rates remain at near record levels, there is little incentive for developers to start new construction projects and even less likelihood that lenders will be anxious to loan money. This is particularly true when the prospects for such loans to be repaid remains doubtful at best.

If we look to another era for a clue to the type of stimulative activity that might be employed by the Federal Government during the '30s they started extensive public works projects. Such programs involved massive government spending. Given the current levels of the U.S. debt, that option really no longer exists. Any increases in taxes to fund new programs would only result in a further economic downturn, with even less tax revenues collected.

Our best hopes for recovery rests with increased economic activity by our trading partners. If they will increase their consumption of U.S. made goods, we could benefit from improvements in employment in this country. Unfortunately, so far as building new production facilities are concerned, existing laws and the current attitude of many members of the U.S. Congress will almost guarantee that any new plants will be built outside the borders of the United States. It makes no economic sense for American industry to do otherwise.

The outlook for inflation? Once the Persian gulf mess is resolved energy prices will definitely decline, bringing about several months of reduction in the consumer price index.

However, a major question will remain and that will be our trade situation. If our exports grow to the point where they exceed our imports, the dollar can be expected to increase in value or remain stable. In that case inflation should no longer be a concern.

If, on the other hand, we remain basically non-competitive in international markets, we will continue to have significant trade deficits, a weaker dollar, pervasive inflation and a continuing decline in our standard of living.

We can improve our trade picture if we become more competitive by reducing our unit costs through greater productivity. For that to happen we need motivation for our industries to make the necessary investments in productivity improvement. We currently lack that type of motivation.

Unless we come up with some creative solution to our problems, we might as well get used to living with less. Working out our monetary problems will take years. We may well become spectators rather than participants in one of the greatest growth decades in history.

ARCO has offshore drilling proposal

LONG BEACH — Atlantic Richfield Co. said it would scrap plans to drill for oil in the Santa Barbara Channel if it is allowed to increase production off the coast of Long Beach.

Representatives from Arco, the giant Los Angeles-based oil company, told state and city officials Friday the company would spend at least $100 million to improve diminishing wells at an existing Long Beach platform.

Housing slump cuts lumber prices

EUREKA — The recent housing slump in California has lowered lumber prices and caused Humboldt County timber companies to lay off employees and consider other cost-cutting measures.

Pacific Lumber Co. in Scotia announced Friday it was laying off 23 employees because of modernization at the company and the drop in demand for lumber. Other timber companies in the region are also taking steps to trim costs and brace for tough times.

"We've seen some of our operations contract because of the market conditions," said Shep Tucker, spokesman for Louisiana-Pacific Corp. The company has already laid off a few of its employees in Samoa, a small town near Eureka.

Tucker said the company is trying to make less painful cutbacks —

Northwest cuts fares in Midwest

By Dave Hage
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

Northwest Airlines has slashed fares to Chicago and seven other cities, mostly in the Midwest, Friday in response to a fare promotion by Chicago-based Midway Airlines.

The new Chicago fare is $138 round-trip, down from a recent low of $233. Other fares range from $138 to $198. The tickets are nonrefundable, require seven-day advance purchase and must be bought by Jan. 15 for use by Nov. 23. The trip also must include a Saturday overnight stay.

Northwest spokesman Doug Miller said the fare cuts were strictly a response to Midway's promotion and not a signal of fare wars.

Travel agents concurred, noting that January is a slow travel month when carriers typically try to boost traffic to selected cities.

"Travelers usually need a short period to catch their breath after the holidays, and that's when the carriers start selected promotions," said Art Dahl, president of Northwestern Travel Service.

He said the fare cuts have generated some interest but not a rush of traffic. Business travelers are deterred by the Saturday-night requirement while leisure travelers don't find the Midwestern destinations attractive in mid-winter.

According to a Minneapolis travel agency spokesman, the firm was seeing "a fair amount of activity." But the spokesman said many customers seemed to misunderstand the offer and were seeking bargain fares to California or other destinations not included in the offer.

United, American and Delta airlines responded Friday with some fare cuts in selected markets where they compete with Midway.

A general fare war is unlikely, but more skirmishes could break out if some of the nation's weaker carriers try to drum up winter business, according to Mike Hamilton, an airline analyst with the Leuthold Group, a Minneapolis investment firm.

"Right now the industry appears more rational than in the mid-'80s (when vicious fare wars broke out)," he said. "But if you get a big enough carrier that's pinched enough, you could see some nasty fare battles in particular markets in January and February."

Midway, Eastern, Pan American World Airways and TWA are on most analysts' lists of troubled carriers.

Magoon out as director of HAL

HONOLULU — John "Jack" Magoon has been forced to resign his seat on the board of directors of HAL Inc. because of a rule he introduced requiring board members to resign at age 75.

HAL Inc. is the parent company of Hawaiian Airlines, the company Magoon's name is synonymous with.

Magoon's involvement with the airline has been limited since he sold his majority ownership in the carrier to an investment group led by former baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Tom Talbot.

Magoon turned 75 Dec. 2, and resigned his board seat at the company's December meeting. He will remain with the board as chairman emeritus.

"I have all the privileges except I'm not a voting member of the board," Magoon said. He still holds preferred shares of HAL stock.

Arthur Thorstad of the Airline Pilot's Association, has been appointed to the 15-member board. He filled a vacancy created by the resignation of James Nordstrom in October.

The changes were included in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission concerning the recent agreement between Hawaiian Airlines and Northwest Airlines.

The deal provides Hawaiian with money, as well as marketing and operational resources from Northwest.

Alden's Carpeting named industry's Dealer of Year

Alden's Carpeting in Costa Mesa recently was named one of several Dealers of the Year in the industry.

Why the distinction? After 50 years in the business, owner Ted Alden Baloyan feels loyalty, continually expanding business and just "a lot of concern for the industry and the direction it's going" helped earn the store the honor.

Baloyan

Alden's has been serving the local area for 33 years, but carpeting has been the family business for nearly a century.

"My father and his father before him were in carpeting," says Baloyan, whose daughter Paula is continuing the tradition into a fourth generation. Alden's deals in the top name brands of carpeting and Baloyan takes a special pride in his installers' work.

"We've got letters of appreciation dating back to the '60s for our service," says Baloyan, pointing out a number of framed notes hanging throughout the store.

Things seem to be done the old-fashioned way at Alden's — thoroughly and in a personalized manner. Baloyan started a pinboard map of his completed jobs back in 1966 and each individual residence is marked with a color-coded pin up to the last five years, when he started running out of room on Lido Isle.

"We've got terrific repeat customers, including a number of second homes in other areas," he says. "We keep track of old floor plans so we can pull it out if they want to recarpet without going down to measure the interior."

Baloyan also keeps an entire file of index cards for each customer with essential information.

Many of Alden's employees have been with the company a number of years. Installer Ed Powers has been with Baloyan for 27 years, and even Baloyan's wife is involved managing the office from their home.

Alden's of Costa Mesa is located at 1663 Placentia Ave. For estimates call 646-4838.

Marshall Jewelers in Westcliff

J. Marshall Jewelers has recently opened its doors in Westcliff Plaza. Owner John Marshall, however, is no newcomer to the Newport Beach locale, having lived in town with his wife for the past 11 years.

"When Mary Barr moved, I felt this was a good location for a fine jewelry store," said Marshall, who is a sincere believer in the neighborhood.

"We feel that the '90s will be a period when people want to get more in touch with their neighborhoods," he added. "People will be avoiding malls and out-of-state based companies. They'd rather deal with their own neighbor, who is going to be there next week and next year."

Marshall

Marshall himself brings to the store a long history in the fine jewelry business, including six years with Cartier as its regional sales manager and three years with Piaget.

Marshall has been especially influenced by his years with Cartier, as evidenced by the many pieces of Gayfrerres of Paris, which manufactures some of the Cartier jewelry. Most notable are the leopards (a Cartier signature motif) found on bracelets, pendants and brooches.

The inventory also includes precious stones, pearls, gold, diving and Ebel, Cartier, Patek and Philippe watches.

Marshall also is planning to remodel the existing store after Valentine's Day.

"We do a brisk repair business," he says. "Christmas was off, but we feel that business is coming back."

J. Marshall & Co. is located at 1048 Irvine Blvd., Newport Beach. For further information, call the store at 548-5528.

Farmer's Market in Atrium Court

Michael and Kay Walker have reopened their Farmer's Market at Fashion Island's Atrium Court, announced marketing manager Richard Holmes.

"This is not your typical supermarket," said Holmes. "Our consumer lives within five to seven miles of Fashion Island."

Holmes

Holmes sees the market as transcending the stereotypical gourmet approach to eating. "We have lots of high-quality produce, meat and fish," he points out. "And the deli, as before, carries a large variety of salads.

"Out of 289 cereals, we'll carry 40 to 50 — all very high quality," Holmes said. We'll have the best of what's out there."

Farmer's Market, in essence, caters to the needs of a specialized clientele, according to Holmes, who credits the knowledgeable department managers. "We are more than your average store," he said.

"Throughout the United States, certain markets stand out," he added. "We went to New York and got ideas on trends on what a consumer wants in a new supermarket."

The Farmer's Market is located in the Atrium Court at Fashion Island, Newport Beach. Call 645-3424 for additional information.

Electric cars coming, but not soon

By E. Scott Reckard
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES — Electric-powered cars may be the answer to the nation's dependence on the Middle East, but don't hold your breath.

With batteries alone costing upwards of $10,000, they have a long way to go to become the automobiles for the masses.

Vivid proof of their feeble horsepower was demonstrated Friday when an electric-powered Chrysler minivan labored up a freeway ramp at barely 25 mph.

The van was one of several prototypes powered by electricity and methanol that were displayed at an auto show in Los Angeles, a city with the nation's smoggiest air.

The area also is the country's largest car market, where under anti-smog rules adopted last year, one in every 50 vehicles sold must produce zero emissions by 1998 and cars must become far less polluting.

The zero-emission rule is effectively a mandate for automakers to produce electric cars. The big U.S. companies already were working on them, but the regulation has tended to reinforce their efforts on the likeliest first use for such vehicles — van fleets for utilities, delivery services and the like.

Chrysler's electric TE Van, a prototype for a fleet of Southern California Edison service vehicles it hopes can hit the road in the middle of the decade, has a range of about 100 city miles and a top speed of 65 mph.

Among its problems are expensive nickel-iron batteries and the fact that like most electric vehicles it accelerates slowly uphill, as the steep ramp to the Santa Monica Freeway proved during a test-drive.

It's hoped the battery cost can be lowered with mass production. The acceleration problem may be tougher.

The vehicle already is "probably adequate" in a technical sense for use by delivery and utility fleets in cities, where stops are frequent and total daily mileage is relatively low, said Bob Davis, the chief Chrysler engineer on the project.

"Unless there's a breakthrough in this battery, though, it will probably be limited to that," Davis said.

Methanol and natural gas powered cars are already in limited use in Los Angeles, and oil companies such as Arco have had considerable success in developing less-polluting blends of gasoline.

On the electric car front, however, big problems remain for all the carmakers because of tradeoffs in cost, weight, power retention and charging characteristics of the batteries being developed.

Francois Castaing, Chrysler's chief of vehicle engineering, noted for example that installing 1,800 pounds of batteries in the company's minivans may cause them to fail crash tests. Will modifications be needed? "We just don't know."

Each maker is concentrating on a different battery, and each has different problems.

General Motors, for example, uses conventional lead-acid batteries in its experimental vans and the prototype Impact subcompact commuter car it unveiled here last year. While less expensive, those batteries are heavy and must be replaced every 15,000 to 20,000 miles.

Chrysler's nickel-iron batteries can last for 100,000 miles even if recharged every night, but may cost as much as $10,000, Castaing said. He said the company is studying ways to allow customers to lease the batteries or pay for them over the battery's life rather than all at once.

Knott's Berry Farm to close two days a week

BUENA PARK — Knott's Berry Farm will close two days a week for the next six weeks in the first cutback in operations in five years.

The announcement follows the park's decision last month to reduce prices 40 percent in a bid to boost attendance.

Company officials denied the shortened schedule was a consequence of the recession or a sign that daily admissions were flagging beyond the usual winter slowdown.

Spokesman Stuart Zanville said Knott's decided on the shortened schedule to allow maintenance and repair work that otherwise would have to be performed at night.

Both Knott's and Disneyland, in nearby Anaheim, operated on five-day schedules during slow periods until 1985, when both adopted seven-day schedules on a year-round basis.

The cutback comes at a time when most major California theme parks face leaner times. Although Knott's attendance figures for 1990 remained stable at about 5 million, Disneyland, Universal Studios Tour and Sea World all experienced a decline, according to Amusement Business Magazine.

Jim Wood

From Russia, with concern for new year

A holiday letter arrived Thursday from Svetlana Zubtsowa. She's the Soviet woman I met last year on an Aeroflot jetliner over southern Russia.

Right away she asked, "Jim, how are your columns in the Daily Pilot?" She wanted to know all about the Orange Coast, my wife Nikki and "who was that blonde next to you two in the recent photo?" (It was Martha Beauchamp of Corona del Mar.)

Then Svetlana discussed her remote fishing village on the Kamchatka Peninsula in eastern Russia. "It's winter and cold and very snowy at our place," she wrote.

Her descriptions of the holidays were touching in their variations. "We have a wonderful green fir New Year's tree decorated with bright and sparkling toys as if Grandpa Frost brought them."

Then Svetlana's tone turned grim: "Last year I sewed fancy dresses for my children — but this time it's impossible. There's no cloth of any kind."

"Indeed Jim," she continued, "the situation has changed greatly since my last letter." Svetlana and her husband Serge, the manager of a salmon hatchery, have three children. "For us simple people (converting to a market economy) means no food, no clothing and no cigarettes."

After describing the bureaucratic and bumbling rationing system that has "no meat or milk at all," Svetlana bravely said of her family: "We think we'll manage to survive this winter."

She credited hopes for existence on the past summer when she grew vegetables and "picked berries and mushrooms." Her husband, Svetlana wrote, "fished salmon, then salted it and we stored everything in our two basements."

Svetlana's holiday letter would have left me depressed and frustrated but for an amusing postscript. "P.S. Jim, can you send me a body building book by Arnold Schwarzenegger?"

The book is for number one son, Dina, age 15, "who wants to train his body." Svetlana goes on to say "all the boys his age are interested in this problem."

So, "Arnold's Bodybuilding for Boys" is on its way. As are women's magazines for Svetlana and a Field and Stream for Serge Zubtsowa.

It should also be noted that other Orange Coast families are corresponding with the Zubtsowa. Chris and Laurie Lairson who live in the Back Bay area have exchanged several "five and seven-page letters."

Terry and Sally Welch in Westcliff and Morris and Carol Nylander of Costa Mesa also correspond with the Zubtsowas of Chairusovo Village on the Kamchatka Peninsula. "And I've kept every letter Svetlana has sent," claims Carol Nylander.

Evidently the feeling is mutual. Svetlana's recent letter said: "Photos of my USA penfriends, the Lairsons, Welchs and Nylanders, are on my kitchen cupboard."

God Bless You Svetlana. We pray for you and your family.

Old World charm permeates Lido Isle

Editor's note: This is the second article of a six-part series on the people, the history and the lore of the islands of Newport Harbor.

By Paul Archipley

Lee Payne/Orange Coast Daily Pilot

Yachts line docks along Lido Isle's south bayfront. But lots priced at $1,800 went begging in the 1930s.

In the 1890s, an early Newport Beach settler often found herself stranded with the changing tide while playing on the grassy marsh that was to become Lido Isle.

The man who financed the dredge-and-fill operation in 1923 to create the present contours of the 114-acre island envisioned a major commercial wharf teeming with enterprise.

But during the post-World War II Cold War days when volunteers stood atop the Lido Isle community building tower and scanned the skies for Russian invaders, they were protecting an island community the oldtimers had never envisioned.

Among those who know their geography, the name "Lido Isle" conjures up the Old World charm and luxuriant style of the Italian resort of the same name that sits on the Adriatic at Venice.

That's the atmosphere the developers sought — and eventually achieved — when they struggled to sell lots for as little as $450 during the depth of the Great Depression.

Few of today's prospective home-buyers — eying prices from about $450,000 for a "fixer-upper" to $5 million for a bayfront home — know the island was just a windswept marsh in the bay a hundred years ago.

It wasn't long after Ramona Duarte Castle was born in 1888 that she and her brothers and sister would row out to play in "the big shapeless salt marsh that later became Lido Isle."

"Grass grew in the center, but at low tide the shoreline was alive with crabs and shellfish," she said 80 years later.

The children often lost track of the time and found their boat perched on the sand high above the receding tide.

"Because it was too heavy for us to drag back we would wait hours for the tide to come in again," Castle said.

But their mother rarely worried. She could see them easily across the empty sand and water from their home on the McFadden Wharf.

Newport Beach had grown little when a pair of community boosters persuaded oil man W.K. Parkinson to buy what was then called Pacific Electric Island for $45,000 in 1923.

He dreamed of building a major Southland wharf and spent $261,000 in a dredging operation that built up Lido Isle above the bay.

Parkinson never realized his plans and died in 1927.

But before he died, he took a $50,000 down payment on a $1.25 million sale of the island to William Clark Crittenden, a San Francisco promoter.

Crittenden then contracted with a group headed by John Elsbach to subdivide and sell the land for an envisioned real estate bonanza.

Sales dragged. Offers of inside lots for $450 and bayfront lots at $1,000 to $1,200 were too steep for most buyers.

The City Council OK'd a controversial public improvements project that, at $1.2 million, was the largest of its kind ever let in California.

The contract covered all the walks, curbs, street lights, water mains, sewer lines, pleasure piers and a then-unique underground wiring system for telephone and electric service.

Opponents of the contract turned out to be right when assessments against the lots drove prices out of reach.

Nevertheless, promoters forged ahead. Elsbach engaged a Swiss architect named Franz Herding who was familiar with the French and Italian Rivieras.

Streets were given European names, and houses were of Mediterranean architecture with tile roofs and walled patio gardens.

A high tower was built on the new clubhouse that would later be useful in the vigilant watch for communist invaders.

Despite heavy promotions, sales lagged. Finally, the man who would succeed in the stubborn sales of Lido Isle properties was hired in 1935.

Paul Palmer came aboard estimating he could sell some 800 available lots in five

Enrichment through music her life's goal

In the family room corner of the French chateau-inspired Newport Beach home of Laila Conlin nestles a shiny coal black concert piano, her Christmas gift from her husband Bill. She plays it every day.

We're not sure how she finds the time. Conlin is the founder and inspiration of the Opera Pacific Guild Alliance and leads or supports a dozen more music-oriented philanthropies.

Carol Humphreys

Carol Humphreys

"I like to stay busy," Conlin says of her enormous community involvement. (Plus she still has a teen-age son, Patrick, at home.)

Conlin confides she discovered the magic of music later than many people. "I grew up in a tiny town in Massachusetts and didn't have the exposure to the symphony and opera. It began when I was teaching school and found a library of classical records in the supply closet. I played them out of curiosity and fell in love with the sound."

Shauna Norfleet/Orange Coast Daily Pilot

Laila Conlin is among county women making a difference.

Upon moving to Orange County seven years ago, Conlin discovered Opera Pacific, joined the board of directors and eventually created the Guild Alliance, an opera support group so successful that it is being used as a model by other companies around the country.

Absence does make her heart grow fonder

Like thousands of colleagues from coast to coast, I spent part of the holidays grading exams. This is a tedious, time-consuming process, and, as yet, no one has come up with a way to correct and evaluate essays by computer.

Though I sometimes grumble, I confess that I enjoy grading papers the "old-fashioned" way — the optimist in me never gives up looking for hidden treasure. In this winter's batch, I came upon a priceless jewel.

For their final exam, I challenged my freshman composition students at Orange Coast College to write a research paper on the topic of their choice. Many of them were stunned. It sounded too simple. "On anything?" they asked in a wary tone. "On anything," I responded with a cagey smile. Finding a topic is easy; focusing and presenting it is another matter.

Imagine my surprise when I came upon "Love and Duty," a paper submitted by Meggann South, a student from Costa Mesa whose fiance, Malcolm Rutherford, is a seaman on the HMS Brazen, a British frigate stationed in the Persian Gulf.

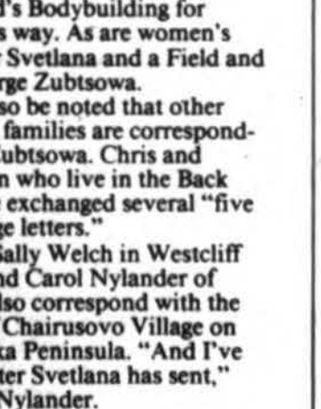

I was soon won over by her eloquently simple prose and masterful detail. With scholarly care, South gleaned a handful of passages from scores of letters written to her over the past five months to show how love can grow in even the most inauspicious conditions.

Her words reminded me of the romances and other wars, but they were personal and unique. When Iraq took over Kuwait on Aug. 2, South's "bonnie" visit with Malcolm and his family in Edinburgh, Scotland, turned into a nightmare: "Malcolm was scheduled to go to the Persian Gulf in October 1990 for routine exercises. I was scared by the news and worried about a potential war and Malcolm's safety." South's brief vacation ended, and Rutherford's ship was deployed early.

Throughout the paper, Rutherford's words are entwined with South's reflections. His reports on gunnery training and night firing exercises and chemical warfare attack and damage control are followed by her assessment of his ability to endure harsh conditions.

The Waterfront Hilton: A focal point of change

Stewart Woodard, A.I.A.

If someone told me years ago, when I surfed the pier at Huntington Beach, that the surfers of the '90s would look to the beach and see high-rise hotels, he would be accused of taking something stronger than a root beer.

Reviewing the Waterfront Hilton, a 12-story, 300-room hotel complex, costing more than $55 million, was a real challenge because it represents more than just a building's architecture. The whole debate of the redevelopment process is an article, in and of itself.

However, if one is to just look at the physical environment of the Waterfront, then a "thumbs up" vote should be given to the developer, the Robert Meyer Group and the architects, Wimberly Allison Tong & Goo, A.I.A., for a job well done.

The Waterfront Hilton is the first of four high-rise hotels to be part of the "Orange County Riviera." It provides an excellent standard for the entire revitalization of Huntington Beach. It's even more impressive to realize it was constructed in 15 months. (Usually it would take 20-24 months.)

Artist's rendering depicts oceanview courtyard.

The site certainly had its challenge. The proximity to Pacific Coast Highway, access to the hotel entrance, providing a "personal" scale to the overall complex and the selection of an architectural theme were just a few of the many issues that were successfully resolved.

Orange Coast wine cellar

John Stahler

Some think it's easy work serving wine for a living, waltzing around an elegant dining room in a tuxedo while sampling wine from a silver "tastevin" (test-a-van) — a most pleasant way to schmooz the evening away and make a good living to boot. A dirty job, but somebody has to do it, right?

Well, it is not entirely a bed of rose petals when you are a sommelier (sum-awl-yeah), an increasingly rare profession practiced only by a select few who have devoted themselves to the fine art of wine service. A bona fide professional sommelier (French for wine steward or cellarman) will be found only in a restaurant or hotel that has a substantial wine cellar, and is a position that requires an intimate knowledge of every wine on the list.

Tremendous expertise is necessary to properly perform this job, and an extensive knowledge of cuisine is an additional prerequisite in order to correctly match food with wines to maximize the gustatory pleasures. There is a great deal of skill involved in being able to second guess a customer's tastes and correctly anticipate what wine is desired.

A sommelier may also be in charge of actually writing the wine list, purchasing the wines and controlling the inventory budget. Managing an inventory that can run into six figures is an immense responsibility, one that is critical to the financial well being of the restaurant or hotel.

Due to the longevity of many wines and the need to cellar various wines before they are ready for consumption means that the effects of these purchasing decisions will have to be lived with for years — so the wine steward must be right and keep an eye on the bottom line as well.

This is a physically demanding job, like that of a waiter, chef or bartender, always on your toes with hardly a moment for a regular "break" that is the norm in other businesses. While sore feet and aching knees come with the territory, it is the emotional stress that really takes its toll.

Pulling lots of corks and sipping numerous fine vintage Bordeaux wines doesn't cause any heartache, but dealing with an endless number of varietal know-it-alls and vintage show-offs will.

Speaking from experience, (this was my job for many years before writing about wine became the primary focus) a glass of wine has never been accidentally spilled in the lap of an abusive miscreant by a sommelier who couldn't take it any more.

So, if you happen to encounter a chap who makes his (or her) living in this seemingly enviable position, enjoy your evening and take advantage of his knowledge and expertise — but not his good nature. SALUD!

CURRENT WINE PICK: Chansa Chardonnay, 1989. Produced and bottled in Temecula, this lovely gem is composed of grapes from two highly respected Santa Barbara County vineyards — Bien Nacido and Santa Maria Hills.

Entirely barrel fermented, the nose is toasty yet fresh and displays a light golden straw color. Medium bodied, it is well balanced and fairly rich on the palate with good fruit, slightly lemony overtones and an intense, lingering finish. Should retail in the $10/bottle range — a good value for the money.

Insensitive husband partner off, not on

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a wonderful man but he is very insensitive when it comes to being affectionate or sexual. Whenever he wants to "have a date," as he calls it, he insists that I wear a white full slip.

At first he said that was what his mother wore around the house. When I told him I didn't want him to think of me as his mother, he changed his story and said it was what Liz Taylor wore in "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof."

I wouldn't mind dressing up special now and then, or even often, but he insists on it EVERY TIME. I never wore a full slip before I met him and I don't like the way it looks or feels. Once I put on a peach camisole and a half slip that I felt pretty in, but he said it didn't turn him on. He insisted I put on that white slip, so I did and felt like a prostitute.

We've been married eight years and have two children. It's gotten to the point that I am getting very turned off because he is insensitive and demanding, and my needs are never met. He thinks there is nothing wrong with his "fetish," as he calls it, and that I should not be so stubborn. I have tried to talk with him several times about my feelings but it doesn't seem to make a nickel's worth of difference. He is 49 and I am 33.

What advice do you have for me? — D.H., HOUSTON, TEXAS

DEAR HOUSTON: If it were just the slip I'd say, "Go along with it, honey. It's nothing compared to what some men want in order to get turned on." But there's a whole other issue here. The key words are, "he's insensitive and demanding and my needs are never met." This is a lot more serious than the doggone slip.

You two need joint counseling. It's going to take a trained therapist to cement the cracks in your marriage and the sooner you go for help the better your chances.

In examining other passages, South deciphers Rutherford's own fears and concerns mixed in with words intended to comfort her.

"Sometimes Malcolm sends me little maps that I know are his way of bringing us together. I keep these maps on my poster board and use them to keep track of his location," South writes.

"From time to time, Malcolm includes the ship's newsletters. By doing this, he keeps me informed about his routine at sea and puts me in touch with the reality of his situation."

South includes excerpts from the ship's newsletter: "Morale is never here nor there, but don't worry about us as we're working hard, playing hard and keeping our heads down for five months..."

Other sections of the paper are more serious in tone: "Even though there is no war at the moment, there still are casualties," South writes in one part before giving this poignant example written by her fiance: "We are on patrol in the southern part of the gulf, we are looking for someone who fell overboard from one of the mine sweepers. It was hours ago. We don't think he will be alive, not after this long. Poor sod."

Amid reports of "chemical circuit training" and false alarms set off by the Brazen's radar pickup missiles being test-fired in Iraq, South reflects that Rutherford's words reveal "a cautious, patient man who can be trusted under pressure." Her conclusion, in my opinion, is similarly revealing:

"Although we can't control world events, we can keep in touch with each other ... our long-distance romance is not what we would choose, but we're making the best of it. I have a better understanding of him and his career — and as time goes by, I'm glad that I said 'yes!' "

Sometimes it seems there's not much hope left for this tired old world, but then love steps in and gives it one more spin. I gave South an "A" and resolved once again to continue grading papers the old-fashioned way. There are some things too precious to trust to a computer.

LIDO

years. It took him nearly 20.

Bill Feeney, a real estate agent with Waterfront Homes Inc. in Newport Beach that handles many of the sales on Lido Isle, said today inland houses start at about $450,000.

But those are the ones that generally need a lot of repair. Others are selling for more than a million dollars, Feeney said.

Feeney described Lido as "one of the few water-oriented communities that provide a family atmosphere."

The Lido Isle Community Association oversees all the community properties including tennis courts, the clubhouse, beachfronts, docks and parks.

Children can take tennis and sailing lessons and numerous community activities for all age groups are scheduled throughout the year.

Unlike those who live on the other big island in the harbor, Feeney noted that Lido residents enjoy their amenities without the crush of tourists.

And, except for a handful of duplexes, Lido boasts only single family homes. In general, the Mediterranean flavor

Jean Tandowsky, who with her husband, bought a bayfront lot for $13,500 in 1950, ranks near the top in senority among the current island residents.

"I've been here so long they think I came with the lease," she said.

The attraction that has kept her and others is the camaraderie.

"There's a geat feeling of loyalty and friendship on Lido," Tandowsky said. "It's like a little village."

But the absence of any businesses on the island saves residents from the inquiring visitors.

Two major design contributions that really make this a "solid" complex is the spearation of the "common areas" (i.e. restaurants, night club and over 14,000 square feet of conference rooms) from the tower structure. This allowed the Mediterranean architecture to be properly applied to the one- and two-story structures, yet at the same time, somewhat reduces the impact of the size of the adjacent tower.

The elevation (14 feet above the street) of the main pool level practically eliminates the sight (and sound) of the Pacific Coast Highway and provides a wonderful view of the beach and Catalina Island.

The only area that I have a concern with is the stone fountain at the lower lobby area and pool level. The stone work is just too overbearing and hard, which is just what they did not need for the interior of the main entrance. Other than that, the colors, fabrics, and paintings are very upbeat and reenforce the villa theme.

By "canting" the view walls at a 45-degree angle, each room has an ocean view. Because of this, the concept provides an interesting sun/shadow pattern that helps to overcome the potential office building look that is so prevalent in high-rise hotel structures. The tile roof and tower end-walls are poorly handled, as it's almost impossible to marry Mediterranean architecture in a high-rise. Yet overall, the tower design is well executed.

Huntington Beach is in its own renaissance and is establishing a very definite personality of its own. High density housing, mixed use developments and now high-rise hotels are all part of the grand plan to make this city a very special place. The Waterfront Hilton goes a long way to not only set the tone, but make a positive statement about the quality of this transition.

Stewart Woodard is a Newport Beach architect.

MUSIC

From C1

Currently the alliance boasts 750 members within 12 women's guilds offering various special interest involvement — from opera tours and seminars to gourmet dining, image enhancement, tennis and bridge. Last year the guild volunteers raised $225,000 for Opera Pacific. Conlin's new year's resolution is to see membership increase to 1,000.

"Opera is very expensive to put on," she says.

Indeed, but apparently Orange County has embraced the concept of its own opera company. Ably led by Dr. David DiChiera, the company operates in the black, is well subscribed and celebrates its fifth anniversary this year. "Madame Butterfly" opens its five performance run at the Orange County Performing Arts Center on Saturday.

Conlin believes that our culture is changing and more people than ever enjoy opera. Helpful, she feels, are productions like "Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables," which although marketed as musicals, were very operatic.

Of course, not everyone loves every opera. She recommends 'Butterfly" or "Carmen" or any "lighter" Puccini opera for beginners.

"Opera is the ultimate experience of human sounds," she proclaims. "And supertitles (or surtitles — English translations projected above the stage) have helped so much."

It could be this calm and tenatious lady was destined to discover opera.

"I'm the third in three generations of Laila's in my family. I don't know how it started. Laila is also the name of the goddess character in Bizet's opera 'The Pearl Fishers.' Could be someone from my background, from the 1850s was inspired by opera too."

North America Syndicate

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tom and Barbara try to salvage their marriage. Erica realizes that Bianca is devastated by the ending of Travis' and Erica's marriage. Hayley's hint that she is Adam's illegitimate daughter sends everyone reeling. Brooke rebuffs Adam's New Year's wishes. Skye and Will became engaged. Realizing how hurt Dixie will be by Brooke's being pregnant by Tad, Brooke decides not to reveal that Tad is the father. Jeremy assures Trevor that once he manages to bust up David's and Ceara's romance he plans to dump Ceara. While David is homebound with the flu, Jeremy and Ceara share feelings of passion. Charlie's family is displeased when he announces he has dropped out of medical school.

ANOTHER WORLD: Ryan confesses his undying love for Vicky, swearing that he will never cause her harm or betray her trust. Amanda realizes that her dream of Sam granting her forgiveness will never come true, especially after he shows up at the New Year's party with Olivia. Amanda and Iris make a New Year's resolution — no more men! Sharlene makes it clear to Grant that their life together is over. John and Sharlene enjoy bringing in the New Year. Paulina tries her best to comfort Grant over his break-up with Sharlene. Sharlene decides that it would be best for her own welfare if she stopped her therapy sessions with Taylor. Taylor is unable to convince Sharlene that she has a long way to go before she can lead a healthy, tension-free life. Marley's trial begins. Ryan is called to the stand and is asked to identify Marley. Marley and Jamie return to Bay City, ready to face the music. Although they know that there are obstacles ahead, Marley and Jamie vow to stick together. Vicky creates a scene in court, forcing the judge to announce a recess. Worried that Vicky might have disappeared, Marley goes to the court in Vicky's place! When the trial resumes, Vicky appears in court and comes face to face with her twin! Lucas ruins Dean's plan to get a slot on Felicia's talk show. Felicia tries everything in the book to get closer to Jenna whom she brought to Bay City. Matt is drawn to the mysterious Jenna.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Caleb comes to Lily's rescue and carries her away from her burning apartment. Holden is hurt when Caleb refuses to accept his gratitude. Holden goes after the man in the ski mask. Lucinda asks Connor to spend New Year's Eve with her. Connor is satisfied that all is going according to plan. Cal brings Lyla to John's New Year's Eve party. Kirk and Ellie arrive in Aruba for their weekend getaway. Tom covers his displeasure when he learns Lien is spending her last night in Oakdale with Duke at the cabin. Duke appears sullen as Lien says goodbye to her family and friends and heads for Rutgers. The young lovers promise that they will stay true to one another. Andy gets a job at WOAK. Kim assures Andy that he and his alcoholism are not to blame for her split with Bob. Holden gets nowhere in his attempts to make amends with Caleb. Tonio takes a peek at Sabrina's financial records and decides that he likes what he sees. Emily phones Susan, telling her that she is moving to Switzerland.

THE BOLD & THE BEAUTIFUL: Stephanie reminds Ridge that he can stop Brooke from marrying Eric. Ridge recalls Caroline encouraging him to get close to Brooke after she's gone. Eric promises Brooke the wedding of her dreams. Brooke insists that Ridge attend her and Eric's wedding. Ridge hangs up before he can tell Brooke whether or not he still loves her. Ridge stops by at Brooke's to wish her well. Ridge's and Brooke's goodbye peck turns into a passionate kiss. After Ridge leaves, Brooke starts to cry. As they both prepare for the wedding, Ridge and Brooke recall last night's kiss. Ridge arrives at Brooke's dressing room and asked if she's really ready to marry his father. When Brooke admits that she loves someone else, Ridge brings in a minister and asks her to marry him. Although she knows it's going to hurt Eric, Brooke agrees to marry Ridge! Felicia worries that she will never see Jake again if he confronts Ben. Jake agrees to postpone his trip to Madison for a few days. Helen remembers the old days, when Charlie was living with her and Ben. Helen still doesn't know whether to believe Jake or Ben. Bill watches as Margo tries to Eric that she never thought he would marry someone other than her. Bill nixes telling Margo that he heard her emotional outburst.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Adrienne questions Justin about his recent run-in with Emilio. The guests at Lawrence's New Year's Eve party realize that the party is a setup, just like Nick's murder was. Refusing to take part in the game, Emilio storms off. As midnight strikes, Carly and Bo find Emilio's body in the bushes. Roman, Bo, and Carly guess that Emilio died from a fall from the window. Roman suspects that Julie, Eve, Johnny or Justin could have killed Emilio. Brian tells Melissa that he was too late in proving that Emilio didn't kill Nick. Jennifer denies Jack's allegation that she lied to him about her assignment because she's avoiding him. Upset that he is a suspect in Emilio's murder, Justin considers accepting a job offer in Dallas. Lawrence vows to keep on searching for evidence on Nick's murderer. April makes love to Johnny after she vents her anger over Emilio's death. Unable to stand the distance between him and Jennifer, Jack demands that she tell him what's going on. As she pulls away from Jack's kiss, Jennifer slaps him and calls him a rapist! Whitney agrees to help Victor with his therapy.

GENERATIONS: To protect Ruth, Peter, and Sam from learning that Taylor shot Jordan, Kyle insists that they leave. Kyle begs Corelli to let him take the fall for Jordan's death. Disapproving of Peter's involvement in tracking down Taylor, Ruth admits how much he means to her. Adam agrees with Doreen's remark that Maya is too dependent on him. Vivian hides her discomfort as Henry questions her about the man she and Ruth claimed is Chantal's father. Peter tells Taylor that the bankbook is a fake. Peter tries to make a deal with Taylor — his life in exchange for half of the Swiss account. Taylor is finally arrested.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Robert, continuing to feel uneasy about Bobbi, talks to her about her dealings with Broxton. A still hospitalized Dawn is warmed by Decker's romantic visit. Scott continues to press Lucy about their baby and to reveal her plan to get big bucks out of the Quatermaines after the birth. Lucy refuses to yield on either. Unable to deal with the pressure around her, Cheryl collapses and is rushed to the hospital. Bobbie's strange behavior continues to push Tony towards Rita and to make Frisco further suspect that Bobbie is having an affair.

GUIDING LIGHT: Ignoring Harley's claim that her designs were stolen from Matt Weiss's office, Mindy insists that Harley sold out to their number one competitor. Mindy lets Matt have it when they are introduced by Vanessa. Matt backs out of the Towers deal with Billy following a fight with Mindy. Harley eagerly accepts Josh's marriage proposal. Dylan sets high hopes for his future with Sam after Sam informs him that she will soon regain the use of her legs. Alan-Michael informs Harley that Blake has finally agreed to end their marriage. Mallet and Frank face off over Mallet's announcement that he has taken over Rusty's shares of the private eye business. Frank isn't sure that he can work with someone as devious as Mallet.

LOVING: Rio gives Rocky his full support as she faces the disciplinary board at college for turning in a purchased term paper. As Trucker prepares for the lawsuit, Trisha pledges her love. Visiting Jim's grave, Shana swears she will not have let him or their son die in vain. Trisha's and Shana's relationship hits a snag when Shana refuses to defend Trucker. Carly and Ava continue to torch for Paul. Cabot decides to fake amnesia in order to spare his family further grief.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Hunter and Carlo strike up an alliance, as Carlo becomes involved with the movie. Tina fears Carlo would one day take away her baby. Bo continues to keep Alex from searching for her father. Troy and Sheila celebrate New Year's Eve at the Buchanan party.

Opening lead: ?

How do you know when to make a passive opening lead and when to choose an aggressive course? If the opponents have crept into a contract laboriously, they probably have little, if anything, to spare. That's the time to pull in your horns, lest an aggressive action cost you a trick. Let the opponents do their own work. But if the opponents have bid confidently to what you can assume is their right spot, failure to attack might result in watching your tricks vanish into thin air. Consider this hand from a team match.

At both tables North-South bid easily to the spade game via a Stayman sequence. Had South denied four cards in either major, North would have pressed on to game, offering partner a choice of hearts or no trump as the final contract.

At one table West chose the passive lead of the ten of hearts. Declarer won in dummy, cashed the king of diamonds, came to hand with the king of hearts and took two club discards on the ace and queen of diamonds. West captured the king of spades with the ace and shifted to a club. Declarer ruffed the second club in dummy, drew one more round of trumps, ruffed another club and then discarded a diamond on a high heart. Since declarer couldn't get off dummy without allowing West to score the ten of spades en passant, the contract just made.

At the other table, West decided to throw caution to the winds and opted to lead away from the king of clubs, with dramatic results. East took the ace and returned a low club to the king. After winning the third club with the queen, East persevered with a fourth round. Whether declarer ruffed high or low, careful play by West would net the defenders two trump tricks for down two—illustrating just how important the opening lead can be.

ASTROLOGY

With the Angelic Sydney Omarr | and the Devilish Patric Walker

Sunday, Jan. 6

Zodiacal Memory Lane: Aries natives not forgotten: Gloria Swanson, Harry Houdini, Bette Davis. Leo firebrand journalist whose words equalled major conflagrations: Westbrook Pegler. Taurus who was a credit to his race — the human race: Joe Louis. Capricorn whose middle name was controversy and who stood as a beacon for American literature: Henry Miller. Aquarian who insured that all of us would remember the color and aroma of a real red rose: Gertrude Stein. Do you remember?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New insights featured with regard to basic issues, dependents, employment. Sense of fitness is illuminated. Vigor returns, you'll make fresh start, there could be different love on horizon.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Collect facts, analyze them. Be aware of accounting procedures. Focus on family, reunion, gourmet dining, declaration of love by one who recently appeared indifferent. Capricorn involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You asked for more space, request granted. Emphasis on diversity, humor, ability to take charge of entertainment program. You'll be aware of apparel, weight, body image. Virgo represented.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be aware of statistics, records, references. Previous methods no longer apply. Accent versatility, intellectual curiosity. Barrier removed — path cleared for progress. Scorpio plays role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Information previously secret is made available. Focus on reading and writing, communication, ability to articulate feelings in dramatic, entertaining manner. Flirtation could become serious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Domestic adjustment requires awareness of design, location, color harmony. Music in your life tonight. Focus on drama, vocal techniques, necessity for being diplomatic. Taurus featured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obtain hint from Leo message. Accent discretion, glamour, intrigue, backstage maneuver. Clandestine arrangement works to your benefit. Define terms, steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes. Spiritual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spotlight on commercial activity, business, deadline, challenge, intensified relationship. Virgo native helps make many wishes become realities. Scenario features accomplishment, prestige, romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Individual high up says, "I didn't think you would make it, but you certainly proved me wrong!" Vision has wider range, ability to look beyond the immediate is emphasized. Libra involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be willing to make fresh start, to take risks based on faith in your own abilities. Spotlight also on communication, travel, long-range prospects. Be direct, take initiative, get to heart of matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Focus on intuitive intellect, investigative procedures, examination of unusual phenomena. Love relationship, recently scattered, will be realigned. Cancer native plays significant role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle highlights night of love and laughter. Focus on public approval, legal rights, marital status. Long distance call relates to social affair that might require journey. Good news by 8 p.m.

IF JAN. 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have unusual voice, sense of drama, appreciate art, music, luxury, can be self-indulgent to point of having sweet tooth. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons are attracted to you. Following minor setback you rebound in January, recover lost article and recoup financial loss. In February you will seriously consider journey, necessity for arriving at decision regarding love relationship. Your most significant months of 1991 will be August and September.

Sunday, Jan. 6

ARIES (March 21-April 20): This is certain to be an action-packed week and the winds of change now blowing at work can only strengthen your resolve to bring a difficult or frustrating chapter to a close. Unfortunately, however, the sun at the mid-heaven point of your solar chart is now overshadowed by Neptune and, therefore, much of what you gain in the way of financial benefits will be swallowed up paying your dues. No matter. At least you will have finally cracked the code and proved just how talented and accomplished you really are.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21): Taureans have a reputation for being practical, persevering and as stubborn as all-get-out, but, in fact, many of you are extremely shy, emotionally insecure and so sure that you are not going to get what you want that you don't even bother to ask. You simply turn off. However, this week's planetary aspects signify the time is right to ask for more — more respect, attention and understanding — but, above all, simply to be the individual you are and not the person others want or expect you to be.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21): Because the fiery planet Mars is now passing through one of the most sensitive areas of your solar chart, you may well decide that you can no longer tolerate someone's attitude or behavior and that a parting of the ways on the work front is the only solution. So on no account allow emotional conflicts to cloud your judgment or alter your decisions over financial or business affairs. You have worked too hard and sacrificed too much to settle for less than you deserve.

CANCER (June 22-July 23): Although aspects to the sun in your opposite sign of Capricorn do denote a time of strained relationships, you are not likely to concede defeat or take the line of least resistance this week. There is far too much at stake financially as well as personally and what takes place around the time of the solar eclipse on Jan. 15 will make you realize that you simply cannot afford to miss a trick, miss out or let partners or close companions off the hook.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23): It may be difficult to come to terms with enforced changes which affect your long-term security, and a decisive aspect between the sun and Neptune in that part of your solar chart related to professional interests really could upset your best-laid plans. However, one particular cycle or chapter in your career has come to an end and before you embark on another, certain harsh realities must be faced and accepted. Recall what took place approximately six months ago and you will discover exactly how, when and where this particular drama developed.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): Not all Virgoans are shy, timid, unassuming individuals, as certain rivals, competitors or detractors have discovered to their cost recently. Unfortunately, however, you could quite easily overstep the mark this week when dealing with emotional ties, attachments and financial affairs and be forced to reconsider your long-term position. True, there may well be a happy end to this saga, but only if you remain cool, calm and collected until after the solar eclipse on the 15th.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23): If you are absolutely determined to follow through with a plan or scheme that would drastically alter your home-life or domestic set-up, then you must also be prepared for some sharp exchanges and upsetting scenes this week. But maybe the time has really come to direct your thoughts and energies toward achieving personal or professional recognition and not, as in the past, be influenced by others' opinions or emotional outbursts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): The burning question is — How can you possibly stay put when personally or emotionally you are now being drawn in another direction? The answer seems to be this. Regardless of the cost or inconvenience, you must follow the dictates of your heart. You have all the strength and physical reserves you need to cope brilliantly with a major upheaval but, more than anything else, current planetary activity in Capricorn signifies you simply cannot renege on a promise or commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): The sun in Capricorn now overshadowed by the rather nebulous planet Neptune indicates that both personal and partnership money matters have reached a critical stage if not an all-time low. Consequently, steps must be taken to safeguard your long-term comfort and security. A similar situation arose during December. Then, however, you probably felt unequal to the task. But because enforced changes are currently taking place in your career or in the working pattern of your life, you really must stop the rot this week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): Personally, emotionally and professionally you appear to be in a very similar position to the one you experienced last January. Therefore, you are again reminded that life really is made up of desires that seem all-consuming and vital one minute and inconsequential or even foolish the next and that, more often than not, we get what is best for us in the end. So leave well enough alone this week and allow others to work out their hostility, resentments or fantasies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): December was a month of decidedly upsetting encounters, both in your very personal life and at work. However, what you learned in a roundabout manner should now enable you to determine who to trust and who must be kept at arm's length. You are frequently charged with being a law unto yourself, but what seems to be arrogance and intransigence is simply your Aquarian sixth sense telling you not to be taken in. However, you really ought to take expert or legal advice over professional matters this week.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): Of all the Zodiac signs yours appears to be the most confused and unhappy at the moment — the astrological reason being that the sun, currently in Capricorn, is now close to your ruling planet Neptune making you feel confused, apprehensive and nervous at a time when you have an unprecedented number of intensely personal, financial or professional problems to resolve. However, the answer seems to be in distancing yourself for a while and not allowing even family ties to influence your judgment or decisions.

IF YOUR BIRTHDAY IS TODAY: Everyone at some time or other gets hold of the wrong end of the stick and places an important relationship at risk. Therefore, analyze any feelings of anger, frustration or anxiety and you will surely realize that what you ardently desire must inevitably come to pass.
