

The deceptive river: Trickle hides threat

This is the first of three installments in a Daily Pilot series on the Santa Ana River's role in, and impact on, the life of Orange County. Today, a view of the river past and present and a look at some of its challenges in the 1980s.

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Deceptive is the best word to describe the Santa Ana River.

Deceptive. Its bed is dry most of the year, but it is considered by experts the greatest flood threat in the western United States.

Deceptive. Signs of human intervention—concrete-lined levees, excavated sections of channel, a large dam and spillway—are evident everywhere along the river in Orange County and just beyond. Yet Orange County would absorb the most damage if the river were to break free.

Deceptive. What river flow does reach Orange County in normal times is mostly treated sewage, water that has been used by others several times since it last fell from the sky. Yet it is eagerly captured for our own drinking water supply.

Deceptive. It is a mere 85 miles long, yet during heavy flows its waters move at speeds most other rivers could not develop for hundreds of miles.

It is deceptive because, for all those reasons and others, the Santa Ana is a river with far more real and potential impact on the lives of most Orange Countians than many of them realize.

Not that the river has gone unnoticed. American settlers, and before them Spanish settlers and Indians, were forced to live with the river, which until recent times took a highly (See DECEPTIONS, Page A3)

Anaheim's Maffett new Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss California, Debra Sue Maffett of Anaheim, a member of the National Man Watchers Club who almost gave up pageant competition after three defeats in Texas, is the new Miss America.

Miss Maffett, a 25-year-old blonde, blinked her eyes and mouthed "thank you" when she was pronounced the winner Saturday of the Cinderella-like dream-come-true during the nationally televised finals from Convention Hall.

The 1980 graduate of Lamar University has had walk-on parts in two television soap operas, "Days of Our Lives" and "The Young and the Restless."

The first runnerup was Miss Tennessee, Desiree Daniels, the second runnerup was Miss Mississippi, Dianne Evans, the third runnerup was Miss Alabama, Yolanda Fernandez, and the fourth runnerup was Miss Oklahoma, Nancy Chapman.

Miss America 1983 was crowned by her predecessor,

Elizabeth Ward, who cried as she made her final walk down the illuminated runway.

Miss Maffett said she moved from the tiny Texas town of Cut and Shoot, population 300, to California to begin her career as a singer and talk-show host.

She lost in three attempts to become Miss Texas and decided against a fourth shot at the national scholarship pageant until she wanted to go back to school and needed the money.

She currently holds a general studies degree and would like to seek undergraduate and graduate degrees in music. She wins $20,000 in scholarship money from three corporate sponsors.

Miss Maffett was the only two-time winner of preliminary events in this year's show, winning both in talent and swimsuit competition.

Helicopter crashes at airshow, 44 die

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter crashed onto a West German highway and exploded Saturday during an international air show, killing all 44 people aboard as thousands of horrified spectators watched, officials said.

The victims were said to include five American crew members and skydivers from at least three other countries.

The crash was one of the worst helicopter accidents on record.

Two cars were hit by flying debris but the startled motorists escaped uninjured, police said, adding that traffic was unusually light at the time.

"All we heard was a bang and we looked up and pieces of the rotor blades started flying through the air and the helicopter just went into a nosedive immediately and crashed into the ground," said Derk Steenblitz, who was among about 10,000 people attending the air show in this southwestern industrial city.

"As soon as it hit the ground, there was just this huge explosion with smoke and flames," said Steenblitz, a Canadian teacher.

He said the families of some parachutists apparently had been waiting in the field and "were carried away ... in shock ... by ambulance."

After taking off from the nearby Neuostheim airfield, "the pilot radioed the control tower to say he wished to come in and land," Mayor Wilhelm Varnholt told reporters.

The pilot did not say he was in trouble, Varnholt said.

"He didn't have a chance to put down that chopper safely," a spokesman at the Neuostheim control tower said in a telephone interview. He reported seeing the Chinook lose one blade from the rear rotor, then others.

"The pilot did not have a chance," he repeated.

A photographer returning from the scene said the chopper hit a divider, scattering debris across all four lanes of the autobahn.

There was no official report on the cause of the crash, but Varnholt said a bolt underneath the rotor blade apparently came loose. "The transmission was ripped apart," he said.

Concentration on career criminals applauded

By DAVID KUTZMANN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Two years ago a Rand Corp. study isolated an interesting fact for criminal justice officials.

The Santa Monica-based think tank found — after interviewing 624 prison inmates — that a relatively small number of offenders was committing a disproportionately high number of crimes.

The study, prepared for the National Institute of Justice, said that 25 percent of the prison population in California was responsible for 65 percent of the burglaries, 58 percent of the robberies and 60 percent of the auto thefts in the state.

The analysis was viewed with some measure of satisfaction by state and local criminal justice officials.

The data seemed to confirm what they believed already: that a group they had classified as "career criminals" was responsible for crimes which far exceeded the actual numbers of people comprising that group.

As it turned out, the Rand study came three years after the state Legislature had already decided that special attention was needed for dealing with the multiple offenders who had become such skilled practitioners in crime.

Beginning in 1978, the state began allocating grant funds to California's largest counties to establish teams of prosecutors to handle career criminals.

The goal was to buy time for a single prosecutor to handle a single case from beginning to end, thereby strengthening the presentation of the case and ensuring stronger convictions and longer sentences.

"It doesn't necessarily mean doing something different in a trial setting," one local prosecutor said. "The difference is in the overall treatment of the case."

Orange County was among the original recipients of the grant funds, using the money to inaugurate its Career Criminal prosecution unit four years ago. The unit now has five attorneys based in Santa Ana and recently received $261,000 in state funds.

Local observers and law enforcement officials say the special prosecution effort has paid dividends.

"It's a very, very valuable tool," one Sheriff's Department official said. "The D.A.'s office is doing a hell of a job."

Deputy District Attorney

Maurice Evans, who heads up the local unit, said his prosecution team focuses its efforts chiefly on offenders who have been to prison in the past or go on a robbery and burglary spree.

Putting it in less prosaic terms, another prosecutor said, "These are the kind of people your mama never told you about."

two pending cases provide a vivid illustration.

The first one, he said, involves two young men — a 19-year-old Venice resident and his 22-year-old cousin from Santa Ana — who are charged with numerous felony counts stemming from a brutal November-December 1981 crime spree in central Orange County.

The charges against them include two counts of kidnapping for robbery, 13 counts of robbery, 8 counts of burglary, and assorted sex counts which include rape, sodomy and forced oral copulation.

Engquist said the two men were accused of attacking families as they entered their homes in the Santa Ana area, tying up husbands, molesting wives and then making off with valuables. The crimes, he said, were committed at gunpoint.

The career criminal unit took on the case because it involved multiple counts of burglary and robbery.

One of the defendants — the Santa Ana resident — pleaded guilty to all the charges and was given a life sentence plus 51 years. His co-defendant goes on trial Monday.

Engquist said the man pleading guilty received absolutely nothing in return. "Our unit is adamant about not dismissing any counts or enhancements. He got nothing," he said.

The second case, Engquist said, also involves two defendants — both ex-convicts with lengthy criminal backgrounds limited almost exclusively to convictions for burglary and robbery.

They were arrested last June after disarming and attempting to kidnap a police officer in Orange.

It is alleged they were planning a robbery in the commercial area when the woman police officer approached them. They are charged with robbery, attempted kidnapping and assaulting an officer.

When the District Attorney's Office found that one of the men had five prior convictions while the other had three, they became eligible for career criminal attention.

"There is a need to give cases (such as this) independent attention to assure that none of them fall through the cracks," Evans said.

recommendation that he would not be sentenced to more than 21 years on each count. Sentencing for both men is scheduled for Oct. 12.

The brothers told Judge Cecil Patterson that Pitchie picked them up in his van near El Centro, Calif. They said they pulled a knife on Pitchie, forced him in the back of the van and bound him.

They said they drove the van along Interstate 8 into Arizona, took Pitchie out of the van near Gila Bend, stabbed him six times and left him to die before driving to North Carolina, where they sold Pitchie's motorcycle, a guitar and an amplifier that were in the van.

Brothers 'guilty' in HB man's death

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two North Carolina brothers charged in the March 6 stabbing death of a California man near Gila Bend have pleaded guilty to murder charges in Maricopa County Superior Court.

Kelley Hamilton, 30, and his brother, Willie, 22, of Clinton, N.C., originally were charged with first-degree murder, kidnapping and robbery in the killing of Jerome E. Pitchie Jr., 20, of Huntington Beach.

Kelley Hamilton pleaded guilty Friday to first-degree murder in return for having the other two counts dismissed.

His brother pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, robbery and kidnapping with the

Political parade mounts

By JEFF ADLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The way the political parade through Orange County is picking up, it's not hard to tell election day is only 60 days away.

Getting in step this week with local Democratic candidates will be former Vice President Walter Mondale, said to be gearing up for a presidential run of his own in two years.

Mondale is scheduled to be the guest speaker at a fundraising breakfast for Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Santa Ana, early Tuesday morning.

Patterson, seeking a fourth House term, is being challenged for his central Orange County district seat by Republican Bill Dohr, who has run a feisty campaign characterized by a virtual shower of press releases being rained down on local newspapers.

NOT TO BE OUTDONE, the Republicans will follow suit Oct. 2 when Vice President George Bush breezes into town for a day of political fundraising.

First stop for Bush will be the Queen Mary and a $200 per person brunch for the brothers Lungren, Dan and Brian.

Dan Lungren is seeking reelection to his House seat which stretches from San Pedro in Los Angeles County to Huntington Beach in northern Orange County.

Dan's younger brother Brian is seeking to unseat long-time incumbent Democrat Glenn Anderson in an adjacent Los Angeles County District.

Bush also will be the keynote speaker at an evening fundraiser for GOP gubernatorial candidate George Deukmejian in Anaheim.

LOS ANGELES Mayor Tom Bradley, the Democratic candidate for governor, seemed genuinely pleased last Thursday night when he announced he had received Orange County Supervisor Ralph Clark's endorsement.

Clark and Bradley were observed chatting together at a patio reception in Orange prior to the announcement at a Building Industry Association dinner at the Airport Inn in Irvine.

BY THE WAY, if you happened to be driving in the area around Santa Ana's Saddleback Inn Thursday afternoon you might have seen a big, black Cadillac limousine stalled because of a flat tire.

And if you were waiting at any one of several campaign stops along the way hoping to catch a glimpse of the mayor, you might have been wondering why he was late.

That's right. Not even a nine-year record of efficient and competent management provides immunity from an occasional campaign snafu, like a flat tire.

In case you're wondering, no, Bradley did not assist in its repair.

It seems doubtful that Walter Gerken, Pacific Mutual's chairman of the board will soon forget the erstwhile young reporter who confidently strode up to him in the foyer of the firm's Newport Beach headquarters and asked him if he "was with Pacific Mutual."

Such lapses in preparation give the newspaper profession a poor image.

Unflappable, Gerken, long a generous contributor to Democratic causes, took to the microphone to stall as his employees waited for the flat-delayed Bradley to appear.

Speaking to several of the ballot propositions appearing on the November ballot, Gerken commented on the initiative limiting the number of handgrips in the state, which he supports.

"Anyone out there want to take a shot on me on that one?" quipped Gerken.

Laguna to pay $3.9 million after accident

Laguna Beach officials reportedly have agreed to pay a $3.9 million settlement to a city family whose daughter suffered permanent injuries in a 1977 auto-bicycle accident there.

The award to David and Gay Brobeck came near the end of a month-long trial in Orange County Superior Court. The Brobecks had contended that city traffic signs at the corner of Atlantic Way and Caribbean Way were inadequate when the accident occurred.

Heather Brobeck, who was 7 at the time of the accident, was struck by a car as she rode her bike at the intersection. She sustained brain damage and other injuries, and the Brobecks claim she will need round-the-clock care for the rest of her life at a cost of about $100,000 a year.

Miss Brobeck, who was hospitalized for 18 months following the accident, cannot speak or walk now but has improved greatly in recent months, her father said.

U.S. summary

Tropical Storm Chris swept inland Saturday from the Gulf of Mexico, bringing heavy rain and thunderstorms to southern Louisiana and most of the Gulf Coast.

The third storm of the 1982 Atlantic hurricane season gained strength suddenly Friday afternoon and headed toward southwestern Louisiana.

Elsewhere in the nation, thunderstorms spread as far east as the southern Atlantic Coast and thundershowers also were scattered from the central Rockies into the Dakotas and over most of the High Plains. And a few showers lingered over the Pacific Northwest.

The Northeast and the Far West enjoyed warm sunshine, and hot weather returned to Texas after the storm passed. But cool weather abruptly spread across the northern Plains. While Friday afternoon temperatures above 100 degrees were recorded in Nebraska, Saturday's highs were in the 50s. The temperature stayed in the 40s in many parts of Wyoming.

As Chris approached Louisiana, about 6,500 people left their homes. But they returned Saturday when it became clear the storm was weakening, authorities said. The deluge of rain and winds gusting to 45 mph caused flooding in low-lying areas and knocked down power lines, they reported.

Nearly 5 inches of rain drenched Lake Charles, La., as the storm passed. At mid-afternoon, Chris was located just northwest of Lake Charles and was drifting slowly northward according to the National Weather Service. It was expected to continue losing strength as it remained over land.

This year's queen was the 56th Miss America to walk the 134-foot runway, but the first to be sung to by the show's new emcee Gary Collins, husband of actress Mary Ann Mobley, Miss America 1959.

Collins replaced television's Tarzan, Ron Ely, who spent two years as host of the show after Bert Parks was fired.

Also a first, Collins serenaded the new queen with "Miss America, You're Beautiful," a song that has been part of the pageant since 1968. It became this year's theme after Albert A. Marks Jr., the show's executive director, decided the author of the traditional "There She Is" wanted too much money for continued use of his song.

Miss Ward, 21, of Russellville, Ark., earned more than $112,000 in bookings as Miss America 1982. She plans to return to school in January to study for a career as a corporate lawyer.

variable path through what is now Orange County.

H. George Osborne, director of the Santa Ana River Flood Protection Agency and a person well versed in the river's history, said its path to the sea from the Santa Ana Mountains was largely determined by "the vagaries of nature and sediment buildup."

Following paths through what is now Garden Grove, Fullerton, Westminster and several other spots, the river emptied into the sea in locations as far from its present outlet (at the Newport Beach-Huntington Beach line) as Seal Beach.

Flooding, then as now, was a regular occurrence, but unlike now the Indians and Spanish kept permanent development away from the flood plain.

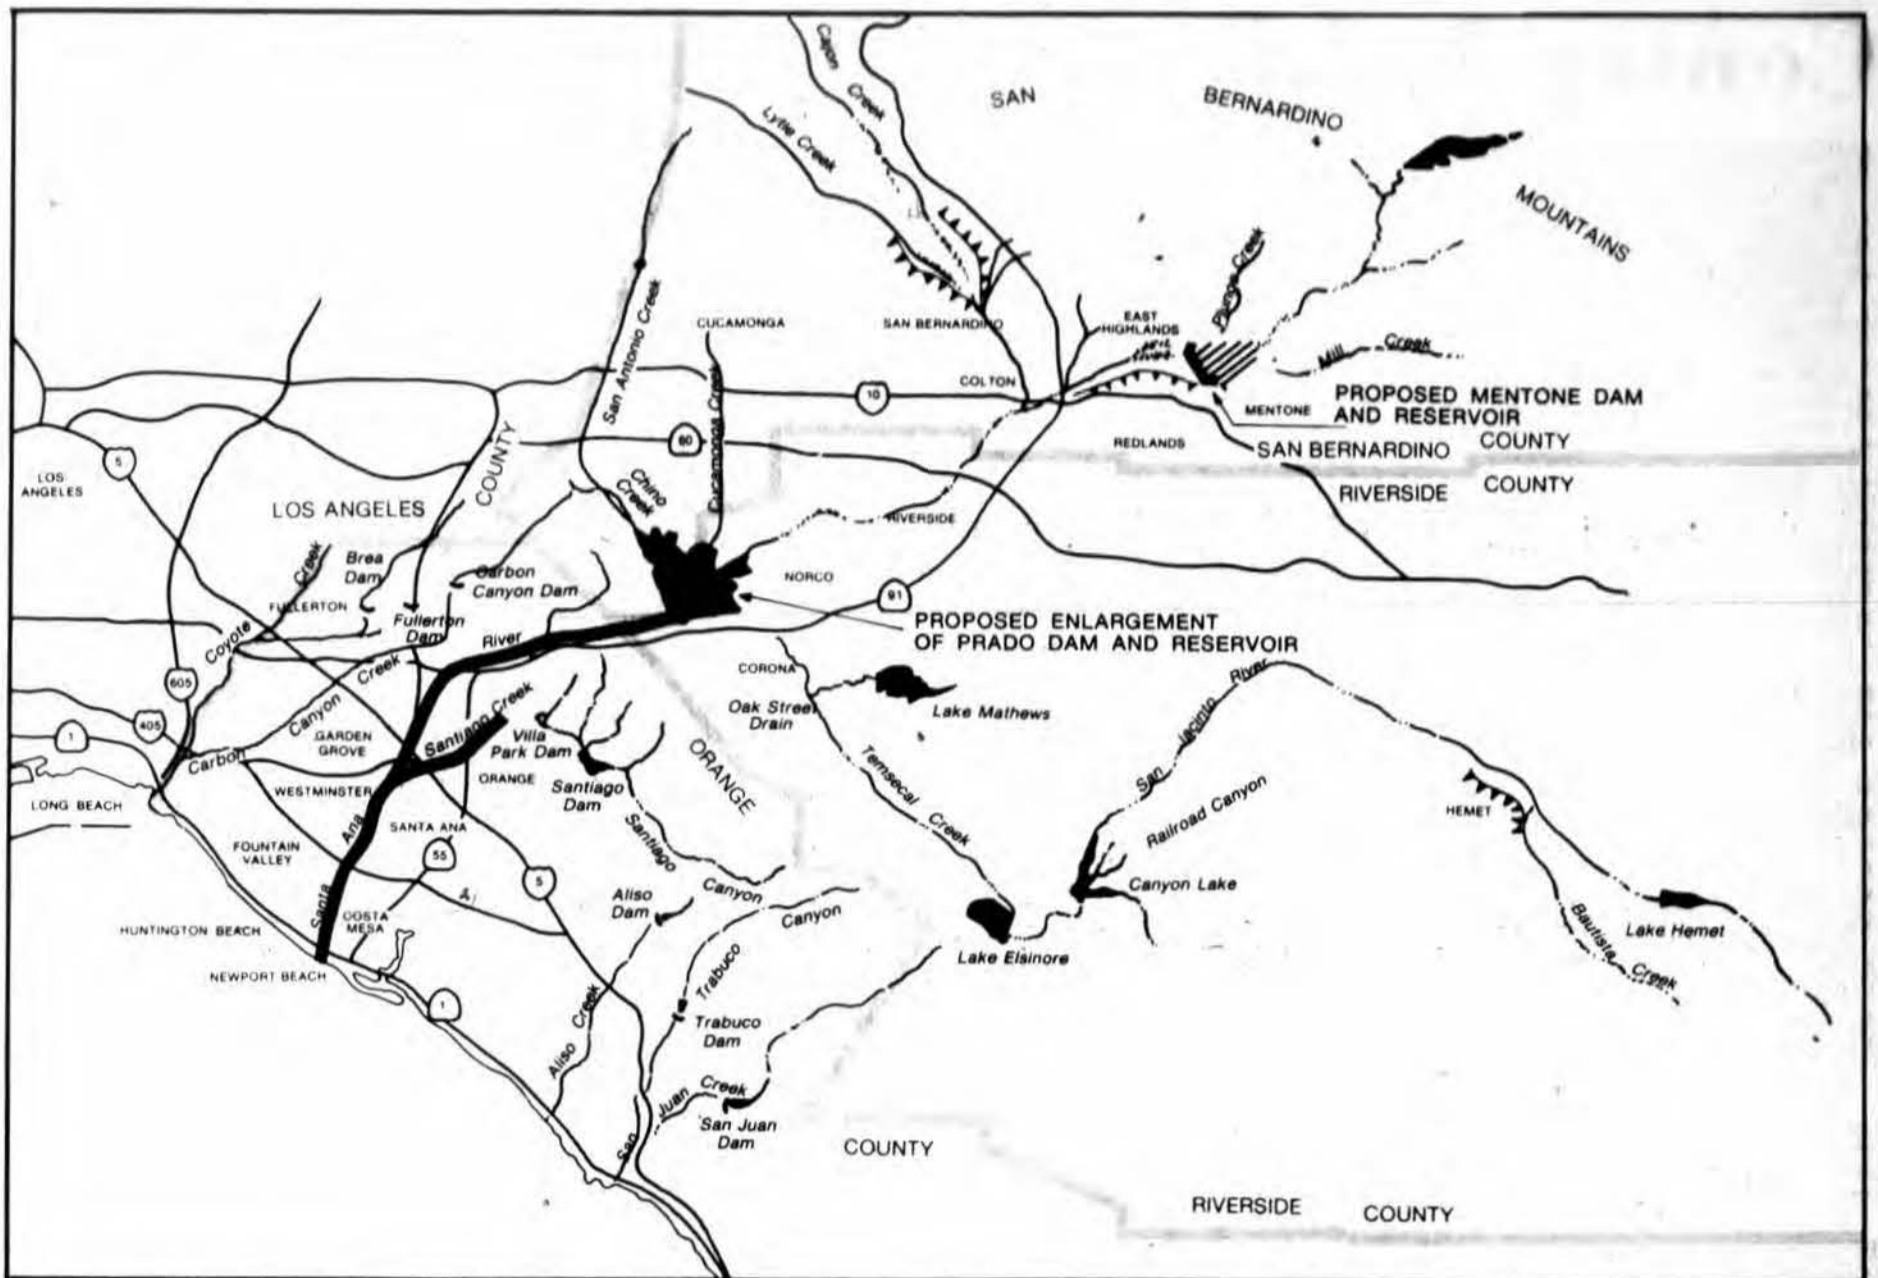

American settlers were to change that pattern radically, though slowly.

Few people were here to witness the great flood of 1862, but soon after that event Americans began arriving in greater numbers. By a few years after the turn of the century, farmers had banded together to form the Newbert Protection District (a combination of Newport and Talbert, that era's name for much of the area between the ocean and present-day Garden Grove Boulevard), which constructed levees in the first effort to control the river.

Many similar efforts have come since, some in response to floods like those which occurred in 1916, 1927, 1938, 1952, 1969 and other years.

All of the battles with nature did not stop the Americans from developing the large flood plain that is most of northern Orange County, however. Cities — almost all of eight and parts of several others — cover that plain today.

But flooding was not the river's only story. As the county grew, and as growth happened on a smaller scale along the river in neighboring San Bernardino and Riverside counties, humans found uses other than flood control and irrigation for the river, evolving the intensively developed and regulated river it is today.

Daily Pilot Map

MONDAY: FLOODING FEARS Protections against peril

So much of the river's water is captured and used now that little outside of the heaviest flows ever reaches the ocean. The usage is regulated by a three-way settlement counties signed several decades ago, spawned by Orange County's lawsuit seeking what residents here said was the fair share of water they were being denied by upstream users.

The Orange County Water District, which services much of the northwest county, now draws about one-fourth of its supply from the river. It is one of dozens of water districts of all sizes that have some claim to the river.

The waterway is closely watched for pollution and other problems by agencies in all three counties, and as a result major pollution is surprisingly low for a river which flows past such large population centers.

The river's banks are the site of numerous parks and other recreation facilities, and there are plans for more.

But the overriding concern continues to be flooding. The three counties, using a plan drawn up by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, are seeking congressional approval for a $650 million package of controls that would increase flood protection on the river and increase protection to the large parts of Orange County which would be devastated if an 1862-style flood were to occur again.

Beyond that plan is a hoped-for $350 million dam which would complete the protection package and would, according to its designers, protect the entire river basin from another 1862-style flood.

The dam was dropped from the current package because of funding problems and the reservations of San Bernardino County officials, in whose jurisdiction the dam would be built.

The concerns over flooding are justified if predictions of damage from a major flood are to be believed, and no one is disputing them.

Humans are dwarfed by the dry river bed at the base of the San Bernardino Mountains.

Such a flood today would cause hundreds of millions of dollars damage in San Bernardino and Riverside counties, a devastating $12 billion damage in Orange County, and the loss of some 1,000 lives.

The many dangers and uses of the river would strain the credibility of someone who looked at the Santa Ana system with only casual knowledge on most days.

The river itself, the so-called "main stem" (as opposed to its tributaries), originates near Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains, and in its first few miles makes its way out of the mountains to the flat desert plain northeast of Redlands.

The bed from there to the ocean, a distance of more than 75 miles, remains dry most of the year, but the presence of thousands of large boulders suggests powerful water movement at times. At Redlands, the river flows only once every few years on average.

In Riverside County the riverbed is composed mostly of smaller rocks and pebbles. More signs of human intervention on the river are evident here as high-walled levees protect the city of Riverside from some major flows.

Near the Riverside-Orange County line is Prado Dam and its spillway, backed by a treefilled park and wildlife area that becomes a small lake during a heavy flow.

Beyond the dam in Orange County, the man-made channel that guides the river through Anaheim, Orange, Santa Ana and the area bordering Fountain Valley, Huntington Beach and Costa Mesa is largely concrete-lined.

Much of the riverbed is invisible to those who live and work near it, hidden behind high embankments.

In the usually dry times, the river does not appear to be much use or threat to anyone. But an understanding of nature's role in the river explains why it is both.

The river is fed by about 20 tributaries spread over a 3,200 square-mile basin stretching from the area west of the San Gabriel Mountains known as the Cucamonga Fan to the plains around the river in the desert.

The size of the basin feeding the river, combined with the steep slopes leading from the river's origins to the sea, create what Dennis Majors of the Army Corps of Engineers describes as a "very unique condition" in wet times — large amounts of water traveling at high velocities over what can quickly become a wholly inadequate riverbed.

Standing almost anywhere along the river most days, from the dry, boulder-strewn bed near Redlands to the parched, cracked ground behind Prado Dam and the concrete-lined levees in Anaheim, it's hard to imagine such a scenario.

Center holds off extinction for noble birds

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

LAUREL, Md. — There are sounds cut so vividly into the mind by the recording ear that they are never forgotten:

Sidney Bechet, the soprano saxophonist, filling a shoebox bar in Manhattan with melon-rich legatos until they spill out the open door into the street leaving it dancing in the early spring twilight; a .50-caliber machine gun splitting a long, hot summer night in Detroit; a cardinal across the road mounting the highest tree he could find to challenge winter.

Then there were the cranes, called whoopers. It is a poor

Washington, D.C., ironic for all the summer lushness. Bees are everywhere. And ticks. Traffic mumbles not far away. Yet here is extinction.

"I'm optimistic," says Dr. Scott Derrickson who supervises whooper breeding at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service here where the tiny flock lives.

It is Derrickson who periodically packs a significant part of the gene pool of an entire species into a contoured suitcase, in the form of eggs, and hops a jet for Idaho. The suitcase has its own seat.

will be much closer to a happy ending.

Never common, the whooper was nonetheless once widespread. Its two taxonomic samples were taken in South Carolina and Hudson's Bay. Nesting pairs were once reported at Cape May, N.J. But by 1850 the birds' decline was apparent.

The northern Great Plains, where the cranes nested, were being cultivated. Hunters shot the great white birds which stand taller than a cigarette machine. Collectors took their eggs. Was something else happening?

Not until 1954 were the nesting grounds found and then by accident when a forest fire pilot flew over Wood Buffalo and noticed large white birds. Fortunately the area already was a protected park. The cranes had chosen wisely if not intentionally. The area was almost impenetrable on foot.

Yet so much had to be learned: What made the bird nearly extinct in the first place? Marsh drainage and cultivation of the prairie. How did they mate? For life. Would they accept a new partner if one died? Yes.

How many eggs did the hen lay? Usually two. How many survived? One, due to aggressive sibling rivalry of scarce food. And how would the hen react to losing her clutch of eggs? She, fortunately, would lay another.

That was the key answer to years of questions. You could get more eggs, and, in this case, the egg comes first.

Egg production was boosted by turning on lights to simulate the longer spring days of laying. Eggs were then flown to Idaho. Deprived of her clutch, the whooper would lay some more. One has laid 13 in a season.

Such ingenuity here extends beyond the whoopers. The masked bobwhite had become extinct from overgrazing in the northern extent of its range, southern Arizona. After eight years of experimenting, scientists successfully released chicks

Chesapeake, Great Lakes and Northwest.

Eaglets have been placed with wild couples that have raised no young for some years. Others are released on "hacking" towers where they are fed for a time. Rations are gradually reduced until the juveniles are deemed adapted to the wild.

In all, there are 278 American animals and plants on the endangered or threatened list.

Salvation is a joint effort of private and governmental bodies on an international scale.

The bald eagle, America's symbol, has a fighting chance of survival as a result of Patuxent center's work.

This flock lives in a sick room of survival. It is shared by a noble assemblage of the endangered: bald eagles piping in falsetto, Andean condors hissing at intruders.

word. For they cry in a sudden outburst of such brassy brilliance that you jump and have goose bumps at one and the same time.

"We hear no mere bird," said the naturalist, Aldo Leopold. "He is a symbol of our untamable past."

That the whooping crane is not part of our past, period, is largely an achievement of man, whose other works pushed the bird to the brink of the abyss.

This flock lives in a sick room of survival, ringed by an electrified fence dug into the ground to foil burrowers. It is shared by a noble assemblage of the endangered: bald eagles piping in falsetto, Andean condors hissing at intruders, Mississippi sand hill cranes, even rarer than whoopers, cutting short their bugling with a clacking of their stiletto bills.

It is a Robinson Crusoe island, but a few miles from

The eggs are placed in nests of sandhill cranes, a more numerous cousin of the whoopers, at the Gray's Lake refuge in Idaho. It is hoped the whoopers will better learn the facts of wild life from their foster parents than they would in captivity.

The program began in 1976. So far 51 "fostered" eggs from Patuxent and 116 from the wild whoopers' only remaining nesting ground, at Wood Buffalo National Park in northern Canada, have been placed with the sandhills. Thirteen whoopers have survived to migrate south to the sandhills' winter home in New Mexico.

The oldest are nearing mating age, nail-biting time. Will they breed? It is believed the whoopers won't mate with sandhills because they have different courting rituals. If they do, a decades-long detective story

U.S. wants to know what makes foreign chiefs tick

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Fidel Castro accused the United States of waging biological warfare against Cuba, feisty U.S. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick shot back that the Cuban leader "requires a psychiatric examination of considerable duration."

The United Nations envoy's remark in that August 1981 episode was nothing more than a caustic rejoinder. Clearly, Castro wasn't about to have his head examined, especially at the suggestion of an ideological foe.

Yet 1,200 miles from Havana, at CIA headquarters and elsewhere around Washington, U.S. specialists are trying to analyze what makes Castro tick. A host of other foreign leaders, many of them in the volatile Third World or revolutionary types, also are undergoing a similar psychiatric diagnosis at a distance.

Not only that, experts in the government and on American university campuses are trying to apply psychological concepts — in some cases aided by advanced electronic technology — to help them reach a better understanding of global conflicts and crises.

The question of striving to divine the motivations, attitudes and negotiating strategies of other governments through policy issues is serious business.

At the CIA, about 10 experts in behavioral science headed by a Yale-educated psychiatrist are at work preparing psychological profiles of world leaders.

The CIA team is reported to have concluded that Khadafy has "a messianic personality with a hero-martyr complex," and that the worldwide attention generated by the assassination plot scare served to feed his "megalomaniacal sense."

A source familiar with the CIA team's work said it "tends to be somewhat impressionistic" and "not really done as thoroughly as it could be."

An attempt to overcome this deficiency is the experimental effort by the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency to develop an "automated behavioral intelligence system," using sophisticated, high-technology methods.

The agency says the aim is to "describe, explain and predict probable courses of action and perceptions of foreign policy decision-makers," as well as to "link these probable courses of action and perceptions to behavior."

Part of the program has involved research by Thomas C. Wiegale, a political scientist at Northern Illinois University in Dekalb, Ill., on the use of an electronic "psychological stress evaluator."

The evaluator was used to analyze voice tapes of statements made by Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon in times of crisis.

The apparatus automatically processes voice modulations and draws onto a moving strip chart an electronic graph of each word — roughly similar to how an electrocardiogram records a person's heartbeat. Then the chart is analyzed to spot stress patterns that cannot be detected by the unaided ear.

At the START talks with the Soviets, or elsewhere, "if someone was actually instructed to sit with the negotiating team and develop some kind of format by which they record various kinds of psychological leakage through the body, that could be matched with what was being said verbally to see what kinds of issues are bothering the speakers," Wiegale said.

Libya's Khadafy: "Messianic personality, hero-martyr complex."

Selection shoots down SCAG's credibility

For the past four years, the quasi-official Southern California Association of Governments has been studying our region in an attempt to find a new location for an international airport.

The SCAG executives and planners finally boiled the selections down to a pair of sites that were announced last week.

These are El Toro Marine Corps Air Station and the southerly sector of Camp Pendleton, which is also U.S. Marine Corps property.

In so doing, the regional government group reduced itself to the theater of the absurd.

El Toro appears to be SCAG's No. 1 jetport choice. The Marine station has been studied repeatedly by numerous levels of government over the past two decades as a possible major airport location, either through joint use with the military or through buying out the Marine Corps altogether.

Every one of these studies, or at least those ponderings that were at any real depth, rejected El Toro as a potential commercial flight center.

The Marine Corps has also rejected the idea strongly, repeatedly and consistently.

So why, it might be asked, would an organization like SCAG take four years pondering possible airport locations and, in the end, come right back to El Toro?

If a somewhat whimsical analogy might be drawn, it may be that the regional government group views El Toro like the proverbial duck.

That is, if it waddles like a duck and quacks like a duck, then by golly it surely must be a duck.

El Toro looks like an airport and sounds like an airport, and therefore in the eyes of the SCAG planners, it must be an airport.

Of course El Toro does have an airfield. But it is an airfield with a military mission. That in itself is a strategic factor.

The U.S. Marines in Orange County have always been good neighbors and have contributed enormously in our communities. Yet it must be acknowledged that El Toro military jet operations have caused some noise problems and contributed a measure to congestion.

Yet these negatives would pale by comparison to an international-sized jetport being plopped down on the existing El Toro installation. Noise, pollution, traffic congestion and similar problems would multiply enormously.

Against that kind of a backdrop, SCAG's own population projections for the year 2000 absolutely fly in the face of the notion that El Toro is a viable site for a major civilian airport.

SCAG estimates that El Toro population alone would increase from a 1980 count of 52,282 to 158,200 by the year 2000. In that same period, the Mission Viejo-Trabuco population is expected to climb from 95,000 to nearly 200,000.

And this is the arena in which SCAG would locate a new international airport?

That duck just won't fly.

El Toro should be taken off the books once and for all in any consideration for future international airport sites.

Peace proposal livable

The United States has put its best foot forward in an attempt to untie the Middle East knot that has threatened world peace for a generation.

The peace plan offered by President Reagan is a well-balanced document that meets the basic needs of each party, while asking them to back away from rigid demands which have thwarted peace in that troubled region for so long.

Getting Israel and its Arab neighbors to agree to a comprehensive settlement after the turbulence of the past 34 years would be the diplomatic feat of the century.

That means, of course, that the difficulties will be extraordinary. Menachem Begin's hard-line government in Israel has rejected the proposal and refuses even to discuss it. The Arabs, meeting in Morocco for their regular summit, have been somewhat more reasonable, saying the Reagan plan would be a good basis for negotiations, but they have attached conditions that would exacerbate the difficulties of reaching an accord.

We hope the president won't let these initial, predictable problems deter the United States from insisting on consideration of the plan as a reasonable compromise.

Reasonable it is. For Israel, the plan offers a U.S. guarantee of security, recognition from neighbors that have withheld it since the Jewish state's creation in 1948 and opposition to a sovereign Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza Strip, two territories seized by Israel in the 1967 war which contain large numbers of Palestinian Arabs.

In short, the proposal would meet Israel's primary need of secure, defensible borders.

For the Arabs, the proposals would return the West Bank and Gaza to Arab control. Palestinians would be given a long-sought homeland in these areas, which they would control in close association with the kingdom of Jordan. It also demands a freeze on Israeli settlements in those territories, which have been lightning rods for Arab rancor.

Set aside for negotiation would be the touchy issue of Jerusalem's status. The fate of the ancient city may well be the toughest issue in the Mideast impasse, because it brings to bear all the emotions which have made the region's problems so intractable.

Holy to the world's three great monotheistic religions — Christianity, Judaism and Islam — the city never will be divided, Israel says, as it was before the 1967 war. Begin claims Jerusalem as Israel's "eternal" capital. The Arabs, on the other hand, say they would resort to a "holy war" if necessary to restore Muslim control over Islamic shrines in the ancient metropolis' eastern sector.

Objections to Reagan's plan already have rolled in. Begin calls the proposal a grievous threat to his nation's security and vows to continue the process of settling 100,000 Israelis in the West Bank.

What Begin cannot seem to understand is that security for his country cannot depend on arms alone. Real peace will be elusive until the grievances of the Palestinian Arabs are addressed.

The Arabs' conditions call for the West Bank homeland to be a sovereign state, including East Jerusalem, and demand Israeli recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole representative of the Palestinian Arabs before West Bank elections.

The Arabs should realize that a homeland associated with Jordan is the best deal Palestinians will receive, and should not hobble negotiations with demands for a sovereign state. And to demand recognition for the PLO before elections is entirely unreasonable. If the PLO wants recognition, it should renounce terrorism and seek votes in any election without preconditions. How many votes has Yasser Arafat ever received?

Compromises will be needed if this tragic conflict ever is to be resolved. Both Israel and the Arabs have been saying "never" to reasonable concessions for decades. All they have netted is death and the threat of more death. It's time for both sides to give an inch in the cause of peace. And President Reagan's proposals are a plan both sides could live with if they really tried.

Bed tax hike inappropriate?

To the Editor:

The Irvine City Council will be considering increasing the current 6 percent bed tax to 8 percent at its Sept. 14 meeting. This issue was originally going to be decided by the voters in the Nov. 2 election.

It is not by accident that the city bed tax is 6 percent. There is a 6 percent sales tax in California and most hotel guests assume that the Transient Occupancy Tax is the state sales tax. Raising the tax brings it to the guest's attention that it is in fact a special tax. He may question whether he wishes to pay a city tax to a city whose services he uses at a minimal level at best. In addition, many people might feel that 8 percent was an unfair tax burden.

THE PROPOSED TAX increase is unfair and unnecessary. The increase, like the basic 6 percent tax itself, will not benefit those who are paying the tax, but will be used to finance anticipated deficits in general city operations. The hotel guest is already paying his share of city taxes by paying the current tax. The increase makes him feel he is paying a greater share than accepted for services and operations he does not use.

It is not a nameless corporation that will bear the burden of this tax. The majority of the businessmen who stay in the Irvine hotels are employed by other branches of many local corporations. Therefore, it is many of the local corporations that face the additional inflationary pressure of the increased travel costs. Any increase in their costs is eventually passed along to the consumer in the form of increased prices for goods and services.

Irvine has had the bed tax for 10 years. If only the hotels that existed 10 years ago existed today, the income to the city would have increased more than 300 percent due to the inflationary effects of rising room rates. The construction of each new hotel in Irvine effectively increased city income from this source. The key to this increase is the number of rooms actually occupied each night. Hotels refer to this percentage as occupancy rate.

Because many people would resent paying an 8 percent tax, an increase in the tax would cause the hotel guest to seek lodging elsewhere resulting in a lower occupancy rate. A lower occupancy rate could result in lower total revenue for the city in spite of the higher rate. There is some strong evidence to support the idea that an increased rate would result in lower occupancy. The City of Claremont instituted a 10 percent bed tax and the hotels in the area saw their occupancy drop by 35 percent within the year. The occupancy rate in the hotels in the surrounding cities did not drop in the same period of time.

It is our belief that this is the time to be conservative in spending and conservative in taxing. Proposed additional facilities should be either eliminated or reduced in scope to reduce anticipated deficits.

In short, there are serious questions as to whether this is the time or the place to increase this tax at all.

City view of Ali

To the Editor:

I was concerned after reading your recent editorial (Ali's Jail Term Ridiculous, 8-29-82) that someone unfamiliar with the facts might be misled.

Costa Mesa's policy in all law enforcement cases has always been to seek voluntary compliance with the city's laws. In Roushan's case, we decided against filing a criminal prosecution against him with its possible jail sentence. Instead, we filed a civil lawsuit seeking a court order that he comply with the city's zoning and building safety laws the same as everybody else does.

In order to get a court ruling on Roushan's legal "free speech" argument as fast as possible and to temporarily stop any more iron structures from being built without city safety checks, we got the court to issue a preliminary injunction. By that order the court said to Roushan... "you can't build more sculptures without permits until the case is decided in court."

IT IS FOR contempt of that court order that Roushan was sentenced to jail. He intentionally ignored the order and built two more iron sculptures — the last one towering some 65 feet and weighing close to seven tons — both without city safety checks and permits.

The city didn't order the five-day jail sentence; the judge did. More importantly, Roushan didn't have to go to jail. The judge gave him the alternative to take down the "tornado" within 30-days. Roushan refused and consequently was sent to jail and fined $500.

The city attempted to work something out with Roushan. However, our efforts were met first with unreasonable demands that we amend our building permit procedure as he directed, and later by threats he'd build more huge sculptures without permits.

The city attorney's office will continue to seek voluntary compliance with city laws. Filing a lawsuit is the absolute last resort. However, whenever any person openly and continually violates the law, common sense fairness to all our citizens demands we move against that person with determination. No one can be above the law.

Gardner's column

Original 'one-stop' government

By ROBERT GARDNER

Robert Gardner, chief justice of American Samoa, is remembered along the Orange Coast as a longtime jurist, frequent emcee and senior body surfing enthusiast.

The old Newport Beach City Hall originally was a two-room schoolhouse. When converted, one room housed the city clerk and city treasurer, the other became the original multi-purpose room, which was the meeting place of the City Council one night a month. The rest of the time it was my headquarters, the courtroom of the city court — sort of.

The so-called judicial bench was a desk situated in the back of the room on a slightly elevated platform. Immediately in front was a long table around which the council sat on meeting nights. During the day that table was used by some representatives of the county assessor's office who pored over large, dusty tomes and never looked up no matter what was going on. Their work must have been fascinating or they had amazing powers of concentration considering the numerous distractions going on. Nothing ever seemed to faze them or even interest them.

ON ONE SIDE of the room was a machine, where a woman sat and pounded out water bills to the accompaniment of an awful clatter. This was the city's first effort at automation albeit not a very successful one. The woman could have sent out the bills by hand with a personal note on each one in the time she used on that machine. She seemed to spend about half her time repairing the contraption with a pair of pliers and a screwdriver.

On the other side of the room was a desk at which sat a representative of the Department of Motor Vehicles who administered driver's license tests. On the wall next to my bench or desk was the eye testing chart.

In one corner was a small office used by Frank Rinehart, the city clerk. In that office was a desk. In the lower right hand drawer of the desk was a bottle of whiskey. As Frank explained this was for public relations.

Thus, in one visit you could have a trial before the city judge, get a driver's license, pay your water bill, complain about your assessment and get a drink of whiskey from the city clerk. It was a highly efficient use of space, however there were some strange results oftentimes.

For example, a woman came in to appear before me on a traffic ticket she had received for operating her car without a license. She got into the wrong line, passed her driver's license test, received her license and departed. She was properly shocked to get a letter from me a couple of days later saying she had better appear on the ticket or I would throw her in jail.

However, it was the eye chart that caused most of the problems.

Every morning the police brought in the night's accumulation of jailed drunks. Sometimes they were not entirely sober — quite often in fact. The eye chart seemed to fascinate them. A typical scene went something like this:

Me — "What is your true name, sir?"
Drunk — "A N C R U I V E."
Me — "What?"
Drunk — "A N C R U I V E."
Me — "That's a strange name. It's nice of you to spell it but how do you pronounce it?"
Drunk — "B N X E W O P K."
Me — "But you just said that your name was A N C R U I V E."
Drunk — "M X W Z A T Y D."
(He is now doing the bottom line.)

ME — FINALLY getting the picture and realizing the utter futility of ever getting his name and being unable to cover the chart because the man from the Department of Motor Vehicles is using it, "Sir, whatever your name may be, you are charged with being intoxicated in a public place. How do you plead, guilty, or not guilty?"

Drunk — "O." (He has now gone to the top of the chart which always has a huge "O" which almost anyone could see.)

About this time I realize that no matter what I say he is simply going to go through that eye chart over and over again. So, I suggest to the officer that he be returned to jail for a few hour's sleep and then returned to court for a later appearance. The drunk returns to jail happy and proud of his 20-20 vision but baffled with the unnecessary delays in the judicial process. If he knew Frank Rinehart, and nearly everyone did, he probably got a drink of whiskey on his way out.

That's the way things were in the multi-purpose room of the old city hall.

SPECIAL TEAM SHARPENS PROSECUTION OF CAREER CRIMINALS . . .

According to the prosecutor, an 18-year-old defendant accused of committing several burglaries would not qualify if he had no prior prison record.

The law defines career criminals as repeat offenders for crimes such as robbery, burglary, arson, grand theft, grand theft auto, receiving stolen property and possession of drugs for sale.

Nathan Manske, deputy director of the state's Criminal Justice Planning Office, said in a telephone interview that each of the 13 counties in California which receive grant funds can concentrate on any or all of the above-mentioned offenses.

In Orange County, the emphasis has been on robbery and burglary, Evans said.

"We're trying to get these people incarcerated for as long as we can," the deputy district attorney said.

The five members of his prosecution team, he added, are all "seasoned" trial attorneys who know how to handle themselves in court.

Because they have special duties, they also get to use special techniques aimed at guaranteeing the strongest convictions and the longest sentences.

The basic strategy, Evans said, is known as "vertical prosecution."

"That's the ultimate in prosecution," he said. "It's just dynamite . . . but it's expensive."

What it means very simply is this: A deputy district attorney like Engquist will be assigned a case from its very beginnings. This same prosecutor will then handle all facets of the case — from bail hearings and preliminary hearings to trial and sentencing.

By having one prosecutor handle a case from beginning to end, it is believed that the strongest possible results can be achieved. Weaknesses in the case can be more easily detected, evidence strengthened and rapport with witnesses improved, Evans said.

On routine criminal matters, several deputy district attorneys may become involved, diluting the effectiveness of the prosecution case.

But the price for vertical — or solo — prosecution is not cheap. It means smaller caseloads for each prosecutor. And smaller caseloads mean more cost.

The state will spend $4 million this fiscal year helping out programs such as Orange County's, which received $261,000 in aid.

Evans said the state grant pays for three of the five attorneys in his Santa Ana office. The other two are paid for by the county. The state also funds two investigators and one clerical position. The county pays for an investigative aide.

Officials believe the results of the program justify its expense.

Manske said statewide figures for all 13 programs show that career criminals suffered higher rates of conviction and went to jail for longer periods than other offenders.

He said 91.6 percent of the career criminals were convicted of one or more charges, and 92.2 percent were convicted of the most serious charge or charges. For offenders not in the career criminal category, the figures were 89.5 percent and 66.6 percent respectively.

When it came to sentencing, the career criminals were given an average sentence of 64 months compared to a sentence of 54 months for other defendants.

In Orange County, Evans said, the conviction rate for his unit is running at 94 percent over the past three years. More than 90 percent of these offenders go to state prison.

He said the program is generating better results as it goes along.

Law enforcement officials agree. "They're doing a fantastic job. It's a very valuable tool to us," said Sheriff's Lt. Wyatt Hart. "They work with us extremely well. We would like to see more of it."

Though he said he was not familiar with the cost figures for the prosecution program, Hart maintained that "when you measure the costs of the unit compared to the money they save in crime, there's no comparison."

If a defendant can afford it, he can always counter a vertical prosecution effort with a vertical defense — hire a private attorney who handles the case from beginning to end.

But many career criminal defendants rely on the Orange County Public Defender's Office to represent them. And Public Defender Ronald Butler said his staff is simply stretched too thin to fight vertical prosecution with vertical defense.

"The only vertical defense we provide is on homicide cases," he said.

"We would like to do it in career criminal cases, but we don't have the personnel to do it."

When the District Attorney's Office received its first grant from the state four years ago to establish a career criminal unit, Butler said, the Public Defender's Office also tried to set up a special defense unit to counter that. No funds were forthcoming, however.

"We have tried to go vertical as much as we can," the public defender said. "But we don't have the money or the manpower."

The fate of the district attorney's program rests in the hands of the Legislature. If state funding were to be cut off, officials said, the Orange County program would soon be dismantled unless alternative funding could be located.

But officials in the Office of Criminal Justice Planning said it is unlikely the Legislature will soon discontinue funding. They said the results of the program statewide have been encouraging and public sentiment heavily favors emphasis on prosecution efforts.

Ken Forsch

Forsch regains his form, 4-1

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The fourth inning has not been a particularly good one for Ken Forsch of late. That's because he had failed to survive it in his last two starts.

To say things were different Saturday night is a slight understatement. The Angels' right-hander was entertaining notions of a no-hitter as early as the fourth, but settled for a four-hit gem in defeating the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1 before 43,819 at Anaheim Stadium.

Forsch, who hadn't won a game since he beat Boston 10-1 back on Aug. 26, mowed down the first 16 Blue Jays he faced Saturday night before Garth Iorg slapped a double off the left-field fence with one out in the sixth inning.

"Since the All-star break, I've been so inconsistent," Forsch lamented after the game. "I'll go out there and throw a real good game and then come back with a real bad one. I've been pitching so badly,

I felt I had to go out and throw a good one tonight."

He couldn't have picked a better time. The Angels' victory kept them one game behind American League West-leading Kansas City and 2½ games ahead of third-place Chicago — both winners Saturday.

"I started thinking about a no-hitter in the fourth inning," Forsch admitted. "I had real good stuff and I figured if I got through the fifth I'd have a shot at it."

The Angels had already given him a comfortable cushion thanks to a three-run first inning keyed by Rob Wilfong's bases-loaded single off Toronto starter Dave Stieb. It was Wilfong's first game-winning RBI of the season.

Meanwhile, Forsch was on his way to his 11th complete game of the year. He forced the Blue Jays to hit into 12 ground outs while walking one and striking out one. That doesn't sound overpowering, but as far as Forsch was concerned, he was in total command.

"I was throwing everything real well.

I was getting a lot of jam shots from them (the Blue Jays). They were really hacking away tonight."

Angels Manager Gene Mauch agreed: "I've never seen the man as deep into a game as he was tonight. I mean he was really in to it."

Mauch had no be pleased with Forsch's performance. Although the veteran pitcher came into the game tied with Stieb for the league lead in shutouts with four, he had also developed into the team's most inconsistent pitcher of 1982.

"I suppose I'm a lot like Forsch," Mauch admitted. "I tend to forget those games as fast as I can and get into the next one."

Wilfong became an instant hero in the first inning. Mauch inserted him in the lineup after second baseman Bobby Grich showed up at the stadium looking "like death warmed over," according to his manager.

Bruins have a passing fancy, 41-10

Ramsey, Townsell key aerial attack

By DENNIS BROSTERHOUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

PASADENA — It became quickly apparent to the 45,386 in attendance at the Rose Bowl Saturday that the Long Beach State football team was making a huge jump in class against UCLA.

And, after watching his team absorb a 41-10 punishing from the Bruins, 49er Coach Dave Currey summed it up by saying, "Their quarterback (Tom Ramsey) faced Michigan last year.

"The toughest competition our guy (quarterback Todd Dillon) saw was Merced JC. It was a tough way to start for him, but I was pleased with what I saw."

Dillon did complete 23 of 43 pass attempts for 258 yards and a touchdown, but he was by no means the star of the show Saturday.

In opening what the Bruins have termed "a new era" at the Rose Bowl, UCLA also showed a new wrinkle in its offense — a deep passing game.

Ramsey hooked up with flanker Jojo Townsell for four touchdown passes in the first half, as the Bruins sprinted to a 31-10 advantage and breezed. The two seniors combined for scores of 23, 48, 32 and 18 yards, as Townsell set a school record with the four scoring receptions and tied a Pacific-10 mark originally set by Fountain Valley High product Ken Margerum when he was at Stanford.

"This is something new this year, and something that will certainly help our team — a deep threat," said Townsell. "We have the speed and the people to go deep and that's been the missing link in our offense in the past."

"This team is going to be a little more wide open than what people are used to from UCLA," offered Coach Terry Donahue. "I was extremely happy with the time that Ramsey had to throw. Our offensive line did quite a job."

It was a patchwork job that Donahue was forced to make on the line, which has been hit particularly hard by injuries. It got so bad during the week that Fountain Valley High product Duval Love, a right guard, had been working out at tackle in the event that starter Steve Gemza was unable to play.

"Our plan today was not to worry about how many passes we threw and to let our skill players bite off chunks of yardage," said Donahue. "I anticipated that we'd be throwing quite a bit and our line gave us the time to do it."

It took a little while for the Bruins to make a rout of it. After an exchange of punts to start the game, the Bruins marched 66 yards in nine plays, capped by Townsell's first TD reception.

Johann preserves 10-7 Edison victory

Blocked field goal attempt sparks defensive triumph over El Dorado

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Edison High's Chargers remain unbeaten and untied after two non-league games today, thanks to their defense, and linebacker Anthony Johann in particular, following Saturday night's 10-7 non-league football decision over El Dorado High at Orange Coast College.

The 6-3, 210-pound senior broke through the left side and blocked a 22-yard field goal attempt by El Dorado's Bryan Peters with 3:27 remaining to preserve the victory before a crowd of 5,000, which watched Edison dominate from the outset, but fail to provide a knockout punch.

Edison, ranked No. 3 in Orange County, saw its offense limited to an average of one yard per carry on the ground and the aerial game could not only 74 yards, but the solid defense once again proved too tough.

"I don't expect miracles from this team," said Edison Coach Bill Workman. "But I do expect better than they played tonight."

It was a stunningly narrow decision considering the total domination Edison enjoyed through more than three quarters, despite only a 10-0 margin on the scoreboard.

But Pat Devaney's interception and 32-yard return to the Edison 11 and a second bad center snap on a punting situation almost turned a hard night's work into disaster for Edison.

Devaney's theft, in addition to a facemask penalty on the end of his run put the ball at the Edison 6-yard line and three plays later Shawn Ray burst over the left side for El Dorado's touchdown. Peters toed the PAT with 7:12 left and a potential upset was visible.

Four plays later the Edison offense again failed to generate a first down and Mark Votendahl went back to punt, but the ball sailed over his head and bounced 34 yards downfield, where El Dorado took over at the 6-yard line.

But the defense dug in again, led by Jeff Washington's third-down stop at the five, then the Hawks went for the three-point try only to see Johann break through, block the attempt, and Randy Hernandez picked the ball up and ran 38 yards to the Edison 48 to get the ball out of danger.

"We would have been fairly comfortable except for the center snaps," says Workman. "I knew they (El Dorado) were good and we're not as good as we're made out to be."

No one was arguing with Workman on that statement.

The Chargers took possession at the El Dorado 9, 18, 43, 41 and 37, in addition to their own 44, 35, 35 and 48, while El Dorado was pinned down in its own territory almost the entire game. El Dorado didn't get past midfield until 51 seconds remained in the third quarter.

Edison took a 3-0 lead on

Gerry Graham's 31-yard field goal with 5:22 left in the half after the El Dorado punter fumbled away a punt attempt, providing Edison a gift 18 yards from paydirt.

And the Chargers got their only touchdown on the next series of plays, marching 43 yards for the score against the gritty El Dorado defense.

Don Gibbs' 13-yard screen pass to Derek Griffiths (a one-handed catch), and a 17-yard strike to Jeff Washington set up John Steinger's three-yard scoring dash with 36 seconds left in the first half.

The Chargers were turned away on fourth-and-one at the El Dorado 1-yard line during the scoreless first quarter and later were unable to convert a fourth-and-one at the El Dorado 5 with a 10-0 lead.

"I thought we could get a yard," said Workman. "Maybe we're not that kind of team. I just hope they (El Dorado) are a good football team."

At halftime Edison's offense had netted 56 of its 108 yards and Banning High Coach Chris Ferragamo said, "I have an idea they're holding back some things for us."

Banning, the perennial Los Angeles City power, is scheduled to open its season against Edison at Anaheim Stadium Sept. 25.

On the other hand, no one was bad-mouthing the Chargers' defensive unit, which swarmed over the Hawks with consistency, limiting El Dorado to 0.44 yards per running down and 2.9 yards per pass attempt.

Lasorda: Dodger bullpen the difference

HOUSTON (AP) — The fortunes of the Houston Astros and the Los Angeles Dodgers, combatants in last year's divisional series, have diverged greatly this season, and Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda knows at least one reason.

Los Angeles pulled to within one-half game of the National League West lead Saturday with a 5-3 defeat of the fifth-place Astros. The NL West-leading Atlanta Braves lost to Cincinnati 4-3.

"To me, pennants are won or lost in the bullpen," Lasorda said. "I really like our bullpen. After the first month of the season, they've been doing a real good job."

While the Astros bullpen has been hampered by the loss of Joe Sambito and other injuries, Lasorda has obtained pleasant results from people like Steve Howe, who earned his 13th save Saturday.

"I hope experience will be a factor," Lasorda said. "We have been there before."

Pitcher Jerry Reuss and Howe combined to limit Houston to seven hits, while Dusty Baker knocked in a pair of runs with his 23rd home run of the season.

Baker teed off on loser Vern Ruhle, 7-13, in the first inning with his 23rd homer, giving Los Angeles a 2-0 lead.

Houston tied the score on Terry Puhl's RBI single in the third and on Bill Doran's run-scoring single in the fourth, but the Dodgers went ahead to stay in the fifth.

Bill Russell was hit by a pitch to open the inning and scored on Steve Yeager's triple. Reuss doubled to make it 4-2 and, one out later, he scored when Ken Landreaux greeted reliever Bob Knepper with a bloop double.

Ray Knight knocked in Houston's final run in the seventh with a single.

49ers' Hart suffers serious neck injury

From AP dispatches
PASADENA — Long Beach State sophomore defensive back Todd Hart was in serious condition with an apparent neck fracture suffered in Saturday's game with UCLA, a spokeswoman at Huntington Memorial Hospital said.

Hart, 19, was injured on a pass interception by the 49ers late in the third quarter. The game was delayed 10 minutes while the Servite High product was taken off the field on a stretcher.

The 6-0, 165-pound San Juan Capistrano native underwent X-rays after he was admitted to Huntington, nursing supervisor Marlene Wade said. The extent of his cervical spine injury wasn't immediately known.

UCLA won the game, 41-10.

Quote of the day

"If someone would have told me six months ago I would be spending the weekend before the start of the season at home with my family I would have said they were crazy. I really thought we would be locked in round-the-clock negotiations."
—National Football League Players Association executive director Ed Garvey.

McCullough leads Boston classic

Mike McCullough, a former Ohio amateur champion and barely a survivor in 10 years on the PGA golf tour, fired a 5-under-par 66 Saturday for a one-stroke lead after 54 holes in the Bank of Boston Classic. McCullough, 37, leads veteran George Archer and Peter Jacobsen by one stroke. . . . Chris Johnson shot a 3-under-par 69 for a three-stroke lead in the second round of the 54-hole Mary Kay golf classic at the par 72 Bent Tree Golf Club in Dallas. Beth Daniel is second with four players tied for third a stroke behind Daniel. . . . Lee Trevino, Lanny Wadkins and Curtis Strange each scored victories, but Nancy Lopez and Sally Little were upset as the United States took a 3-2 lead over Sweden in an unofficial team golf match. . . . A U.S. women's golf team, led by Julie Inkster continued its dominance in amateur team competition winning the Women's World championships at the Coligny Golf Club in suburban Geneva.

Concepcion, Soto hold off Braves

Dave Concepcion drilled a three-run first-inning homer and Mario Soto survived nine hits as Cincinnati edged Atlanta, 4-3, snapping a Reds' seven-game losing streak. Soto, 12-11, struck out five to run his major league leading total to 241. . . . Elsewhere in the National League Saturday, George Hendrick slugged a three-run homer — his first since July 31 — boosting the St. Louis Cardinals back into first place in the NL East with a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets. . . . Bill Madlock's home run on the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth inning gave Pittsburgh a wild 10-9 win over Philadelphia. . . . Tom O'Malley cracked a double and two singles and drove in two runs as surging San Francisco pounded San Diego, 8-3. . . . Pitcher Scott Sanderson hit a grand slam homer, and Al Oliver drove in three runs with a double, leading Montreal to a 10-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Oliver broke a 1-1 tie with his 21st homer, triggering a six-run third inning that was capped by Sanderson's bases-loaded shot.

WHITE FLANAGAN WINFIELD

KC gives Minnesota a twin-killing
Frank White drove in two runs and Hal McRae homered, becoming Kansas City's all-time single-season RBI leader and leading the Royals to a 9-3 victory over Minnesota to highlight American League action Saturday. . . . Elsewhere, Mike Flanagan scattered nine singles for his sixth straight win and Eddie Murray drove in three runs to pace a 14-hit attack as Baltimore routed Cleveland, 8-1. . . . Dave Winfield drove in four runs, with three-run homer and a single, and Dave Righetti fired a five-hitter as the New York Yankees trounced Milwaukee, 14-2. . . . Carlton Fisk hit a two-run homer and Jerry Koosman got late-inning relief help as the streaking Chicago White Sox blanked Oakland, 2-0. . . . Gary Allenson managed only a looping single but had five runs batted in as Boston took advantage of 11 walks and seven Detroit errors to crush the Tigers, 11-3. . . . Charlie Hough recorded his 14th win of the year (against 11 losses) as Texas downed Seattle, 5-2.

Baseball today

On this date in baseball in 1979:
Boston's Carl Yastrzemski grounded a single to right field off New York's Jim Beattie for the 3,000th base hit of his career. Yaz became the first American Leaguer to collect both 3,000 hits and 400 homers, as the Red Sox routed the Yankees, 9-2 at Fenway Park.

On this date in 1965:
Washington's Brant Alyea belted a home run on the first pitch thrown to him in a major league game.

On this date in 1954:
Before a packed house of 84,587 at Municipal Stadium, the Cleveland Indians swept a doubleheader from the New York Yankees, winning 4-1 behind Bob Lemon and 3-2 behind Early Wynn. The twin triumph put the Tribe 8½ games in front of the Yankees and all but nailed down the American League for Cleveland dashing Yankee hopes for a record sixth straight world championship.

On this date in 1947:
Pittsburgh slugger Ralph Kiner belted his seventh and eighth home runs in four games, a major league record.

McRae issues ultimatum to Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — American League RBI leader Hal McRae has warned the Kansas City Royals that unless they sign him by November, he'll test the waters of free agency.

McRae, 36, has driven in 118 runs for the Royals and is having the most productive season of his 12-year career. He said Kansas City has until the free agent re-entry draft Nov. 10 to get his signature on an acceptable contract.

"And (after Nov. 11) I won't sign with Kansas City because they've had all year," McRae said. "If they wanted to do it, they had ample time. If it's not done by the draft, I definitely don't sign with them. They won't get a chance to match an offer."

East German women set relay record

The East German team set a world record of 3:19.05 Saturday to win the women's 1,600 meters relay at the European track and field championships. The effort broke the old mark of 3:19.23 set by another East German team at the Montreal Olympics in 1976. . . . Veteran Mario Andretti shattered the lap record by five seconds Saturday in a turbocharged Ferrari and won the pole position in today's Grand Prix of Italy Formula One race. . . . Japan defeated the United States, 4-1, Saturday and all but eliminated the Americans from title contention in the 27th World Amateur Baseball Championship. The loss left the U.S. with a 4-3 record.

NFL players are underdogs

Owners seem to have done good job of intimidating union

One giving a continental damn about the outcome of the NFL owners-players thing would take the side of the athletes over the moguls.

This has nothing to do with right and wrong. This is simply because America loves the underdog and the players, up to this particular stage of the gallop, have been quite outclassed.

A bystander at this ridiculous saga gets the feeling the players' union is unsure, shaky and timid. Certainly, the conclusion would be that the union is intimidated.

For instance, at the most recent union meeting, announced as being for the purpose of setting a strike date, no strike date was set. Instead, player representatives emerged from the session to state sternly that the players had decided to give the owners "one more chance" to sit down and negotiate in earnest.

The thing is, it should be reasonably clear to the players by now that the owners do not particularly care to negotiate if for no other reason than they don't have to. The owners are making no demands. They are perfectly satisfied with the manner in which events are transpiring at the present time.

The National Football League owners share in a $2 billion TV package. They experience little trouble selling out stadiums and raise ticket prices with similar regularity to a grocery store increasing the price of a fifth of milk.

The next major source of revenue is something called pay or cable TV and more billions are expected from this. In fact, the cable thing is shadowy and no one is quite sure how much money will be involved.

The players' share of all this is quite pitiful. The athletes of the NFL are the lowest paid in all the professional sports and the rank and file screams for a more equitable share.

The suggested figure is 55 percent. If the owners are not laughing at this request, it is a mortal cinch they do not care to talk about it.

SPORTS COLUMNIST

BUD TUCKER

The owners polish their public relations image by occasionally tossing a bone to the players. The other day, they made an offer of pay increases across the board, calling it generous. The players said it was peanuts and threw it out.

Now they were coming up to the opening of the regular season. The owners said the gates were open and the players indicated they would not interfere with the opening day rituals by calling strikes at selected arenas. However, union mouthpiece Ed Garvey said the organization would not object to any individual teams which elected not to play.

Added to this display of solidarity was another threat by the union. The owners were warned that players might once again employ the maneuver of coming out on the field before games and — right there in front of the entire audience — shake hands.

Presumably, the terrified owners would take note of this and run whimpering into the underbrush.

Of course, the players' union should be told shaking hands won't get it done. The one weapon the players have is a strike and if they are going to use it, they should get on with it. The owners are not paying any attention to threats that they are being given only "one more chance."

The union will have to get tough. They will have to use their one weapon — the strike — and for heaven's sake, boys, don't tiptoe out on the field and touch hands. Stomp right out there and kiss.

Historical victory for Lloyd

McEnroe, meanwhile, will watch Lendl, Connors in final

NEW YORK (AP) — While Chris Evert Lloyd is thinking about history, she's busy rewriting it on the tennis courts.

John McEnroe, on the other hand, lost his chance at joining her in the record books.

Lloyd, the winningest woman in U.S. Open history, captured her sixth singles title Saturday, disposing of Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1 in just 64 minutes.

"The first time you win Wimbledon or the U.S. Open is really a thrill," she said, "but I appreciate and maybe have a place in history by winning a sixth, so I can understand that a little bit better."

McEnroe saw his bid for a fourth straight men's crown disappear when he was stopped by his nemesis, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-4, 7-6. McEnroe's three consecutive championships were the most since Bill Tilden captured six straight U.S. national title from 1920-25.

Lendl's sixth straight victory over McEnroe, dating to the quarterfinals of the French Open in May 1981, sends him against Jimmy Connors, who is seeking his fourth U.S. Open title in today's nationally televised final (CBS). Connors eliminated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Lloyd now has won 66 matches in America's premiere tennis event, the most ever for a woman. She has won the singles title in six of the last eight years and has reached at least the semifinals in each of the 12 years she has competed here.

Only two women have won more U.S. Open titles — Molla Mallory with eight from 1915 to 1926 and Helen Wills Moody with seven from 1923 to 1931.

"I'm not driven by it," Lloyd insisted when asked if being in tennis history compelled her to victory. "When I was younger, I never thought about it. I was just playing for that year."

"I know my time is limited. It gets tougher mentally every year. I think about history more and more."

"I was in kind of a trance out there because I wanted it so badly," she added.

The 20-year-old Mandlikova, losing to Lloyd in the final for the second time in three years, said she's looking forward to when the 27-year-old Lloyd retires.

"She said that she was thinking of retiring after the 1981 finals, and I said, 'Oh, God, I am so happy.' But she's playing better and better, so I think I better not believe her anymore."

Lloyd's mastery of Mandlikova pales next to what Lendl has done to McEnroe, the world's No. 1 ranked player.

"He's got confidence against me," McEnroe said. "I just don't play aggressively enough against him. He's improved his serve and it's hard for me to attack the way I did before."

"I get a little disorganized against him. He makes me do different things."

Lendl, known for the hardest forehand in tennis today, said his serve was the difference.

"I didn't give any chance on any serve in the first two sets," Lendl said. "The difference is in the rhythm of my serve. I'm returning better and I'm serving better."

McEnroe agreed.

"He goes for the big serve, for a winner on the first shot," the deposed champion said. "I played better at the end, but not well enough to win."

In the first, Brian Downing grounded out, but Rod Carew and Don Baylor delivered back-to-back singles. After Reggie Jackson fled to left, Doug DeCinces walked.

That brought on Wilfong, who smacked a base hit through the right side to score Baylor and Carew. Juan Beniquez then followed with an RBI hit.

The Angels got their fourth run in the second inning as Bob Boone opened with a walk and Brian Downing made it to second when Toronto right-fielder Jesse Barfield simply missed his fly ball near the warning track.

Stieb then retired Carew and Baylor and walked Jackson intentionally. But DeCinces managed to beat out an infield hit to score Boone.

Wilfong, who was a starter for five years in Minnesota, takes his reserve role in stride these days, but was particularly happy to play both an offensive and defensive role Saturday night.

"This is different to me now, but I've got a role to play. If you get a hit and knock in some runs, it's a bonus," he noted.

And with Grich suffering from the flu, Wilfong had the added pressure of protecting the right side during Forsch's no-hit bid.

"If a ball had been hit 20 feet over my head, I was going to dive for it," Wilfong admitted. "I think everybody was aware of the no-hitter, and you try to play a little bit harder."

Toronto's lone run came in the seventh when Gino Petralli singled, moved to third on Carew's error and scored on a single by Al Woods.

Iorg got the only other Blue Jays' hit, a single in the eighth inning which was quickly erased by a double play. But there was no way to erase Iorg's double in the sixth.

"I was disappointed when Iorg got the hit but I've been pitching so poorly lately that I didn't let it bother me and kept concentrating on the hitters," Forsch added. "Keeping them off the bases was the key for me tonight plus getting an early lead. When Toronto gets on base, they tend to score a lot."

The huge crowd, lured by Back Pack Night, pushed the Angels' 1982 attendance figures over the 2.5 million mark.

Forsch made quick work to gain his 12th victory against 10 defeats. He needed only 88 pitches and wrapped up the victory in just over two hours.

ANGEL NOTES: Fred Lynn's pinch-hit, three-run double in the eighth inning of the Angels' 6-2 victory Friday night improved the center-fielder's pinch-hitting average to .500 this season (3-for-6). That's slightly better than his seven-year career average as a pinch-hitter — .143. As a team, the Angels are batting .326 this season in the pinch-hitting category. . . . Brian Downing had a seven-game hitting streak snapped Friday night, but started up another by getting a base hit in the fourth inning Saturday night. . . . Geoff Zahn is now second in the American League in victories with 16 after his complete-game effort Friday night. Kansas City's Larry Gura leads the league with 17 wins. . . . The Angels close out the homestand today with a 1:30 contest. Tommy John (11-11) will face the Blue Jays' Jim Clancy. They'll then open a seven-game road trip Monday night with stops in Chicago and Toronto.

ensuing possession put the Bruins in position for a John Lee field goal and it was 10-0. But the 49ers struck back with their best march of the afternoon, moving from their own 20, 80 yards for a score in 14 plays to make it 10-7.

"That score seemed to shake us up a little bit," said Ramsey. "We knew coming in that Long Beach wasn't a bad football team and we knew they wouldn't be a pushover. But I think that touchdown did something for us."

UCLA scored on its next two possessions and in quick order reestablished a commanding lead. Though the 49ers pretty well shut down UCLA's running game in the first half, the Bruins were successful through the air waves.

And the Bruins really didn't utilize one of their big guns at the receiving end — wide receiver Cormac Carney. The Bruins' top pass-catcher the past two years snared just two passes for 17 yards.

"He had double coverage the whole day," Ramsey explained, "but he'll have his days too."

The Bruins finished the game with 24 first downs to 17 for the 49ers. UCLA gained 306 yards passing, the fourth-highest single-game total in school history.

"We gave Ramsey an awful long time to throw," admitted Currey. "We couldn't afford to do that and expect to win today."

Gators bite USC

Trojans drop opener, 17-9

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida has not had overwhelming success during its 75 years of intercollegiate football. But the 11th-ranked Gators reached a victorious and emotional high Saturday by defeating No. 10 Southern California, 17-9.

"In our first games, we've hit a peak — an unnatural, unparalleled peak," Coach Charley Pell said, savoring consecutive victories over Miami and Southern Cal, both Top Twenty teams.

Florida scored all the points it needed Saturday in the final five minutes of the first half. Spencer Jackson made a sensational fourth-down catch of Wayne Peace's 1-yard touchdown pass and James Jones' 22-yard run with 37 seconds left in the first half capped a 97-yard drive as the Gators spoiled USC's 1982 opener.

The emotion spilled from the stands onto the field as Pell led his charges in a postgame victory lap to the cheers of a sellout crowd, which was not accustomed to beating such a traditional power as Southern Cal.

"The fans were the 12th man on the field today," Pell said. "It (the victory lap) was a salute to the fans. They haven't seen a Florida team reach that high since we've been here."

"This was a great war in the trenches. It came down to whoever put the flag up on top of the hill at the end wins, and we did."

Wilber Marshall, the Gators' amazingly quick outside linebacker who was in on all four of Florida's quarterback sacks, went even further.

"It has to be the greatest win ever," he said. "Florida needed some respect and our players needed some respect. You just don't know what this game means to me and my team and to my coach."

Marshall, who played himself into a state of near-exhaustion, said he made it halfway around the field during the victory lap "and I just fell to my knees and thanked the Lord."

Marshall led a defensive unit which held Southern Cal to 84 yards on the ground. Veteran observers, including USC's staff personnel, could not remember the last time the Trojans were held to such a puny rushing output.

"Every time you looked up you saw him (Marshall) on you," said Sean Salisbury, the Trojans' sophomore quarterback, who passed for 222 yards with much of that coming in the late going as USC frantically tried to play catch up.

"We knew coming into the game that he was a potential All-American. I'm a little sore right now and I know an awful lot of it has to do with No. 88 (Marshall)."

Jackson's diving grab came with 4:52 left in the second period. Peace lobbed the ball over the head of cornerback Darrel Hopper and Jackson came down just inside the left boundary of the end zone before he slid out of bounds. The touchdown spoiled a goal-line stand by Southern Cal after Florida failed on three previous cracks following a first down at the 2.

The Gators then stunned the Trojans with a 97-yard strike in six plays after David Pryor's 49-yard punt was downed at the Florida 3. The drive included a 48-yard gain on a look-in pass from Peace to Dwayne Dixon.

Peace, who completed his last eight passes in the first half and was 11-of-14 for 142 yards in the first two periods, also hit Tyrone Young for 14 yards and flipped a 7-yarder to Jones, who made a one-handed catch at the USC 22. Peace then gave the ball to Jones on a draw play.

Boise St. beats CSF

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Junior quarterback Tim Klena completed 22 passes for 282 yards and one touchdown and freshman Mark Jensen booted two field goals to pace Boise State to a 20-9 non-conference football victory over Cal State Fullerton Saturday night.

The game was the season opener for Boise State of the Big Sky Conference. For Cal State Fullerton of the Pacific Coast Athletic conference, the loss was its first this year against one victory.

Klena's passing performance was one of the few bright spots offensively for both teams during the game, which was plagued by penalties and turnovers. Jensen, who placekicks without the aid of a kicking tee, booted field goals of 27 and 21 yards in his first collegiate game.

Fountain Valley High product Greg Steinke accounted for all of Fullerton's points with three field goals.

SMU wins, 51-7

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Southern Methodist All-American tailback Eric Dickerson dashed for two touchdowns and 183 yards Saturday night, making new coach Bobby Collins' debut a success with a 51-7 college intersectional rout of Tulane.

Dickerson became the second SMU player and the eighth in Southwest Conference history to gain over 3,000 yards in a career.

Dickerson and Craig James, SMU's other senior tailback, each gained over 100 yards for the 10th time in their careers in the same game.

James gouged out 110 yards and scored a touchdown against the outmanned Green Wave.

He ran 42 yards for a touchdown on the No. 8 ranked Mustangs' second offensive play and the Green Wave, now 0-2 for the season, never recovered.

Rams aren't alone with their troubles

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Rams and the Green Bay Packers, two of the National Football League's least predictable teams this year, meet here today in an opener that could tell much about their futures.

The Packers began training camp with their highest level of optimism in Bart Starr's eight seasons as coach. It was based largely on their 6-2 finish for an 8-8 season in 1981.

But after a 2-2 preseason record, it is clear that the Packers have failed to solve two major available offensive tackles — Karl Swanke, Greg Koch and Tim Stokes. Swanke missed the last 12 games of last season with a knee injury and has been bothered by stretched knee ligaments during the exhibition season, but is expected to start against the Rams.

Jefferson complained about the Packers' offensive scheme last week after he finished the preseason with only six receptions in four games. Starr admitted that was a waste of Jefferson's talents, and promised that the situation would change during the regular season.

Jefferson said the Packers have to forget about the preseason, which they concluded with defeats of 24-3 to the Los Angeles Raiders and 41-27 to the New England Patriots.

"Some players don't put as much into the preseason, and I admittedly am one of those," he said. "But now is the time to pull all the stops. We are comparable talent-wise with the Rams and I think we can beat them."

The Rams defeated Green Bay 51-21 in 1980 and 35-23 last year. However, the Rams slipped to 6-10 last season, their worst record since 1965, and failed to make the playoffs.

The Rams are a team in transition, but still have some impressive weapons in quarterback Bert Jones, acquired from Baltimore last spring, and Wendell Tyler, who rushed for 1,074 yards last season.

Allen-led Raiders test 49ers today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marcus Allen, latest winner of the Heisman Trophy, heads into his first National Football League game as a key man on the league's most controversial team, the Los Angeles Raiders.

"I feel comfortable with all these big guys around me," said Allen during the exhibition season leading up to today's regular season opener against the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers at sold-out Candlestick Park. (Channel 4 at 1 p.m.)

He also feels comfortable being on a Los Angeles team, after breaking dozens of college football rushing records for the Southern California Trojans. The Raiders, an Oakland team for 22 years, will be playing home games in Los Angeles this season, although their current practice site is the old one in Oakland.

Coach Bill Walsh's 49ers were virtually injury free last season as they recorded 19 victories.

Costa Mesa has golf logjam

O'Shea, Greer, former runners-up, in contention

By HOWARD L. HANDY
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

There's a logjam at the top of the field at the halfway point of the City of Costa Mesa Will Jordan Classic golf tournament that includes five players, two of them former runners-up.

The quintet of golfers each fired a 6-under-par 64 over the 5,006-yard Mesa Linda course Saturday. They will be among the top 16 players to go off the tee around noon today on the longer (6,427-yard) Los Lagos course to determine a champion.

Paul O'Shea remembers last year's runnerup position well. A resident of Newport Beach and member of Irvine Coast Country Club, O'Shea drilled a tee shot and misjudged the distance on his second. He drove one over the green and onto the pavement in the parking lot for an out-of-bounds and a two-stroke penalty.

When he left the 18th tee, he was a shot in front but lost by one with the penalty.

"I definitely want to play the 18th hole differently this year," O'Shea said in the locker room after his opening round. "I grew up on the Los Lagos course but I gave the tournament away last year with a double bogey on that last hole."

"I've played the hole many times since last year but I don't think about that shot. Oh, if I'm leading again tomorrow (today) coming to that hole, it will probably enter my mind."

O'Shea has been on his game this year, winning both the Santa Ana and Huntington Beach City titles so far.

"I want to win this one and the Newport Beach City championship to win the Orange County Grand Slam," O'Shea says. The Newport Beach tourney is a one-day affair at Irvine Coast CC on Oct. 8.

Also tied for the lead at 64 are Greg Frederick of Huntington Beach who plays out of Huntington Seacrest CC; Brad Greer of Huntington Beach who plays out of Mission Viejo CC; Chris Keyte of Garden Grove who is a member at Costa Mesa, CC; and Kevin Slater of San Diego.

There are five other players tied at 65 with a total of 32 in the scratch championship flight firing below-par rounds. There are 11 others at even par 70 on the Mesa Linda course.

Yama Yamasaki of Gardena, playing in the final group of the day, hit his tee shot on the 18th hole, a 131-yard, par-3 layout, a half inch past the cup.

Frederick put his chip shot in the hole on the 230-yard par-4 third hole for an eagle two.

Jim George, the only former winner in the past nine years of the tournament, was well back in the pack with a 75 for the first round.

Greer lost to Mark O'Meara, former U.S. Amateur winner and now a touring pro, in a playoff in 1980 on the first extra hole.

Kickers await fate

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions punter Tom Skladany and placekicker Eddie Murray both will have to wait until Monday for the final word on their suspension from the National Football League team.

Skladany and Murray, who walked out of training camp this week over a contract dispute, met with Lions coach Monte Clark for 20 minutes Friday at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Before the meeting, Clark said Skladany and Murray were "to inform me they were reporting."

"We're suspended until 5 o'clock Monday," Skladany told a reporter after the meeting. "We have another meeting then, and we'll talk to you after that."

"It'll all be resolved (by Monday)," Murray added.

The two kickers failed to report Wednesday on the advice of their attorney, Howard Slusher. The two are in the option year of their contracts.

Slusher, a California attorney, has accused the Lions of stonewalling in negotiations with his clients before bargaining was forced to halt July 15, the expiration of the basic agreement between team owners and the NFL Players Association.

Clark said he will decide Monday whether to activate Skladany and Murray, issue another suspension or put them on the reserve list.

Estancia gets second place

Estancia High School opened the 1982 volleyball season by finishing second in the El Camino Invitational women's tournament Saturday at El Camino College.

There were 25 teams involved in the tournament with the Eagles losing to Dana Hills in the finals, 15-9.

Kelly Hogan and Amy Hathcock played well at strong hitter with Shannon Rieden gaining all-tournament honors at middle blocker. Jane Ferda, Jane Tomei, Gina Garrett and Kathy Hall all played well at setter and on the back row.

In the semifinals, Estancia defeated Fountain Valley, 15-6.

Elway's passing (4 TDs) leads Stanford, 35-14

Oklahoma upset by West Virginia, 41-27; Georgia edges BYU with 1:11 to go

From AP dispatches

WEST LAFAYETTE — Senior quarterback John Elway threw four touchdown passes and picked apart a young Purdue secondary for 333 yards as Stanford scored a 35-14 victory Saturday, spoiling Leon Burtnett's debut as the Boilermakers' football coach.

Elway, who completed 29 of 37 passes, had a 30-yard scoring throw to flanker Mike Tolliver and a 5-yarder to Chris Dressel in the first half. He then connected with tailback Vincent White on a 25-yard play to give Stanford a 21-7 lead with 4:04 in the third period.

White, a 5-8, 190-pound senior, was Elway's favorite offensive weapon. He caught 11 passes for 134 yards and accumulated 97 more on 14 carries.

Former Edison High star Mike Dotterer capped a 97-yard Stanford drive by scoring from the 1 and Elway later gave the Cardinals a 35-7 advantage with a 21-yard scoring toss to Eric Mullins.

West Virginia 41, Oklahoma 27

NORMAN, Okla. — Jeff Hostetler picked apart Oklahoma's defense with a brilliant aerial display, firing four touchdown passes, leading unranked West Virginia to a stunning 41-27 victory over the No. 9 Sooners.

Hostetler, a junior from Hollopple, Pa., threw for 321 yards, with his final touchdown pass being a game-winner to Wayne Brown midway in the final period.

The final points came on a 43-yard touchdown run on a draw play by Curlin Beck with 2:14 remaining.

Washington 55, UTEP 0

SEATTLE — Quarterback Steve Pelluer passed for 256 yards and two touchdowns and Chuck Nelson booted four field goals as No. 2-ranked Washington opened its season by thrashing Texas-El Paso, 55-0.

Led by the sharp-throwing Pelluer, a junior, the Huskies registered more than 500 yards in total offense on a drizzly, overcast day. Pelluer, who was taken out of the game late in the third quarter, completed 17 of 29 passes.

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

Pelluer had a 13-yard scoring pass to Anthony Allen in the first quarter and a 28-yard touchdown throw to Paul Skansi in the second period as the Huskies led 27-0 at halftime before a crowd of 45,839 in Husky Stadium.

Arizona St. 23, Utah 10

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Fullback Dwaine "Tex" Wright and quarterback Todd Hons each scored on one-yard runs in the second half as 15th-ranked Arizona State came from behind to beat Utah 23-10 in a non-conference college football game Saturday night.

Arizona State, now 2-0, trailed its former Western Athletic Conference rival 10-6 at halftime before rebounding to hand the Utes their first loss in two games.

Wright's touchdown run 2:27 into the third quarter was set up by Sun Devil safety Paul Moyer's interception and 36-yard return to the Utah 12.

Hons added his one-yard scoring run with 5:32 left in the fourth quarter for a 20-10 lead.

California 31, Colorado 17

BOULDER, Colo. — Fullback John Tuggle ran for two short-yardage touchdowns as California capitalized on Colorado turnovers to take an early 21-0 lead, then hung on for a 31-17 win.

The game pitted Cal Coach Joe Kapp and Colorado's Bill McCartney in their debuts as head coaches.

Colorado committed five turnovers in the first half, and Cal converted three of them into touchdowns. Tuggle scored on a pair of 1-yard runs, and halfback Mark Funderburk also scored on a 1-yard run after setting up his TD with a 35-yard pass reception from quarterback Gale Gilbert.

Arkansas 38, Tulsa 0

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Diminutive Derek Holloway caught a 67-yard touchdown pass and made big plays to set up two other scores as 13th-ranked Arkansas trounced Tulsa, 38-0.

Holloway's TD catch came on a long pass from Brad Taylor and made the score 14-0 midway in the second quarter. Minutes later, the 5-8, 169-pound senior returned a punt 29 yards to midfield and Arkansas made it 21-0 six plays later.

Then, late in the third quarter, Holloway made a spectacular falling catch at the 6-yard line to set up a 23-yard field goal by Ernie Villarreal — his third of the game.

Penn State 39, Maryland 31

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Quarterback Todd Blackledge threw four touchdown passes for the second straight week as he rallied seventh-ranked Penn State to a 39-31 win over Maryland.

After Penn State fell behind 24-23 late in the third quarter, Blackledge led a drive of 78 yards that was capped with a 23-yard touchdown pass to Greg Garrity.

Blackledge then directed the Nittany Lions 60 yards in five plays, throwing 10 yards to Kenny Jackson in the end zone for a 36-24 lead in the final period.

Georgia 17, BYU 14

ATHENS, Ga. — Sophomore Kevin Butler booted a 44-yard field goal with 1:11 remaining to cap a fourth quarter rally and lift the sixth-ranked Georgia Bulldogs to a 17-14 victory over Brigham Young.

The winning kick was set up when the Bulldogs, 2-0, marched 40 yards in the last three minutes, keyed by a 23-yard burst by Herschel Walker to the Cougars' 33-yard line.

Walker, who rushed for 124 yards on 31 carries, had gotten Georgia even at 14-14 with only 5:36 left when he dove over for a 1-yard touchdown.

Michigan 20, Wisconsin 9

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan tailback Lawrence Ricks gained 153 yards on 24 carries, including a 4-yard touchdown run, and led the error-prone, 12th-ranked Wolverines to a 20-9 Big Ten win over Wisconsin in the season opener for both teams.

With Ricks, a 5-10, 195-pound senior from Barberton, Ohio, carrying the ball on six of the 10 plays in the drive, Michigan marched 60 yards the first time it had the ball and scored on Ricks' spinning run over right tackle to take a 7-0 lead.

Nebraska 42, Iowa 7

LINCOLN, Neb. — Turner Gill threw two touchdown passes and directed two other scoring marches, sparking No. 3 Nebraska to a 42-7 victory over Iowa.

The crowd of 76,013, Nebraska's 119th straight sellout, saw the Cornhuskers score on three of their first four possessions and bolt to a 28-0 halftime lead in avenging a 10-7 loss to Iowa in last year's opener.

Gill, coming off a leg injury that sidelined him in the Orange Bowl, fired a 41-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar in the first quarter and hit Todd Brown on a 7-yard scoring pass in the fourth period.

Alabama 45, Georgia Tech 7

ATLANTA — Jesse Bendross dashed 58 yards on an end around and Walter Lewis raced 41 yards for second-quarter touchdowns as fourth-ranked Alabama crushed Georgia Tech, 45-7.

Alabama scored on its first five possessions as the Crimson Tide launched the season in impressive fashion in a light drizzle, avenging a 24-21 upset loss to Tech a year ago.

Enjoy A Bountiful Harvest Of New Business

P.O. Box 18619 Irvine, CA. 92713
552-7336

August 18, 1982

Dear Friend of the Festival,

Less than two months remain before Irvine's annual Harvest Festival and the time has come to once again put together our largest and most successful promotional tool - The Harvest Festival Program.

We are pleased to announce that this year's official program will be a beautiful four-color tabloid and will be produced by the Orange Coast Publishing Company, publishers of the Daily Pilot, Irvine Mirror and Mission Viejo Mirror newspapers.

We will print and distribute 68,000 copies. This is nearly seven times the number we distributed last year. The programs will be distributed in all three Pilot/Mirror newspapers which will take us into every household in both Irvine and Mission Viejo two days before the festival begins. This will leave 10,000 copies which will be distributed at the gate during the festival.

Even though we are printing seven times as many copies as last year, the Orange Coast Publishing Company has offered to make the advertising space available at the same rates as last year's program. In addition, they will do all the copywriting, layout and production work you might require at no extra charge.

Perhaps the most exciting aspect of this year's program is that the Orange Coast Publishing Company is going to donate $150.00 directly to the Harvest Festival for every page of advertising sold.

Your support of this program is crucial to both the pre-festival publicity and the eventual success of the festival itself. Since space is sure to fill quickly you will want to reserve yours now. To reserve space or receive more information, phone Kevin Koster at the Daily Pilot/Mirror Group (714) 642-4321 ext. 260.

Thank you so very much for your continued support of the Irvine Harvest Festival and the community groups which benefit from the festival's proceeds.

Sincerely yours,

Tim Parker
Tim Parker
Chairman
Irvine Harvest Festival Committee

We are delighted to offer you this opportunity to participate in the official program of the 1982 Irvine Harvest Festival.

The program will contain news and photos about the festival and its participants, activities, games, exhibitions and a complete up-to-date layout of the festival grounds. It will be the definitive reference and souvenir of this year's festival.

Join the excitement by advertising in one of the year's most anxiously awaited publications.

Houston

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly riddled the Houston secondary for 208 yards passing and tailback Mark Rush scored three touchdowns Saturday as 19th ranked Miami, Fla., blew past the Cougars, 31-12, in a regionally televised college football game.

Kelly, a senior from East Brady, Pa. who is being touted as a Heisman Trophy candidate, hit 16 of 27 passes to run his career yardage total to 5,021 as the Hurricanes, 17-14 losers to 11th ranked Florida a week ago, evened their record at 1-1.

It was the season opener for Bill Yeoman's Houston team, which has now dropped five of the last six games in this series which stands at 7-7.

Rush caught a 16-yard touchdown pass from Kelly early in the first quarter and scored twice on 2-yard runs on which he dived over the Houston defensive front.

Kelly hit three of four passes as the Hurricanes drove 70 yards in six plays after the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead on the 16-yard scoring pass to Rush.

Arizona on top

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Vance Johnson ran for three touchdowns, including a 93-yard opening kickoff return, as Arizona out-gunned Oregon State 38-12 Saturday night in rainy weather and despite numerous penalties.

Johnson rushed for 119 yards on 24 carries and caught 4 passes for 39 more yards from junior quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe, who led the Wildcats to 499 total yards in the season — and Pacific 10 opener for both teams.

Arizona held Oregon State to 177 yards offensively. Tunnicliffe threw for one touchdown in completing 14 of 21 passes for 175 yards. He was intercepted twice.

Fall boating class starts

Balboa Power Squadron's fall boating course gets under way Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, 720 E. Bay Ave. Balboa.

Following registration there will be a slide show previewing the 13-week course, followed by a lecture on handling under normal conditions by Past Commander Charles Phelan.

The Balboa Power Squadron is a unit of the far-flung United States power squadrons which has been engaged in safe boating education for more than half a century.

All classes in the course will be taught by veteran boating persons who are members of BPS.

The course covers such subjects as seamanship and common emergencies, Rules of the Nautical Road, manners and customs, handling under adverse conditions, compass and charts, aids to navigation, lights and equipment, inland boating and trailering and winds up with piloting and charting sessions.

Class chairman is Louis R. Cook and the class secretary is Eleanor Hogan. Further information may be obtained by calling 543-7347.

Macres win title

FLUSHING MEADOWS, N.Y. — The father-son team of Tim Macres and Tim Jr. won the doubles title at the Family Challenge tennis tournament here at the National Tennis Center, defeating the team of John and Brian Miller, 6-1, 6-3.

The Macres reside in Newport Beach where Tim Jr. is a graduate of Newport Harbor High. He will attend Cal State Fullerton in the fall.

Big-10 ref dies at game

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Referee Richard McVay died of an apparent massive heart attack Saturday after collapsing during the Michigan State-Illinois Big Ten football contest, hospital officials said.

McVay, 55, of Westerville, Ohio, fell suddenly to the turf at the MSU 48-yard-line, just seconds after a play with about 10 minutes remaining in the first half.

Several doctors and trainers from both squads worked on McVay for about 10 minutes before he was rushed to Burnham City Hospital in Champaign at 4:12 p.m. CDT.

Despite efforts at cardiopulmonary resuscitation, he was pronounced dead at 4:35 p.m., said Charlotte Golden, Burnham nursing supervisor.

Dolphins defeated in opener

By RANDY TIFT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Dana Hills High, under new head football coach Don Douglass, was dealt a setback in its season opener, falling to Garden Grove, 27-6, Saturday afternoon on the Dolphins' field.

On their first drive of the day, the Dolphins marched to the Garden Grove 22-yard line, but failed to put a point on the board as a fourth down pass went incomplete. The Argonauts marched it back the other way, scoring on John Jennings' 5-yard run. They never looked back.

Garden Grove dominated the game on the ground, totaling 360 yards rushing. Tailback Kent Becker ran over and around the Dolphins to the tune of 233 yards.

"We just got handled physically," said Douglass. "We couldn't sustain a drive and they worked us over. We couldn't stop Becker and he was the key to Garden Grove's game."

The Argonauts scored twice in the second quarter within a span of three minutes. Becker scored the second touchdown on a spectacular 83-yard run, breaking two tackles at the 33-yard line and dashing untouched into the end zone.

Undaunted, the Dolphins, in the waning seconds of the first half, marched to inside the Garden Grove 10-yard line. Once again, however, they were stopped short of the goal line as time ran out.

The Dolphins' only score came in the third quarter. After Garden Grove's Ken Taylor scored his team's third touchdown, Dana Hills' Mike Germain ran the ensuing kickoff 96 yards for six points.

The Argonauts scored on their next possession as quarterback Darin Geringer scored on a 17-yard keeper. And that was all the scoring in the game.

As far as sloppy openers go, this game was no exception. Both teams consistently missed tackles, and there were eight fumbles in the game, two by Dana Hills.

In the fourth quarter, the Dolphins fumbled the ball, only to get it right back two plays later and then fumble again, this time recovering their own miscalculation.

Douglass praised the play of Garden Grove, which was meeting the Dolphins for the first time.

"Their team looked good," Douglass said, "They are well-coached and were ready for us today."

Douglass found some bright spots in his own team's performance. Matt Cooper, his quarterback, was one.

"Cooper threw some good passes today and the receivers did a fine job."

Cooper passed for 82 yards on 6 of 17 completions. Shane Pratt was the Dolphins' leading rusher with 63 yards.

Sickness ends channel swim tries

DOVER, England (AP) — Seasickness in the rough waters of the English Channel forced two American and two English swimmers to abandon their attempts Saturday to swim the 12-mile 22-mile-wide waterway between England and France.

But a 22-year-old Maltese student and a 41-year-old Englishman were still striving to reach France late in the day, according to Audrey Scott, secretary of the Channel Swimming Association which monitors all crossings.

Still plugging away late Saturday were Nicky Farrugia from St. Paul's Bay, Malta, and Michael Read, an animal nutritionist.

Stephen Fossett, 38-year-old stockbroker from Chicago, was forced to abandon after four hours and 52-year-old Stella Taylor, a former nun from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., gave up after 7 1/2 hours.

'Rendezvous Under the Palms' committee member Marilyn Hausman at the Newporter Resort.

Someone will be the owner of a new $7,200 Revillon ranch mink fur on Sept. 26.

Someone else (or it could be the same lucky person) will be the owner of a new custom designed dress from St. John valued at $500.

The two fashion items are prizes to be awarded at the gala fundraiser planned by the Orange County Chapter, Multiple Sclerosis Society, at the Newporter Resort in Newport Beach.

The fur was donated by Revillon Furs of Saks Fifth Avenue and the dress was created exclusively for Saks and the MS benefit by St. John's Marie Gray.

The party will be staged from 5 to 8 p.m. at the poolside terrace and surrounding gardens of the Newporter, now under new ownership by the Los Angeles Biltmore.

Designed to put the fun back into fund raising, the early evening party will feature an exclusive presentation of the American designer collection and Revillon Furs by Saks Fifth Avenue, South Coast Plaza.

Fashions will include the latest designs by Oscar de la Renta, Geoffrey Beene, Adolfo, Bill Blass, Michael Volbracht, Mary McFadden, Mollie Parnis, Halston, John Anthony, Hanae Mori, Adele Simpson and Arnold Scassi.

Adding to the evening, dubbed "Rendezvous Under the Palms," will be mimes, artists, handwriting analysts and an elaborate cocktail buffet with dancing to the music of Henry Brandon and his orchestra.

Steering committee members for the benefit include Valley Reilly, Floss
Schumacher, Mabel Allred, Jo Kelly, Marlie
Reed, Jan Taylor, Louise Ewing, Marcia Cashion, Shirlee Guggenheim, Carol
Campbell, Marilyn Hausman and Barbara Bowie.

Special donors and partial underwriters of the benefit are The Newporter, Saks Fifth Avenue, Frank B. Hall and Co., Richard P.
Hausman, John Parker, Harry Johnson,
Keith Lumpkin, Ed Schumacher, Larry
Stone, Bill Volt and Bob Gray.

Tickets to "Rendezvous Under the Palms" are available for $75 per person through the Multiple Sclerosis Society office, 7571 Westminster Ave., Westminster, 92683, 891-4608. Ticket fees are tax deductible.

Dressing for fight against MS

One good way to learn about a person is to listen to her friends.

And when you listen to friends of Marilyn Hausman, you hear that she is generous, creative and an astute business woman with a great sense of humor.

"Marilyn Hausman told me she was going to be on your Style cover page soon," said one of the friends. "She is such an excellent choice," said a member of the National Charity League. "She is a most generous person."

Hausman's primary philanthropy is the Orange County chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. She is dedicated to helping find the cause and cure of this disease which attacks young adults in the prime of life.

She chairs many of the society's fund-raising events, and is currently on the steering committee arranging the Sunday,
Sept. 26 garden party at the Newporter Resort, Newport Beach.

The native Californian and Newport Beach resident for 19 years has spent nine years as a volunteer with the Newport Beach Chapter of the National Charity League.

She and her husband, Richard Hausman are responsible for an endowment to UC Irvine's College of Medicine/Department of Ophthalmology as well as to the University of Southern California's School of Pharmacy.

The Hausmans also lend support to Claremont McKenna College, the South Coast Repertory Theatre, the Providence Speech and Hearing Center, the Children's Home Society, the Boy Scouts, the Laguna Beach School of Art and many other local and national charitable organizations.

Another friend said about Hausman:
"She wraps and decorates the most beautiful Christmas gifts I've ever seen, and during the holidays, her home is exquisite."

Says Hausman, "I learned to wrap packages in my father's drug store. The secret to wrapping gifts is a glue gun. Once you learn to use it, wrapping a gift is much easier."

But wrapping them is only one phase of her genius with gifts. She knows how to choose them for important people, and uses that talent as proprietor of a unique service company that selects gifts for business executives.

Her touch for decorating packages also is expanded in another business, decorating houses. Hausman buys houses and redecorates them for resale.

During the last five years, Hausman has bought eight "tired" houses and has "redone them." On one project in Bay Shores, she not only redecorated the house, she built on an addition. Her last
"spec" house on Lido Isle was torn down and rebuilt from the ground up.

Her love for decoration is extended to the family's boat.

"For the last 10 years, we have decorated our boat and have entered the holiday boat parade," she said.

"The family, except for the little one, are expert fishermen, and I have taken a lot of gourmet cooking classes just to learn how to cook fish. If we can't eat what we catch, we tag it and let it go."

"We use the boat often for entertaining friends, but mostly it is the family members who really enjoy it, we are water surrounded."

The family includes "Rick" who is Richard Paul Hausman Jr., 24; Teresa Lynn Dewey, 22; Mary Jo, 19 and John, 14. And in December, Teresa will present the Hausmans with their first grandchild.

Sense of Humor: Case in point . . .
Anyone who can still smile and laugh after an hour and a half photo session, much of the time wearing a full-length fur coat during an Orange County heat wave. . . .

Exercise made easy for people on the move

By VIDA DEAN
Daily Pilot Beauty Editor

You want to exercise and stay in shape, but you just can't find the time to do sit-ups, stretches and knee bends.

Well, there is a new book just out that might be the answer for you.

Not another book! You protest there is no time for more reading either.

Relax, this one is a snap. You can breeze through it in probably an hour or simply flip through it to find a quick little useful bit of information. This book was written for busy people.

"Commuter Calisthenics" is the title, and in short simple takes, it tells you how you can exercise as you drive or ride along.

The book was written by two brothers. Dr. Keith Andrews is a research scientist at the University of Florida at Gainesville, and brother Bruce is a teacher of biology, aerobics and body conditioning in Evergreen, Colo.

The authors say their book was born late one night on the highway between San Francisco and Los Angeles when two travelers fought to stay awake after a hard day of work. They say that exercises helped them beat the groggies or commuter stupors without taking the time to stop for coffee or getting out to stretch.

The book contains more than 70 exercises and 50 illustrations showing passengers and drivers how to utilize those hours of "wasted" commuting time to stretch, tone and strengthen muscles.

"Commuter Calisthenics" also contains sections telling you how to adapt riding or driving exercises for home and the office.

The exercises fall into two categories — isometric and isotonic.

Here are examples of the two types of exercises: Isometric — Put your palms together in front of your body (as if you're praying) and push as hard as you can, right hand against left and left against right. Don't let your arms or hands change position.

Push against each palm for 10 seconds and then relax.

Isotonic — Put your palms together and push hard one hand against the other. During a 10 second period, let your palms move slowly to the right until they are in front of your right shoulder. Then move your palms slowly to the left until they are in front of your left shoulder. Keep a steady pressure all the while.

All of the exercise information is written in the same format . . . Listed are the purpose of the exercises, the position, procedure, variations and comments. And for each exercise, the artist has drawn an accompanying illustration.

For drivers, there are very simple exercises to relieve tension in the fingers, hands, neck and shoulders, and others to firm the stomach and buttocks. For instance: The stomach squeeze: To strengthen stomach muscles and flatten the stomach, sit with a straight back and slowly inhale as you tense your stomach muscles for 10 seconds. Relax for five seconds and repeat the procedure five more times. And you can do this as you speed along 1-5 or wait (patiently?) for the traffic to begin moving again.

The authors caution that most of the exercises for drivers are intended to be used only when stopped in heavy traffic or while waiting for the light to change.

For passengers, the exercises are a bit more complex, but still easy to do. These are the ones that especially appealed to me. On a long flight, I usually finish up with cramped muscles, swollen feet and a tired and exhausted feeling. "Commuter Calisthenics" could be the answer to these problems.

The book is available in some book stores or it can be ordered directly from the publisher for $6.95 plus 50 cents for shipping. The address is Fitness Alternatives Press, P.O. Box 761, Evergreen, Colo. 80439.

TOUCH OF CLASS

Alligator, an important fashion accessory this year, is translated into fur with a special treatment designer Jean-Paul Avizou has developed using hideout ranch mink.

Lattice-worked sable and mink in two patterns create a knitted look.

Revillon furs since 1723

Revillon has been fashioning luxurious furs since 1723. Jean-Paul Avizou has been the creative and technical force behind the collections since 1975.

Avizou has used rich colors and the most expensive skins to create the 1982-83 haute couture collection.

Many of the designs are in a casual trend, but his choice of skins are luxurious — Russian lynx, sable, chinchilla, mink and elegant foxes.

Coats are feminine, many belted and fitted with flare. His kimono style 7/8 coats are reminiscent of the '40s with their boxy, full sleeves and broader shoulders.

Jackets are fuller, longer and the theme is relaxed and sporty . . . very outdoorsy.

Luxurious chinchilla is worked horizontally skin-on-skin to highlight its natural beauty and color differentiations. Other features include full, vertically worked cuffed sleeves and roll collar.

A reversible white pearl mink by Revillon tops the black skirt and golden metallic and black blouse by St. John.

'RIO Rendezvous' means its toe-tapping time

By VIDA DEAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

If you love to dance or you're just a toe tapper there will be plenty of music to do both at the Friday, Sept. 17, social evening "RIO Rendezvous" being planned at the Rehabilitation Institute in Orange.

"The RIO Rendezvous committee members have been busy all summer lining up the musical groups and collecting tantalizing food donations for this event," says Elaine Basmajian, chairman.

Guests will stroll from area to area at the therapeutic center sampling scrumptious morsels while listening to musical ensembles from Dixie to swing, classical to country.

Assisting Basmajian are Corinne Brewster, Patti Clark, Marianne Garner, Jacqlyn Kerr, Leah Laule, Emily Martino, Mary Moore, Carol Owens, Marnie Reed, Sally Ristuben, Mitzi Smith and Rita Tutt.

Contributing to the event are The Ritz, Villa Fontana, USC Classical Ensemble, Tulsa Rib Co., The Press Club, McDonald's, Newport Traditional Jazz Capers, El Torito, Showley-Wrightson, OCC Combined Jazz Ensemble, Duncan Stewart and his Friends and Dick Williams.

Tickets ($12.50) may be obtained by calling 633-7400.

WELCOME: Judy and Bernard Luskin got quite a welcome last week at a reception held in the student center at OCC.

Seven hundred were there to greet Dr. Luskin, OCC's new president, and his wife.

"We invited all the faculty and staff and we always include their spouses. We think that's a nice thing to do and it gives everybody a chance to renew friendships after the summer," said Fran Mowrey, who helped plan the reception.

"It was a very informal gathering — no speeches and no formal receiving line," she added.

Luskin replaces the recently retired Dr. Robert B. Moore, who, with his wife Pat, was among the welcoming party.

Others planning the get together were Mary Jane Farmer, Camille Hoeppner, Alice Howe, Carol Kleck, Doris Lee, Barbara Mattias, Dorothy Schrupp, Carmen Smith, Gwenda Watson, Sharon Wolfe and Linda Brandt.

CHAMPAGNE BRUNCH: Dolly Van Doren is philanthropy chairman of the Mesa Harbor Club and to raise funds for the organization's project, the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, she will open her home on Sept. 19 for a champagne brunch.

The hours of the fundraiser (it's open to the public) are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the tickets are $8 per person. Van Doren (556-5140) or Mary Jo Hundley (557-5127) can be called for further details.

Club members firmed up plans for the event at their latest meeting held in the apartment complex of Ginny Weiss. Jule Kaneaster arranged a picnic lunch, games and swimming for the group. And then an Orange Coast College instructor conducted a jazzercise class.

the president) will be in great shape to serve up the brunch.

HOAG CELEBRATION: This year marks Hoag Memorial Hospital Presbyterian's 30th anniversary. A special brunch today will honor benefactors and patrons. A champagne reception in Grace Hoag conference room will precede the brunch.

There will be plenty of champagne on hand to fill the glasses of those attending Mesa Harbor Club's fund-raising brunch Sept. 19 in the home of Dolly Van Doren. The hostess, left, and Mary Jo Hundley may be called for tickets or information.

Robinson's offers Beautylab/Bodylab

ROBINSON'S: This week is Beautylab/Bodylab week at all Robinson's stores. Beautylab features complimentary clinics by experts in the fields of skin care, makeup, hair and nail care. On Thursday, Sept. 16, at 1 p.m. Princess Marcella Borghese's new moisturizer will be introduced.

Bodylab will present special innerwear consultation workshops in the lingerie department. Intimate apparel companies will provide representatives to advise customers on the proper fit of innerwear. Health seminars hosted by Physical Fitness Director Gary Chlad and Nutrition Consultant Toni Christensen Chlad of the Spa at Sonoma Mission Inn will conduct a seminar at 2 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 16.

MAY COMPANY: Ruthanne Olds will headline fashion and beauty seminars for the large-size woman at the South Coast Plaza store at noon Sept. 13. The fee for the workshop is $7.50 and includes refreshments and a cosmetic sample.

BULLOCKS WILSHIRE: A sapphire seminar will be conducted Monday, Sept. 13, and Tuesday, Sept. 14, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Newport Beach store's fine jewelry department.

SAKS FIFTH AVENUE: A Chanel makeup artist will be in the cosmetics department of the South Coast Plaza store from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 13-18. A Germaine Monteil artist will be available from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 13 and 14.

NEIMAN-MARCUS: Informal modeling of the Perry Ellis collection for fall will take place in the Designer Sportshop department from noon to 3 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 16 with modeling in the Zodiac Restaurant.

NORDSTROM: A hair accessories seminar is set from noon to 3 p.m. Friday on the first floor of the South Coast Plaza store. The second seminar in a three-part series "Career Dressing: A Classic Investment" will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday on second floor. Sheldon Silberman, representative of Cricketeer, will be there.

BROADWAY: Morris Dorskin, president of Bueno Handbags, along with his cast of mime characters, will present improvisational routines using handbag merchandise Saturday, Sept. 18, from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Laguna Hills store. Also at all Broadways, design seminars on how to decorate with fabric will be held at 12:30, 2:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. on Sept. 16.

ASSOCIATION OF Business and Tax Consultants will meet Sept. 16 at Sir George Restaurant in Westminster beginning at 6 p.m. Cost is $10 per person and more information is available by calling 833-8199.

EBELL CLUB OF Laguna Beach will host a luncheon meeting Sept. 13 in South Laguna to honor past Ebell presidents. For reservations and directions, call 499-3151.

St. John's collection of knits offers new texture and styles

New textures, versatile new styles and a variety of autumn colors highlight the fall '82 collection of hand-loomed knitwear by St. John.

"For the first time we are introducing separate pants, skirts and blouses," said Helen Dzo Dzo, St. John representative presenting the collection at Saks Fifth Avenue, South Coast Plaza.

"There are many facets to the life of a St. John. It is a collectible and it is timeless. You can start and finish the day in a St. John 12 months of the year. With the change of accessories, you have St. John magic."

Angora, wool and mohair are woven together to create blends and new textures for a contemporary look in two and three-piece suits.

For evening, crocheted ruffles are added from shoulder to wrist on a slender dress and a crocheted mesh yoke hints of bare allure on another style.

Embroideries of color on color with a faint metallic thread in the yarn offer a trace of festive glitter for holiday wear.

A dirndl skirt with soft gathers and evening blouse with metallic highlights were introduced.

"Our sizes have been 4 to 16, but now we are making a size 2," Dzo Dzo said discussing one more new thing the firm has added.

Colors include wheat, camel, ruby, plum, wedgewood, chocolate and black.

There are four St. John factories in California and the main facility is in Irvine.

The company was started 20 years ago by Marie Gray and her husband Bob. The name came about when Bob, marketing the knits for the first time, was asked the name of the collection.

The knits had not been named, but he came up with the name St. John, Marie's professional modeling name, Dzo Dzo said.

The business is still family owned and the fashions still are handmade.

Dzo Dzo explained that the fashions are hand-loomed by one person, another does the blocking, another person will crochet the hemlines and detailing and the final person will press and size the garment.

Daily Pilot photos by Patrick O'Donnell

Hand-loomed garments from the fall collection by St. John includes sporty daytime attire to business suits and dressier designs for evening. Orange County women saw the variety of knitwear styles at a show at Saks Fifth Avenue, South Coast Plaza.

Giving aid to a total stranger

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently I took a car trip with a dear friend (who is expecting) and her little daughter and my two sons. Suddenly, in the middle of nowhere, our car went off the road, skidded and flipped over. The car was a total loss.

But God was looking out for us. My friend received only a minor cut and a few bruises, with no damage to her unborn child. I suffered a bad cut on my arm. Miraculously, there wasn't a scratch on the children.

I want to use your column as a giant thank-you card to dozens of people whose names

ANN LANDERS

I will never know, but not one of whom I will ever forget. We could not believe the number of people who stopped to help us.

There are so many we owe so much to: The young couple who pulled us all out of the car and risked their own lives (cars have been known to catch fire and explode); the truck driver who called on his CB for an ambulance; the helpful law enforcement officers; the ambulance attendants; the kind and gentle medical personnel; the cab driver who stopped and offered to take us to the motel.

The motel people were terrific. "Don't bother to register," they said. "Come right in." A passerby helped us retrieve our belongings from the car at the wrecking yard, gas station attendants and other total strangers did everything possible to calm the kids. Those wonderful people gave me new faith in the goodness of man.

And now I want to tell all your readers to celebrate LIFE. You will never know how precious life is until you come close to losing it. Everyone has some kind of problem, but no matter how miserable your life may seem at times, you should think of the alternative to life. Today you are alive. You are able to feel, to think, to walk, to talk, to love. You are a glorious miracle.

Celebrate that miracle, and all your problems will come into perspective. You will live each day to its fullest, will be able to tell your family and friends "I love you" with spontaneity and joy. You will come to realize, with humility and wonder, just how beautiful your existence can be.

Thank you, Ann, for letting me share my thoughts today. You may sign my real name, because I want all those beloved strangers to know me, even if I'll never know them. — MUCH LOVE — HOPE WHITE

DEAR HOPE: Here's your letter. What an upper! Especially at a time when so many people are putting extra locks on their doors, installing alarms, buying guard dogs and staying inside after dark.

Pot-Shots BY ASHLEIGH BRILLIANT

It's heartening to know that people can and do rise to the occasion when a stranger is in trouble. The spontaneity suggests to me, at least, that people are basically good. And what better proof than the letter you have written.

The instinctive human response to come to the rescue of someone in trouble has been thwarted these last few years because so many of us have come to fear for our own safety. This is a sad commentary.

Bless you for writing to share your story. I hope the good will you feel for your fellow man is contagious.

CONFIDENTIAL to Burning the Candle at Both Ends: You don't want advice, honey. You just want more wax. Your minister gave you good advice. Take it.

TRAVEL

In old New York

NEW YORK — On Dec. 6, the lights will be sparkling along Fifth Avenue, lights so white and glittering that the country's most famous street takes on the aura of an urban fairyland. At Rockefeller Center, wire sculpture angels — a dozen elegant figures holding slender eight-foot trumpets — will be bathed in light and huge wire snowflake clusters will sparkle and twist in the early December breeze.

At the end of the special walk heralded by the angels' trumpets, you will come to the skating rink, where bundled children swirl at the foot of a great Christmas tree rising 85 feet above the plaza, sending its message of joy and peace throughout America's most maligned, and most magnificent, city.

Rockefeller Center, which attracts more tourists than the Statue of Liberty and the Empire State Building combined, a city unto itself housing 65,000 people on its 22 acres and in its 19 buildings, is a half century old this year.

In those 50 years, Rockefeller Center has become the most visited, and the most loved, of our planned urban environments.

This is a place where you can sit by a waterfall, dine on a pate or a ham sandwich and forget, if only for a moment, that you are sitting in the midst of the largest city in North America. Gardens peek around corners here, offering refuge from the honking of taxi horns only yards away. Fountains rush gallons of water to the sky and waterfalls pound down artificial mountain walls. The soft smell of mums fills the air in the fall, while Easter lilies curl their strong perfume through the concrete canyons in the spring, mystically transporting Fifth Avenue strollers to Bermuda, and the great waving lily fields that nudge the Atlantic's surf.

"Rockefeller Center is perhaps the most successful use of open space in the United States, maybe in the world, for that matter," says noted architect I. M. Pei. "Spaces are for people and people like to come to Rockefeller Center."

Adds Douglas Haskell, architecture critic and former editor of Architectural Forum: "Rockefeller Center is the only piece of urban renewal done in business terms that the people of the United States really love."

Today, that love is generated by the open space (20 percent of the total) spread throughout the center — little rooftop gardens and benches where you can picnic, skating rinks where you can spin over the ice, and open air restaurants where you can dine. Tourists love the more than 200 shops and restaurants where you can buy goods and foods from throughout the world.

The love for Rockefeller Center is also generated by the trip to the top of the RCA building where, 850 feet above the streets below, you get a fascinating vista of this great city. From river to river and from New Jersey to Connecticut, you can look with awe at the urban sprawl and begin to grasp the immensity of this city. It was from the RCA observation deck that Gen. Charles de Gaulle turned away from the stunning sight and asked his guide: "Where is Coney Island?" So much for French culture.

People also love Rockefeller Center for the Radio City Music Hall, which has been renovated and once again presents a live stage show daily, rather than the tawdry movies it used to show after its fall from fortune. And, yes, the Rockettes still kick high and with perfect precision.

People in the 1930s loved Rockefeller Center for what it represented: the effort by a single determined (and rich) man, John D. Rockefeller Jr., to realize an urban dream, the blending of money-making office space with an environment that provided people with comfort and beauty. Before the Rockefeller plans, office buildings were built without any thought to people. Rockefeller Center changed all that.

"It is the finest reminder that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts," New York Times architecture critic Paul Goldberger has written.

People also loved the Rockefeller Center in the 1930s for the statement it made to the country in a time when there was not much optimism in the Depression-ravaged United States. When men were standing in breadlines and college graduates were selling apples on street corners, Rockefeller Center was a mighty vote of confidence in the strength of America.

It was the country's most massive real estate development, taking employees of the New York City Building Department nearly two years just to file all the blueprints. Building materials used in erecting the first 14 buildings between 1931 and 1940 filled 30,000 carloads, the equivalent of a train over 300 miles long. Limestone from Indiana alone filled 3,200 rail cars, 45 tons to a car.

Other totals were equally awesome in the Depression era: 68,200 tons of cement were used, 28,000 windows, 20,000 cast iron radiators, 7,800,000 feet of cable and wire of various types and sizes, 200 miles of brass tubing, 10,000 doors, a million square feet of glass, over five million bricks.

Perhaps most significantly, the project employed many Americans, nearly the strength of three regular Army divisions, each with 28,000 soldiers.

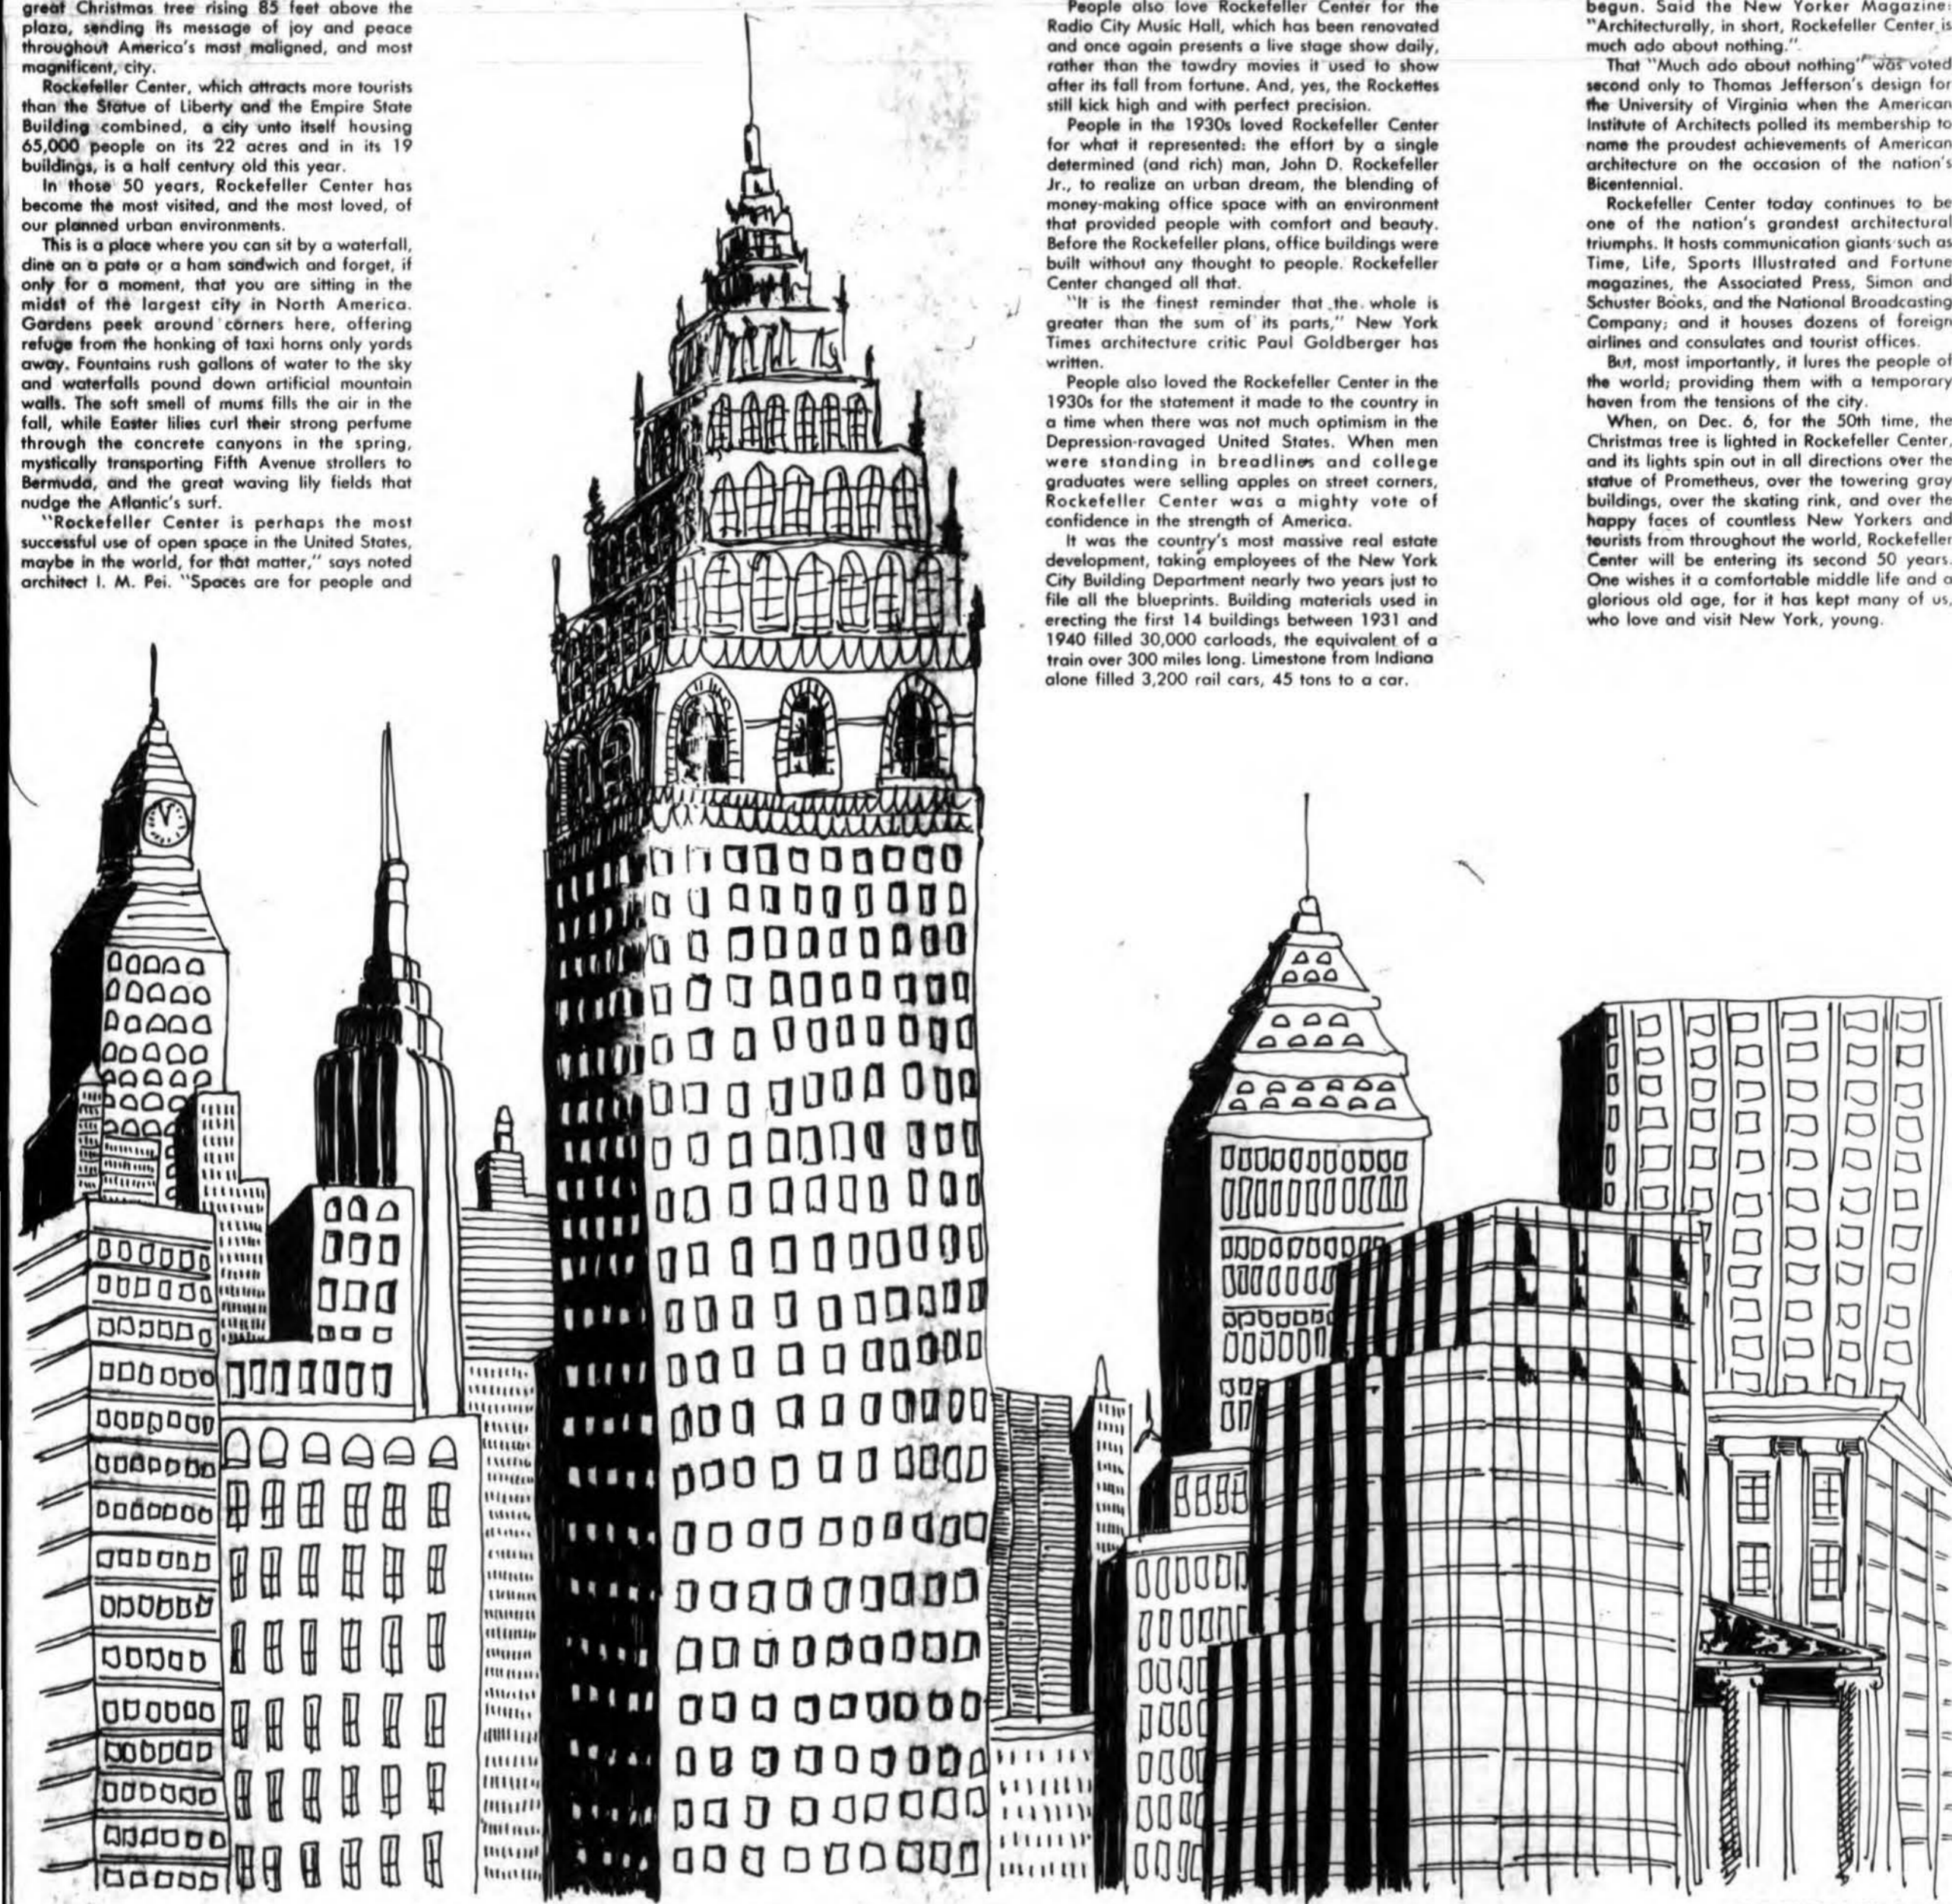

Still, the Center was not greeted with overwhelming critical acclaim when it was begun. Said the New Yorker Magazine: "Architecturally, in short, Rockefeller Center is much ado about nothing."

That "Much ado about nothing" was voted second only to Thomas Jefferson's design for the University of Virginia when the American Institute of Architects polled its membership to name the proudest achievements of American architecture on the occasion of the nation's Bicentennial.

Rockefeller Center today continues to be one of the nation's grandest architectural triumphs. It hosts communication giants such as Time, Life, Sports Illustrated and Fortune magazines, the Associated Press, Simon and Schuster Books, and the National Broadcasting Company; and it houses dozens of foreign airlines and consulates and tourist offices.

But, most importantly, it lures the people of the world; providing them with a temporary haven from the tensions of the city.

When, on Dec. 6, for the 50th time, the Christmas tree is lighted in Rockefeller Center, and its lights spin out in all directions over the statue of Prometheus, over the towering gray buildings, over the skating rink, and over the happy faces of countless New Yorkers and tourists from throughout the world, Rockefeller Center will be entering its second 50 years. One wishes it a comfortable middle life and a glorious old age, for it has kept many of us, who love and visit New York, young.

Staten Island continues to hold to its charm and magic

STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. — Standing on Todt Hill, the highest point (409 feet) on the Atlantic coast between Maine and Key West, it is easy to imagine you are seeing what Cornelius Vanderbilt saw when he was a young man growing up on Staten Island — the wind washes gently over the rolling parklands, and the seabirds graze in the quivering marsh grass. It is a setting for poets, a place of which Henry David Thoreau wrote: "The whole island is like a garden."

The wealthy of New York flocked to Staten Island during the past century, riding to the hounds at the Richmond Club, picnicking on the beaches, living in magnificent Victorian structures to take the summer air. That new English game — tennis — was introduced to America on the grand grounds of the Staten Island Cricket Club.

It was a place of magic, a place where a man like Vanderbilt could rest, and drain the tensions of business gently from his body by walking alone in the glens and hillocks of his birthplace.

Today, one can still find peace, and serenity, and a feeling of bucolic splendor on this tiny (57 square miles) island, the smallest of New York's five boroughs.

More than 26,000 acres of parks dot Staten Island. Parks with tennis courts and picnic areas and running trails, and parks that are for the great variety of birdlife living so close to the urban forests of New York.

Calling an island of 350,000 residents — a place

Stories by Michael Carlton
Denver Post Travel Writer

also of high-rise apartments and tenements — bucolic may seem absurd, but it is easy to escape the cluster of ugly houses in St. George (the landing place of the famous Staten Island ferry) and capture a feeling of the rich past of this place.

Richmondtown, New York's miniature answer to Williamsburg, is perhaps the ultimate escape. Here, on 96 acres of beautifully tended grounds, life goes on much like it did two centuries ago.

Twenty-five restored little buildings are scattered throughout the park. The general store still has its pickle barrels, butter churns and hard water pump, and the carriage house is still filled with its pony carts, broughams, landaus, cabriolets and old delivery wagons that once served the winding dirt paths of this place.

Visitors buy licorice whips and horehound drops from ladies in long gingham dresses and school children can look into the 1695 Voorlezer's House, recognized as the oldest elementary school in the United States. Ducks and chickens waddle and strut, and picnics are held under the towering trees.

At Tottenville, you can visit the Conference House, a grand stone manor home where, on Sept. 11, 1776, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams met with Lord Howe of the British forces to try to arrange a peaceful end to the Revolutionary War.

Snug Harbor, in New Brighton, was begun in 1833 as America's first home for retired sailors and today is perhaps this country's finest collection of Greek Revival architecture. It is now a major cultural center, housing galleries and hosting performances by the Metropolitan Opera, the Philharmonic Orchestra and Shakespeare in the Park. A 26-acre botanical garden lends softness to the soaring marble pillars of the buildings.

If history begins to tire you on Staten Island there is more — a zoo with one of the finest reptile collections in the United States (including specimens of all 34 rattlesnakes); the Jacques Marchais Center of Tibetan Art, which houses the largest private collection of Tibetan art in the Western hemisphere; a "hands-on" children's museum; and some spectacular views of the skyline and the concrete canyons of Manhattan and the graceful span of the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, the world's longest suspension bridge.

If the attractions of the island itself don't lure you, getting there should. Staten Island ferry is still the biggest transportation and tourism bargain in America.

For a quarter you get to ride the ferry from Manhattan to Staten Island and back. For your two bits you'll get a cruise past some of the most renowned sights in America.

The Statue of Liberty looms less than a hundred yards to your right, not far from the fading structures of Ellis Island, the one-time gateway for the mass of immigrants to America. Tiny sailboats rush by only yards away, and huge tankers sit anchored, their rusting hulls washed by the waters of New York harbor.

Businessmen and streetwise punks share the ferry's long wood benches with priests and a family of tourists from Brazil. Old men read the Daily News while young stockbrokers read the Wall Street Journal for the latest quotations. Every day there is an eclectic collection of people on these great yellow and blue crafts with their white pilot houses. Each ferry can carry as many as 3,533 people — and often does during rush hour — but a midday trip will find the ferry nearly empty.

More than 20 million people take the ferry each year. It is one of the most popular, and certainly the least expensive, tourist attractions in New York City. From the terminal in St. George you can take a bus (Number 1 to Snug Harbor, Number 1-13 to Richmondtown and the Tibetan art museum, Number 107 to the zoo) to Staten Island's attractions, or you can return immediately on the next ferry for the 25-minute ride back to Manhattan.

But that would be a mistake, one made by too many tourists to this great metropolitan center of our country. To sample the other New York, the place of parks and gentle history, spend a few hours on Staten Island. It is a New York that is far removed from the hassle and hustle of Manhattan. It is a New York of another — and perhaps better — time.

Santa Catalina . . . Short trip to an island fantasy

By PAT NEISSER

Discovered by the ubiquitous Juan Rodriguez in 1542, and rediscovered 60 years later by Don Sabastian Viscaino, Santa Catalina Island has fascinated everyone who has come upon it by accident or otherwise.

This amazing, romantic little island fairly pops with activities varied enough for even the most discriminating visitor exploring its 21-mile length or 8-mile width.

Transportation across the 26 miles to Santa Catalina is no problem. A large ocean ship from Long Beach or San Pedro, or a smaller ship from the Pavilion in Newport Beach sail over in two hours. Or if you only have a quick day and don't want to miss anything, planes from Long Beach make the flight in less than 30 minutes.

If you sail, you'll be immersed in action as soon as you dock at Avalon. Fishermen rush by, kids on skateboards zoom by, and the tantalizing aroma of fish emanates from two snack bars on the pier. Don't miss the fresh abalone and chips.

Your itinerary will depend on the length of your stay. For some, a day's visit to Catalina is like one bite of a luscious chocolate cake, not satisfying enough. Others prefer to relax on the beach, hike around the town and head home on the 4:30 p.m. boat.

To organize your visit, walk off the pier and turn right, strolling Crescent Avenue along the beach front until you reach the Visitors' Center, with its balcony overlooking the yacht-filled harbor. You'll be well looked after. They'll make all your hotel, restaurant and excursion reservations for you.

Avalon crams some outstanding eateries and hotels into its one square mile. There are shops, game arcades and sport equipment available for rent, and the beach is a great temptation. But before you decide to spend your day relaxing on the shore, check out some of the exciting excursions available.

If you've arrived early enough to reach the plaza by 9 a.m. you can catch the large van for the Inland Motor Tour which takes less than four hours. This huge van with large windows carries 40 passengers up into the rough interior.

In 1951, access to the interior became available to all visitors, not just guests of the Wrigley family (who had purchased the island in 1919 from the Banning family).

There are 76 square miles of open space and wild lands owned by the Santa Catalina Island Conservancy and recently set aside for all visitors of present and future generations. It's delightful to gaze out at the large buffalo herds, wild goats, deer, rabbits, quail and birds and know that all this land will remain unspoiled.

You'll visit ancient Indian camp sites, secluded coves and small harbors, and recently take a rest stop at the Conservancy's Airport-in-the Sky. There is regular bus service from this airport to Avalon as well.

You'll learn about the 393 species of plant life native to the island, and discover that eight species are endemic only to Catalina: The Catalina Ironwood, St. Catherine's Lace bush, Catalina Mahogany, wild tomato and Catalina manzanita. The Catalina Cherry began here, as did Toyon (holly), California Poppy, and other plants well known in Southern California.

Catalina is a nature lover's paradise, and a hunter's delight whenever a surplus of wildlife is evident.

Your van will stop at Wrigley's Arabian Horse Ranch for performances by the horses bred and trained here. Much of the island is still as it was when the Spanish explorers discovered it.

A pit stop at the old Eagles Nest Stage Coach Inn, where you'll be served steaming hot camp-style coffee boiled over a hot fire, and fresh doughnuts, will take you back to the good old days when the stage coach was the only means of transportation to the interior.

Catalina was the first place where gold was discovered, by Captain George Yount in 1830. Unfortunately, the captain was out to get otter pelts, and he forgot where he found the gold. Eighteen years later when gold was found at Sutter's Creek, the good captain returned to Catalina but never found the right spot. Later, silver and lead mining were successful.

Pirates and smugglers have also been attracted to Catalina's deep canyons and coves. Chinese slave ships sought shelter at Little Harbor, and English, Dutch and Chinese pirates preying on the ships from the Orient, hid their loot in the caverns along the shore.

The local Catalina Indians were too friendly for their own good and were massacred by Alaskan Aleut Indians brought over by fur traders. History abounds on this island, and on another trip, you may want to camp in the interior. For Conservancy information, phone (213) 832-4531.

After the trip to the interior, you may want to collapse on the beach, and then take a 50-minute trip to the famous award-winning Casino. Since 1929, thousands of visitors have come to dance in the huge ballroom, or see movies in the elaborate cinema below.

Avalon Bay, with the world-famous Casino in the background, as seen on the Scenic Terrace Drive. Avalon's Pleasure Pier, the spot for boat rentals, dive equipment and departure point for the Glass Bottom Boat Trip, is in the foreground.

The Casino rises out of the sea to the height of a 12-story building. Circular in shape, its balconies jut out onto the harbor, creating a place for romantic walks between dances.

The interior of the movie house has 4,500 square feet of solid black walnut and its original sofas and chairs. The enormous pipe organ can create any sound without a microphone, since the acoustics are near perfect.

This was the first theater in the country built just for talking pictures, so a lot of Hollywood fanfare went along with its opening in 1929.

Next, a 50-minute Scenic Terrace Drive Tour will take you up above the harbor to Mt. Ada, the original Wrigley home, now leased to the University of Southern California. The Terrace roads offer a superb view of Avalon Harbor.

You may take a glass bottom boat tour of the underwater gardens around Catalina. The waters are so shallow and clear on the leeward side of the island that you can easily see thousands of animals and plants.

If you decide to stay over, take the sunset paddle wheel cruise on a glass bottom boat.

Cocktails and live entertainment costs $20 per person for this romantic trip.

Next morning a trip up the canyon to the Wrigley Memorial and Botanical Gardens to see the beautiful stone, marble, and tile memorial and all the plants indigenous to Catalina will start your day off well. It's only 1.7 miles from Avalon. It's an easy walk, or you may catch a bus.

Breakfast at the Visitors' Country Club and a set or two of tennis, or horseback riding before lunch, followed by a coastal cruise to see the seals playing in their natural habitat, is a good way to start your second day.

If you have another half day, plan to visit Two Harbors. You'll leave at 11:15 a.m. and cruise past 14 miles of coast.

Three hours of free time allow you to swim, sleep in the sun, walk across the isthmus and relax at this beautiful harbor. You'll return to Avalon in time to catch your boat or plane, feeling relaxed after your vacation away from home.

Staying overnight on Santa Catalina

Staying overnight on Catalina Island is an adventure. Hotels and motels offer all kinds of accommodations.

For those who don't object to a steep tariff, Island Resorts has three types of accommodations:

PAVILION LODGE: Fronting the beach, from $75 up.

LAS CASITAS: Bungalows and rooms, from $70 double.

HOTEL ATWATER: An old landmark at considerably less, $43 double.

Other hotels include the famous ZANE GREY PUEBLO HOTEL, perched high above the Casino. Once the home of the famous western novel writer, each room is named after one of his books. Grey's living room is now open to guests as a comfortable lounge. The view from the hotel is breathtaking. Rates run from $50 double. The hotel shuttle will pick you up at the town plaza and is available all day.

THE HOTEL CATALINA, on Whittley, a scant half block from the beach, is a charming white Victorian building, completely renovated with a patio and jacuzzi, barbecues and a free movie theater. Rates start at $46 double.

THE HERMOSA HOTEL AND COTTAGES have been around since the 1890s, and look it, but this is part of the charm. The cottages wander up a hill and have kitchens. Rates start at $20. A real bargain.

ISLAND INN, built in 1906 and completely renovated in 1979, is charming and near the beach. $60 double.

SCARI'S on the waterfront is a triple A rated hotel with one of the best restaurants in town. $50 double.

BAY VIEW HOTEL on Whittley. Pleasant accommodations with view. $38 double.

CAMPO BRAVO on the waterfront has 13 lovely rooms with living rooms and baths. $48 double.

UPSTAIRS PLACE is superb bistro.

CATALINA BEACH HOUSE is one block from beach. $20 without bath, higher with bath.

EL TERADO TERRACE is excellent. $55 double.

PARADISE ISLE INN, near the Country Club, also has a fine dining room. Room rates begin at $60. Brunches are special.

CLOUD SEVEN is real bargain at $45 double.

The Catalina Visitors Information and Services Center has a one-call-does-it-all phone number. (213) 510-1520. They will book your hotel and excursions for you. You won't find this excellent service in many resorts around the world.

RESTAURANTS

Most of the restaurants are clustered on or near Crescent street fronting the beach.

CHANNEL HOUSE, owned by Bill Salsberg, 205 Crescent Ave. Shaded patio. Breakfast favorite is waffles. Lunch offers salads, fish, sandwiches. Dinner includes chowder or salad and fine fresh fish and seafood. Pianist until 9 p.m., then trio entertains.

EL ENCANTO PATIO RESTAURANT AND COCKTAIL LOUNGE. Crescent and Marilla. Courtyard with charming surroundings. Mariachi music. Lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate.

Store makes life easier for handicapped

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

What if you were paralyzed and couldn't bend your arm enough to maneuver even a fork of peas into your mouth?

How could you get into a car from a wheelchair if you were unable to stand up for even a second?

Where would you go if you were deaf or paralyzed or blind and wanted to purchase a product geared for your special needs?

Until Ben and Barbara Paul of Costa Mesa opened their Handi-Aid Co. in Santa Ana they said there was no place in Orange County for the handicapped to shop for such items.

Medical supply stores cater to hospitals or stock mainly wheelchairs and crutches. Most general supplies had to be ordered from a catalog, said Ben.

"Deaf people are thrilled because they don't have to hire an interpreter to go shopping with them," said Dan McCuiston, a salesman at the shop at 2907 W. Warner Ave., who is hearing impaired. "Lots of times I would feel embarrassed to walk into a store because I have a speech impediment. But it's no problem here."

Merchandise designed for people who can't see or lift their head off a bed pillow might seem depressing to some consumers. But to the people who need them, they are a welcome relief.

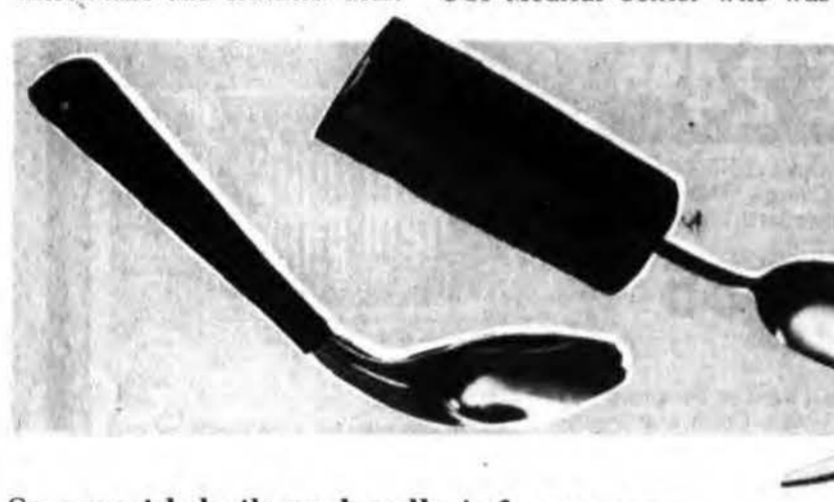

Barbara Paul said she gave one of the hairbrushes that strap around a wrist to a woman at UCI Medical Center who was paralyzed two years ago.

Unable to hold a brush in her hand, she had to rely on someone else to comb her hair every day, said Barbara.

"She just kept saying, 'I wish I had had this years before. It would have made such a difference.'"

(See DISABLED, Page D2)

Spoon with built-up handle is for persons unable to close fingers tightly. Left, curved spoon is for those unable to bend wrist.

Designed for persons with wrist problems, this knife with grip permits cutting of meat in a handsaw fashion.

Giant Procter & Gamble previews products at corner grocery

CINCINNATI (AP) — It sits in the shadow of the Procter & Gamble building, a tiny, downtown grocery store that stocks every new product made by the giant manufacturing company that was built on a bar of soap.

Fred's Place is where consumers and P&G competitors alike go to sample the unfamiliar products that P&G hopes will take their place beside Ivory, Jif, Pampers and Charmin on the shelves of the nation's supermarkets.

The proprietor of the 20- by 60-foot store is Fred Cianciolo, who began selling fruit and vegetables at a sidewalk produce stand when he was 6 years old.

"When I first moved over here 14 years ago, they (P&G) approached me and wanted to know if I would handle their new items," said Cianciolo, 52, who followed his father and grandfather into the produce business.

"The same week I was moving into this bigger store, another one was going out of business. They were the originators, but they would only handle the (P&G) food items; I'll take anything that comes out — drugs, medicine... soaps, shampoo."

A half dozen stores in the Cincinnati area test-market some P&G products, "primarily as a means for our employees to try them," said spokeswoman Kathy Gilbert.

"He (Cianciolo) is not at all a test market. There just wouldn't be enough sales, market or people for a test market," she said. "It's so our employees can try our new products. Our people don't get any free samples; with 40,000 employees in the U.S., our shareholders would go crazy."

Cincinnati is a Procter & Gamble town, where almost 13,000 people work for the $12 billion-a-year packager of a wide range of food, soap, soft drinks and personal care products. (See related column, Page D8.)

"Every once in awhile, I accidentally find out about something I'm really not supposed to know," says Cianciolo.

"I know the next thing they're going to come out with is toothpaste in a dispenser, which sounds like a pretty neat idea," he says, showing off products.

"This stuff Rejoice, a hand lotion, this is going out in about 10 months because it's not making enough money for them."

"But this one here is going to be a good one — butter flavored Crisco."

Cianciolo began working with his grandfather when he was 6, and ran a fruit stand by himself when he was 9. His father, who is 80, still has a produce stand in Cincinnati's historic Findlay Market, and a cousin runs a wholesale produce business.

Fred's place does about one-third of its business around noon at its delicatessen counter, and Cianciolo says many customers are attracted to his store because it is a P&G outlet.

Two current big sellers — not microwave oven. It can produce a cake in 10 minutes, start to finish.

"I put in everything they have got," said Cianciolo. "I usually can get all I want. The only thing they rationed me on was Pringle's," a reconstituted potato chip which sold well at Fred's place but has not been successful nationally.

"I guess you could say that Pringle's was the baby that really started this thing. Everybody came over to get Pringle's, and then they stocked yet generally available in other parts of the country — are a bathroom tissue called Certain, and Brigade, a toilet bowl cleanser that Cianciolo predicts, "is going to be a tremendous item."

"I try most of the products myself," he said. "But there are very few free samples."

After P&G decides to mass market an item, Cianciolo has to buy it like anyone else — at a supermarket.

"I usually do all right until it goes on the open market," he said. "Then it changes; they (supermarkets) sell the stuff cheaper than I can buy it, because they buy truckloads."

One of the newest products at Fred's is Ariel, a laundry detergent. Another is a cake mix designed to be cooked in a all these other items in." Cianciolo recalls only one P&G bomb, a dessert — "Cold Snap, I think; that was the dog of dogs."

"It took so long to make it, something like over three hours; people were buying boxes just for souvenirs. But I wound up getting rid of all of it."

Cianciolo doesn't have any pretensions about his role in the success or failure of P&G products he previews. Company executives sometimes ask him how things are going, but his opinion won't kill or save a product.

"I doubt it; I'm just a little, small plug in their operation," Cianciolo said. "But on Cold Snap... I might have been a little more important on that one; I never did reorder it. That one just didn't sell."

IMF: To rich, a stern credit counselor; to poor, a tyrant

TORONTO (AP) — To the cold-eyed financiers who assembled here, the International Monetary Fund is a savior of Third World nations considered financial basket cases, too deep in debt to get more help from private banks.

But the needy nations themselves often view the IMF as an economic tyrant intent on imposing its economic will on sovereign states.

That dichotomy is a bitter source of conflict among the 146 rich and poor nations that attended the IMF's 37th annual conference here this week.

The IMF is controlled by the United States and a small group of other rich countries that provide most of the emergency lending funds. It is little-known to people of the industrialized nations, which rarely need its help these days.

But to people of poor, financially troubled countries, the IMF is well known as a U.S.-dominated bank of last resort that can impose stringent terms on borrowers.

Formed after World War II to help prevent the kind of depression the industrial countries endured in the 1930s, the IMF now is trying to stop Mexico's enormous debt problems from expanding into an international financial crisis.

When it makes loans, the fund demands that countries make economic "adjustments" — a euphemism for severe belt-tightening measures that usually include cuts in food subsidies, other budget cuts and adherence to a strict schedule for climbing out of debt.

Countries in severe financial distress usually have no choice but to go along — even at the cost of protest riots and political upheaval in some cases — if they want the money badly enough.

In 1980, a fight between the IMF and former socialist Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica became a major issue in that year's election, in which Manley was defeated by conservative Edward Seaga.

This week, 450,000 workers staged a general strike in Bolivia to protest price increases and other restrictive economic policies of the military government, which has a borrowing arrangement with the IMF.

President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, an impoverished East African nation and IMF borrower, has complained about the "irresponsible and arrogant way in which it (the IMF) is being wielded against the poor."

"The IMF is all-pervasive," Tanzanian Finance Minister Amir Jamal said Tuesday night at a conference sponsored by critics of the lending agency. "It's creating despair and despondency instead of hope."

Fund officials contend that many of the borrowing countries brought their financial woes on themselves by spending far more than they could afford.

"We shouldn't encourage any nation to be extravagant or a spendthrift and think it could get away with it by being bailed out by the IMF," says U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

Regan leads the forces who want to maintain the strictest conditions for help from the fund to prevent it from becoming an easy touch.

That is one reason why the United States, alone, opposed a substantial increase in member contributions to the fund to handle a growing list of Mexico-type crises.

Spokesmen for the developing nations here say their main complaint against the IMF is that its loan conditions are too harsh and do not recognize that the big industrial countries are at least partly responsible for the plight of the poor.

The rich nations' battle against inflation, they note, has produced a worldwide recession that has devastated the Third World's trade and sent their export prices plummeting.

Oil-rich Mexico's severe cash crisis, for instance, stems in part from an unexpected drop in oil prices due to the reduced demand in the rich countries.

Even Jamaica's Seaga, economic conservative that he is, contends that the IMF has been too harsh on some of the smaller Caribbean islands, which fall into economic depressions when the United States has a mild recession.

Another example is the West African nation of Togo, where the sky seemed the limit in 1974, when world prices soared for phosphate — one of its principal exports. With that, the country of 2.5 million launched an ambitious development program, building airports, highways and other modernization projects.

By 1975, phosphate prices had plummeted, but Togo did not cut back its spending program. Four years later, in 1979, it owed foreign lenders $1 billion — more than its entire economy produced that year.

Togo borrowed $56 million from the IMF three years ago. On Tuesday, its finance minister, Tete Tevi-Benissan, met with fund officials to arrange further aid to meet $80 million in payments due by the end of this year. Tevi-Benissan later told an aide it was "a rough session."

Publicly, he declined to bite the hands he hopes will feed him.

"The IMF wants the situation in our economy stabilized," the minister told reporters.

"Its conditions might be perceived as harsh or difficult, but that is just because we must be brought back to normal."

Slow recovery won't provide instant results

NEW YORK (AP) — The high spirits of August and early September have given way to a more cautious atmosphere on Wall Street in recent days.

After more than three weeks of skyrocketing stock prices and record trading volume, the market has settled back a bit and activity has slowed since last Monday's Labor Day holiday.

Most brokers said it was natural for the market to take a "breather" after such a prolonged and powerful advance. As the rally began to taper off, there were plenty of question marks remaining in the economic outlook to induce traders to cash in on some of the recent gains.

"The stock market's summer surge as the Federal Reserve relaxed its credit policies is surely foreshadowing better days for American business," said Maury Harris, money market economist at Paine Webber.

But although the recession is bottoming out, the September reports on August business activity still will be sending mixed signals. Moreover, the nation's gross national product for the third quarter will barely rise.

Realtors plan SF convention

SAN FRANCISCO — Members of the California Association of Realtors (CAR) will convene Sept. 23-25 in San Francisco for their 78th annual convention to seek solutions and new perceptions of the economic problems confronting the industry.

CAR President Seb Sterpa of Burbank will preside over a convention agenda that will place heavy emphasis on providing real estate professionals timely, expert information on procedures for coping with the pressing problems confronting the industry today in such areas as inflation, financing, mortgage assumptions, commercial condominium marketing and time sharing.

A panel of leading economists will provide Realtors insight into the efforts being made to solve the nation's current inflation and interest rate dilemmas. Members of the panel will include Joe Wright, deputy director, Office of Management and Budget, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Michael Jesse, senior vice president and chief economist, Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco; Dr. Ken Rosen, representing Regional Data Associates of Berkeley.

Realtor Harley W. Snyder of Valparaiso, Indiana, president-elect of the National Association of Realtors; Dr. Harry Olson Jr., renowned industrial psychologist, and Dr. Mark Lee Levine, a nationally recognized authority on the legal aspects of real estate exchanges, will also address the convention.

Both major party gubernatorial candidates will address the Realtors at separate sessions. Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, the Democratic nominee, will speak to the Realtors at their opening general session on Friday, September 24, and Attorney General George Deukmejian, the Republican candidate, will address the convention on Saturday, September 25.

Other speakers will include Mark H. Long, San Diego, president of the Syndication Research and Achievement Institute; Joan D. Pate of Salt Lake City, who will address the convention theme, "Double Your Success"; and Thomas J. Winniger, an inspirational speaker, Waterloo Iowa.

Assemblyman Louis J. Papan, of Millbrae, will address the Association's pre-conventional annual legislative luncheon on Wednesday, September 22.

More than 80 roundtable topics will be discussed at education sessions led by industry leaders. Continuing education courses will be offered in "Due-on-Sale — Wellenkamp" and "Structural Pest Control." A Communications Workshop will be attended by communications committeemen representing Boards of Realtors from throughout the state.

More than 100 exhibitors will present latest techniques, equipment and products in data processing, electronic communication, office procedures and sales promotion.

Officers for 1983 will be elected in the closing session. Gordon Nicholson, prominent Orinda Realtor, who presently is first vice president, is unopposed for president, as is Treasurer Ray Spinelli who will be seeking his third term. H. Stanton Johnson of Los Angeles and Becki Schwab of San Diego are candidates for the office of first vice president.

A gala President's Dinner Dance and Show will feature the music of the Johnny Vaughn Orchestra and performances by the Las Vegas Roulettes, Ravel the Magician and Lynda Bergen, vocalist.

Officers, directors and committeemen of the Association will meet on Tuesday through Thursday, Sept. 21-23, prior to official opening of the convention.

All sessions will be held at the San Francisco Hilton Hotel. Registrations may be made by mail, or you may phone for additional information at headquarters of the California Association of Realtors, 525 South Virgil Avenue, Los Angeles 90020, (213) 739-8217.

High Roller

This French country manor was the site of a recent home tour hosted by Ed Escano and Judy Jordan of Lingo Real Estate in Newport Center.

Realtors to the manor born

Newport salespeople market high-priced properties

When a real estate agent has in excess of $13 million worth of residential property entrusted to him to market it takes more than the everyday ad in the paper and open house sign to properly represent these homes.

Ed Escano and Judy Jordan of Lingo Real Estate in Newport Beach, two agents who work as a team, are finding ways to meet this challenge.

In this real estate market of the early 80s where economic and psychological factors are having a negative influence, where brokerage firms are closing and agents are seeking the security of 9-to-5 jobs that assure them of making enough money to pay the mortgage and their everyday bills, Escano and Jordan are continuing their aggressive efforts in real estate, and are maintaining their successful ways.

Confident that there are still buyers for real estate and that there are people who need to sell their homes or other properties, Escano and Jordan have become firm believers in the theory that innovative marketing is the answer to bringing these buyers and sellers together. Specializing in the high-priced properties of private communities along coastal Orange County from Capistrano to Newport Beach, they realize it takes considerable expense and effort on the part of the agent to achieve this goal.

Last year at this time Escano and Jordan hosted hundreds of invited guests to a tour of the James Irvine family home in Laguna Beach's Irvine Cove. This home was being represented by Rod Daley, also of Lingo's Newport Beach office, for $7 million. Several other specially selected homes represented by Lingo Real Estate were included on that home tour.

This past week, Escano and Jordan had a second home tour, this time in Newport Beach's prestigious private community of Harbor Ridge. The homes for this tour ranged in price from $520,000 to $3,200,000 and over 450 invited guests enjoyed the summer evening event.

The tour began at a custom home of Country French design where, upon their arrival, each guest's car was attended to by a valet as they were greeted by their host and hostess, Escano and Jordan, and received a packet containing color brochures of the home and a map of the community to guide them on the subsequent tour of other fine Harbor Ridge homes.

While at this luxury home, guests were served an appropriate French wine by uniformed waiters circulating throughout the crowd and were treated to a feast of stuffed French croissants, ham and beef roasts, spinach loafs, salads and a delightful array of imported cheeses. Garden tables were provided for guests to enjoy their repast on the patio around the 41-foot pond-shaped pool and spa.

As the evening progressed and guests continued their tour of the Harbor Ridge homes, they were welcomed at each by an informative representative of Lingo's Newport Center office and were treated to ever changing views of a dramatic summer sunset over western skies and shimmering lights illuminating the city below. According to Escano and Jordan, these views typify the beautiful vistas experienced from atop the hills in Harbor Ridge.

When choosing to represent a homeowner in the marketing and subsequent sale of his home, Escano and Jordan feel an agent must have the initiative to provide the progressive marketing techniques necessary to expose those homes as effectively as possible. This commitment and dedication to their clients has resulted in over $4 million in successful sales in this year of "hard times."

The pair admit that the overall real estate activity has decreased from previous years, but they are optimistic about the values of Orange County real estate and feel that Newport Beach, and Harbor Ridge in particular, will continue to be one of the most sought-after addresses in southern California.

Loan hotline set

Shearson/American Express Mortgage Corp., headquartered in the city of Orange, has announced a community service hot line number for Orange County residents. According to Scott Gray, the firm's assistant vice president, the new phone number is 835-6411.

"Our goal is to offer the community residents clear, concise answers to their mortgage financing questions," Scott noted. "Often times, individuals with balloon payments coming due, or those who wish to refinance existing home loans find themselves at a loss as to which way to turn."

"Whether consumers have already selected a financing firm or not, they can feel free to phone us for advice with no obligation."

Business discovers San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A glut of downtown office space could help put San Diego on a par with Los Angeles and San Francisco as a major financial center, according to real estate analysts.

That possibility exists despite the lowest level of construction activity in San Diego County in 23 years for the first half of 1982.

Total building activity in California's southernmost county has declined for the fifth straight year. And, for the first six months of 1982, it was down 20 percent below the already depressed levels of the first half of 1981, according to the August issue of the San Diego Economic Bulletin.

But because four new downtown skyscrapers are opening this year, the total available office space in the civic center will double, to about 6 million square feet. And in surrounding suburbs, twice as much office space is under construction than during the entire past 20 years, says real estate analyst Sanford Goodkin.

"This new growth is a complete change of pace for San Diego," said Goodkin. "We used to be seen as a nice place for a vacation, or a Navy town, but never to be taken seriously by big business."

He calls downtown San Diego the best underdeveloped property on the West Coast, noting that 250,000 square feet of new office space is occupied each year, and that is expected to rise to 380,000 square feet next year.

The four new downtown highrises total 1.7 million square feet and are the first to be built here in seven years. They include the 27 story Columbia Center, the 20-story Bank of America Plaza, the 20 story Wells Fargo Tower, which opened this week, and the 24-story Imperial Bank Building, which opened five months ago.

But all this construction has resulted in a temporary office space glut, with a vacancy rate of 30 percent that will take three years to fill, says Arleigh Williams, resident manager of Coldwell Banker.

That vacancy rate is the highest among big cities in the nation, he said.

Still, the office space growth rate is not as substantial as in some other cities. Denver is adding about 5 million square feet of office space this year, and Houston about 8 million, said Dave Ferguson, researcher for Grubb and Ellis Realtors.

'Portside' offers special NB value

In Pacesetter Homes' Westcliff Grove community off Dover Drive in Newport Beach, the "Portside" home, Lot 17, has become available with a "rare value package," indicates Landon M. Exley, executive vice president for the developer.

The four-bedroom, 3½ bath home, which includes a dining room, library, and family room, is "specially priced" at $395,000 with 10 percent down and 5½ year financing with no lender assumption.

Described as "an architectural gem" near the waters and cliffs of the Newport bay, the two-story Westcliff Grove home is set amidst mature landscaping on a well proportioned lot.

Special detailing combines with architectural features like vaulted ceilings, skylights, French doors, double hearth, and a kitchen island to make the "Portside" home "a tremendous opportunity at this price," adds Exley.

An oversized kitchen serves both the family room and a formal dining room where French doors open to the patio.

The master suite upstairs occupies its own private wing, and the three secondary bedrooms share two baths.

To reach the homes from Pacific Coast Highway turn up the hill at Dover Drive and follow Dover to Westcliff Drive. For more information call 646-5092.

Tips offered for security of your home

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The growth of the home security industry is founded on the fact that burglaries are generally on the rise in most parts of the United States.

This situation has created a growing market for alarm systems and other security devices, such as locks and bolts. However, law enforcement officers and security specialists agree an individual can go a long way — without spending money — toward preventing burglaries by making it difficult for would-be intruders to enter a house.

One home security product maker recently collected a number of ways of safeguarding a home. A checklist of things to do that cost little or nothing shows how to maintain the appearance of life and activity, thus discouraging burglars. Some of the safeguards, however, do involve a greater energy expense.

The best defense is confusion, a sense of activity and avoidance of an easily defined routine of entering and leaving the home, according to the checklist printed in booklet form by Fichet Inc.

If you go out, leave lights on, leave a radio playing, and adjust the window shades or blinds as if you were at home. Taking the phone off the hook so a caller will think someone is at home is another ploy. In hot weather, consider leaving the air conditioner turned on very low.

Even when at home, practice good security by keeping windows and doors locked at all times and ladders locked away. Make sure the doors to the basement and garage are locked except when in use. Don't hide keys outside, and instruct children not to open the door to strangers. Keep valuables out of sight and turn on exterior lights at night.

Don't have your name on the outside of the house. Cruising burglars can look up your phone number and call to see if anyone is at home. Make sure shrubs do not provide a hiding place; trim them back so that neighbors can see into the first-floor windows.

Sliding glass doors are easy to open or even remove by lifting out of their frame. Guard against this by inserting nails into the inside frame of the windows just above the door itself.

If you have exterior doors with glass panes, add a metal grille, an acrylic plastic cover or replace the glass with wire mesh reinforced glass.

It is a good idea to photograph and engrave an identifying number on valuables for insurance purposes. Keep a list of valuables, too, in case you should ever have to make a claim.

Place emergency numbers — police and fire department especially — where they can be seen on each telephone extension.

If you live in an apartment, use only one initial on your mailbox and apartment registry listing so that you guard against being telephoned to check if you are at home. Make sure you have a peephole in your apartment door and install two separate locks plus a high security deadbolt with a pickproof cylinder.

Windows which can be reached from an outside fire escape or the ground should be secured with police department-approved gates. Air conditioners should be bolted to window supporting frames. Select a window that is not easily reached from the outside if you have a choice when it comes to installing an air conditioner.

The duplicate door key you may leave with your superintendent should be sealed in an envelope. Ask the superintendent to leave the key in the envelope. If there is a break-in, check that the envelope has not been tampered with.

A good idea in both home and apartment is to install a lock on the bedroom door so potential intruders will have a harder time causing you physical harm.

When going on vacation ask a friend, relative or neighbor to keep an eye on the house and to remove mail daily. Or you can request that mail delivery be suspended until you return.

When stopping delivery services such as newspaper and milk, do so without explanation. Arrange for regular lawn care and use timers to turn on lights and radio at intervals.

Ask a friend to park in your driveway and, if feasible, have someone deposit a bag of trash in your garbage cans once a week.

If the vacation is a lengthy one, store valuables in a safe deposit box and notify the police of your trip and leave a number where you can be reached.

Copies of the "Home Security Checklist" may be obtained free from Fichet Inc., P.O. Box 92, Halesite, NY 11743.

Cedar Glen lures first time buyers

Cedar Glen condominiums in El Toro by Pacesetter Homes provide "an excellent opportunity for first-time buyers to take full advantages of home ownership," states Landon M. Exley, executive vice president for the developer.

"The package of price and financing at Cedar Glen is particularly suited to first-time buyers," he adds. "With only 10 percent down, we can offer a 30-year fixed-rate loan, fully assumable, and monthly payments around $929. There are no closing costs."

In addition to the prices of $95,000 and $97,000 for the two-bedroom, two-story, 1½-bath condominiums, Exley notes the popular sun and swim recreation center available for the use of each resident.

Each home features a living room, family room, kitchen, and powder room downstairs, with the two bedrooms secluded upstairs.

The kitchens are equipped with built-in Hotpoint appliances, a garbage disposal, and vinyl flooring.

Other standard features include wall-to-wall carpeting, patios, cable TV, corian marble pullman tops, laundry areas, and walk-in closets.

Cedar Glen is located near the hills of the Trabuco Canyon on the corner of El Toro and Trabuco roads. The sales office at Cedar Glen is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day.

To reach the community, take the San Diego Freeway to El Toro Road. Drive north on El Toro to the intersection of El Toro and Trabuco, and follow the signs. For more information, call 586-4910.

Inaugurating the gate-guarded entry system at Falcon Hill in Laguna Hills are Terry Teeople (right), of the Meister Company, and Randy Howatt, president of the Falcon Hill Homeowners Association.

Falcon Hill homes 'secured'

With the completion of the gate-guarded entry system at Charleton Drive and La Paz Road, Falcon Hill has become the only private, single-family residential community of luxury homes to offer such an amenity in this section of Laguna Hills.

Complementing the secluded nature of Falcon Hill's hilltop setting, the gate-guarded entry is designed to enhance the private nature of these homes and to maximize control over street usage to achieve the highest degree of safety possible.

Card key controls provide residents easy access to the community, while a telephone entry system enables visitors and guests to contact individual owners at their homes for admittance. A special programmable code box at the entry kiosk may be used by service people such as gardeners, pool cleaners and housekeepers to gain entry on a regular basis. Provisions for emergency access for sheriff, fire and paramedic personnel are also incorporated into the system.

Presenting from 1,734 to 2,509 square feet of interior living space, these three and four-bedroom homes were designed by Berkus Group Architects of Newport Beach. Each home is showcased by soaring vaulted or cathedral ceilings as well as by skylights and clerestory windows which enhance the spatial dimensions of the formal and informal entertaining areas in addition to those of the luxurious master suites.

Prices for these unique homes begin at $215,500. Financing programs include a limited number of 30-year, fixed-rate loans at 13¼% (14.25% annual percentage rate) or lower available on selected homes, a 60/30/10 plan reducing down payment and qualifying requirements and several different five and seven year loans which begin with very low interest rates.

To visit this gate-guarded, hilltop community in Laguna Hills, take the San Diego Freeway to the La Paz Road exit and proceed south approximately three miles to Charleton Drive, then turn left to Falcon Hill.

Ground broken for HB tract

With the mayor and city administrator of Huntington Beach assisting in the ceremony, the new landmark community along the Huntington Seaciff golf course in Huntington Beach was christened recently.

Swinging golf clubs to move some initial ground for the golf course homes, Mayor Robert P. Mandic Jr., City Administrator Charles W. Thompson, and Development Services Director James W. Palin joined with members of the development team to commemorate a project that demanded over three years of planning before the first ground was broken.

The community, which will eventually yield 522 exclusive homes, is a joint venture project between Mansion Properties, Inc., a subsidiary of the Huntington Beach Company, and Cayman Development Company of Rolling Hills Estates.

"This project was natural for both our companies," states Roger Work, vice president and general manager of the Huntington Beach Company. "Cayman has developed the finest homes in Palos Verdes and Rolling Hills Estates for years, and it was their great accomplishments that convinced us that they were an excellent choice to work with on this prime property."

Cayman president Ray Rutter shares similar sentiments, praising the prior Huntington Beach Company developments that have already made Seaciff such an attractive neighborhood.

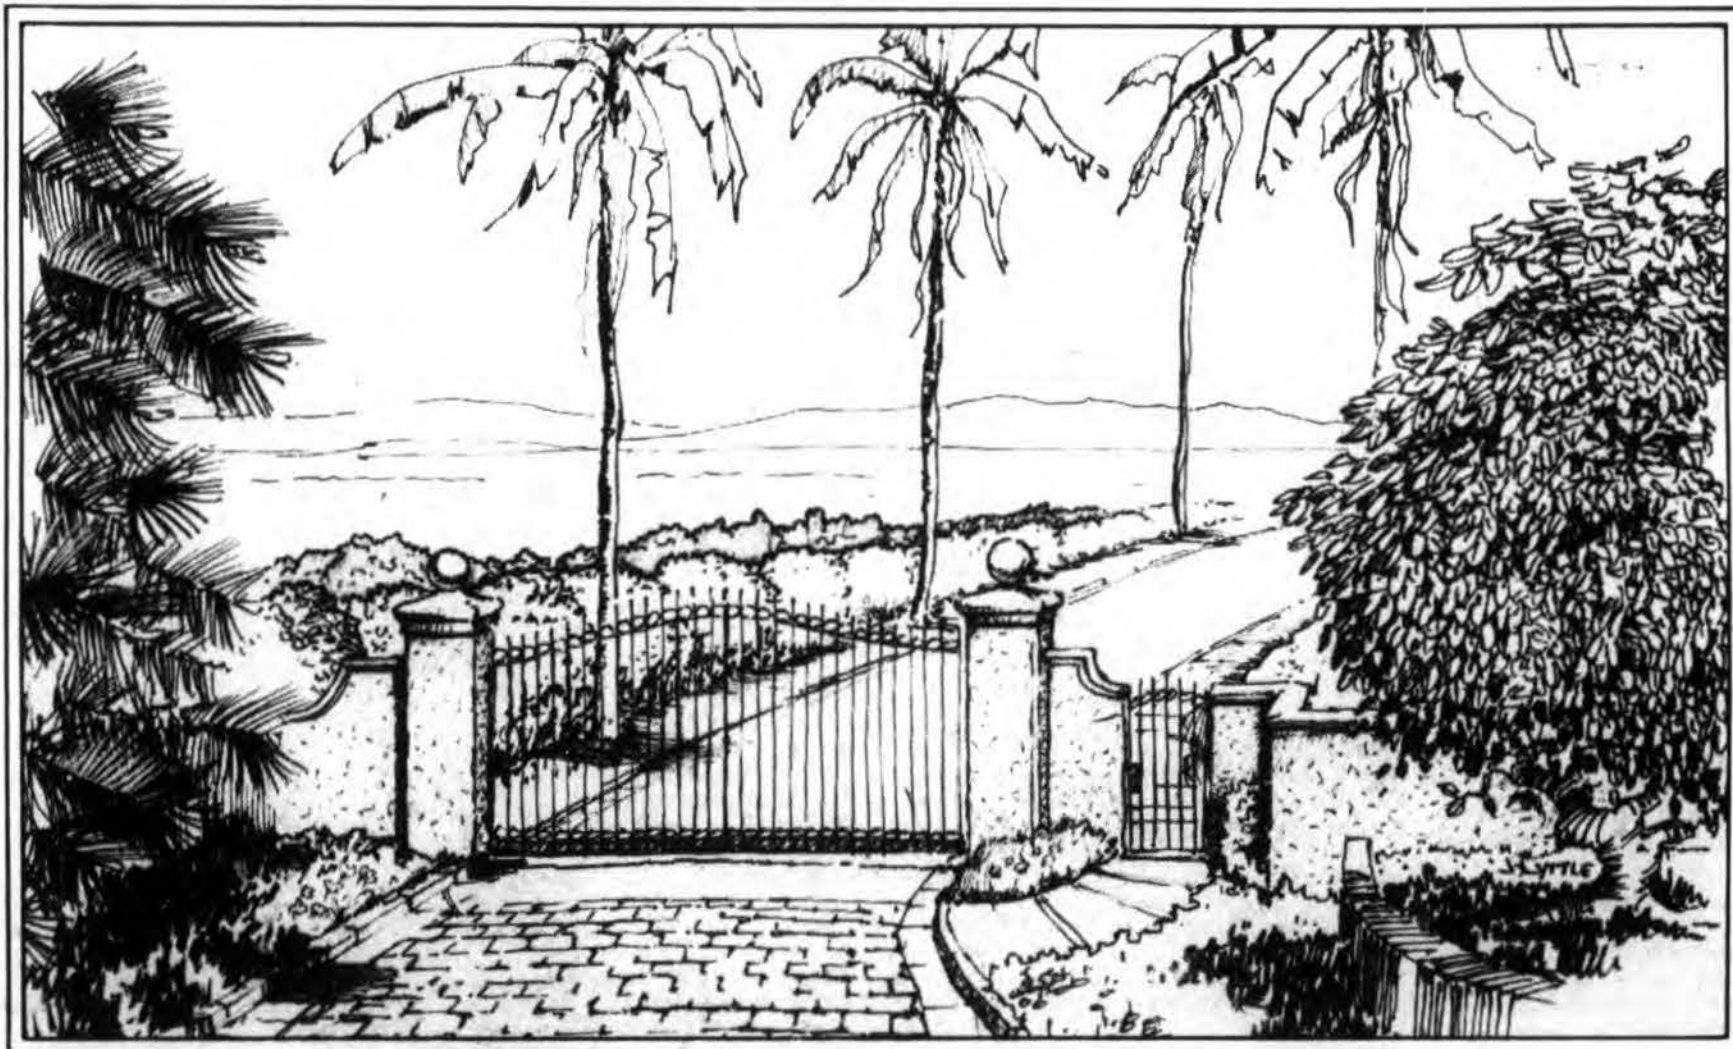

"We have been very impressed with our associates in Huntington Beach," adds Rutter, "and the opening ceremony gave us an opportunity to thank the mayor, the city administrator, and the Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce for their tremendous help and support over the long haul of putting such an extensive project together."

Second mortgage hard to get with adjustables

By ROBERT J. BRUSS

DEAR BOB: When we bought our home about two years ago we paid a $65,000 down payment and got an "adjustable rate mortgage" for the balance of the purchase price. Our down payment was almost 40 percent. We now realize it was stupid to make such a big down payment. My husband has been trying to arrange a $20,000 second mortgage as we need to pay off some medical bills. But no local bank, S&L, finance company, or mortgage broker will give us a second mortgage. They all say they don't make second mortgage loans if the first loan has an adjustable interest rate. Is this true or is there some other reason? — Mickie N.

DEAR MICKIE: It's true. Most second mortgage lenders will not make a loan if the first mortgage is an adjustable rate mortgage (ARM).

Although the terms of ARM loans vary, most have interest rate adjustments every six or 12 months. Some provide for monthly payment adjustments but many allow negative amortization if interest rates go up (meaning the borrower may owe more than he originally borrowed).

REAL ESTATE MAILBAG

The ARM is the riskiest type of mortgage loan. ARMs, in my opinion, should be made illegal. Even lenders making ARM loans realize the risk and they refuse to make second mortgage loans if the first loan is an ARM.

Although it will be expensive, your best alternative for raising the $20,000 may be to refinance your ARM with the current lender. Another possibility, and probably the cheapest, is to get the medical bill creditor to accept a $20,000 second mortgage on your house as security for your future payments to the creditor.

Don't believe statistics

DEAR BOB: I heard on the radio news that home prices are stagnant and not going up very much. But in our neighborhood home sales prices continue to go up. It's so hard to know if we should keep our house or sell it. Do you think home prices will go down? — Karen C

DEAR KAREN: The higher a home's mortgage interest rate, the lower that home's market value. Therefore, a home with a low interest rate assumable mortgage is worth more than one without such attractive financing.

But don't believe the average or median home sales price statistics you hear or read. These figures have become skewed and are virtually meaningless.

The reason is the cheap homes are selling well, as are the very expensive homes. However, homes in the "middle market" price range are not selling well due to high mortgage interest rates which most buyers can't afford to pay.

The result is home sale statistics which are not accurate for reflecting home values. As you've discovered, home sale prices in your neighborhood are going up but you're hearing conflicting figures elsewhere.

Since the reported statistics don't reflect the seller financing terms of sales, and are often limited only to reported sales by Realtors or when a new mortgage was obtained from a conventional lender place little faith in the current misleading home sale price reports.

Canceling impound account

DEAR BOB: Our home mortgage has an impound account for monthly payments of property taxes and fire insurance. The lender pays a very low interest rate on this money. We would prefer to make our own tax and insurance payments when they become due. Is it possible to get this impound account canceled? — Neil L.

DEAR NEIL: Maybe. If your mortgage is a FHA or VA home loan, its terms require an impound account for property taxes and fire insurance. But impound accounts on other types of mortgages can usually be canceled with the lender's permission.

However, many lenders are reluctant to cancel impound accounts because they are a source of very cheap money for the lender. But there's no harm in asking. If you get a "no" answer, insist on talking to the lender's top officer. Especially if your mortgage has a low loan-to-value ratio, and if you are persistent, you can probably get the impound account canceled.

Discount mortgage buy legal

DEAR BOB: Last week I met a realty broker at a civic luncheon. She says that from time to time she learns of first and second mortgages for sale at discounts which yield a return of at least 20 to 30 percent on the investment. One mortgage she knows of has an $8,500 balance which I can buy for $6,000 cash. She explained my yield will be about 26 percent when the loan's balloon payment is paid off. Although I realize there is risk, the house is in a good neighborhood and the owner has a $35,000 equity in it. My question is would I be violating the usury laws by buying this mortgage? — Ken L.

DEAR KEN: No. Presuming the mortgage did not violate the state usury law when it was made, subsequent sale of the loan at a discount has no relevance to usury laws.

The reason is the borrower is still paying the same non-usurious interest rate that he agreed to pay when he got the loan. Ask your attorney to explain the usury laws further.

Homeowners stopped 'throwing away money'

Selected from all the buyers at Aliso Meadows as a typical couple, Csaba "Chub" and Diane Domotor said they purchased a home at the affordable Laguna Hills community "to avoid throwing away our money on rent."

The Domotors, who have been married three years, came to California from their native New Jersey 2½ years ago and have been renting an apartment in Lake Forest. Both work in Irvine. Chub is a designer of industrial control valves for Control Components, Inc., while Diane is a waitress at Ricky Rickshaw's.

"We decided to stop throwing away our money on rent," says Chub. "We wanted to put our money into something, to build equity for the larger home we hope to buy when we have children in three to five years.

We also wanted our own place, a place where we can do any kind of decorating we want and plant a tree in our own yard."

The Domotors wanted to continue living in southern Orange County, since it's convenient to their jobs and Chub's parents live in Mission Viejo.

"We looked a lot for over a year," adds Diane. "We couldn't afford detached homes and the other condominiums did not have enough room. Plan A at Aliso Meadows had the best layout, the most room. It fits our furniture perfectly — even our big dining room set. Another big reason why we bought here is that no one lives above or below us. We feel like we have our own little house and we can do anything we want with it."

So far, they've painted their bedroom and paneled a wall with cork. Their next project is the fenced front yard, which will have flowers, rocks, grass and a deck.

Aliso Meadows Project Manager Terry Brennan reports that the majority of buyers are like the Domotors; "young, married and childless. Eighty-six percent are under 32, fifty-four percent are married, and seventy-four percent have no children."

The model selected by the Domotors, Plan A, the Aster, offers 960 square feet of living space. It has a formal entry foyer, spacious living room, large dining room, U-shaped kitchen, two bedrooms and one bath. Sliding glass doors open from the living room and master bedroom into the fenced front yard. The Domotors use the extra bedroom for a den-TV room.

A condominium development, Aliso

Meadows offers two two-bedroom plans of 960 square feet and one three-bedroom model with 1,248 square feet.

Prices start at $79,950. Sales at Aliso Meadows are restricted to those with gross annual household incomes of $25,664 to $38,496 because the loans are government-assisted. The interest rate is fixed for 30 years at 10.6 percent (10.87 percent APR) or 11.5 percent (11.75 percent APR), depending on the buyer's income. The normal down payment is 10 percent.

Open daily, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the sales office and furnished models may be reached by taking the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway south to Alicia Parkway off-ramp (first exit past El Toro Road), turning right on Alicia and going southwest 1½ miles to Via Lomas and Aliso Meadows.

Financing offer expires tonight

"Going . . . going . . . almost gone" is the opportunity to buy a new home with a 30-year fixed-rate loan at 10 percent interest (11 percent APR) at Broadmoor residential communities throughout Southern California.

This special financing offer that has drawn crowds of home shoppers over the past few months is now set to expire at midnight tonight.

Described by Broadmoor sales people as "the best new home financing available," these below-market loans not only feature low interest rates locked in for 30 years, but are also fully assumable by a qualified buyer.

To home shoppers, this has meant a chance to purchase a brand new Broadmoor home with the confidence that should he or she be transferred, or for any reason wish to sell, the property can be sold much more easily because the mortgage remains fully assumable for its entire 30-year term.

These "lifetime loans" are also reminiscent of "the good old days" in many other ways. For example, there will be no surprise call-ins after three, five or 10 years; the rate stays the same and the principal is reduced every time a payment is made.

In addition to the excellent financing, the opportunity to purchase with a down payment as low as 10 percent is currently available at Broadmoor residential communities in Laguna Niguel and Huntington Beach.

A typical conventional sale: Country Vistas, Plan One, cash price is $186,500. Cash down payment is $18,650 at 10 percent down. Move-in closing costs are estimated at $6,192. A First Trust Deed of $167,850 (unpaid balance) in 360 successive equal monthly payments is approximately $1,761 including principal, interest, estimated taxes, insurance and Homeowners' Association dues.

At Broadmoor's Hampton Bluffs, in Laguna Niguel, an "enclave grand opening" has just introduced a newly decorated selection of luxurious, single-family executive homes at prices from $230,000. Offered in distinctive traditional architectural stylings, these one and two-story residences feature from three to four bedrooms.

Information about these fine residential communities, or the soon-to-expire 10-percent 30-year financing offer, may be obtained by phoning Broadmoor Homes/Southern California, 957-1100.

San Juan project rich in amenities

Two of the rarest qualities in modern life are grace and dignity. One of the fastest dwindling resources is a homesite fronting the ocean.

Rare and dwindling but not extinct. All can be found at Connemara-By-The-Sea, a private community on a hill overlooking Dana Point Harbor in San Juan Capistrano.

The new, amenity-rich development consists of 80 homesites. The setting is a hill rising from Dana Point into the hills beyond San Clemente.

The homesites begin at $249,000 and range upwards to $480,000.

Connemara-By-The-Sea is reached by taking Camino las Ramblas east from the Pacific Coast Highway. Turn left on Avenida Pescador to the entrance at Connemara Drive.

Appointments to view the homesites, or further information may be obtained by calling Fred Good at Connemara, 861-0305.

Middle class getting no-frills legal service

KING OF PRUSSIA, Pa. (AP) — In the Valley Forge shopping center there are two signs in the window of the office flanked by the luggage shop and the vacant ladies' shoe store: "Hyatt Legal Services," and "H&R Block."

Walk in the door and to the right you can get your taxes done. To the left, you can get a will written, a divorce settled, a drunken driving charge defended or a bankruptcy petitioned.

Hyatt Legal Services, the 5-year-old brainchild of a young Cleveland attorney, has joined forces with the nation's largest income tax preparing firm in hopes of creating a nationwide network of high-volume, cut-rate, quick-service "legal clinics" aimed at middle-income people.

"The majority of our clients have never been to a lawyer before," Joel Hyatt, 32, said in Kansas City. That's where he moved his offices — into Henry Bloch's former business suite — when Bloch expanded and reached a complicated financial agreement with Hyatt two years ago.

The result is non-traditional but successful. The Hyatt-Bloch office in this Philadelphia suburb happens to be a renovated state liquor store. Clients enter a common waiting room with its durable carpeting and 16 metal frame chairs.

On the Hyatt side, there are two legal secretaries. Down the hall are the three offices of the three Hyatt lawyers. There are no objets d'art on the walls, no stacks of leathery law books, not even any names on the doors.

There will be no million-dollar verdicts in this office. Those cases go downtown, to the staid old law firms that hold forth among walnut paneling. The Hyatt brand of law is no-frills, the simple cut-and-dried matters for which an attorney needs not a full law library, but only pre-printed forms variously headed "Uncontested Divorce" or "Simple Will."

Since Hyatt and Bloch (the tax man spells the firm's name phonetically) teamed up, Hyatt Legal Services has grown from nine neighborhood offices in Ohio to 90 offices with 200 lawyers in a dozen states. By the end of this year, there will be 280 attorneys in 125 offices in 14 states.

"The majority of our clients have never been to a lawyer before . . . There will be no million-dollar verdicts in this office."

About three-fourths of those offices share space with H&R Block, usually in neighborhoods far from the biggest and most prestigious law firms in town.

Under their 1980 agreement, Bloch paid Hyatt $2 million for the leases and equipment in those nine Ohio offices. Bloch and Hyatt then formed Block Management Corp., an H&R Block subsidiary which takes care of all the management and administrative chores for Hyatt Legal Services.

"It leaves me free to concentrate on what I do best — practice law," said Art Gutkin, managing attorney in the King of Prussia Hyatt office. People employed by Block handle his advertising, hire his secretaries, keep his books and order his supplies.

Block not only collects fees from Hyatt for its management services, but also collects rent for subletting space to the legal clinics. In other words, the law firm now pays the rent that Block used to pay during the eight months a year that many of its 9,000 tax offices were dark.

William Robie, the Washington lawyer who heads the American Bar Association's special committee on delivery of legal services, said, "It's an innovative technique."

He said the number of legal clinics nationwide has stabilized at about 400, with the growing number of Hyatt offices replacing many that have gone out of business for lack of capital and management skills that Block provides.

The next largest chain of legal clinics, Jacoby and Meyers, started in Los Angeles 10 years ago. Its growth has steadied with 44 offices in California and 19 in New York.

As with all legal clinics, however, Hyatt Legal Services would flounder unless people with problems walked through the doors.

"Got a problem?" Joel Hyatt entices the public in the series of television ads which are produced by a New York advertising firm then aired in each community where Hyatt has an office. The 30-second spots are the same in each city, except that the last five seconds gives the address and telephone number of local Hyatt offices, not unlike the H&R Block commercials aired across the country.

ABLE tells Canadian connection

ABLE Computer of Irvine now has completed the appointment of a network of five distributors serving Canadian needs coast to coast, announced Robert T. Jones, Director of International Marketing.

"This network of firms specializing in computer systems makes experienced sales, installation and service facilities promptly available throughout Canada," Jones said.

Distributors are located in Vancouver, Calgary, Regina, Mississauga (Toronto), and Dollard des Ormeaux (Montreal). They are supported by ABLE's own office and service facilities in Mississauga.

ABLE Computer is a leader in the enhancement market, which designs, manufactures and distributes a broad line of UNIBUS-compatible data communications, memory and general purpose enhancement products for users of Digital Equipment Corporation computers.

San/Bar Corp. of Irvine, said it posted record revenues and earnings in fiscal 1982.

The company reported that fiscal 1982 was a benchmark year for San/Bar Corp. It was the 20th year in operation, the best year in the company's history, and the second consecutive year in which San/Bar achieved record revenues and earnings.

The company also stated that on the whole fiscal 1982 was a year of significant achievement for San/Bar. During the year the company established its Canadian and European operations and acquired a new, state-of-the-art electronic key telephone system.

San/Bar Corp. is a major supplier of electronic equipment and components, microwave radio systems, and service to the telecommunications industry.

Boss doesn't mind being in hot water

WALNUT CREEK (AP) — Roy Jacuzzi has made the most of being in hot water.

"We're like Coke and Xerox now," he says proudly.

How's a Jacuzzi like a soda or a copying machine?

Well, when you want a photocopy, you make a Xerox. If you need an adhesive bandage, you ask for a Band-Aid. Crave a cool, gelatin dessert and you make some Jell-O. And when you're thirsty for cola, you pour a Coke.

The product names have entered the language, perhaps the highest tribute of American consumerism.

And the president of Jacuzzi Whirlpool Baths ranks his product among those Americanisms: when you're aching for a warm, swirling whirlpool, chances are you think Jacuzzi, he says.

But the word Jacuzzi didn't always conjure up that picture. Until recently in the company's life, it was better known for large, industrial pumps, and before that, airplane propellers.

Jacuzzi Bros. got its start in 1915 when the seven Jacuzzi brothers developed a pitched propeller and landed a contract supplying the government in World War I. The venture's success brought the rest of the family from Italy to America — six sisters and their mother and father.

After the war, the inventive clan made fans, furnaces and wind machines that kept frost from fruit orchards by blowing air across them. And in 1926, they developed a water injection jet pump that was the forerunner of their success.

Through the next two decades, the family business expanded with jet pumps of various sizes, designs and capabilities. As California grew wealthier and more populous after World War II, Jacuzzi Bros. spotted swimming pools as a lucrative market and added a line of pool equipment.

It was a second-generation Jacuzzi suffering in the mid-50s from rheumatoid arthritis who triggered the development that made Jacuzzi a household word.

Intent on finding a way to provide hydrotherapy at home instead of in a hospital, the family inventors made a pump that set air and water pulsating in an ordinary bathtub.

"It was a tremendous treatment, and its applications were obvious," says Roy Jacuzzi, one of the family's third generation.

Hospitals and athletic groups were the main customers for much of the next decade. But the portable whirlpool pump was "very institutional, very medical" until the rise of consumer interest in fitness and well-being and health," he says.

A "trend-watcher" and industrial designer, Jacuzzi in 1968 pioneered the home-use whirlpool bath, which incorporated and concealed all the Jacuzzi equipment, the jets, pumps and electronics.

"What I did was put the equipment inside the bathtub and make it part of the room's environment," Jacuzzi says. "It took immediately."

Since then, the Jacuzzi line has expanded to both baths and spas made in fiberglass or acrylic in up to a dozen colors, in round, octagonal, oblong or square designs that accommodate one, two, three, four and more people, sitting or reclining, indoors or out.

As their business skyrocketed and some of the family wanted to retire, the Jacuzzis decided to sell. The business was bought in 1979 by the New Jersey-based conglomerate Walter Kidde & Co. for $70 million, with Roy Jacuzzi staying on at the whirlpool bath division.

The trend now, the 39-year-old Jacuzzi says, is toward bathrooms as "environment rooms," "green rooms" or entertainment rooms.

"Because of the high cost of new homes, people stay put and upgrade their homes," he explains. "People want to use their home environment to the fullest. They're wanting the finer things in life, and the bathroom is one of the first places they remodel."

With the kind of attention that used to be lavished on kitchens, bathrooms are being redesigned as focal points for home entertainment: Skylights and greenery, glass walls and redwood decks or tiles from floor to ceiling.

If Procter & Gamble (P&G) has suffered because of rumors linking the company to satanism, it's certainly not evident from the latest sales and earnings results.

P&G became so irritated with people calling its toll-free number to say they were boycotting the company's product, the callers saying they believed P&G to be in league with the devil, that in June it mounted a counteroffensive.

A press release was issued strongly denying the rumors. Several religious leaders, including the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority, came to P&G's defense, discrediting the rumors. Then, just to show how seriously it was taking this issue, P&G went into the courts in Georgia and Florida to sue people for slander, charging that by spreading the rumor they were "libeling the character" of the company. To file the Georgia action, P&G recruited Griffin Bell, who was Attorney General of the United States in the Jimmy Carter administration.

P&G works on a fiscal year that ends June 30 — and earlier this month the Cincinnati company posted its fiscal 1982 results. They were nothing to be ashamed about. For the most recent quarter, the three months ended June 30, profits spurted 15 percent on a sales gain of 6.4 percent. And, for the full year, sales mounted to $12 billion while aftertax profits soared 16 percent to $777 million.

P&G not hurt by satan rumor

Based on sales, P&G is the 25th largest manufacturing company in the nation. Based on profits, it ranks 19th. It is THE pre-eminent marketer of consumer goods — and its market shares today are stronger than they have ever been.

In the soap and detergent business, no one puts a glove on P&G with its armada of brands: Tide, Cheer, Bold, Gain, Dash, Era, Ivory, Zest, Coast, Camay, Dreft, Oxydol, Comet, Cascade, Mr. Clean, Top Job, Spic & Span, Duz, Joy, Biz, Safeguard, Lava.

P&G has been the longtime leader of the toothpaste market with Crest, backed up by a strong second brand, Gleem.

P&G sells more hair shampoo than anyone else under its Head & Shoulders and Prell labels.

P&G virtually created the disposable diaper market with Pampers, backed up now with a second brand, Luvs.

P&G has the leading regular coffee, Folger's, and one of the leading cake mix brands, Duncan Hines.

P&G is a top contender in the paper products business with Charmin tissues and Bounty towels.

Other P&G brands include Secret, Sure, Scope, Crisco, Puritan, Pert, High Point, Downy and Pringle's.

P&G doesn't suffer losers for very long, and there's no sign that these rumors are weakening the company's grip on the market in which they compete.

The trade magazine Advertising Age conducted a survey to find out how many people in the country had even heard of these rumors. It found that 32 percent had (42 percent in the South). And of those who had heard about it, only 3 percent believed it.

But the surprise finding of this survey came in the answer to the question, "Which products are made by P&G?" Seventy-nine percent of the 1,264 Americans who were interviewed by phone said they couldn't name a single P&G product. What a blow to the ego! You spend $650 million a year on advertising, and no one knows what you make.

P&G didn't have to fight the boycotters. It could have remained quiet — and anonymous.

'Taxi' star happy his wife has lead-in series

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Danny DeVito, munching on nachos, smiles smugly and asks, "How does it feel to be in a television show with your wife as your lead-in and you're expecting a baby?"

The smile broadens. "I thought you'd never ask. I'm so thrilled."

DeVito stars as the dyspeptic dispatcher, Louie DePalma, in "Taxi," the three-time Emmy-winning comedy NBC saved after it was canceled by ABC. NBC put it on Thursday nights following its new comedy, "Cheers." DeVito's wife, Rhea Perlman, plays a waitress in the new show. They're expecting in March.

"It's been a strange year," the actor says. "Rhea and I got married in February after living together for 11 years. We go to New York for a party. My father's been sick and he dies the night of the party. He was 82. He was so excited and he died talking to his friends."

"I go back to work, I got three-four shows left. It's March 5. We're flying. It's the last show. We're going to have a party. John Belushi, my friend, dies. It's heartbreaking."

"We're in Carmel relaxing," DeVito continues. "The phone rings, it's our agent. They want Rhea to fly down and read for a new series. She's been an actress 11 years. My career took off with 'Taxi.' Now she's got a part she can sink her teeth into. She comes home happy every day. We're on a roll. One morning I get a call from producer Ed Weinberger: 'They canceled us.'"

He was angered by the cancellation and got his revenge not long afterward when he was host of NBC's "Saturday Night Live." In a spoof he drove a taxi to the ABC building and blew it up.

DeVito is talking almost stream-of-consciousness, and it's difficult to even get a question in.

He talks of the interest by Home Box Office in putting "Taxi" on its pay television network and of the sudden move by NBC that got the program for its fall schedule.

And he talks of the knee he had injured during the production of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

"Remember when I caught the fish on the boat and they all fell on me?" he asks. "I've had chronic knee problems since then. They all tell me I need an operation. But I'm chicken and I don't want to do it."

"I'm in the editing room working on a short film for cable when Rhea calls. She's pregnant. Now I want to bounce this kid on my knee. Both knees. So Rhea takes me to the hospital for the operation. I'm terrified."

He pulls up his pants leg to display his left knee wrapped tightly in a bandage.

"They'll write Rhea's pregnancy into 'Cheers.' She plays a divorced woman with four kids."

"Color It Terrific"

'PINK FLOYD THE WALL' IS RED HOT!

'PINK FLOYD THE WALL' is a red-hot wail of despair that will leave you joyfully singing its praises. Never before have music and imagery, live action and animation, message and medium, been so soaringly blended as in this defiantly unorthodox pop opera. You shouldn't let any barrier stand in the way of your seeing this monumental Wall."

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.—What are the differences between "cue-bids" and "splinter bids"? During the auction when we are probing for slam I sometimes get confused about which is which. Please explain the two terms with some example hands.—D.R. Kale, Katy, Texas

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—You are confusing chickens and eggs, and not necessarily chicken eggs. They are two completely different things.

Let's start with splinter bids. They are the easiest to explain. A splinter bid is an unusual jump in a suit. It agrees the previous bid by your partner as the trump suit, shows the equivalent of a forcing raise in his suit and a singleton in the suit bid. Suppose that partner opens the bidding with one heart. You would make a splinter bid of four diamonds (three diamonds would be a natural, strong jump shift) with:

♦Axxx ♠KJxx ♥x ♦AJxx

Or suppose you opened the bidding with one diamond and partner responded one heart. Make a splinter bid of three spades with:

♦x ♠AQxx ♥AKJxx ♠KJx

Note that, in each case, the splinter bid guarantees at least good four-card support for partner's suit.

Cue-bids are a different matter. The first type is where you have a very strong hand and want to make a takeout bid that is absolutely forcing to game. For instance, suppose your right-hand opponent opens one diamond and you hold:

♦AKJxx ♠AKQxx ♥x ♠Kx

If partner holds as little as three or more cards in either major, you can almost surely make game, but you want the opportunity to show both of your suits without fear that partner will drop the auction. Start with a cue-bid of two diamonds. Note that you must have first or second round control of the enemy suit for this action.

A similar case occurs where partner has made a takeout double and you want to get to game in one of two or more suits, but you don't know which. For example, suppose that your left-hand opponent opens one diamond, partner doubles and the next hand passes. You hold:

♦KJxx ♠AQxx ♥xx ♠Kxx

You want to play either four hearts or four spades, but partner's takeout double doesn't necessarily guarantee four cards in both majors. So you start with a two-diamond cuebid, and partner will bid his major suit. This bid is simply forcing to game, and promises nothing in the enemy suit.

Last, and probably most important, are cue-bids to check on controls for slam purposes. These are usually easy to distinguish, because control cue bids start after a trump suit has been established. Each partner cue bids his controls — showing first-round controls initially and, thereafter, second-round controls; starting with the cheapest control. To illustrate:

North	South
5♦

Since a trump suit has been established, the bids for four clubs and four hearts are cue bids, showing first-round control (ace or void) in those suits. North's five club cuebid shows second-round control and denies the ace of diamonds — you don't cuebid second-round controls until you have shown all your first-round controls.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

THE CROWN POINT

ABOVE EVERYTHING

Above all of Newport Beach and Corona del Mar. The rooftops of Harbor Ridge and Spyglass Hill provide a view for you! And beyond... the lights of the cities in one direction, distant mountains in another, and the Pacific Ocean is still another direction. Everything is below you, because you are the Crown Point above the Coast!

A gated half-acre estate, surrounded by other multi-million dollar homes on the pinnacle of Spyglass Hill. This is an entertainer's home, a place to host the most exciting social affairs in this newest glamour capital of the world... where royalty and celebrities join Southern California society in enjoying the best the world has to offer.

This is also a family home, charming and warm, where privacy and comfort equal the entertaining possibilities. A superbly crafted custom residence built by one of Newport's most respected contractors. An elegant 18' high foyer, leads to more beauty and quality and exquisite decorating. Featured throughout are high beamed ceilings, crown mouldings, rich woods, huge French windows and decorator touches everywhere. A fabulous gourmet kitchen will spoil the chief cook and bottle washer, who in turn will spoil everyone in the outstanding family room, which is rich and crazy with a spectacular view. Come and visit this jewel on the Crown Point. The owners have purchased another home and anxious to sell. Creative financing Exchanges considered.

I'M READY.. THE BALL'S READY.. ARE YOU READY?

YES, MARCIE, I'M READY! I'VE BEEN READY FOR TWENTY MINUTES!

DO FOOTBALLS MIND BEING KICKED, SIR? DO YOU THINK IT CAUSES THEM TO BE TRAUMATIZED?

PLEASE, MARCIE...JUST KICK THE BALL!

IS THAT MY MOTHER CALLING ME? IT MUST BE SUPPERTIME

I GUESS I'LL JUST HAVE TO HOP ALL THE WAY HOME

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Cloud is smaller. 2. Path is missing. 3. Shift is missing. 4. Shift is different. 5. Fence is missing. 6. Book is missing.

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

● WELL KNIT! "A family is a unit composed not only of children, but of men, women, an occasional animal, and the common..." wrote the late Ogden Nash.

Fill blank with the missing word. P.S.: It rhymes with gold.

● Speak Out! Drop two letters; find a common means of vocal expression in each word: 1. Single. 2. Humid. 3. Crypt. 4. Enchant. 5. Clutter.

● Number Please! When a certain number is increased by four and diminished by four the product of its sum and difference is 48. What number?

● Riddle-Me-This! What has eight legs and tests eyes? An optic-us. What did Mama Bear bake for Baby Bear's party? Cub-cakes. When do crows stand around and talk? On their caw-fee breaks.

SUM NUMBERS TO PONDER

Ask a friend to select a number from one to 10. Ask him or her to add eight, double the sum, divide by four, and then subtract half the original number. (If an odd number is selected, compute the fractions.) The resulting total will always be four — regardless of the chosen number.

If you had suggested adding six to begin, the answer would be three. If you had begun with four, the answer would be two — always half the number first imposed.

ON THE BUTTON! What has the button at lower right to do with the scene above? To find out, connect dots.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

DISHEVEL

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Possible anagram: Shed well.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR RICK CERONE, N.Y. Yankees catcher

When you play is it serious business — all game and little fun? —S.P., Hollywood, Fla.

● Baseball is my job and my teammates and I always go out on the field with the intention of winning. But our gut reaction is to enjoy the game. I doubt if you will find anyone on the field just for the money. Most of us loved baseball as kids. We picked up bats and balls at the age of 3, and here we are doing the same thing decades later — playing the same kids' game — and getting paid for it. I think it's much more fun and less monotonous than working 9 to 5 at the same old desk under a roof with four walls. But it is still a business, to be taken seriously the same as any other.

FOR SHERRY MATHIS, Liza on TV's Search for Tomorrow

Is it true that you shun fashionable clothes because they go out of date too soon? —N.T., Camden, N.J.

● I prefer something that has been around for a while to an outfit right from Paris. I believe in getting good wear out of everything I have. For instance, I got my money's worth out of my wedding dress. It's a hand-crocheted outfit, pretty but practical.

FOR JOHN CASSAVETES, star of Tempest

So many high cost movies bomb at the box office — do you think the motion picture business is going down the drain? —A.K., Norwich, Conn.

● No. I love the film industry so much that I cannot find a single bad word to say about it. The business has its ups and downs — lots of heartbreak, but also lots of pleasure. The more I'm in it as an actor or director, the more devoted to it I become.

FOR MARTHA SHULMAN, author of Fast Vegetarian Feasts (The Dial Press)

Who were the first vegetarians? And what part of the world has the most vegetarians? —T.G., Pontiac, Mich.

● Vegetarianism dates back to the earliest Hindu religions and has included such well-known followers as Pythagoras, Rousseau and George Bernard Shaw. India probably has the most vegetarians, while northern countries, such as Iceland, have the least.

PRO Bill Rodgers, 1976 Olympic marathon runner

It should be the U.S. Government's responsibility to subsidize its Olympic hopefuls because these athletes are virtually ambassadors representing our country. A coordinated, professional approach toward aiding our athletes' development can only be achieved when our athletic system has the support of its major source of strength — the Government. As a step in the right direction, I also endorse the idea of a voluntary contribution to the U.S. Olympic Committee, to be noted on our tax returns.

PRO AND CON Should the Federal Government Subsidize Potential U.S. Olympic Athletes?

(Question submitted by Bob Youns, Corpus Christi, Tex.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON William E. Simon, president, U.S. Olympic Committee

The U.S. Olympic Committee is proud that its mission on behalf of the Olympic movement is financed by the private sector, demonstrating the desire of all Americans to keep politics out of the Olympics. The U.S.O.C. remains committed to raising the necessary funds to find, train, select and enter the finest amateur athletes in all domestic and international competition leading to the Olympic Games. We are the only nation that has successfully financed its own Olympic efforts without Governmental help.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

BULLETINS: Barbra Streisand, finishing up her next film, Yentl, in England, told an interviewer that reporters often misrepresent her by saying that she considers herself a superstar, always No. 1. "Actually," the funny lady said, "a large part of me is ordinary and uninteresting." . . . From Monte Carlo comes word that Princess Grace is not at all pleased with what's going on between Princess Caroline and her latest beau, Argentine tennis star Guillermo Vilas. Nor does she approve of the photos showing her daughter in nightclubs, decked out in revealing clothing. . . . Japan's image as a nation of superworkers is totally unfounded, according to an international productivity report recently released. It states that Americans, Belgians, the French and West Germans work harder. The only ones that the Japanese beat are the British. . . . To honor His Holiness, Pimen, Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia, on the occasion of his first visit to the United States, Rabbi Arthur Schneier, president of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation, said: "Welcome to the Red Apple — uh, I mean — the Big Apple." . . . OUTA THIS WORLD: Drew Barrymore, 7-year-old star of E.T., cracked up the crowd at a restaurant when, in answer to what she was up to, the little toot solemnly announced, "I'm in town for other business propositions." . . . More extra-terrestrial tidbits: Robert Macnaughton, 15, the older brother in E.T., has co-authored a book with his dad, Act Now: An Actor's Guide to Breaking-In (Global Publishing) . . . AUTHORS: Country-western star Mel Tillis appears to be heeding hints of family and fans and will write his life story. . . . Steve Krantz, movie producer and husband of novelist Judith Krantz, feels a book (including his novel, Skycastle) has a better chance for success if the main character is a female: "Readers are interested in women in business, entertainment, or any profession. But a woman is still seen as a sex object. Take Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. When she was sworn in, Chief Justice Burger gave her a kiss, as did President Reagan. I'd like to see either of them do that to a male appointee." . . . Actress-singer Eartha Kitt is working on three novels simultaneously — A Tart Isn't a Sweet, 13 Can Be Dangerous and The Art of Being Ordinary.

Madame Ram Runs the Show

Whether firing her stepson or acquiring a new quarterback, glamorous, controversial Georgia Frontiere has made the Rams her own.

BY TED GREEN

Georgia Frontiere's private office at Ram Park in Anaheim, Calif., has a mirrored wet bar, soft, blue carpeting, a salmon-and-coral antique couch and an enclosed outdoor patio with vines and Ficus trees lending a California touch. She is justifiably proud of the place, which is more like a small, swank Manhattan apartment than most small, swank Manhattan apartments. But what she's really proud of there is a blown-up copy of a Berry's World comic strip.

The strip pictures a little boy and girl talking. He is dressed like a football player. She speculates that maybe he'll be a rich, famous football star someday, with girls chasing him. He says, "Yeah, and maybe you'll be a cheerleader." To which she replies:

"Are you kidding? Maybe I'll OWN the football team and maybe I'll let YOU play out your option."

Well, Georgia Frontiere does own a football team and has let stars play out their options, and maybe the strip is her way of pointing out that — no matter what her critics say — she's in charge, that she owns and runs the Los Angeles Rams, that she's in command, doing it Sinatra-style.

Her way.

Frontiere's leadership, qualifications and colorful past, along with her high style of living and somewhat unconventional personality, have all come under intense scrutiny ever since the platinum blonde with a show-business background inherited the glamorous National Football League franchise, valued at $50 million, and a lot more from her late (sixth) husband, Carroll Rosenbloom. Rosenbloom drowned in riptides off the Florida coast while swimming in April 1979.

His death at age 72 made his widow the first female owner in N.F.L. history. And it thrust her, headfirst, into the macho and previously all-male world of pro football, where the best-known women before Frontiere were the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders. When Lorinda de Roulet stepped down as president of baseball's New York Mets in the winter of 1980, it left Georgia as the only female chief executive of a major sports franchise in the United States.

Whether she was even close to ready for such a heady role is certainly open to question; in fairness, how could she have been ready when her football experience prior to Rosenbloom's death consisted of attending games and maybe discussing the operation with him, every now and then, when he felt like it? She undoubtedly knows more football than one writer implied when he said she wouldn't know a face mask from a face lift, but running the L.A. Rams, well, that's another story.

But what Georgia really wasn't ready for was the criticism. The persistent reminders of her past, particularly the six — now seven — marriages (she married composer-lyricist Dominic Frontiere, an old family friend, 14 months after Rosenbloom's death). Then there are those stories that portray her as a chorus girl who lucked into owning a football team. It didn't help her image when her first major move, four months after inheriting the Rams, was to fire her popular stepson, Steve Frontiere thought enough of Bert to lure him from the Colts for $2 million over five years.

Rosenbloom, who had been running the club day to day under the title of vice president. That climaxed a family feud rooted deeply in both their pasts, a potboiler with all the elements of a TV soap.

"I fear people will think the worst — that I'm just the ugly stepmother," she said then. She was right. Many people do think the worst, including the press, which has often vilified her.

"People don't realize she's a very sensitive person," says her newest press aide and trouble-shooter, Les Marshall. "Essentially, you're talking about somebody who was a housewife. Suddenly, that housewife is running a team that's a local institution and in the national limelight. You don't build thick skin overnight."

"Changes happen no matter what," says Georgia. "Life is full of change. It's just more apparent because I'm a woman. If a man had come in and fired everybody, nobody would have said a thing."

Then again, Georgia brings some of the problems on herself. She was more than an hour late to Carroll Rosenbloom's funeral and 55 minutes late to the wake back in Los Angeles, which she hosted. She showed up at training camp that first summer and tried to ingratiate herself by tossing a football around and kicking field goals with players. And later, she dispensed some rather off-the-wall advice. Try star safety Nolan Cromwell at quarterback, she said, and run a wishbone offense, popular in college but unheard of in the N.F.L. Tell the players I'll pay for singing and dancing lessons to enhance their careers. She even told former Ram quarterback Pat Haden, who had been having finger and hand problems, to take karate so he could give onrushing defensive linemen a little chop in the chest to keep them away.

The first year she owned the team, she also had her personal publicist write a flowery, press guide biography, crediting her with fame in musicals, musical comedy and light opera, expertise in skiing and skating, being a poet of note and having a six-stroke golf handicap — from the men's tees. It also fibbed about her age (now 53) by nine years. She has changed publicists several times since and the bios have been toned down.

Frontiere's image — and the Rams themselves — appeared to hit rock bottom last season. The club failed to re-sign three key stars, letting Jack Reynolds, Bob Brudzinski and Vince Ferragamo leave for greener ($) pastures. Then it signed, cut and signed again a week later defensive end Fred Dryer, a popular, 13-year veteran and team leader who wound up his career, ignominiously, on the bench. Dryer then sued the Rams for back pay, breach of contract and damaged reputation. And finally, a team that had made the playoffs eight straight years, qualifying for the Super Bowl during Georgia's first year at the helm, fell apart on the field, finishing with its worst record (6-10) in 17 years. When the season ended, dissension hung over the entire organization like a cloud of California smog.

"Changes happen," says Georgia. "Life is full of change. If a man had come in and fired everybody, nobody would have said a thing."

The problem, Frontiere says in retrospect, was that she delegated too much responsibility to everybody else. So since last January, when she ordered regular staff meetings that she now chairs herself, aides say she has taken a truly active role for the first time.

"Owning the Rams is a 24-hour-a-day job," she says. "I can't go anywhere without thinking about the team. It's my life."

It was her decision, sources say, to retain head coach Ray Malavasi, whose job is perennially rumored to be in jeopardy. Her decision to strip longtime personnel man Don Klosterman of his title of general manager, dropping him to a paid consultant who is rarely consulted. Her decisions to hire former Ram receiver Jack Snow as an assistant coach, to upgrade the Ram pension plan, to organize a tribute to Merlin Olsen, the Rams' former all-Pro defensive tackle. And her decision to set up aerobic dance classes for players and other team personnel.

Georgia even handled the negotiations that brought quarterback Bert Jones in the much-talked-about trade from Baltimore last April, dealings that Frontiere calls "the first negotiating I've done from start to finish without anybody's help." Indeed, the Rams eventually signed Jones for $2 million over 5 years — less than the Colts offered him.

Signing glamorous quarterbacks to multiyear contracts, and then posing with them for national-magazine covers, is a long, long way from Frontiere's humble beginnings.

Born Georgia Irwin and raised in St. Louis, she was in show biz by the time she was old enough to carry a tune. She and her mother, who billed themselves as the Pamela Sisters, relocated in Fresno, Calif., and sang anywhere they could get a gig — steakhouses, beer joints, bowling alleys, carlot openings, farm-machinery shows, even drive-in movies. The act held together until the 1950's.

Georgia's first marriage, at 15, was quickly annulled, and her second husband was killed by a bus in San Francisco. She married her third husband in 1949 at age 21, but left him for the bright lights. At the time, the bright lights meant a job in Sacramento, Calif., as a $40-a-week chorus girl. Two more marriages followed. After working as a TV weather girl and lounge singer in Miami, her career peaked in the late 50's in New York with a two-week job as the Today girl on Dave Garroway's Today Show. She also played the lead in Oklahoma on the Northeast theater circuit and sang in hotels and lounges in Canada and Europe.

Along the way she met Carroll Rosenbloom, a strong-willed, patriarchal multimillionaire (oil, real estate) who then owned the Baltimore Colts. (He swapped the Colts for the Rams in 1972 in a shrewd tax-saving deal). Rosenbloom adored Georgia, and their affair — he was married and the father of three children with his first wife — was an open secret. Eventually, he married Georgia in 1966. Durstructions, that I was completely prepared to become an owner."

Some, though, believe Frontiere is still not up to the job, arguing that she is a mere figurehead and others really make the key decisions. Steve Rosenbloom, for one, says now, "I believe in active ownership, but I also think it should be proportionate with an owner's knowledge and capabilities. Sure, they took my name out of the program, tarred and feathered me and sent me on my way, but they can never take away the most important part — that the people who count know exactly what's going on with the Rams.

Stepson Steve found himself in a wicked situation.

ing the course of their relationship, they had two children, Lucia, now 21, and Chip, 18.

To give you an idea of how powerful Rosenbloom was, he was on the phone for 45 minutes with his old friend, Joseph Kennedy, the night J.F.K. was elected. The next day, C.R., as he was called, was photographed tossing a football on the Kennedy's Hyannis Port, Mass. lawn. Georgia was constantly at C.R.'s side until his death, throwing elaborate dinner parties, playing the effervescent hostess, but staying very much in the background as far as the Ram operation went.

That all changed, of course, the day Rosenbloom drowned. His will left Georgia 70 percent of the team, with 6 percent going to each of the five surviving children. Georgia subsequently bought up the other 30 percent and is now 100 percent owner and club president.

Georgia insists that Carroll had groomed her well for the job. "I always knew I'd own this team someday," she said shortly after C.R. died. She was in the tennis cabin, behind the tennis court on the grounds of their palatial, heavily wooded home on five and a half acres in exclusive Bel-Air, where she and Dominic now live. "Carroll would always encourage me to go to the office and to find out everything, even what paper clips cost. He drummed football into me to such an extent, gave me so many in-

"It's funny how the press makes images. There are hollow people with big images, while the others do the work."

For these critics, just who is actually quarterbacking the Rams off the field is as much a guessing game as who is quarterbacking them on it perennially is.

Some say it is husband Dominic, 51, a funny, fast-talking, convivial Italian whose credits include the score to the film The Stunt Man and the TV show Vega$. He is also believed to be taking a very active interest in the football business.

Others say the man running the Rams from afar is Hugh Culverhouse, owner of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and a co-executor of the Rosenbloom estate. The Rams' newly streamlined, budget-minded operation is extraordinarily similar to that of the Buccaneers, sources say. Someone even coined a phrase — the Culverhouse Connection.

Georgia, who dabbles in the occult, mysteriously waves her hand over Haden's injured leg. "I thought she was nuts," says Haden. "But then the X-rays came back negative."

Both Dominic Frontiere and Culverhouse steadfastly deny their roles are anything other than advisory, and Georgia insists, "I ask Dominic's advice, but not to where he'd ever upstage me."

Georgia and Dominic, meanwhile, spent six weeks this summer in London, where they maintain a townhouse and mix with royalty. Georgia's new love is a 4-year-old thoroughbred mare named Ardross; the horse won a handful of races in Europe before finishing second to a horse owned by Queen Elizabeth II. Second to the Queen's horse and third in the N.F.C. West may not be exactly what Georgia had in mind, but that's show biz.

The bottom line on one of the nation's more powerful women is not easy to find. She picks up the tab for costly dialysis treatments for a Rams public relations man with kidney problems, lavishes gifts on star defensive end Jack Youngblood when he's hospitalized after surgery, sends a private Lear jet back to West Virginia to fly halfback Wendell Tyler home after an auto accident and spares no expense building the Rams' new training headquarters, a converted elementary school in Anaheim. But then she turns around and refuses to shell out what amounts to a drop in the bucket to keep three stars... and her team disintegrates on the field. Georgia gives Nolan Cromwell an unasked for raise... and Georgia, who dabbles in the occult (she says she's talked to Carroll's spirit), mysteriously waves a hand at half-time over Haden's injured leg, which is believed to be broken.

"I thought for sure she was nuts," Haden says. "Then, incredibly, after the doctors told me they were sure it was broken, the X-rays were negative."

One minute, she is a shrewd, calculating businesswoman, the next she orders the team picture taken three or four different times until her hair and makeup look just right.

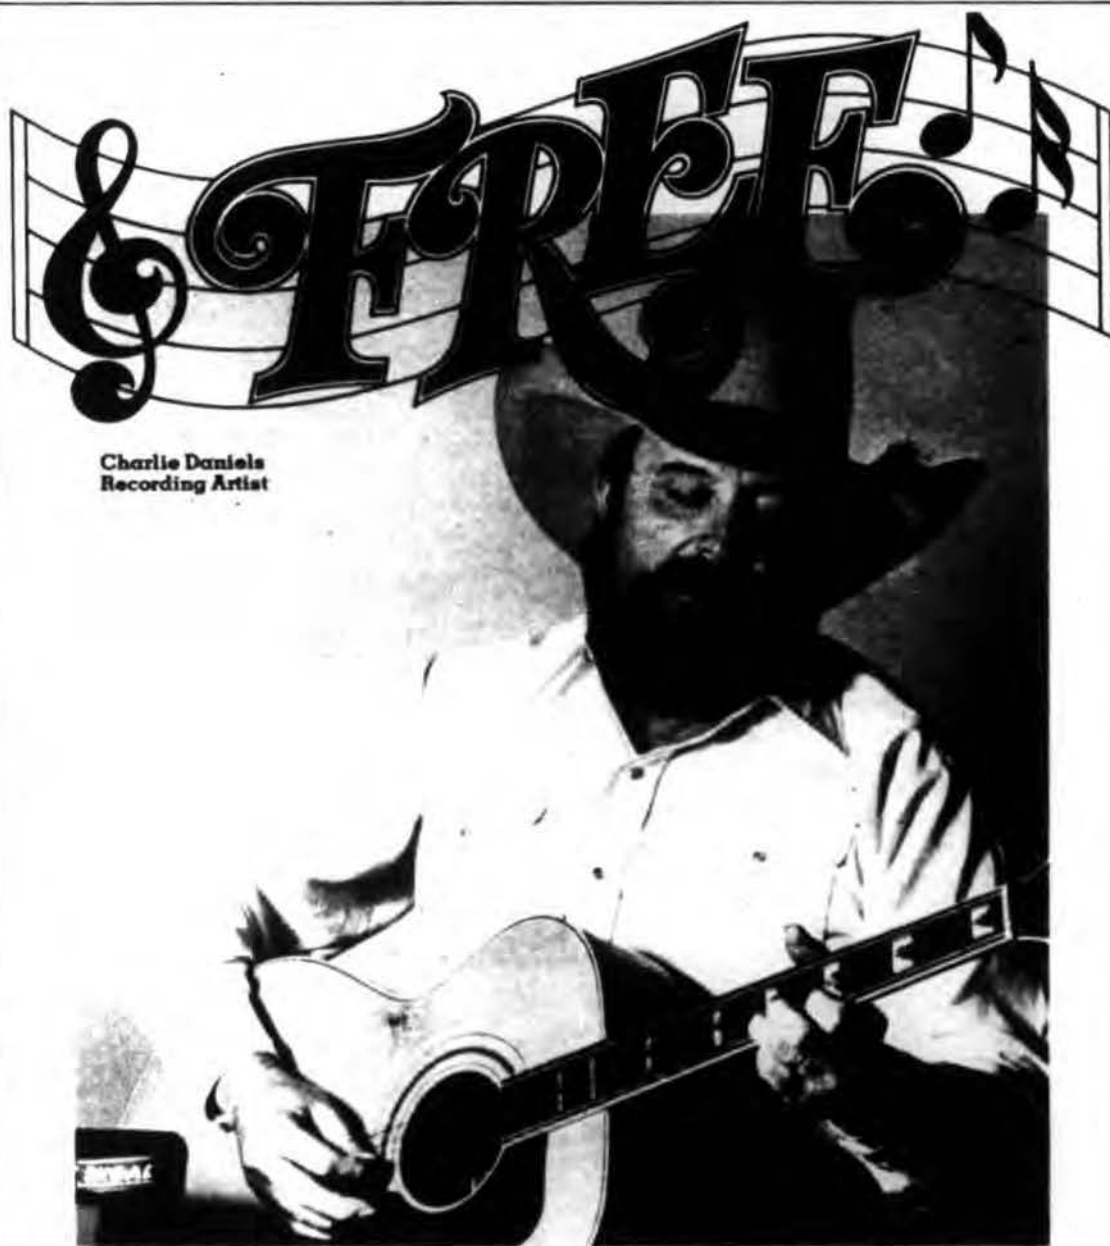

"I feel very comfortable now," Georgia says as the new season approaches. "Yes, the transition has been made. After the last few years, I feel I can cope with anything, on any level. I have full charge and understand the entire operation."

"I don't look to the outside for approval. I look to myself. And a woman in football isn't all bad unless you think it is."

"It's ironic that my wife is in a field they call sports," Dominic has said, "and here we are being subjected to the most double-dealing, un-sportsmanlike conduct. Georgia has suffered from a big case of prejudice — this is a totally male-oriented world and these guys are tough. She gets more criticism than her fair share because she doesn't do it by the book. She conducts her own orchestra with her own baton."

Dominic says the criticism pains him because it pains Georgia. "I ask her, 'Do you need this? Why take all this abuse? I make a good living; sell the team, give the money to the kids, be a composer's wife.' But she says no, she'll never sell. That it's her team. She really believes that. So what can I do?"

CUCUMBERS WITH DILL

- 6 cucumbers
  - $\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter or margarine
  - 1 tablespoon snipped fresh dill leaves
  - $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt
  - Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1. Peel cucumbers, cut in half lengthwise and remove seeds with a spoon. If large, cut in half again crosswise.
  2. Place cucumbers in steamer basket in medium saucepan with  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch of water. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat a little and steam about 5 minutes or until just tender.
  3. In skillet, melt butter; stir in dill, salt and pepper. Add cucumbers and turn them in the sauce until well coated; turn into serving dish. These cucumbers are delicious served with chicken or fish dishes.

Makes 4 servings

CAPONATA

- 2 lbs. eggplant, peeled and cut into  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch cubes
  - Salt
  - $\frac{1}{2}$  cup olive oil
  - 2 cups finely chopped celery
  - $\frac{1}{4}$  cup finely chopped onion
  - $\frac{1}{2}$  cup red wine vinegar
  - 1 tablespoon sugar
  - $2\frac{1}{2}$ -3 cups canned or home-cooked Italian plum tomatoes, drained
  - 2 tablespoons tomato paste
  - 6 large green olives, pitted and slivered
  - 2 tablespoons capers
  - 4 anchovy fillets, mashed with side of a knife
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - Few twists freshly ground black pepper
  - 2 tablespoons pine nuts
1. Sprinkle eggplant cubes lightly with salt and place in a large colander or sieve to drain. After 30 to 45 minutes, pat the cubes dry with paper towels and set aside.
  2. In a large, heavy skillet, heat  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup olive oil and add celery and onion. Cook for 15 minutes, stirring, until soft. Lift into bowl with a slotted spoon.
  3. Pour remaining  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup olive oil into same skillet and, over high heat, sauté the eggplant cubes in it, stirring vigorously until they just start to brown.
  4. Add celery-onion mixture to eggplant along with vinegar, sugar, tomatoes, tomato paste, olives, capers, anchovies, 1 teaspoon salt and several good twists of fresh pepper. Mix well. Heat to boiling and simmer, stirring for 5 minutes. Stir in pine nuts.
  5. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Caponata is an appetizing addition to an antipasto platter. You can also serve caponata on a lettuce leaf bed, garnished with a lemon wedge and some black olives, or simply in an earthenware bowl with a crusty loaf of Italian bread alongside.

Makes about 6 cups

Life, liberty and the pursuit of high interest.

Getting life insurance protection is not difficult. The problem has always been how to combine protection with a way to respond to a changing economy.

A solution is John Hancock Variable Life Insurance.

It guarantees you the initial amount of insurance you buy. And, this policy allows you to decide where a portion of your premiums will be placed—in stock, bond, or money market accounts.

As a result, you have an opportunity to increase your coverage as well as your cash value, although the cash value is not guaranteed.

If you're looking for a life insurance policy that combines protection with a choice of separate accounts and an opportunity to earn high interest, take a look at John Hancock Variable Life.

If you enjoy a good murder, Agatha Christie is your cup of tea.

Announcing the first and only complete hardcover collection of Agatha Christie's classic mysteries

In an Agatha Christie mystery, anyone is fair game for foul play. And anything can be an instrument of murder ... even a cup of tea. That's why people who like great murder mysteries love Agatha Christie.

Agatha Christie is the most popular mystery writer of all time. Her classic tales of murder and suspense have sold over 500 million copies the world over. And now for the first time ever, you can enjoy her timeless works in beautiful hardcover editions with The Agatha Christie Mystery Collection.

Murder mysteries so good ... they're almost criminal. The Agatha Christie Mystery Collection offers you and your family mystery reading at its very best. Each classic story is fast-moving, entertaining and easy-to-read. And above all, each has a surprising and satisfying conclusion that keeps you guessing till the very end!

You'll meet Agatha Christie's world-famous detectives including Jane Marple and Hercule Poirot. In your readings you'll visit Paris, Egypt, England and other destinations where murder is always on the itinerary. And wherever you travel, you'll become involved in some of the most ingenious and diabolical plots ever invented ... "cliff-hangers" only Dame Agatha could create!

Every Agatha Christie mystery offers consistently satisfying reading for young and old alike. And it's yours each month with The Agatha Christie Mystery Collection.

The classic Devonshire Edition you'll be proud to display.

Put a little mystery in your life. The Collection includes all of Agatha Christie's classic mysteries including Murder on the Orient Express, Death on the Nile, And Then There Were None, The ABC Murders, and her ever-popular "whodunit," The Murder of Roger Ackroyd. Each provides exciting and satisfying reading that will stretch your powers of deductive reasoning to their limits.

A beautiful addition to your home library. The Agatha Christie Mystery Collection is published in a magnificent Devonshire edition that will provide beauty and enjoyment for years to come.

Each attractive hardcover volume is Smythe sewn and printed on high quality acid-free paper so it can withstand even the most murderous treatment. Bound in Sussex blue simulated leather with distinctive gold titling, this Collection will make a tasteful addition to your living room or den.

Ride the Orient Express for 10 days without obligation. To introduce you to the Collection, we're inviting you to examine the classic mystery, Murder on the Orient Express, without risk or obligation. If you're not completely satisfied, just return it within 10 days and you'll owe nothing.

However, if you're like millions of other readers around the world who thoroughly enjoy Agatha Christie's thrilling tales of mystery and suspense, keep Murder on the Orient Express and pay just $7.95 plus postage and handling.

You will automatically receive future volumes once a month as they are published. Each volume is sent on the same 10-day free-examination basis. No minimum purchase is required, and you may cancel your subscription at any time. This Collection is not available in any store. It is available to you only through this special offer. To begin your subscription, just mail the coupon below today.

New Double Standards For Singles

"Do what I say but not what I do" may be the new form of the sexual double standard, according to a study by sociology professors Dr. Ira Robinson of the University of Georgia, and Dr. Davor Jedlicka of the University of Texas at Tyler. The old double standard, which allowed men greater sexual freedom than women, has virtually disappeared, the researchers say. Since 1965, premarital sexual activity among men increased 12 percent, but the increase among women was 35 percent.

Yet, at the same time, a growing number of young men and women agree that premarital intercourse for both sexes is "immoral" and "sinful." Says Dr. Jedlicka: "This sexual contradiction — more young people engaging in sexual intercourse with increasing numbers of partners while they are more likely to say that it is immoral to do so — indicates a new kind of double standard. Men seem to expect stricter morality from women, and women expect stricter morality of men."

In a recent, still-unpublished study, the sociologists similarly found that while members of conservative religious groups had stricter views on sex than members of liberal religious groups, there was little difference between groups when it came to actual sexual behavior. "What it comes down to," says Dr. Jedlicka, "is a growing tendency of people to expect higher standards from others than from themselves. The question is whether this shows just inconsistency, or a good deal of hypocrisy."

Working Against Harassment

Although there are strong local and national laws against sexual harassment on the job, going to court can be costly and time consuming. Women and men who feel they are being harassed might be better off using tactics designed to change the behavior of the person annoying them. Judith Davenport, a therapist at the Santa Monica, Calif., Center for Counseling, offers these strategies for dealing with sexual harassment:

- Keep a record (including time, date, place and action) of any instances of harassment. Note any physical or emotional problem that occurs as a result.

- Complain to a supervisor. Courts often require a plaintiff to show that he or she tried to resolve the situation within the company first.

- Organize or join an office "support group" that fights sexual harassment, or get help from an outside organization, such as a women's group.

- Don't be afraid to be firm when complaining about or rejecting sexual advances. U.S. Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder, who chaired Federal hearings on sexual harassment, says the biggest problem is fear that "if you fight back, you might get fired or get a bad reference." Says Davenport: "There are many ways to say 'no' without alienating the person involved. For instance: 'The way you act toward me makes me very uncomfortable.'" This type of response works well in cases of mild or inadvertent harassment. But repeated or deliberate incidents may need to be dealt with more severely.

Love Objects

Knowing which things matter most to people can help us understand them better, say two social scientists who have studied people and possessions. In their book, The Meaning of Things, (Cambridge University Press) psychologist Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and sociologist Eugene Rochberg-Halton, both of the University of Chicago, report that the type of possession people seem most attached to is furniture, followed by art, photographs, books, stereos and musical instruments. In most instances the reason given is that the object is linked to a person, a place, or a fondly remembered experience.

Men, the researchers say, mention most often objects associated with physical action such as sports equipment or cars. Women mostly mention objects "that allow for contemplation": photographs, artwork, plants. Are people who are attached to things uninterested in other people? Not at all, say the researchers. Attachments to things and people seem to go together. Indeed, "people who denied meanings to objects also lacked close networks of human relationships." FW

Should Your Teen Get a Job?

By Merrie Spaeth

Just when inflation is stretching family budgets to the breaking point, teen-agers seem to need more spending money. For guidelines on today's teens and money, FAMILY WEEKLY talked to Tom Taylor, co-author of Kids and Cash: Solving a Parent's Dilemma.

Q: How old should a teen be before a parent encourages him to seek work?

A: Actually, you should encourage paid work (small tasks such as watering a neighbor's plants or pulling weeds) by age 7 or 8, which is supplemented with an allowance. By mid-teen-age years, your child should be almost weaned from the allowance and earning money regularly.

Q: But there are laws restricting kids from working until age 16.

A: Laws govern the hiring of youth in business (although the Labor Department is currently proposing to expand the hours and types of jobs that 14- and 15-year-olds are allowed to work). Still, teens should be able to find something that needs doing. Encourage your teen to look for the unkempt yard or the gathering of people at a garage sale, so that he can propose to cut the grass or serve coffee to the group.

Q: How does a teen-ager know what to charge for his services?

A: The parent can tell the teen that the current minimum wage (which begins at age 16) is $3.35 an hour, or suggest that the teen-ager call around to see what the going rate for odd jobs is. A parent should also caution the child to agree on a price with his employer before doing the work.

Q: Should a teen be responsible for his day-to-day expenses?

A: Parents should be responsible for food, clothing, shelter, health care, school supplies and other essentials. Certainly the teen should pay for entertainment, extra clothes and snacks. Some purchases can be split between parent and teen. When my daughter wanted a horse, she had to earn $250, or half of the cost, first. Then I contributed the rest. This system works well with major nonessential purchases such as a bicycle or stereo.

Q: You mentioned an allowance for young teens.

A: A young teen-ager should receive a monthly allotment in order to learn how to budget and plan ahead. But generally, by 16 he should be off his allowance and earning his own spending money.

Q: Should parents pay their children as a reward for achievement?

A: Never. Teen-agers need to know that money is directly related to the amount of work they do. You can loan your teen money but make him pay it back within a certain time period.

Q: How much money should a teen save?

A: I recommend that a teen save between 15 and 20 percent of his earnings. This money could be put toward higher education or a special trip. fw

The Amazing "Face-Lift-In-A-Jar" Used by Hollywood Stars Who Lose Their Jobs If They Don't Look Their Best!

Have you seen Tova Borgnine lately? She really looks great! In fact, according to her husband Ernest, Tova now has the skin of a teenager!

And what about Ernie himself? His friends are all saying he looks younger now than he did 10 years ago. Actually, he looks so good many of his co-stars have accused him of having a face-lift.

But Ernie hasn't had a face-lift and neither has his wife Tova. Both of them, however, do have a certain little secret.

Fortunately, for the rest of us, this "little Hollywood secret" isn't so secret anymore. Soon it will be in stores all over the country and even now you can get it by mail! Officially, it's called TOVA 9® but everyone in Hollywood simply refers to it as "Tova's Face-Lift-In-A-Jar."

It is certainly not cheap but the stars who use it say it works like magic. The whole process takes only half an hour and insiders say there is nothing like it for anybody who wants to look years younger than their actual calendar age.

It is easy to use. All you do is apply the cream to your face and wait. "The cream is pink when you apply it, and gradually turns white," says Tova. "After it turns white it should be removed. One of the great things about it is that there is no guess work. It 'knows' what to do by itself!"

Mrs. Borgnine says the secret of this remarkable look-young treatment was first discovered by the Aztec Indians centuries ago. She says it comes from the roots of a very rare cactus plant and that it is 100% natural pure and, until Tova came into the picture, it was only available in certain very remote sections in Mexico.

But what about the results? Does it really work? Here is what others say:

"... The results are obvious!"
— Brenda Vaccara

"... My skin loves them!"
— Jessica Walters

"TOVA 9® has a fresh just showered feeling!"
— Connie Stevens

"I couldn't be more pleased with the results ..."
— Maureen Dean

"I am amazed with the texture of my face ..."
— Jed Allen

"... Tova certainly has something for everyone!"
— Debbie Reynolds

"... A total beauty treatment as well as an indulging, pampering treat!"
— Tommy & Jo Lasorda

"I have not had a facelift. The only reason I look younger today than I did 10 years ago is because of what my wife has discovered."

— Ernest Borgnine
November 3, 1981

"My complexion is not only very important to my career, but it is considered my best feature. Consequently, I guard it with my life — no sun, watch my diet, proper rest and the use of marvelous products such as TOVA 9®."
— Jayne Meadows

It goes on and on. A complete list of everybody who uses TOVA 9® would fill up this entire page and it would read like a virtual "Who's Who in Hollywood." Actually, many of your favorite movie and TV stars absolutely swear by it.

Would you like to try this remarkable discovery? Would you like to have the beauty of youth without the expense and hassle of other methods? If so, here's how you can try TOVA 9® without any risk at all: Simply go ahead and order "Tova's Secret Weapon" by mail or telephone. Then, try it out in the privacy of your home, and take a close look at the amazing change you will see in your mirror! After that, if you are not 100% satisfied, simply send back the empty container and Mrs. Borgnine will personally see to it that you get a complete refund with no questions asked.

Remember! You can't lose money but you can lose years off your appearance!

It is easy to order. Just fill out the coupon below and send it to Mrs. Borgnine with your payment. Or, if you wish to order by Visa or MasterCard, you can dial (800) 824-7888 [in California dial 1 (800) 852-7777] and ask for Operator 471, Dept. 368. Either way, your order will be sent promptly by return mail. Thank you.

Latchkey Blues: When Kids Come Home To an Empty House

Solitude and feelings of confinement are often the lot of the youngster whose parents both work. But now community programs and concerned moms and dads are opening new doors to latchkey kids.

By Susan Lapinski

Wearing the front-door key on a chain around his neck, 11-year-old Jeremy Cavin comes home from school each day to an empty house.

"Lonely is the word for it," says Jeremy, an only child who is not allowed to have friends over while his parents are at work.

Says Jeremy's father, Bob: "I don't like the situation. I don't think any parent does." But with no suitable after-school programs in their area of North Carolina, the Cavins feel they have no choice. For as long as both of his parents work, Jeremy will be a so-called "latchkey child."

The label has been around since the 19th century, but the number of latchkey kids between the ages of 7 and 13 has burgeoned in recent years. Due to the dramatic increases in one-parent and two-paycheck families, there are now more than two million children who fend for themselves for part of every workday. And with two out of every three mothers expected to work outside the home by the end of this decade, the latchkey legion can only grow larger still.

Until recently, little was known about this phenomenon. Now research is under way, "survival" courses geared to latchkey kids are being offered and some communities are beginning to come up with attractive alternatives.

One of the new studies reveals that some latchkey children face very real emotional problems. Dr. Thomas Long, professor of education at The Catholic University of America, and his wife, Dr. Lynette Long, assistant professor of education at Loyola University, interviewed more than 50 latchkey kids in Washington, D.C. One child who lost her key recalled crying on the front porch for hours until her mother returned from work. Another told of climbing into a chair

Latchkey children can also suffer from being bored, isolated and confined, the Longs believe. "Where is play for these kids?" asks Thomas Long. "For years these children are denied a social life at a critical time in their development." Kids left alone at home watched up to seven hours of television a day, according to the Longs' study.

But beyond marathon TV-watching, the Longs worry about the possible long-term effects of "latchkeyism": feelings of alienation leading to academic failure, violence, vandalism and experimentation with drugs and alcohol. Thomas Long says police in his area are seeing more and more latchkey kids in trouble. But he and other experts concede that any conclusive link between latchkey children and delinquency remains hypothetical.

What can worried latchkey parents do to minimize the risks? Long suggests that parents help structure empty hours by assigning chores and suggesting a schedule to follow and by trying to arrange for some after-school activities — scouting, dance lessons, recreation programs — to vary their kids' solo routines. From the comments of children in his study, he also believes that pets can help by providing comfort and companionship in an empty house.

Above all, Long suggests that once parents return home, they should put off household duties and "make an extended effort to get into their child's world."

Another study now in progress by Dr. Hyman Rodman, director of the Family Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, reveals how nearly 1,200 latchkey mothers are trying to make the arrangement as safe as possible. The women said they worry about fires, forgotten keys and other frightening possibilities. But most stay in close touch with their children by phone, have a neighbor to turn to in emergencies and have rules for the kids to follow. Among the most common rules:

- No one is allowed in the house, even friends, without prior special permission.
- The door is not to be opened when someone knocks unless the child is told beforehand that certain persons can be let in or unless it is someone well known to the family.
- Children are given specific tasks which they are expected to do while they care for themselves.
- No use of the stove or other electrical appliances, except for the TV, radio or record player, is allowed.
- No one who calls on the telephone is to be told by the children that they are alone.

Most latchkey mothers who have these rules told Dr. Rodman they were satisfied, if not happy, with the arrangement. Many believed that their children were learning responsibility and self-reliance.

In some communities, parents have avoided the pitfalls of latchkeyism altogether by organizing school-based, after-class programs staffed by teacher aides, C.E.T.A. workers (Government-paid employees in service positions) and other parents. Typically, kids in these programs learn crafts, compete in sports, eat healthful snacks — and stay out of trouble better than unsupervised kids, program organizers claim.

There was no such program in Elaine Chaback's New York City neighborhood, so she put together a survival manual for her latchkey daughter, then 11 years old. The book, co-authored with Pat Fortunato, which offers advice on everything from boredom to bee stings to bicycle breakdowns, was recently published as The Official Kids' Survival Kit: How to Do Things on Your Own (Little, Brown). Just as it has helped to fill the gap for her daughter, Leah, now 14, Chaback hopes that it will ease the problems of other latchkey kids.

How to Break The White Rabbit Habit

By Jane Marks

If you have a tendency to run a little late, you know that most people will generally let you off the hook after you charmingly plead for forgiveness. What you may not realize is that chronic lateness quietly breeds frustration and anger in others — and your tardiness may therefore be interfering with your job, your marriage and your friendships.

The good news is that chronic lateness is relatively easy to correct. All it takes is willingness to change — and an understanding of what's behind your particular lateness pattern.

Psychologists point out that there are several types of tardiness, each with its own underlying cause. One of the most common categories, notes New York City psychotherapist Dr. Selma Miller, comprises people who are frequently "a little late" to dentist appointments, dinners with in-laws or other occasions they'd prefer to skip altogether. If this description fits your type of delay, you're probably rebelling against what you have to do but don't want to do. But if the unpleasant appointment is inevitable, procrastinating will ultimately only make you feel worse. One technique for overcoming this form of tardiness is to offer yourself a promptness incentive (some small indulgence, perhaps a little time to read or window-shop). You'll end up feeling more in control, less put upon.

If, on the other hand, you're often late for special dates or important business meetings, Dr. Miller adds, you may be stuck in the overpreparation syndrome: changing and re-changing your clothes, reviewing your notes one more time, etc. The next time you're running in circles this way, try giving yourself a pep talk. Another helpful strategy is to do a lot of the getting ready the day before the appointment. That way, even if you're nervous right before your date, you'll know (intellectually, at least) that the outfit works and that you have a good grasp of what you're talking about.

Or maybe no matter how well prepared you are, you always find yourself just a little late. In this case, you may simply be a chronic underestimator of the time you need to take a shower, get the car out and all the other little steps involved in getting from here-and-now to there-and-then. As a solution to this type of problem, time-management experts suggest that you make a list and schedule each time-consuming task you'll have to perform. Then, if you can see (in your own handwriting) that it will take a total of 20 minutes to get across town in your car (at least — don't forget to allow a few extra for traffic jams and the unexpected), you aren't likely to make unrealistic-ally early commitments.

What if you constantly find yourself late because you couldn't resist trying to accomplish one more errand first? "Some people," says Stephanie Winston, author of Getting Organized (Warner), "like to schedule their days very closely from hour to hour." This is fine, she says, as long as you don't let the illusion of super-efficiency keep you constantly behind. She suggests that you "try to drop the low priority, unimportant projects altogether, or postpone them into the indefinite future." Then you can go to your appointment punctually and with a clear conscience.

Or do you tend to be late when you're feeling angry at or doubtful about the person you're meeting? Sometimes, Dr. Miller says, we keep someone waiting to "show" them how upset we are or to pretend we don't care in order to cover up feelings of vulnerability and attachment when we're unsure of the other person. But making someone wait will generate anger in that person — and invite retaliation. If you're mad or uncertain, it's better to express those feelings. Clear the air and give your friend a chance to respond.

But whatever the cause of your delay, the most important point to realize is that chronic tardiness is a trait you can change and that change is a choice you can make — starting right now.

ANNOUNCING... A Limited Edition of the Special Report on an ARTHRITIS CURE

5 FOODS WHICH CAN ELIMINATE ARTHRITIS PAIN!

Here Are Full Details About This Special Report!

Let me give you, in less than 5 minutes, 5 foods which can almost miraculously cause you to eat away your arthritic pains—

Dear Friend:

My name is James K. Van Fleet, D.C., and I want to tell you about certain natural substances that can help you get well. What are these substances? Expensive drugs with dangerous side effects that can leave you sick and broke? NO!

They are specific foods that give marvelous relief to arthritis and rheumatism sufferers!

You see, if you're suffering from arthritic or rheumatic like pains, I can sympathize with you, because I, too, suffered for a long time from the constant pain and crippling effects of rheumatoid arthritis. TODAY I'M NO LONGER MISERABLE. I know you can gain relief, too, just as my patients and I have been able to do, when you follow the simple, NATURAL method I give you in a Special Report!

If you're one of those who insist on sticking to useless medical treatments—consisting mainly of aspirin or drugs like cortisone or gold injections that can damage organs, cause internal bleeding and have other numerous side effects—I feel sorry for you.

Let me say this flatly, right here and now: There is no medical drug or chemical compound that will cure arthritis or rheumatism. So I feel sorry for drug users because I know they'll continue to suffer.

But WHY suffer, when you can join the many who report spectacular relief with my simple, NATURAL method! Those who do will enjoy freedom from pain, greater mobility, and better health. Because as far as I'm concerned, arthritis is not the incurable disease so many doctors think it is!

HOW I DISCOVERED 5 SPECIAL FOODS THAT GIVE MARVELOUS RELIEF TO ARTHRITIS AND RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS!

At the end of my first year in practice, I noticed that 85% of my patients were suffering from arthritis, rheumatism, bursitis and related disorders. I, myself, became a victim. My left shoulder was excruciatingly painful, and whenever I bent over I could hardly straighten up. My fingers were swollen, stiff and painful. Each morning I had to run hot water over them before they would function at all.

Since I am a chiropractor, my hands are my living, so I knew I had to find an answer. I soon found that standard medical textbooks had no answers for me. I then turned to the field of nutrition. Within a comparatively short time, I learned how to relieve my sore and aching joints and muscles.

What it all boils down to is 5 specific foods that have helped me and my patients—and that can also help you—gain marvelous relief from arthritis and rheumatism!

1. The first is the oil of a common nut. Not only will this oil help your rheumatism or arthritis, but it can also improve your general vitality, clear up your complexion and make your hair shine. I discovered it quite accidentally when a patient came to me troubled with impotence. I recommended this oil because it contains a sex vitamin. Not only was his impotence cured, but his arthritic shoulders were relieved. I've been using it ever since.

2. Another pleasant tasting oil you must take, with my method, is effective in relieving the symptoms of rheumatism and arthritis. You see, it helps the body absorb a certain nutrient. It is a must in my treatment.

3. This nutrient is essential to bones, for without it, bones weaken and the person winds up with osteoporosis as well as rheumatism or arthritis. That's why you often see older people hospitalized with a hip or leg fracture. This nutrient is absolutely necessary for the healing of wounds, to prevent bleeding and more. One of the first signs that you need it is the appearance of muscle cramps, often at night!

4. A common grain product which, according to recent laboratory research, contains large amounts of a powerful anti-stiffness factor. This food is also a powerful detoxifying agent. It helps provide resistance to disease, and is especially effective in arthritis, fibrositis, neuritis, and bronchitis. I first learned of its value in relieving arthritis from a patient with rheumatoid arthritis—a bad case. With this amazing substance, he was soon out of his wheelchair and completely free of pain.

5. A delicious fruit I use in all cases of arthritis, rheumatism, and gout. I first heard about this remedy from my Aunt Martha, who lives in the Ozarks. She is nearly 90 now, but still extremely active. She wrote me at once to tell me about how she cured her ailment at home, with this delicious fruit.

IS THAT ALL THERE IS TO IT?

Basically, that's it. No enemas, no harsh exercises, no bigger and better pills, no expensive diathermy, whirlpool, gadgets or hocus pocus.

MY FILES ARE FILLED WITH CASES THAT READ LIKE MIRACLES!

Now let me give you a few brief case histories so that you can see for yourself just how effective these methods are.

• Anna M. suffered from rheumatoid arthritis for more than 3 years before she came to me. She suffered day and night and was taking three aspirin every three hours. She could hardly get one foot ahead of the other to walk. Nor could she raise her arms to comb her hair. With my method, after six months, you would not recognize her. All pain was gone and she had no limitation of movement. Today, she has a large vegetable garden which she takes care of all by herself.

• Vernon R. had rheumatoid arthritis for several years. He was put on cortisone therapy by a prominent rheumatic specialist at a well-known hospital. One day, after several months of treatment, Vernon bumped his arm on a chair and broke it. When Vernon asked his doctor how this could happen, he replied, "Oh, broken bones often occur with cortisone treatment." Over his doctor's objections, Vernon stopped his cortisone therapy at once and came to me. With my method, after only 3 months, he completely forgot that he'd ever been sick. His aches and pains were gone!

• When Helga C. came to me, her knees were so stiff and sore she could hardly get in and out of a car. Her former doctor diagnosed her as having osteoarthritis. The things he told her to do—rest, use a

DOCUMENTED PROOF

This Special Report contains Documented Proof, says Dr. Van Fleet, that no one need ever suffer Arthritis again!

MEET THE AUTHOR

Dr. Van Fleet's work in arthritis and rheumatism is doubly important for he has used his methods and techniques to heal the constant pain and relieve the crippling effects of rheumatoid arthritis for himself as well as his patients.

Dr. Van Fleet's astonishing methods are now revealed for the first time in a condensed Special Report, A Doctor's Proven New Way to Conquer Rheumatism and Arthritis, for the benefit of the millions who need its help so desperately.

James K. Van Fleet received his Doctorate in Chiropractic from Logan Chiropractic College in St. Louis, Missouri. He pursued graduate studies at 2 leading professional colleges, and has done extensive work and research in the fields of nutrition and folk medicines and has specialized in clinical research in arthritis and rheumatism throughout his years of practice.

He is a charter member of the Nutrition Today Society, and a member of the National Academy of Nutritional Consultants.

heating pad, take aspirin—she'd already been doing, and she was furious. So she came to me. With my method, she improved remarkably. It has been a year now, and she has had no more trouble with her knees. She doesn't take aspirin at all any more, needs no heating pad, and says she has absolutely no pain in her knees when she scrubs her kitchen floor.

• Lucy was no longer able to use her hands. The joints of her fingers were swollen and stiff, with agonizing pain. Her former doctor gave her no hope of recovery. He recommended aspirin and said that some cortisone shots might possibly help. Maybe even some sort of operation. Then she tried my method. Within two months, the swelling in her hands was down, and there was soon no visible trace left of her arthritis.

I could go on indefinitely with case histories, but these should be enough to show the results that can be gained. I can only urge you to send for my Special Report. This Report is available in a Limited Edition only.

MORE ABOUT THE DOCUMENTED PROOF!

Everything I tell you about must meet these standards:

- It must be easy to obtain. I have not included one single item that you cannot find in your grocery, supermarket or health food store, no matter where you live.
- No drugs are used. If your family physicians has to write a prescription before you can get the item, then it cannot possibly be considered a natural remedy!
- It really worked! And I give you documented proof that these remedies have worked for many others. Every item in this book is documented by a factual case history. I have received firsthand reports from patients. Family members were eyewitnesses. In most cases I personally saw the results.

Does Happiness Take Work?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Today's "me generation" tends to be more self-involved than outgoing and giving. We are more concerned with personal health and professional success than with relating to others.
2. The extent to which you enjoy satisfaction in life or suffer frustration depends in large part on what type of personality traits you have and, especially, on your outlook.
3. Plato was on target when he observed that "the life which is unexamined is not worth living."
4. Working for a living can add meaning to a person's life and contribute to an overall feeling of satisfaction.
5. A brush with death — such as a near-fatal accident — can be the best thing that ever happened to you, making you appreciate life in a startling new way, so that you find it more satisfying, rewarding and fulfilling in every aspect.

ANSWERS

1. False. A team of behavior specialists at California State University surveyed men and women ranging in age from 30 to 60 years. The subjects were asked to "write about, rank in order and give examples of each of the strongest meanings in their life." Only 3 percent of the subjects reported that nothing gave meaning to their lives. The category of relationships (with spouse, family, sweethearts and friends) was most often reported. This was followed by belief (philosophy of life or religion). Health (a feeling of mental and physical well-being) came in third, followed by growth (a sense of progress and personal development). Fifth was life work (success in profession or avocation), followed by service rendered to others and understanding (of self and the various problems and situations in everyday life).

2. True. A study entitled "Determinants of General Life Satisfaction and Frustration," conducted by a panel of scientists at Czechoslovakia's Research Institute of Psychiatry, explored life satisfaction in a representative cross-section of more than 28,000 17- to 60-year-old subjects. The researchers were testing the theory that being happy with one's lot in life stems not only from objective conditions, but also from the structure of the personality. Analyzing the correlations between personality traits and satisfaction, the investigators found that markedly dissatisfied individuals displayed definite personality problems, while those who experienced the greatest life satisfaction and the least frustration had well-balanced personalities, with a minimum of inner conflicts.

3. True. "Life Styles and the Search for the Good Life," a study conducted by a team of University of Alberta psychologists which made an analysis of the ways in which individuals attempt to make their lives meaningful, emphasized that the good life is "a journey, not a destination," and that it requires the experience of individual uniqueness that comes with the fullest use of the human capacity for conscious self-reflection. The investigators also concluded that "the making of commitments, the striving for meaning, the challenges and the existential risks" were other important factors contributing to a person's happiness.

4. True. As the psychologists who directed the University of Alberta study discovered, work is an essential part of the human identity. The investigators put it succinctly when they wrote, "Since work is inextricably tied to what it means to be alive, it becomes a focal point for humans attempting to find meaning in life. Whether a laborer, teacher, philosopher, or clerk, humans become economically, ideologically, socially, and, most importantly, personally identified by the kind of work they do." The researchers also noted that almost every occupation provides meaning to someone.

5. True. A University of Iowa College of Medicine study of life changes following narrow escape experiences, obtained accounts of life-threatening experiences and subsequent changes in the quality of life from more than 200 subjects. The researchers found that, "such experiences are related to reduced fear of death, sense of relative invulnerability, feeling of special importance or destiny, belief of having received special favors from God or fate, and belief in continued existence." They also found that a heightened awareness of death resulting from the experience is associated with an increased sensibility about the preciousness of life, reevaluating priorities of life, approaching life less cautiously and more confidently and facing uncontrollable events more passively.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

BOY OR GIRL? YOU DECIDE

A few years ago, FAMILY WEEKLY reported on a new procedure invented by Dr. Ronald Ericsson that increases the odds of giving birth to a male baby. Since then, Ericsson says, his method has resulted in 66 male babies at 10 sperm centers around the U.S., with a success rate of 75 to 80 percent.

Now Ericsson has obtained a patent for a new method to increase the chances of giving birth to a female. Inducing ovulation with the drug Clomid and using a sperm separation technique in 18 women has resulted in 14 female babies, he says.

Ericsson told us that in cultures where male children are preferred, his original sex-selection method is a valid means of family planning. He also says both techniques are of great interest to cattle ranchers, since heifers are needed in the dairy business, while bull calves are preferred in the beef business.

For information on U.S. facilities offering the Ericsson techniques, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Gametrics Ltd., P.O. Box 1507, Dept. FW, Sausalito, Calif. 94966.

WOMEN WHO DRINK

It's estimated that roughly one in every 10 Americans who drink has a drinking problem. That's 10 million people. And the day is now upon us when half of those problem drinkers are women, according to Penn State's William Eck, an advisory board member of the National Council on Alcoholism.

Eck told us that there are some key differences in the ways and reasons men and women drink. "Women drink more covertly, not on binges. They drink because they're lonely and more in connection with emotional upsets like divorce or a death in the family. Men drink to become assertive, for courage."

Alcoholism education for both sexes, though, is starting far too late, Eck adds, pointing out that over 85 percent of incoming college freshmen have been actively drinking alcohol since high school.

READ THIS NOW

You know you're really important when an electronic paging beeper just isn't quick enough to notify you that a message is waiting. After all, then you have to get to a phone. So for you impatient V.I.P.'s, help is finally here. It's a new, lightweight pocket-size receiver that flashes the actual message for you to read.

The Metagram receiver can flash up, line by line, some 90 words. Messages can be sent via an 800 phone number or over a computer terminal connected to a phone.

The 10-ounce, battery-operated device is currently available in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas, and Charles Priddy, president of Meta Systems, says he hopes to go nationwide in major cities within 18 months.

The receivers rent for $40 to $70 a month, and current users include busy folks like Rams coach Ray Malavasi and movie mogul Dino De Laurentiis.

WEATHERING THE VOLCANO

The eruption of a volcano in Mexico last spring could have a major effect on the world's climate this winter.

When El Chichon exploded, it sent sulfur dioxide into the air — maybe 10 times as much as Mt. St. Helens did. These particles reflect sunlight away from the earth, perhaps lowering average global temperatures by 1 or 2 degrees Celsius and affecting the distribution of rainfall, explains Dr. James Friend, an atmospheric chemist at Drexel University.

This doesn't mean you should run out and buy an extra pair of mittens, but such a change can affect crops, which are very sensitive to even slight variations in rainfall and length of growing season.

Friend told us that the last volcano to have a significant effect on the weather was Bali's Mt. Agung, which erupted in 1963. The big daddy of recorded volcanoes was Indonesia's Mt. Tambora, whose eruption in 1815 caused what's been called "The year without a summer."

Agung: 1963 weather disrupter.

PROPHET OF THE GRIDIRON?

Searching for a surefire way to correctly predict the outcome of the pro football season, we placed a call to one Psychic George, a Long Island, N.Y. fellow who claims 80 to 90 percent accuracy in forecasting certain world events. "I'm pretty sharp with earthquakes and assassination attempts," he told us.

Well, it seems old George doesn't know too much about football, but he forged ahead anyway, and here are his playoff picks. In the A.F.C. he likes the Oilers, Steelers, Chiefs, Seahawks and Jets ("I saw a jet plane even before you asked me the question"). In the N.F.C. he takes the Cowboys, Saints, Cardinals, Giants and Packers ("I'm seeing a lot of green").

Undeterred when informed that New Orleans has never made the playoffs in its 15-year history, Psychic George is picking the Saints over the Jets in the 1983 Super Bowl.

"This kind of stuff really isn't my strength," George, a 30-year-old phone-company employee, warns. "But my accuracy is very good in communicating with the hereafter."

Psychic George sees the Saints marching in.

Yes, just take a look at the superstars and super hits that the Columbia Record & Tape Club now offers. To get any 11 of these records or tapes right away, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selection, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation whatsoever. You risk absolutely nothing by filling in and mailing the application—so be sure to act now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in the number you want.

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial membership basis.

Just fill in the special "Trial Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL 6 for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them! And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ to cover shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

Here is the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV
