Six held in nun killings

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Six members of El Salvador's armed forces have been arrested in connection with the December murders of three Roman Catholic nuns and a church worker from the United States, Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia announced Saturday.

Garcia said the suspects were arrested April 29, but he did not identify them or say why their detentions had not been reported earlier. Ranking military officials had said as late as Friday night that they knew of no arrests in the case.

A document sent by the government to the U.S. Embassy and seen by some newsmen listed three names as Sgt. Luis Antonio Colminders Aleman and Corporals Luis Elias Sanchez and Jose Roberto Moreno Canjara. It did not give their branch of the security forces and Garcia declined to say if the suspects were soldiers or paramilitary policemen.

In Washington, the State Department issued a statement. "We are encouraged by the action of the government of El Salvador in detaining six persons suspected of involvement in the tragic killing of the four American churchwomen in December. This action demonstrates that the investigation is making progress and shows the firm determination of the government of El Salvador to act against wanton violence, whatever its source. U.S. officials have been working closely with Salvadoran authorities in their investigation and will continue to bring it to a successful conclusion."

State Department spokesman David Nall said the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador had been consulted about Garcia's announcement, but he declined to discuss the Salvadoran report to the embassy. "I can't get into details of our private communications," he said.

A U.S. official who asked not to be identified said the department expects the suspects to be brought to trial.

Robert White, the former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, told a news conference in Rochester, N.Y., Thursday, that the Salvadoran government had arrested six soldiers for the killings of the four American women.

Auto rams SA home, two killed

A Santa Ana mother and her 10-year-old son were killed Saturday when an alleged drunk driver plowed through a kitchen where the woman was preparing dinner.

Police said the bodies of Enocencia Sanchez, 33, and Hugo Perez were pinned beneath the wreckage of the 1974 station wagon that crashed through the living room before ramming into the kitchen at 2246 S. Kilson.

Three other children and an unidentified 27-year-old cousin standing nearby were not injured.

Police said the driver was traveling about 60 mph hour westbound on Warner Avenue when he struck the house at 5:30 p.m.

Elazar Zirate, 23, of Carson, was arrested on suspicion of felony drunk driving and vehicular manslaughter. He was not injured.

52 exercises in encouragement

Every mother's days are happiest when their children are smiling.

That's a frequent reaction during Movement Education classes for "rug rats" — youngsters from 3 to 12 months — taught by Dave Harding at the Orange Coast YMCA.

The parent works with the child, stretching and flexing his muscles. Ten-month-old Scott Dore of Newport Beach flies like an airplane with his mother Carol providing the power.

Robin Sinclair of Costa Mesa coaxes Blake, 4 months, to become more aware of his surroundings with pleasant delight. Given a little more time, he'll be motivated to crawl and reach up for the toy.

Exploring the ring's circumference are Mary Jane and Amber Segerblom of Newport Beach and Danna and Michael Caples of Fountain Valley. Emily and Andrew Evans are taking the short cut through the center.

Sloane's educated, now it's goodbye

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN

Stacy Cotting, 14, of Huntington Beach, took home a black Labrador retriever puppy 17 months ago.

She's watched the dog, Sloane, grow to become a handsome full-size animal that has won the affection of her entire family.

She's trained the dog to climb aboard jet planes, to ignore cats, balls, loud noises and other dogs and to behave inside restaurants and classrooms.

On Monday, she'll be telling the dog goodbye.

Stacy will be keeping an agreement she obtained from the San Rafael-based Guide Dogs for the Blind.

His puppyhood training concluded, he must be returned to the organization. Sloane will be prepared as a helper for a sightless person or will be used for breeding additional guide dogs.

SNEIDERMAN

Stacy has raised and trained Sloane as a project for the Fountain Valley Cloverdales 4-H Club.

Her first responsibility was to housebreak and socialize her new puppy.

Sloane's early challenges were getting acquainted with the Cottings' other dog, an older cockapoo named Smokey, and learning to climb and descend stairs.

"He was a typical clumsy puppy, and when he came down the stairs he looked just like a Slinky," Stacy recalls.

During his first Christmas, the mischievous puppy devoured an entire package of malted milk balls that had been left under the tree.

Soon, though Sloane had to be taught the six basic obedience commands: sit, stay, come, heel, down and fetch.

He also had to learn guide dog etiquette.

WE ASKED . . .

What are you most grateful to your mother for?

By JEFF PARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Sharene Lares
Newport Beach, floral designer.

"She's had to put up with all my problems. Sometimes you hurt the person you're closest to inadvertently, and lots of times that's your mother. She's always put up with my constant revolts."

Jody Sink
Costa Mesa, health club instructor:

"For being my best friend. She always helped me out with problems — I could go to her with anything on my mind and she'd hear me out. I wouldn't be the person I am today without her."

Joe Gioscia
Costa Mesa, retail manager:

"I'm grateful for her respect, and that goes for both parents, really. They had to allow me freedom at a certain time in life and that decision is important. The parents of a lot of my friends are still trying to run their lives. My mother is terrific."

Paul Fitz-Gibbon
Newport Beach, motorcycle racer:

"She supported my racing. She helped me financially and emotionally — without her it would have been impossible."

Laurie Nelson
Costa Mesa, bookkeeper:

"She sacrificed all her time for her family and you can't really do much more. She didn't have a life of her own for a while. She never spoiled us though, she taught us responsibility. I really love her."

Carla Windham
Huntington Beach, cosmetologist:

"She taught me responsibility and how to handle my problems myself. I come from a family of nine, so that's important. She gave me a lot of personal responsibility — I can deal with pretty much any situation."

Darren Hurley
Costa Mesa, deliveryman:

"She put up with my irresponsibility. She taught me how to handle problems and deal with society. She taught me how to get along with people."

Laura Seymour
Costa Mesa, retail manager:

"She just brought me up right. High morals and good values...no, good morals and high values. She taught me how to be independent but took care of us too. She's very outgoing and generous and is the best mom anybody could ever have."

Candie Morgan
Irvine, bookkeeper:

"She's always been there when I needed her. She always gave me comfort and courage."

Yorba Linda, bookkeeper:

"She helps me when I need her, giving support and help. She's always been an inspiration to me."

Wycliffe hears Graham

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

In a celebration marked by sadness at the death of translator Chester Bitterman III, the Huntington Beach-based Wycliffe Bible Translators celebrated their 50th anniversary Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Some 7,000 people packed into the auditorium to honor Wycliffe founder Cameron Townsend and hear evangelist Billy Graham.

The ceremony opened with a one-minute silence followed by a prayer for Bitterman, kidnapped by Colombian terrorists Jan. 19 and found slain 48 days later.

"The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church," said the Rev. Donn Moomaw, who led the opening prayer. His words of strength borne of grief set the tone for the evening.

Townsend, the 85-year-old founder, took the stage at 8 p.m. and soon found himself surrounded by dozens of the people who worked with him in his early years in Guatemala.

He originally went to Guatemala in the 1920s as a Bible salesman, but soon found the non-Spanish speaking Indians were not interested in buying Spanish language Bibles.

Living with the Mayan Cakchiquel tribe he labored 10 years to learn its language, give it a written form, then teach the Indians how to read it. In 1931, he completed the translation of the New Testament into Cakchiquel.

He founded the Wycliffe Bible Translators to carry on his work and bring the New Testament to people who were without written language. Wycliffe linguists have since completed 150 New Testament translations into previously unwritten languages.

Billy Graham called Townsend, "One of the great missionary leaders of the Christian church."

Graham, the media-armed evangelist who has reached millions through television and radio, and Townsend, whose workers have labored up to 15 years to bring the Scriptures to as few as 100 tribesmen at a time, have met before.

"Everytime I run into 'Cameron' he tries to get me interested in translations," said Graham.

"When I die they'll say he was an evangelist, but where is it? Cameron Townsend has touched the world in ways that I couldn't in a thousand lifetimes," Graham said.

bits. He cannot panic at loud noises. He must not bite. He must be accustomed to a variety of walking surfaces including sidewalk grates, stairs and hay. He must not be afraid of his mirror reflection.

As part of Sloane's training, Stacy has taken the dog to church, to school and to John Wayne Airport for plane boarding lessons.

Sloane has done well in guide puppy competitions, but he still has a few bad habits to overcome.

"Sniffing is his biggest weakness," Stacy says. "He keeps his nose to the ground. And when he's under the table he doesn't always stay still. He sometimes crawls around on his stomach."

"He sometimes pulls too hard on his leash. I've developed muscles from holding on to him."

But Sloane has behaved admirably during demonstrations with Stacy before school and club audiences. Stacy and Sloane also were scheduled to take part in activities at the 4-H Spring Fair this weekend at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Then Stacy will travel to San Rafael and surrender her dog to the guide school.

In the coming months Sloane will undergo an evaluation. If he's guide dog material, he'll be put through additional training and be matched with a blind owner.

Even if he doesn't meet the rigorous final standards, Sloane may be kept for breeding purposes.

"I'm going to feel terrible," Stacy says of her upcoming farewell to Sloane.

Although she is pleased that Sloane will be performing worthwhile work, Stacy is sad about losing her pet of the past 17 months.

There is a slim chance Sloane will prove unsuitable for guide dog purposes. Stacy will get the first crack at keeping Sloane if he is given away by the school.

But in case that doesn't happen, Stacy has made sure she won't be lonesome for a canine companion. The guide dog school already has reserved a new puppy for Stacy, and she'll bring it home to begin the long training process once again.

150,000 crowd beaches

Summer perfect weather drew more than 150,000 beachgoers to the Orange Coast shoreline Saturday.

From Laguna to Huntington Beach, bikini-clad bodies blanketed the sand soaking up the first strong rays of summer-like sunshine.

Lifeguards in Newport Beach reported more than 90,000 beachgoers enjoying temperatures that hit 69 degrees with water temperatures warming to 67.

Strong riptides and surf conditions of 3 to 6 feet prompted about 80 rescues, according to lifeguards.

About 65,000 sun worshippers crowded Huntington Beach city and state beaches Saturday, where a rough surf resulted in 49 rescues at the city beach and 5 at the state beach.

Outlook good for tax plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's resounding budget victory in the Democratic-controlled House virtually guarantees passage of billions of dollars in spending cuts and at the same time boosts chances for his tax-cut proposal, less popular in Congress.

It also has GOP leaders talking optimistically — if hesitantly — about a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats that would make the House as reliably receptive to the president's economic program for the next two years as the Senate.

No sooner had the House voted to support Reagan's budget blueprint last Thursday than Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois told reporters the decision showed "maybe a coalition of sorts, that maybe could last throughout the Congress."

"I think it demonstrates that the majority of the 97th Congress is going to be much more fiscally responsible" than recent Congresses have been, agreed Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Tex., a supporter of the Reagan budget plan and chairman of a 47-member group of conservative Democrats.

Asked if that meant Reagan would get most of his economic proposal passed, Stenholm said, "Certainly I think it does."

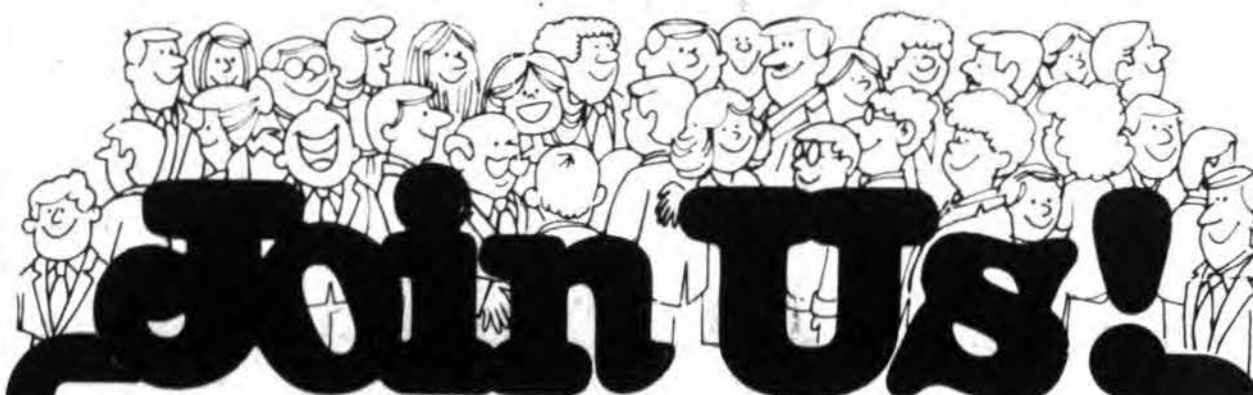

Unlike in the GOP-controlled Senate, the Democrats hold a 51-vote edge in the House.

But that paper majority was shredded in the first big test vote of the year as 63 Democrats voted with all 190 Republicans to support the president's budget. Thirty-eight of the 63 came from the group Stenholm heads.

Despite his obvious happiness, Michel said there is no prospect of enough Democrats formally switching parties to give the Republicans power to overthrow Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and reorganize the House.

"We're not really close enough when you've got a 51-vote margin," he said.

And Democratic leaders say the Republicans may start to lose ground when they have to enforce the budget blueprint by voting for the actual cuts one bill at a time.

Stretching time is the biggest challenge mothers face in raising children today, says Dora Hill, Newport Beach's first woman mayor. "There are so many demands that mothers don't have enough time for their children. It's important for them to be together."

Supportiveness is important between single mothers and children, says Norma Gibbs, educational psychology professor at Cal State Long Beach. "We're a greedy lot. We need more sharing and caring. The whole secret to happiness is to be content with what you have."

"Young parents today are doing a fantastic job. They have a lot more opportunities and resources — workshops, literature, medical aid and nutritional information — than we did," remarks Gwenda Watson, state volunteer chairman for the March of Dimes.

Jean Aldrich, world traveler and member of the Children's Hospital Board of Directors, refers to Chinese children as proof that motherhood was easier before television. "They have knowledge imparted to them via a person or books. It is comparable to our '30s."

Is raising children more difficult today?

By TRUDY FULLER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Raising children in the 1980s — with television, a soaring divorce rate and two-income families drastically affecting modern families — is far different from past decades.

Orange Coast grandmothers gave their thoughts on the ways in which rearing children have changed and the jobs modern mothers have trying to help their children turn out "right."

"We had no problems with our children. They went to school, came home, and we always knew where they were," said Pearl Steeleburger, 71-year-old grandmother of eight and a member of the Newport Harbor Grandmothers Club.

"PARENTS DON'T REALLY know where their children are any more. But in some ways it would be easier to keep track because they have a lot more appliances to help out."

Mothers' employment also affects their children, said some of the grandmothers.

"Children are left alone a lot more now," said Lois Lade, 83, grandmother of five and great-grandmother of six.

"It's made them much more independent, which is good in some ways. Fathers and mothers have to have a certain set of rules and even the youngest ones have to know that they will be disciplined."

"Parents have to show a lot of love, spend time with their children. When they are at home, their hours should be spent with the youngsters. . . . Yes, I think it would be harder to be a mother now, unless the family is real close."

Helen Greene, who has five grandchildren, believes that mothers working outside of the home made children less stable.

"I think they need more direction and discipline. Children are more insecure, not really independent," she said.

"WHEREVER YOU LOOK YOUNG people are being exposed to drugs, alcohol, and violence. We hear and read about these things. We don't read about the Christian homes bringing up their children to be stable adults. We had problems in our day, but there is just no comparison."

Gladys Homeier, 83-year-old grandmother of four and great-grandmother of nine, agreed that things have changed, or at least they have appeared to.

"There's too much evil in the world now, from what I read," she said. "Unless, of course, we just didn't know about it."

Television was both praised and condemned by the ladies.

Jean Aldrich, grandmother of three, and a member of the Children's Hospital Board of Directors, believes it was easier to be a mother in "pre-television days."

"Things were less sophisticated then," she said. "Now the world is at your fingertips. Before TV if you lived in the Midwest and never left, you had to wonder what the rest of the world was like. Now you can see it."

"IN CHINA, FOR INSTANCE, those children don't have television. They have knowledge imparted to them via a person or books. It is comparable to our '30s."

But Dorothy Van Marter, a grandmother of four and great-grandmother of three, worries that a lot of mothers just sit their children in front of a TV, give them dinner and tell them to stay there.

"I didn't have much problem with my children, and I didn't have any other help than what nature gave me."

Mrs. Homeier thought television can "be educational, but fighting and guns can be bad for the children. Of course, it is entertaining."

"Television is great in the morning for children so their mothers can get the housecleaning done," added Mrs. Lade.

Former mayor of Huntington Beach, Norma Gibbs, educational psychology professor at Cal State Long Beach, sets an example for single parents.

She has reared two children, two stepchildren, 14 foster children, and is now the grandparent of one.

HER SECRET? ORGANIZATION and cooperation, she said, adding that teaching and cooking helped her relax when personal time was at a premium.

"The ideal is to have two parents, but you just have to accept what you have and make it work. My children were supportive of me and the things I was doing, and I was supportive of them."

"I feel we're a greedy lot. We need more sharing and caring. The whole secret to happiness is to be content with what you have."

But happiness to Mrs. Lade is prepared mixes, "the best thing that could have happened to a kitchen."

"WHEN WE HAD TO MAKE A CAKE from scratch, I thought it was very boring. Cake mixes are such a big help," she said, claiming that she "never was much of a cook."

"Sewing was big to me, though. My daughter was a dancer and I used to make all of her costumes. Classical and ballet, the ones with the long, full skirts and yards and yards of material. I made dozens of them."

Mrs. Lade is still sewing on an electric machine she bought in 1926.

Mrs. Greene believes that happiness for grandmothers is not having full responsibility for the children.

"We have a glorious time when they stay with me for vacations, but I wouldn't want them all of the time. Another advantage is when they are small and begin to cry, and get cranky, I can go home."

Vietnamese settling in 'Life in U.S. difficult, but better than homeland'

By JOHN NEEDHAM
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

When the North Vietnamese army marched into Saigon in April 1975, Hai Nguyen was a 17-year-old high school student with plans to attend medical school.

With the support of his parents, who feared he would be drafted into the army of the new communist government, Nguyen made two unsuccessful attempts to flee his country. He spent a year in prison for his efforts.

Finally on his third try, now accompanied by his wife of four months, Thuy, he reached the Malaysian refugee island of Pulau Bidong in April 1979, four years after the fall of the South Vietnamese government.

Nguyen, 23, and a student at Saddleback College's north campus in Irvine, says life is difficult in the United States, but much better than in his own country.

The Nguyens spoke little English when they came here, but only weeks after their arrival they enrolled in a language class at Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa.

"We want to make a good future here and get a better position in society," the young man said, adding that he and his wife knew if they wanted to get ahead, they had to learn English.

Like many of the estimated 32,000 other Southeast Asian refugees living in Orange County, the couple said they came here because they had relatives living in the area and for job opportunities.

Mrs. Nguyen is employed by an Irvine electronics firm, while her husband works part time as a lab technician at the Irvine campus. He said he wants to be a chemical engineer.

Both received job training in a Comprehensive Education and Training Act program. Nguyen's salary is being paid with CETA funds, but that money will be cut off in September, so he's now looking for another job.

His search for one hasn't been easy. "Some of the people in the interviews are very cold," he said. "I don't think they believe I can do the job."

Mrs. Nguyen spent months looking for a job after finishing the electronic technology training program. However, on her first job she was hired as an assembler.

"At least now I have a chance to work up to a better position," she said. "Before there was no chance."

The Nguyens live with cousins in Santa Ana, a young couple about their age. They say the living arrangement is a good one, and allows them to save money and send some back to their parents, who are still in Saigon.

They said they only receive a letter from their parents about every four months. Sometimes there is good news, and other times it is bad.

The letter the couple received last week from Nguyen's parents said his younger brother had escaped from Vietnam, but was feared dead since he has not been heard from.

The Nguyens said the small boat that they escaped in along with 60 other people was repeatedly attacked by Thai pirates before they reached sanctuary.

A young girl was raped in one of the attacks, and others were thrown into the sea and left to drown when they refused to hand over their meager belongings, the Nguyens said.

"There is nothing in them, these people who would do this," Nguyen said. "They kill for fun."

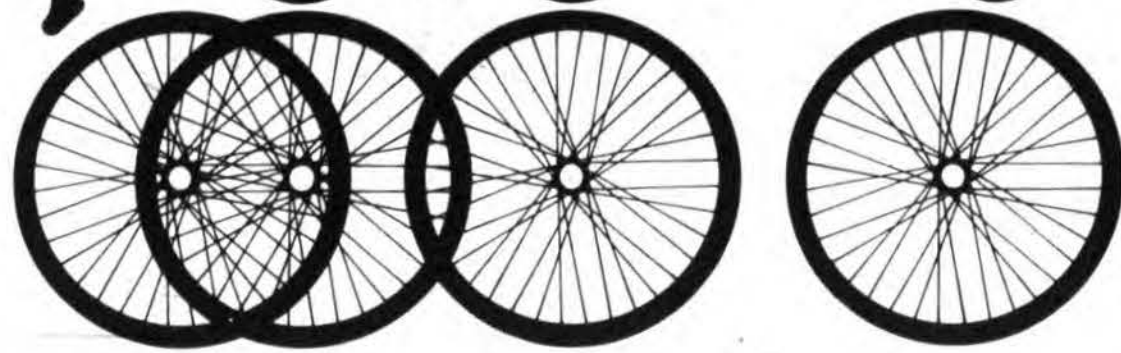

He said all the people who choose to leave Vietnam know the risks, but accept them in hopes of finding a better life.

"We are lucky here because we can study and have a good life," Nguyen said. "Eventually we would like to become citizens. We want to be good citizens here, not a burden."

Thuy, Hai Nguyen, who want to become citizens, feel lucky to be here. "We can study and have a good life."

Social Security vs. 'senior boom'

Congressional remedies could lead to first major benefit cut in system's 45 years

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security, the fair-haired child of the New Deal, is struggling through a mid-life crisis and facing a "senior boom" in the future that could make its current money woes seem minor.

Congress is hard at work on remedies, and they could lead to the first major benefit cut in the system's 45-year history.

The biggest reduction may come not at the expense of the 36 million Americans who now receive benefits checks each month, but out of the pockets of future generations of retirees who may be asked to work until age 68 instead of 65 to receive full benefits.

IT SEEMS CLEAR that major changes are needed to stave off a Social Security fiasco three or four decades from now, when the baby boom generation turns gray.

Dire warnings abound. The fund that pays retirement checks could run out of cash late next year or in 1983. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the fund may be short $63.5 billion by 1986 and could be $128.9 billion in the hole by 1990.

Workers and employers are complaining about the payroll tax and wage base, which between them have gone up 20 times in the past 15 years.

FICA — the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, alias the Social Security payroll tax — takes a bigger bite out of the paycheck of many Americans than the federal income tax.

THE MAXIMUM SOCIAL Security tax, under $1,000 just four years ago, is now $1,975 and seems headed for $5,000-plus by 1990.

These and other problems are forcing young and old alike to ask anew two fundamental questions: how much Social Security do Americans want, and how much are they willing to pay for?

"The program is not on the doorstep of the 'Great Beyond.' We must look behind the glaring headlines and realize the system will go on," insists Rep. J. J. Pickle, D-Texas, the chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security.

"Regardless of the problems, they will be handled. They were met in the past and they will be met now."

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker believes there are really only three choices: raising taxes, reducing benefits or raising the retirement age.

A PAYROLL TAX increase appears virtually unthinkable. The system is already counting on built-in tax hikes in the future.

But support is building in Congress to pare back some benefits and gradually to raise the retirement age from 65 to 68.

Congressman Pickle's subcommittee figures that gradually raising the retirement age, over 10 years starting in 1990, would wipe out $15 billion of the long-term deficit.

The Ways and Means subcommittee also favors stiffening the penalty for early retirement at 62. Most workers now retire at age 65.

INSTEAD OF GETTING 80 percent of the full benefit as is now the case, a 62-year-old would get 64 percent. Someone retiring at 65 would get 81 percent instead of 100 percent.

Rita Ricardo-Campbell, a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution who chaired a Reagan transition task force on Social Security, says increases in life expectancy make the change justifiable. In 1940, men who reached 65 were expected to live 12.1 more years. Today, their life expectancy is 14 years after 65.

But she acknowledges that later retirement "will be very hard to sell to non-professional workers."

"It has been pushed primarily by intellectuals, many of whom entered the labor force six or more years later than those who do hard physical labor, work on assembly-line jobs, perform routine work, and at age 65 may have worked for 47 years," she told Pickle's subcommittee.

SOCIAL SECURITY EXPECTS to pay $140 billion in cash benefits in fiscal 1981 and $160 billion in fiscal 1982.

The payroll tax is now 6.65 percent on income of $29,700 or more. The tax itself climbs to 6.7 percent in 1982, 7.05 percent in 1985 and 7.65 percent in 1990. The wage base climbs automatically each year as workers' average wages rise. It is expected to hit $43,500 in 1985 (maximum tax of $3,067) and $66,900 in 1990 (maximum tax of $5,118).

Both the Carter and Reagan administrations proposed similar cuts in what they deemed peripheral Social Security benefits — aid to college students, the $122-a-month minimum benefit and the $255 lump sum death benefit.

But when the Carter administration suggested those cuts in 1978, not a single member of Congress could be found to introduce legislation to carry out the plan.

WITHIN WEEKS AFTER Reagan made the same proposals, Pickle and a majority of the subcommittee were drafting legislation of their own to phase out the student and minimum (See 'SENIOR BOOM,' Page A8)

Coping with cancer

Patients reach out, hug and lift each others' spirits

By JOEL C. DON

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Bill Hart's name tag was hand-colored with two red hearts. That meant he'd embrace both men and women.

One heart is for people who accept hugs from the same sex only.

The 52-year-old Huntington Beach man wanted all the affection he could get. He figured he licked cancer once with the unusual therapy: More hugs could fight off a recurrence of his colon cancer and help his current battle against skin cancer.

HE THINKS A BAD marriage and a job promotion brought on his first cancer and a stressful relationship contributed to the second.

So in addition to his conventional surgery and radiation treatments, Hart once a week attends a program called "Challenging Your Cancer."

He learns stress management, relaxation techniques and a way of using mental imagery or visualization to combat his disease.

"They thought I'd never get off the table," he said, of his first surgery. "I think using the visualization was when I really saw the results. Getting in touch with the things that brought on the cancer was beneficial."

THE SUPPORT GROUP is led by Judy Sills, a social worker who works in a hospital hospice program and her husband Mark, a United Church of Religious Science minister.

Formed in January 1980, the group meets at the Church of Religious Science in Huntington Beach's Seacrest Village Shopping center.

Their methods are based on those developed by Dr. O. Carl Simonton and his former wife, Stephanie Matthews-Simonton. They started the Cancer Counseling and Research Center in Fort Worth, Texas, and contend that stress and other emotional factors contribute to the progression of cancer.

Mental imaging is at the heart of the program. Patients are trained to visualize disease-fighting white blood cells (leukocytes) as mighty warriors gobbling up or conquering the evil cancer cells.

Radiation treatment and chemotherapy also are used by the patient to bolster the notion of the mind's ability to control the spread of cancer. For instance, a patient can visualize a particular drug as a life-like warrior.

The American Cancer Society, in disclaiming the Simonton method, has said there is no scientific proof that mental imaging can fight off the world's most-feared disease.

While the Simonton method remains controversial in the medical community, Mrs. Sills emphasized the group serves as an adjunct to established medical care.

"When people are referred to us, they're pretty advanced in their illness," the Huntington Beach resident said. "Some people have been told on a subconscious level that they're going to die."

"AND WHEN PEOPLE ARE given a prognosis, sometimes that becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. It takes a lot of courage to turn that around."

Newcomers to the Thursday evening sessions are never told the techniques will put them on the road to recovery.

But in the face of the nausea and pain that often comes with conventional cancer therapy, Mrs. Sills believes relaxation exercises, meditation, mental imaging and group therapy can only improve a person's well-being.

"Whether people live or die, it (the group) provides a very supportive, caring network," she said. "When someone says 'I haven't had any pain or nausea for a couple of weeks' they say 'Hey, he can do it, so can I.'"

"THIS TECHNIQUE IS NOT suited for everybody," said her husband Mark, to lung cancer victim George Porrett of Whittier. "You are (suited) because you're here searching for it."

"I'm not promising that you will live. I can almost promise you if you take this method and work with it your whole life will be changed."

Gas tax hike could save state highways

Caltrans Director Adriana Gianturco has taken a fair load of justifiable criticism for the state of California's deteriorating highway system.

It's been said, and correctly, that her preoccupation with mass transit systems has been at the expense of freeway and highway construction and maintenance in many instances.

While venting some steam at her while bumping down the poorly lighted Santa Ana Freeway may afford some satisfaction, all the blame can't be placed at her doorstep.

Plain fact is California's highways and freeways are falling apart because there isn't enough money to maintain them properly. As gasoline prices have risen and economy cars have become a way of life, the state's share of gasoline taxes has plummeted.

(If this is perplexing to you because you're paying more than ever for gas, remember the tax is imposed on a per-gallon basis instead of on price.)

A bill passed by the state Senate last Thursday would boost the tax from 7 cents a gallon to 9 cents and provide gradual increases in registration, driver's license and truck-weight fees. This is seen by a two-thirds majority of the Senate as the best — if not the only — way of propping up the ailing roadway system.

The bill would raise an estimated $3.3 billion over the next five years. That's barely enough, says the state, to reconstruct or resurface at least 23,000 miles of roads and highways — without even taking the inflation factor into account.

The bill faces two major hurdles: the Legislature and Gov. Jerry Brown, who unfortunately has refused to support the highway-fund program because of the no-tax stance he adopted to improve his image for the 1982 U.S. Senate race.

If they are realistic about the state of California's highways and roads, they will support it. Vast stretches of the system will simply have to be abandoned in the near future if something isn't done to put them back in shape.

Any new tax is painful to the consumer, but this would be the first gas tax increase since 1963. And the need is obvious.

It's expensive here

You've heard those stories about how business executives are granted above-normal salaries when they're transferred to New York just because it costs so much to live there?

Well, tell them to move over. Orange County has just pushed New York aside in this category.

A middle-management executive with a spouse and two children now requires an income of $45,510 to maintain a standard level of living in the county (technically the Anaheim/Santa Ana Metropolitan Area).

That's about $6,000 more than it costs to live at the same level in New York and $11,000 above the figure for even nearby Los Angeles.

The estimates, says the Employee Transfer Corporation, mean that housing, transportation, taxation and living costs in Orange County are the highest in the country for management types — and that they should ask for a fat pay raise if asked to move here.

Moving from Dallas to Orange County, for example, would require an additional $16,000 to hold the same standard of living.

Some of the figures:

Orange County $45,000; New York, $39,649; Boston, $35,258; Detroit, $31,283; Denver, $30,185; Salt Lake City, $29,212; Houston, $28,647; Birmingham, $28,407.

Perhaps we should adopt San Francisco's attitude toward that chilly fog that rolls over the city: since there's nothing to be done about it, brag about it.

And ask for a raise.

Leisure World's covered

If you've got to be hit by a car, for heaven's sake let yourself get hit in Laguna Hills, home of Leisure World retirement community.

After extracting the data from all manner of computer runs, the Department of Motor Vehicles has determined that you're less likely to be involved with an uninsured driver in Laguna Hills than anywhere in the state.

This follows a statewide pattern, says the DMV. Unsurprisingly, affluent areas whose residents have above-average educations tend to be covered with insurance when they have accidents.

At the other end, also understandably is a male, young, poor, likely living in Los Angeles or Oakland, and already with a bad driving record. He's not likely to be insured for two reasons: his rates are the highest in the book and he can't afford insurance in the first place.

Remedies for the uninsured driver problem are forever being introduced in the Legislature. No fewer than 12 are proposed in the current session.

Unfortunately, the economic facts of life suggest that the well-to-do will continue to be well covered with auto insurance and the poor will continue to take their chances.

Meanwhile, smile when a pokey older driver suddenly turns left in front of you without signaling. You're at least assured he'll be able to pay for the accident.

Lethal package too costly

WASHINGTON — Deployment of Syrian anti-aircraft missiles in eastern Lebanon, provoked by Israel's deep-penetration kills of two Syrian helicopters, has given Moscow a sharp wedge to pry itself back into the Mideast as a major player.

That drops the first case of crisis diplomacy into the laps of Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Vice President Bush, President Reagan's crisis manager, with precious few assets.

INDEED, GIVEN HIS unnecessary concessions to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin in the past three months, Ronald Reagan may find himself trapped between Begin's election-eve military operations in Lebanon and the intolerable countermeasures of Soviet-backed Syria.

Although some U.S. officials dispute it, experienced Arab diplomats doubt that Syria's beleaguered President Assad would have dared to move those SAM-6 anti-aircraft missiles into Lebanon without the consent of the Kremlin. To Begin, the SAMs naturally act as magnets for his U.S.-supplied air force.

Begin's popularity has soared on the wings of his daily air raids against undefended southern Lebanon. His program to implant new Jewish settlements on the Arab-occupied West Bank of the Jordan has now reached runaway status, openly encouraged by Reagan's new policy edict that the settlements are "not illegal."

BESIDES STRENGTHENING Begin, another result is to make the U.S. look weak and flabby to its Arab friends.

For the Soviets, this lethal package is an unexpected bonanza that could shred the fragile, crazy-quilt cover of peace that Jimmy Carter's Camp David agreements spread over the Middle East in 1978.

With quiet help from some influential European allies of the U.S., the Soviets have begun to set their price for an affirmative response to the U.S. appeal that Syria be stroked and calmed. That price: A Soviet share in any overall settlement in that tortured region.

Haig has no illusions about the dangers of letting the Soviets play any unleashed the very forces that now offer the Russians their long-sought chance for a Mideast comeback.

Beyond that danger lies another: The unwinding of delicate threads that bind up the Camp David accords.

If the contest over bloodied little Lebanon leads to serious hostilities over its partition between Israel and Syria, even so adept a statesman as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat might find himself between the rock of his peace treaty with Israel and the hard place of standing alone against all other Arab states.

EVIDENCE GROWS that young Egyptian army officers are pressuring Sadat hard for the American weapons promised as part of the Camp David accords. These weapons have been slow to arrive, a condition blamed by the restive younger generation of Israel's influence within the U.S. government.

Reagan courageously decided to meet that influence of Israel head on in the case of AWACS for Saudi Arabia. But the closer Israel comes to hostilities with Syria, the harder it is for Reagan to arm America's Arab friends if Israel objects. That gives Moscow a bonanza.

Soviet arming of Libya, for example, has reached alarming proportions: 475 aircraft including 150 MiG-23s to Egypt's 200, the best of which are aging MiG-21s. Syria will now surely be receiving huge batches of new weapons from the Soviets.

These military assets give Moscow impressive leverage, but as yet no diplomatic role in any Middle East settlement. The best chance the Soviets have had to wedge themselves into that role since the 1973 Yom Kippur war is right now, in the tragedy of Lebanon.

'Fund apprenticeships, not prisons'

To the Editor:

After reading the article in the Daily Pilot about the highlights of Cecil Hicks' speech at the Town Hall meeting, I would like to take exception to one of his points.

Mr. Hicks states that he is "sick to death of the whole subject of rehabilitation . . . the purpose of any penalty is to punish." On this last point I am in full agreement, however I am a strong proponent of some form of constructive rehabilitation within the prison system.

When an inmate is released from state prison he is given $200 and told to rejoin a society that is not only more expensive but also one that has fewer job opportunities. Can you imagine the shock of the individual who has spent three, four, or more years in prison, far removed from daily happenings in the "outside world," when he finds out how expensive living is going to be? Think back to 1977 and remember with fond memories of the cost of living at that time.

NATURALLY, the individual is eligible for emergency food stamps as well as unemployment payments IF he qualifies and then only after a 4-6 week wait. Why allow this individual to further become dependent on society for his welfare when we should make him assume responsibility for himself as part of his rehabilitation? We should not expect it from him upon his release from prison.

As an alternate to spending hundreds of millions of dollars on prisons to handle the ever-increasing prison population, why not allocate funds for programs to give the people being paroled definite job skills? Some form of apprenticeship program is needed whereby the individual is paid some small amount of salary based on his accomplishments in his field of study with this money placed in a trust account. When the person leaves prison he not only has definite job skills but also funds by which he is able to pay for some clothes, a place to stay and go job hunting until the first paycheck arrives.

former inmates themselves. After all, who has a better idea of what would be needed to help make his transition back into society? The psychological trauma from going to a "free" environment from a controlled one causes enough problems, why add more problems?

I think it is about time Mr. Hicks opened his eyes and realized that a part of his responsibility as the District Attorney of Orange County is to help prevent crime, not encourage more. The majority of us don't want a handout but rather an opportunity to become productive members of society once again. Our punishment should not continue after our release from prison.

Arrests were mistake

To the Editor:

I am quoted in the April 29 edition of the Daily Pilot as saying I "believe police owe many parents an apology" for the arrest of students who had gone onto the Orange Coast College campus for lunch as truants. The quote was accurate; however at this time I feel I was mistaken in calling for a one-sided apology from the police department. So far as I can tell, the arrests resulted from a compounding of several mistakes on the part of several persons in both the police department and the school district.

ONE OF THE problems for any agency which serves the public in acknowledging an error is the possibility of a lawsuit. It is unfortunate that we have for many years pushed each other into corners in this fashion. I do not feel that anyone acted in this case with malice, or was extremely negligent, nor do I feel that any lasting damage need result. I hope that all parties involved will be forgiving and learn from this mistake.

Nevertheless, one thing stands out clearly: that the arrest of students who went onto the OCC campus to eat lunch was a mistake. Ideally the students arrested will wind up with no record, but if any records of these arrests are maintained, they should reflect in plain language that the arrests were mistaken.

Obedience prevails

To the Editor:

How I enjoyed Jerry Clausen's article about the truancy sweeps in Costa Mesa!

The story reminded me of a belief some people have that "obedience is for the other guy and his children."

For instance, a man who failed to realize those students who were picked up were indeed truant. Instead, he is upset because his own daughter was caught.

Another parent, again not concerned that those 76 students were willfully breaking a law of long standing, was concerned only that her daughter missed being picked up.

TYPICAL OF many so-called concerned parents, they are concerned only for their own pride, not for the students, their future, or our fair city of Costa Mesa.

Three years of breaking a law without being caught is nothing to be proud of. Do these people feel it's okay to run stop lights, cheat on tax returns, or break other laws as long as they aren't caught? Or is it the parents, in fact, just don't care about their children's future?

And what's with Norman Loats? Is he, too, condoning breaking the law? Hooray for the efforts of our local Police Department. They care!

Crime stories rising, ditto self-protection

Editor of the Daily Pilot

The governor wants a special sales tax to finance more prisons and more police protection. DA testifies in child-killer case. Laguna police seize $7.5 million in cocaine, arrest six.

Dual murder in Costa Mesa. Brutal killing in Laguna Niguel. Four found guilty in Orange County rape-kidnap. LA cops add manpower. Second nude slaying victim found in Long Beach. Freeway killers. Hillside stranglers.

Those all were in recent Daily Pilot headlines, no doubt leading some readers to conclude we're preoccupied with violence and crime.

There is a thin line between responsible reporting of crime and sensationalism. And it's certainly true that such stories are a part of the daily diet of Daily Pilot readers.

Addresses of home burglaries are not given, although we will give the street or neighborhood, theorizing that neighbors should be alerted to the crime.

We are careful not to reveal that the victim of a burglary or similar crime lives alone, particularly if it is a woman. "She discovered the loss when she returned home from work" is not a phrase that should be used.

Names and addresses of persons arrested in crimes are generally given if they are 18 or older. If the crime is worth reporting and someone is arrested, positive identification of the suspect is an essential part of the story.

We try never to list items missed or overlooked in a burglary. That's almost inviting the burglar back for a second try.

If police have persuasive reasons to withhold evidence on the basis it later may be used to cinch a case, we cooperate.

Likewise, if police request we not identify witnesses on the basis that harm may come to them, we most often will go along.

WE TRY TO remember that when a grand jury indicts someone for a crime that person is a long way from having been proved guilty. So our standing rule is that in the paragraph following the indictment charge a standing explanation be given: "An indictment is a formal charge made against a person by a grand jury. It does not establish guilt or innocence."

In summary, so long as crime is with us, it is a necessary part of the Daily Pilot's report to you each day. So long as we do it with a balanced judgment and in good taste, it's our job.

On a somewhat related item, readers often ask why we do not print the home addresses of the deceased in our obituaries and death notices.

The reason is we're asked not to. We're told by the mortuaries that the families fear the home will be burglarized during the funeral service if a signal is given that no one is likely to be home at that time.

Remember, if you have a comment, criticism, news tip or laurel for the Daily Pilot, call 642-6086. Your message will be recorded and given to the editor or the appropriate department chief. No circulation calls, please.

Letters to the editor also can be dictated to this number. You'll have to leave your telephone number so the letter can be verified after it has been transcribed.

PILOT LOGBOOK

I don't think we're over-reporting crime stories. I think crime has become such a dominant factor in our part of the country that looking the other way would make matters worse.

In between hands at our monthly discussion the other evening, one of my colleagues announced that he was buying a handgun — a move decidedly out of character with his attitude toward violence.

"I'm plain scared," he said. "I just don't feel safe anymore, not even in my own home."

Another at the table spoke of an entire block where women were armed with Mace. Still another acknowledged he already keeps a gun handy at home. The guy next to me said he was buying a Doberman Pinscher for day-and-night protection of his wife. She's alone a lot when he travels.

"And he'll be trained to be the meanest SOB of a dog you ever saw," he promised.

And these aren't residents of normal high-crime incidence such as beachfront rentals or other high-transient housing areas.

SO IF CRIME is a part of our daily package of news, how do we report it? How much of it do we report? What are our guidelines?

Fair questions. It isn't always the dual murders that occupy space in the Daily Pilot. Burglaries, particularly home burglaries, have assumed almost epidemic proportions in many neighborhoods and we report them regularly.

So do we report robberies of convenience food stores and liquor stores, although these have become so commonplace that they seldom rate more than two paragraphs.

(Burglaries have grown so numerous that we report only those involving losses of more than $3,000.)

I realize this sounds as if we are preoccupied with crime news, but we do keep a close eye on the balance of our daily report. Some days when disaster falls on all fronts, we try hard to remember that a day brighter is sorely needed by an audience already saturated with troubles.

IN ANSWER to several calls about crime news, we do have rules and guides for what we do and don't report in many instances.

Rape victims are not identified. Nor, of course, are molestation victims — and we are extremely careful that the story does not identify the victim indirectly.

Misdeeds, children come in all types

By DOROTHY CRAIN

Dorothy Crain lives behind her typewriter in Huntington Beach.

An open Letter to my Children
Re: The Uncovering of Mother's Cover-up

Dear Children,
It has come to my attention that through the years of rearing the five of you, I have been remiss in administering some of my obligatory mother duties. This, I might add, came as a shock and a surprise to me as it was completely unpremeditated, although inexcusable.

Let me explain how I learned of these alleged misdeeds and how I propose to rectify any trauma that may have been imposed as a result.

The revelation began to unfold last evening. The youngest of your group casually requested that I type his 3½ page report which was due in the morning for his Man and Environment class.

ALTHOUGH the hour was late, I agreed, after first getting an offer from said child (albeit solicited) to fold the remaining three baskets of laundry and the promise of a full day's notice for any future manuscript editing and typing.

When No. 3 child learned of this contract, he hastily insisted such a task was worth more than three loads of laundry and added that I had never typed papers for him in the ninth grade.

I believe he is correct on that. I distinctly remember it was his 10th grade biology teacher who emphatically stated she would no longer dissect his handwriting.

ten reports.

A lively discussion ensued at this point between these two as to which sibling possessed the more illegible handwriting.

All this time, No. 4 child was busily clearing the dinner table and loading the dishwasher (all except the turkey roaster which she feels should soak a good 12 hours or at least until she has left for school the next day).

SHE DID not enter the discussion, possibly since she had no reports imminent and her current concern is a campaign to enlist my aid in paying her recent traffic ticket (it was my car!).

Before starting my editorial duties, I phoned No. 1 child to catch up on the latest news about her business career. After a pleasant chat, I mentioned that I must get busy on my promised typing job for No. 5.

This chance remark released a recital of events I'm afraid had long been crowded from my memory. She recalled that I had typed no papers for her but had suggested she take typing in school, and until that time she had survived by hunt and peck on her own.

I must admit, I was aghast at my negligence. But at that time I was young and still a novice at the mother business. She further pointed out that she never brought her laundry home for me to do as No. 2 does regularly when he comes home from college.

I promptly noted that I owed her at least four major term papers and countless baskets of laundry. She remarked that all that was rather pointless as she

Moslems limit a woman's lot

Reprinted from the World Development Letter published bi-weekly by the Agency for International Development in Washington, D.C.

By and large, women of the Moslem world get short shrift. At least, that is the way much of the Western world perceives it. According to an article on Islam in the London Economist, however, it was not always thus.

The tragedy of Islam, reports the Economist, is that when the prescriptions about women were laid down in seventh-century Arabia by Mohammed (himself an orphan), he was being a bold, humanitarian, pro-feminist reformer. He was giving to women — and to widows and orphans too — an assured place in society denied them before his intervention.

The rights and family status he gave them, defined in the marriage contract, compared favorably with those enjoyed by women anywhere in the world until about 1800.

It is argued, however, especially by Moslem men of religion, that reform cannot be applied to the Koran itself. So its original reformist provisions have become static and anachronistic.

"The plain fact is," reports the Economist, "that Islam gives a clearly subordinate position to the female half of humanity, especially through polygamy, easy divorce and discrimination in inheritance. . . . It is all laid out, with clear exactness, in the fourth Surah, or chapter, of the Koran, the one entitled 'women.'

GUEST REPORT

"In that Surah there is both the assertion of the spiritual equality of men and women — 'Ye proceed from one another' — and the reminder that man is born of woman, a frequent Koranic injunction. But there too is the assertion of basic inequality: 'Men are in charge of women because Allah had made one of them to excel the other.'

"And there too are laid down the unequal provisions of inheritance (with a son inheriting twice the portions of a daughter and the widow no more than a fourth of her husband's legacy).

"The rights given to women were limited to the domestic sphere. There is an accredited saying of the prophet that 'the tribe that constitutes a woman as its ruler will not find redemption.'

Over the centuries, however, women have played a traditional behind-the-scenes role. In addition, in some Moslem countries such as Pakistan, Turkey, Egypt, and Tunisia, reforms have been instituted, showing the Moslem world, as the Economist puts it, "what it needs to do to be fair and just to its female other half."

But is this enough? For several decades some Moslem women, both the non-Westernized and the Westernized, have been posing this question but with increased trepidation because where reforms have been instituted changes are being challenged by forces of resurgent fundamentalism.

Apart from an inherent moral right or wrong in the discrimination against women, development specialists view the practice with distress. For in the complex process of development, the improvement of the status of women is viewed as essential. Moslems constitute about 16 percent of the population of developing countries.

Can quivering arrow escape pressure of its bow?

By PAULINE COLEMAN

Pauline Coleman resides in Huntington Beach.

Before she reached the end of the block, she looked into the rear-view mirror and saw them standing there. She knew they would stay until she was out of sight. How forlorn they looked. How old.

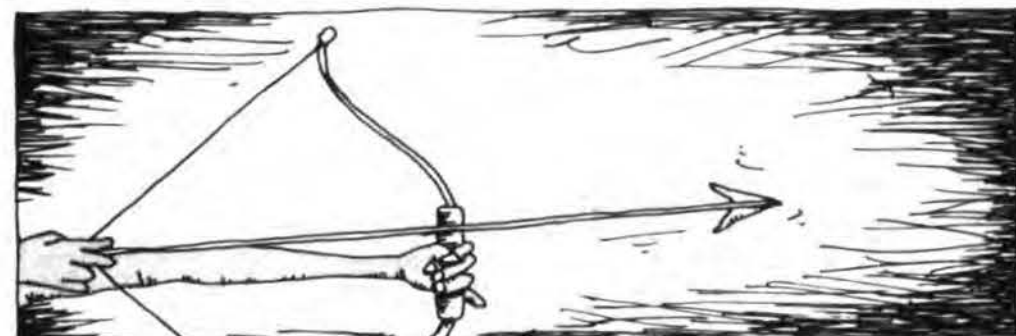

She had begged them not to walk out with her, reminding them that the damp blowing wind from the ocean was bad for their arthritis, but they wouldn't listen. Parting, to them, had become a ritual.

THEY HAD STOOD talking through the open car window. Neither the chilly wind nor anything she could say, would lessen this ordeal, not omit one word that prolonged it.

"Thanks for coming. Your visits mean so much to mother and me."

"I enjoy them too."

"Drive carefully. Put up the windows and lock all the doors. So much crime going on."

"I will, Father."

"Call us as soon as you get home."

"I will, Mother."

While her car sped along the freeway toward home, in the semi-darkness, her thoughts carefully raked through the events of the day.

She had left in the early morning. The flowers she had picked from her garden were mixed and colorful. The cake, baked from scratch, was to please her father. The magazine was for her mother. Gifts.

"Love does not ask for gifts; it asks to give." She was forever binding her thoughts with a quotation, something she'd read, like tying a package with a bright colored ribbon.

She had always tried to please them, to win their approval. There was her report card. To her it was a hard-earned paycheck. Was it the third or fourth grade? Did it matter? It was always the same even through college.

"I got three A's." Such pride. They had passed over them, ever so lightly, and dwelt so long on the "B's." But never mind, they both knew she would do better next time.

KISSING HER CHEEK had been like covering a bloody knee with a Band-Aid, after a fall. Only the hurt was in her heart, while the pain was a feeling of guilt. She'd tried, but she'd let them down.

Why must I live in the past?, she thought. Yet, in the book she'd just read, "Of Blood and Hope" Samuel Pissar had said, "We do not live in the past; the past lives in us."

But who am I to change the ravage of time?, she asked herself. Children grow up; parents grow old. Why must I feel I've let them down, when I grew up and had a family of my own?

She and Mark had taught their children to make decisions, and when they were ready, had sent them forth to seek what was right for them. Like arrows.

HOW HAD THE PROPHET said it? "Your children come through you but not from you." What were the other lines? Didn't he say something like, "You are the bow from whence your children as living arrows are sent forth?"

It came back to her now, "For even as He loves the arrow that flies, so He loves also the bow that is stable." And now, she knew it was she who had insisted their children's future belonged to them. And why.

She had paddled her two sons and daughters. They had cried because it had stung, but quickly recovered, as she knew they would. She had been holding the bow, poisoning the arrow, making them ready to go forth as living arrows.

The house was dark when she entered; the telephone was ringing. It was Mark, calling from New York.

"Hi," he said, "How's everything?"

"FINE, BUT I'LL be glad when you get back. I miss you."

"I miss you, too, that's why I'm calling. It looks as if I'm going to be tied up for another week. I wish you'd fly back and join me. Broadway shows, dinners out . . ."

"Sounds wonderful, Mark."

"Then you'll come? Call me as soon as you know when you'll get here. I'll be waiting."

Up the stairway she dashed, taking two at a time. From the shelf she took down her luggage, planning what she would take. She'd want that formal Mark liked best, her suit . . . Was that the telephone? How long had it been ringing?

"Hello," she said, still glancing at her luggage.

"Why haven't you called? We've been worried to death. We've tried and tried to get you, but your line has been busy."

"I WAS TALKING TO Mark, Mother. He's in New York on business, and I'm getting ready to pack and go to meet him. We're going to take in Broadway plays and . . ."

"You didn't tell us he was gone. You didn't even mention it. How soon are you leaving?"

"As soon as I can make a reservation."

"Well I guess we will manage somehow, it's only that . . ."

"What, Mother?"

"Nothing, dear, I don't want to worry you."

"Worry me about what?"

"MAYBE I SHOULD SORT of prepare you, though. Your father is having those chest pains again. He's acting like he did before that last attack, but we don't want to worry or burden you."

"It's only that one never knows, but I can call the paramedics if anything should happen. But go to New York. Have a good time. Neither of us would want to stand in your way."

"Call his doctor, Mother, I'll be there as soon as I make a telephone call."

"Such a shame for you to miss the trip. Maybe one of these days we'll be out of the way . . ."

"Don't talk like that," she said.

"Drive carefully," her mother said, and hung up.

FOR A LONG TIME she sat, holding the cold receiver in her hand grown suddenly numb. At her feet lay a piece of empty luggage. For one brief moment she thought she saw a fleeing arrow, but instead it was a rusty bow and broken arrow.

Her thoughts, typically, alternated between the biblical passages, "Honor thy father and mother" and " . . . shall leave thy father and mother and cleave unto . . ."

She reached back for the phone.

benefits, as well as to raise the retirement age. Any cut in benefits will mean that Congress is reversing gears after steadily expanding benefits, adding spouses' and survivors' benefits in 1939, disability insurance in 1954, Medicare in 1965, and the automatic cost-of-living increases in 1972.

Unlike Carter, Reagan has proposed actually taking some money away from people already drawing benefits. Carter wanted to phase out the minimum monthly benefit in the future, while Reagan wants to take it away from three million people drawing it. Pickle's subcommittee appears ready to make the cut, but not retroactively.

THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET Office has estimated that the Old Age and Survivors Insurance trust fund could run an accumulated deficit of $63.5 billion by 1986. It may have trouble paying benefits on time in late 1982 or 1983.

But the other two trust funds — Disability Insurance and Hospital Insurance — are running surpluses that the CBO predicts will reach $88 billion by 1986.

The system may be able to escape its current crunch if Congress simply passes legislation to allow borrowing among the three trust funds. Congress already shifted $9 billion from the disability to the old age fund in 1980 and 1981.

But congressional leaders and the Reagan administration are looking for solutions dealing with both Social Security's immediate problems and its long-range difficulties.

They insist they will not settle for a Band-Aid approach to Social Security's ailments. Instead, they want the nation — and politicians — to swallow some unpleasant medicine now to keep the system from hemorrhaging in the 21st century.

Social Security celebrated its 45th birthday last Aug. 14, a traditional milestone of middle age. The agency orchestrated a little fanfare, putting birthday posters in its 1,300 field offices and cranking out a torrent of press releases.

But it passed another milestone unnoticed in January that may have been even more significant: it paid out its one-trillionth dollar.

And while it took more than 40 years to distribute the first $1,000,000,000,000, Deputy Commissioner Robert Myers says it will be only five or six years before it passes the $2-trillion mark.

TODAY'S YOUNG AND middle-aged workers may be asked to work longer and will have to pay stiffer taxes over their working years to get benefits commensurate with what their parents and grandparents are getting.

Social Security has always operated on a pay-as-you-go basis, with today's workers paying the benefits that go to today's retirees and trusting that future generations of workers will provide their checks.

If Social Security were to attempt to become a fully funded pension plan only for those now 15 or older, its actuaries estimate that the trust funds would need $5.6 trillion in hand right now to meet their unfunded accrued liability. But that is not the way Social Security operates.

Social Security's actual outgo for the next 75 years is expected to exceed its income by an average of 1.52 percent of payroll. To wipe out that long-term deficit, the trust funds would need $1.5 trillion in hand right now. Alternatively, a deficit could be wiped out by changing the tax and benefit structure.

PICKLE POINTS OUT that the system has paid benefits on time every month "and it has not borrowed one dime from the general treasury."

Each 1 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index adds $1.4 billion a year to Social Security benefits.

"Even if the economy takes a turn for the better, this government has a responsibility to see to it that the Social Security funds are structured so that they are protected against economic buffeting seen and unforeseen, in the future," says Pickle.

Benefits not just for retired

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the third day of each month, nearly one in every six Americans gets a green Social Security check in the mail.

The system pays $11 billion each month to 36 million people — retirees, disabled workers, their families and survivors. It also collects taxes from 115 million workers and their employers to provide those benefits.

Many who get the tax-free checks are not senior citizens, but children and widows. One-third of all beneficiaries — 12 million — are under age 65, and 8.2 million are under age 62. About one in eight — 4.6 million — are children.

Here is a rundown on the primary benefits:

RETIREMENT workers can get early retirement checks at age 62 and full benefits at 65 if they work long enough under Social Security, and an aged spouse can draw an additional 50 percent. Those who retire at 62 get 80 percent of their full benefits.

To retire at 62 in 1981, a worker needs to have worked seven-and-a-half years under Social Security; by 1991, this requirement will be 10 years of coverage.

DISABILITY. Workers severely disabled before age 65 get disability checks if they have a physical or mental condition that prevents them from working and lasts at least 12 months, or is terminal. Checks start in the sixth month of disability. After two years, disabled workers get Medicare.

Workers 31 or older need to have worked five of the past 10 years to be protected against disability. Those 24 to 31 need to have worked half the time since their 21st birthday, and those under 24 need credit for one-and-a-half-year's work in the past three years.

MEDICARE pays hospital bills for up to 90 days for 25 million people over 65, 2.4 million disabled workers and 600,000 other disabled children and adults. For the first 60 days it pays all covered services except for the first $204. From the 61st through 90th day, Medicare patients must pay $51 a day themselves.

Most Medicare beneficiaries opt to pay monthly premiums of $9.60 for Supplementary Medical Insurance, which helps pay doctor bills. In July, this premium rises to $11.

SURVIVORS. When a worker dies, the family gets a $255 burial payment. Monthly benefits are paid to the dead worker's unmarried children under 18 (or under 22 if in college); to disabled children 18 or older; to a widow or widower caring for children under 18; to a widow or widower 60 or older; to a disabled widow or widower at 50, or to dependent aged parents.

DEPENDENTS. Retired or disabled workers' families also can get benefits. These go to spouses 62 or older; wives under 62 caring for children under 18 or disabled; unmarried children under 18 or under 22 if in college, and disabled children.

Social Security reduces benefits to those aged 65 through 71 by $1 for each $2 they earn above $5,500 a year. For those under 65, benefits are reduced if they earn above $4,080.

There is no limit on how much those 72 or older can earn. Starting Jan. 1, 1982, there will be no limit for those 70 and above, and those 65 through 69 will be able to earn $6,000 before losing benefits.

Workers earn one-quarter of Social Security coverage for each $310 earned, up to $1,240, or four quarters a year.

Workers and their employers pay a tax for 6.5 percent on earnings up to $29,700. The self-employed pay a tax of 9.3 percent.

SUPPORT GROUP LIFTS NEGATIVITY...

"Each one of the meditations builds upon the other," Mrs. Sills explained to Porrett and his wife Jan. "After two months you'll get tired of it but you've got to continue."

MEMBERS ARE ASKED to pay an orientation fee of $15 and $5 per session. But the Sills noted no one is turned away for lack of money.

Participants get a copy of the Simonton's book, "Getting Well Again," and receive other printed information, tapes and leaflets at the weekly meetings.

In addition to potluck dinners and a volunteer outreach program for persons unable to attend the meetings, the group offers a telephone hot line service.

After a brief private orientation, Porrett was ready to join the group. He colored his name tag with two hearts, laughing "I don't want to miss anything."

DURING THE SESSION, discussion centered on testimonial evidence of some victims who had experienced a remission of their cancer.

Applause broke out following a report from a doctor that one participant had taken control of her cancer.

"Most of the doctors don't give you much hope," said the 55-year-old Porrett, who has been given one to two years to live.

"You get a lot of messages that you don't have a lot of chances of living," said Mrs. Sills. "Victims not only have to get over their fears but they have to break through the negativity."

AFTER THE EXCHANGE of personal triumphs and problems with medical care, Bill Hart, who also serves as a co-leader for the group, directed the dozen participants through a relaxation exercise.

"We found that people in the group really need to deal with oncologists and other people so that they really are advocates for themselves," said Mrs. Sills, of the assertiveness training.

The end of the meeting is like the beginning. Lots of hugs.

"This is a very up experience," said one woman. "It makes me feel really good."

Bill Hart, Huntington Beach, wants hugs... so he can ward off 'recurrence of cancer'

Alcoholism benefit on the rocks

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

David Larson is looking for 360 more people to have dinner with actor Dana Andrews at the Anaheim Marriott Hotel.

Andrews, who has performed in more than 70 films including "The Best Years of Our Lives" which won nine Academy Awards, is scheduled to speak Saturday at a $50-a-plate dinner to raise funds for the National Council on Alcoholism's Orange County unit.

Ten thousand invitations to the dinner were mailed out, said Larson, who is executive director of the Orange County council, "to every doctor, every lawyer, every judge . . . and 2,000 businesses."

Returns on reservations have been disappointing, though, he noted. "As of now, 140 are coming and that isn't going to pay for the invitations."

Larson is puzzled about the low reservation rate.

"We are putting on a $50-a-plate dinner and we have no one coming to it . . . yet a Republican fund-raiser for $500 a person would have hundreds of people."

To publicize the dinner, the council held a press luncheon in Santa Ana last week at which Andrews, who is a recovering alcoholic, said a major problem facing the council is making the public aware that alcoholism is the No. 1 disease in the United States.

"It's ruining a lot of lives," he said, "and it's costing us $60 billion a year."

The actor, who stars with Cliff Robertson in a movie called "The Pilot" to be released later this year, said he spent at least $250,000 on psychiatry until he learned his real problem was alcoholism.

Dinner chairman Harriet Watson said reservations can be made by calling 835-3830.

Dinner chairman Harriet Watson chats with actor Dana Andrews about benefit.

Angels make Fregosi appear like managerial genius with 15-1 pounding of Detroit

By JOHN SEVANO

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Just after the conclusion of Saturday night's game between the Angels and Detroit, Fred Lynn poked his head in Manager Jim Fregosi's office, handed him a piece of paper and said, "Here, Jim, I heard you didn't have one of these."

The piece of paper turned out to be an itinerary of the Angels' upcoming road trip.

Actually, if the Angels could play all their games like they did Saturday night at Anaheim Stadium, Fregosi wouldn't have to worry where his next paycheck was coming from.

The Angels, with Fregosi's future dangling on a tight rope, exploded for a season-high in home runs, peppering the Tigers, 15-1, before a delighted house of 32,040.

"I told the guys that if they played real good tomorrow I could make the road trip with them," Fregosi said with a smile. "I managed good tonight. I kept Lynn on the bench and had the best club on the field."

Needless to say, Fregosi was in a good mood and so was the club. It had been a long time since they enjoyed a laughter of this sort.

The Angels, whose previous high for home runs in a game this season was back on April 11 when Lynn hit a solo and Tom Brunansky (no longer with the club) a pair, saw four members of the team flex their muscles during Saturday's home run derby.

Bobby Clark, making only his fifth start, opened the barrage by sending an opposite field home run over the right field wall in the second inning. Brian Downing followed with his shot to left in the fifth. And Don Baylor and Bobby Grich closed out the long ball contest with blasts in the sixth.

Everyone in the starting lineup except Rick Burleson scored once, and everyone in the starting lineup, except Dan Ford, had at least one hit. Clark contributed five RBI with Grich and Baylor added three each.

It was owner Gene Autry who indicated Thursday it was up to the manager, referring to Fregosi, to make things happen; that he shouldn't be afraid to try something new.

Well, nothing Fregosi did Saturday was new, but it sure looked like a different Angels ball club.

Rather than playing for the big inning, Fregosi had his players moving runners over with sacrificing bunts, stealing bases, bunting for base hits and knocking infielders over and breaking up double plays.

In other words, the Angels were finally living up to their preseason billing.

"The things that are critical are W's," expounded Fregosi. "We haven't been executing badly. We just haven't gotten the hits when we needed them."

Downing, who was on base five times and scored on four occasions, went as far as to say the final Yankee game, in which the Angels beat Tommy John, 2-1, was more important than the explosion against the Tigers.

"One game doesn't mean anything," said Downing, who returned to his familiar spot behind the plate Saturday. "Let's just say it's a start."

Asked if the lopsided victory helped ease the pressure of the Fregosi situation, Downing's face began to frown.

"I don't even understand why it's happening," he said of Fregosi's possible dismissal. "It's all a bunch of garbage as far as I'm concerned. If John McGraw had been the manager it wouldn't have made any difference. You can't win if you don't hit."

"This isn't a base-stealing ball club," added Downing. "And you can't play hit-and-run when you don't have runners on base. We're going to start hitting. We've shown signs of that over the last 10 days. People just have to be patient. They ought to hang loose a little longer."

The Tigers scored first as they scratched for a run on a pair of singles and a walk off winning pitcher Geoff Zahn, 4-3, in the second inning.

But the Angels came back with two runs in their half of the second, two more in the third and one in the fifth before making a shambles of the contest by scoring five times in the sixth and eighth frames.

"I was wild to start off tonight," said Zahn. "I pitched batting practice the other day to keep myself in shape. I started wild but told myself to keep the ball down and get it over."

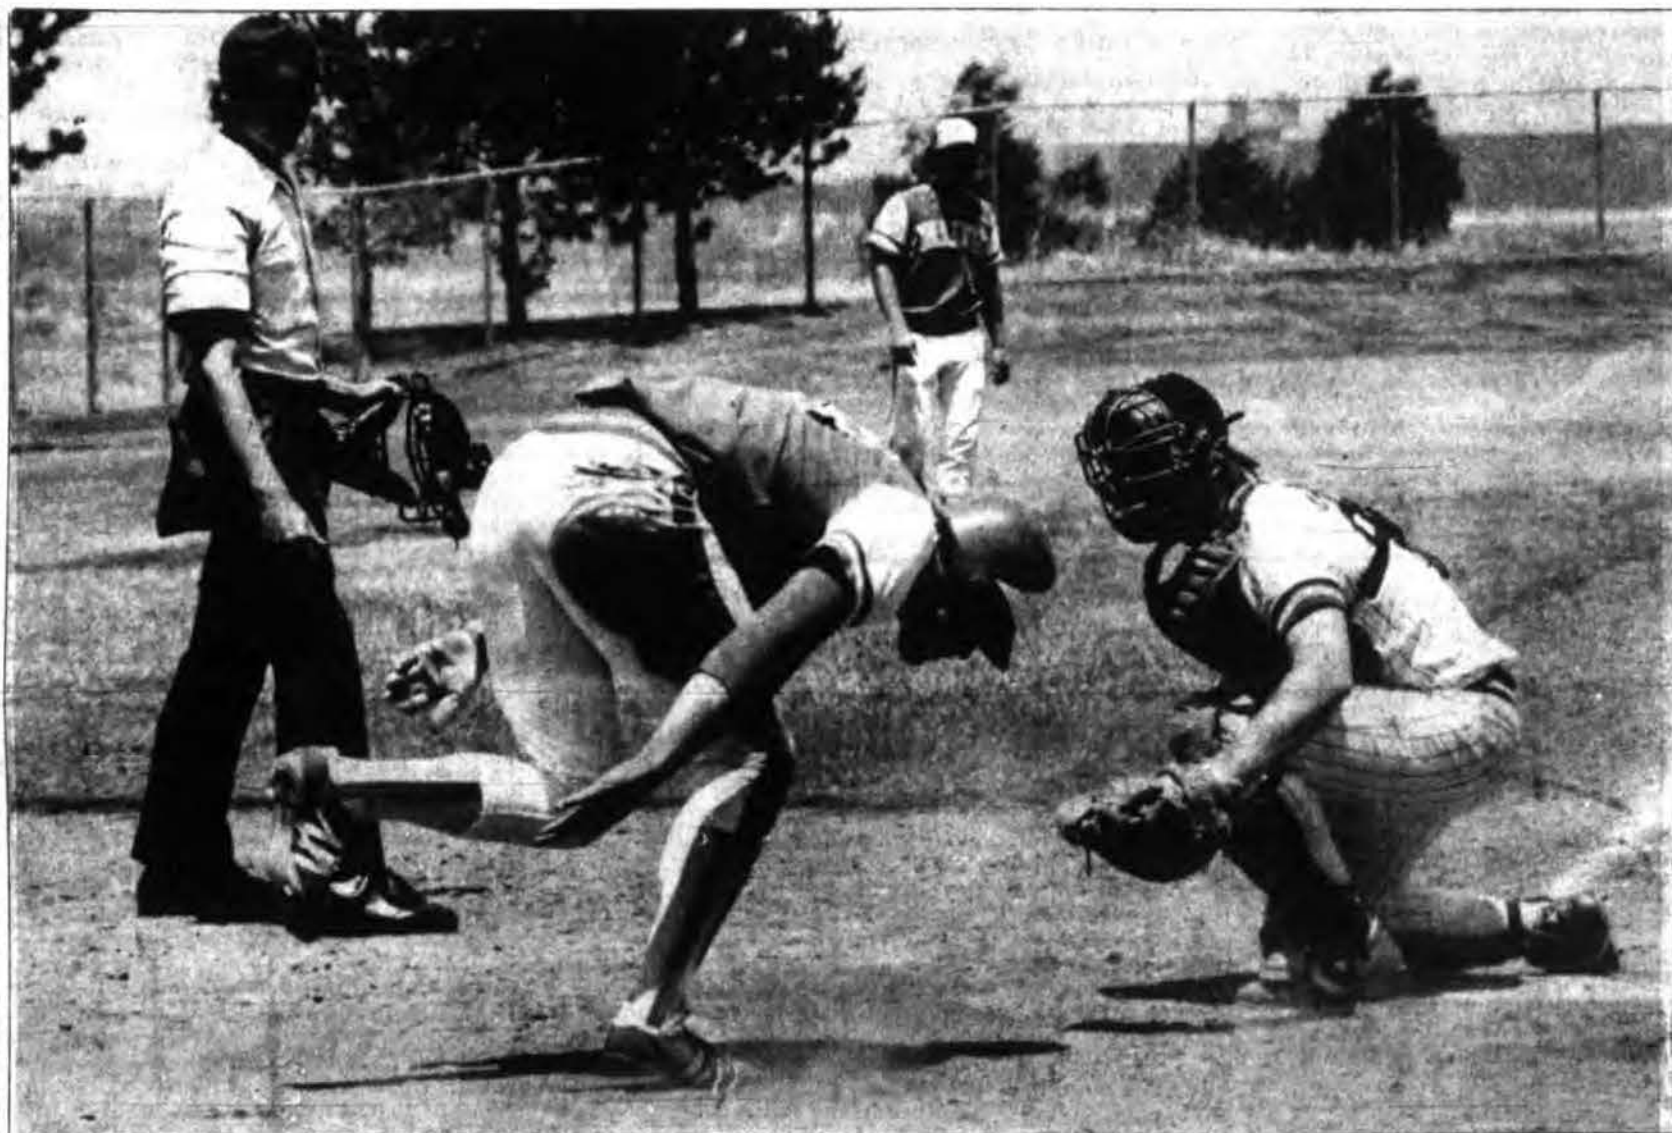

"They (Zahn's teammates) finally figured out how many runs I need to win. Those two and three-run games just don't do it."

By winning, the Angels were able to stay only 10 games behind the Western Division-leading Oakland A's.

Clark indicated that the Angels should benefit from more than just the physical explosion of the win.

"Confidence is what you need mentally, not physically," said Clark. "Tonight will help that."

"We can't let outside distractions bother us. We (See ANGELS, Page B2)

Mets' Taveras clicks, Dodgers tumble, 7-4

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Taveras had the satisfaction of driving in his first runs of the season, which helped the New York Mets down the Dodgers 7-4 Saturday.

Taveras has been riding the bench with Bob Bailor taking over his position. But Met manager Joe Torre insists Taveras is still his regular shortstop. Taveras has no objection to taking a seat on the bench.

"I've been bothered with asthma lately and a little rest has helped me," he said. "Besides this team has 25 players and we're all trying our best to get into a winning pattern."

Taveras had been in 18 games prior to Saturday without driving in a run. But he broke loose in the second inning with a triple to deep center, driving in two runs. That helped the Mets take a 4-1 lead.

Pedro Guerrero's second home run of the game, a two-run shot in the eighth off Met reliever Neil Allen, tied the score at 4-4.

But the Mets came back against reliever Bobby Castillo, 0-4. A walk to Hubie Brooks and singles by Rusty Staub and Alex Trevino gave the Mets a 5-4 lead. A fielder's choice and an error by third baseman Ron Cey let in the second run of the inning and Taveras' sacrifice fly drove in the third.

Allen, 2-0, got the victory with Jeff Reardon gaining his first save of the season.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the first when Davey Lopes stroked his second homer of the season.

The Mets scored two runs in the bottom of the first. Mookie Wilson singled, stole second and went to third on a throwing error by Dodger catcher Steve Yeager. He scored on Joel Youngblood's single. Brooks' sacrifice fly gave the Mets a 2-1 lead.

The Mets boosted their lead to 4-1 in the second on singles by Flynn and starting pitcher Dave Roberts and a two-run triple by Taveras.

Guerrero hit his first homer in the fourth to make it 4-2.

The Dodgers get a day off following today's final of a 10-game, 10-day, 3-city road trip before hosting Montreal, the New York Mets and Philadelphia, all three-game series, beginning Tuesday evening at Dodger Stadium.

Surf provides all of the fireworks, 2-1

Special to the Daily Pilot

SAN DIEGO — A fireworks spectacular attracted more than 40,000 soccer fans to Jack Murphy Stadium here Saturday night, but it was the California Surf which lit the first match.

With Craig Allen scoring both goals, the second with less than three minutes remaining on the clock, the Surf downed the host San Diego Sockers, 2-1 for their fourth straight victory and first under interim coach Laurie Calloway.

Calloway, who replaced Peter Wall last week when Wall resigned after two seasons as the Surf coach, watched Steve Moyers pass to Allen who headed a shot past Socker goalkeeper Volkmer Gross at 87:43 to record the victory.

The win moved the Surf into first place in the NASL's West Division with 39 points, one better than the Sockers.

"Craig has tremendous talent," noted a happy Calloway after the game. "He's not even fully fit and he gave San Diego fits all night," he quipped.

Actually, the winning goal was the result of a lot of hard work from the Surf's Mark Lindsay. Lindsay got the ball in his own end, raced straight up the middle of the field and then fired a shot from 20 yards out.

Gross went down to block it, but the ball bounced off his body to Moyers who set up Allen.

Allen scored earlier at 30:35 to give the Surf a 1-0 lead. But the Sockers' Nico Rohmann countered at 56:02.

"It was a little tense out there at first," Calloway admitted, referring to his first game as the Surf's coach in charge. "But then, the adrenalin starting flowing and everything was fine."

Celtics' defense just too much

Boston tramples Houston, 94-71

HOUSTON (AP) — "Defense wins championships," said Rick Robey, Boston's reserve center, and the Celtics played defense like champions Saturday.

Boston tied a National Basketball Association championship series record by limiting Houston to 71 points and, with Cedric Maxwell scoring 19 and Chris Ford 17, breezed to a 94-71 victory over the Rockets Saturday for a 2-1 lead in the playoff final.

There have been lower scoring games in the playoffs, but never in the title series.

"HOUSTON HAD some tough luck on its shooting," Celtics Coach Bill Fitch said of the Rockets, who made a just 30 percent of their field goal attempts. "But our guys really put the defense down. You saw a pretty good defensive clinic out there today."

Fitch singled out Robey for his job off the bench after Robert Parish, Boston's starting center, got in early foul trouble. Parish played just 13 minutes and scored 11 points, while Robey played a solid 31 minutes, scoring 11 points and grabbing six rebounds.

"The job Robey did today, that's what winning is all about," said Fitch. "He came off the bench and did everything we asked of him."

But Robey was eager to share the credit.

"We were all mentally ready to play, everybody on this team," said Robey. "Everyone was tuned in together and that's what it takes, especially for a great defense."

THE 71 POINTS scored by Houston equalled the fewest in a playoff game since the introduction of the 24-second shot clock in 1954. Syracuse scored 71 in a 74-71 loss to Fort Wayne in a game played at Indianapolis on April 7, 1955.

"We got out of the gate pretty well, but after that we just didn't get the job done," said Rockets Coach Del Harris. "We missed some shots, our ballhandling was sloppy, we weren't as alert mentally as we have been and the whole thing had a snowballing effect."

Harris said things will be different today in the fourth game the best-of-seven series.

"We'll come back," he promised. "This team hasn't quit all year and is not about to quit now. Tomorrow will be a different game."

After today, the series shifts back to Boston for Game Five Tuesday night.

THE CELTICS took control early, outscoring Houston 31-11 in a 14-11 span of the first half to take a 41-30 lead at halftime. The Rockets' 30 points was the fewest scored by a team in any half during the 1981 playoffs, and half of them were scored by center Moses Malone.

Through the first quarter before Robert Parish scored on a dunk to start Boston's big surge. Ford scored nine points and Maxwell eight as the Celtics raced to a 39-22 lead with 4:29 to go in the second period.

Six free throws by Malone helped Houston close to within 11 at halftime.

The Rockets managed just three field goals and a total of 13 points in the second quarter, shooting 3-for-17 from the field.

Boston widened its advantage to 21 points late in the third period and led by as many as 25 in the fourth quarter of the lopsided game.

Gambler golfer irked over tourney ban

From AP dispatches
LAS VEGAS The $22,000 he had bet on his own golf tournament was of no real concern to Doyle "Texas Dolly" Brunson. After all, this is a man who once three-putted a hole to lose $186,000 to a fellow gambler.

What was bothering Brunson was that the 40 pro golfers in his Doyle Brunson Match Play Championship were playing for only a $50,000 first prize instead of a proposed $350,000 winner's share. What bothered him even more was PGA Commissioner Dean Beman's edict to tour members to stay away from the gambler's tournament.

"We would have had a million dollar purse this year instead of $200,000 if we would have had the tour players," Brunson said. "And we had the players too until he stopped it. I think we scared him because we were becoming too successful."

Tour players or not, tournament winner Mike Wiebe, an aspiring young California professional who's played mostly on mini-tours, earned a cool $50,000 for the match play victory on Friday.

If the stakes seem high for such a small tournament, there's a reason. All the players had to buy their way in and at $5,000 apiece, the tournament had a ready-made $200,000 purse.

Quote of the day

"I came out of it with a broken neck, scratched spinal cord, broken breastbone and broken ribs. Going to the hospital, the ambulance was going about 100 mph and blew a tire and went off the road. It was all kind of disheartening." — Auto race driver Brian Redman, describing a 1977 accident.

Dotterer puts Stanford in playoffs

STANFORD — Former Edison High star Mike Dotterer's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the eighth inning scored Phil Wilson with the run that gave Stanford an 8-7 victory over California Saturday in Pac-10 baseball.

The victory assured the Cardinals of second place behind Arizona State and a playoff spot in the Pac-10's Southern Division.

North Stars go for Stanley Cup

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Two third-period goals by rookie Brad Palmer locked up Minnesota's 5-3 victory over Calgary Saturday night and propelled the North Stars into the National Hockey League Stanley Cup finals for the first time ever.

The North Stars, who defeated the Flames four games to two, will play the defending champion New York Islanders for the coveted title.

Palmer's first goal came short-handed at 14:09 to give the North Stars a 4-1 cushion. Ken Houston scored for Calgary 58 seconds later, but Palmer then drilled a slapshot from the left faceoff circle at 18:40 for a 5-2 advantage.

Steve Payne broke open a 2-1 contest with a power play goal at 5:59 of the final period. With Calgary's Bob Murdoch off for elbowing, Payne took a centering pass from Bobby Smith in front of the Flames net and tapped the puck past Riggin.

The North Stars took a 1-0 lead on Al MacAdam's power play goal at 13:52 of the first period. Just 12 seconds after Calgary's Bob Gould was whistled for interference, Brad Maxwell fired a shot from the Minnesota blue line and Payne deflected the puck to MacAdam, who tapped it past the sprawled Riggin.

The North Stars and Islanders will play Tuesday and Thursday at the Nassau Coliseum at Uniondale, N.Y. The third and fourth games of the championship series will be played at the Met Center on Sunday, May 17, and Tuesday, May 19.

Bench bangs out No. 385

Johnny Bench belted a milestone homer and George Foster knocked in two runs with a double to lead Cincinnati to a 9-5 National League victory over Houston Saturday. It was Bench's 385th career homer, tying him with Yogi Berra for 29th place on the all-time list. Unbeaten Steve Carlton was tagged for nine hits, but struck out 11 in recording his sixth victory of the year as Philadelphia defeated San Diego, 9-6.

Bill North drove in six runs, four on his first career grand slam homer, to power San Francisco to an 8-2 triumph over Montreal. Rookie right-hander Andy Rincon and veteran lefty Bob Sykes teamed on a six-hit shutout and Rincon and Tom Herr knocked in three runs apiece to lead St. Louis to a 13-0 rout over Pittsburgh.

Steve Henderson drilled a two-run homer and Bill Buckner drove in two runs with a pair of hits as the Chicago Cubs trimmed Atlanta, 7-3. The victory was only the Cubs' fifth in 24 games this season while Atlanta's three-game winning streak was ended.

Davis' day in court may last for months

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Al Davis, who has been trying since early last year to move his Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles, finally gets his day in court.

Actually, "day" is a misnomer, because the anti-trust suit litigation, in which the Oakland Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission have joined forces against the National Football League, will undoubtedly last at least several weeks, or perhaps even months.

The L.A. Coliseum Commission sued the NFL in 1978, after the Los Angeles Rams announced their intentions to move to Anaheim, some 35 miles to the south. The move was made last fall.

THE RAIDERS joined the Coliseum Commission early last year after Davis, the club's managing general partner, announced plans to move his franchise to Los Angeles, and the NFL turned thumbs down.

The much-delayed trial begins Monday in the court of U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson, who has been trying for months to affect an out-of-court settlement that hasn't been successful.

Pregerson has been promoted to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal, but will hear this case because it began under his jurisdiction.

"We're very pleased it's coming to court," said Jay Moyer, the NFL counsel. "This is truly a matter of principle."

"ANY TIME a club is part of a league, it makes a commitment to make and live by rules," he added, referring to the NFL's "governance" principle. "There's one product which everybody shares. One member cannot dictate to the others. In our opinion, that's what the Oakland Raiders are trying to do."

"And the Raiders have had 110 percent support from fans."

Football debts total $500,000

DALLAS (AP) — The University of Houston is almost two months behind in paying off about $500,000 in debts incurred during the 1980 football season, a Dallas newspaper reported Saturday.

The debts include a split of gate receipts to visiting teams and television income from the regional telecast of the Houston-Rice football game. The Dallas Morning News said.

Three-year-olds go for big money

INGLEWOOD — The richest race for three-year-old fillies ever run in the West is scheduled today at Hollywood Park as 11 are entered to compete in the second California Miss Sires Stakes.

If all 11 go to the post, the event will be worth $203,392, with the winning owner to collect $135,892.

Ten of the 11 entrants were assigned 114 pounds, with Past Forgetting, who figures as the favorite, assigned 116 pounds for the 1-1/16 mile event.

A wall can't stop Foyt

He has early pole position

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A.J. Foyt shook off a brush with the wall and took a tentative hold on the pole position Saturday when rain halted the opening session of qualifying for the 65th running of the $1.5 million auto racing classic.

Early morning rains soaked the Indianapolis Motor Speedway track and delayed the start of the first of four sessions of time trials for about 4 1/2 hours.

Foyt, 46, was the second driver onto the 2 1/2-mile oval when it was finally opened for qualifying. He responded with an opening lap of 198.369 mph and a four-lap average of 196.078.

IT WOULD HAVE been higher, but the Texan tagged the wall hard with the right-side tires on his open-wheel Coyote as he headed for the second turn on his final lap, cutting the speed on that trip around to Speedway to 193.257 mph.

There were only eight other qualifiers for the 33-car field before the expected rain blew over the sprawling Speedway 15 minutes before the scheduled closing time of 6 p.m.

Every car in line at the end of that session is entitled to a chance at the pole position during today's qualifying period, or the next session of time trials if Sunday is rained out.

That lineup includes two-time Indy winner Bobby Unser, whose 199.510 mph lap on Friday was the fastest of the week in practice, as well as Mario Andretti, Rick Mears and Gordon Johncock, who also were well over 190 mph in practice.

FOYT SAID HE was thinking about those other drivers when he bumped the wall. "I was trying as hard as I could," he said. "That damn Bobby Unser made me hit the fence down there."

"I knew what Bobby and Rick Mears and Mario Andretti and Gordon Johncock all were running, and I was just trying a little too hard."

"I knew I fell down and I said, 'I'll make it up.' It's a shame. I almost did."

"But I like to go through that fence out there," added Foyt, trying for his fourth Indy pole. "I thought I was in deep trouble. I didn't know whether to shut it down or get going down the backstretch."

"I thought, 'What if the tire blows?' But I figured it might rain, and I just thought I'd try."

THE SECOND FASTEST qualifier of the day was defending polesitter and race winner Johnny Rutherford, who ran his yellow Chaparral through the four laps at 195.387 mph. Indy rookie Bill Alsup, a road racing veteran who this year joined Unser and Mears on the prestigious Penske team, tentatively took the No. 3 spot in the lineup with a four-lap average of 193.154 mph.

Track standouts at UCLA today

Nehemiah, Foster renew an old rivalry in the hurdles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The renewal of a somewhat mellowed rivalry between high hurdlers Renaldo Nehemiah and Greg Foster will be among the highlights of today's UCLA-Pepsi track meet.

Nehemiah set the world record of 13.00 seconds in the 110-meter hurdles in the meet two years ago but lost to Foster in the 1980 meet at UCLA's Drake Stadium.

Previously, the two have taken verbal swipes at each other on occasion, but that apparently is finished.

"We're much more friendly now," Foster said. But he added that he was anticipating Sunday's duel, saying, "I am ready and really looking forward to it."

In the loss last year, Nehemiah was running just his second race after coming back from a lengthy layoff with an ankle injury.

Also expected to compete is high school distance star Jon Butler from Edison High in Huntington Beach.

Also on tap for the meet is a men's 100-meter dash featuring James Sanford and Stanley Floyd, and the women's 100, where Evelyn Ashford will face a field that includes Alice Brown.

The meet, which has produced some world records in the past, will also have an outstanding mile field — including Steve Scott, John Walker and Eamonn Coghlan.

The meeting between Sanford, the world's top-rated sprinter in 1979, and Floyd, No. 1 in 1980, will be their first outdoors this year. Also in the field are Ron Brown of Arizona State and Eric Brown of UCLA.

"You can't anticipate a record, but I'm sure it will fall later in the season," Sanford said when asked about a possible world standard. "Everything has to be just right."

A redshirt this season at Southern Cal, Sanford was clocked in 10.02 seconds at this meet in 1980, the best 100 meters ever at sea level. He also had a wind-aided 9.88 in last year's UCLA-Southern Cal dual meet.

Ashford, who sustained a leg injury that knocked her out for the season at this meet last year, is coming off a good indoor campaign and plans also to run the 400 meters at the meet.

Her goal, she said, is simply "to run better than ever before," and she feels she has a chance to break the women's 100 and 200 world record time of 10.88 and 21.77. She holds the American records of 10.97 and 21.83.

Pessimism for baseball still there

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations between representatives for baseball owners and the players association will resume Monday after a two-week layoff, with neither side optimistic that a settlement of the major issues will be reached before May 29.

On that date, the players have threatened to go on strike if a settlement of the compensation for free agent issue is not reached. The only compensation awarded now to a team losing a free agent is a draft choice. The owners are seeking what they feel would be a more equitable form of compensation.

"I'm not optimistic," said Ray Grebey, the chief negotiator for team owners. "A year ago, I said there would not be a strike. I had the sense of the bargaining — the issues and how they could be dealt with. This time I don't know whether the players will strike."

Marvin Miller, the executive director of the players' union, told The New York Times he wondered just what the owners were doing recently to curb the rash of million-dollar salaries. The owners claim they can't pay the players such large sums but continue to make such offers anyway.

"In the last month or so," said Miller, "21 clubs have signed 48 players to new contracts — large multiyear, guaranteed contracts, none of which had to be signed now. I'm talking about contracts for players who can't be free agent for two years, or whose present contracts wouldn't be up until as late as 1984."

Miller might have been referring to players like Dennis Leonard of Kansas City, who recently signed with the Royals for five years at a reported $900,000 per season, and Mike Norris of Oakland, who signed a five-year deal that could earn him as much as $1 million per year.

"I can't figure it out," said Miller. "We talk about compensation and the impact it would have on the salary structure and then we look what they've done in the last few months."

Ali donating $400,000 for reward

ATLANTA (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali announced Saturday he is donating $400,000 to a reward fund for information leading to arrest of a killer in the slayings of 26 young blacks.

Ali's gift, the largest individual donation the city has received in connection with the 22-month string of slayings, raised the reward fund from $100,000 to $500,000.

"It seems as though somebody should know something or should be looking harder," Ali said at a news conference. "I think it's a disgrace to people of our stature to only gather $100,000 to capture the killer of our children."

Mayor Maynard Jackson predicted that Ali's donation would "shake the tree in a way the reward fund has not accomplished to date."

City officials have said the money is available to any person who offers information leading to the arrest and conviction.

Riggs team tops women in exhibition

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — Veteran male tennis stars Bobby Riggs and Pancho Segura defeated a pair of young women pros, Kate Latham and Stacy Margolin, 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 in an exhibition match at the Palm Springs Tennis Club Saturday night.

Riggs, 63, and Segura, 60, earned $10,000 by virtue of their victory in what had been billed as "The Chauvinist Doubles Match."

Latham, 27, of San Francisco, and Margolin, 22, of Los Angeles, divided $5,000. The match was played before about 1,000 fans.

Later, Riggs said he and Segura are now ready to take on any of the Women's Tennis Association's standout doubles teams in the next phase of what he called "the great Riggsby series."

Riggs, a former Champion at Wimbledon in singles, doubles and mixed doubles, faced Billie Jean King in a $150,000 exhibition match at Houston's Astrodome in 1973. King won and women's tennis got a big boost.

Dibbs, Kirmayr to meet for T of C crown

Emerson, Pawsat ousted at Park Newport; Chris Evert a winner

From AP dispatchers

Surprising Carlos Kirmayr of Brazil, winning in two sets for the first time, crushed fifth-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-2, 6-4 Sunday to move into the final of the Tournament of Champions against Eddie Dibbs.

Dibbs ousted Victor Pecci of Paraguay 7-6, 6-3 in the other semifinal at Forest Hills. The winner of today's nationally televised final (ABC, 10:30 a.m.) will collect $100,000 and, to honor Mother's Day, a fur coat for his mother. The runner-up gets $40,000.

Kirmayr, who needed three sets in each of his first three victories — staving off seven match points along the way — shocked Fibak by using serve-and-volley tactics, coming to the net at every chance. Fibak, ranked 12th in the world, captured the opening game at love, then broke immediately to go up 2-0.

IN PERUGIA, ITALY, topped-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd beat fellow American Sandy Collins 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals of the Perugia Open women's tennis championship.

Lloyd's victory in the 59-minute match moved her into today's championship match against Virginia Ruzici of Romania.

Ruzici beat Joyce Portman of the United States 6-2, 6-1 in the semifinals Saturday. Collins played hard and defended herself well at first.

IN TOKYO, AMERICAN Ann Kiyomura and Briton Sue Barber will meet Sharon Walsh and Barbara Potter of the United States scored victories to gain today's final in the Bridgestone Women's Doubles Tennis Championships.

Kiyomura and Barker, runnersup in the 1980 Bridgestone tournament, beat Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith, 1980 French Open and Wimbledon doubles champion of the United States, 6-1, 7-6.

Walsh and Potter, seeded No. 3, stopped top-seeded Rosie Casals of the United States and Wendy Turnbull of Australia 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

The finalists will meet for the tourney's top prize of $50,000 with the winners earning $25,000 each. The second-place finishers get $14,000 each.

A true free spirit is someone who lets life dictate its destiny. Craig Zaltosky is one of these individuals.

A safety on the Orange Coast College football teams of 1970 and '71, Zaltosky's wild and crazy style of play brought about many memorable moments.

Zaltosky, despite his 5-7, 155-pound frame, was fearless when it came to the gridiron. He could dish it out with the best of them. And, when a spark was needed, Zaltosky usually supplied it.

Like in the Santa Ana game of '71 when he took the opening kickoff and rambled 97 yards for a touchdown — an OCC record — in the Pirates' 44-6 rout.

Or the following week, against Cerritos, when he returned a punt 68 yards for a TD during a 41-21 OCC victory.

As a defensive back, Zaltosky was like a gnat, he was seemingly everywhere as he roamed freely throughout the defensive secondary. In one game — against San Diego Mesa of 1970 — he picked off six passes. Many who witnessed the game said it could have been more.

For Zaltosky, just playing the game was fun and he carried that cavalier enthusiasm for life both on and off the field.

"I've played it probably like I lived," says Zaltosky recalling his collegiate days at OCC and later Stanford. "I was kind of going full speed ahead all the time."

"In my life I've tried to experience a lot of different things."

Zaltosky is still experimenting, even to this day. Upon his graduation from Stanford in 1973, he spent the majority of his time circling the globe.

"I drove around Europe, hitch hiked across the U.S., went to Hawaii, and traveled around Mexico. I lived in the Islands (Hawaii) for a long time. I guess I spent most of my time west of (Pacific) Coast Highway."

When Zaltosky was east of Coast Highway, he made those moments count too.

As a matter of fact he is still near the top of many of OCC's record charts, including most interceptions over two years — 17, which heads the list; most interceptions in a single season — 11, No. 1 on the chart; most punt returns in a two-year career — 59 for 11.5 average, No. 4 on the chart; and most punt returns in a single season — 30 in 1971 and 29 in '70, ranking him fifth and sixth in that statistic, respectively.

"I guess you could say I was reckless on the football field," says Zaltosky, who at 28, works at a restaurant in Dana Point.

"I was never worried about getting hurt or anything like that. I always looked at myself as the same size as everyone else. When the ball was in the air I felt I had as much right to it as anybody."

"I knew how it take care of myself on the football field."

After graduating from OCC, Zaltosky finished his career at Stanford, where his most vivid memory was a thumping he and his teammates received by the Wolverines at Michigan as a junior.

It was Orange Coast that Zaltosky liked best though. He liked the program, he liked the fact his teammates were winners (6-3 in '70, 7-2-1 and South Coast champs in '72) and, most of all, he liked the people.

"The most important thing in life to me are my friends. . . and I met a lot of friends at Orange Coast," says Zaltosky. "I got along real well with Mr. (Dick) Tucker when I was there. He was nice to me and I was nice to him."

"I also enjoyed playing under (coach) Jack Fair. I used to always call him 'happy Jack,' because he definitely had a temper."

Today, Zaltosky's free spirit and competitive juices are still flowing. He enjoys his care-free existence and even jokes about it by saying, "Maybe I'll get a real job someday."

As for what he intends on doing in the future, Zaltosky just shakes his head.

"I don't know, maybe I just hear a different drummer," is what he says. "Every time I think about it I go surfing. One of these days something has to bend."

Rustlers, Gauchos tripped in baseball

Both Golden West and Saddleback colleges were brought back down to earth with conference baseball losses Saturday, but for the Rustlers, the defeat was particularly painful.

By losing a 9-5 decision to visiting Santa Monica, Coach Fred Hoover's Rustlers find themselves back in a tie for first place in the Southern Cal Conference's second round play with LA Harbor which got past LA Southwest, 7-5.

Meanwhile, at Citrus, the Owls stopped Saddleback, 8-1, but the Gauchos have already wrapped up the Mission Conference's Southern Division title.

At GWC, the Corsairs snapped the Rustlers' six-game winning streak. Despite pounding out 13 hits, the Rustlers did not score in double figures for the first time in six games.

Hayes is OK after surgery

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Former Ohio State football Coach Woody Hayes was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday following surgery to remove his gall bladder.

Hayes, 68, who has been suffering from a persistent chest cold, checked himself into Ohio State University Hospital late Wednesday afternoon for treatment.

Doctors later discovered Hayes had gall stones, hospital spokeswoman Nancy Grover said.

Hayes's condition also was complicated by bronchitis.

Hayes has been a professor emeritus in the university's Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation since being fired as coach following the 1979 Gator Bowl.

UCI splits; Titans take SCBA title

UC Irvine scored four times in the final inning to pull out a 10-9 victory over visiting Cal State Fullerton Saturday and gain a split of their Southern California Baseball Association double-header.

The Titans clinched the SCBA title in the first game with a 14-10 victory, despite a 6-for-6 performance by the Anteaters' Dave Glick.

Fullerton put the first game away in the first three innings behind an eight-run outburst. The Titans' Mike Rubel and Jerald Traylor connected for home runs, but the game was mainly a contest of errors.

In all, seven fielding miscues marred the game, resulting in five unearned CSF runs and five unearned runs for the Anteaters.

While Glick had six hits, teammate Carson Carroll was 3-for-5 with three RBI.

UCI's Dirk Wietstock suffered the defeat, his fourth against seven victories while the Titans' Tim Thompson improved his record to 6-0. Thompson went the distance, despite allowing the Anteaters seven runs in the final three innings.

In the second game, Carson Carroll's bases-loaded grounder in the bottom of the seventh inning with the bases loaded hit the bag and caromed through the legs of Titans' third baseman Rubel to bring home two runs and give the Anteaters a split.

The Anteaters weathered a big day by Titan catcher Mark Pirucello who slammed two homers and a double, good for six of his team's nine RBI.

Dave Woodhead, who relieved starter John LeClerc in the second, picked up the victory, his fourth against the same number of defeats.

With the split, UCI is now 29-21 overall, 11-13 in the SCBA.

Playoffs reward for FV

It took nine innings in the final game of the Sunset League baseball campaign Saturday night, but the Fountain Valley Barons finally secured a CIF 4-A playoff berth as Tim Martino came through with a single to left field to score the winning run in a 6-5 decision over Huntington Beach.

The victory at Mile Square Park leaves the Barons alone in third place in the final standings, while Huntington Beach finishes in fourth place, two games behind Fountain Valley.

Other stars for the winners included Roger Muscente (3-for-5), Dean Roberts (2-for-4 with a triple), Mike Wagner (2-for-3) and Steve Jongeward, who also had a three-bagger for Fountain Valley.

Huntington Beach had its stars, too, including Ricky Carrillo (3-for-5 with two doubles), Vince Cooney (2-for-4) and Brian Beard (2-for-4).

Also in a night game to finish out Sunset League action was Edison, which finished a game behind champion Westminster after putting Marina away, 3-1, at Blair Field in Long Beach.

It was Edison's 10th straight win and ups the Chargers' overall record to 21-4.

Brian Olson was the hard-luck loser for Marina as the Chargers got to him for three runs in the third inning — and that was just about the extent of the Edison attack.

After designated hitter Ron Morello singled and stole second, Tom Hill followed with an RBI single and went to third on an error.

Mike Carozza tripled to score Hill and came in to score when Mike DeBenon got a base hit.

Marina's only scoring punch came in the sixth inning as Bobby Grandstaff homered over the left-center fence to spoil Robb Munson's shutout bid.

Olson mowed down the final 14 Edison batters with only one reaching first by a walk — and he was promptly thrown out trying to steal.

Urban cowboys

Western wear now rage from coast to coast

Of the Daily Pilot Staff

It wasn't so long ago that cowboy boots and Stetsons were for red-necks and truck drivers and others of their ilk.

Now all that's changed as wearing Western has become the rage from coast to coast in both the city and the country.

The Western look has made a definite impact on the fashion scene this year, thanks at least partially to actor John Travolta's "Urban Cowboy" and to singer Willie Nelson's ever-increasing popularity.

Going country is becoming respectable with some stores even turning over their major merchandising focus to the Western look.

What used to be called blue-jeans, shortened to just plain jeans in recent years, are selling like hotcakes as age-plaid shirts, straw hats and other cowboy-type hats, cowboy boots and all the accessories such as the big-buckled belts.

More and more fashion-conscious folks of all ages are rediscovering the cowboy and cowgirl mystique.

According to Steve Eldridge, young men's buyer for Mervyn's stores, "Western typifies the lifestyle in America, very relaxed and easy going."

Eldridge noted that in addition to the western movies and increasing popularity of country music, the television series, "Dallas," also has had a notable impact on the fashion scene.

He suggested that the revival of interest in Western wear reflects a growing nostalgia for simpler days and less complex ways of living.

Whatever the reason for Western wear's appeal, today's cowgirl wears colors never before seen in the saddle: lilacs, peaches, pinks and baby blues as well as traditional shades of beige and denim blue.

Shirts that are authentically Western have well-defined yokes, piping and pearly snaps instead of buttons. Plaids, checks and solid colors all have a special place in the country look. The fabrics range from traditional denim and denim blends to cotton/polyester blends and shiny satins.

Jeans, of course, are a must. Those range from the classic Levis to the updated styles from Britannia and Cal Trends. While dark denim is the traditional and most favored color, fashion shades add variety.

Accessories to pull the look together include mid-calf cowboy boots, suede vests, colorful bandanas, string ties with bead or feather tips and, of course, the cowboy hat. Also complimentary to the Western look are the rope, jute or leather belts with Western-style buckles.

All of the Western wear shown on this page is from Mervyn's whose executive vice president, Walter Rossi, noted, "Everyone wants to be a cowboy."

The look is showing up more and more frequently, not only for leisure-time activities, but in the office (in the more modified versions) at school and around town.

It's a fun look, easy to wear and even easier to put together with the wide variety of styles for men and women, young and old available at a wide range of stores along the Orange Coast.

Cowboy store expanding

Tom Wagner and his partners are so confident in the continued popularity of Western-style clothing that they're expanding the Huntington Beach store they opened last October.

The store, the West Coast Cowboy, is devoted entirely to Western-style clothing for all ages, from children and teens through a full line of men's and women's wear.

Noting that Western is "the in thing," Wagner said, "They've done surveys and expect it to last seven to eight years. That's what the Wall Street Journal says."

Clothing at the West Coast Cowboy ranges from jeans and cowboy shirts to full-length handmade chamois deerskin dresses that sell for $500 and $550. The dresses, he said, are stylish enough to be worn to fancy-dress parties. They come in brown, tan, dark green or burgundy, and some are accented with tassels or matching feathers.

As for men's clothing, Wagner said the store carries a variety of Western-style suits with the V-type suede yoke.

These are the same kind of suits Jock Ewing wore on TV's "Dallas," he explained.

'...and we all grew up to be cowboys'

The popularity of the Western look isn't a fad. And it isn't new.

"The Western look is the classic look in America," said Jim Dewar of Mission Viejo. "Its popularity dates back 100 years."

Reasons for the popularity of Western gear go far beyond fads started by movies such as "Urban Cowboy," he said.

Dewar, who operates Durango, a fashion-oriented Western specialty store in Oakbrook Village, Laguna Hills, said Western-style clothes are particularly applicable to the urban-suburban living of California.

"It's casual, comfortable, washable, good for jumping in and out of cars — as well as on and off horses," he said.

"With the cost of clothes going up so rapidly," Dewar added, "the classic Western look is investment dressing."

For example, there are cowboy boots that range from

'It's casual, comfortable, washable, good for jumping in and out of cars — as well as on and off horses . . . With the cost of clothes going up so rapidly, the classic Western look is investment dressing.'

— Jim Dewar

$150 to $275, not something anyone would want to just wear one time and toss aside. And leather jackets with a Western cut come in the $200 to $300 range. Silver belt buckles can go from $30 to $300.

Probably one new aspect in Western dressing, he said, is that in Orange County, it's a going-out look as well as a weekend look.

"A lot of the first customers we had were people looking for just the right coordinated Western look to wear to restaurants and Western night clubs like the Cowboy, the Ranch at the Top, the Rib Rack and the Crazy Horse Steak House," said his wife and business partner, Karen Dewar.

She noted that some Western-style shirts are shot with lurex for a little glitter and that some stores, including Durango, offer silver collar tabs which can be added to any shirt.

Cowboy hats come in lots of colors and styles, she noted, such as hats in pale blue accented by hatbands of pale blue roses and feathers.

The satin shirts and rich-looking suede vests are particularly attractive.

"The Western look has something for everyone," Mrs. Dewar noted. "Disco fashions were limited to the young with perfect figures but anyone can put on a Western hat and vest and have a fine time."

The Newport Beach City Arts Commission hosted a "Follow the Rainbow Road" party at the Newport Harbor Art Museum to celebrate the city's Arts Festival opening next weekend in Fashion Island.

Colored balloons decorated the Museum's Sculpture Garden to echo the many-hued theme of the Festival, where balloons will mark the different attractions (such as yellow for juried art, blue for performing arts and purple for the children's exhibit.)

Arts Commission Chairman Beryl Melinkoff welcomed guests to the party, which was also hosted by the Fashion Island Merchants Association and Villa Nova Restaurant.

Jean Tandowsy's musical combo provided the backdrop while Mrs. Melinkoff sang Newport's theme song with such verve that she's been asked to give summer performances at Fashion Island.

She introduced the commissioners who created the Festival: Betty Tesman, Walter Ziglar, Madeline Rose, Novelle Hendrickson and Jerry Richards.

Guests enjoyed hors d'oeuvres from Villa Nova and wine provided by Gene Gardner of the Museum while discussing the Festival which begins Saturday at 11:30 a.m. in Fashion Island

Celebrates 40 years

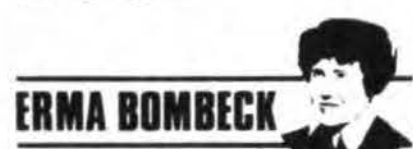

William and Ruth Warren of Costa Mesa were surprised with a 40th wedding anniversary party given by their daughters at the Santa Ana Country Club.

Glenda Katt and Gloria Andrews and their families hosted the dinner and dancing for the family and special friends.

Child who needs her is her favorite

Every mother has a favorite child. I have mine. That child for whom I feel a special closeness. The one I reach out to in a rare moment. To share a love that no one else could possibly understand. My favorite child is the one who was too sick to eat the ice cream at his birthday party, had measles at Christmas, and wore leg braces to bed because he toed in.

She was the fever in the middle of the night, the asthma attack, the child in my arms at the emergency ward.

My favorite child spent Christmas alone away from the family, was stranded after the game with a gas tank on E, lost the money for his class ring. My favorite child is the one who screwed up the piano recital, misspelled "committee" in a spelling bee, ran the wrong way with the football and had his bike stolen because he was careless.

My favorite child is the one who fell asleep over an assignment on China that the teacher never bothered to grade, flunked her driver's test five times, and told us she could hardly wait to get out of the house.

My favorite child is the one I punished for lying, grounded for insensitivity to other people's feelings, and informed he was a royal pain to the entire family.

My favorite child always needed a haircut, had hair that wouldn't curl, had no date for Saturday night and a car that cost $600 to fix.

My favorite child said dumb things for which there were no excuses. He was selfish, immature, bad-tempered and self-centered. He was vulnerable, lonely, unsure of what he was doing in this world, and quite wonderful.

The one I've loved the most is the one whom I have watched struggle, and because the struggle was his, he did nothing.

All mothers have their favorite child. It is always the same one. The one who needs you at the moment for whatever reason, to cling to, to shout at, to hurt, to hug, to flatter, to reverse charges to, to unload on, to use — but mostly, to be there.

— SILVER SPRINGS, MD.
Dear Sil: I say the next dinner invitation should come from THEM. If you don't get one, you'd be a fool to invite them again.

Last dinner invitation they'll get

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago I invited my husband's niece, her husband and their seven-year-old daughter to Saturday dinner. I called a week ahead of time, and the date was set for 7 o'clock.

I work a full-time job and it is not an easy thing for me to fix a company meal. I shopped after work on Friday and prepared part of the dinner that evening.

On Saturday at 2 p.m. my niece phoned and said a couple they liked a lot had called and asked them to go bowling, so they wouldn't be able to come for dinner. I was hurt and angry and told my husband I would not invite them to dinner again. He said I was behaving like a child.

I explained that they would be welcome in our home anytime, but if he wanted them for dinner,

Tony Orlando:

NEW YORK (AP) — It is announced Tony Orlando will sub for vacationing Jim Dale in Broadway's "Barnum." Certain theater folk scratch their heads, gasp or otherwise indicate disbelief, Tony Orlando?

This may be because his credits lack theater. They include a pop group, Tony Orlando and Dawn, a few hit records, such as "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Around the Ole Oak Tree," much club work and a CBS variety series. But no theater.

He did act in an NBC movie last year. But Broadway? Yes, Broadway. He made his debut there last week and will remain there through May 24, playing the legendary P.T. Barnum, America's prince of humbug.

He'll play P.T. Barnum in his live theater debut business career began 21 years ago, in the songwriting-performing stable of Don Kirshner, pop music impresario.

"I remember just walking into Donnie's office one day with my little guitar and playing 'La Bamba' for him. He calls in this 18-year-old girl, Carol King, who's done fairly well since."

"He tells her, 'From now on you produce his records.' And tells me, 'You do demos for her.'"

And so, both the start of his life in show business and the end of his formal schooling, his departure, without diploma, from Aviation High School of Performing Arts. But he's got turned down.

HE'S REMARKABLY MILD, composed, not at all riled that some consider him a rather odd choice to temporarily fill Dale's shoes in a role that is very demanding, vocally and physically.

"I expected it," he says. "The reaction is only logical and understandable. Broadway is an area I've never worked, my career basically being TV, records and night clubs."

"Broadway is an animal unto itself, to be respected and earned. But I know they'd agree with me that we all believe in growth as actors, entertainers, and that Broadway fits into my life as well as it fits into theirs."

Orlando, 37, a trim man who exudes no end of optimism and good health, was born in New York. He was raised just 23 blocks south of the St. James Theater, where "Barnum" is playing.

FIVE BLOCKS TO THE north you'll find a tall, weathered building. That's where his show

Of course, he never had eyes to be an aviation mechanic. Music was his thing. He even applied, he says, to New York's famed High School of Performing Arts. But he got turned down.

"I couldn't really play an instrument. And all the kids there, my God, they were so much more sophisticated than I was. When I walked all I had was a dream."

The dream got launched, professionally, in 1961, with his first hit, "Halfway to Paradise." Later, he quit performing for a while, worked for April-Blackwood, the song publishing arm of CBS.

Eleven years ago this month, he eased back into performing, recording another demonstration record, with two singers, Thelma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent. It led to the start of the pop group known as Tony Orlando and Dawn.

Three years later the smash hit, "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," which last year became the nation's sort of national anthem while Iran held 52 Americans hostage.

After "Ribbon," the CBS series, Las Vegas, national tours. And the dark side of the dream, a 1977 breakdown caused in part by cocaine, overwork, two deaths in his family and the suicide of his friend, comedian Freddie Prinze.

"Past history," he says of that bleak period, which he's freely discussed on TV and for the Ladies' Home Journal. He pauses a moment when asked about the coming-back process.

"I don't know," he says. "I was just totally committed to being 100 percent, back on my feet, a healthy man and a better performer than before."

"All I did was concentrate on regrouping, picking up the pieces and never looking back."

James Coburn:

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Coburn says his role in a new miniseries gives him an opportunity to get a few things off his chest.

He plays the head of an entertainment conglomerate in the four-hour version of Jacqueline Susann's "Valley of the Dolls" for CBS.

"I'm enjoying it because I have a chance to say some things I've always wanted to say," says the lanky, lithe, white-haired actor. His fingers curl around a long cigar and on his face is his trademark grin.

"They don't give you anything to say. So I'm heightening the character to give a broad view of making movies and the reason we're all here."

Coburn says he is writing his own dialogue, and it reflects his own viewpoint.

"I wanted to talk about the amateurs in the business, in all the various levels, really," he says. "They appall me because of their lack of understanding or their lack of love for film."

"THE AMATEURS HAVE a tendency to bring everyone down to their level. There are too many

James Coburn

"I have a chance to say some things I always wanted to say" amateurs running things."

Coburn puts his loyalties on the side of the mavericks.

He says, "Authority always seems to have precedence in a dispute. That may be true in some cultures, where you have wise old leaders, but not in Hollywood. We've got baby moguls who've come out of where? The woodwork, some of them."

He points to a movie he's recently completed called "Looker," in which computerized images replace people. He says, "Computerizing it and they have them walking and talking — until pretty soon we won't even be necessary."

"VALLEY OF THE DOLLS" is an updated version of the Susann book and the 1967 movie from 20th Century-Fox. The movie was a box office disaster, but apparently CBS feels that the success of "Scrupers" last year proves there is a market for films about the high jinks and peccadillos of the rich and famous.

It traces the course of three women within the entertainment empire run by Coburn: a rock singer (Lisa Hartman) on her climb to fame, an actress (Veronica Hamel) on the skids, and a bright lawyer (Catherine Hicks) who is Coburn's protegee.

Coburn's role has been enhanced from the movie, where it was only a minor role.

The miniseries is also a reunion with Jean Simmons, who co-starred with Coburn three years ago in "The Dain Curse." Coburn played private eye Hamilton Nash in the six-hour film of Dashiell Hammett's 1928 story.

Miss Simmons plays a reigning movie queen in "Valley of the Dolls."

The miniseries is Coburn's first television appearance in three years, although he has done the narration for a pilot for a syndicated series called "Escape." And commercials.

After training in New York, Coburn got his start in live television, starred in two series and then starred in "Charade" and "The Great Escape." After that, he left television behind until "The Dain Curse."

REAL ESTATE

Realtor's unique story

Corona del Mar's Jim Wood rises to the top

Jim Wood admits he felt a little guilty in 1977 when he sold a friend a charming duplex in Corona del Mar for $70,000. It seemed expensive at the time.

Now that the piece of property is worth $470,000, the 45-year-old president of Unique Homes of Corona del Mar says he's sorry he didn't buy it for himself.

Oh well. Since starting his own real estate business 10 years ago Wood has managed to acquire some property of his own, including a Corona del Mar home, a desert vacation condo and a ranch under construction in the Santa Inez Valley.

IN FACT, WOOD POINTS to the antique decorated Unique Homes office at the corner of MacArthur and Pacific Coast Highway as an example of how young people can enter the tough housing market today.

Ten years ago he was merely renting space in the two-story office complex along the ribbon of choice coastal highway. Unable to afford to purchase the property, he decided to go ahead and refurbish it anyway.

The elderly owner liked the changes and agreed to help Wood finance the property.

Such charmed good luck stories are not foreign to the residential housing market, says Wood.

"MOVE IN AND rent," he advises. "Fix the house up and keep your eyes open. Someone may like you. You can't be pushy and you can't force it to happen. But it does."

When Wood got into the real estate business the average price of a home in Corona del Mar was $50,000. Today it's $350,000.

The numbers don't bother Wood. He says he gets plenty of buyers under 35 who are looking for their second home in the exclusive ocean side community.

A LOOK AT WOOD'S 16 home sales in January shows half the buyers under 35. Two were sold to corporations.

The corporations paid cash for the homes they'll use to attract top executives to the high-priced Orange County housing area.

"That's something we'll see more of as companies find it tough to get good people willing to pay the price of moving here," Wood said.

Rare to move to Corona del Mar is the first-time buyer, Wood said. More likely is the two-income family who moves to the area from other coastal cities.

"The young, decided hardworking person will find a way to get in," insists Wood.

Limited Time—13 1/4% (13 1/2% A.P.R.)

Finally.

Financing you can live with.

Way down deep you know that the longer you wait to buy a home the more expensive it becomes. The way things are going, today's $160,000 home could easily cost $250,000 or $300,000 in just a few years. The cost of land and building is skyrocketing. Wait too long and you'll be forced to settle for a lot less than you've hoped for.

Here's A Plan

Now you can beat runaway inflation. At Lake Chateau in Laguna Niguel. We've arranged financing that allows you to buy a home at today's prices (and you can bet that prices will never be lower) with a 13 1/4% interest rate (13 1/2% A.P.R.) for a period of five years. That's far below the current rate.

This allows you to buy the home you want. Now. And, should interest rates become lower you can refinance at any time during that five year period with no prepayment penalty. Now's the time to act to protect your future.

Just Plain Beautiful

And what a beautiful future you'll have at Lake Chateau. The ambiance of a French country village. Charming Normandy architecture. Iron weather-vanes, turned wood finials and geranium-filled window boxes. Herringbone brick, pot shelves and steeply pitched roofs with tile ridges. Plus a community recreation center with pool, hot spa and sun deck area. Inside, Baldwin quality top to bottom. Kitchens with self-cleaning and microwave ovens and built-in barbecues. Luxurious master suites with separate dressing areas and sparkling baths with oversized sunken tubs.

From $180,700 to $194,400

A Homeowner's Association fee of just $40.00 per month sees to the maintenance of all common area landscaping and recreation facilities.

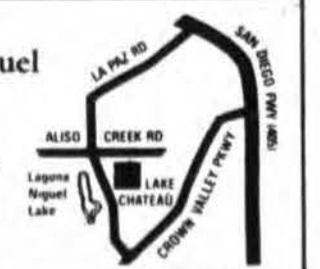

Just 5 homes available!

There are just 5 homes left at Lake Chateau. When these are gone so is your opportunity to take advantage of this terrific financing plan. And gone is the chance to protect yourself from inflation. So act now. Because once you've made your decision and bought your home you're not only safe from inflation, but you could well benefit from it.

You can't afford to wait another day. Lake Chateau offers excellent financing, a quality home and a beautiful community you can live with. Now and for a long, long time to come.

Homebuying by credit card?

Herbert Hawkins Realtors introduces unique program

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After years of renting, you've found the perfect house and decided to buy. The seller seems agreeable enough, but he's talking about down payments and all that. You'll have to explain:

"Perhaps you don't understand. I'm putting it on my credit card."

What may sound like the ultimate California fantasy is closer than you think. Herbert Hawkins Realtors, a major statewide firm, has begun issuing what they call the American NoMoneyDown HomeCard under a program which allows qualified buyers to purchase a house without a downpayment. Instead, they buy in partnership with an investor.

"The purpose of the program is to take the first-time homebuyers who can qualify for monthly payments but has not saved an adequate down payment and combine them with an investor who has the required 20 percent down and wants to invest in residential properties," says Preston Hawkins, the company's executive vice president and general counsel.

The partnership program, which provides for the buyers and investor to settle up and go their own ways after three years, is representative of the unique efforts being made in California to somehow squeeze people with ordinary incomes into houses with extraordinary prices. But buyers need at least $3,500 a month in combined family income to qualify, Hawkins explains, meaning that many California households won't.

Ideally, says Hawkins, the price of the home purchased in partnership will have appreciated enough in the three years to allow the occupants to buy out the investor and negotiate a new loan for themselves. The occupants' income, of course, must also rise over the three-year period in order for them to get the new and higher loan.

"At the end of three years, the occupant who is planning to purchase the investor's interest must realize that their income must increase to qualify for the new, higher loan," Hawkins said. "But based on 15 percent interest appreciation for three years, the occupant partner should be able to refinance his home with 80 percent financing in an amount sufficient to pay off the investors."

Vague terms spell trouble

By ROBERT J. BRUSS

DEAR BOB: Last week we offered to buy a home at a price $12,000 below the asking price. The day after our offer was accepted, another agent brought the seller a better offer. So the seller repudiated our offer on the advice of her attorney.

We were to make an $8,000 downpayment. The seller's lawyer says our offer is no good because it vaguely says "Offer contingent upon buyer obtaining maximum first mortgage on best terms available, with seller to finance balance of sales price at 10 percent interest for six years."

We really want that house. What should we do?

— Mildred T.

Whoever wrote your offer should have known better than to use such indefinite words. In my opi-

Growing market in condos

DEAR BOB: I am a dentist who is tired of paying rising rent for my office. But I can't easily move because (1) my equipment is built-in and (2) office rents are rising all over town. A realtor friend has suggested I buy my office building and convert it into a condo. He will handle all the sales. What do you think?

— Dr. Terry H.

DEAR DR. TERRY: First, buy a six or 12-month option to purchase the building so you tie up the purchase price and terms. Then make a feasibility survey to determine demand from potential buyers, financing possibilities and any condo conversion problems such as city, county or state approvals.

There have been some successful office condo conversions and you can expect more as rents rise. For further ideas, read David Clurman's excellent book "The Business Condominium" (John Wiley and Sons), available at larger libraries.

nion, if you sue the seller to enforce your contract, your success chances range from nil to maybe.

The wording of your finance clause should have clearly stated $8,000 is your downpayment, the amount and terms of the first mortgage you are to obtain, and the amount and exact terms of the second mortgage to be carried back by the seller. Courts refuse to enforce vague offers. It's a costly lesson for you to lose the house, but other readers can learn from your mistake.

Mortgage lender torched

DEAR BOB: I hold a first mortgage on an office building that was destroyed by an arson fire. The insurance company refuses to deal with me although I am named on the policy as mortgagee. The owner has stopped making his monthly payments. What should I do?

— Eleanor C.

DEAR ELEANOR: See your attorney. According to my State Farm insurance consultants, fire insurance policies pay mortgage lenders even for arson losses caused by the insured.

However, since the insured borrower is in default on your mortgage payments, you are entitled to foreclose. If you begin foreclosure, notify the insurance company to deal with you directly rather than with the insured. As a lender, your insurance rights are actually greater than the insured's. But before foreclosing, try to settle with the insurer to either rebuild or pay you the balance on your mortgage.

Commission not refundable

DEAR BOB: When I filed my 1980 income tax returns, my accountant pointed out the large real estate sales commission I paid in January 1980 when I sold my home. Is there any way I can get back some of this amount? I thought the law limited how much a realty agent can charge.

— Mr. J.F.

DEAR MR. J.F.: Realty sales commissions are fully negotiable between the seller and agent. State law does not limit the maximum commission rate.

The commission you paid is subtracted from your home's gross sales price when arriving at your adjusted net sales price. Although you can't get the commission refunded, it does qualify as a sales expense and thus reduces your home sale profit. Ask your tax adviser or attorney to explain further.

No expiration date for break

DEAR BOB: Is it true that the "over 55 rule" $100,000 home sale tax exemption expires this year? — Harry H.

DEAR HARRY: No. That rumor keeps popping up and it's not true. There is no expiration date on the $100,000 profit tax exemption for home sellers age 55 or older.

Further details on this law are in my report "Everything You Want and Need to Know About the $100,000 Home Sale Tax Exemption." To obtain your copy send a $2 check payable to "Newspaperbooks" for Report 80107 to the Orange Coast Daily Pilot, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648.

Realtor likes long listings

DEAR BOB: As a realtor-associate, I enjoy your informative columns. But I disagree with your recent article advising 90-day listings. You should have mentioned that location, condition, seller financing, other property competition and the season influence sales. I understand that 4.2 months is now the average home sales time. Although I have listed and sold homes in one day, you should explain that longer listing terms are sometimes necessary. — Louis DeP.

DEAR LOUIS: The shorter the listing, the harder, smarter and faster an agent usually works to get a listing sold. When a home takes more than 90 days to sell, it usually is overpriced, in poor condition, requires a new high cost mortgage with little or no seller financing help or is being improperly marketed by the agent.

A 90-day listing gives the agent enough time to get a home sold. But if the listing expires with the home unsold and the agent is doing a good job, the listing can be renewed.

Unfortunately, a few lazy agents tie up homes on long listings and then do little or nothing to get the home sold. They put the listing into the local multiple listing service and then hope another agent will sell the house. A 90-day listing prevents the home being tied up for a long time with the wrong agent.

About two years ago we started work on what is perhaps the most desirable residential site in all of Cowan Heights.

Since then in a very methodical, meticulous and careful way we have nearly completed the entry, the country club facilities and the first four homes in the area we now call RockingHorse Ridge.

The entry, which will be protected by a guard house with 24 hour protection, the clubhouse, the 3 tennis courts, 2 racquetball courts, the 25 meter swimming pool and spa and the first four homes are visible from Newport Blvd.

Because of this and quite likely because of the imposing size of the club and of the homes we have been unable to keep people from coming in to find out when the homes would be available for purchase. They asked the plumbers, the carpenters, the electricians and anybody else they could stop who in turn referred them to the job superintendent who in turn called the home office and kept giving us names and phone numbers and convinced us to put a company representative on the site.

Use 'used' mortgages

The only catch to this financing alternative is YOU

As mortgage rates on new houses soar ever upward and prices on new houses stick at levels you simply can't manage, you will find the answer to financing your dream home lies in a used house and a "used" mortgage. In the used mortgage, you can get relatively low-cost money and the loans are available in quantity.

There's only one catch and that lies in YOU. You, the buyer, must look for this money; you

3 million FHA/VA loans, at 7 percent to 11 percent rates, with remaining terms of 18-27 years, and outstanding balances of $20,000-$25,000.

There are another 500,000 Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) loans, all under 12 percent, with 200,000 under 9.5 percent. These have 15-25 years to run and $30,000-$35,000 balances.

Then there are 5 million conventional mortgages, also at 7 percent to 11 percent rates, with 20-27 years remaining and balances of $35,000-$45,000. On these conventionals, you must negotiate with the lender.

"MOST PEOPLE THINK that, just because the mortgage says the whole loan is due if the house is sold, that the new owner can't assume the old mortgage," says Pearce. But, he contends, many banks would rather convert an 8.5 percent or 9 percent mortgage at a "preferred" 12 percent to 13 percent (against 15 percent to 17 percent) than have the owner rent the house and continue the 8.5 percent loan.

In total, with about one existing house in every six sold each year, almost 1.5 million used "assumable" or "convertible" loans are available annually. This came to $46 billion in 1980.

Problems? Of course. But worth your effort to solve.

FOR INSTANCE, IF you do find the typical $30,000 "used" 9 percent mortgage, with some 20 years to run, you still will need another $30,000 (plus your $20,000 down payment) to close the deal. Your payments on the used mortgage will be about $270 a month. A second mortgage, 30 years, $30,000 at 17 percent, adds $428 — a total of $698. And $270 ends after 20 years.

Or the owner may take back a 10-year, $30,000 mortgage himself at 12 percent. Cost: $430 a month, and for just 10 years, not 20 or 30. Plus the "old" $270. Cheaper than the full-rate "new" mortgage by far. Still, these are monthly loads that could bend your back.

Mortgages in this high-rate, scarce-money era can be — and are — a mathematical maze. And with the Federal Reserve Board keeping a tight curb on credit, there's no foretelling the era's end.

But the basic, money-saving message to you is: Be on guard against the "creative" contracts. If you're buying a second-hand home, try hard for a second-hand mortgage! It could mean tens of thousands of dollars in your pocket instead of someone else's.

SYLVIA PORTER

must refuse to believe a real estate agent who will try to convince you the loans aren't around; you must force yourself to remember today's rates were not yesterday's, too.

In the 1950s and 1960s, mortgage loans for 20 and 30 years at 4 percent to 6 percent rates were commonplace. For a $15,000 mortgage on a $20,000 home, your 30-year loan payments totaled just $72 to $90 a month. On the premise that you could handle mortgage costs of up to 25 percent of your income, you could build or buy your house on earnings of $5,000 a year.

EVEN AT TODAY'S housing prices, at low interest rates, a $60,000 mortgage on an $80,000 home would come to $286-$360 a month — totals you could swing on $14,000-$18,000 a year.

But at today's housing prices, plus 15 percent to 17 percent mortgage rates, the monthly payments on that $60,000, 30-year loan range from $759 to $855. You would need $36,000-$41,000 a year to handle this.

As for the new "creative" or "alternative" home mortgages, these could be so creative and costly they could bankrupt you.

There are, though, 1.4 million to 1.5 million "used" mortgages available annually, says Jack Pearce, a Denver residential tax expert and head of RTI Inc. And neither Housing and Urban Development Department nor Home Loan Bank Board officials are able to contradict him.

As Pearce calculates it, there are some

The problems of brokers are more human than legal

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The real estate broker assured the young couple that he would work hard to find them the right house. "Consider me your scout," he said. "I'll find you the best house for the least money."

The couple was reassured, and on the way home they mused about their good fortune. They had a man working just for them. With prices so high, it was nice to think they had professional help on their side.

So did the family selling the house. They carefully chose the broker because, they observed, with home prices all over the lot these days they felt a good broker might win them several thousand dollars more.

THEY HAD ANOTHER reason to choose carefully: At today's prices, the 6 percent sales commission comes a lot of money. "If we have to pay it," they reasoned, "we're better off paying to the best broker."

It happens all the time, and it can have serious consequences. How can both parties expect the best deal? How can a broker promise the seller the most for his money and then make the same promise to the buyer?

In the same vein, how can a broker whose commission rises or falls with the price of the house he is selling, be expected to cut into his own income? Isn't his allegiance totally to the person paying him?

Confusion of this sort has existed in the marketplace for so long that critics are sometimes confounded that regulators haven't made greater efforts to clarify matters.

Two explanations are sometimes offered:

FIRST, THAT IT is more a human than a legal problem, and that even if warned, buyers will continue to assume brokers are working solely for them, rather than, as is usual, for the seller who is paying them.

Secondly, that a good broker sometimes can come close to serving the desires of both parties.

A somewhat similar situation exists in the stock market, where many small investors view their broker as a confidant and adviser. That relationship can and does exist, of course, but it isn't always so.

To begin with, the broker's income depends on his making sales to his customers. He earns nothing for giving advice. Sometimes, he is not even in a position to offer professional advice on specific stocks.

Adjustable mortgages... with interest

S&Ls applaud new flexible instruments

By KEITH TUBER
Daily Pilot Business Editor

When the Federal Home Loan Bank Board passed its new, flexible mortgage loan guidelines last month, savings and loan associations around the country showered the action with praise.

"Everyone interested in home ownership must welcome the action... as one of the most constructive and forward-looking regulations ever promulgated," said Leonard Shane, president of the California Savings and Loan League and board chairman of Huntington Beach-based Mercury Savings and Loan Association.

"Recognizing the different needs of different borrowers in a changing economic environment, the bank board has taken the necessary first step to make more funds available for home purchases."

ROLLIN D. BARNARD, president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, called the action "a true shot in the arm for everyone connected with housing — very much including homebuyers and sellers."

However, the new mortgage instruments apply only to federally chartered S&Ls, and not state-chartered institutions. In California, the savings and loan industry consists of 40 percent federal and 60 percent state associations.

That disparity led a number of California institutions to pursue conversion procedures to federal stock charters. Among them: Mercury, Financial Federal, Home, Gibraltar Federal and Great Western.

What exactly are those adjustable mortgage loan guidelines that S&Ls are so eager to use?

The California Savings & Loan League recently has issued a comprehensive question and answer summary to help clarify this. A portion of that text follows:

Q: What is an adjustable mortgage loan (AML)?

A: An AML is a mortgage loan secured by a one-to-four-family dwelling on which the payment amount, the loan term, the principal balance or a combination of these may change periodically as a result of changes in the loan's interest rates. The adjustable mortgage loan regulation replaces the (FHLBB) board's regulations on variable rate mortgages (RRMs), which are also adjustable mortgage loans that lenders may offer.

Q: What is an adjustable mortgage loan (AML)?

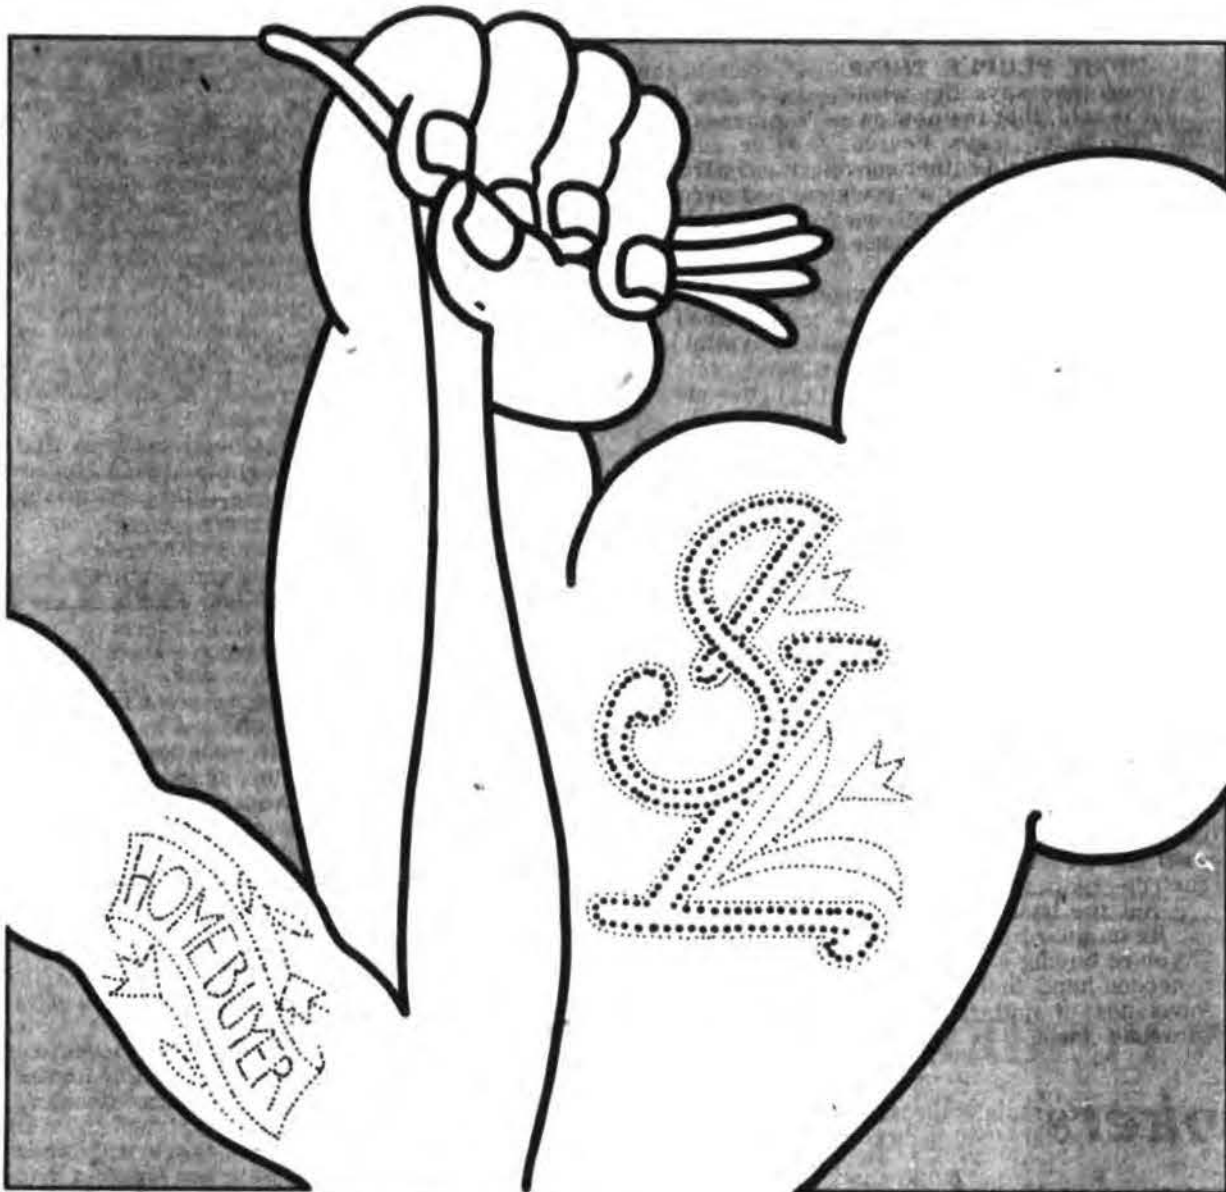

A: The purpose is to provide a flexible regulatory framework within which federal S&Ls may develop new mortgage instruments responsive to changing interest rates and deposit and liability structures and continue to make mortgage money available to the public. At the same time, the regulation will provide for borrower protection through required disclosures.

Q: What are the key features of the AML?

A: The AML regulation authorizes federal S&Ls to make, purchase or participate in a wide variety of flexible mortgage instruments. Such instruments can provide for interest-rate variations and monthly payment changes with or without limitations.

The regulation itself imposes no limits on periodic interest rate or payment adjustments, except that changes in the loan's interest rate are governed by the movement of an interest-rate index that is not under the control of the lender.

In addition, reductions in the interest rate index must result in reduction of the loan interest rate.

Laguna Federal S & L	15.5	Yes
Marina Federal S & L	16.5	Yes
Mercury S & L	16.5	Yes
Newport Balboa S & L	16.75	Yes

Q: Since the board is not specifying interest rate or payment change limitations, does this mean that all AMLs will bear no such constraints?

A: No. It is expected that lenders will adopt limitations on rate or payment changes in most cases because of competition in the market and the desire to obtain better public acceptance of the AMLs. It is also likely that the secondary mortgage market, which purchases mortgages from primary lenders, and private mortgage insurance companies will encourage some interest rate or payment change limitations.

(Editor's note: Last week Glendale Federal Savings & Loan Association, the nation's second-largest federally chartered S&L, revealed it would place a ceiling of 7.5 percent annually on the monthly payments on its new adjustable home mortgage loans.)

Q: Does the regulation authorize payment-capped mortgages?

Yes. Under an interest-rate-capped loan, changes in a mortgage loan's interest rates and consequently changes in the amount of the monthly payment, are limited. Under a payment-capped mortgage, the interest rate on the loan is adjusted to reflect changes in a specified index without any rate-change limitations. However, to avoid sharp increases in the monthly payment, changes in the payment are limited — hence the designation "payment-capped mortgages."

Under some payment-capped mortgage programs, the amount of the monthly payment remains constant over a period during which the interest rate changes. Therefore, interest-rate changes must be reflected by a change in the rate at which the principal is amortized.

However, at the next scheduled payment adjustment date, the amount of the payment would be adjusted, to the extent permitted by the terms of the mortgage, to fully amortize the loan over the remaining term.

Q: Does the final regulation pre-empt state laws that prohibit or restrict the issuance of AMLs?

A: Yes. The board specifically pre-empts all state laws that have the direct or indirect effect of restricting the issuance or operation of an (See S&Ls, Page C2)

Realtors wary of higher payments

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The new adjustable rate mortgage could push home prices beyond the reach of new buyers, according to local realtors who greeted the April 22 decision by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board with mixed reactions.

On the negative side, homebuyers can expect to pay higher monthly payments because of the lack of any fixed interest rates imposed by this new plan.

ON THE PLUS SIDE, homebuyers can expect to have more funds available from S&Ls because of the more flexible money market.

Under the bank board plan, interest rates on home loans will be governed by changes in many interest rate indices.

Realtors and homebuyers are waiting to see which indexing plan each S&L adopts. Changes that occur in a particular index will prompt increases in the buyers' interest rate.

For example, one of the indices under consideration is the Federal Home Loan Bank District Cost of Funds, which measures cost of funds to S&Ls on a national and state basis.

IN JUNE 1979 THE California rate was 7.5 percent, but by last June it had risen to 9.5 percent. Had adjustable rates been in effect then, homebuyers under this plan would have paid 2 percent more on their loan, according to a Federal Home Loan Bank spokeswoman.

Another indexing plan measures the average contract mortgage rate for the purchase of all existing homes. That rate jumped 2 percent during the last 12 months.

Under the new plan S&Ls will be free to alter the rate charged on a monthly, six month or annual basis, regardless of how often the index is measured.

Although there is no ceiling on the interest rate that can be charged, industry insiders say competition will keep most rates from rising more than 1 percent annually.

ART GODI, PRESIDENT of the 130,000 member California Association of Realtors, criticized the new rate plan, saying that under T-Bill indexing homeowners would have found themselves strapped.

Had someone purchased a $100,000 home in January at 14 percent, their payments would have jumped from $1,185 a month to $1,600 by January 1983, based on activity of the last two years, he said.

"What benefit can the consumer hope to gain in the long term when the lender can't guarantee what interest rate the borrower will pay within any given six-month period," he asked.

IN WASHINGTON, Preston Butcher, co-chairman of the National Multi Housing Council, said the new adjustable mortgage rate would forever squeeze young buyers out of an already tight market.

"We feel that the recent action of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board... will encourage first-time buyers to remain renters, placing an additional strain on an already tight rental situation," he said.

In California, where home sales dropped 18.7 percent in March due to high mortgage rates, realtors are concerned the new mortgage plan may impose an added burden.

LOCAL REALTORS WERE less critical of the adjustable rates, taking a more let's-wait-and-see attitude.

"I'd rather have the fixed rate," said Will Woods, executive vice-president of the Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley Board of Realtors. "But we don't have a choice. The (See REALTORS, Page C2)

Metrics: It's all in the numbers

By PAT DUNN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Does a gram weigh the same as (a) an apple, (b) a dime, (c) a pineapple?

The correct answer — a dime — is chosen by more people than one might think, according to the U.S. Metric Board.

Although most Americans don't normally think of weights in terms of grams and kilograms, there is enough exposure to the terminology — in medicine and on food ingredient labels, for example — that many consumers can surprise themselves with the degree of comprehension of the commonly used terms.

That's the metric board's message for this National Metric Week, May 10-16.

The board stresses that even if it's hard to remember the exact formula for convert-— not just math — use metrics. There's no organized push to metrics, but textbooks now have a heavy metric-system orientation.

JONES ADDED THAT metric references in textbooks probably are the chief contributions to adaptation of the system, but he sees more frequent use of metric terms in sporting events, on television and recipes as being significant to the changeover.

"We notice that students in construction classes talk in metrics when ordering materials," he said. "Students tend to accept a new concept more readily than the general public, and they are curious about how to adapt to change quickly."

Psychology teacher Wayne Horowitz agrees. "It's fairly easy for young people to accept the metric concept because it doesn't disturb their frame of reference. This isn't the case with adults."

"For instance, most track fans in their 40s find it difficult to think of a 1,500-meter run instead of a mile run because they relate to the performance in terms of minutes per mile.

"DEALING WITH A familiar frame of reference has a strong emotional appeal because that's how people understand their world. Any time you throw that out of joint, it creates a certain amount of tension and resulting resistance to change."

Although there has been a strong push toward metrics in this country the last few years, the change is not mandatory. We are switching inch by 25.4 millimeters to the metric system.

John Quincy Adams proposed the change

CONSUMER CLOSE-UP

ing, say, inches to centimeters, almost everyone can look at something like a paper clip and know it's a few centimeters long. And, being able to relate the units of measurement to objects in the real world is the biggest part of adapting.

Currently, conversion to metrics is confined to the automotive, construction and farm equipment, computer and bottling industries. School systems also are emphasizing teaching of the metric system.

Newport-Harbor High School mathematics department chairman Webb Jones said, "Teachers realize the metric system is coming of age. All science courses in 1821. And, in 1893, the United States "officially" adopted metric standards and defined the yard, pound and other familiar measurements as fractions of the standard metric units.

On July 2, 1971, following the report of a metric conversion study committee, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans recommended a gradual U.S. changeover during a 10-year period at the end of which the country would be predominantly, but not exclusively, on the metric system.

THE METRIC CONVERSION Act of 1975, signed Dec. 23, 1975, declared a national policy and established a U.S. Metric Board to coordinate voluntary increased use of the metric system.

The board suggests the "relating to other things" technique for catching on to terminology and use. The following quiz gives examples of how to do this.

Anyone who has watched the Olympics on television shouldn't have trouble with this question, according to the board. A meter is about the height of: (a) a door, (b) a kitchen counter, (c) the seat of a chair. The right answer is (b).

Now, how about centimeters? There are 100 of them to a meter. That means the height of a basketball player is about: (a) 20 centimeters, (b) 200 centimeters, (c) 2,000 centimeters. Again, the answer is (b). So much for length. (See METRICS, Page C2)

SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

Watch out for scanners

Check-out counter is no place to daydream

By MARTIN SLOANE

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — I hope readers will benefit from a strange experience I recently had in the supermarket.

The cashier was going through my coupons after ringing up all of my purchases. When she reached the coupon for frozen waffles, I mentioned that I was going to make a "double play" because I also had a refund form for the waffles.

She asked about the offer, and, since I just happened to have the refund form with me, I handed it to her. As she reached out to take it, the cash register suddenly added 97 cents to my register tape!

At first we were puzzled because all of my groceries had already been bagged. Then she noticed that the refund form had two Universal Product Code symbols taped to it. The electronic scanner had read one of the UPCs on my refund form!

We laughed, and a correction was made. But it could have easily gone unnoticed.

I think that shoppers should be made aware of the fact that some of the electronic scanners are very sensitive. Any UPC symbol that comes within striking distance may wind up as an additional charge on their register tape.

REFUND OF THE DAY

Write to the following address to obtain the form required by this offer: Listerment Save $1.50, P.O. Box 9788, St. Paul, Minn. 55197. Send for this refund form by June 15, 1981.

DEAR JOYCE — Your experience is a good example of why the check-out counter is no place to daydream.

More than $5,000 of your hard-earned money passes across the check-out counter each year. So, it pays to stay awake and keep track of every item that is added to your register tape. This remains true in stores that have switched to electronic scanners.

Shoppers redeeming the new "coufunds" should be especially watchful that the scanner does not record the coupon as a purchase.

METRIC CONVERSION PUSHED . . .

Under federal law, all distilled spirits bottled since Jan. 1, 1980 must be sold in metric containers and some soft drinks comply. Most consumers also have learned at self-serve gasoline pumps that a liter corresponds roughly to a quart.

If there are 1,000 milliliters in a liter, about how many milliliters does a coffee cup hold? (a) 2, (b) 20, (c) 250. Chalk up another correct answer if (c) was chosen.

About the most difficult aspect of rethinking the metric system involves temperatures. Many people get frustrated trying to remember what to subtract and divide by in the formula for converting Fahrenheit to Celsius. If you have problems in this area, forget the formula and remember this simple nursery rhyme: "30 is hot, 20 is nice, 10 is cool, zero is ice."

The Metric Board advises consumers not to worry if they still have trouble with metric terms since conversion to metric is voluntary.

A board spokesman said, "Nobody is going to force the new terminology on you. Put a different way, if you give the metric system a centimeter, it won't take a kilometer."

Detailed information on the metric system can be obtained by writing to: Education Department, U.S. Metric Board, 1600 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22209.

S&Ls FAVOR ADJUSTABLE RATES . . .

Q: How are interest-rate changes determined?

A: Interest-rate increases cannot exceed the corresponding increase in the index that has been selected. The lender must decrease the interest rate if there is a decrease in the index. The lender may also decrease the interest rate voluntarily.

Interest-rate increases are at the option of the lender, but the lender may become obligated to take all allowable interest rate increases, especially if the loan is sold. The lender may also set minimum increments for increasing or decreasing the interest rate to reflect changes in the index used.

Q: What index must the lender use?

A: The AML regulation requires an interest-rate index that is readily verifiable by the borrower and is not under the control of the lender, and leaves the selection of an appropriate index to the lender. No single index can meet the needs of all lenders and borrowers. The regulation does suggest several indices, including Federal Home Loan Bank District Cost of Funds to FSLIC-Insured S&Ls; national average contract mortgage rate for the purchase of existing homes; three-and six-month Treasury bill rates; and the yield on Treasury securities to constant maturities of one, two, three or five years.

Q: Are overall increases in the interest rates limited by this regulation?

A: No. The board, however, believes that most AML contracts will contain such limitations. Competitive forces, the secondary mortgage market and the private mortgage insurance industry are likely to influence lenders to establish such limitations.

Q: Are periodic payment increases limited by this regulation?

A: No. Extreme payment volatility can be reduced by either interest-rate change limits or payment-change limits. The board believes that borrowers and lenders will agree upon methods of limiting payment changes.

Q: When must the borrower be notified of a payment change?

A: At least 30 days and no more than 45 days before any payment change, the association must notify the borrower in writing of the payment change and certain effects of that change, as specified in the regulation.

Q: What is negative amortization? How can it arise? What limits are placed on it?

A: Negative amortization is an increase in the unpaid loan balance. Negative amortization will occur if the monthly payment is insufficient to cover the interest due on a loan. The interest due that is in excess of the monthly payment will be added to the loan balance.

Negative amortization may arise with payment-capped mortgages. Under the board's regulation, the lender must schedule a "catch-up" adjustment at least once every five years, so that the regular payment amount would then be sufficient to amortize the loan at the then-existing interest rate and remaining principal loan balance over the remaining term of the loan.

lender obviously can't survive on a fixed rate in today's market."

Initially, Woods expects to see home sales dropping off in the county followed by an upturn as consumers begin accepting the new rates.

Because of the difficulty of securing home loans with mortgages averaging 15.53 in late April, consumers will be willing to accept the adjustable rate mortgage, according to Diane Pattison of the Newport Board of Realtors.

"Right now a buyer can't get a loan of any kind," she said. "If someone's willing to take a risk, they might be able to get into the market."

"BUT THERE ARE a lot of people who won't take that risk."

Even with S&Ls more willing to make loans, potential homebuyers may still be locked out of the market because of more stringent qualifying stipulations.

"The adjustable rate mortgage will mean that it will be more difficult to qualify for a loan because of the higher interest rates and the increased monthly payment," said Century 21 training director Mary Lou Mathewson.

At the worst the new Bank Board plan could continue to keep future homebuyers out of an already tough market. At the best it could stimulate competition between S&Ls to offer terms acceptable to both the lender and the consumer.

"It's negative on one respect," explained Ms. Mathewson. "But I see it producing a lot of good things. It could drive lenders down to more reasonable rates."

• Now, while inflation renders most passbook savings rates a less than break even proposition, you may earn 18% to 20% through trust deed investments, *depending on the rates being charged the borrower.

• Unlike other investment alternatives such as Bonds (Corporate, U.S. Government and Federal Agency Securities); Tax Free Municipals; Mutual Funds; Complex Oil and Gas, Real Estate and other syndication Plans, the concept of Trust Deed Investing is a rather simple one — 18% to 20% INTEREST on invested capital, depending on the rates being charged the borrower. An investment characterized by stability, security, flexibility, consistency, liquidity and high income.

• Each short term loan arranged by Heritage Home Loans, Inc., (generally 1 to 6 years), is secured by California Real Estate. These loans vary in amount from as little as $3,000.00 to $100,000.00.

Mom,

I walk upon the rocky shore.
Her strength is in the oceans roar.
I glance into the shaded pool.
Her mind is there so calm & cool.
I hear sweet rippling of the sea;
Naught but her laughter 'tis to me.
I gaze into the starry sky;
And there I see her wondrous eyes.
I look into my inmost mind.
And hear her inspiration find.
In all I am and hear and see,
My precious mother is to me.

Love,
Lisa, Leslie, Brenda & Dad

Happy Mother's Day

At a big party, ask bystanders to call out the names of 8-10 famous people. Jot down their names on separate pieces of paper, fold each paper and drop it into a hat!

When this has been done, take the selected slip, hold it to your forehead and "concentrate." Alakazam! In a second, you reveal the person's name.

FOR SENATOR HOWARD BAKER (R.Tenn.)

Do you remember when you were first aware that your mother was interested and active in politics? — N.A., Burlington, Vt.

● Yes. It could well have been my first childhood memory. I come from a family that has a considerable history of women who have been involved in politics. My wife, Joy, is the daughter of the late Senator Everett Dirksen; my grandmother served as sheriff of Rome County, Tenn., and my mother represented the 2nd Family history: women in politics.

Congressional District from Tennessee in the United States House of Representatives. So, all of the women in my family, and in particular my mother, have long been in politics and working for the people of their various communities.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Information, please, on Mommie Dearest, the film based on Christina Crawford's book about her mother, Joan Crawford, starring Faye Dunaway. Does the film stick to the book? Does Christina ever interfere? — C.M., Little Rock, Ark.

● The movie, to be released in October, does follow the book. All the big scenes are there (beating Christina in front of reporters; the pool sequence when Joan challenges her daughter to swim, and won't let her win; ending with Christina getting cut out of the will). Christina does not come to the set. She feels it would be upsetting for the actress (Diana Scarwid) to know that the one she is portraying is watching her. Incidentally, Faye does not believe that Joan was all that bad.

Faye is Mommie Dearest (inset, Joan).

FOR MARIE OSMOND, recording star-actress

Was there anything that bothered your mother when you seemed set for a life in show business? — O.R., Council Bluffs, Iowa

● Yes, that I might disregard her training to turn me into a "lady." In fact, I'd get daily lectures on what I should and should not do to maintain my femininity and not give any cause for anyone to question it. In Mom's eyes, the three most important elements that girls should have are grace, dignity, style.

FOR JACQUES BELLINI, fashion designer

Did you inherit your love of clothes from your mother? — E. Gold, New York, N.Y.

● Yes, but my mother was not a dressmaker — she was an actress, one of the best-dressed women in Europe. When I was growing up, people believed in being nicely dressed, whether it was in the morning, afternoon or evening. I never saw my mother sloppily dressed, even when she was doing chores. That's when I formed an affection for clothes.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER, comedienne

Was your mother an evangelist? P.E., Biloxi, Miss.

● Your question must stem from my remarks that when I was a child, my mother was always quoting Bible passages to me. She never spoke to me in her own words; she preferred those of Shakespeare, Benjamin Franklin — or the Bible. This is the way she passed on motherly advice: "Haste makes waste, waste makes want; keep your nose to the grindstone and your shoulder to the wheel; work, for night is coming."

FOR NANCY FRIDAY, author of My Mother, My Self

You've said that you and your husband are childless by choice. Don't you like children? — T.F., Newton, N.J.

● Our decision not to have children is not based on liking or disliking children. It takes a special talent to be parents. We were sure of our talent for being married to each other, hopeful about our talent for writing, not sure at all about our talent for parenthood. You may love music but not feel you have to take up the violin. That's how we feel about children.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is it true that Rod Carew of the California Angels is very close to his mother? — B.V., Laramie, Wyo.

● Yes. He is devoted to Olga Carew, with whom he has an extremely close relationship. Last year, when his book Carew was published, he said, "My greatest pleasure is that my mom saw me accomplish what I once told her I would. I can never repay her for the sacrifices she made for her children. I respected her then, and now more as time goes on."

FOR STEPHEN KING, author of Danse Macabre

Do you really read all of those books with blurbs signed by you? — D.W. Jr., Wellsboro, Pa.

● I really do read all the novels that I blurb, and there's no pay involved. For every novel that you see which I have written a quote for, I read five or six that either don't interest me or strike me as shoddy. But, in such cases, I try to remember my mother's sage advice: "If you can't say something nice about people, don't say anything at all."

PRO Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president, Common Cause

Yes. Every year special-interest groups are giving Congressional candidates more and more campaign money. You don't need a calculator to figure out that that adds up to more and more power for special-interest groups. Today we are being asked to make sacrifices in the Government budget-cutting process. Shouldn't we be assured that those cuts won't depend on who gave which member of Congress the most campaign money? Public financing of Congressional campaigns would take special-interest cash out of national interest decision-making.

PRO AND CON

Should Congressional Elections Be Publicly Financed?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON John A. Kochevar, manager, Public Affairs Department, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.

Public financing is supposedly based on the premise that campaign spending is excessive. The clear result would be further protection of incumbents already benefiting from $1 million in perquisites. Combine free media exposure and mass mailing privileges, with equal limits on both candidates, and challengers have an obvious disadvantage. Were the $194.8 million spent during 1977-78 excessive? Then, Americans spent $200 million on garden hoses and $688 million on lipstick. Americans recognize public financing is an unwarranted infringement upon their voluntary political process.

Can the CIA Win the Spy War?

"We are in possibly the most menacing period since World War II," says the author, who believes that the answer to the Soviet challenge lies in strong leadership. Just how intelligent is our intelligence?

CIA Director William Casey conferring with President Reagan: Can he raise the level of U.S. intelligence?

An intelligent choice: CIA Deputy Director Bobby Ray Inman enjoys the "unqualified respect" of his peers.

By Tad Szulc

—In Saudi Arabia, radical plotters are conspiring to overthrow the rulers of the oil kingdom in an ominous replay of the Iranian revolution.

—In strife-ridden Central America, Cuban operatives are secretly delivering weapons to leftist rebels.

—In Western European capitals, Soviet diplomats are subtly seeking to encourage the new wave of neutralism.

—At their proving grounds in Central Asia, the Russians are flight-testing a new intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) with 10 nuclear warheads, a super-rocket designed to hit targets in the United States with deadly accuracy.

These are just a few of the crucial problems and dangers facing the United States at a time of rising tension with the Soviet Union and general international upheaval. We are in possibly the most menacing period since World War II.

For America to be able to deal effectively with threats of this kind, we need precise, detailed and timely knowledge of what is happening around the globe on a daily basis. In other words, the greatest self-defense requirement for the United States, as seen by the Reagan Administration, is a first-rate capability for gathering and interpreting intelligence — as well as for influencing events in foreign countries through secret means and resources.

But, according to the most experienced experts in Washington, United States Intelligence — the Central Intelligence Agency and its military sister agencies — has been falling short of superb performance, to say the least, in recent years. This is believed to be true of both "human" and technical intelligence, from cloak-and-dagger espionage to the spy-in-the-sky (satellite) surveillance of Soviet nuclear advances.

The rebuilding, streamlining and modernizing of American intelligence operations looms, therefore, as one of the highest priorities for the Reagan Administration and the new leadership team it fielded earlier this year. The decision to revive and step up covert activities abroad — ranging from clandestine arms aid to anti-Soviet fighters in Afghanistan to efforts at gaining decisive political influence in the petroleum-rich Persian Gulf — is part of the current upgrading plan. Much more must be done, however, to restore primacy to the United States in the elusive world of intelligence.

The immediate responsibility for improving American intelligence lies with William J. Casey, the 68-year-old New York lawyer who was named by President Reagan as Director of Central Intelligence after managing his election campaign. Under the law, Casey is head of the entire intelligence community (comprising the CIA; the Pentagon-run National Security Agency (NSA), which specializes in technical intelligence; the Defense Intelligence Agency, and the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research) as well as being Director of the CIA. He reports directly to the President and the National Security Council.

Thus far, Casey, a man who keeps an unusually low profile by Washington standards, has introduced no important structural changes to either the intelligence community or the CIA, and chances are that he will not do so. He told a Senate committee during his confirmation hearings that he opposed any sweeping reorganization of the Agency. Casey appears to think that he can accomplish his objective through a relaxation of restrictions on the CIA and the ending of its "institutional self-doubt," a reference to the low morale pervading the Agency since the Congressional investigations of the mid-1970's and continuing through the tenure of Admiral Stansfield Turner as CIA Director during the Carter Administration.

How well Casey will succeed remains a serious question mark in Washington. Though he has been touted as an "old hand" at intelligence, there are many doubts among intelligence professionals concerning his leadership qualities, including his limited experience in this field. Casey served for three wartime years as a London-based senior officer in the Office of Strategic Services, the CIA's forerunner, but did not join the CIA afterward. His only other direct exposure to intelligence was his service in 1976 on the Murphy Commission, which surveyed the work of the intelligence community. Casey's exposure to foreign affairs was confined to economics: During Nixon's second administration, he spent two years as Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

In running the CIA, Casey is known to have made only one major appointment in his first three months as boss: He shifted John N. McMahon from the post of Deputy Director for Operations, the Agency's clandestine side, to that of Deputy Director for Intelligence, which is the "white side," concerned with the collection and analysis of current intelligence. McMahon, a covert operations specialist, is the Agency's third Deputy Director for Intelligence in four years, a fact that may underscore the CIA's problems in obtaining and presenting intelligence to the nation's top policy-makers.

Perhaps the most glaring of the CIA's recent problems was the agency's failure to understand and interpret the events that led to the fall of the Shah of Iran in 1979. In the present international climate, a timely intelligence effort is vital to help shape American responses — situations in Saudi Arabia, the Persian Gulf and Central America are the leading concerns — but officials in and out of the intelligence community remain unconvinced that this capability has been improved under Casey.

An example of the difficulties in providing solid intelligence estimates was the recent dispute involving the CIA and military intelligence services. It concerned the degree of Soviet involvement in what the Administration has called "international terrorism." A preliminary report written by the Agency's National Foreign Assessments Center concluded that there was insufficient evidence to back up such a charge. The military agencies reacted by accusing the CIA of "shoddy" work, and Casey ordered his specialists to go back to the drawing board, an act that seemed to contradict his promise to the Senate that he would submit the intelligence community's views to the President "without subjective bias and in a manner that reflects strongly held differences within the intelligence community." Subsequently, concern developed among many CIA officers that Casey was being forced by the White House to "politicize" the intelligence product to meet the desires of policy-makers.

Politicizing intelligence is, of course, an extremely dangerous course. And it could be catastrophic for the national interest if the President and his Secretary of State were told what they wanted to hear — rather than the "unvarnished truth" in which intelligence professionals take pride.

Actually, the CIA has an in-house mechanism for overseeing the collection and analysis of intelligence. It is the little-known Senior Review Panel, created by Stansfield Turner and maintained by Casey. The panel is headed by former ambassador William Leonhart. But it is impossible for outsiders to know how effectively this group performs.

In overall terms, the ultimate quality of intelligence has to depend on the leadership of the intelligence community. Though the CIA faced awesome morale problems after the Congressional investigations of its controversial domestic and foreign operations — the domestic spying was simply illegal — Admiral Turner failed to provide inspiration for the thousands of operatives and analysts. Rightly or wrongly, he fired nearly 1,000 of the top people in clandestine services, which made him one of the most unpopular CIA directors in history.

Up until now, Casey does not seem to have imposed himself as a leader either. But the saving grace for the intelligence community and the CIA may be Casey's deputy, Vice Admiral Bobby Ray Inman, a man who enjoys unqualified respect among his peers in both the military and the Congress. Inman, 50, spent the last four years as Director of the National Security Agency, the multi-billion-dollar, top-secret institution in charge of technical intelligence, including overhead satellite reconnaissance, electronic monitoring of Soviet strategic developments, the interception of worldwide military communications and the devising and breaking of the most sophisticated secret codes.

Interestingly, Inman did not want the job in the first place, possibly fearing an over-politicization of the intelligence community, and it took a lot of pressure from President Reagan for him to accept it. When he did come aboard, however, the mild-mannered Admiral wasted no time in asserting himself. Shortly after Inman assumed his duties, a firestorm broke out in Washington over secret proposals — apparently drafted by middle-level officials in the CIA — for the resumption of domestic espionage by the Agency. It may have been a trial balloon by those in the Administration favoring domestic spying, but Inman summoned an unprecedented news conference at CIA Headquarters in Langley, Va., to deny that such plans were under serious consideration. He went as far as to threaten to resign if he were overruled. Casey, on the other hand, maintained public silence.

The whole question of CIA domestic activities — the question of whether civil rights of American citizens may be sacrificed to intelligence requirements — remains extremely sensitive politically. Domestic activities were formally forbidden in executive orders issued by Presidents Ford and Carter, and the Carter executive order is still in force. President Reagan is expected to issue his own executive order before long, defining the parameters of intelligence operations. But it is highly unlikely that he will grant the CIA license to pry into the lives of Americans.

When it comes to revitalizing covert operations abroad, there is a solid consensus in the Administration and the intelligence community that such activities are warranted by the international situation. Casey has gone on record before the Senate as a strong advocate of the removal of constraints on clandestine actions anywhere in the world; he's said that "there is a point at which rigid accountability, detailed accountability, can impair performance." Under the provisions of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1981, two Congressional committees exercise oversight powers over covert action, with the provision of timely, prior notification by the intelligence community of proposed operations. In practice, however, the Administration has the green light to do what it pleases in this area.

The Congressional committees have no power to forbid covert actions they may consider overly risky or questionable, although they may bring their objections before the President. But this is unlikely to happen. The new political climate in Washington — and in the country — is clearly favorable to the existence of an aggressive and unfettered CIA just as it is to huge defense expenditures to enhance the might of the United States. Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater, the new chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, enthusiastically supports a revitalized intelligence community and appears to have no reservations about covert actions of any kind.

The range of covert actions is unlimited, although the CIA will certainly abstain from returning to its alleged attempts in the 1960's to assassinate such foreign leaders as Cuban President Fidel Castro. An immediate priority may be a marked increase in the clandestine supply of modern weapons to Afghan guerrillas. The CIA had engaged in it to a limited extent under the Carter Administration, but President Reagan has stated that he sees no reason why the United States should not do more for the Afghans, who have been fighting Soviet occupation for the last year-and-a-half. This, of course, fits into the broader anti-Soviet strategy of the new Administration.

By the same token, the Administration is seeking the repeal of legislation, passed in 1976, banning CIA covert action in Angola in support of guerrillas opposing that country's Marxist regime and the Cuban combat troops backing it. Reagan says the legislation should be cancelled as "a matter of principle" — he feels that there should be no laws specifically ruling out covert operations in individual countries. But, as a practical matter, the Angolan guerrillas would unquestionably gain American support in addition to the South African support they already enjoy. The CIA is already extremely active in Central America and the Caribbean, regions considered vital to United States security, where revolutionary winds keep blowing. The volatility of the Middle East and the Persian Gulf may also call for more CIA clandestine operations.

But perhaps the most serious United States deficiency is in technical intelligence, partly as a result of recent political upheavals. Until the 1979 Iranian revolution, the United States was able to monitor around-the-clock Soviet ICBM tests in Central Asia from two NSA stations in Iran. The importance of these stations was that they provided a line-of-sight coverage of the Soviet proving grounds, allowing full interception of radio signals emitted by the missiles in various pre-launch and post-launch stages. With the Shah's fall, the stations had to be closed, depriving American intelligence of some of the most significant strategic data.

In a curious fashion, the failure of political intelligence — the CIA's inability to predict the Iranian revolution despite a multitude of signs pointing in that direction — led to the failure in strategic intelligence. Because the Carter Administration was so relaxed about the stability of Iran and the security of the monitoring stations there, it delayed in 1977 the development of a new satellite surveillance system that would have greatly added to the monitoring capabilities of the United States. Despite a crash effort started in mid-1979, the new system will not be deployed for another two years, placing the United States at a serious intelligence disadvantage.

Still, the intelligence community, notably the NSA, has performed extremely well in observing Soviet military movements. It provided the White House late in 1979 with accurate reports on the preparations for the invasion of Afghanistan, and it has kept policy-makers abreast of Soviet troop movements around Poland.

Since then, the United States has been moving apace with the modernization of its technical intelligence resources. A new spy plane — the TR-1S — has been developed to add to the capability offered by the SR-71 and the more obsolete U-2 aircraft. The TR-1S is expected to be deployed in the United States as well as in Britain early in 1983.

All in all, American intelligence stands at a crossroads. It is facing unprecedented challenges, but it must move rapidly to improve everything from the collection and interpretation of information gathered abroad, to covert operations in foreign countries, to technological surveillance.

Budgetary and technical resources are available. So is professional talent.

The Administration and a majority in the Congress stand firmly behind the intelligence community. The crucial element, then, is leadership. It remains unclear whether William Casey, the Director of Central Intelligence, can handle the assignment, even with Vice Admiral Inman's help. But further, and possibly decisive, help may come from another quarter: Vice President George Bush, himself a former CIA Director and, since late March, the President's designated "crisis manager." The Vice President is known to have kept an eye on the Intelligence Community since the Reagan Administration took office, and, in a crunch, he may play a central role in the rebirth of United States intelligence. FW

Observations

Mom and apple pie. Almost that American is our country's tradition of looking out for each other, the neighborhood, the needy, the elderly, the sick. What other nation can boast over 37 million citizen volunteers, helping their communities through millions of organizations? Or more than $36 billion in individual donations to charities and churches? Next most generous donor: business, now giving even more than private foundations. We're proud to be part of that "roll up your sleeves and pitch in" tradition because everybody benefits when one part of society helps another. A healthy society and a healthy economy go hand in hand.

Underwriting toe shoes. America enjoys 1,600 symphony orchestras. Its 5,500 museums welcome half a billion visitors a year, six times the turnout at all pro football, baseball, and basketball games. Ballet and modern dance attendance has leaped 21 times in 15 years, giving life to 800 dance companies. But who underwrites all those expenses, like a ballerina wearing out three pairs of $30 toe shoes in a single performance? Once again, it's individuals and business who pick up the biggest tabs. When last added up, business gave more to the performing and visual arts than state and local governments, foundations, and Uncle Sam combined. Surprised?

"This Mother's Day present is made possible by a grant from us."

Mobilizing help. Who helped Long Island's Eglevsky Ballet put on its "Nutcracker" season, won a volunteer award as a YMCA "Man of the Year," and battled successfully to keep a rural hospital open? Mobil people, and that's enough to make a mother proud. And, on a larger scale, who helps support a vital medical center for burn victims, hundreds of colleges, and over 300 local groups from the Gulf of Maine Aquarium to the Bakersfield Community Theatre in California? Mobil itself, as part of its overall contributions program. And, nationwide, we help fund the Public Broadcasting Service and sponsor the USA/Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Keeping good company. Because companies are groups of people, they can also help revitalize yesterday's cities, or support today's day-care centers and van pools—while performing their main functions: providing products, services, and jobs. All this takes money to invest, and earnings for a company's investors, the stockholders. And that means you, if you and yours are among the tens of millions of Americans who benefit from mutual funds, hospital and college endowments, private and government pension plans, foundation grants, annuity investments, or union welfare funds. America's economy is a pie big enough to nourish everyone, if we work together to keep it growing.

It's a fact: Corporate America's total contributions budget has now climbed well beyond $2 billion a year.

FAMILY REPORT

Return of the Bedtime Story

Despite the lure of television and the time constraints on families in which both parents work, the bedtime story may be reclaiming its rightful place as a childhood ritual. Said one child psychologist: "It is time we stopped sending our children to bed and began putting them there. The bedtime story is not only shared pleasure for both parent and child, but it also deepens vital emotional links between them."

Experts agree that the bedtime story serves a number of valuable purposes. For one thing, it eases the transition for a young child from the activity of the day to the quiet of the night. For another, it marks a period when a child receives his parents' complete attention in a loving atmosphere — a combination that often enables older children to raise questions that may be troubling them.

Children's librarians say that some parents worry about how to tell a bedtime story: Here are some hints:

- Tell a story you enjoy. If you're bored with a story, then your child probably will be, too.

- Familiarize yourself with the story so you can tell it or read it with some feeling.

- Don't turn a bedtime story into a moral lesson.

- Don't give way to pleas for "just one more story"; stop when it's time to turn out the lights, and be firm about it.

Mismatched Couples

Most people have no problem identifying themselves as a "night person" or a "morning person." The former hates to get up when the alarm rings, doesn't function well till afternoon and reaches his peak of energy in the evening hours. The latter wakes up easily and alertly but is ready for bed by 10 P.M. or so.

Sociologists Bert Adams and Ronald Cromwell point out that whether a married couple's time cycles match or conflict can have a substantial — but an often overlooked — effect on their relationship. There may be a higher level of conflict and marital stress between partners whose biological clocks are out of sync.

Some couples who are mismatched on the day-night cycle report such problems as: a lack of time for serious conversation; a low level of sexual activity ("I'm tired at night and go to bed for rest, not sex, but my husband is sleepy in the morning when I enjoy sexual activity the most"); difficulty in meshing social engagements.

Fortunately, say the researchers, many mismatched couples seem to understand their dilemma and are motivated to do something about it. A "morning" person may take an afternoon nap in order to be fresh during the evening; a "night" person will get up early for church to please his or her partner.

When Husbands Are 'Battered'

Though society's concern has focused recently on battered wives, evidence has been accumulating to indicate that husbands are also a frequent target of physical abuse by their spouses. According to a major study of domestic violence by three experts in the field, more than two million men suffer assaults by their wives each year.

In Behind Closed Doors — Violence in the American Family, sociologists Murray Straus, Richard Gelles and Susan Steinmetz report that more than twice as many wives as husbands throw things at their spouses. Women, more than men, kick and hit their partners. (In some instances, husbands who abuse their wives do more physical damage because they are stronger.)

In Los Angeles, for example, 15 percent of all domestic violence cases handled by the district attorney's office involved abused husbands. The victims were chiefly older men married to younger women, men who were outweighed by their wives and infirm or disabled husbands. One psychologist has suggested that it may be time to set up shelters for abused husbands, as has been done in many communities for abused wives.

One sign of the changing times occurred recently in Florida, where a middle-aged man successfully pleaded self-defense and was acquitted after he shot and killed his wife. The man testified that during four years of marriage the woman had beaten, stabbed, shot at and hurled acid at him.

And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, — and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back... or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because I won't cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material. That's the deal. Return it in 31 days — and I'll send back your check or money order — uncashed.

How do you know I'll do it? Well, if you really want to be on the safe side, postdate your check for a month from today — plus 2 additional weeks. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, look it over, try it out.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money... working a few hours a day... about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their checks for at least 31 days, they had nothing to lose.

They were right. And here's what they gained:

"Made $50,000 just fooling around"

"In February 1974 you sent me (for ten bucks) your Lazy Man's Way to Riches. Since then I have made approximately 50 grand ($50,000) just fooling around on the basis of your advice. You see, I really am lazy — otherwise I could have made 50 million! Thank you!"

Mr. R. McK., Atlanta, GA

"$24,000 in 45 days"

"...received $24,000.00 in the mail the last 45 days."

"Thanks again."

Mr. E.G.N., Matewan, W.VA

Made enough to retire at 41

"If it hadn't happened to me, I wouldn't have believed it... A few years ago, I had nothing to lose. I was unemployed and broke." "Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."

R.A., Huntington Beach, Calif.

From $50 to $565 per week

"...when I sent for your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches), I was delivering the L.A. Times for $50 per week... Now... I earn an average of $565 per week, have $7,000 in the bank and a condominium that's worth $85,000..."

J.N. Culver City, CA

"There's no stopping me"

"Since I've got your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches) in July, I've started 4 companies... there's no stopping me and I'm so high I need chains to keep me on the ground."

M.T. Portland, OR

"Wow, it does work!"

"Oddly enough, I purchased Lazy Man's Way to Riches some six months ago, or so, read it... and really did nothing about it. Then, about three weeks ago, when I was really getting desperate about my financial situation, I remembered it, re-read it, studied it, and this time, put it to work and WOW, it does work! Doesn't take much time, either... I guess some of us just have to be at a severe point of desperation before we overcome the ultimate laziness, procrastination."

Mr. J.K., Anaheim, CA

Made $70,000

"A $70,000 thanks to you for writing The Lazy Man's Way to Riches. That's how much I've made..."

"I use this extra income for all of the good things in life, exotic vacations, classic automobiles, etc. Soon I hope to make enough to quit my regular job and devote full time to making money the easy way..."

Mr. D.R., Newport Beach, CA

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life... One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership... I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B.F., Pascagoula, Miss.

"Steadily upward ever since"

"I ordered Lazy Man's Way to Riches in June... by September, my career was launched and has gone steadily upward ever since."

Mrs. B.A., Walnut Creek, CA

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it; but that's not bad for five days' work."

M.D., Topeka, Kansas

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question. How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

A month from today, you can be nothing more than 30 days older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon to my publisher now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Some have called it a Miracle. Some have called it Magic. You'll call it "The Secret of the Ages."

As for me, I thank God that before he died Millionaire Joe Karbo left, for all to share, the secret of "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches." The above story, which is in his own words, is his gift to you.

Because of the nature of this special offering, we can guarantee delivery only to the readers of this newspaper who respond to this printed notice before midnight, June 14.

After that date, orders will be filled on a "first come, first served" basis as long as supplies last.

To order, write your name and address on the coupon and send it with your $10 today.

Remember, the only way to guarantee prompt delivery is to respond before midnight, June 14.

If you have any questions, you may call us at (714) 846-5160 or (213) 592-5595 during normal business hours. Make your check or money order payable to Financial Publishers.

You may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for at least 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material — for any reason — within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

SORRY — NO COD'S

PROOF!

Don't take my word for it. These are excerpts from articles in newspapers and magazines:

Time:

He only works half the year in his stunning office on California's Sunset Beach, and even when he's there he puts in short hours... In other words, Joe Karbo, 48, is the prototype for... "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

Seattle Times:

Is it all honest? A man who has done business with him says Karbo's reputation is excellent, and that he has managed to conduct mutually beneficial deals with him with nothing but a handshake and an oral agreement.

Want to be rich? Take my advice and follow his.

Boston Herald-American:

The book has drawn hundreds of letters from persons who have profited by it...

Los Angeles Herald-Examiner:

An unpretentious millionaire, Joe Karbo of Huntington Harbor is a vibrant, living testimonial to his intellectual, pragmatic conviction.

Forbes:

After bouncing around show biz, advertising, and real estate, he made his fortune... Last year (1972) he made $250,000.

Money Making Opportunities:

Maybe Joe Karbo has the secret. Don't you think you owe it to yourself to find out what it is all about?... I just finished it — and I'm off on a vacation myself. Get the idea?

Long Beach Independent:

He's programmed the path to riches for the lazy man.

The Kansas City Star:

He prints statements like "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money." He should have added that too many people these days are too busy earning a living to do any living.

PERFORMING ARTS OF DIET AND NUTRITION

By Marilyn Hansen

Everyone these days is concerned with the body beautiful and maintaining good health. From the U.S. Department of Agriculture Recommended Dietary Guidelines,* we get the following suggestions:

If you want to lose weight:

3. Avoid Too Much Fat, Saturated Fat and Cholesterol.

- Select lean hamburger and lean roasts, chops and steak trimmed of visible fat.

- Drain off meat drippings.

- Limit amount of margarine or other fats used on bread and vegetables.

- Emphasize low fat and skim milk and reduce the amount of fat in other foods when whole milk or cheese is used.

DIET AND NUTRITION

- Use fewer creamed foods and rich desserts.
- Watch the amount of salad dressing used.

4. Eat Foods with Adequate Amounts of Starch and Fiber

- Provide more vegetables and fruits.
- Include potatoes, sweet potatoes, yams, corn, peas and dried beans more often.
- Emphasize whole-grain cereal products, such as brown rice, oatmeal and whole-wheat cereals and breads. Remember starches are no more fattening than any other food. The question is how much you eat. Fats have more than twice the calories of starch of equal measure.

5. Avoid Too Much Sugar

- Avoid or cut down on very sweet foods.
- Reduce the amount of sugar in recipes for baked goods and desserts.
- Rely more on fresh fruit and canned fruits packed in light juice or light syrup.
- Limit amounts of sugar, jams, jellies and syrups.

6. Avoid Too Much Sodium and Salt

- Use few salty, processed foods.
- Use little or no salt and assume that none is added at the table.
- Limit highly salted condiments and seasonings and snack foods.

The guidelines present a suggested good eating pattern for all Americans. Important also is to increase physical activity in the manner that is suitable to your age and health condition. Increased physical activity adds a feeling of well-being and ease with one's body and adds zest to everyday life.

ELIMINATE YOUR BIGGEST WATER WASTER

Save 20,000 Gallons of Water Every Year with the Remarkable PARTALL™ DUAL FLUSH UNIT

CONTROLS THE VOLUME OF TOILET WATER USED

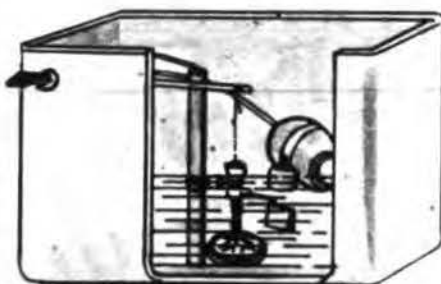

It only takes half a tank of water to eliminate the liquid waste in bathroom commodes, yet the conventional unit you have now is using a full tank. Nobody ever did anything about it until Partall developed this revolutionary new Dual Flush Unit. It's really 2 units in one. Press the "PART" section of the handle for liquid waste. It uses only half the tank of water (more than enough to fully clear the commode.) Press "ALL" section of the handle for solid waste and you're using the entire tank of water. Simple.

SAVES YOU WATER! SAVES YOU MONEY!

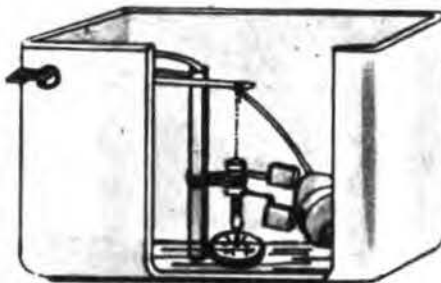

If we all pitch in and do our part, we'll eliminate most of the water shortage problems today. The PARTALL unit will save 2½ to 3 gallons of water per flush and an average family of four will save as much as 20,000 to 25,000 gallons of water a year. That's also going to save you a lot of money. By governing water volume you'll keep your sewer lines clean and prevent backups in septic tanks. The cost of the unit is incredibly small if you look at all the money it will save.

ANYONE CAN INSTALL IT IN JUST MINUTES!

It's very simple and it doesn't take any special tools to do it. All you're doing is adding it to the basic parts of your present unit. Beautifully engineered, the PARTALL is made to last and it's guaranteed against defects for 1 full year. So get the PARTALL now and start saving water and money.

PEOPLE

A Candid Talk With Bette Davis

Teacher's pet: Davis with grandson Ashley Hyman, who co-stars as her pupil in the upcoming TV movie Family Reunion.

By Katrine Ames

Seldom has weather been more portentous than on the day Bette Davis was born: She arrived "between a clap of thunder and a streak of lightning." It was quite possibly the only time she has been upstaged.

But the elements were not to outdo Bette Davis; she would chart her own brilliant and stormy course. The highlights of that well-documented life — two Oscars (for Dangerous and Jezebel), four husbands, battles with the studio, contract suspensions — seem as much our history as hers.

Not willing to rest on her formidable reputation or late-show legacy of 70-plus films, she has undertaken a new prime-time career in movies made expressly for television: The Dark Secret of Harvest Home, White Mama, Strangers and the upcoming Family Reunion (to be shown on NBC). Davis plays a New England schoolteacher whose town is threatened with an encroaching shopping mall. Outraged, she rounds up several families to enlist support in opposing the local government. "I hope this will give somebody a thought about the destruction of small towns," says Davis, "and about their families. The family thing is disappearing in America and that's what our story is all about."

The "family thing" has a particular significance: Co-starring with Davis in the role of one of the students is her 11-year-old grandson, Ashley Hyman. The decision to cast him was not a nepotism one — Davis has never been intent on founding a theatrical dynasty. "It was mostly Ashley's idea. I didn't know if he'd be any good. I took a terrific chance from the standpoint of not wrecking his life, if he'd been fired and had to go back and say, 'I didn't make it.' But he's done very well and it's up to him whether it's a one-and-only time or not."

Davis disdains the snobism certain of her colleagues and some of the public have about TV movies. "It's terrible. We're making motion pictures — the only difference is that there are commercials when they're released. It's exactly the same attitude that existed in the theater for years, until many Hollywood people came back and resurrected the theater....All acting is the same."

Davis is decidedly unnostalgic about the Hollywood of yesterday. "Everybody talks about all those years as if it was all poetry," she says. "The golden years were no different, and they were not golden. We worked very more than a man.

Like any man, Jesus Christ ate and slept. But he did other things beyond man's power. Like walking on water. Like raising the dead to life.

In view of this, it seems strange that some would say or sing, "He is only a man." Given the evidence, one ought wonder at least whether he was in fact God as he claimed.

If Christ is indeed God, wouldn't that imply that he is more than a remembered hero or teacher? Wouldn't that imply that in some way he is alive, present and active in today's world? If so, could one afford to ignore him? Or have the fuzziest notions about him? Is your present unhappiness perhaps the result of never really coming to grips with the Jesus-God question and its meaning in your life?

These are important questions. They will not go away. Somehow, they have to be answered. To help you with the answers, we would like to send you a free booklet: "Savior of All Mankind." We think you will find it helpful. Write today. No one will call.

With Anne Baxter and Gary Merrill in All About Eve (1950): "I learn the lines and pray."

Bette and Henry Fonda in Jezebel (1938), a performance that brought her second Oscar.

hard and there were never more than five or six great films in any year, or more than maybe five people a year who kept on going. I'm only lucky I didn't die earlier. The golden years were murder, just like it is now."

One of Davis's objections to the state of the film art concerns what she considers the unconscionable amount of time and money spent in production. "It took four weeks to make Dark Victory, and Jezebel took six. Movies for TV have that schedule, the kind my generation was brought up with. We didn't sit around for three years making a film. God, can you imagine playing a part for three years? I'd lose my mind. It's not necessary — it's the self-indulgence of a director who's become egomaniacal. They keep getting money because Hollywood is a town of fear and always has been."

Such strong will is something audiences associate with characters Davis has played. And yet, though the evil women she's portrayed may be the most fascinating and memorable, she has also taken on the parts of "many wimpy people, many weak people. I've played all kinds: That was the basis of my career. It would have been very simple just to have gotten into one niche, but I didn't allow it. I fought for my parts. There's the old expression that you get more with sugar than with vinegar, but I didn't and don't have time for that, to play the game of politics."

Does she have much use for theories of acting? "Claude Rains once said, 'I learn the lines and pray to God,' and that's what I do. I walk in and play it. Acting is a question of being yourself and becoming somebody else. That's all there is to it."

At 73, Davis has few regrets and no thoughts of retiring. When she moved back to California recently, it was not to improve her golf game but to keep from stagnating. Her children are grown and she had lived in the Connecticut countryside for 10 years: "I have a terrific tendency to become a hermit. I could have stayed there happily year in and year out, but that's not very healthy mentally."

Not surprisingly, Davis has had no trouble keeping her personal and professional lives separate. She has always taken her fan mail seriously and attended to it herself. "It's very important. And if somebody sits down and writes you a smashing letter, for heaven's sake acknowledge it."

She has no sympathy for stars who bemoan their lack of privacy. "It depends on you. I had wonderful months and years of my own life. You have complete charge of how much privacy you have. If you're out in public you don't, but you have to expect it and God help you when no one's interested because then you've had it. It's part of an acting career in motion pictures and without it you won't have it. I don't care if you do the best work on the screen in the world."

If she were starting out now, Davis says, she'd either be a criminal lawyer — which, she believes, calls for theatrics — or a psychologist. She would eschew acting not because she doesn't enjoy it but "because there's no way to have my kind of career anymore. I had to play all kinds of awful parts, yes, but that's how I learned. Without the studio system, there is no continuity of performance. We became part of people's lives. I adore the medium of film; I never missed having an audience because it was never my big kick. The doing of it is the big thrill. Thank God I came along when I did because there was a chance for me then. And I loved it."

PAYING FOR IT

The causes of our continual inflation are many, but one fact seems more than coincidental, says Terry Galanoy, author of Charge It!: This inflation is roughly 10 years old, and so is the tremendous growth in the use of the bank credit cards (Visa and MasterCard).

"Twenty percent of our inflation may be due to these cards," says Galanoy. "Last year the bank cards issued

Charles Waller

$51 billion of unsecured, 'plastic' credit in the U.S."

Often with devastating results, says Galanoy, who cites these statistics: In 1980 personal bankruptcy soared 82 percent; 100,000 Americans visited credit counselors; one out of every five dollars we earned went to pay off debts, and one out of every three Americans already owed 35 to 50 percent of his income.

Yet Americans show no sign of easing up. "We're having a love affair with our bank cards," says Galanoy. "However, we have to realize why our economy isn't working. The American Dream can't be supplied to everyone at the same time."

A MAN'S WORK IS OFTEN DONE

Even though more men every day help their pregnant wives in the childbirth process, evidence indicates their active participation usually ends at the moment of birth. "Numerous studies show the time fathers spend with their newborn children is shockingly low, perhaps as little as five minutes a day," says Myra Leifer, assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Leifer says this is not entirely men's fault, that the work structure imposes many constraints. Also, she notes, "Many families plan on having their children to coincide with a step up in the man's career, a promotion, for instance. So the baby comes when the husband is under great pressure to produce professionally."

Employment practices such as paternity leave, flex-time and days off when a child is sick — all common in Scandinavian countries — could help, says Leifer. "We need these so a father can become incorporated in his new family, so he's no longer an alien who's suddenly kicked out of the nest."

TIME OUT!

Next time you're at work and your mind begins wandering off to Tahiti or your body meanders down to the water cooler, relax: Experts agree we have to occasionally get away from work — even while still there.

"We've always accepted breaks from physical work," explains Richard Shell, professor of industrial engineering ing at the University of Cincinnati. "But as jobs become more mentally oriented, breaks are essential to avoid mental fatigue and to increase productivity."

Shell says that breaks should constitute about 15 percent of the average workday, not including lunch. In a typical eight hours of work, this amounts to 72 break minutes, which should be stacked, says Shell, to interrupt your most intense periods of mental activity.

DOGFACE

Mrs. Zella Llewellyn, who owns a kennel in Alvin, Texas, with her husband, Richard, recently sent us this photo of a sorrowful-looking dog whose skin resembles an accordion. It's a Chinese Shar-Pei, and Mrs. Llewellyn recalls that encountering the breed brought love at first sight...well, sort of. "It was so ugly," she says, "I knew I had to have one."

The Shar-Pei has existed for centuries in China's southern provinces; ceramic statuettes of the breed trace it back to 200 B.C. By the 20th century, though, the Shar-Pei was almost extinct. It was first imported into the U.S. in 1966, and there are 1,000 in this country today (up from 40 in 1975).

THE SLENDER THREAD

Anorexia nervosa — a psychological eating disorder in which young women literally starve themselves to death — affected some 100,000 Americans last year. It's been estimated that one out of every 100 women between the ages of 14 and 28 may be developing the illness. And last year 5,000 anorexics died.

Monday night, ABC will present The Best Little Girl in the World, the sensitive portrayal of "Casey," a young girl from an educated, successful family who seemingly has it all, yet relentlessly, obsessively pursues thinness. By the way, to take on the lead role, actress Jennifer Jason Leigh actually lost 18 of her 104 pounds — but under a doctor's supervision.

DR. NOSE

Sniffing around for new business, a Philadelphia plastic surgeon has come up with a beauty of an idea. Free of charge, Dr. Julius Newman, or "Dr. Nose," as he's often called, sends his chauffeur-driven limousine 45 miles east to Atlantic City. While husbands gamble at beach-side casinos, vacationing wives are picked up, undergo various cosmetic snips and tucks and then are whisked back the next day.

Newman, chairman of the department of cosmetic and aesthetic surgery at Graduate Hospital, says he's had a dozen patients (including three men) chauffeured in during the first month. The most common requests: nose jobs, followed by face lifts, eye lifts and such body work as breast implants and tummy tucks. A nose job costs $1,500 while a face lift goes for $2,000 to $3,000. So far nobody's tried to pay with a bagful of gambling chips.

"My limo has a color TV, full bar, stereo tape player," says Newman. "The patients can just sit back and relax. It's almost a continuation of their vacation."

Panthenol

Hair THICKENER & Conditioner

Famous formula releases B-vitamin power for thicker, fuller hair

PANTHENOL is the famous special B-vitamin that thickens and strengthens each hair from the inside to give it a more natural, resilient fullness, without the limp heaviness produced by less penetrating oily hair conditioners or thickeners. PANTHENOL is actually absorbed by each little hair shaft, one by one, to help increase hair thickness many times over, and to saturate dry, brittle hair with nourishing moisture. This famous PANTHENOL-enriched formula helps strengthen and revitalize weak hair, encourages new hair growth to replace split ends.

In a five-part interview with David Hartman airing on ABC's Good Morning America, Monday through Friday at 7AM, Miss Bette Davis, whose marriages all ended in divorce, says that, "If today's morality existed when I was young, I might never have married because there's no question about it, the big romance of my life, really, underneath, was the work I do."

Lynda Carter fans won't be disappointed at designer Bob Mackie's dazzling costumes for her newest variety show. The statuesque Miss Carter, whose favorite at-home garb is faded jeans and work shorts is equally at ease in Mackie's eye-catching creations, which she proves in her third musical showcase, "Lynda Carter's Celebration." The variety special, with guest stars Ray Charles, Jerry Reed and Chris Evert Lloyd, airs Monday at 8PM on CBS. The special emphasizes the former Wonder Woman's singing, and for those numbers her costumes include a blue-sequined jumpsuit, a shoulder-baring black velvet gown with panels of glittering beading and a bouffant shocking pink taffeta gown. Miss Carter's big dance number, a strenuous flamenco, gave Mackie his toughest problem—providing a costume that looks fragile but is sturdy enough to hold up for hours of action equal to an Olympic routine. Miss Carter found it took some doing to handle her gown's heavy ruffled train, essential to the classic flamenco dance movements. Manipulating the big ruffled train was a problem at first but she soon overcame the obstacle in true Wonder Woman fashion.

The "All-Star Salute to Mother's Day" is exactly what the name implies: a television special devoted to celebrities paying homage to their mothers as well as non-pros saluting their celebrity moms. The special airs on NBC, appropriately on Mother's Day, Sunday at 9PM. A staggering array of Hollywood personalities have been assembled including Robert Reynolds, Janet Leigh, Lee Remick, Richard Mandel, Gladys Williams, Yvette Vickers, Claude Akins, Don Rickles, Roy Cohn, Billy Schrader, Brooke Shields, Donald O'Connor, David Copperfield, Roy Taylor, Bobby Vinton, Michelle Lee, Taylor, Roger Ebert, and others. In one segment, Billy Schrader and his mother, Rose (pictured), Mrs. Schrader reveals that she always felt a special bond with her son. Much of the show is devoted to entertainment, including Donald O'Connor singing a duet number to his mother, Janet Leigh, at the age of two, Michelle Lee singing "My Mother's Name," David Copperfield and his mother performing magic, Bobby Vinton and Taylor Brooks singing songs their mothers liked and an outrageous comedy bit by Roy Taylor and his mother.

Five Characters in One Role

David Birney is soon to be seen in the most emotionally challenging role—or is it five roles?—of his versatile career.

Heralded for his stage performances and readily recognizable in the television and film mediums, Birney portrays five characters in one—four alter-egos that live within the body of one man—in The Five of Me, a new motion picture-for-television about a man tormented by a multiple personality, airing on The CBS Tuesday Night Movies at 9PM.

To prepare for his role, Birney read "The Five of Me," the autobiography of a multiple personality victim, Henry Hawksworth, upon which the movie is based. Birney also had numerous conversations with Dr. Ralph B. Allison, the psychiatrist who treated the real-life Hawksworth, and who served as psychiatric consultant for the film.

"Dr. Allison sent me about thirteen hours of tapes," Birney said, "offering a variety of psychiatric patients and their therapists, each with varied personalities and in different situations. I learned many fascinating things—among them that it is rare to find a man with a multiple-personality condition, and that the disorder appears to occur, if it's going to evolve at all, when the person is a child at the stage of having imaginary friends."

"Also, multiple personality usually occurs in childhood, due to some severe sexual trauma. The character I portray was terrorized by a mentally disturbed father into believing he would be castrated. To escape the threat, he became other people."

Those other people included "Dana," a successful businessman who took the blame for everything the others had done; "Johnny," a sadistic hell-raiser who often landed "Dana" in jail; "Peter," an innocent child-like personality with the gift of clairvoyance; and "Phil," a Korean war hero and the one who appeared to save "Dana" whenever events got out of control.

"In order to get a feeling for the character of 'Peter,' the seven-year-old child living in the grown man's body," Birney said, "I spent some extra time with my six-year-old daughter, Kate—observing her manner, watching her play, listening to her talk about her toys, her dress. There are many things a grown man can't do that a six-year-old can because of the difference in body size and flexibility."

"The hardest scenes were the ones with the therapist about the childhood terror. You really don't want to go back, but you need to put those feelings to rest in some way."

"Emotionally, it was a very demanding role. I knew it was going to be extraordinarily painful and that I wouldn't be the nicest person to be around for the weeks it took to film the movie. You experience a tremendous amount of pressure on your body. After the filming was over, I found it hard to get my energy back. I think a role like this one uses a part of you that you can't recover easily."

"I felt the role in The Five of Me was one that I really should do because it was so unlike the things I usually do. Television is a good medium for me in that it gives me the chance to span a range and do the kind of work I haven't had the opportunity to do before."

COVER CLOSE-UP

THE STAR MAKER

Rock Hudson and Suzanne Pleshette, two of television's favorite performers who took sabbatical leave from series work for a couple of years, return in The Star Maker, a four-hour, two-part dramatic miniseries on NBC's Monday and Tuesday Night at the Movies at 9PM both nights.

Hudson, one of the world's top motion picture and television stars, left the hit series McMillan and Wife in 1977 after six years.

Pleshette, of course, played Bob Newhart's wife for six years on the hit series, The Bob Newhart Show, which signed off, except for re-runs, in 1978.

"In The Star Maker, I played a great Hollywood director who molds young starlets into superstars. This is fiction, of course, but it is a real Hollywood story full of scenes that are awfully close to reality," Hudson says.

"And I play Margot Murray, the wife and latest star that star maker Danny Youngblood (Hudson) has created," says Suzanne, who continues to be as slim and trim as she was when she took her leave of absence.

There are some new faces in the miniseries including that of Teri Copley who has a Hollywood story to compare with the famous Schwabs drugstore legend of Lana Turner.

Teri, who is 19, portrays Angel, one of the starlets Danny discovers and brings along professionally despite her dotting stage mother played by Brenda Vaccaro. He ultimately marries her.

"Early this year I had an interview with a producer but I arrived late. I not only didn't get interviewed but that producer's assistant told me I was too old for the part anyway," Copley recalls.

"I was pretty well crushed and ran down the hall to catch an elevator wanting to get out of there as quickly as I could. But the elevator door slammed in my face. That is when things turned for the better," Copley says, adding: "The elevator was opposite the offices of a top Hollywood agent who happened to be closing shop. He asked if I was an actress and gave me a card to come back for an interview."

"I not only signed with that agency but I got a job the first time I went out on an interview for a part in Fantasy Island," Copley recalls.

Melanie Griffith, who stars as Dawn, the first starlet to be groomed by Danny after Margot graciously unties their ties and finds a new love, declares, "I'm not really a newcomer, but my name isn't a household word either."

The beautiful, statuesque Melanie, who stands 5'8" tall, is the daughter of actress Tippi Hedren and has appeared in the movies Night Moves with Gene Hackman and The Drowning Pool with Paul Newman.

"In Night Moves, I remember that director Arthur Penn kept asking me to act sexy and swing my hips. It took me a while just to get over the embarrassment, but being sexy in this is much easier," the lovely Melanie assures.

Director Danny deals with even more beauty when he has affairs with the ambitious Susan, played by Cathie Shirriff, and further when he interviews erotic dancer Honey, portrayed by April Clough.

Danny's last conquest is his discovery of a beautiful young girl, Kelly, at an ice cream store.

Kristian Alfonso, a young model from Boston, in her first acting role has the looks of a young Elizabeth Taylor "and she can act too" says Hudson.

Asked about working with young talent, Rock replied, "My attitude towards newcomers is very much influenced by my own experience. Some veterans didn't help me much, but others like Arthur Kennedy and Jane Wyman did. I try to treat the young performer with the same consideration Jane gave me in Magnificent Obsession."

The Star Maker also stars Ed McMahon as Hudson's screenwriting sidekick, Jeffrey Tambor as Hudson's producer and Jack Scalia.

Rock Hudson stars as a famous Hollywood movie director known for his ability to create starlets who often become his wives and (clockwise, from bottom) Melanie Griffith, Cathie Shirriff, Kristian Alfonso, Suzanne Pleshette, April Clough and Teri Copley portray the women in his life.

Annette O'Toole portrays country music singer Tammy Wynette, and Cooper Huckabee plays Miss Wynette's first husband, Euple Byrd, in Stand By Your Man on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies at 9PM.

THE TEXAS CRITTERS

They sing, they dance and they have fun with the Krofft Puppets.

They're the Mandrell Sisters, of course—Barbara, Louise and Irene.

Every week on their NBC series, Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters, airing Saturdays at 8PM, one of them does a segment with the Krofft Puppets, also known as Truck Shackley and His Texas Critters.

Besides the guitar-playing Truck, there's Dufus on bass, Borax on fiddle, Clyde on drums, Dallas on piano, and Dawg... well... on fleas.

Truck and his gang tend to get carried away with themselves. At such times, Barbara tries to set them straight.

However, the group is irrepressible.

Take the time the country band decided to tackle a Mexican song.

"Hold it! Hold it! What are you doing?" Barbara demanded.

"We're singing in Espan-yoll," Dufus explained.

"That's Spanish for Spanish," Clyde clarified.

"You could've fooled me, fellas," Barbara said.

"There's nothing more beautiful than Mexican music. But, if you can't do it correctly, don't do it at all."

"We used to have that attitude and we were outta work for fifteen years," Borax said.

Barbara tried to give them some helpful advice.

"You should be prepared... a little more," she told them. "Your Spanish is terrible."

"That's OK," Dufus chimed in. "Our English ain't too good either."

Truck tried to assure Barbara that they know what they're doing.

"Don't worry, Barbara," he said. "We understand the culture. If you want somethin', you say 'por favor.' If someone gives you somethin', you say 'muchas gracias.'"

"Yeah," added Dufus, "and when you lose your travelers' checks, you say 'donde esta Karl Malden?'"

Finally Truck turned the tables on Barbara, challenging her credentials. Then, without missing a beat, Barbara shifted gears into Spanish, saying: "Entonces, señoras y señores, me da mucho gusto en presentar la orquesta internacional con mis amigos locos... Truck Shackley y Los Critters de Texas!"

With that, Truck Shackley and his Texas Critters launched into a spirited version of "Alla en el Rancho Grande."

"Overweight?"

Debbie Reynolds

Nutri/System helped me lose easily

"Would you believe that Debbie Reynolds was losing the battle of the bulge? Well, it's true. I tried all kinds of diets. Counting calories and measuring food, until I felt like a chemist. Nothing worked. I'd lose a few pounds and put them right back on.

Less while enjoying your meals

Then I found out that losing weight can be easy... up to a pound a day. With Nutri/System. Without fussing with calories or measuring. Without drugs or pills.

The pounds began to slip away so quickly, I could hardly believe it. Until I got on my scale. I was losing the weight I wanted to lose eating delicious meals that didn't taste like diet foods. Things like pancakes and syrup, beef in barbecue sauce. Even rich-tasting desserts and milkshakes.
