Can't drink the water? Pipe it to greenbelts

By STEVE TRIPOLI

The prospect of using treated . wastewater to keep parks, golf courses, greenbelt areas and playing fields green has promoted five area water districts to seek construction of new or expanded water treatment and delivery systems.

The districts have submitted proposals for the systems to the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, the Southland's largest water importer. MWD has tentatively set aside $50 million to fund such projects.

Wiley Horne, MWD project manager for the so-called Orange and Los Angeles Counties Water Reuse Study, said funding of the projects is considered a good investment by MWD because it will help eliminate the need for more expensive new sources of imported water.

The five local proposals are dominated both in scope and projected cost by two projects, one an expansion of the Irvine Ranch Water District's existing program and the other a proposed new facility to be operated by the Orange County Water District. OCWD serves several Orange County cities, including Costa Mesa and Fountain Valley

The IRWD proposal, an $11 million package, calls for the laying of new pipelines all over Irvine so that the operational water recycling plant can be used to its full capacity.

Spokesman Keith Lewinger said the project, if approved, would allow the district to use 12,000 acre-feet (about 3.9 billion gallons) of treated water a year twice the amount currently used in a city that is among the pioneers of water reuse. The water, which isn't drinkable, but is sufficiently sanitary for watering purposes, would be distributed via new pipelines to many of Irvine's newest growth areas, including Village 12 and Village 14. Lewinger said. Pipes also would be laid to older sections of the city such as Turtle Rock and the Irvine Industrial Park-East so that those areas could use the treated water, he said.

The OCWD proposal, called Green Acres, calls for construction of a plant that would treat 5,000 acre-feet of water (about 1.6 billion gallons) a year and pipe it to parks, golf courses and institutional grounds across OCWD's service

Estimated cost of the package is $11.6 million, of which the OCWD is asking MWD to pay 75 percent. The IRWD package, by comparison, calls for a 50-50 cost split between MWD and IRWU. Both plans call for future expansions of the projects. IRWD is hoping to spend about $10 million more, in 1982 dollars, to expand the capacity of its plant to 20,000 acre-feet (about

John Wayne Airport noise issues echo at Wyoming resort

By FREDERICK SCHOEMEHL

JACKSON, Wyo. - Up here, just a few miles from the base of 10.450-foot Rendezvous Mountain, is a little airport with big problems.

In many ways, the issues involving the one-runway air facility built in 1939 and expanded over the years aren't dissimilar from those facing Orange County's John Wayne Airport.

Jackson, where cowboys rub shoulders with skiers, is a community well-divided over the airport.

The business interests, including operators of the Jackson Hole Ski Area at nearby Teton Village, consider the airport the vital link to the outside world, the all-critical entryway for revenue.

But there is a strong environmental segment in the town of 6,000 permanent residents. And with backing from the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, they are hammering away at the airport.

The issue now being litigated in the U.S. District of Columbia Court of Appeals is whether commercial jet service to the airport is compatible with public enjoyment of Grand Teton National Park, in which the facility is located.

Boeing 737s operated by Denver-based Frontier Airlines began flying to Jackson under charter arrangements in December 1980 after the carrier won a 13-year battle to begin jet

Six months later, Frontier began regularly scheduled jet service to and from Denver. There are two flights per day, at

Jury convicts Williams

Atlanta slayings defendant found guilty in 2 deaths

ATLANTA (AP) suprisingly quick jury found Wayne B. Williams guilty Saturday of murdering two young black men, ending a sensational trial stemming from 28 slayings that terrorized this Southern capital for nearly two years.

A "heartsick" Williams, still insisting he was innocent, was immediately sentenced by Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper to two consecutive life prison terms. He will be eligible for parole review in seven years. The defense said an appeal was

"We the jury find the defendant Wayne Williams guilty on count No. 1 and guilty on count No. 2," District Attorney Lewis Slaton said, reading from the verdict handed him by the jury foreman in the packed fourth-floor courtroom in the Fulton County Superior courthouse.

The 23-year-old defendant, dressed in a brown suit, remained seated at the defense table, surrounded by deputies and out of sight of reporters, as the verdict was read. Then, accompanied by his lawyers and his father, Homer Williams, he strode to the podium and said in a steady voice:

'I maintained all along through this trial my innocence and I still say so today. "I hold no malice against the jury, the prosecutors or the court," he said. "I hope the person or persons who committed these crimes can be brought to justice. I did not do this.'

He then was hurried out by deputies to be driven back to the county jail where he has been held since his arrest last June.

Alvin Binder, his attorney, described Williams as "fairly calm, very disappointed, sort of heartsick.'

The jury of eight blacks and four whites deliberated only 121/2 hours after eight weeks of testimony before deciding that the black free-lance photographer had murdered both Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21.

Although Williams was charged in only two deaths, prosecutors presented evidence in 10 additional slayings of young blacks in an attempt to show a pattern of killings that included the Payne and Cater

Binder said he thought Cooper's decision to allow that evidence would be the main. basis for an expected appeal. Binder also said he believed

"it was the fibers" convicted his client - a reference to the textile strands the prosecution said linked Williams to his victims.

Slaton said he was confident the case would hold up under appeal and refused to rule out the possibility that Williams would be charged in some of the Police investigators are probing the slaying of a Huntington Beach man whose body was found dumped in a vacant lot in Westminster

The man, who died of gunshot wounds, was identified as Roy Saburo Nakasa, 36, by a Westminster police spokesman.

Other than provide the name and age of the victim, where the body was found and that a search is under way for Nakasa's vehicle, police refused to provide any information

He said police were searching for a white 1979 BMW automobile, California license number 412 XNJ, which belonged to the victim.

The Orange County Coroner's Office also declined to provide information about the case.

Thursday, to Rep. Robert Badham, R-Newport Beach, the supervisor said recent proposals advanced by FAA administrator J. Lynn Helms "indicate that the FAA will no longer be responsive to the needs of the public impacted by airport operations. Helms, in a Feb. 18 speech in Dallas, said the FAA will not permit local airport noise standards to interfere with national air transportation priorities

OCWD is hoping to expand its capacity by another 12,000 acre-feet (about 3.9 billion gallons) a year as the need for the water develops, according to

The other three proposals all were submitted by smaller south-county water districts. The Moulton Niguel Water District in Laguna Niguel is seeking a $2 million package, to be totally financed by MWD, that would produce about 3500 acre-feet (about 163 million) gallons of treated water a year. District General Manager Jack Foley said the water will be used to irrigate Laguna Niguel Regional Park, Crown Valley Community Park and the El Niguel Gold Club initially. District officials are hoping to ultimately expand their treatment capability to five times that amount, Foley said.

The South Coast County Water District in South Laguna is seeking a $6 million package that would produce treated water to irrigate three golf courses and a greenbelt area of South Laguna, administrative Assistant Linda Jones said.

Ms. Jones said the district would use a $2 million state grant to finance part of the project, with as yet undetermined participation from Metropolitan Water District. The Los Alisos Water District El Toro is seeking MWD help in laying extra pipes from a plant the district is building that vill produce more than 6,000 cre-feet (about two billion (allons) of treated water a year, ccording to General Manager .T. Led by photographer Charles Starr's two first place winners, members of the Daily Pilot staff captured 19 prizes Saturday at the Orange County Press Club's 27th annual awards banquet.

Starr was cited for the best feature photo and for the best sports photo of 1981 in the annual press club competition.

His feature photo showed the barefoot wife of a Newport Beach fisherman kissing her husband as he carried her through the water to shore from their dory. Starr's prize-winning sports shot was of an Edison High School ball carrier being tackled by a defender who obviously was guilty of a face mask infraction.

Lee Payne, the Daily Pilot's chief photographer, took first place honors in a category that showcased his talent with both camera and typewriter - best photo and story by the same person. Payne's work was a story with accompanying photo about Japanese sumo wrestlers.

Daily Pilot reporters Jodi Cadenhead and Phil Sneiderman also won first place awards for their work in 1981. Ms. Cadenhead's story about how a Jewish synagogue and a Presbyterian church have combined forces in the same facility in Corona del Mar was judged the best story on religion written for an Orange County newspaper in 1981.

Sandi Joy received an honorable mention in the same category for account of 17th century-style Thanksgiving.

Sneiderman won the best column of the year award for his humorous, yet thoughtful, piece comparing the youth of today with those of his rock 'n' roll

Daily Pilot staff members also won eight second place awards; two for photographer Gary Ambrose and one each for photographer Richard Koehler, copy editor Tom Titus and writers Steve Marble, Ms. Cadenhead, Steve Tripoli and Jeff Parker

In addition, Daily Pilot writers David Kutzmann, Glenn Scott, Sneiderman, Jeff Parker and Curt Seeden each won honorable mention awards.

There were 956 entries in the 1981 Press Club contest, with 138 awards given during Saturday's dinner at the South Coast Plaza Hotel in Costa Mesa.

DO JETS TRESPASS ON SOLITUDE OF NATIONAL PARK?

7;53 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. During this year's ski season, there are Saturdays-only flights to Los Angeles and Oakland.

This summer, Frontier plans to have four flights daily to Jackson. Of the four million visitors annually attracted to the Jackson Hole and the nearby Grand Teton and Yellowstone national parks, three million come during the summer.

Attorneys for the Sierra Club,

Frontier, the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Federal Aviation Administration and the Jackson Hole Airport Board were in Washington D. C. last week to argue issues raised in the current lawsuit.

H. Anthony Ruckel, representing the Sierra Club, said the jets "trespass" on the "silence and solitude a visitor expects at a national park" and add an ugly addition to the view of the front of the Teton range.

When jets take off to the south (about 80 percent of the time) from the airport, noise is heard in about half the park, Ruckel

Further, the Sierra Club is alleging that Frontier and other parties in the lawsuit did not consider viable alternatives to jet service

He suggested, for example, that Frontier could have looked at serving Jackson with so-called "short takeoff and landing" aircraft, such as the remarkably quiet DeHavilland

Dash 7. And, Ruckel said, service to nearby Driggs or Idaho Falls, Idaho, should have been investigated. Lastly, the club is angered that Frontier's permit, which will expire in mid-1983, allows an unlimited number of flights. Said Ruckel: "We think there should be a reduction in the number of flights, some sort of cap," similar to the 41-flight per day limit imposed at John

Wayne Airport. Ruckel claimed the defendants analyzed alternatives, "strictly in an economic sense" without regard for noise impacts on the park.

Officials of Frontier, the Jackson Hole Area Chamber of Commerce and Airport Manager Carol Lewis pointed out that the airline is required to abide by noise abatement takeoff procedures to reduce impacts

When jets take off, pilots are required to make a 45-degree left turn to avoid interior park areas. And, pilots must not fly lower than 3,000 feet while within the park boundaries.

The programs, Ms. Lewis said, "have been comparatively successful.'

She said Frontier pilots have been cooperative. When noise abatement procedures aren't followed (times of weather conditions are excepted), Ms. Lewis telephones Frontier headquarters in Denver seeking relief.

Ms. Lewis said cumulative noise impacts over the park are lower with jet service compared to Frontier's use of Convair 580 turboprops.

Jets carry twice the number of passengers of Convairs. And there had been as many as 14

Convair operations each day before jets were introduced; there now has been no more than five jet operations per day. Fewer flights lower overall noise, she said.

Frontier is still using Convairs on Jackson-Salt Lake City routes. But that service is scheduled to end Frontier is blaming declining passenger load as the reason for ending the service.

Jackson business leaders bristle when asked about the airport issues

"The airport was here before the park," declared Ralph McMullen, executive director of the chamber of commerce. It was not until 1950 that the airport was brought into the park by an act of Congress.

The success of this and future years of the ski areas at Jackson Hole and nearby Grand Targhee will depend on dependable, scheduled service, says Bruce Nurse, chamber president.

If commercial jet service were stopped, Jackson would not be inaccessible. "But who wants to sit on a bus for a 90-mile ride from Idaho Falls?" asked one Teton Village ski instructor.

Dredging due to start

Crews for $4.7 million operation to arrive in May

For the first time in the multi-year push to clean up the silt-choked Upper Newport Bay, the talk has stopped and the work is about to begin.

A six-month dredging project the first in more than 10 years will start this May and is expected to return water and tidal action to a section of the bay that now is nearly bone dry.

The $4.7 million cleanup operation now calls for work crews to dredge a 30-acre basin at the extreme north end of the bay, directly below the Jamboree Road Bridge.

The basin, from the observer's point of view, will resemble a pond that shrinks and expands with the tide.

It will serve two purposes. The carved-out basin will restore the upper bay's link with the ocean and will serve as a silt-catcher, slowing the flow of sediment that roars out of the San Diego Creek in the winter months.

The project also includes dredging on the San Diego Creek. Several basins are to be carved in the creek bed between MacArthur Boulevard and Campus Drive.

It is this system in the river bed that workmen expect to do the lion's share of the silt-catching work. The basins in the river will allow the water to sit for periods of time while the sediment drops out of the water and settles on the creek bed.

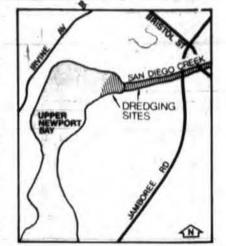

It is estimated these basins can hold up to five years' worth of silt - barring a major winter storm - before they have to be cleaned. The county flood control district has agreed to clean out the basins.

In all, roughly 700,000 cubic yards of mud, silt and assorted goo will be scooped out during the six-month project.

The project actually is two work plans merged into one.

Newport Beach - with help from Irvine, Orange County government and Assemblywoman Marian Bergeson — put together a complicated $4 million cleanup scheme last year.

About $1 million of the money is represented in land the Irvine Company is permitting to be used as a dredge spoils site. The land is south of the creek and to the east of MacArthur Boulevard.

The rest of the money camelargely from the state with smaller amounts coming from Newport, Irvine, the county and the Irvine Company.

The second plan was a $700,000 dredging project development by the state department of Fish and Game.

The two groups have now pooled their money and resources for the current cleanup plan.

Loan arranger comes to rescue

By JODI CADENHEAD

By the time their second child was born last year Paul and Donna Bunney of Costa Mesa figured it was time to move from their small tract home built in 1953.

But the sad truth soon hit home. The 1,100-square-foot house they had purchased in 1975 for $33,000 wouldn't get them the place across the street today, much less the larger. more expensive homes they were looking at.

Discouraged, they returned to their house at 984 Elden Circle and tried to get by with the three box-shaped bedrooms and one bathroom that seemed to grow

Paul, 33, a data control processor at Rockwell and Donna, 27, watched with interest as neighbor Hal Camp's second-story room addition started to go up.

Camp told them that he'd received a low interest loan from the city's Housing Rehabilitation program toward the construction.

"When you see someone else do it, you start to think about said Donna, a cheerful brunette, who gave up working at Rockwell to stay home with Diana, 3, and John, 1.

The idea made sense to the Bunneys. And by September they had a $15,000 loan at 9 percent.

"I just couldn't have done it without the city's program,' said Paul. But contractors soon told the Bunneys that $15,000 wouldn't go far. At that price they'd be lucky to get a bathroom, they were

By MARY JANE SCARCELLO

A new federal requirement in eligibility rules for children receiving free or reduced-rate lunches will have little effect on Orange Coast districts, according to local food service spokesmen.

Effective March 15 the rule requires registration of Social Security numbers of all adult members of a household where the child lives.

Representatives from Irvine, Newport-Mesa, Laguna Beach and Huntington Beach districts reported taking steps to comply with the requirement last fall after being told it might take effect during the current school year.

Julie Ellis, of the Laguna Beach district's food services, reported catching the applications at the printer's just in time to add the Social Security requirement after attending a meeting to learn about the new regulation.

Only about 10 children in her district receive reduced-rate lunches, while another 55 to 60 get free lunches.

Beach Union High School

District's food services, said administrators were given options in September, so she chose to add the requirement to the November applications for the 152 students receiving reduced-rate lunches and 976 receiving lunch free.

Sue Decius, who heads food services in Irvine, reports her district is unaffected by the requirement, because Social Security numbers were recorded last fall. About 500 students receive reduced-rate lunches in Irvine, and another 300 have free lunches.

Eve Cremers, director of food services for the Newport-Mesa district, reported compiling Social Security numbers in October and said the requirement brings the system into closer compliance with the

She estimated that 20 percent of the daily 7,200 tray lunches in Lois Conkle, in Huntington the district are served at reduced rates or for free.

Many eligible for home aid

The Costa Mesa City Council has recently revised its federally funded Housing Rehabilitation program to make more residents

Since 1975 more than $350,000 has been loaned or given to more than 120 homeowners. The programs available include:

-A family of four whose income is less than $16,000 or seniors and handicapped residents are eligible for grants up to $3,000. No repayment is necessary unless the home is sold. -A family of four whose income is less than $27,000 is eligible for a $15,000 loan at 9 percent

-Under the new program a family of four whose income is less than $32,000 may be eligible to receive a $1,500 rebate on home improvements totaling $10,000 or more.

Apartment owners may be eligible for a 10 percent loan for property improvements. Also, owners of rental property may be eligible to receive up to $1,500 in financial assistance in order to make improvements for physically handicapped tenants.

Those interested in the program can call Tony Cannariato, city community development coordinator, at 754-5330.

Snow job? Blizzard of ballots facing registrar

By CHARLES H. LOOS

Talk about your logistical nightmares.

In June 1980, about 600 different ballots were required for Orange County voters, what with separate ballots for different political parties, the overlapping of political districts and such.

This year, with reapportionment dumped into the equation, it will take about 1,200 different ballots to cover all of the overlaps in the county, according to Al Olson, the county's registrar of voters.

It will be Olson's responsibility to see to it that all of those different ballots (sample and actual) are printed correctly and in the right amounts and delivered to the right places.

Can you blame the registrar for being just a little frantic these days?

SPEAKING OF reapportionment, here's the way things stand these days in that old shell and

As you will recall, the state Supreme Court ruled in January the new districts designed by the Democrats who control the Legislature will stand. That is, the June primaries for Assembly, state Senate and congressional seats will be contested on the basis of the new districts

You also will recall that Orange County's 36th state Senate District has been renumbered. It's now the 37th. The new district meanders through parts of Orange, Riverside and San Diego counties.

Because even-numbered districts elect state senators this year and odd-numbered districts elect in 1984, the 37th will be without a representative in Sacramento for two years.

The Republicans are howling about this and other low cards they say the Democrats dealt in the reapportionment hand. Enter Propositions 10, 11 and 12 on your June ballot. These are Republican-spawned referenduas that would, if approved by the state's voters, force the Legislature to re-do reapportionment.

The Republicans also are counter-attacking in the courts. They are seeking a court order to block the use of the Democratic reapportionment plans in the June elections.

In addition, the Republican Party, together with Common Cause, is pushing an initiative measure that would set up an independent commission to oversee future reapportionment plans.

Common Cause suggests politely that California legislators could have conflicts of interest in redrawing the boundaries of districts in which they might be seeking election.

Anyway, the folks pushing the Fair Redistricting Initiative have until May 15 to gather about 554,000 signatures in order to get their independent commission notion on the ballot next November.

REPUBLICAN EYEBROWS are being raised over the Irvine Company's courtship of a pair of Democratic Party leaders — state Treasurer Jesse Unruh and state Senate President Pro tem David Roberti.

Lois Lundberg, chairman of the Orange County Republican Central Committee, isn't happy about it. Irvine Company spokesmen say the Newport Beach-based land firm is merely being pragmatic.

Last week, the company played host at a Big Canyon Country Club fund-raiser for Unruh. And Friday, the company was involved in a South Coast Plaza Hotel reception for Roberti.

THE AFOREMENTIONED Mrs. Lundberg and Assemblyman Nolan Frizzelle, R-Huntington Beach, have been crowing publicly about new voter registration figures showing that Frizzelle's 73rd district now has a Republican majority.

It would seem to be a hollow victory. The new GOP registration edge amounts to only about two dozen voters, according to Mrs. Lundberg's figures.

ASSEMBLYMAN ROSS Johnson, R-Fullerton, has bowed out of the special state Senate election called to pick a successor to the April 13 primary outright.

The filing deadline is Monday. If no one wins a majority in the primary, a runoff election will be held May 11.

Johnson said he is bowing out because he believes he can better serve his constituents by remaining in the Assembly. Seymour, of course, got off to a fast start in the campaign and has been endorsed by the county's Republican Central Committee.

CAROL HALLETT, the Republican assemblywoman from Atascadero and a candidate for lieutenant governor, will speak Thursday to the Orange County Federation of Republican Women.

The ladies of the Grand Old Party will hear Mrs. Hallett during a meeting starting at 10 a.m. at the Saddleback Inn in Santa Ana.

CHUCK KENNEY, one of the Republican candidates in the new 43rd Congressional District, will get an early start on St. Patrick's Day with a March 7 fund-raising party at

The fun starts at 4 p.m. The price is $15 per person, or $25 per couple.

Yenny Kennedy, Orange County's Indonesian-American dentistry candidate, is looking for your cavities again.

Mrs. Kennedy is hoping to pass in April her clinical examination, the final barrier in her effort to gain certification as a dentist in the U.S. She needs four persons with cavities who are willing to be her subjects during her test from April 21-25 in Los Angeles.

It is one of the few times a cavity can pay off.

Her husband, Jensen Kennedy, said he will pay $100 each to two subjects for the test and he will offer $50 each to two other alternates.

To qualify, persons must have cavities in teeth that otherwise are untouched by fillings. Last fall, the Kennedys took four cavity-prone subjects to San Francisco for the same test, which she did not pass. The couple paid all the expenses for the subjects, who also "moonlighted" at the exam by serving as subjects for other students, said Kennedy.

Kennedy said interested people can call him at 732-8335 during the day or 970-5758 evenings.

Retain noise control within airport range

J. Lynn Helms, the No. 1 man at the Federal Aviation Administration, thinks that the national air transportation system is under attack by a seemingly innocuous enemy, the agencies that operate airports across the nation. .

Helms, in a little-noticed speech given in Dallas 10 days ago, said airport operators have gone overboard in finding ways to limit noise impacts associated with airport use by both jet and propeller-driven aircraft

"We must and we will fight back." Helms thundered as he addressed members of an air-law symposium at Southern Methodist University "If allowed to continue these measures (noise control programs) could cripple our air transportation system and stifle this nation's economic development.

Helms said the FAA will do battle with local operators on several fronts. If negotiated solutions to airport noise problems can't be found, he said the agency will consider withholding airport development grant funds or taking airport operators to court

But most frightening is his disclosure that legislation is being drafted that, in essence, would give the distant bureaucrats in Washington D. C. veto power over any local airport noise control program

If the federal bureaucrats decided that the noise abatement program at a given airport would run counter to "national" interests, the program could be overturned.

The effect of vesting such power in the FAA could be devastating. Helms made it clear in his speech that the airport noise abatement law now in effect in California would be on the chopping block. He called the law designed to lessen noise impact on airport area residents "unrealistic." So, it's a safe bet that law would probably be killed by the FAA.

Helms singled out nighttime curfews as another locally imposed obstacle he's not happy with. So curfews would probably be rejected, too.

In the case of John Wayne Airport, for example commercial jets are prohibited from takeoff between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. on Mondays through Saturdays and to 8 a.m. on Sundays. Airport-area residents fought long and hard to win the curfew, but, then, Helms probably doesn't care about that.

Helms' proposals aren't going unnoticed Local officials in Orange County, including those in county government and Newport Beach, are reacting with strident opposition to the administrator's ideas. Their goal convince the Congress that the proposed legislation represents a staggering blow to local control the control the Reagan administration says it wants to restore.

Helms' ideas certainly speak otherwise. And Helms' callous contempt for the health and welfare of anyone not in an arrplane is chilling

Clark threatens Haig's turf

WASHINGTON - In his first low-key month as President Reagan's national security adviser, William P. Clark has quietly moved — with Reagan's support — against Alexander Haig's cherished foreign policy turf, predictably arousing resistance from the secretary of state.

Unlike public quarrels between Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger over the U.S. approach to the Middle East or toward the Soviet Union, the Haig-Clark dispute concerns no single policy but how policy should

THIS IS A STRUGGLE for the power to create, control and carry out U.S. foreign policy that under Reagan often has seemed to wander aimlessly.

Clark has issued a secret directive giving the National Security Council (NSC) staff jurisdiction over long-range U.S. policy reviews now conducted by the State Department. Haig, a stalwart defender of State Department turf, is fighting that directive.

"The orders are that it is to be done here, but Al won't buy," one White House insider told us.

Reagan brought his old friend, Judge Clark, over from the relatively comfortable deputy secretary's niche at the State Department not merely to replace the fallen Richard V. Allen but to bring order out of chaos in making foreign policy. But Haig's opposition to Clark's plans threatens more disarray. Clark is strengthened by the latest, unseemly outbreak of policy struggles between Haig and Weinberger. In daily headlines, these public battles show disorder within the president's national security bureaucracy.

Foremost allies of the U.S. are privately asking questions about who's in charge while underlings of the two principals fuel hostility with leaks to the press and end runs to promote their

That sets the stage for Reagan to elevate Clark and his NSC staff, with instructions to take command of the policy making machinery and end damaging in-fighting.

The first step in that direction is Clark's seemingly trivial directive empowering his staff to call its own policy-review meetings in the White House. In fact, the authority to call high-level meetings of top State, Defense and Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) officials and to dominate those meetings is the core of policy

Moreover, Clark has confided to intimates that he was not ruling out a change more basic than long-range policy review. He wants to upgrade the NSC staff, giving it closer control and management over day-to-day policy.

SO FAR, HE HAS made no overt move in that direction. But Clark has been taking charge in a far more personal way than Allen.

When Weinberger sent Clark a speech he planned to deliver at a U.S.-West German conference in Munich Feb. 13, Clark ordered two sections changed, one dealing with the Soviets' Yamal pipeline, the other with West German contributions to NATO. White House aides say that Allen never censored speeches of Cabinet members. Clark's first six weeks on the job contradict expectations that. considering his total foreign policy experience of one year under Haig's tutelage, he would be a highly-efficient paper shuffler without touching policy. Those predictions underestimated Clark's clout

Clark's influence derives directly from Reagan himself, and the president is known to be solidly behind Clark in the current struggle for control over long-range policy reviews.

WHITE HOUSE insiders say Haig's resistance to the new directive has disturbed the president almost as much as the secretary's public protest last spring over Vice President Bush's selection as "crisis manager."

Haig's fight against the new directive may convince the president the time has come for major bureaucratic changes, giving Clark and his staff new power to coordinate and control day-to-day national security operations as Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski did in the 1970s.

That was foresworn by Reagan during the presidential campaign in what proved a vain effort to prevent the public feuding in his administration that poisoned relations between Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers and between Brzezinski and Secretary Cyrus Vance.

But Reagan has been confronting worse internal disharmony: public debate and private struggle between Haig and Weinberger over how to deal with the Russians, Poland, the Caribbean, the Arabs and Israel.

For a year, the National Security Council staff, representing the president, has been locked out of resolving these disagreements. Judge Clark's seemingly trivial directive has opened the door a wide crack: Gen Haig's struggle against it unwittingly, may push it open wider.

First Lady's new image

Nancy Reagan is attempting to forge a new public image and. whether or not the public agrees the effort has been successful, one must give her credit for

In most administrations, the first lady's pursuit of elegance would be welcomed. But in 1982, with unemployment approaching 10 percent, a 1612 prime rate depressing the auto and housing industries, and record budget deficits looming, such a lifestyle has drawn criticism, a lot of it.

And this paper has been among the critics. There was the spending of $1 million to refurbish the White House. Toss in the purchase of 220 place settings of china. And add the donation of high-fashion clothes.

In each case, she did nothing wrong. Most of the money spent had been donated. But the timing was wrong for being "socially chic" while people were losing their jobs and their houses.

So, Mrs. Reagan went on the road this month and acquitted herself well as she immersed herself in drug abuse programs.

The stop in St. Petersburg. Fla., was particularly poignant as her voice choked and her eyes moistened in a hot auditorium with 300 drug-prone youngsters and 600 concerned parents.

"My heart is filled with so many things," she told the teen agers. "I am so proud of you and I love you, too." To the parents: "Being a parent myself. I know how painful it must be for

An account of the meeting indicated how emotional it was for all parties involved.

She also visited a drug abuse prevention meeting in Dallas at a time she and her husband were under particular public pressure. An aide said the 1,655-mile trip had been planned months ago and whether it was really necessary mattered little. She has spent much of the past year in private, studying the problem of drug abuse and conferring with experts.

Nancy Reagan, even as a private citizen, was active in the Foster Grandparents program for handicapped children and visited Fairview State Hospital in Costa Mesa several times to aid

As one who has spent her life outside Washington, she no doubt welcomed the short escape from the nation's capital. Let's hope her six other trips planned throughout the country this year are as constructive.

Good book if you're 99 and counting

If you're a writer, you have a lot of friends who are writers. One of mine has the formidable name, Osborn Segerberg Jr., but he's "Ozzie" in Kinderhook, N.Y., where he lives. Ozzie has never written a hit play or a best-selling novel, but he's a good professional writer. The world needs fewer stars and more competent professionals in every field.

'Living To Be 100' is the name of the book Ozzie's just written, and he did his research from reports he got from 1,200 people who are at least 100 years old.

THE BOOK ought to do pretty well, but I don't think this one will be a best-seller either, because I question how much interest there is in living to be 100 except among people who are already 99. Until you get close, living to be 100 doesn't seem like that attractive answers. It's a serious report, and like most honest reports, it doesn't pretend to have one simple answer to the most important question of all: how to stay alive. It simply tries to find out how these 1,200 centenarians did it.

For example, Ozzie asked his subjects if they thought their eating habits had contributed to their long life. Many of them said that "eating right" had helped, but then Ozzie got asking what they thought "eating right" meant and there was a big difference of opinion.

ONE MAN SAID he thought it meant eating no starch and a lot of meat, fruit and eggs. Several said it meant eating slowly, but Mrs. Adelheid Schuhnecht, of Beaver Dam, Wis., said, "We ate

One of the things the book does conclude is that having a sense of humor is a big help in getting to live a long time. People live longer if they have some good way of getting through the hard times without too much stress, and a sense of humor is one way of reducing stress.

That's good to know if you have a sense of humor, but if you don't, there's nothing you can do about it. You can change your eating habits, get more exercise or stop smoking, but no one ever acquired a sense of humor through determination. Some of these 100-year-olds said they had been helped by good doctors, but Walter Pannell, 100 years old and a doctor himself, was asked how often he had a physical checkup. "I haven't had the occasion to consult doctors," Dr. Pannell said. "I don't feel the need. When you feel all right, don't hunt for trouble. The trouble is, we all hunt for the answer, as if there was just one, and it's obvious, there isn't.

authority and autonomy. But authority that is held or won at the end of a gun is not stable or secure, and promises only a resumption of hostilities in the future, It would be an illuminating lesson to see how those four Irishmen, so divided on their own ground, would come to a consensus on foreign soil, where their sense of fair play would be unencumbered by feelings of anger or fear or suspicion. And the same would be true in reverse: Israelis and Palestinians would have little trouble agreeing on some just solution in the Irish question.

But it is not to be; it is beyond the realm of reality, even though this is the only realistic way to deal with the problems. Nobody can be judge and jury in his own case; we recognize this in civil law, but "international law" remains a contradiction in terms as long as "the bench" is holding a shooting -iron and not a scale.

Housing prices chase ambitious newcomers

By CHARLES G. BELL

Dr. Charles G. Bell is a professor of political science at Cal State Fullerton.

It is becoming increasingly obvious that California's golden past is no guide to its uncertain future. A central feature of that past - the state's continuous rapid population growth - is clearly slowing down.

Two key factors play a major part in this basic change — high housing costs and unemployment.

Major employment growth in California has occurred, typically, during wartime. World War II, obviously, was a record-setting experience with employment growing by more than 15 percent per year in 1941, '42 and '43. Again, during the Korean War, employment growth peaked at 10 percent a year in 1950. During the Vietnam War employment growth also was stimulated.

But even in peace time, there always seemed to be some reason for economic expansion in California - drawing from some pocket of unemployment somewhere in the United States. And virtual tidal waves of people headed west to the Golden State to find jobs year after year.

AS A RESULT, California has traditionally had a slightly higher unemployment rate than the rest of the nation - with the gap averaging between 1 and 2 percent on a month-to-month basis. This larger-than average unemployment rate was simply the "lag" in finding jobs for all those newcomers. But we found jobs for those who came — meeting their expectations and fulfilling the state's promise.

In the past eight years, California's work force grew from 8.7 million to 11.5 million - an annual growth rate of about 4 percent — or 40 percent for the decade. That's twice as fast as the state's total population growth in the same period of time.

Clearly, part of this recent accelerated growth in the state's work force was due to the large number of women who entered the job market in the 1970s. And, no doubt part of the growth reflects the large number of illegal — and uncounted — Mexican aliens who came to California looking for work.

But, in the past, the key factor to our growing labor force has been migration from the other states. When unemployment rates in California are about the same as the national average, we have lured about 300,000 people a year to the Golden State. When we have run about three points above the national unemployment rate we have had essentially no interstate migration.

Usually California gets about 100,000 to 300,000 new people a year from the other states.

BUT SOMETHING strange has happened in the last few years. In the late 1970s California's unemployment rate dropped below the national average. We should have seen about 400,000 migrants per year from the other states. But no one came! Instead they went to Arizona, Texas, Georgia, Florida and a half dozen other Sun Belt

What happened?

A new and crucial force entered the picture - housing costs and availability. People no longer came to California looking for jobs because they couldn't afford to live here.

Nationally, the market price for the average home went up 93 percent in the 1970s. But in Southern California it went up by 133 percent; in the San Francisco bay area by 118 percent, and the Sacramento area by 111 percent.

Coming to California now means buying a home which costs a lot more than something comparable elsewhere or a home which is smaller. Equally painful, the new home has a higher mortgage payment at the present inflated rates of interest. No wonder people won't come.

The results are clear. In the 1970s California had one of its historic lowest population growth rate. That low growth rate is continuing on into the

AND, SINCE housing is in chronic short supply, there is little reason to predict a drop in the real cost of housing. Thus housing prices will continue to be a barrier against large scale interstate migration.

In the past, a rapidly growing work force "fueled" the state's economy. The new arrivals not only sought jobs but created a demand for them with their own needs for food, clothing services, entertainment, schools and housing.

Today, California no longer attracts many people from the other states. The hot growth rate has chilled. California will surely survive and prosper - but in the new slow- or no-growth rate economy the change will be great and the challenges many.

Sidewalks reveal love or nasty wit

By JOHN ED PEARCE

John Ed Pearce, columnist for the Louisville Courier-Journal Sunday Magazine, was named "Outstanding Journalist in Kentucky" for 1980 by the Western Kentucky University chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

Out in the suburbs where I live, there are no sidewalks. It is not considered part of gracious living. The lawns, tended and neat, sweep down from house to street, seldom knowing the touch of childish feet or tricycle wheel.

There are lots of driveways, and walkways leading from them to the homes. But there are no sidewalks. And that is too bad.

For sidewalks are nice things. Without them houses are just houses; with sidewalks tying them together with a neat ribbon of concrete they become a neighborhood, part of something, interested in each other.

Families get to know each other better where there are sidewalks, and they are less bother to each other. Children are less apt to wander into a neighbor's yard, ride bicycles across his lawn or trample new grass seed if they have a sidewalk to ride on.

WITHOUT A sidewalk, it is awkward to take a walk in the evening. You tend to feel you're intruding when you walk along the grass strip where the sidewalk ought to be. And it isn't easy. People plant hedges to shield them from the street when there are no sidewalks. And there are little swales beside the road that collect water and get muddy.

A man walking along a sidewalk seems to have a purpose, to belong there; a man walking across your front yard looks suspicious. You worry about him, wonder what he is doing there.

A sidewalk is fun, a good place for the little children to ride their tricycles, before they reach the envied maturity of the two-wheeler.

It is a place for playing hop-scotch, for chanting "Step on a crack, break your granny's back." (Did anyone ever believe that poor grandma would get it in the spine if we stepped on a crack? Where do these things get started, anyhow?)

WHEN WE WERE young, sidewalks were great places for roller skaters. The experts, swooping along in swinging strides and making a clicking sound as the rolled over the cracks (dooming poor grandma again), would jump casually from the sidewalk to the street and then leap the curb on returning to the sidewalk.

And there was usually a strip of grass between the sidewalk and the curb where the beginning skater, his arm's waving wildly as he fought for balance, could cushion his fall to earth when, as always happened, his wheels flew from under him.

The sidewalk was a place for scooters, for wagons in which the younger sister sat bug-eyed with fear and delight as she was pulled by her older brother on a bicycle. It was a place to show off.

BICYCLE RIDERS would lift the front wheels of their bikes to zoom from the street to the walk. Boys passing the home of a girl would talk loudly and hit each other, hoping the girl would see and be impressed.

The sidewalk was something of a neighborhood bulletin board, chronicling the budding romances that sprang to life for a few fleeting days.

Overnight, chalked hearts would appear on the sidewalk, announcing the hot romance of JB & RH. But such affairs were brief as tulips in a puff of spring, and within a week poor JB would have joined the ranks of those who had loved and lost, as a new heart heralded the torrid affair of RH and a newcomer.

Usually the messages of the sidewalk were pure and clean, but occasionally some smart-aleck would outrage neighborhood decency by scrawling "Bobby is a . . .," bringing some poor mother scurrying out with broom and water to erase the offending pornography. Alas, along the streets with no sidewalks there is place for neither declaration of love nor nasty wit. And more's the pity.

The sidewalk was a place where boys could race. At the corner there would be a street light, under which at night the same boys, as they grew older, would gather to talk of school and sports and girls and what you do when you graduate

And often the girls, too, would just happen by and there would be a laughter and loud talk and the boys and girls would walk along the sidewalk beneath the trees, holding hands.

Sidewalks gave new mothers, with their new carriages and new babies, a chance to escape the house for a few minutes in the afternoon, to nod to older ladies sitting on their porches and to display their offspring to the admiration and approval of the neighbors, the ritual evidence that life was following the old, accepted course.

SOMETIMES, on a Saturday, the town drunk would weave his way homeward along the walk, numb for a moment to the misery that drove him to seek his bottled escape, causing mothers to bring their children into the house, while the older children watched his uncertain progress with the worried feeling of things gone wrong in the adult

The sidewalk was a useful thing. It had curbs on which to sit in the early dusk as the lightning bugs came out. It had a gutter that filled with rushing water when it rained, a fine place to sail paper boats that shot swiftly down the, murky torrent into the yawning maw of the drain, never to be seen again.

It was a place where the elderly couple that lived at the head of the street "took a walk" each evening. seldom exchanging a word, gazing as though unaware the other was there. though she never again came out to walk in the twilight after the day he

LYING IN BED on warm summer nights, you could hear the sounds of the neighborhood echoing on the sidewalk; the measured, heavy steps of the man who worked on the railroad, the tired, shuffling step of the high-school boy who worked nights at the picture show and twice a week had to stay late changing the marquee, the clicking heels of the girl who lived in the big brick house as, home from her date, she ran from car to porch.

The sidewalk was a place to stand and watch the cars go by, a place to dribble a ball, pitch pennies at a crack. (What now for poor, dear grandma?)

It was a place for waiting in the evening, looking down the street for the familiar sight of a beloved figure. coming home. Everyone should know a sidewalk. Too many don't, and that is too bad.

Desire for old-fashioned family values borne by mother-to-be

Here is what stays with her: She was teaching a kindergarten class; this was in 1972, and she was not yet married. She gave each child in the class a small felt animal. She told the boys and girls to raise their hands and tell a made-up story about their animals.

There were 29 children, and each told a story. Not one story about one animal had a happy ending. Each animal either was eaten by a monster, or ran away from home, or was killed, or came to a terrible end. The children were not being silly. They were serious; the world had already prepared them to react this way.

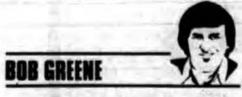

Now she is 33. Her name is Jonette Davidson, and she is seven months pregnant with her first child. Sometimes, in the middle of the night, she will feel the baby kick, and for some reason she will think of those kindergarten pupils, and of the fact that she will soon be bringing a child into the same world in which they live.

"NOW IT'S hitting closer to home," she said "Mine. You don't really pay attention to what something like that means until you are about to have a baby of your own."

Like others of her generation, Mrs.

Davidson grew up in an era of self-indulgence and instant gratification. She didn't often question the times of which she was a part; things were as they were, and she accepted them. Only now, with two months to go until the birth of her child, is she beginning to ask the questions.

"I'm sure it's nothing new for an expectant mother to wonder about the kind of world her child will grow up in," she said. "But everywhere you turn today, you see people giving in - giving in to standards all around them that are becoming subtly lower and lower. So much of a person's success in life depends on who you know and what you have and what you think you can get

"That's what children today are learning. I hear parents responding to anything wrong with their kids by saying. 'Oh, well, what can we do? All the kids are doing it now. It's just different than when we were growing

When she thinks about it, Mrs. Davidson realizes that things are, indeed, different than they were a generation ago. And she wonders whether she is the only young prospective mother who plans to do things in the old way — and hopes she has the courage to carry out her plans.

"I'M JUST SO afraid that people have forgotten what a family is," she said. "Television has a lot to do with it. TV's not all bad, but I don't remember that we watched it as much when we were kids. It seemed that we had a favorite show we would wait for, rather than leaving it on all the time. We at least talked to each other a lot, and I don't see that so much with parents and children today. "Parents are so busy with all their involvements . . . People have become so busy with themselves and their own pursuits that they haven't had time left for the idea of a family. I'm not talking about going bowling at night or taking a vacation . . I'm just talking about being in the house at the same time, and working through things.

"I know that the popular thinking

says that if you don't achieve great things for yourself, then you're cheating yourself. But as I get closer to the day when my baby is due, I think more and more about it - and I think that the good I may do by raising my baby as the right kind of person might be equal to anything I could achieve in the business world or the working world."

IT STRIKES HER in small ways. She sees all the commercials for fancy and expensive electronic toys and games, and she remembers the hours she spent with her own mother.

"My mom would just sit me down at a table," she said, "and she would give me paper and crayons and glue and scissors. And she would tell me, 'See what you can do.' And when she would come back and see what I had done . . . I don't know if I'm explaining it very well, but nothing could be more important than that. Mrs. Davidson is old enough to realize that the world will probably not be any different for her having been here. But, through her unborn child, she thinks that she can alter that, at least slightly.

"You can't change the whole world," she said. "But you can affect one person's life. You can make sure that your child carries a high level of integrity and kindness and honesty. You can make sure that your child has values.

"THE RESPONSIBILITY seems so large . . . it rests on yourself and your husband and no one else. Maybe your child will not turn out to be a famous doctor who discovers something no one has ever known before. But if your child turns out to be a good person who lifts others up in spirit, then you have accomplished something." Mrs. Davidson's thoughts are surprising her. She doesn't know where they are coming from. "After all these years of the world believing that a person should do anything that feels good, it's odd to be spending so much time thinking about this," she said.

But it is undeniably there. She knows that in some way or another, things are going to change when her baby is born. Even a few years ago she didn't think about these matters; now it is usually in the middle of the night when they ful her head. "I'll wake up, and the baby will be kicking," she said. "And I'll be sp excited. I'll wonder what this child is going to be like, and what I can do to make this child's life better. A lot of the time I'm so excited I can't get back to sleep. I'll just lie awake and think about SHORE SIMPLICITY Life should have more days like this for sailing over sun-splashed waters and more moments like this for contemplating peaceful pleasures. This couple made their refreshing pause along the Corona del Mar jetty.

Museum gets move OK

A 40-year-contract clearing the way for moving the Experience Center in Irvine to the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa has been approved.

A spokeswoman for the state Division of Fairs and Expositions said the contract, approved by the local fair board ast December, was signed by the Sacramento office and mailed to the fair board last week.

But the science museum executive director, John Goodman, said officials are not ready to start packing their bags for Costa Mesa any time soon. The construction of the 35,000-square-foot building on 1.5 acres at the corner of Fairview Road and Arlington Drive will not be completed until 1984. "I feel great, said Goodman. We've been working a long time for this. Still to be worked out is the funding for the new museum, estimated to cost between $3 million to $5 million, said-Goodman.

In exchange for the use of the land, the Orange County Fair Board will receive revenues from parking, said Ken Fulk, manager of the Orange County Fairgrounds.

The approved contract calls for the expansion of the science and technology museum to 5.3 acres by 1992. said Goodman.

Since 1979 more than 70,000 visitors have walked through the unique "hands on" science museum at 3531 Old Main St. in Irvine, Goodman said.

Some of the unusual exhibits include a computer center for children and a bicycle that operates its lights and horn by being pedaled.

UCI scratches to win, 79-77

Anteaters seeded second in tourney

Special to the Daily Pilot SANTA BARBARA - UC Santa Barbara may not be eligible for the PCAA post-season basketball tournament at the Anaheim Convention Center next week, but the Gauchos very nearly changed the first-round pairings.

Trailing by as many as 12 points in the second half, UC Irvine needed a big rally to send the game into overtime, then held on for a 79-77 decision.

A loss Saturday night would have sent the Anteaters into the tournament as the third-seeded team and a date against Pacific. Instead, UCI will open the festivities against lowly Utah State, which has won only four games all year.

"I can't imagine the PCAA being any tougher," said UCI Coach Bill Mulligan in the aftermath of his team's escape. "It was a game we needed to win and I think we had to win tonight to have any shot at getting into the NCAA tournament as a possible runner-up team.

It was the season finale for the Gauchos, who seemed to be making the most of it through the first 30 minutes of play. In front of the home folks, the Gauchos held a 12-point lead (61-49) with just over 10 minutes to play.

At this point, UCI's Kevin Magee went to work, hitting three straight baskets, to help the visitors slowly work their way back into contention.

"I told the kids when we were down not to try to get it all back at once," Mulligan explained.

The lead finally melted, as Randy Whieldon hit the back end of a two-shot situation to tie PCAA standings the score at 71-71. After a steal by Magee with less than two minutes to play, UCI worked the clock down to two seconds before a turnover prevented a chance to win it in regulation. After the teams traded a pair of hoops to open the overtime, Whieldon hit a pair of free throws and Magee converted a layup to put the Anteaters up by

But, true to form, it wasn't to be a comfortable finish. York Gross dropped two free throws to pull UCSB within two. and when Ralph Barkey was tied up in the backcourt, Santa Barbara had an opportunity to tie the score.

But Wayne Davis' jumper from the corner failed.

Vanguards advance to finals

WHITTIER - The Southern Catifornia College basketball team continued its improbable journey in the NAIA District 3 playoffs Saturday night, reaching the finals of that tournament with a 58-57 win over Fresno-Pacific.

The Vanguards (21-9), who had moved into the second round of the tournament with a win over Azusa Pacific, a team which had beaten SCC twice, once again avenged an earlier loss in beating Fresno-Pacific.

"We're happy to be in the finals," said a jubilant assistant coach Jeff Malstead. "We don't really care who we play."

The Vanguards go after the District 3 crown against top-ranked and unbeaten Biola Wednesday night, 8 o'clock at Whittier College.

The game was deadlocked at 27-27 at intermission, but Fresno quickly took a small lead. With about 12 minutes to play, the Vanguards were able to step up the pace, and the game began to turn around.

"If we could have made our free throws," Malstead explained, "it wouldn't have come down to the final seconds." As it was, SCC's eight-point lead with 4½ minutes to play nearly vanished in the waning moments. And Fresno had a chance to tie the game at the free-throw line with no time showing on the clock.

As the final seconds were ticking off and with SCC holding a 58-56 advantage, Fresno's Pete Yoder missed a shot, but an official spotted a foul on SCC underneath.

With a one-and-one situation and the clock showing triple zeroes, Dwight Muro made the first, but his second bounced harmlessly to the side, denying Fresno a shot at overtime.

Kings iced by Chicago

INGLEWOOD (AP) - Grant Mulvey scored two goals Saturday night, leading the Chicago Black Hawks to a 5-3 National Hockey League victory over the Los Angeles Kings.

Mulvey seemed to be gaining a measure of revenge for the reassignment of his brother. Paul, to the Kings' minor league affiliate at New Haven earlier this month Paul Mulvey had refused an order from Los Angeles Coach Don Perry to enter into a fight at Vancouver on Jan. 24. Perry was later suspended for six games by NHL President John Ziegler over the matter.

The Kings took a 1-0 lead on the first of two goals by Dave Taylor at 8:40 of the first period.

Meanwhile, across the country in Vero Beach, Fla., the Dodgers and pitcher Fernando Valenzuela remain geographically and philosophically

"We're very far apart," said Antonio De Marco, Valenzuela's manager-adviser, by telephone from the West Coast, "not just in the realm of money but in philosophy.

"Fernando never talks of money. He is not hungry. He is not a selfish man. He just wants to be appreciated for what he is, what he has done, what he is certain he can do.

"The Dodgers insist on adhering to tradition, to precedent, to rules. They don't take into account that Fernando is a unique human being who in 11/2 years achieved more than some ballplayers achieve in a lifetime.'

From Vero Beach, Dodger vice-president Al Campanis acknowledged that there was a huge gap in the two stances - the star performer and his employer.

"We are offering him 21/2 times as much as any second year player has received in the entire history of the game," the Dodger executive insisted. We appreciate what Fernando did for us last year but we feel his demands are unrealistic.'

Neither DeMarco nor Campanis was willing to indulge in the "numbers game" but unofficial estimates are that Fernando is asking a cool $1 million while the Dodgers are offering in the neighborhood of $350,000 to $400,000 - not exactly a slum neighborhood. Valenzuela played last season for

His rhythm broken by a mid-summer strike, Valenzuela finished with a 13-7 mark but pitched the Dodgers to the world championship, winning three games in the post-season playoffs and World Series.

"This is what they don't take into consideration," says DeMarco. "I don't think the Dodgers should look at Fernando as a second year player. They should view him in the light of his value to the team - as a producer and a drawing card - and pay him proportionate to that players of similar, even lesser stature, are receiving.

We are not demanding a long-term contract, just one year. I always thought the American ethic was to work hard, achieve and get duly rewarded. The American dream. That's all this boy is asking.

From AP dispatches

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Thomas Hearns didn't get the workout he wanted Saturday against Marcos Geraldo, but the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion proved to himself that he still can knock out fighters as a middleweight.

Hearns, who said he wanted to go seven or eight rounds to test his durability as a middleweight, didn't even finish one full round when he knocked out the veteran Geraldo at 1:48 of the first round.

"My plans were to come out and do something totally different," said Hearns. "I wanted to prove to the world there is more to me than a slugger. But Hearns, who expressed doubts about his punching ability against heavier opponents after going the distance in his middleweight bout last year, erased them when he stunned Geraldo with two overhand rights, then finished him off with a left hook

"I think he was a little shy of my punching power," Hearns said. "I saw him drop his hands. I knew it would be just a matter of time

Hearns said the victory "didn't tell me too much," but it cemented his desire to fight as a middleweight at least until he gets another chance against Sugar Ray Leonard, the world welterweight champion.

Quote of the day

Bobby Knight, Indiana University coach, on whether college basketball should have a 30-second clock: "We could even go to a 15-second clock and a quick offense and quick defense and really open it up . . . make it spectacular. All the 30-second clock would do is eliminate the out-and-out stall. With a 15-second clock we could call it jai alai in sneakers.

Mavericks win shootout over Houston

Rookie Mark Aguirre hit a 12-foot jump shot to send the game into overtime, then hit the winning basket with two minutes left in the extra period as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Houston Rockets, 108-105 in the National Basketball Association Saturday night. Houston had won nine straight games from the Mavericks before Saturday . . . Kelly Tripucka scored 29 points and John Long added 22 as Detroit went overtime to earn a 127-119 victory over Kansas City . . . Maurice Lucas' three-point play with 28 seconds left gave New York a 107-105 triumph . . . Cedric Hordges scored nine straight points for Denver to open the second half, and the Nuggets posted a 134-125 win over

Maloney's goal sparks Rangers

Dave Maloney scored two power-play goals and assisted on another Saturday to propel the New York Rangers to a 6-4 victory over Boston in the National Hockey League. The triumph enabled the Rangers to take a three-point lead over Philadelphia for second place in the Patrick Division . . . Chris

Valentine scored four power-play goals as Washington overwhelmed
Hartford, 7-1 . . Bryan
Trottier's 44th goal of the season on a short wrist shot with 57 seconds left lifted the New York Islanders to a 5-5 tie with Quebec . . . Guy Lafleur's 23rd goal of the season helped Montreal salvage a 3-3 tie with Toronto . . . Dave Hunter and Glenn Anderson each scored first-period goals and Wayne Gretzky added another into an empty net as Edmonton claimed a 4-1 victory in Pittsburgh . . . A goal by former Calgary captain Brad Marsh gave the Flyers a 9-8 victory over the Flames in a wild game which featured four goals by Calgary's Kent Nilsson . . . Bernie Federko scored three goals in an 11-minute span of the second period to power St. Louis to a 6-2 win over Detroit . . . Alan Haworth's goal midway through the final period completed a Buffalo rally as the Sabres roared back from a 5-1 deficit for a 5-5 deadlock with Minnesota. The North Stars scored all five of their goals in the second period after the first stanza was scoreless.

Rangers, deny interest in Parker

Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles denies that team officials are trying to work a trade for outfielder Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates. "The Parker 'thing' is totally dead," he said. "It will not come up again, I can promise you that. Neither will any trade involving Danny Darwin or Al Oliver." Meanwhile, New York Mets General Manager Frank Cashen denied reports his club is interested in acquiring Parker. "If Mr. Parker were a pitcher, I would be very interested in him," he said . . . Baltimore pitcher Mike Flanagan suffered his second freak accident in less than a week Saturday when he was hit in the head with a glancing blow by a batted ball and was forced to leave practice. No X-rays were taken and Flanagan is expected to resume workouts

Stadler clinging to Doral lead

Struggling Craig Stadler dropped Misc. a critical 40-foot putt for bogey on the final hole and salvaged a 73 that left him in sole control of the lead Saturday in the third round of the Doral Open Golf Tournament in Miami. Stadler, who also led the first and second rounds, leads by a single stroke over Jerry Pate, Andy Bean and Mike Nicolette . . . Top-seeded Earl Anthony became, the first million-dollar winner in the Professional Bowlers Association after he overcame a slow start Saturday and rolled five straight strikes to win the PBA National Championship in Toledo. The victory gave Anthony, the defending champion, an unprecedented fifth career national championship and the top prize of $38,000 in the Philadelphia to snap a five-game losing streak.

UCI's Gerhardt wins duel with Butler in 2-mile event

LOS ANGELES - UC Irvine's John Gerhardt edged former Edison High star Jon Butler in the 2-mile run but the UCLA Bruins captured first place in a triangular track and field meet on the Westwood school's campus Saturday afternoon. The Bruins scored 90 points to 47 for UCI and 401/2 for Fresno State.

Gerhardt, a former Costa Mesa High and Orange Coast College standout, finished the two-mile in 8:43.57 while Butler, a freshman at UCLA, was clocked in 8:44.18. Gerhardt had run fifth in the 1,500-meter run earlier in the day

UCI's Eddie Carey won the 200 and was third in the 100 along with running anchor on both UCI relay teams that finished second to the Bruins.

Larry Hand, a Santa Ana College graduate and state community college 800-meter champion, won his specialty in meet record time of 1:50.22. He also ran on the mile relay team.

Other meet records were set by Bruins Eric Brown in the 100 at 10.43; Anthony Curran in the pole vault at 17-0; and John Brenner in the shot put with a toss of 62-51/2.

Brenner also won the discus with a heave of 178-0. He is a sophomore from Fullerton.

Dwayne Wycoff of UCLA was the winner in the 400 meters in 47.63 while Don McNamara of Fresno State won the high jump with a leap of 6-10, the same height cleared by UCI's Mike Powell for second place. Chris Prieto of UCI finished second in University, Estancia, Irvine all split double-headers

Edison High School's Chargers won their second straight decision in the El Segundo baseball tournament and Huntington Beach posted a pair of victories to remain undefeated to highlight area action Saturday.

Edison's Chargers defeated Long Beach Wilson, 4-3, Saturday after posting a 6-5 decision over La Habra Friday night. The Chargers had won a 10-7 decision over Savanna Friday in the Loara tournament and are now 3-0 for the season.

Edison moved in front early and held the lead throughout the game with Mike DeBenon going the full seven innings. He pitched a four-hitter and had eight strikeouts. DeBenon also drove in what proved to be the winning run in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly after singles by Peter Urquiza

THE TWO VICTORIES advance Edison to the quarterfinals at El Segundo. Next game in the Loara tourney is Monday against Pacifica. Gary Buckels belted a two-run homer in the eighth inning to give Huntington Beach a 4-2 decision over El Modena in the first game of a double-header on the Oiler diamond.

Greg Shirley paced the Oilers to a 19-7 victory in the second game with four hits in five plate appearances including a triple and home run. University's Trojans split a double-header with San Clemente, dropping the opener 3-1 then winning the nightcap, 1-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Greg Eberhart. San Clemente went in front, 2-0, in the opener and held a 3-0 edge when the Trojans scored their lone runs on singles by Brad Guess and Jeff Carr.

In the second game, Eberhart held the Tritons in check for the seven innings, striking out four and walking two. Guess doubled in the second inning for the only extra base blow of the game and scored on Randy Myers' singled.

ESTANCIA'S EAGLES scored five runs in the first inning of the opening game of their double-header at Dana Hills and went on to post a 10-6 victory. Dana Hills captured the nightcap, 5-4, with two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning. Jaime Morlett was the hitting hero for the Eagles in the opener with a single and home run along with two RBI. Jeff Gardner had a pair of hits in the nightcap and contributed a double in the Irvine's Vaqueros opened the season with a 12-run performance in blasting Capistrano Valley, 12-3, then dropped the second game of a double-header, 6-1 in action on the Cougar field.

John and Jay Scott paced Irvine in the opener with seven hits between them. John was 3-for-5 and Scott 4-for-5 with two RBI. Mike Tierney contributed a pair of doubles and was 3-for-4 while Mark Bondi had two hits.

Fountain Valley split its double-header with Mater Dei, winning the first game, 8-2, and dropping the nightcap

Tim Martino drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Pat Conner had three RBI with a single and double in the opener for Fountain Valley.

Frank Spates of Mater Dei had a perfect day at the plate going 3-for-3 in the opener and 2-for-2 in the nightcap in addition to walking twice to get on base seven straight times.

Rustlers win title

Donna McElrea belted a home run and Tammy Delp pitched 11 innings in a relief role as Golden West defeated Ventura, 2-1 then came back with a 6-0 triumph over El Camino to win the championship of the Fullerton women's softball tournament Saturday

The Rustlers of Coach Mickey Davis took a 1-8 lead on McElrea's homer in the top of the 11th inning but Ventura came back to tie in the bottom of the frame. Then in the 12th, Shar Bilyeu singled and went to second on a passed ball. McElrea then; singled to get her home and Delp shut the Pirates out in the bottom of the inning to send the Rustlers into the title game.

In the championship game, freshman pitcher Tina Kyler struck out 14 batters and limited El Camino to four scattered hits.

Angel Monachelli (3b) and Desiree Johnson (ss) were named to the all-tournament team and McElrea was picked as most valuable player in the competition. Golden West is now 8-1 for the season, losing only to San Diego State.

UC Irvine divides

UC Irvine split a double-header with USIU Saturday on the Anteater field, losing the first game, 10-5, and winning the abbreviated nightcap, 9-6 in non-conference baseball

In the opener, UCI committed two errors in the first inning and fell behind for the game. Steve Haworth had three base hits including a triple while Troy Ybarra, Dave Glick and Steve Barnard each had a double.

In the nightcap, Ralph Geddes and Paul Hammond had home runs as the Anteaters moved in front, 7-0 after three innings. Geddes Haworth had 3 RBI in the first game.

Larry Hicks picked up the win in relief of starter Cas Soma.

Foster sank 11 of 12 field goal attempts and 13 of 14 free throws for the Bruins, who rebounded from Friday night's 72-58 loss to Oregon State.

UCLA led throughout the game, building a 47:35 halftime margin. The Ducks, who have lost nine of their last 10 games, rallied to pull within 66-61 on a dunk rebound by Jerome Williams with 6:20 left Williams was called for a technical foul for hanging on the rim on his stuff shot and Foster sank the free throw. From there, UCLA went on a 10-4 spurt to move back in control at 77-65.

Cal State Fullerton 77, Long Beach State 76

Guard Ricky Mixon's short jump shot with 1:22 remaining broke a 72-all tie and Cal State Fullerton went on to a 77-76 Pacific Coast Athletic Association victory over visiting Long Beach

After Mixon's go-ahead shot, Leon Wood stole the ball and drove for a layup with 54 seconds to go making it 76-72. Craig Hodges' layup with 34 seconds left drew Long Beach to within two points, but Tony Neal's free throw following a foul on Hodges completed the scoring for the Titans.

Poly's Miller hits 43 to down Fountain Valley 77-59

It was too much Cheryl Miller for Fountain Valley and a bad second quarter for Estancia as both schools lost quarterfinal round CIF women's basketball playoff games Saturday night away

Mission Viejo's No. 1 ranked 2-A entry defeated Schurr High, 65-50 to gain the semifinals Tuesday night.

Here's how it went:

Riverside Poly 77, Fountain Valley 59 Fountain Valley Coach Carol Strausburg wasn't unhappy with the way her team played against the No. 1 ranked team in the CIF and the nation's top prep star Miller.

'I think we surprised them a little tonight," Strausburg said. "According to their coach, no team has scored 59 points against them this year.

"All of our girls played well tonight. As a team, they put out 110 percent. It was a total team effort but I think we became fatigued at the end and that was the big difference besides Miller.'

For the record, Miller scored 43 points on 16 field goals and 11 free throws.

Miller is an excellent player but I would say that they have one of the best teams in the state if not in the country," Strausburg said in praise of the Poly squad. Strausburg said "Miller is not the only good player on their team but she is very, very good and is very mobile and does an excellent job.

The Fountain Valley starters played most of the game and became tired near end of the contest after pulling to within nine points in the third period.

"I don't think the final score is really indicative of how close the game was most of the way," the Fountain Valley coach added.

Alemany 52, Estancia 49

Estancia had a cold shooting spell in the second quarter and fell behind, 30-17 at halftime and was never able to catch up.

"We missed eight layups in the second quarter but we still weren't out of it," Coach Joe Wolf said. "We changed our defense in the second half from a man-to-man to a box-and-one and held Kathy Smith to two points for the rest of the game after she hit 13 in the first half.

But they hit some key outside shots that really hurt us even though we kept whittling away at the lead."

Estancia closed the gap to 47-46 in favor of Alemany with 11/2 minutes remaining but couldn't Debbie Hughes had 16 of her game-high 21 points in the second half. Wolf praised the play of Amy Hathcock. She is the team's ball handler and did an outstanding job in rebounding as well. Estancia ended its season with an 18-7 record.

Mission Viejo 65, Schurr 50

"We had too much height for them tonight," Mission Viejo Coach John Hattrup said. "We got a hand in front of their faces and played good defense to keep them away from scoring.

The Diablos have Jane Harre (5-10, sr.), Mary Madigan (6-0, jr.) and Cindy Rohrig (6-0, Sr.) across the front line.

Madigan had 19 points, all coming in the second half for the Diablos to lead both teams in scoring. Harre and Rohrig each had 13 points while Rohrig and Madigan pulled down 15 rebounds for Mission Viejo.

Tracy Blum had a school record 13 assists as the Diablos advanced to the semifinals against Moreno Valley, a 54-40 winner over La Habra. The game will be played on a neutral site Tuesday

UCI women win

Dorothy Lewis had 18 points and Katherine Hamilton 13 as the UC Irvine women's basketball team posted a 56-48 victory over the University of Arizona in non-conference action Saturday night in Crawford Hall

Hamilton had 11 rebounds and Lewis 9 for the Anteaters who came back from a 27-20 halftime

The UCI team played better defense in the second half and limited the visitors to 21 points for the final 20 minutes of play.

Regal Bearing surprises

ARCADIA (AP) - Regal Bearing, the more lightly regarded half of a John Longden-trained entry with Tahitian King, scored a surprise victory in Saturday's $136,700 San Luis Obispo Handicap on the turf at Santa Anita.

Ridden by 17-year-old apprentice jockey Joe Steiner and carrying 114 pounds in the 11/2-mile run on the grass, the British-bred Regal Bearing took the lead from pacesetter Mr. Macho in the final turn. He then pulled away to a 31/2-length victory over Le Duc de Bar.

Field hockey CIF CHAMPIONSHIP

Newport Harbor scoring Hamilton

Sailors lose in title match

Newport Harbor High and Garden Grove battled through a 10-minute overtime period in a scoreless deadlock before deciding the CIF field hockey championship on field strokes, 3-2, in favor of Garden Grove Saturday morning at Orange Coast College. "Our girls played an excellent game and so did Garden Grove," Newport Coach Sharon Pietrok said. "It's really too bad it couldn't have been decided on the field rather than with strokes."

Under field hockey rules, if the game is tied after one 10-minute overtime period, the decision goes to strokes. Each team selects five players to try and score then the official has them take turns at pushing, flipping or scooping the ball into the goal. Driving the ball is not allowed.

Heather Stoddard and Carrie Hamilton were the only Newport players able to score. We had chances to score in regulation and they did too," Pietrok added. "But neither team could do it. Our goalie,

Kitty Coutts, did an excellent job for us. So did sweeper Hamilton on defense as did Jeanne McWilliams and Stoddard in center field along with right wing Beth Kenny."

Going away to know the neighbors...

Eliot Teltscher and Yannick Noah were battling it out - service line to service line, instead of baseline to baseline their usual wont - when we finally made it into our seats at the Congoleum Classic at the La Quinta Tennis Club last

Almost as hot as last year, it was hard not to feel sorry for those two young men playing down below. The heat had to be intense. Lord knows it was for those of us in the stands. (However, for all my empathy, when I remembered that the ultimate winner - and Noah finally was, the following day when he sent Ivan Lendl down to defeat after some nerve racking double faults — would walk away with $32,000 and the runner-up, 16 grand, I curbed my tendency to feel sorry for them. After all, that's almost more than some people make in a month or so, isn't it? Or another way to look at it, $5,333.33 a day isn't too bad, when you think about it.)

We'd no sooner seated ourselves. plunked hats on our heads and settled back than I felt a gentle tap on my shouider.

"The Cripes couldn't come," the voice behind the glasses whispered, "so they gave us their tickets. These are our friends the Frisbeys, Connie and Gene.

Behind the glasses was Jeanie Curtis and on the other side of the foursome was Bill, hiding behind his own set of glasses and under a brimmed-white tennis hat.

We all smiled acknowledging each other. It wasn't until a break in the game and we had time to converse I discovered both the Curtises had been born in the desert and had graduated from Palm Springs High School. Jean said there were only 35 in their graduating class. Now there's a bit of history for you.

Sometimes you have to go away to get to know about your neighbors.

On the other hand, Gene Frisbey was born in Santa Ana and graduated from Santa Ana High, Now they've reversed each other, with the Curtises living in Newport Beach and the Frisbeys retired to the desert.

Over by the 'new' clubhouse (Landmark Land Co., La Quinta's redevelopers, have kept the integrity of the place by keeping the exteriors and rebuilding the interiors) I ran into Marilee Wilson, Page Jenkins and Kim Spears Spotted the Waltah Clarkes and the Paul Elmquists, too.

The granddaughter in our family picked up Al and Dolly Mategoren, down from Huntington Beach with the Pony people. Nothing can beat dogs and children for picking up nice folk. They're both great ice breakers.

We stayed over at the Bay Club in Indian Wells, courtesy of Fritzie Williams and I think most of the tennis players from La Quinta did, too. We had double fun seeing them warm up on the "home" courts before they made it around the bend. to the L.Q. Tennis complex.

We didn't, though, see as many folk around Indian Wells as we usually do. Did you all rent your condos to the traveling players, thereby missing the tournament?

Too bad. Maybe next year.

Marilee Wilson (left) also slipped away from the beach area for the weekend. Kim Spears (right) was on a holiday. A coach at Vic Braden's. he was in the desert to see the Congoleum Tournament at La Quinta.

LOOKING GOOD

Color, shape say something

By VIDA DEAN

If you have a round face, don't wear round glasses.

This often stated "rule" isn't necessarily true, according to Cindy Lins, cosmetic optician and assistant manager of Optique Classique in South Coast Plaza.

She says it depends on the size of your face and just how round it is.

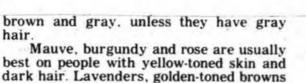

Ordinarily, a person with a round face would look better in a frame that is wide at the top, narrow at the bottom with a high riding temple. A person with a narrow elongated face looks great in a frame rounded at the bottom. The oval-shaped face looks fine in almost any shape frame.

Lins (isn't that a perfect name for an optician?) added that you can't generalize on the best selection of a shape for your glass frames and lens. It is a personal service, and the end result should be to balance your face and enhance your good

What color frames are most complimentary? Again, we can only generalize, Lins says.

Fair-skinned blondes and redheads would probably look best in blue, green, white, beige, light brown and tortoise. Fair skins should, as a rule, avoid black, dark and blues would probably not be becoming,

Dark olive skin and dark hair generally are complemented by frames of burgundy, blue, apricot, dark brown, black or tortoise. Avoid pinks and other pale pastels.

There's one point about which Lins is most definite. A person with a prominent nose should never have a dark bridged frame. This causes the observer's eye to be drawn to the dark center and thus to the nose. A clear bridge would be a much better choice. Just the opposite, of course, for the person with a too small nose.

A perfect nose? No problem. Frames also can be selected to correct the appearance if the eyes are too close set or too wide set. Detailing on the outside of the frames causes the observer's eyes to focus outside and therefore make the wearer's eyes seem further apart. With detailing in the center, the eyes seem closer together.

Another rule Lins applies when fitting frames is that a dark frame should follow the brow line so it won't appear that the wearer has two sets of brows. Also, there should be slightly more of the glasses below the eye level than above.

The tint of the lens should be at the top and bottom, leaving the glass clear at eye level. Some tints camouflage puffiness above the eye, while others accentuate that condition. It depends on a person's

And, if you wear peach colored blush. avoid wearing rose tinted glasses.

Frames come in such a multitude of colors and shapes that it is quite possible to select one that is perfect for your face. Exercise great care and give as much thought to this selection as is given to choosing jewelry, makeup and fashions.

With so many frames available. women are actually shopping for entire wardrobes of glasses . . . for business, for dressy wear and for the outdoors.

Today, 60 to 70 percent of women are choosing rimless glasses at Optique

Classique, says Lins. This probably is because a rimless

eyewear design is made exclusively for Optique Classique. Each lens is crafted to a precision crystal-like finish and held in a stainless-steel base overlaid with a heavy rolled-gold finish. Prices for these exclusive works are $400 to $525 per pair.

So popular is this eyewear that American companies are beginning to copy it, says Lins, whose company sells only European made frames.

Also popular with women are the half metal-half plastic frames with metal temples.

Young people are selecting plastic frames with a preppy look, as are older men who want the young preppy look, says

If you wear glasses, don't forget eye makeup. There is even more reason to use shadows, eyeliner and mascara. Don't overdo, but a good idea is to go a little heavier with what might be thought of as nighttime wear for a person not wearing

. A variety of heel heights

A Louis heel looks delicate enough to wear from morning through evening

This low-heeled pump silhouette is not only appropriate for the new fashions, but a practical walking shoe.

NEW YORK (AP) - This spring, your feet can feel as beautiful as they look Thanks to the wide variety of heel heights making fashion news, from ballet flats to vampy stiletto-heel sandals, there's no need to sacrifice style for comfort.

'Today, there is no one correct heel height. Women can select shoes that combine fashion and function. In fact, a wardrobe of shoes in several heel heights can contribute to the long-term health of your feet," says Andrea Rosen, fashion director of the Footwear Council.

Podiatrists agree that many foot problems caused by improper shoes could be avoided by changing shoes several times a day.

Sky-high heels may have their place for a special night out once in a while but according to Dr. Rob Roy McGregor, medical consultant to the Footwear Council. "Shoes with high heels throw the back out of alignment," resulting in backaches, tightness in the hip joints, and tension in the legs." Worn every day high heels can lead to shortened calf muscles. making it uncomfortable to wear low-heeled shoes.

To correct this problem gradually wean yourself away from high heels by switching to low shoes for a few hours every day, he notes.

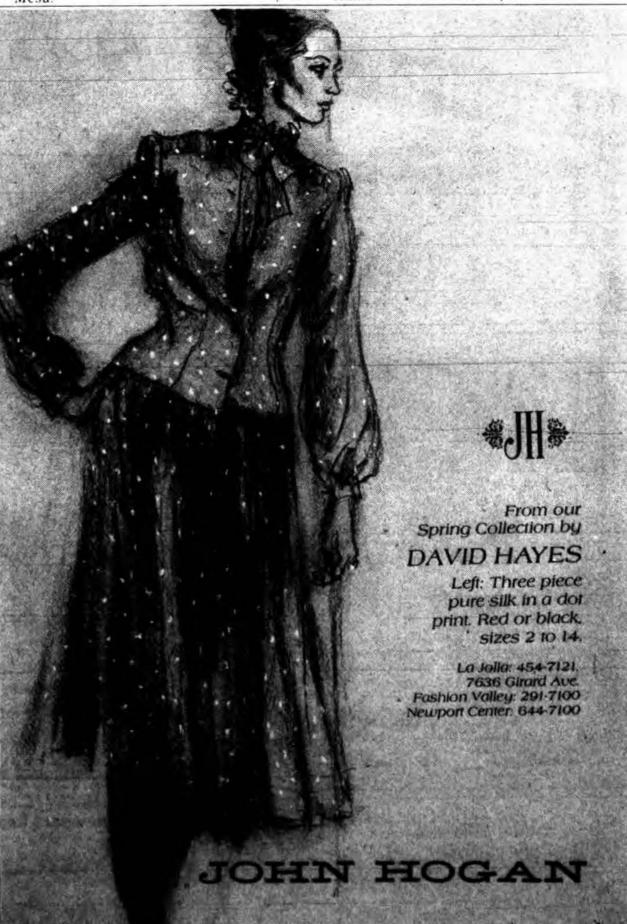

The ideal heel height for work days ranges from 1-to-2 inches, say the experts. Low-to-mid-heel shoes distribute the body's weight more evenly; while with high heels the weight must be borne by the balls of the feet.

"Most of this spring's newest shoe shapes have heels somewhere between flat and very high," says Ms. Rosen. "A pump with a sculptured Louis or court heel looks higher than it really is, because the heel is tapered inward. They go comfortably from day into evening."

Wedges are also making a big comeback for spring with the newest being slightly tapered and more delicately sculptured than the ones of a few seasons

Some women will still favor high heels because they are so flattering to the legs, but if high heels must be worn, try to give your feet a rest for a few hours in the middle of the day by changing to a pair of low heeled shoes

"Good fit prevents a lot of problems, regardless of heel height," Ms. Rosen points out.

Laguna Beach Opera League hears Celeste Tavara

By NORA LEHMAN

MOSS POINT PERFORMANCE: Connie and Andy Morthland turned their super Moss Point house over to 74 Laguna Beach Opera League members to hear Celeste Tavara, who four years ago won the Sanderson Award and in 1981 took the Opera League Performance Award at the Orange County Metropolitan Auditions.

A product of our own Orange County, she went to both Cal State University at Fullerton and Long Beach. We'll keep our fingers crossed that the rest of the world thinks she's as talented as we do.

DISTINGUISHED, THAT'S WHAT: If I'm boastful about our cover people it's because I think they deserve it.

Another one's been doing some interesting things. Sheila McCanna, she's the one who urges us to get our butterflies to fly in formation before we do any public speaking, gave a talk on "Leadership in Volunteerism" to members of the Friends of South Coast Repertory Guilds. Sixty of them had gathered and heard about plans for the fourth annual End-of-Season Auction and Variety Show; from chairman of this fund-raiser, Jane Martin, about the opening of the solicitation drive and a presentation by one of our fellow Daily Pilot persons, Carol Olson, on principles of non-profit organizational advertising and auction item solicitation.

A busy day, they also heard from Richard Odle on historical costuming relative to the upcoming, HENRY IV.

PART I and indulged in a well-deserved luncheon. This day was organized by All-Guild Chairman, Debbie Andrews of Huntington Beach with the help of All-Guild Membership Chairman Shirley Lampert of Newport Beach. Giving Jane Martin a hand on the auction are Janyce Hustwit, Diane Diehl, Mona Martin, Barbara Bryant, that dedicated Irisher Catherine Thyen, Kay McDonald, Marlene Hermes, Joyce Justice, Judy Dobbs, Ruth Goulet, Barbara Murray and Sherry Ross.

THEY DO MEET ON TUESDAYS:

And this past Tuesday, they had their 24th Annual Philanthropic Luncheon at the Airporter Inn Hotel. Fran Allison and Ron Husman performed for the Tuesday Club of Newport Harbor, and the monies raised from this event are slated for the Harbor Area Adult Day Care Center and Hoag Hospital's Mobile Meals. This dedicated group also support scholarships for students going to local colleges. Cloyse Endsley and Vera Dennis are just two members of the club.

ELECTION TIME: I have to tip my hat to the Newport Harbor Auxiliary of the Children's Home Society. They have their ball when no one else does and they have their elections at a wonderfully curious time of the year. I don't know whether they planned it that way, but by being just a little off everyone else's schedule, they manage to make themselves heard. I like to think some very bright person worked it all out.

So, it's election time for them and this is the list of new officers: Barbara DeMott, president; Susan Beechner, VP; Ray Jean Ryan, recording secretary; Sally Phillips, corresponding secretary; Barbara Cronin, treasurer and Nanette Sutherland gets them out of parliamentary jams. That's what past presidents are for. They also act as installing officers, as did Rosemary Hitzel.

A few more serving on the executive board: Jude Baum, Sandee Kerr, Marilyn Bishop, Barbara Rountree and Fran Smith. Five new provisionals joined the group: Vickie Browne, Marjorie Dalton, Carolyn Fyke, Mary Ann Goldman and Judy Morgan.

Paula Van Eden was the hostess for all these goings on.

Barbara DeMott is the newly elected president of the Newport Harbor Auxiliary of the Children's Home Society.

recording secretary; Ann Lamonti, corresponding secretary and Ethel Blair plans to handle the money. Sadie Burns of the Orange County Federation took them into the fold.

HEART TO HEART: The first of what's to be an annual event—the Orange County Heart Association Ball is an event of the past, but they're probably already planning for next year.

We'll hope there won't be any conflicts in '83. Valentine's Day, or the nearest Saturday, does seem an appropriate date for a Heart Association Ball.

They had guests from all over the county, and among those dining and dancing at South Coast Plaza Hotel were Marg Godber and her guest, J. Ray Lowell; Elon and Mary Ann Wells; Elaine and Tykye Camaras, all over from CDM. Costa Mesa was represented by one of the co-chairs. JoAnne Stewart and her roommate, Bill; the Ralph Sorsoleils and Horace Hertzes; the Ray Malavasis; the Mike Cimmarrustises and Rheta and Max Schrieber, all from Huntington Beach: Jodie and Vince Ferragamo and Pat and Dave Perkowski represented Irvine and a crowd came in from the Newport-Balboa area. Among them, Evelyn and Michael Potoma; Jackie and Loren Heather; President of the Heart Association. Michael Weber, M.D. and wife, Sandy; Virginia and Paul Bender; Ray and Gloria Osbrink; Vickie and John Irvine. Up from San Juan, Gene Roberson, who performed on the piano at the gala and Pam and Sam Goldstein. He was MC for the evening.

Haven't gotten a tally yet, but I hope they did well.

MARCH, MARCH, MARCH: the boys are marching. And so are the girls for the March of Dimes. The same night as the Heart Association Ball, the Junior Ebell Club of Newport Beach was having a fund-raiser for the March of Dimes down at the Balboa Bay Club.

They figured they cleared about $5,500-to-$6,000. And among those to help the march along were Doris and Ferydoun Ahadpour, who just bought the Huntington Harbour Tennis Club; Ron and Cindy Latin of Huntington Beach: Mission Viejo's Eileen and Richard Anderson: Jeanne and Joe Basso; two sets of Buccis. Karen and Bob and Ruth, and Jack: the Gary San Fillipos; Geri and Paul Shapiro she's president of the Junior Ebells and Zack and Gerry Wright. Fred Anderson of KABC and Bob Bucci spelled each other doing the auction part of the evening.

You can plan your wardrobe by computer now

If you'll let it, the computer can come to your closet. It can take the guesswork out of shopping, help you avoid the hazards of impulse buying — a fact to be reckoned with the price of clothes still on the rise — and guide you, step-by-step, through the number-of choices available to the shopper these days.

Developed by the editors of GLAMOUR, the wardrobe planning program is dubbed PACE — Personalized Apparel Computer Evaluation. It provides answers to each person's needs — taking into account lifestyles, figure problems, as well as color and clothing preferences. It does not suggest throwing out everything in your possession and starting over. Instead, it suggests a woman take a good hard look at her wardrobe and build on the classics she already owns.

This program will be presented at Nordstrom/South Coast Plaza at 8:30 Saturday morning, March 20, by the store's own people and Daina Hulet, GLAMOUR's west coast editor.

To get the most out of the presentation having one's own computerized plan in hand would be best. And to do that, go to Nordstrom's Point of View Department, fill out the eight-page questionnaire, give your $25 to the salesperson, and mail it immediately to GLAMOUR.

Your responses will be run through a computer and what you get back is a 30-page analysis of what you should keep in your existing wardrobe and what you should purchase to make it work best for you. Included are silhouettes to flatter your figure; fabric information and ideas on accessorizing to update current looks, mix-and-match color charts and even lingerie do's and don'ts.

Advance information on Spring '82 trends will be included and highlight those which best fit the wardrobe needs of the respondent. PACE even suggests what to buy and where it can be purchased. In this case, Nordstrom, surely.

With so many options available, GLAMOUR'S Ms. Hulet will be available to GLAMOUR'S Ms. Hulet will be available to answer specific questions and offer tips and trend information at the end of the program.

Tie a program like this in with color analysis, a new makeup and hairdo and you can give up worrying about the small things like wardrobing and give your mind to the big things like maybe some small impulse buying wouldn't hurt too much.

The La Quinta Hotel. considered to be the oldest resort area on the low desert. continues to draw visitors from the Orange Coast and Los Angeles areas. A large pool in the tennis court area is just one of the many attractions here.

Grand old dame of the desert

By NORA LEHMAN

It's the oldest resort in the desert and there's an elegance and timelessness here with the Spanish haciendas and bungalows lying in the coves low againstthe rugged Santa Rosa mountains.

When the late Walter Morgan came to this spot from San Francisco in the early 20s, he found little but sand and cacti in the Coachella Valley. But he liked the climate and the beauty of the area attracted him.

A few years later he bought the land grant acreage on which he had first pitched his tent from the South Pacific Railway for $1 an acre. He built himself a Spanish hacienda and added some bungalows for his friends.

These buildings were to be the nucleus of the La Quinta Hotel.

Until the beginning of the housing boom in the late '50s, Hollywood famous mixed with the old-family rich of the East Coast and Midwest who descended on La Quinta yearly during the worst of the winter weather. They often stayed for months at a time, insisting on the same rooms from year-to-year.

While there are still old-timers who maintain this routine. the numbers lessen every year. Most desert lovers have bought houses and condominiums of their own. It becomes less and less of a "residential" hotel as the years pass.

The thrust these days is towards short-term stays and corporate people coming in for seminar presentations.

Traditions linger on, however coats and ties are still required for gentlemen guests and "appropriate attire" for ladies in the Frank Capra dining room in the evening.

It's this kind of elegant and gracious atmosphere, the Landmark Land Co., which acquired La Quinta Hotel in 1976. has managed to preserve, even as it has added to and improved the property. As it builds within the hotel grounds it retains the exteriors and updates the interiors of existing buildings.

"It would have been less expensive." Jerry Barton, Landmark's president says, "to have taken all the old buildings down and rebuilt. But we would have lost more than we gained that way.

Such attention and care shows throughout the development because as they've added and updated, they've remembered to retain the best of the old.

According to Robert Silva, the hotel's general manager, 104 new units will be added to the already existing 165. The goal is to have them ready for occupancy in time for the '82-'83 season.

They should have no trouble filling them. Landmark is quickly turning the agreage around the hotel into a total resort in an area filled with resorts.

Twenty-seven of the proposed 36-hole golf course have been completed with a handsome clubhouse at its hub. Membership is full and a waiting list already exists. Experts say it's the best desert course in the world. High praise in an area where golf courses exist around

Landmark has also joint-ventured the La Quinta Hotel Tennis Club with 11 of the best-known pros in the world Charlie Passerell, the company's tennis director (Landmark has also has Mission Hills and the Carmel Valley Tennis Ranch). Arthur Ashe, Roscoe Tanner, Bob Lutz, Stan Smith, Tom Gorman, Marty Reissen, Dick Stockton, Brian Gottfried, Dennis Ralston and Donald Dell.

The ultimate aim is 17 courts including clay and grass. The 7,500-seat sunken stadium court is finished and was in use for the Desert Hospital fund-raiser, the Congqleum Classic Tennis Tournament, last weekend.

In the tennis-court area is a large pool and a charming clubhouse converted from a Spanish-style private home. Horseback riding is available, as well as hot air ballooning

And an added amenity is the 10-acre terminal site recently acquired by the company at the Thermal Airport. Accommodating both corporate jet and prop aircraft, as well as general aviation planes, it has a fenced and patrolled holding area. Free transportation is provided to the hotel.

For those needing connecting flights to Los Angeles taxi flight service is available. CBS, which recently held its regional meeting at the hotel, flew their execs in and out on the corporate jet.

Few resorts offer such amenities and the expanding of them bodes well for not only La Quinta Hotel itself, but for the town as well as the surrounding area.

So, like an aging grand dame with pride in herself, the La Quinta Hotel adds its years gracefully America's bathrooms may be in for a major overhaul as population pressures in some areas outstrip the availability of fresh water.

One Costa Mesa firm is betting that home builders in water-poor regions will have to re-think the established practice of installing the traditional flush

Since 1978 the Enviroscope Corp. has marketed a water-free system called Carousel, first developed in the early 1970s during a major cleanup effort of waterways in Sweden.

The toilet uses the simple principle of allowing wastes to break down naturally while dioxide, water vapor and humus. The holding portion of the system consists of a fiberglass drum featuring four revolving chambers. The system functions without chemicals.

Before intitial use of the toilet, some peat moss and top soil is added at the bottom of each drum chamber. When one chamber is filled, the drum is rotated to the next chamber.

De Jounge said for a family of six using the larger model, the drum has to be rotated about twice a year. After two years, when all the chambers are full, a removal door is opened to the first chamber where the odor-free compost is removed.

LOCAL BUSINESS

being held in an area where odors will not annoy members of the household, or make it necessary to handle wastes.

No, corncobs and outhouses ren't coming back in fashion. But company officials admit they have many obstacles to overcome before the image of the crude privy is erased.

Following extensive laboratory testing, the Carousel system was approved by the National Sanitation Foundation in January 1981.

Lars de Jounge, president of Enviroscope, said use of his company's system can save the average family 45 percent of its total water consumption.

He said at least that amount is used by flushing the toilet in the home of an average family. Most toilet tanks hold about five gallons of fresh water.

"What we are selling in effect is a complete sewage treatment system for each home," de Jounge said.

Simply, the $1,200 to $1,700 system offered by Enviroscope uses a method called composting, which allows natural processes to break down waste.

The end product is an odorless mosslike humus that can be used as fertilizer in a garden or lawn. Users of the system are encouraged to throw kitchen wastes down the commode as well. Such items as potato peels assist in the composting process.

Unlike a septic tank, which allows so-called "black water" to leech into the soil, where presumably it is filtered before reaching ground water levels, the Enviroscope system is self-contained.

Waste products are transformed into carbon

He said the compost is an excellent soil conditioner or fertilizer, and should be buried 12 inches under the top soil surrounding shrubs and flowers.

Wastes are broken down by bacteria in the peat moss. However, once this "composting" process has been introduced to the chamber, no additional peat needs to be

De Jounge said wastes in the chambers, with the exception of the top layer, will be all but odor free within a few months since the formation of humus takes place rapidly.

The odor produced by the top layer is drawn out through a vent pipe due to the negative pressure created by a ventilator. The pipe end is situated on the roof, where odors are diluted by the air.

"If the system is properly installed, there are no smells either inside the house or in surrounding areas," de Jounge

He said the composting process relies on a temperate climate. For colder regions, the company offers an optional heater which operates on a thermostat.

The commode for the system is nearly identical to a flush toilet, minus the familiar flushing lever.

"Every pollutant disposed of in our oceans, lakes, streams and ground water contributes to the irreparable damage to our enviroment," said de Jounge.

"In Sweden fabulous results were realized by the use of compost toilets and the banning of septic tanks. As water becomes increasingly scarce, we predict a tremendous growth in our product sales."

Mother-daughter partnership keeps service all in the family

By STEVE TRIPOLI

A mother-daughter business team from Costa Mesa is hoping to turn chores that people just don't have time for into a thriving enterprise.

Jan and Colleen Kennedy, who arrived here from Santa Monica eight months ago, call their. making it together after she was divorced.

Jan worked as a secretary and in the modeling and entertainment industries, and her daughter chipped in when she was 14 by getting a part-time job. Colleen recently earned her bachelor's degree from the University of Southern Coast, brought them to Costa Mesa.

Both are confident that the business, which has started slowly due in part to a lack of funds for advertising, will catch on even in rough economic

"We know it has potential and we're sure the signs are there," says Jan. Both also say that the business is geared to affluent people whose time "is more valuable than the time they'd put out to do these services themselves," and that such people are always in need of such a service despite the economic climate.

Some of the chores they've been called upon to perform recently include selecting furniture for one client and cooking meals for a family several times a week. The mother-daughter team has also been selected to take over publication of the newsletter in Mesa Verde Village where they live, and the adjacent Vista Del

Lago apartment complex.
Other services offered by J&C's include absentee home management, supervision of domestic help, wardrobe selection, checkbook balancing, payment of household bills, escort service for out-of-town guests and miscellaneous shopping.

Jan said business is picking up through word of mouth. In the meantime, Colleen is working part-time as a grocery checker and both distribute leaflets describing the business at area retail outlets.

The two also credit a strong Christian faith with helping guide them in their new endeavor. "We're not fanatics, but we'd like to give the Lord credit for this," says Jan. "We would never have made this decision without the Lord," her daughter adds.

The two say their strengths and character traits complement each other. Jan is the promoter who provides the exuberance, Colleen organizes

They are convinced the combination will be a winning one, and they point to a recent surge in bookings as evidence.

"The doors are really beginning to open," Jan says.

MAPPY TOGETHER — Colleen and Jan Kennedy hope to make enough money to turn their new enterprise. Everything Under the Sun, into a thriving business.

ENTREPRENEURS

business J&C's Everything Under the Sun, and it's an accurate description.

For a fee that varies with the service, they'll do anything from sending out greeting cards to planning parties, picking up laundry, screening and hiring office help, tutoring elementary school students, and more.

A wealth of experience and education, plus what both describe as an exceptional personal relationship with each other, launched them on the venture.

The two have become especially close during the past 13 years, says mother Jan, because of the challenge of California, after working her way through the school and combining her earnings with a scholarship and government

"It was quite a goal and I'm really proud of her," says Jan. At about the time of her daughter's graduation Jan Kennedy was searching for a new business pursuit. Her past experiences gave her what she calls a 'generalist'

That background, combined with her daughter's education, a desire to leave the crowded Los Angeles area, and the idea that a business such as theirs would find a market on the Orange background.

Software piracy on the upswing

Theft of computer programs runs into the millions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Your computer gets a bug in its programming, so you call your dealer. But you get excuses, not service, and suddenly nothing at all. He's skipped town and you're stuck with an expensive counterfeit that doesn't work Chalk up another victim to software piracy, the newest, fastest growing computer industry erime, officials say.

'It happens over and over again," says Robin Robinson, president of the new Association for Software Protection.

More and more companies are being "brought although they don't know it," she says. "Once the pirate feels he's about to be caught, he splits. There's a high percentage of users who get burned: They're left with a computer system that doesn't function. Software - commands on magnetic tape or floppy disks telling a computer what to do - was a 483 billion business in 1981, says the Palo Alto research firm Input. By 1985, sales of programs that make video spaceships eat asteroids, instruct computers to process a paycheck or plot a financial forecast are expected to hit $15 billion.

And the opportunity and temptation to copy the programs instead of buy them are on the rise, Piracy's easy, cheap and quick. Just pop a software diskette into a computer in the office or at home and tell the machine to copy. Seconds later there's a duplicate.

"There's so much theft we don't know how much," says lawyer Gordon Davidson of Fenwick, Stone, Davis & West in Palo Alto.

Stone, Davis & West in Palo Alto.

Although it's stealing, it doesn't seem wrong.

"The software problem is more serious than chip theft ($2 million) last year . . . primarily because it's so easy to copy software and generally accepted practice," says Donn Parker, a senior management systems consultant for SRI International. "Whereas to copy chips is very difficult and the theft of chips is an obvious griminal act."

RESENTING A NEW SHOW FOR

Kids and computer buffs make copies "left and right," swapping software like bubblegum baseball cards or comic books, says Susan Nycum, a specialist in computer and communications law at Gaston, Snow and Ely Bartlett.

And when a business buys several personal computers, it may buy only one software diskette and simply make enough copies to go around. "For every copy I sell, there are 10 out there that I didn't get royalties from," a software publisher complained to Ms. Nycum.

So much amateur copying is going on that "it could very well bankrupt a number of software Parker warns. "Their market for packages will gradually disappear. No one will buy their packages any more because all you have to do is go to a computer club or trade with

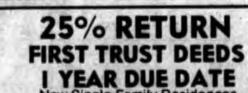

At the more sophisticated end of what Ms. Robinson calls the "gradient of piracy" are video game imitations.

"Millions and millions of dollars have been lost nationwide . . . and nearly every coin-operated game has been copied, pirated or modified," says Paul J. Laveroni, a lawyer who represents Atari, the largest computer game maker.

One form of piracy often doesn't benefit the users. Commercial counterfeiting by mail-order or fly-by-night outfits can saddle businesses with temperamental software, then leave them with no one to complain to.

Software protection director for MCBA in Montrose, Ms. Robinson hopes her fledgling association will provide something like a "Good Housekeeping seal of approval" for software publishers, a signal of reliability to potential

She also stresses the need to "eradicate those who are blatantly unethical" and to educate customers. "If you educate, you take out some of the leverage that makes a pirate so successful. He has to bank on the fact that you don't know . . . and if you do know, he's not going to be able to fool

MOVIES-TO-GO - Nathan Nayman stands before a wall of movie cassettes at a Captain Video outlet.

Video cassette rental chain does big business and it's a trend that's spreading. Millions of movie cassettes estimates range from 4 million to 100 million - were rented last year. As many as 5,000 video specialty stores cater to the growing business.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - It's Friday night, traffic's bad, parking's impossible and the line at the cinema's too long. So you swing by a video "library" for a movie to go.

That's entertainment, home-style,

At Captain Video, a San Francisco-based chain of five stores, up to 1,500 movie cassettes are rented out each weekend. And its 1,400 selections - from the latest releases like "Mommie Dearest" to the bluest adult flicks, the bloodiest horror movies and the strangest oldies like the 1938 all-midget Terror of Tiny Town" - offer more choice than even the biggest, theater-studded city

Two years ago, the "chain" was a single store, begun by four partners with a start-up investment that's equaled now by a month of good weekend rentals. Two years ago, partners Paul Geffner and Robert Friedman were Fisherman's Wharf street artists; David Prinz, a pension analyst and North American Scrabble champ; and Nathan Nayman, a hospital administrator and health grant writer and consultant

The secret of their success, economics and the electronic-age pleasure principle. And service and catchy promotions, 29-year-old Navman says.

When the video cassette recorder.

a device that records programs off a television set or shows videotaped films on the TV screen, first hit the market, it was "a frill, a fuxury item," he says. "It still isn't a necessity, but because it's getting cheaper it's becoming an attractive

'All of a sudden you have some control over what you're seeing. You're not at the mercy of network television. If you want to just watch M*A*S*H, you set your machine to record M*A*S*H and you come home and watch it.

With the introduction of videotaped movies, and the rising cost of traditional entertainment, the frill is getting even more attractive, Nayman says.

'We're in a depressed economy. Going out to buy a car, going on a vacation - all the things that you want to do - have become prohibitively expensive," he says.

Going to a movie can mean shelling out for tickets, parking, maybe dinner or a babysitter. "You have these costs that just keep building when it comes to going out for entertainment," he says. But after a one-time expense of say, $600, penny-pinching moviegoers can do their watching at home.

Nayman calls it "control of the entertainment in your home.'

As middlemen between the moviemakers and moviegoers, video retail outlets play the role of "a movie library . . . We've become the movie theaters. People are coming to us," Nayman says

You see Morgan silver dollar: We see

In May 1976, you could have purchased this MS-65 Morgan from Hannes Tulving Rare Coin Investments for a modest $30. Today, 51/2 years later, we'll buy it back for $450. A tidy 1400% return.

Granted, that kind of rare coin appreciation is exceptional, but there's a good deal of money to be made in the market as a whole.

In fact, since opening our doors in 1976, not one of our clients' rare coin investment portfolios has ever made less than 30% per year. Not one.

Quite an achievement, we think you'll agree, while bullion, stocks - even real estate - remain extremely soft.

Not even money market funds or T-Bills offer that kind of annual return.

The secret, of course, is finding the right coins. And Hannes Tulving is one of only 18 recognized silver dollar experts in the country.

Our company offers the serious investor a professionally managed, personal rare coin investment portfolio, complete with a 60-day moneyback policy and grade guarantee on each coin.

Give us a call today. Or return the coupon below for a free information packet. And do it soon. After all, at 1400% over 51/2 years, imagine what you're losing each day you delay.

Inflation ar exacts

NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's inflation rate has plunged in the past two years, but the price for the gains

There have been two recessions and business failures continue to

This past week, the Labor Department reported inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, rose at an annual rate of 3.5 percent in January, the lowest pace since July 1980 at the ebb of the previous recession.

What a difference two years make! In January 1980, prices rose at an annual rate of 18 percent, after rising 13.3 percent in all of 1979.

The inflation rate fell to 12.4 percent in 1980 and 8.9 percent last

The Federal Reserve Board's tight-money stance has received much of the credit for unwinding inflation and much of the blame for the current economic suffering. "Breaking a deeply embedded inflationary process is a painful thing," concedes Fed Chairman Paul Volcker. "The simple and hard fact is that this country has never in its history — not since the Continental dollar (in the 18th century) — experienced an inflation so long and so large as from the mid-1968 to the so large as from the mid-1960s to the "To the younger generation, it had restore stability is justified by one overriding proposition — that we cannot build a prosperous, healthy economy and meet our social and security responsibilities on the shifting sands of an unstable dollar."

Volcker, speaking to businessmen this past week, vowed to continue monetary restraint monetary restraint.

'The fact is that we can now point to encouraging signs of real progress in the inflation fight," he said. "I realize that some of the evident slowing of the most widely used price indexes reflects the more immediate effects of the recession in weakening market demand, the pressures of high interest rates on speculative commodity markets, and the current surpluses of oil.

achieved partly at the expense of unemployment and savage pressures on profits of many companies. High unemployment and a depressed economy can't be an acceptable base for sustaining the effort to restore price stability. But the gains against inflation we see today need not be temporary.

"They can become a kind of

"They can become a kind of platform for moderation in pricing policies and wage practices, and for the attention to productivity improvement we need. That is a process we can see under way, at least in embryo."

Rut Yale professor James Tohin

But Yale professor James Tobin, who was awarded the 1981 Nobel Memorial Prize in economics. contends the central bank's monetary policy is a barrier to a return to prosperity. "Today's real (inflation-adjusted)

"Today's real (inflation-adjusted) interest rates are extraordinarily high, even though the economy is in deep recession," Tobin says. "Given the Fed's monetary (growth) targets, an upturn in business activity this year, when and if it occurs, is likely to raise interest rates further. Once again they will cut short the recovery, very likely at higher rates of unemployment and excess (manufacturing) capacity than in the interlude last year."

In the interim, economic pain

The Commerce Department said factory orders for durable goods fell 1.5 percent in January after declining a revised 0.2 percent in December. Earlier, the department had reported a 1.6 percent December gain in orders for durable goods — items such as cars and appliances with an expected life of three years or more.

The Commerce Department reported the inflation-adjusted gross national product — the total value of goods and services produced in the economy — fell at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the final three months of last year rather than the 5.2 percent decline earlier reported. It was still the steepest slide since the 9.9 percent rate of decline in the second quarter of 1980.

Model home objectives

Decorator lectures builders on target marketing

By MARY JANE SCARCELLO

Model homes are a vital part of the target marketing necessary to sell a home in the 1980s, according to Carole Eichen, president of Carole Eichen Interiors in Santa Ana.

She spoke this week before a group of builders at the Marriott Hôtel in Newport Beach who were attending a conference by Housing Magazine on "The California Marketing Scene."

"Target marketing is a reality now, and builders must react to - or better yet, anticipate - the market and decorate for it. You have to draw a bead on the emotions triggering a buying decision if you want to survive, she said.

She traced a history of home buying patterns in America since World War II, noting that families in the '50s and '60s wanted more bedrooms and large back yards.

"Tracts looked like cookie-cutter designs," she said, but houses were the American dream and sold themselves. Earliest tracts, on the East Coast, had "exhibit homes" that closed on weekends, forcing buyers to stand on tiptoe and peer through windows to see

The 1982 buyers can be singles who intend to stay that way, divorced persons who want more than an apartment or what Ms. Eichen termed "mingles" - two unrelated singles who want to own property rather

"The Wall Street Journal has referred to this as 'the rented generation,' "she said, "and says the single biggest fear is not being able to buy.

Decorating for a target market hinges on the style of the second bedroom in a model home, she said. "If you're going after the 'mingles,' decorate with two master bedrooms," she suggested. "Include at least one model with no children's room

'Model homes must create designs to stay in a buyer's mind and emotionally involve him. Models should offer emotional security in every room.

Most successful designs are a team effort, she said, with architects, interior designers and landscapers working together to produce the final

"They call me a clutter designer, but I think room accessories are important," she said. "The three most effective items in adding warmth to a room are accessories. bookshelves and plants. In order to sell a house, the buyer has to be able to visualize himself living there. Model homes are a distinct marketing tool '

Any change in accepted offer means there is no sale contract

DEAR BOB: I'm a real estate agent and have worked for months to sell a very expensive house. A buyer made a purchase offer which, after haggling back and forth, the seller finally accepted. The only problem is that the seller wrote above his signature 'Subject to approval by my tax adviser.' My buyer got cold feet and now his lawyer says there is no contract, even though the tax adviser approved the contract five days later. Do we have a sale?

DEAR MRS. E.R.: No. The buyer's lawyer is correct. No contract was created unless the buyer accepted the seller's counteroffer contingency of the tax adviser's approval.

To have a valid purchase contract, the buyer's offer must be accepted by the seller without any changes. If the seller makes the slightest change, iginal offer is rejected and a sell to the buyer on new terms is created

Then the buyer can accept or reject the counteroffer. Since your buyer never accepted the seller's new contingency for approval by the tax adviser, no valid contract existed. Your situation shows why property sellers should never change any term of a purchase offer unless they want to reject that offer and create a counteroffer. Once an offer is rejected, it cannot later be accepted. Ask your attorney to explain

Interest on deposits

DEAR BOB: For more than three months we've had our $5,000 earnest money deposit on a home purchase tied up. Our offer is contingent upon being able to get a new mortgage. Loans the size we need are unavailable in our town. But the realty agent never gives up as she keeps saying she thinks she's found a lender who will make the

We've filled out loan applications with four different lenders so far. My question is (1) how long do we have to wait to get our $5,000 refunded and (2) must interest be paid on our money while we

DEAR PERRY: (1) The law sets no time limit if you didn't specify one in your purchase offer. A "reasonable time" would be presumed if the matter goes to court. It appears your three-month wait meets this reasonableness test.

(2) I'm not aware of any state law requiring payment of interest on earnest money deposits for the purchase of real estate. However, buyer and seller often agree that deposit money should be placed in a money market fund or savings account until the sale closes. Perhaps your seller will agree to this, but be sure to specify who gets the Best way to buy

DEAR BOB: Last fall you said mortgage interest rates would drop substantially. That hasn't happened yet. But my wife and I grow more frustrated daily renting an apartment when we really want to buy a house and start our family. Is there any way we can buy a house on $28,000 annual combined income and only about $3,850 in savings?

DEAR JIM: Yes. There is absolutely no reason you can't buy your own home, except laziness. Get busy. Start shopping. Make offers. Work with a creative realty agent who understands today's finance methods.

Just last week I bought a $123,000 three-bedroom, two-bathroom investment house for absolutely nothing down, except about $900 in closing costs. If a dummy like me can do it, you can too

P.S. Forget about conventional mortgage interest rates from banks and S&Ls. The best way to buy houses today is with seller financing in the 10 percent to 12 percent interest range

Furniture package

A free furniture package is being offered at The Villas in Westminster. For a limited time only, buyers will receive beautifully styled oak furniture to decorate their living room, dining room and bedroom

The package is being offered by Ayres at The Villas where prices, affordable even to first-time homebuyers, range from $83,990 to $88,990.

The Villas, which offers contemporary-designed two-bedroom townhomes in a convenient single-level floor plan, are located at Worthy Drive and Van Buren Street, north of the Beach Boulevard exit of the San Diego Freeway in Westminster.

Decorated models and the sales office are open daily from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

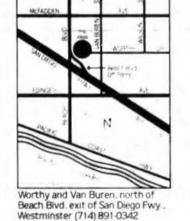

The Villas also is continuing to offer Ayres equity sharing program in which the developer loans buyers up to $30,000 in a second trust deed with no payments and no interest for four years.

Under this program, payments can be as low as $619 a month, principal and interest, with as little as 5 percent down

THE GAZA INTERCEPT. By E. Hunt. Stein & Day. 302 Pages. $12.95.

What would happen if an Arab terrorist managed to steal a U.S. neutron bomb and used it to destroy one of Israel's chief cities? Author E. Howard Hunt thinks it would probably touch off World War III.

In "The Gaza Intercept," Hossein Bakhari, a megalomaniac who dreams of becoming leader of the Arab World, pulls off such a theft in a series of audacious if unlikely moves.

First Bakhari gets hold of a secret American document which spells out where the United States keeps its neutron bombs controversial weapons which can kill populations by radiation but leave buildings undamaged

With this information, Bakhari and his fanatical followers proceed to shoot their way into a NATO base in Belgium and make off with two neutron warheads.

Despite frequent use of coincidence and situations that strain the reader's credulity, Hunt turns in a highly suspenseful story that holds the interest.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q. - I have a problem about a bidding sequence that seems to occur frequently. Suppose that you have a balanced minimum opening bid, about 13 HCP, and a five-card major suit. But your partner opens one of a minor in front of you and, over your one of a major response, he rebids one no trump. How do you go about showing your hand? A jump in your five-card suit, which may not be overly robust, is unthinkable; a simple rebid of your suit or a rebid of a lower-ranking suit, is unforgivable because neither action is forcing and more than likely will be passed; and a jump in no trump is disagreeable since you might not have a stopper in one of the suits. What do you suggest? - P. Hill, Seattle, Wash. (This question has been awarded the weekly prize.) A.-I can understand why you have problems-there is no single rule to cover all situations, so each hand has to be treated on its own merits. You could shoot out three no trump and hope for the best-with an opening bid facing an opening bid.

three no trump is unlikely to be disastrous and is almost sure to have some play. But there are many hands that might play better in the 5-3 major fit if it exists, or in partner's suit if you have a fit there. So you should try to find out as much as you can about partner's hand.

Let's consider a possible hand. Suppose that you are South and you hold:
◆KJx ♡AQxxx ◇Kxx ◆xx

The bidding: North South

10 10 1 NT ?

North might or might not have a club stopper. If he doesn't, three no trump might have no play while four hearts or five diamonds could be laydown. You cannot rebid two diamonds or two hearts, because both are nonforcing; a jump to three diamonds would promise better diamonds and a more unbalanced hand; and your heart suit is too weak for you to even consider a jump to three hearts.

However, it is not impossible to find a forcing bid on this hand that will enable you to learn what partner has.

You simply rebid two spades - a bid in a new suit higher ranking than your first is forcing. Don't worrry about the possibility of partner raising to three spades - he denied four spades when he bid one no trump over your one heart response. But now partner can give preference to three hearts if he has three cards in the suit, or rebid his own five-card diamond suit with a shaky club stopper, or bid no trump with clubs well stopped. No matter what, you will be much better placed to decide which game you want to play.

Now switch the black suits round, giving you a doubleton spade and three clubs to the king-jack. You can't rebid two clubs because that would not be forcing. And a jump to three clubs could land you in trouble. You probably just have to gamble out three no trump and hope that partner has spades stopped.

You do have a margin of security. If partner held three hearts and nothing in spades, he might have opted to raise hearts

Footsteps in the Sand' carries a message

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read something that came to me in the mail several days ago and was moved by it. I hope you will share it with your readers. It made a difference in my life at a time when I needed the spiritual support and strength to believe. Sorry, I don't know where it came from. It was signed, "Author and Origin Unknown." Thank you so much for your consideration.

DAVENPORT, IOWA DEAR DAV: Although the author is unknown, it came from my column and was subsequently reprinted in Reader's Digest. I have had a large number of requests to run it again and do so now, with pleasure.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. In each scene he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand — one belonging to him and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints and noticed that many times along the path there was only one set of footprints in the sand. He also noticed that this happened during the lowest and saddest times in his life.

This really bothered him, so he questioned the Lord: "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way. but I noticed that during the most troublesome times of my life there was only one set of footprints. I don't understand why, when I needed you the most, you deserted me.

The Lord replied, "My precious child. I would never desert you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you saw only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Looking for a brand-new subject? Here's one: it's the way nurses treat visitors and family of the long-term

My wife has suffered from a systemic sclerosis that is progressive and incurable throughout the 41 years of our marriage. She has been confined in at least eight hospitals from three days to five months, so I know what goes on within those walls.

Maybe those nurses are dedicated to the humane treatment of the ill and injured, but they show very little compassion for relatives who come to visit. The best I ever got was a staged smile and an icy "Good morning" — on the run, to make sure there would be no further

Time after time I have been made to feel like a nuisance, something to be avoided or ignored like a piece of equipment left in the hallway

I wonder why members of the nursing profession who are supposed to be dedicated to serving the sick have so little compassion for those who are suffering anxiety and heartache because someone dear to us is ill. We don't ask much - just a little smile and a few words.

- RESENTFUL IN STOCKTON DEAR RESENTFUL: All nurses are not alike - any more than all patients or all visitors are. I find it odd, however, that you have had a 41-year run of sourpusses. I'm printing your letter to let the members of the nursing profession know how they are viewed by at least one reader.

Are you, or is someone you care about messing around with drugs - or considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot - in moderation? Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope," separates the facts from the fiction. For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (37 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hope and the beautiful ladies

By LINDA DEUTSCH

HOLLYWOOD — After 31 years in television, Bob Hope has a treasure trove of memories — and some of the most priceless involve the beautiful and funny women who contributed to his legendary success.

There was never a Hope show without a woman, and in recent months, the durable comedian has been searching through memories, videotapes and old black-and-white film to resurrect some of those good times with the girls.

The research is for another in a string of Hope specials which keep him on top of the TV business, even as he nears his 79th birthday.

This one, "Bob Hope's Women I Love — Beautiful But Funny," arrives tonight, 8-10 PST on NBC (Ch. 4) as a belated Valentine to 100 of Hope's female co-stars, including an impressive array of Oscar winners who turned their talents to slapstick comedy for Hope's sake.

One of Hope's favorites in the collection is a skit he did with Ingrid Bergman featuring the two as married actors exhibiting their inflated egos on Oscar night. There's also a hilarious black-and-white segment with Hope and a very young Barbra Streisand as hillbilly singers.

"I was so fortunate," Hope was saying one recent afternoon as he took a break from producing the show and relaxed in the living room of his sprawling home. "I started working with women so long ago. I can remember a beautiful little blonde who was in my first vaudeville act."

Zsa Gabor, Marilyn Monroe, Anita Ekberg and the late Jayne Mansfield, who traveled with him on military tours overseas. His eyes crinkle as he remembers happily some of the fun and foibles of dealing with these ladies.

Llearned that a star is a star is a star. You know what they want and desire. And when you have about 100 of them (on the show), well, thank God they're mostly on film.

'Zsa Zsa was one of the most delightful," he recalls. "I remember she joined us on a tour in the early '60s. 'She arrived and took the show hairdresser and kept her three hours! There was a four-star admiral who greeted her at the plane, and she handed him her luggage. Two days later, when she left, he was still carrying her luggage."

Sunday's special features some sentimental reunions with women from Hope's past. Gina Lollobrigida flew in from Italy to appear in person. "I haven't seen her in at least five years,"

Lucille Ball, Phyllis Diller and Martha Raye are among the funny women featured, and Hope "When you work with comediennes, you get a hell of a lot more laughs."

Perhaps the most important guest of all is a singer once known as Dolores Reade, who, as Mrs. Bob Hope, has sent her husband off on many voyages in the company of the world's great

"I used to say it's something else when you can get on a plane with 20 gorgeous gals and your wife hands you thermal underwear," quips Hope.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — Gina Lollobrigida paid a rare visit to the movie capital this week to renew old acquaintances and talk about her life as-a photographer and fashion designer.

The main reason for her trip was Bob Hope, with whom she starred in the movie "The Private Navy of Sgt. O'Farrell" and a TV Christmas show. She introduces the "foreign affairs" segment of tonight's two-hour Hope special depicting the women in his 30-year television career.

After the taping she said of the 78-year-old Hope: "He hasn't changed at all. This comes because he feels young. Bob is proof that age doesn't mean much. Young people who have lived wrongly can seem old. Someone like Bob who knows how to live can stay forever young.

Someone else who stays young is Gina Lollobrigida. The record books list her as 54, and she retains the voluptuous beauty of her sex-symbol heyday. That beauty has been missing from the screen in recent years.

'I have been reading and reading (scripts), hoping to find something that was decent and good and worth doing," she explained. "But I have found nothing. There is not so much choice in motion pictures these days.

But I have plenty to keep me busy. Starting this spring I am going into the fashion business with a line of clothes bearing my full name, Gina Lollobrigida. I have begun to paint again, which is what I started out to do - by mistake I became an actress. My training as a painter is why I am such a good photographer.

She talks about her photography with more enthusiasm than she ever displayed for her movies. Long an amateur photographer, she turned professional when Life magazine assigned her to do a photo essay on her vision of the opposite sex. Life folded before the photos appeared, but the actress was encouraged to proceed with a book, "My Italy," which was published in several countries. "Including Russia," she remarked, "but they didn't pay."

Her success led to another book about the Philippines, and she has also photographed India and China. She has a dark room in her Rome villa 'that other photographers envy' and she can talk lens openings and photographic paper with Her most recent photographic assignment was again for a revived Life: shooting the star-studded Actors Fund benefit at Radio City Music Hall. When she isn't traveling the world with her cameras, she divides her time between a Lausanne chalet and a well-guarded 27-room house she has owned in Rome for more than 30 years.

Check your resolutions

By KAY BARTLETT

Now that you're in the February doldrums, whatever happened to all those New Year's resolutions? Are you still smoking, watching too much TV, binging on chocolate candy and so on down the list of mortal foibles?

One of the reasons you failed is that you

That's the diagnosis of Dr. Herbert G. Steger, director of health psychology at Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, Ohio.

"To believe you can have a 100 percent success rate is a myth," says Dr. Steger, a clinical psychologist. "Nobody does 100 percent. You've got to prepare yourself for a relapse."

So instead of will power of steel and lofty moral ideals, he suggests including a relapse in your strategy. Planned failure, as it were. "If you were an overeater I'd have you go on a planned binge. It's a way of having a dry run. I'd ask you to maybe set aside a weekend ind overeat. "Then ask yourself how you're feeling about what action you could take during that binge and so on. Then when you do go on an actual binge, you'll have some strategy. "I want you to learn from the relapse. A behavior change is a learning process, a process of slow change. A decision to change the ehavior needs a planned strategy. A resolution isn't enough," says the 41-year-old psychologist. Steger, who himself kicked the cigarette habit, also notes that New Year's might be one of the worst times to start such a project. The first thing you must do is choose the right time. Don't do it when you're under stress, joing through a divorce, after a death in the family, during final exams . . . and probably not at New Year's." There's a post-holiday letdown, the weather the worst for most people, the bills are coming in and most of us are not at our best this time of the year, he says. Steger works with physicians who have advised patients of their need to change certain behaviors for their health and with private patients who just want to change their lives, such as someone who wants to spend more time with their children.

He also warns that he would not use the planned relapse program for a truly addictive personality. The risk would be too great that one cigarette or one drink might set them off and running again.

Steger also advises patients to make sure they set achievable goals. "Don't try to lose 20 pounds the first week. Knock off 100 calories a day for starters. Or cut back two cigarettes a tay, not 50. And remember, it took you a long time to learn to smoke or whatever. It will take you a long time to unlearn.

The former Californian is full of advice, dvice that can also be found in a number of women's magazines, a fact for which he makes no apologies.

"Psychology is very keen on giving away its technology," he says. "The problem with reading about buying a new scarf when you lose five pounds, a new skirt at 10 and so on is that each person is very different. It must be an individual program.

Thus, he advises people to get help in setting up the very tailored program that will work for them. "If you wanted to learn to drive you'd ask someone who knows how to drive to teach you. It's the same thing.

This innovative psychologist also sometimes gives people back some of their as one of the rewards to success. might tell someone it will cost them four bills now, but every week they are successful, I'll give them back $25."

Besides rewards, and planning, Steger luggests groups such as Overeaters Anonymous is well as alternative activities incompatible with the habit you wish to dump. A smoker might join a health club, for instance. Health psychology, says Steger, is a rapidly growing area of psychology that has its roots in the Veterans Administration hospitals back in the 1940s.

The good news is that the same principles pply to a lot of different behaviors.

> 'Kennebunkport? Didn t he win the Monaco Grand Prix in '73?

If you're not sure who (or what) Kennybunkport was, don't feel bad-you're not alone. Kennybunkport is one of 14 distinctively different apartment floorplans at Seawind Village in Huntington Beach. Seawind Village is a result of totally personalized professional planning. The kind of attention you deserve.

 ∞ 010000

A perfect blend of nature and livingnestled in a forest with babbling brooks and quiet ponds, cooled by natural ocean breezes. Add to that tennis courts, swimming pools, a jacuzzi and a convenient location near shopping and employment and you've got a place anyone would proudly call home. (Even Kennybunkport!) One and two bedroom, one and two bath apartments from $490.00.

15555 Huntington Village Lane Hun (714) 898-9961

FOR ERIC SEVAREID, host of Poly-Gram TV's Eric Sevareid's Chronicle

Isn't what you're doing strenuous work for a man of your years? How has the field of communications changed since you entered it? -E.S., Lorain, Ohio

 Some years ago I was on the set of a movie, Irma la Douce, and I asked director Billy Wilder if he would consider directing films for TV. He said, "No, I'm too old, too tired, too rich." But I'm not too old for this. I'm a lot less tired than I was when I retired from the CBS staff in 1977. They presented me with an 1890 typewriter - I think that is the way they really thought of me. And, as you get older, you have the courage of your convictions. As for rich, there are anchorwomen making twice as much as me. That, I suppose, is the biggest change in communications — escalating salaries.

FOR RICHARD E. HALLGREN, director, National Weather Service

Are there any long-range benefits to be gained from vol-canic eruptions? —N.C., Ogden, Utah

 Benefits from volcanic eruptions range from increasing soil fertility to creating new land. After the eruption of Mount St. Helens, some agricultural crops produced record yields in areas of eastern Washington showered by volcanic ash.

What are the pitfalls of running a home-typing business? -R.C., Everett, Wash.

• The biggest is an unsteady income. At the start, work is sporadic, making it difficult to plan ahead or stick to a budget. The second negative is the isolation. To make it bearable, a home typist should be in regular contact with others doing the same work.

FOR DIANA QUICK, star of PBS-TV's Brideshead Revisited

Did your scenes in the luxury of that fabulous Brideshead house make you dissatisfied with your own house? -W.M., Chattanooga, Tenn.

 Quite honestly, no. It made me appreciate my house all the more. No way could I live there - too cold, too much housekeeping, no staff to do it. I prefer something more modest.

An ex-beau promised her tickets to a society benefit of Broadway's Dream Girls, so she acted like a big shot and asked the owner of the supper club where she often appears to be her guest. Invitation was accepted and Eileen knew she had soared in her boss's estimation. P.S. Ex-beau didn't deliver. ... When etiquette expert Letitia Baldrige graduated from college, she predicted that by the time she turned 50 she'd be terribly rich, beautiful and retired. "None of this came true," sighs Letitia, "and I'm constantly reminded of that inane remark." She adds that she's still hoping.

PRO Representative Peter W. Rodino Jr. (D.-N.J.) chairman, Judiciary Committee

Yes. I have introduced legislation to help states compensate crime victims. We protect the rights of the accused and provide humane care for criminals and services for exoffenders. We could do no less in a civilized society. But we also have the duty to show compassion for victims of crime - people our society has failed to protect. Such compensation will work to reduce a victim's alienation from society and encourage cooperation with law enforcement.

CON Representative F. James Sensenbrenner II, (R.-Wisc.), member, Judiciary Committee

I oppose any Federal programs that encourage or fund state victimcompensation programs. Whether or not a state wants to provide for victim-compensation programs is a matter of its own spending priorities. Too many times the Federal carrot has been used to get states involved in programs in which they would not have otherwise participated. The primary emphasis in this critical area of concern should be on restitution by the wrongdoer to the victim.

Mom Janice gives Andy some tender loving care: He was so shy he couldn't raise his hand in grammar school.

Taxi's Andy Kaufman: He's a Gas!

Is Andy Kaufman, a.k.a. "Latka Gravas," insanely funny or just plain bonkers? As the author learned, it's hard to tell where the act ends and Andy begins.

By Andrea Darvi

ate, as usual. "Maybe this time he got lost in outer space," growls actor Jeff Conaway. "No, no," explains a sarcastic Tony Danza, destroying his cigarette in an ashtray. "He's flying over Las Vegas, by himself — with no airplane!" Even the easygoing Judd Hirsch, who plays "Alex" on Taxi, the smash ABC sitcom, paces the set and complains. Then director Jim Burrows breaks in to announce that Andy Kaufman, the show's famed "Latka Gravas," will require another hour before arriving for rehearsal.

This news sends Hirsch up the wall. "It's one thing to be late," he snaps. "It's something else to be in another town."

Suddenly director Burrows orders the crew not to wait any longer. "Let's do Scene A without him," he yells. But a performance by Andy Kaufman is well worth waiting for — as everybody on the set of Stage 23 at Hollywood's Paramount Studios fully understands. The 12-time Emmywinning Taxi would simply not be the hit that it is without him. And when he does finally appear on the set — an hour and a half later — he is immediately brilliant. His delivery is captivating, his genius obvious. The rehearsal hums with electricity.

The performance that afternoon was vintage Kaufman — as he depicted the now-famous Latka (a character Taxi writers developed from his "Foreign Man" nightclub routine). But Kaufman's talent is so highly developed that he now has more roles in his repertoire than he has parts. Lacking a show-biz outlet for all of them, he makes room for many others in his private, off-screen life. If you are a friend or publicity agent or producer or reporter calling on him, you can never be sure which Andy Kaufman will suit up for the occasion. Will he be the tough, obnoxious, cigar-smoking foreign tycoon? Tony Clifton, the loud-mouthed, brassy Las Vegas lounge singer with a compulsion to insult people? The Mafiabacked entertainer who sets his hit men on his critics? The ultrasexist, ultrasleazy wrestling champion?

Kaufman is always walking on the edge in his comedy, his life - skipping back and forth across the fine line between reality and illusion. In his act, he's read The Great Gatsby and sung "A Hundred Bottles of Beer on the Wall" (all of it) before confused fans. After a show at New York's Carnegie Hall, he bused members of the audience to a school cafeteria for cookies and milk. Hosting ABC's live latenight comedy show, Fridays, last year, Kaufman argued loudly with fellow cast members and ended up in a fistfight with co-producer Jack Burns all in front of the rolling cameras. Was it ad - libbed or not? Nobody knows.

"How brilliant a characterization can he do?" observes veteran comic Carl Reiner of Kaufman. "It's so full and clean nobody can see past the edges, where the character begins and he ends."

And so, when I drove to his house tucked away in the Hollywood hills, I was reasonably apprehensive: I wasn't certain which one of these Andy Kaufmans I would get to interview. As it turned out, I would get to meet almost all of them.

Laurel Canyon, one of the richest sections of one of the richest cities in the world, is inhabited by the creme de la creme of the entertainment world. But Kaufman's home is modest by Hollywood's standards and, when I ring his doorbell, I am immediately met by a casually dressed, anxious - you might even say insecure - young entertainer in his early 30's.

There is an edge of hostility in his manner, but I see that as a reflection of the insecurity. As we walk into the living room, the telephone rings and he picks it up. Speaking into the receiver in hushed, tough-guy tones, Kaufman barks, as if playing out a scene from The Godfather: "Just rough 'em up a little, crack a few ribs, leave a few scars on their faces." Then he hangs up, turns to me and smiles. He quickly explains it was all a joke.

Gaining confidence, Kaufman next transforms himself from the Mafia Entertainer into the Professional Wrestler, challenging me to a match. Kaufman, it seems, has indeed challenged women wrestlers - professional and otherwise - in arenas and nightclubs from Los Angeles to come over to wrestle," he says nervousiv. We are both nervous.

But I am not going to flinch. His obnoxious comments about women, even if intended as a joke, have gotten my goat. I stand ready to go the full 15 rounds. Suddenly - like a chameleon changing his protective coloring to suit the situation - Kaufman changes his tune. Sensing I am serious, he becomes defensive. He explains apologetically that he does not always have control over himself. "Once I became this foreign tycoon with the cigar in Atlantic City for a whole month," he insists, "I couldn't stop it. . . . Even in my sleep." The woman he was with then, he says, literally fell in love with someone he wasn't. "And I can't always bring these characters back.

I have a chance to look around while he quietly sips a cup of instant coffee and stares through the sliding glass door looking out on the pool. He swims a mile by himself every day.

Kaufman's boyhood bedroom on Long Island is nothing if not, er, eclectic.

Memphis. He claims undefeated status and a title all his own: "The Worldwide Inter-Gender Wrestling Champion," as he puts it. And he will continue to wrestle only women. "Women don't have it, as far as wrestling goes," he says to me, his eyes bulging combatively. "They have Wheatina above the eyebrows, oatmeal in the brains. They are superior with regard to peeling potatoes and taking care of babies, but not in wrestl-

Well, I'm not much at peeling potatoes, but I figure now I've got my whole sex to defend. And so - at 5 feet even and weighing in at just over 90 pounds — I accept his challenge.

I am escorted into what Kaufman describes as his "Sacred Rubber Room." The floor is covered with wall-to-wall rubber mats. "This is where I entertain people when they There are no pictures on the walls, no telltale signs of the man behind the star, not even a poster of his idol Elvis Presley. He seems a stranger in his own home.

And he seems a stranger to himself - a man of a thousand faces who may not be aware of who he'll be next. The eldest child of an affluent Great Neck, N.Y., costume-jewelry executive and his wife, Kaufman took his first struggling comic steps at such launching pads as Manhattan's Catch a Rising Star and The Improvisation. From there he made it onto Saturday Night Live, where he became practically an overnight sensation. Now he is a star - and an accomplished professional performer.

Stardom has been somewhat thera-peutic, he admits. "Television has made life much easier for me now that people recognize me," he says, breaking character only once in the several hours we spend together.

"The reason is, I'm so shy. . . I went to psychiatrists when I was 4 years old. . . I was so shy, I couldn't even raise my hand and say 'Here' in elementary school."

Kaufman is a loner everywhere he goes. During the months Taxi is not in production, he likes to hitchhike. He says it helps him "to keep from losing sight of humanity. . . I might put up a sign that says, 'I am Andy Kaufman of Taxi." he concedes, "but only if I'm caught in the same spot for two hours." And one night a week, time permitting, he puts in a full shift as a busboy at Jerry's Famous Deli, in the San Fernando Valley area of Los Angeles. "Being a busboy was my first job," he says. "I want to stay in touch with my roots."

Also a great believer in transcendental meditation, he maintains a verbal agreement with the Taxi producers, allowing him a special twohour break on Fridays, between rehearsal and filming, in order to meditate.

ven his publicists find this showbiz phenomenon - only 32 hard to explain. "When I was about to draw up Andy's biography," one of them recalled, "I explained that all actors lie about their

"Then I'm 45," he told her.

Of course, most celebrities fudge their years down, not up; but that's Kaufman for you. Actually, by the time he is 45, he hopes to have added considerably to his already substantial accomplishments. He'd like to have knocked off at least one more national tour ("only 99 cents a ticket," he proposes to his manager, who suddenly looks very worried). He'd love to produce The Tony Clifton Story - not sure yet whether the film would be a comedy or a tragedy. (Heartbeeps, which starred Kaufman and Bernadette Peters as lovesick robots, was supposed to be a comedy but turned out to be a box-office tragedy.) A TV kiddle show - and an hour-long TV variety show - are also in his dreams. In the meantime, though, he hopes the Taxi meter ticks on forever as the ever-restless Kaufman begins the search for another house and crash pad for himself, his C.P.A. brother Michael and periodic lady friends.

Suddenly Kaufman emerges from another room with a portable electric organ. He presses the buttons furiously and shouts out tunes to the alternating sambas, rhumbas and waltzes the wretched instrument regrettably produces. We are suddenly transported to an ice-skating rink in Buffalo, where Kaufman has landed vet another part-time job.

I realize, then, that I will never pin Andy Kaufman .down. We have wrestled after all, and he has won no holds barred. Then, as if convinced that the match is over, he looks deep into my eyes and says, with that inimitable, wide-eyed, Latka-esque charm, "Tenk you verrry much."

Tenk you very much, Andy Kaufman. You are very entertaining - whoever you are.

New Immunizations: A Shot in the Arm Against Disease

"Immunization has saved more lives than any other medical development."

By Mike Oppenheim, M.D.

ost of us are familiar with such widely discussed medical miracles as cardiac pacemakers (cost: $2,000). coronary-bypass surgery ($15,000) and total body CAT scan X-rays ($800,000). But we don't usually hear much discussion of immunizations, which are perhaps the greatest miracles of all and cost a patient only a few dollars. The lowly immunization. has saved more lives, prevented more illness and saved more money than any other medical development in the history of the human race. Millions of Americans who haven't had polio, tetanus, diphtheria or measles are indebted to immunizations, often without realizing it.

Generally we associate the word "immunization" with the old standbys (tetanus, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles) we suffered through as children. In fact, important new vaccines are being studied and tested all the time and several have just been released.

Hepatitis

One of the most exciting new vaccines, which was approved by the Food and Drug Administration (F.D.A.) last year and will be available in several months, protects against hepatitis B, the most serious known form of viral hepatitis. Hepatitis B is usually spread by bodily fluids, including blood and saliva. Formerly called "serum hepatitis," it used to be associated primarily with drug addicts who shared needles, but it is actually much more widespread.

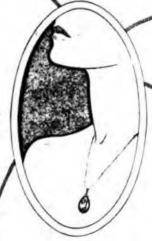

Hepatitis B is the worst type of hepatitis because it is the one most likely to result in serious illness or death. There are 200,000 to 300,000 cases in the U.S. every year. It causes only about 250 deaths annually, but several thousand victims are left with a very unpleasant problem. They recover, but they are a constant threat to others because they can still spread the disease. In addition, a large number of carriers develop chronic liver disease leading to almost 4,000 deaths a year from cirrhosis (an infection which destroys liver cells).

Immunization against hepatitis B requires three doses over six months and protects for at least five years.

Hepatitis B is easily spread by sexual intercourse, and the more sex partners one has, the greater one's chances of catching it. Homosexuals have the highest risk of all. Experts urge those with numerous sex partners to get the vaccine. Others with a high risk include health-care workers and laboratory workers.

Pneumonia

Scientists were on the verge of producing a vaccine against pneumococcal pneumonia, the most common and severe bacterial lung infection, 40 years ago. Then penicillin was discovered, and everyone thought the problem was solved. The pneumococcal germ could be killed by a small amount of penicillin.

But, curable or not, pneumococcal pneumonia has remained a dangerous disease. Penicillin does not create immunity, it only works on those who have the disease, and often pneumonia can make people seriously ill and even kill them if they aren't treated soon. There are 500,000 cases every year, and it's still among the 10 leading causes of death in the U.S. Because of this, researchers resumed their work, and a vaccine was approved in 1977. Only one injection is required in a lifetime.

Still, young, healthy people should continue to rely on penicillin because the vaccine is rare and experts reserve it for groups with an increased risk of getting the disease and less ability to fight it off. These include patients with heart failure, emphysema, chronic kidney disease, diabetes, alcoholic cirrhosis and sickle cell anemia. Any person who's had his or her spleen removed should be immunized (research has shown that the spleen fights pneumococcal pneumonia). Some (but not all) doctors advise it for everyone over age 50.

Chicken Pox and Shingles

Chicken pox is a mild illness except in children with chronic diseases and those receiving cortisone for skin disease, cancer or arthritis (cortisone lowers the body's resistance to infection). In these victims it's severe and often fatal. Also, the chicken pox virus causes shingles, a common and very painful adult skin disease. A vaccine has been successfully tested in Japan but hasn't attracted much interest in the U.S. According to Dr. Albert Sabin, professor of biometrics at the Medical University of South Carolina who developed the oral polio vaccine, "The effort to confirm the excellent results reported by the Japanese has been too small and too slow when one considers how much misery could be prevented by the eradication of shingles."

Smallpox

Although the smallpox vaccine is not new (it was the first vaccine, invented in 1796) experts recently announced a new smallpox development: The disease has been wiped out. The virus exists only in test tubes in the refrigerators of a few public health laboratories around the world.

Eradication was possible for two reasons: Animals are not carriers of smallpox, and humans do not become chronic carriers. Once the cycle of human-to-human transmission is broken, the virus has no place to go. A massive, worldwide vaccination program carried out over the past 15 years has accomplished this. No case has been reported since August, 1978.

Today, no one really needs a smallpox vaccination except people in laboratories where the virus is stored. A few countries still (unnecessarily) require it of travelers.

Nothing illustrates the miracle of immunization better than the disappearance of smallpox. Most infectious diseases cannot be wiped out in this way, but when use of a vaccine is widespread they are suppressed to the point of insignificance. If too many people are not immunized, however, an outbreak can occur — such as the diphtheria epidemic that swept through San Antonio a few years ago.

Other Good News

A new, safer and much less painful rables vaccine has recently been approved. Vaccines for some types of meningococcal meningitis are already in use, and a vaccine for prevention of another type is still in the research stage. Work is far advanced on prevention of cytomegalovirus disease, a mild viral infection which (like German measles or rubella) could cause birth defects if it attacks pregnant women. Respiratory syncytial virus is a major cause of severe bronchiolitis and pneumonia in babies under 6 months of age. Research into a live virus vaccine for respiratory syncytial has been under way for many years. Scientists are also working on immunizations against recurrent herpes infections, gonorrhea, syphilis and other forms of hepatitis.

So exciting developments in immunization are not a thing of the past. More are on the way.

FAMILY WEEKLY, February 28, 1982

A Strangelovean site of radwaste in Nevada: "There is no amount of radiation so small that it cannot provide harmful effects."

Bu Fred C. Shooiro

question posed by my highschool chemistry teacher: "Suppose I gave you all the money and all the facilities it would take to produce an acid so powerful that it would dissolve any known substance - what would be your first step in going about it?"

His answer (after shrugging off a number of our responses): "The first thing you have to determine in any experiment is, when you get whatever it is you're going after, what are you going to keep it in?"

Five years before I was taught that much about basic scientific principles, physicist Enrico Fermi and his colleagues had initiated the first controlled atomic chain reaction at the University of Chicago - and had thereby created the first reactor-made nuclear wastes. That experiment, leading to the development of the atomic bomb, was carried out under the priorities of wartime necessity. Today, however, 39 years later, the United States and an increasing number of other nations continue to produce nuclear weapons, generate nuclear power and apply nuclear technology to meet medical and industrial needs, all without yet having determined how to dispose of most of their dangerously radioactive wastes.

In this country, as then Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats pointed out to Congress in 1979, there has "never been a clearly defined, technically feasible, long-term [nuclear] waste management plan." To formulate such a plan, President Carter appointed in 1980 an 18-member commission of eight governors, six state, local and American Indian tribal officials and the heads of four Federal agencies.

A year and a half later, however, when this panel was ready to present its recommendations, its chairman, South Carolina Governor Richard Riley, a Democrat, was unable to secure an appointment with President Reagan. The new Administration subsequently announced increases in nuclear-weapons production and nuclear-energy programs.

In connection with the latter, the President promised "to proceed swiftly" toward a "deployment of means" to contain and dispose of radwaste a term which Federal energy officials have coined to describe nuclear effluents which will remain lethally radioactive for thousands of years. In the meantime, the wastes already accumulated are leaking from cracked underground storage tanks at Federal nuclear sites, blowing from the surfaces of towering uranium mill tailings piles in the West, seeping from leaky burial grounds scattered around the country and piling up in overcrowded spent-fuel pools at reactor sites

While radiation from these leaking wastes can be measured in the surrounding environment, there is no way of determining precisely what harm it may have already caused and is likely to cause in the future. "There is no amount of radiation so small that it cannot provide harmful effects," wrote Nobel Laureate Hermann J. Muller who linked genetic mutations to radiation. Radiationinduced cancers can have latency periods of 15 years or longer, and when they are eventually diagnosed they are impossible to attribute to a specific cause.

In the United States, radwastes are classified in six forms:

Uranium mill tailings: This is by far the most abundant form of radwaste. The milling process is unable to remove more than 90 percent of the uranium in the ore, and the sand-like particles, known as "tailings," that remain are stored in piles around 19 active uranium mills and 25 inactive ones. They continually exude radon. a radioactive gas. The present volume would be about enough to lay a footdeep pavement over three four-lane highways between New York and Los Angeles.

Most, but not all, of these piles are in the West, where some resemble football stadiums plunked down in the desert and where they are subject to high winds. Sheldon Novick, now a counsel for the Environmental Protection Agency, calculated in 1969 that three million tons of tailings had already been blown into the Colorado River watershed.

High-level waste: Spent nuclear fuel, removed from reactors, can be reprocessed to reclaim the unfissioned uranium, but the acid effluents from this chemical separation are both thermally and radioactively "hot." By 1980, 10.2 million cubic feet of these wastes had been poured into massive steel tanks buried underground at four American sites. The largest of these, in both size and quantity of waste stored, is Hanford, a Federal nuclear reservation occupying 568 square miles in the southeastern corner of Washington state. So far, leaks totaling more than 450,000 gallons have been confirmed in 26 of 162 Hanford waste tanks - and the integrity of 38 others is considered "questionable." Nothing has yet been done to remove this high-level material from Hanford's desert plain, and the General Accounting Office reported to Congress in 1974 that five to 10 square miles of the reservation's waste area are "so grossly contaminated" that they probably never can be cleaned up.

Spent fuel from nuclear reactors: Most spent-fuel assemblies - which hold the tubular uranium-filled rods - are now piling up under at least 14 feet of water at "swimming pools" at the sites of 73 licensed power reactors. By the end of 1980, there were over 28,000 stored assemblies, comprising about 8,000 tons of uranium. Because spent fuel is not being reprocessed at this time (and because there are now no legal means of disposing of these assemblies), the original storage capacities of most of these pools have long since been exhausted. So far, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has acted favorably upon 59 applications from reactor operators either to expand their pools or to "rerack" the assemblies closer together within them. Even so, 28 of the commercial reactors are expected to run out of pool capacity by 1990.

Transuranic waste: This classification of radwaste was created in 1970 when the Atomic Energy Commission ordered that all materials containing as much as 10 billionths of a curie (a unit of radioactive waste) per gram of any of the man-made elements heavler than uranium - neptunium, plutonium, americium and so on be separately stored. It is estimated that 24 million cubic feet of material now considered transuranic waste had been buried at eight Governmental and five commercial sites before 1970, and in the past 10 years 1.9 million cubic feet of this material has been placed in retrievable storage. These figures do not include the mile doesn't care to talk about it anymore. It's as simple as that. He only hopes those days are behind him. More recent actions - both on and off the basketball court - have now placed them there Bernard King, forward for the Golden State Warriors, would like to believe.

At age 25, he's conquered his demons and put his past behind. Though he faces the best and swiftest every night, his biggest battle has been with himself.

"That old reputation thing is history," the 25-year-old says, "I want to talk about the future."

But nothing, not 45-point nights nor National Basketball Association (N.B.A.) championship rings, can erase his past. He has battled with alcoholism, been arrested a half-dozen times, mostly on minor charges. In the winter of 1980, he was charged with the sexual abuse of a Utah woman. Though the charges were later reduced, the incident meant suspension by the Utah Jazz for almost the entire 1979-80 season.

"I'm an alcoholic," King admits. "That's my problem. It will always be my problem.

"But I think fear of failure finally made me recognize the problem. I knew if I didn't stop drinking there would be no career, no life. After that, what's left?"

After the Jazz decided they had no use for a troubled star, it seemed little was left. Even his uncanny knack for putting a leather ball through a metal hoop couldn't save him: Some sports writers claimed King would never play basketball again. In an effort to turn his life around, he traveled to St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica where he received the treatment that helped him to conquer his drinking problem.

as breaking away from a defender, but slowly, and with the help of his girlfriend, Collette Caeser (now his wife), he began to gain control of his life. And for the first time he learned who he was.

Until then, King had thought of himself only as a ballplayer. It had been that way since he emerged as a star at Fort Hamilton High in Brooklyn, N.Y. He became a legend in the Brooklyn ghettos.

"It became a dream for me to play professional basketball. And it became a goal once I got into my sophomore year in college, although I never really believed I was good enough to play pro ball," explains King.

King's self-image solidified at the University of Tennessee, where he became an all-American in 1976, and remained with him when he left without a degree after three years to join the New Jersey Nets in 1977.

Even after he took the N.B.A. by storm in his rookie year, averaging 24.2 points and 9.1 rebounds for an ailing team, his intensity didn't subside. He saw himself only in terms of basketball. But in 1980, after two years with the Nets and a short stint with the Utah Jazz, his career was jeopardized and he suddenly felt lost.

At that time, King finally learned he was much more than a basketball player. He was a man, a young and confused one perhaps, but a man all the same.

After King left St. John's Hospital in spring 1980, he took his basketball and started working at his game. He practiced with the fervor of his earliest days as a player.

He joined the Los Angeles Summer Pro League, usually dominated by rookies and unknowns hoping to be discovered. Although he was rusty, having played only 19 games for Utah before his troubles began, he tore the league apart. Named its M.V.P., he took a step back toward the N.B.A.

Once the summer league ended, King traveled to Hall of Fame coach Pete Newell's basketball camp. At first Newell was reluctant to admit King, but by the time the camp closed, Newell recommended that the Golden State Warriors find some way to acquire King before the 1980-81 season.

With the Jazz looking for a place to unload King, the trade was made the day before the training camp opened in September. Neither King nor the Warriors have lived to regret it.

King became the N.B.A.'s Comeback Player of the Year, averaging 21.9 points (11th best in the league), 6.8 rebounds and 36 minutes a game. His personal resurgence was, in large measure, responsible for Golden State's return to respectability after having gone an embarrassing 24-58 (their worst performance in 15 years) a year earlier.

He has followed that with an even better start this season, averaging roughly 23 points while shooting at a record 61-percent pace and playing his game at the usual frenetic pace. And for the first time in his career, he was chosen to play in the N.B.A.'s all-Star game, held last month.

"How is Bernard playing?" 76er star Julius Erving said after a recent game in which King poured in 35 points to Dr. J's 34. "Well, the only person I can think of that he's playing like . . . I don't know how to say this, but the only person I can think of is me.

"His approach reminds me of me now, back some years ago, when every night was a challenge, something to prove. He's having an all-Star year. It's a pleasure to watch him."

"Playing releases a side of me I can't express. It's always been like poetry to me."

King has gone about proving himself at everyone's expense, including his younger brother Albert's. Albert, who coincidentally began his rookie season this year with the Nets, suffered through a long night early in the season when the Warriors and Nets clashed. Brother Bernard poured in the points while Albert could do little but admire the performance.

"I wasn't looking forward to that game. I'm just happy to see my brother in the league. But once I get on the court, a player is not a friend of mine," says Bernard.

Coach Al Attles has been a friend to King. Legendary around the N.B.A. for his tolerance and patience, he was perhaps the perfect coach for King during the most difficult of times: that first season back.

"I've never been one to go on past reputations," Attles says. "I deal with a guy on how he treats me. That's it. Bernard had a choice to make and we had nothing to do with it.

"I don't know what he was like before he came here, but I've never seen all those horror stories. We thought he was an excellent player, but he has performed beyond our expectations."

He has not, however, performed beyond his own expectations.

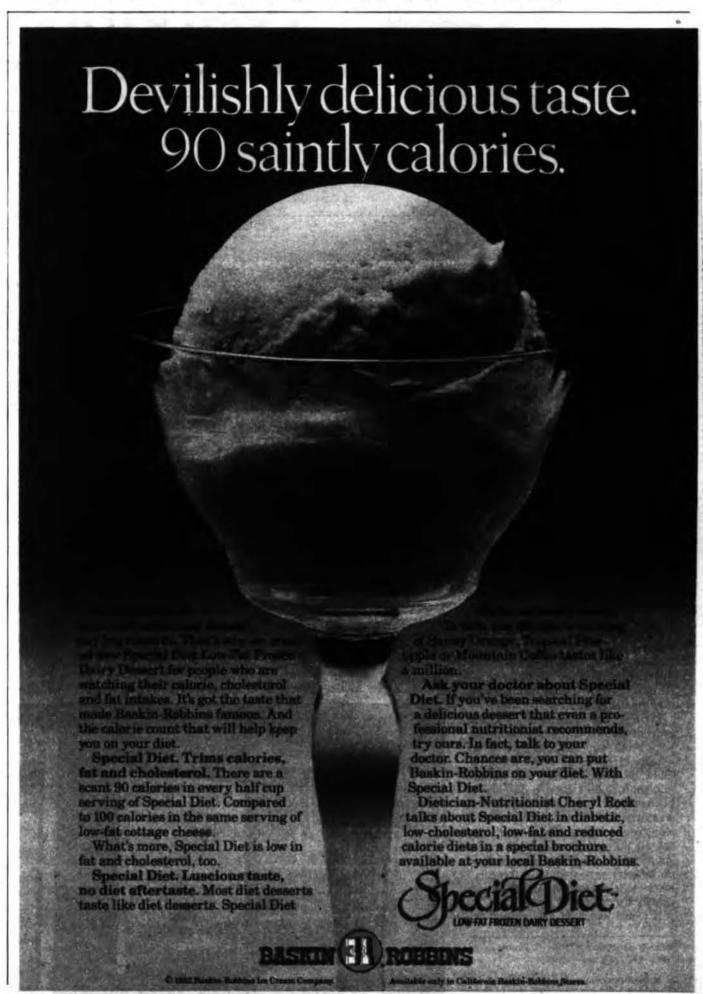

"I knew if I got another chance I'd make the most of it," King says. "I never lost that confidence in myself, although some days were very tough.

"Doing it [playing professionally] has always been my way of expressing myself. It gives me an outlet to release a side of me I can't express. It's always been somewhat like poetry to me.

"I've played against guys more talented than I, but you have to fit with the team. You have to be able to work with everyone ... and with yourself. Some guys are too individualistic for that. There are so many kids out there and so few openings. I had the right coaching and I played with the right players. I had the talent, but I know I was lucky."

He was also courageous enough to do it twice . . . and to find himself along the way.

Thar' She Blows

Some Tips on Whale Watching

Bu Michelle Bekeu

hether you decide to brave the water in a small fishing vessel or in a Catalina Liner. whale watching is one of the West Coast's most unique - and exciting - experiences. The California grey whales migrate 10,000 miles from the Arctic to Baja and back between December and April, passing along the Los Angeles coastline on their journey.

Just what you'll see depends on the type of boat, where the cruise heads, and the skipper's luck in locating whales that day. Most often, whales are sighted by their spouts, the vapor column released when the mammals surface after holding their breath for five minutes or more. At other times. whales may "spyhop" by popping their heads straight up.

Whales may sometimes disappear only to surface a few feet from the ship. And, you may see five or six whales at once. To prevent harassment of whales (which can disturb migration), boats keep a distance of 50 feet from the mammals. In good weather, the boats often just drift alongside a whale. Passengers may see the hump of the whale's back, its entire tail as the whale dives deeper underwater or sometimes a "breach. when whales actually shoot almost straight up out of the ocean.

Is whale watching dangerous? According to the American Cetacean Society, a national whale-watching organization, and companies sponsoring whale-watch cruises, the answer is an emphatic "no." The antiharrassment guidelines guarantee safety, and even when whales do come close by, their finely tuned sonar navigation system prevents collisions with the coastline or passing ships. Cruise operators also enforce guidelines on board, such as limiting the number of passengers.

As for what you'll learn, Cetacean Society members or trained instructors on board generally show how to locate whales through their spout or "footprints," an oil-slicklike image left on the surface when a whale dives beneath. Guides also fill passengers in on facts about the whales' life styles, from mating and nursing habits (a calf drinks 50 gallons of milk daily) to migration patterns.

The type of whale-watch cruise you choose depends on where you'd like to leave from and the kind of experience you prefer. Smaller boats holding 20 to 120 people, for example, give the sense of being right next to whales. But larger boats with a capacity for 500 or more passengers sometimes offer a better view, have larger decks and may be reassuring for anyone faint-hearted. Family-oriented cruises usually offer the best deal for the cost: luxury cruises convert whale watching to a two- to three-hour floating party complete with champagne and waiters. The best advice: Ask about amenities.

There are other tips to keep in mind. Whale watching can get cold or wet, so most companies recommend bringing layers of clothing that you can peel off in good weather. Bring along binoculars and cameras, and seasickness medication if you're prone to getting ill on board. Operators generally suggest eating a good breakfast that morning. In most cases, lunch isn't provided, but cruise times generally allow for either an early or late lunch on shore before or after the whale watch. Whale watches are popular, and although some operators can book as late as one day ahead, it's a good idea to make reservations as soon as possible, usually no less than a week in advance. Here's a listing of cruises to choose from:

Marina del Rey. Offered by Fun Fleet, Fisherman's Village, 13755 Fiji Way, Marina del Rey, 90291. For information: (213) 823-6481.

The Fun Fleet has a single whalewatch boat, the 60-foot Marlin Queen luxury yacht. Three-hour cruises leave once daily on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and two times daily on weekends through April. (Call for departure times.) Capacity is 28 people at $18 each. Amenities include complimentary coffee, tea, lemonade and soft drinks, and passengers can bring their own picnic lunch. Two deckhands are graduates of a Cetacean Society training course. Cruises generally go south toward the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Newport Beach. Offered by the Catalina Passenger Service, Balboa Pavilion, 40 Main Street, Balboa, 92661. For information: (714) 673-5345.

Catalina Passenger service offers two whale-watch boats: the 300-passenger Catalina Holiday and the 120-passenger Western Pride. Cruises last two to three hours, and are held through March 21. These family-oriented cruises are $8 for adults and $5 for children on weekends, $7 for adults and $5 for children on weekdays. Catalina Passenger Service guarantees you will see a whale. If not, you'll receive a "whale check" good for free passage on another whale-watch cruise or partial payment of the $18 Newport-to-Catalina-Island fare during nonwhalewatching months. American Cetacean Society members are on board to narrate all cruises. Both ships have snack bars.

San Pedro. (Los Angeles Harbor.) Offered by Ports of Call (213) 547-9916 and 22nd Street Landing (213) 832-8304. Phone reservations preferred.

Ports of Call, a recreated fishing village, has three boats: the Sport King, Fury 2 and Mattwalsh, each with a capacity for 80 to 100 passengers. The season began on Dec. 26 and lasts indefinitely. There are six trips daily at a cost of $8 for adults and $5 for children. Nearby 22nd Street Landing offers two cruises on weekdays at $5 for adults and $4.25 for children and three on weekends at 9 A.M., 12 P.M. and 3 P.M., priced at $7 for adults and $5 for kids. Special group rates available.

Sitting on the dock of Fisherman's Village, Marina del Rev. Cruises run to May.

Catalina Cruises. Also in the Los Angeles harbor, they use the Catalina liners for whale watching. For information, call (213) 775-6111. The Monarch and King both hold 525 passengers and sail through March 13 at 9 A.M. and 12:30 P.M. weekends, and 10 A.M. on weekdays. Fare is $7.75 per person for adults and $5.25 for children ages 2 to 11. Group rates are available.

Long Beach. Offered by Queen's Wharf. Phone reservations preferred: (213) 432-8993.

Lieut. Gov. Mike Curb On the Record

First he was in show-biz. Then he switched to politics. Now this conservative Republican aspires to the Governor's seat and is running his campaign on economic issues. Sound familiar?

By Peer Oppenheimer

ast summer, he considered himself a shoo-in for the Governor's seat. The political climate seemed suited to the elevation of Lieut. Gov. Mike Curb to the state's highest office. It was assumed that Curb's Democratic opponent would be Gov. Jerry Brown, then plagued by the medfly crisis and trailing in the polls. Curb had been endorsed by Reagan's Kitchen Cabinet, and Curb's campaign was bolstered with $2.5 million in funds.

A conservative Republican, Curb counted heavily on his qualifications attracting the vote, too: He'd proven his business savvy by building the biggest country-western record company in the United States; he'd won quick political success with his first (and only) election in 1978. And he had maneuvered some "30 to 40 appointments" to various government posts during the 204 days Brown was out of the state and Curb acted as Governor. No small feat, considering the position of Lieutenant Governor is often devoid of power.

Then came the first in a series of political setbacks. "Brown decided not to go for a third term, but to run for the Senate against Hayakawa," explains the 37-year-old Curb. "The situation was not as simple anymore."

When Attorney General George Deukmejian, a 20-year-veteran of California politics, unexpectedly challenged Curb in the G.O.P. primary, the situation grew more complex.

"People asked him why," Curb says, "since I seemed to have the nomination sewed up. His answer: 'Mike Curb still has a lingering negative...'" Curb smiles ruefully. "The only negative factor I have among Republicans is the fact a record company I worked for was investigated by Deukmeijan."

Curb has been publicly cleared of suspicions concerning his business proceedings during the time he headed up M.G.M. records between 1971 and 1973. Alleged to have been responsible for illicit sales of records to organized-crime figures, Curb was also suspected of having received cash payments for the sales. Deukmejian continues to allude to the investigation, according to Curb, in an effort to keep it in the public's eye.

Deukmejian contends that the investigation was not politically motivated. "That is absolutely not so. There is no basis for it," he replies. Furthermore, Deukmejian's press secretary, Tony Cimarusti, asserts that Curb is the one who continues to mention the investigation. "As far as we're concerned, the investigation was closed in the fall of 1979," says Cimarusti.

Perhaps a more nettlesome problem than the investigation is Curb's troubles with the press. The nowhistoric Linda Breakstone incident tainted Curb's media image and spawned criticism by both journalists and politicians. While writing an article investigating Curb's list of endorsers, Breakstone, a reporter for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, was told by Curb that he was going "to get her," says Breakstone.

"In this business, you just don't get personal — make personal remarks — to reporters. That event made a most powerful impact on the public," says Tom Hayden, Democratic activist and chairperson of the Campaign for Economic Democracy.

Curb contends that Breakstone's article was inaccurate, and that his remark was jumped on by the press because of its timing.

"The story containing my remark ran the Friday before the semiannual Republican state convention," says Curb. "There wasn't much excitement at the convention, so every question was, 'Why did you say this to that reporter?' It's unfortunate that it came at a time when there wasn't much else to report."

To improve his relations with the media, Curb has requested that Lyn Nofziger, former assistant to President Reagan for political affairs, advise him.

"When I had my record company, I hired the best media experts to advise me, and that's what I should have done when I first took public office and intend to do now," he adds.

Despite a drop in the polls, Curb stresses that these events haven't diminished his chances for the governorship. "The bottom line is that now we're about even," he says of his race with Deukmejian. The campaign, he feels, is still in its early stages. In retrospect, he contends he was never really that far ahead.

And factors others perceive as drawbacks — Curb's lack of political experience, for example — Curb touts as assets.

"I've been 16 years in business, and have had good experience and background as Lieutenant Governor," Curb argues. "I don't find it a problem that I've only three years in politics.

"I think it's an advantage to come from the outside. After all, Reagan came from the outside."

Curb also aligns himself with Reagan's budget tactics. He classifies himself as part of the new-wave Republicans, a member of the Reagan supply-side economic group. He believes his stance on economic issues can provide the edge to win the primary election.

nlike Deukmejian, says Curb, he has strongly supported Proposition 13 and still favors the bill.

"There are areas of Proposition 13 that could be refined. There's an inequity between what the new buyer and the pre-1979 buyer pays with respect to their property taxes.

"Still, the new buyer is in a better position with the 1-percent lid than he would have been without Proposition 13, so I do not favor a change at this time. I think there was a hidden mandate in Proposition 13 for government to cut, squeeze and trim its expenditures. That part has not been adhered to by Brown and the Legislature. There's still fat in everything," Curb notes.

Acknowledging that his relationship with Brown has not been a close one (for the first time since 1894, Governor and Lieutenant Governor hall from opposing parties), Curb says he prefers to refer to it as a "working relationship." He points to his successes as Lieutenant Governor as proof of this. Turning the State Economic Development Commission, which he chairs, into a vital board dealing with California's economy, he considers his biggest accomplishment.

The office of Lieutenant Governor has not been without its disappointments, though. "The Lieutenant Governor can find himself without any responsibilities many days," Curb says.

Curb's personal life has been disrupted by the job, too. He spends half of his time in Sacramento in a rented home and half in Los Angeles where he, his 32-year-old wife, Linda (daughter of KABC-TV station anchorman Jerry Dunphy), and their daughters Megan Carole, 4, and Courtney, born last October, live in fashionable Trousdale Estates.

To insure against any conflict of interest while Curb's in office, he's also placed his record company — which chalked up nearly 50 gold records — in blind trust with the Bank of America. Curb's interest in music stems from his college days at Valley State — now Northridge State University — where he had a small band called the Mike Curb Congregation. Preferring the business end of the industry, he eventually began his own record company, Mike Curb Productions.

"I think it's an advantage to come from the outside," says Curb. "After all, Reagan came from the outside."

Why did Curb leave the song business?

"It is a sacrifice to be in government, but it's also very rewarding," he says. "I've learned so much about this great state, and I really do enjoy working with people."

Curb admits to no political ambitions beyond the Governor's office. "The people of California are not going to elect a Governor who is interested in doing other things besides running the state. The issue is going to be the economy, and it's going to take someone with common-sense and businesslike experience to cope with it." Then he adds with a smile, "Of course, If I don't make it, there's always the record business..."

Curb on the Issues

On the Peripheral Canal: "In the past I've been for the canal, but now it's tied to a bill that not only builds the $600-million canal but about $4 billion in additional projects. In the process, certain segments of water development have been removed, the bond market has drastically changed, and I've come to the conclusion that the state simply can't finance the project at this time."

Curb's solution to southern California's water shortage: "In the Imperial and Coachella Valleys we lose about 900,000 acre-feet of water a year due to conveyance problems and improper lining. We should do something there. We can also better utilize the Chino Basin because, even though we've lost 600,000 acre-feet of our Colorado River supply to Arizona, that development is not taking place as fast as they thought, so we could end up with the excess water for perhaps 20 years."

On gun control: Though opposed to gun control, he insists, "I feel we should have tough restrictions and not allow the mentally insane or ex-felons to purchase guns."

On the guest-worker program: "I support the concept as a means of identifying individuals who are in this country so they're here legally and paying taxes for the services they receive. I don't think we should criticize guest workers who are willing to take jobs American workers often refuse to accept."

On offshore oil drilling: "I'm on the Lands Commission and I think there will have to be some offshore

On income taxes: "I support the indexing of the income tax so workers are not pushed into higher tax brackets by inflation."

Prom sea to sea. Drilling for oil on an island Eden off the California coast. Developing real estate on San Francisco Bay. Mining an eventual 320 million tons of coal from the Wyoming prairie. Finding a gas field near "The Graveyard of the North Atlantic" off Nova Scotia. These are just a few of the things Mobil is doing in North America. But what, some of you have asked, are we doing to the environment? Not only protecting and preserving it, but enhancing and enriching it...hand in hand with our main job of providing energy.

Redwood Shores. Some of today's valuable land around the perimeter of San Francisco Bay was once a polluted marsh, and controversial: Wouldn't reclaiming it threaten marine and bird life? Hardly. When Mobil's affiliate acquired the 1,400-acre site nine years ago, no marsh birds found forage because no fish swam in its inlets and little brooks. But now its waterways are properly cleansed through gates that let the tides flush the system daily—and both pelicans and egrets feed on the seafood smorgasbord below. Sharing the wildlife will be our planned community for up to 20,000 people.

"This looks like a fine place to drop the seals."

Sable Island. The name is from "Sand Island" in French, and it's apt for some 20 square miles of treeless sandbar 176 miles east of Halifax, Nova Scotia. Its fog and treacherous shallows made a graveyard for 500 or so ships, but now a herd of stocky wild horses and several species of seal are among the diverse wildlife living on and around the island. To protect this desolate but delicate environment during drilling in the area, a Mobil affiliate asked for—and carried out—the advice of the Nova Scotia Resources Council. Its chairman praised our "extreme care," and another member thinks our presence "may in fact improve the situation." Going beyond exhaustive protection, our affiliate is now funding a dune-restoration project to undo centuries of damage from nature and early settlers. Meanwhile, eight miles offshore, we have found a potentially major gas field.

Ecology, energy, harmony. What we seek are sound business ventures...but always in harmony with the environment. We're building our Caballo Rojo coal mine in Wyoming, and already we've planned how to totally reclaim the prairie and protect everything from archeology (mysterious "teepee rings" of rock) to zoology (even down to monitoring bird droppings). On lovely Santa Rosa Island off California, we never did find oil or gas in the 1970s, but neither did an independent scientist find even "a cigarette butt or paper sack" after we'd gone. Such care is costly, but we don't think energy development and economic development have to come at the expense of a sound, beautiful environment. Behind our words is action—for all the people who live in our land, for the birds and beasts that live on it.

lions of cubic feet of soil that may have been contaminated either by transuranics leaking from insufficient waste containers or by the residues of 35 known "broken arrows," the Pentagon's term for nonexplosive accidents involving nuclear weapons.

Low-level waste: This is a catch-all classification for anything not in the categories above. It is the only form of radwaste that is now being permanently disposed of — although the word "permanently" is open to some question considering the leaks of contamination from both civilian and military low-level sites. Low-level material ranges from the discardable gloves worn by workers at nuclear plants to such intense radiation emitters as sealed cobalt sources used in radiotherapy.

By 1980, 62.2 million cubic feet of this material had been buried at 17 Federal sites and 13.6 million cubic feet of it at six commercial sites. Additionally, an unknown amount of lowlevel waste was dumped off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts until 1970. At the land sites, these quantities accumulate at a rapid rate, both from civilian operations and from Government sources. There have been containment failures at the Federal sites but the leaks causing most of the political problems are coming from the commercial sites. Employees at a site at Beatty, Nev., were found to have sold or given away radioactive tools diverted from the burial trenches.

At present, three low-level sites remain in commercial operation, including the Beatty dump, although Nevada's governor, Robert List, said late last year that one of his goals is "to shut down that repository, and we're 95 percent of the way to accomplishing it."

Decontamination and decommissioning waste: In addition to wearing out like everything else, nuclear facilities and the equipment used in them take on a burden of radioactivity which increases with time and, ultimately, they become dangerous to approach. For that reason, commercial nuclear reactors are licensed to operate for only 40 years, and by that time the radiological protections required for their dismantling may make them more expensive to decommission than they were to build in the first place. The operators of nuclear facilities have suggested that it would be prudent to "mothball" decommissioned reactors, or to entomb them in concrete for about a century until their radioactivity decays to a point where they can be dismantled more safely. Eventually, however, the costs of monitoring and safeguarding these facilities for that length of time will offset any monetary saving - and that's not even figuring for inflation.

The stupendous cost of disposing of it will have to be borne by our children, and probably their children, putting future generations in the position of having to pay a good part of the bill for the nuclear weapons, power and medical and industrial benefits we now enjoy. Recent Federal surveys have calculated that approximately 30 million cubic feet of material from Governmental nuclear sites still remains to be disposed of.

Technologies for the safe and perpetual containment of these wastes are being developed. However, they will be expensive: Such alternatives as shooting the most radioactive fractions of the material into space or burying them beneath the tectonic plates in midocean or letting them melt their way through the Antarctic ice cap are under study. Ultimately, though, the Federal Government is expected to spend a minimum of $10 billion (perhaps as much as $50 billion) to build high-level repositories deep underground. The locations of these repositories and the types of rocks in which they'll be located are still open questions, and in any case, actual disposal of just this one of the six radwaste forms is not expected to begin before the year 2002.

Are Your Eyes A Clue to I.Q.?

By John E. Gibson TRUE OR FALSE?

 How intelligent a person considers you to be could depend on how much eye contact you have with him or her during an encounter.

 People with higher-than-average I.Q.'s are action-minded and consider daydreaming a waste of time.

Depression lowers your ability to think.

4. Women with high I.Q.'s tend to have specific personality traits and this is particularly true when they make the best use of their abilities.

 Creative intelligence is an invaluable asset — but almost impossible to define

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies of how people perceive intelligence, conducted by investigators at Southwest Texas State University, showed eye contact to be a highly potent source of nonverbal communication, and that persons who exhibited longer duration of eye contact and fewer eye shifts were likely to be rated by interviewers as significantly more intelligent than individuals who generally avoided eye contact during the interview.

 False. A study of daydreaming's relation to I.Q. conducted by a team of behavior specialists at Lancaster General Hospital (Pa.) found that persons with higher I.Q.'s accepted daydreaming more, enjoyed it more, had fewer hostile daydreams and experienced less guilt in daydreams than did persons who had lower scores on intelligence tests.

3. True. If you have a difficult problem to resolve, or an exacting mental task to perform, don't tackle it when you're in a blue mood. Psychiatric studies at the University of California showed that "depressed people scored significantly lower on tests measuring their ability to think abstractly, their ability to screen out irrelevant but associated information and their speed of information processing."

4. True A University of Georgia study of women with above-average intelligence — which also evaluated the results of other research — found that independence and autonomy characterized most gifted females who used their abilities. It was further noted that "Successful gifted women appear to possess a high degree of perseverance in the face of adversity."

5. False. One of the best definitions of creative intelligence was set forth in a Rutgers. University study of mental ability: "Creativity is... characterized by behavioral qualities of curiosity. openness of attitude toward learning, highly individual perception, connecting of information in a personally meaningful way and acceptance of things realistically.

FROM ONE YIELD SOUND INCREDIBLE? NOT IF YOU OWN THE

Noted Curiculturist of New Lealand (2005). The New Lealand (2005). The tree tomato has a very long finiting season, its wade range of cidinary toses make it a valuable whiter and spring fruit... a welcome addition to the menu. "Although introduced into New Lealand many veurs ago, it is only in recent years that the tree tomato has become better known for its many user. It is now much sought after and its popularity is indicated by the high price realized for it on local markets. Under suitable conditions the plant will produce from 40 to 60 lbs. of fruit annually."

BROW IT DUTDOORS AS A TREE—
INDOORS AS A HOUSEPLANT!
The TREE TOMATO will thrive marvelously—indoors or out! If you five in a temperate zone, plant if outdoors and enjoy its bountiful, exotic beauty in your garden! Or, tub-grow the TREE TOMATO, bring it indoors for winter, and surprise your family and friends with ripe, just-picked tomatoes even during the coldest months of the year! Or cuttivate the TREE TOMATO as a nouse-plant anytime—anywhere! The TREE TOMATO will achieve heights of up to 8 ft. outdoors, but it can be trimmed and trained to any size or shape you wish!

ENJOY TREE TOMATOES SO MANY DELECTABLE WAYS: We think TREE TOMATOES are much tastier than ordinary tomatoes ... it's hard to find a meatier, firmer, more bursting with goodness taste treat. Rich in Vitamin C, TREE-TOMATOES are fabulous in salads, sandwiches and are absolutely fantastic just sliced up and popped in your mouth.

Nothing beats fresh produce. So why continue to pay high supermarket prices for interior tomatoes, when you can grow your own TREE TOMATOES! REMEMBER, WE SHIP MATURE PLANTS. NOT SEEDS. ORDER YOUR TREE TOMATOES TODAY! Full growing instructions included.

The TREE TOMATO . . . a remarkable new horticultural concept . . . unlike anything you've ever seen before! NOT a vine . . NOT a regular tomato plant that withers and dies after one summer . .

the TREE TOMATO is a living, growing free that BEARS FRUIT SEASON AFTER SEASON ... YEAR AFTER YEAR! Why settle for garden-fresh tomatoes a few short weeks of the year? Why but up with nothouse tomatoes that taste like cardboard the rest of the time? Not when you can pick crip after crop of red, plump juicy TREE TOMATOES up to 7 months a year (all year 'round when grown indoorst')

WAVE AFTER WAVE OF SUCCULENT TREE TOMATOES GROW AS QUICK AS YOU CAN PICK 'EM! Your TREE TOMATO will arrive already leafed-out ... in full, green hardy vigor! When ready to bear, the branches will literally droop with nuge clusters of delicious TREE TOMATOES, hundreds upon hundreds ... and, as one crop is harvested, another rushes forth to take its place ... so you have a virtually constant supply of luscious TREE TOMATOES!

LAKELAND'S DOUBLE GUARANTEE

Create Wood

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

ere's an easy and inexpensive way to make clever wooden gadgets for your home and gifts for your own children, or the cub scouts. You could also donate these items to the next hospital benefit or bazaar. All you need are wooden clothespins, available at grocery or hardware stores, or tongue depressors, which you can get from any drugstore. You use them to make napkinholders, finger puppets, note and recipe clips, mittenholders and scarfholders, personalized lapel pins and clothespin dolls.

The idea of using clothespins for holding recipe cards is not new, but with our designs they can be made decorative and no one will know of their "former life."

Napkin clips and desk-top stationery- Weighted holders made from clothespins can also be designed so that they don't reveal their real purpose — you'd gladly put them on your toys. table or desk. The recipeholders can be attached to magnets so that they adhere conveniently to the front of the refrigerator. Tongue depressors can be glued to a rack to hold mittens and scarves. Decorate a hallway with it or hang it on the inside of a closet door.

Toaster tongs made from tongue depressors are very useful gadgets. You can also use depressors to make plantholders and trivets, wood-stained to match your furniture. Or make a personalized hairclip or name pin for a little girl.

Finger puppets are great fun, as are clothespin dolls which can be made to dance on a wire.

Complete directions with photographs and illustrations for all of the projects are included in the booklet, "Wood 'N Things." For your copy of this booklet (#353), send $1.25 plus 25¢ postage and handling to: FAMILY WEEKLY

Many Happy Returns: An Expert's Advice on Taxes

By Merrie Spaeth

For months last year, news reports headlined the debate over President Reagan's tax proposals. The bill that the President finally signed will mean lower taxes for many American families - but most changes won't go into effect until next year, when we file our 1982 tax returns. You'll want to take advantage of every way to minimize your 1981 tax liability. For some suggestions on how to do this. FAMILY WEEKLY spoke to Dr. Robert S. Holzman, author of the recently released book A Survival Kit for Taxpayers (Macmillan). He is also professor emeritus of taxation at New York University.

Q: Dr. Holzman, how does a taxpayer know if he needs help with his return?

A: A safe bet is to figure you will need help. Even figuring things like medical and educational deductions can be complicated now. The best chance a taxpayer has to file a correct return and not miss any deductions is to find someone more knowledgeable than he is to ask questions of.

Q: What about tax-preparation businesses?

A: Stay away from them! Some people who prepare returns for them know absolutely nothing. There are no Federal regulations for these firms: If they make a mistake, Merrie Spaeth is a freelance writer with a master's degree in business administration. you get stuck with the interest payment and perhaps even a negligence charge.

Q: Who then should the taxpayer turn to?

A: A lawyer or certified public accountant (C.P.A.) specializing in tax returns is the best bet. The Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) also has taxpayer assistance programs in many of its local offices, but these are crowded at this time of year, and the I.R.S. agent helping you may be too rushed to ask you the proper questions.

Q: What are the most common deductions people overlook?

A: Without a doubt, medical expenses and casualty losses. Last year, a man was allowed to deduct the cost of removing paint from his fence as a medical expense because he had a little boy who was eating the paint. Let me caution you here, however. The test is not whether your doctor tells you to do something but whether what he tells you applies to a specific medical condition.

Casualty loss refers to something that happens suddenly because of some external force. The most common losses result from floods. fires, thefts, storms and tornadoes, but losing money to a confidence man could also be included in this category. To claim these expenses, you almost certainly need pictures of the damage to your house or your possessions; if it was theft, it's important for you to have reported it to the police right away.

Q: What are some common mistakes on tax returns that can cost you money?

that can cost you money?

A: One common mistake involves Social Security deductions. If you work for more than one employer, you may not realize that each employer is taking out the full amount due to Social Security, even though you may already have reached the ceiling ($29,700 for 1981). You are allowed to take a credit on your tax return for that overwithholding and have it returned to you.

Another missed saving is in the area of dependency deductions. If you provide more than half the support for someone, you can claim him or her as a dependent. Another aspect to this is when several people contribute to one person's income, as in the case of several grown children supporting a parent. Each child individually may not provide more than half the support. but together they do. In such a case, the claim for the dependency deduction can rotate among the children year by year.

Q: Are there any significant changes in the tax laws which took effect in 1981?

A: Yes, there are some specialty deductions. The biggest change is an expansion and liberalization of what you can do with money you make from the sale of your home. Before last year, people over 55 were allowed to take the profit from selling a home and sink it back into a new residence. They were allowed $100,000 tax-free income and 18 months to reinvest. Now the time limit has been extended to two years and the amount has been raised to $125,000.

Q: With family budgeting getting increasingly complicated, what sort of records should the average family keep?

A: Everything. Receipts for all expenses, and be sure to note exactly what they were for. Put information on checks. Take pictures of everything. Keep bills of sale, and get the bill or the receipt for something if it's a gift or inheritance. The I.R.S. has the power to look at a deposit in your bank account, designate it income, and tax you accordingly. unless you can prove where it came from and all other relevant information. Keep records in a safe-deposit box.

It is a matter of concern to many sincere people that the Christian Church in the time of the Apostles moved from a special observance of sabbath on the seventh day of the week to observance on the first day. The day of rest became "The Lord's Day" and was celebrated on Sunday, the day of Christ's Resurrection. The reasons and circumstances of the change are considered in our pamphlet.

More important than any debate about changes is the need for all of us to reconsider the place of a special day of worship in our lives. Too many of us have forgotten. Write for the free booklet, "Remember the Sabbath... Keep it Holy!" No one will call on you.

WHATERL) By Eliot Kaplan

DR.'S ORDERS: HA!

Next time you wonder why you're not healing fast enough, consider this: Anywhere from 50 to 80 percent of patients don't follow their doctors' orders.

Dr. Harold Levinson of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, recently noted in Psychology Today that many patients think they know more about the symptoms and treatment of their illnesses than do their doctors. For instance, even though evidence shows that you cannot accurately tell when your blood pressure has risen, 90 percent of highblood-pressure victims in one study said they could, citing such (false) symptoms as headaches, flushed faces and tension. According to Levinson, patients are guided by these faulty assumptions when deciding whether or not to follow a doctor's prescribed treatment.

CHARTBUSTERS

1: Rogers . . .

Poor Kenny Rogers. There is actually one music honor he didn't win last year. Any recent Grammy Awards notwithstanding, Billboard's 1981 year-end review reveals REO

...and Benatar.

Speedwagon beat him out for top pop artist, based on record sales and airplay. But Rogers did capture top spot in the country category (over Alabama and Dolly Parton) and proved to be top male artist (whipping Bruce Springsteen and Christopher Cross).

Pat Benatar was top female artist, says Billboard (Kim Carnes and Barbra Streisand were runners-up), while REO Speedwagon outdid AC/DC and Hall and Oates in the duo/group slot. Sheena Easton was top new artist, while Grover Washington was the crown jewel of jazz, Rick James supreme in soul and Luciano Pavarotti king of classical.

Here are the top five pop singles and albums of 1981:

Singles

1. "Bette Davis Eyes," Kim Carnes.

2. "Endless Love," Diana Ross & Lionel Richie. 3. "Lady," Kenny Rogers.

4. "Starting Over," John Lennon.

5. "Jessie's Girl," Rick Springfield.

COME ON BACK, HOWDY DOODY

At age 3, Gary Grossman became the first kid on his block to have a TV, and he spent hours mesmerized by his kiddie favorites. Now 33, Grossman is still hooked, as witnessed by his charming new book on kidvid's history, Saturday Morning TV. They're all there, from Superman to Soupy Sales, Top Cat to Underdog, Hopalong Cassidy to Road Runner.

Although today's kidvid is less violent, less blatantly commercial and more newsy, Grossman sees a disturbing trend. Due to skyrocketing costs, networks have switched from the classic shows starring real people to cartoons. "Let's face it," Grossman told us, "Yogi Bear doesn't need a health plan; Scooby-Doo doesn't get residuais.

"But kids are missing out on adult role models. Many folks at NASA say they were inspired by Mr. Wizard; airline pilots by Sky King. Now, Bill Cosby is the last human on Saturday morning TV."

LEADER OF THE PACKS

For the third time in seven years, tiny St. David, Ariz. (population 1,600) can boast the most physically fit Cub Scouts in the U.S.

Late last year, Hondo Judd, 10. Peter Haymore, 9, and Brandon Merrill, 8, beat out 100,000 other Scouts in a nationwide competition, which included softball throw, push-ups, situps, long jump and 50-yard dash. Incredibly, Haymore did 122 pushups in 60 seconds, Judd 120.

The inspiration behind St. David's success is Hondo's father, Clay. Despite having rheumatic fever as a boy, Judd, 44, has become a fitness nut. Each summer morning from 5:30 to 7:30 he led the boys in workouts with the weights set up in his basement.

Among Judd's six kids, son Nephi, 16, was on 1975's winning Scout squad, and daughter Estrella, 14, is a national weight-lifting champ. Judd already is preparing a team for this year's Cub contest, but all his sons are too old. "Unfortunately," he says, laughing, "I'm out of boys."

LOVI

LOVE AT FIRST SNIFF

We waited until after Valentine's Day to tell you this because we hated to ruin your notions of romance, but speculation is mounting that what attracts us to the opposite sex may not be the twinkle in his or her eye, but the twinge in your nose.

Scientists are beginning to look into pheromones, which are specific scents secreted by some creatures (female insects, for example) that can lure a mate from miles away. Before pigs mate, the boar gives off an odor in his saliva that attracts the female.

"There's no hard evidence yet of pheromones in humans," admits Dr. John Labows of Philadelphia's Monell Chemical Senses Center. But he says research is being done on individuals' unique odors and their possible effects on the behavior of others. It's been found, for instance, that women who live or work together tend to experience their periods at the same time, and this may be related to subtle smells emitted during the menstrual cycle.

Original U.S. Morgan Silver Dollars

Philadelphia, February 1982. IMM announced today the release for sale of a small cache of less than 10,000 original U.S. Government Morgan Silver Dollars. Esteemed by collectors worldwide, Morgan Silver Dollars are among the last .900 fine silver dollars to have been struck for circulation by the U.S. Government and have he extremely scarce in recent years.

International Monetary Mint is releasing for sale these rare Morgan Dollars in very fine condition at the Special Investor Opportunity price of only $35 each. Investors who respond from this publication may purchase from 1 to 10 individual coins at this price. Because of the limited number available, all orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis with a strict limit of 10 coins per customer. This announcement will only be repeated in the unlikely event that coins from this cache are still available beyond the deadline published here.

The Morgan Silver Dollar was authorized by an Act of the United States Congress in 1878 and was struck for circulation from 1878-1904. Due to a bullion shortage, coinage was suspended until 1921, when Morgans were once again minted for a single year. During World War I it is estimated that over 270 million silver dollars were melted down for bullion and as a result, all surviving Morgan Dollars are in short supply. The specimens in this offering are all in very fine condition and to protect your investment each coin will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity to that effect.

To qualify for this offering, call Lee Collins toll free at 1-800-345-8502, Dept. MDL-1886. (In Pennsylvania, call our Special Operator at 1-800-662-5180 for credit card orders; or if you would prefer, mail check or money order in the full amount to: International Monetary Mint, Dept. MDL-1886, 390 Pike Road, Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006. An additional $2.75 is requested to cover insurance, postage and special handling per order. If not completely satisfied, you may return your U.S. Morgan Silver Dollar(s) in their original condition within 14 days for a full refund. This offer expires March 23, 1982.
