

Faulty suits force NASA to scrub space walk

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Serious problems developed this morning with NASA's new generation, $2-million space suits and Mission Control canceled the long-awaited joint space walk by two shuttle astronauts.

It was the first test of the suits, which have had a history of development troubles that more than doubled their cost.

NASA officials were considering the possibility of extending the shuttle mission for one extra day, to Wednesday, if the suits can be fixed later today. This would allow a Tuesday space walk, but the scenario was "not too likely," an official said. At midmorning, the suits were still out of whack.

Shuttle manager Glynn Lunney told reporters, "We still feel very good about this flight," noting the crew last week had accomplished its main mission: deployment of two commercial satellites. But he readily conceded, "We're disappointed"

by the suit failures.

One suit, worn by Joseph Allen, had a bad oxygen fan, and its balkiness — a "motorboating" sound — was clearly audible to Mission Control. The trouble with the second suit, donned by William Lenoir, could only be seen on a gauge. Officials said a regulator indicated low pressure.

After Allen's fan broke down, officials wanted Lenoir to test his suit in a space "standstill" by moving out into Columbia's airlock, the ship's doorstep to space. That also had to be scrubbed.

"This isn't our day for suits," said Allen, who had rehearsed the two-man space walk for month after-month in water-tank simulations.

"Good try but no cigar," said Robert Stewart, the ground communicator. "You know how Monday mornings are." The scrub came an hour before the 4:50 a.m. PST space walk was to have begun. The astronauts were never in danger, and even if the problems had occurred after the walk had begun, Lunney said there would have time to safely end the walk.

The suits were developed by Hamilton Standard Division of United Technologies under a $46.9 million contract covering 43 suits and 13 life support systems. Problems, including an oxygen fire in an unmanned suit and a pressure leak because of failed stitching, contributed to cost overruns that pushed the actual price to more than $107 million.

"We'll be right back," Lunney added, saying the walk might be rescheduled on one of three flights planned in the first half of next year. NASA would like to have this experience before committing an astronaut to maneuver away from the ship with a thruster-powered back pack on flight 11 in 1984.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's fifth shuttle flight was scheduled to end Tuesday — the space walk its only disappointment.

Who'll have the last lap?

By KAREN E. KLEIN

One night in November, 1974, John Gardner had a crazy dream. He dreamed he was sitting in a department store somewhere with a woman sitting on his lap and a crowd gathered around him.

Everyone has had crazy dreams. But not very many people think of carrying them out, much less making personal crusades out of them.

But John Gardner's not just anyone. Gardner turned his eight-year-old dream into a reality and into his life's greatest adventure. He became the world's official lap sitter. He wrote and published the world's only book on the same subject. He called it, "The Iron Lap."

When he woke up that morning in 1974, Gardner had no idea he'd ever really live out his dream. But he just couldn't shake the feeling that the dream was to be his destiny.

So, on Feb. 1, 1975, his wife, Jean, became the first person to officially sit on his lap and record her name in his lapbook. His daughter, Karen, who was one at the time, became number two.

As of Thursday, 94 months and over 7,000 sittings later, Gardner was still continuing to follow what he calls his "G-rated serendipity."

"Even if I don't get anything back from it, I have no regrets in following my dream," Gardner said. "I've met people from all over the world. This is my thing, my dream, and I just had to take it to the limit."

Gardner has spent $3,800 of his own money on his lap sitting project and $2,500 on his book. (See LAP SITTER, Page A3)

Brezhnev laid to rest

Bush, Shultz join thousands at huge farewell for leader

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev, "glorious son of our homeland," was laid to rest today in Red Square, given a monumental and mournful farewell by the nation he led to a pinnacle of world power.

The man who succeeded to his mantle of Soviet leadership, Yuri V. Andropov, pledged in a eulogy to follow "the strategic line in domestic and foreign policy" that was shaped by Brezhnev in his 18 years as Communist party chief.

The late Soviet president's coffin was then lowered into a grave in the grassy plot behind Lenin's mausoleum, before the towering red-brick wall of the Kremlin.

Factory whistles wailed and church bells tolled across this vast land, which has known only four paramount leaders in its six decades as the world's greatest communist country.

In the giant cobblestoned square, under a forest of thousands of ordinary Soviet citizens stood silently in the late autumn chill, a sea of fur hats and military caps.

Vice President George Bush, here for today's state funeral, paid his respects to the late Soviet leader and called for a reduction in "today's massive expenditures for arms."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who had arrived in Moscow hours earlier Sunday, said he and the vice president would like to meet with Soviet leaders during their stay in the Soviet capital, but that no sessions had been scheduled. Shultz said he was carrying no special message from President Reagan to the Kremlin leadership.

"I don't think the message is complicated," he told reporters. "We are realists, we will stay that way. We are strong. We will stay that way. We're constructive and we are ready to solve problems and will continue to be ready to do so, ready to respond."

The secretary of state said Reagan would welcome a summit with Andropov, "only if it can be a constructive one and have an outcome."

Bush issued a statement saying it is the Reagan administration's "fervent hope that today's massive expenditures for arms can be reduced and that the world standard of living, especially for the impoverished, can be greatly improved."

Gas victim still in hospital

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A single victim exposed to a cloud of toxic gas that escaped Friday night from an Irvine manufacturing plant remained hospitalized today in Newport Beach.

Benjamin Aquino, 55, was listed in stable condition at Hoag Memorial Hospital. He was one of five people admitted to local hospitals after ethylene oxide leaked from a ruptured pipe at Bentley Labs Inc. at 9:37 p.m. Friday.

Another of the victims, Irvine police Sgt. Phil Povey, was released Sunday from Western Medical Center in Santa Ana.

Bentley Labs, at 17502 Armstrong Ave., lies within the industrial and commercial area bordered by the San Diego and Costa Mesa-Newport Beach freeways, Barranca and Jamboree roads.

More than 1,000 employees working night shifts in all of the plants within that eight-square mile district were evacuated Friday because of the danger of exposure to the gas.

Most of the workers came from such large industrial plants as Smith Tool and American McGaw Labs, said Irvine police Lt. Bob Lennert.

No residential areas were evacuated. Lennert said the gas is heavier than air and a lack of strong wind led officials to believe that residential areas were safe.

Preliminary findings indicate the leak from a 3,000-gallon tank occurred because vibration from a pump caused a one-inch pipe leading from the tank to burst from metal fatigue, Lennert said.

Ethylene oxide is similar in odor and chemical makeup to ether, said David Schapiro, director of the Orange County Poison Center at UC Irvine Medical Center. The gas can produce the same drowsiness as ether but also more irritation, especially to eyes and lungs, he added.

Ethylene oxide is not regarded as a lethal gas, he noted, adding that a large dose would be needed to create long-term problems.

At least 27 people were treated at local hospitals Friday with symptoms such as numbness in the mouth, eye irritation, and breathing difficulties. Among those, 20 were Bentley workers, six were police officers and one was a firefighter from the Orange County Fire Department. (See VICTIM, Page A2)

Bus battle divides HB residents

By ROBERT BARKER

Orange County Transit District buses that travel up and down Main Street in Huntington Beach are causing some rumblings.

Some Main Street residents say they want to get the big, 43-passenger buses out of their lives.

They claim the buses make too much noise, spew too much smoke, travel too fast and cause vibrations in homes.

Faye Ogden, a leader of the anti-bus forces, says that 202 buses pass in front of her home daily.

"They start at 5:30 a.m. and run until 9:30 at night. Some of them have only two or three riders and some are completely empty. It's a waste of money," she said.

But senior citizens and some other residents like the buses just the way they are.

John Richter, president of the Huntington Beach Senior Citizens Club, said many residents shape their activities around bus routes. He said buses are seniors' only means of transportation to doctors' offices, shopping centers, the downtown area and the senior citizens center.

"We don't want any route revisions," he told members of the city Transportation Commission and representatives of the OCTD last week.

Another supporter is Peggy Glenn, a resident along Main Street.

"The buses don't bother me. I (See BUSES, Page A2)

Parking fees eyed for Mile Square

The Fountain Valley City Council will consider initiating a parking fee at the city Recreation Center at Mile Square Park during the meeting that begins at 8 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall, 10200 Slater Ave.

Parking at the recreation center, located off Brookhurst Street at Heil Avenue, is currently free. The grounds include tennis and basketball courts, ball fields and a recreation building.

Fountain Valley officials have been looking into new ways to generate revenue to offset the costs of the city's recreation programs.

Tuesday the council will consider installation of a gate arm at the entrance to the recreation center and a 25 cents per car charge. City officials estimated this will generate money to pay for the gate equipment and an attendant in 7½ months.

After that, the parking fee would be a continuing source of recreation revenue.

"People have groused about the buses for about a year."

Ogden, a member of the city's environmental board, said a solution may be in the offing.

Causing the optimism, she said, is a proposal by transportation commissioner Ken Roth to route the big buses around Main Street residences via Yorktown Avenue and Golden Street.

It's Roth's plan to serve Main, Huntington and Lake streets with a less-noisy, less-polluting mini-bus.

An OCTD official said Friday the plan may not be feasible because of projected costs. Ogden said, however, costs could be cut by stretching pickup intervals from every 20 to every 30 minutes.

Lennert said several workers from neighboring plants also are believed to have visited emergency rooms on their own.

A total of 90 police officers, firefighters and Red Cross officials were called to the scene to aid workers and evacuate the district, he said. Two command posts were established.

According to police Sgt. Dave Freedland, Povey was exposed to the cloud of gas as he arrived at the scene. Other officers treated at hospitals were directing traffic nearby and downwind from the plant.

A spokesman for Bentley said today his firm planned to release information about the incident as soon as it could be compiled and verified.

The company employs about 1,000 people, 600 in Irvine.

Bishops take aim at war, abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the nation's Roman Catholic bishops refine a challenge to America's nuclear weapons policy, their conference leader is linking nuclear military growth with anti-life trends, including abortion.

"The linkages go far beyond the whole cast of our moral lives," said Archbishop John R. Roach, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

He told the opening of their annual meeting today that "the race to nuclear extinction, the massive killing of the unborn" and "the disintegration of many life-giving elements of existence" form an interlocking deadly pattern.

Responding to complaints of area residents, Orange County Transit District directors saved service today on several bus routes originally recommended for elimination.

The directors, on a 3-2 vote, agreed to save one of two daily round trips on an express route from San Clemente to Fullerton on Line 201. They also agreed to save the daily round trip from Fullerton to Newport Beach on Line 204.

Also saved was one of two daily round trips on Line 291 from San Clemente to Santa Ana and one of two daily round trips on Line 209 from San Clemente to Cal State Fullerton. Line 202, originally from San Clemente to Orange, will now run from Laguna Hills to Orange.

Proposed cuts in Saturday Dial-a-Ride service were not discussed at this morning's meeting. The directors agreed to discuss that proposal at the next meeting in December.

Several other routes serving the Orange Coast were eliminated by the directors, reflecting an earlier recommendation from OCTD staff.

Those routes include Line 71 from Buena Park to Huntington Beach, Line 93 running through Mission Viejo and Laguna Hills, and Line 206 from Newport Center to Mission Viejo.

Directors said that keeping the routes that were not cut would save the district about $126,000 less than had been anticipated. The cuts still are expected to save at least $1.46 million in annual operating costs.

OCTD officials, citing figures that showed both ridership and passenger-generated revenues below expectations, originally had called for the elimination of four local routes, seven express routes and Saturday Dial-a-Ride service.

Statistics for the first quarter of the current July 1-June 30 OCTD year showed a ridership total of 7.9 million passengers. The budget for the year had been drawn up with the expectation that 8.3 million passengers would use OCTD services during the quarter.

OCTD General Manager James Reichert said revenues also were down because local sales tax collections, payments from which support about half the transit district's budget, were lower than expected due to a sluggish economy that slowed retail sales.

Despite those problems, many residents who use the lines proposed for elimination, especially Dial-a-Ride users, voiced strong objections to the cutback proposals at a Nov. 1 public hearing.

Those affected said other, unspecified, alternatives to the route reductions should be considered.

More bull than fight at Mesa fairgrounds

About 1,200 angry ticket holders expecting to see a bloodless bullfight Sunday at the Orange County Fairgrounds were turned away red-faced when the fight was unexpectedly canceled.

About 18 Costa Mesa police units were called to the grounds to help control order when the fight scheduled to go on at 4 p.m. was canceled at 7:30 p.m. No one was arrested.

Fairgrounds manager Ken Fulk said the bullfight was canceled Sunday when promoter Ruben Bohorquez said he didn't have enough money to pay for the bulls or the matadors.

Bohorquez turned away about 300 fans Saturday, saying that the arena was too soft. He told them to return Sunday, Fulk said.

Fulk said that only a handful of the spectators Saturday received refunds on the tickets that ranged in price between $5 and $30.

No one received refunds Sunday. Bohorquez told fairgrounds officials that about $5,000 to $6,000 was missing from the cashbox Sunday and he had no money for refunds.

Fulk said fairgrounds officials requested that Bohorquez be detained by Costa Mesa police to determine if an unlawful act had occurred. No arrest was made.

Bohorquez said spectators could receive refunds today from his office at 541 S. Spring St., Suite 306, Los Angeles.

For some Viet vets, the war's not over concerns, less global than Robinson's, but still urgent.

They feel they are still paying for having served.

Vietnam service is a job handicap, according to Larry Brinker, a Labor Department official. He said men who fought have higher unemployment than those who stayed home.

"They have to bear the brunt of the disapproval of that conflict," he said. "The biggest problem these veterans have had is the stigma of Vietnam." Agent Orange, a chemical defoliant, is another vexing worry.

The Veterans Administration says it has no proof that those exposed to Agent Orange have a greater risk of contracting cancer or of fathering children with birth defects.

Three years after Congress told the VA to find the answers to those questions, the research project hasn't started.

At an Agent Orange forum last week, Glenn Sinclair, 35, of Cleveland said each of his five children was born with a birth defect.

When he went to a VA hospital for an exam, he said, it took all his self-control to keep from strangling the clerk who met him with bureaucratic sarcasm: "Oh, another one of you."

"I pay taxes and I fought for this country, and I've been treated like dirt," Sinclair said.

Ex-GIs gave him a standing ovation.

Veterans noticed that the memorial was built at the instigation of veterans — not of the country — and that government participation was minimal.

U.S. summary

Snow stretched from the upper Midwest across much of the Ohio Valley early today, becoming rain as it reached the mid-Atlantic states.

The snow spread across the Great Lakes region and the upper two-thirds of the Ohio Valley. The snowfall was light except at a few spots along the lower Great Lakes.

Snow gave way to rain over the Carolinas, Virginia and along the mid-Atlantic coast.

A few rain showers, meanwhile, hovered over southern New England.

The mercury registered in the teens in the Texas panhandle, and over the upper Mississippi Valley to the western Great Lakes.

Light snow was forecast later today across New England, rain was expected over western Washington, and cloudy skies were predicted over the rest of the Pacific Northwest. There was a chance of showers in southern California, and sunny skies elsewhere.

California

California's lift lines were jammed over the weekend as skiers frolicked in the residue of last week's heavy storm and the National Weather Service predicted light rain was on the way.

Rain showers were expected Tuesday throughout much of Southern California following the weekend's fair skies and warmer temperatures. A slight cooling trend was expected in the Los Angeles area, but high Tuesday should be in the 60s, the National Weather Service says.

As snow lingered in prime skiing areas over the weekend, rescue workers Sunday found a missing Illinois man who had been trapped in his camper near the crest of Pine Mountain Ridge since Tuesday's storm hit.

Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Anthony Grace said early today Thomas Schellens, 28, of the Chicago suburb of Glendale Hills, was lifted by helicopter off the mountain ridge six miles northwest of Wrightwood after a private pilot reported seeing SOS, marked in the snow.

Peter Bellas, director of the Big Bear Tourist and Visitor Bureau, said business was booming and estimated more than 30,000 people crowded Big Bear's ski shops, stores, restaurants, and ski slopes 90 miles east of Los Angeles.

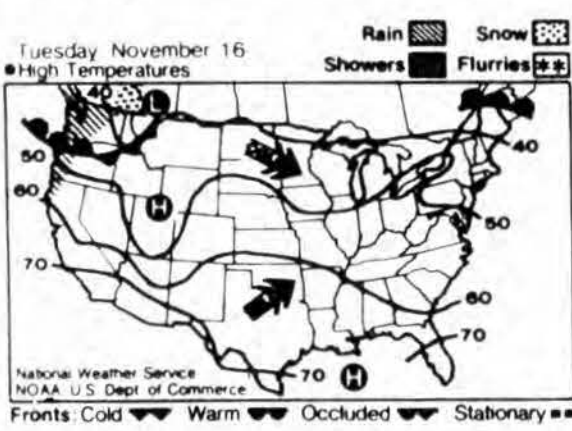

Two feet of fresh powder blanketed the San Bernardino and San Gabriel mountains last week as many resorts and hotels reported sell-out crowds over the weekend.

The weather service forecast mountain area highs Tuesday from 45 to 55, with lows mostly in the 20s and 30s and light rain. Owens Valley also has a chance of rain, with highs from 45 to 53 Tuesday with lows in the 20s.

The weather service predicted a 20 percent chance of light showers for Los Angeles Tuesday, with cloudy skies and lows in the mid 50s. Coastal highs were forecast in the 60s also, with lows in the 40s to the 50s.

Begin's wife buried at Mount of Olives

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's wife Aliza was buried at the biblical Mount of Olives today in a simple ceremony attended by her grieving husband, close friends and relatives.

The burial took place against a backdrop of national mourning for the 75 Israeli soldiers and security men killed last Thursday in the collapse of the Israeli military government building in Tyre, Lebanon — the worst single disaster in Israel's 34 years as a state.

Sirens wailed throughout the country to commemorate the victims of the blast that collapsed the building. Parliament scheduled a special memorial session.

Leaning on a cane, Begin walked up the steep slope to the grave site reserved for fighters in Israel's pre-1948 underground war for independence.

Angola to free Americans

REBEL-HELD SOUTH-ANGOLA (AP) — Pro-Western guerrilla leader Jonas Savimbi handed over two Soviet airmen to the Red Cross today, clearing the way for the release of three Americans held by Angola's Marxist government.

"We agreed to release the two Russians because the American administration of President Reagan has asked us insistently since last November," Savimbi told an Associated Press reporter in the thatched-roof hut that serves as a headquarters for his National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) somewhere in the southern Angola bush.

Gary Acker, 28, of Sacramento, Calif., and Argentine-born Gustavo Grillo, 36, of Jersey City, N.J., were arrested for having fought in Angola as mercenaries. The third American is believed to be pilot Geoffrey Tyler, 32, of Lakeland, Fla.

Walesa vows faithfulness

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, freed from government detention after 11 months, vowed today to remain faithful to the spirit of the outlawed union Solidarity.

He had not "signed anything, declared anything or joined anything" during his detention, Walesa said at a news conference the day after he returned to his family. He apparently referred to "loyalty oaths" extracted from some unionists as a condition for freedom.

Explaining the mysterious one-day delay in his return home after being released Sunday, he said he was taken to a meeting with the Polish general prosecutor for a review of martial law.

Public pays Nancy's flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan has flown three times by helicopter at public expense to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., White House records show.

The cost to taxpayers came to $3,100.

The first trip occurred on Jan. 29, 1981, just days after President Reagan's inauguration, to inspect the presidential retreat for the first time.

And last Sept. 10 and Oct. 29, Mrs. Reagan made one-way helicopter trips to meet her husband, who had flown a separate helicopter to Camp David following out-of-town trips.

2,100 lose Chrysler jobs

DETROIT (AP) — About 2,100 U.S. Chrysler Corp. workers began layoffs today because of the strike by Canadian Chrysler workers. The automaker said the U.S. may close Chrysler's five U.S. assembly plants before Christmas.

Bill Stempien, a Chrysler spokesman, said Sunday that the assembly plant layoffs could begin at a Detroit car plant and a Warren, Mich., truck plant within the next four weeks if the Canadian walkout continues. That would idle 10,000 workers at the two plants with about 43,000 being laid off in the United States if all assembly plants close, he said.

State's grape crop record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California, producer of 70 percent of all wine sold in this country, has just gathered a record grape crop, despite storms thought at first to be a disaster to the ripe fruit.

"The grapes just grew and grew," said state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service statistician Kelly Krug over the weekend. He computed the 1982 harvest at more than 3 million tons, far ahead of last year's 2.4 million tons. If it hadn't been for the storms, he said, the new figure would probably have gone to 3.5 million tons.

Eroding bay cliff fenced in Newport

A severely eroded cliff along the western edge of the Upper Newport Bay is being fenced off to the public to reduce the risk of accidents.

The so-called West Bay property, off Irvine Avenue between University and Santiago drives, is a popular and scenic jogging area.

Newport Beach city officials said they've given emergency authorization to the Irvine Company to erect the fencing on the 71-acre strip of land. The development firm will pay about $5,000 for the fence.

The erosion, caused by water runoff mostly from rain storms, has cut deep and steep ravines at three points along the cliff.

The existing public easement will be rerouted outside the fence, said Richard Sim, an Irvine Company vice president.

The fencing will be removed after the rainy season when the Irvine Company will correct the erosion problem.

3 Coast chambers eye common issues

Three Orange Coast chambers of commerce have formed a coalition to study traffic, development and other issues common to Newport Beach, Irvine and Costa Mesa.

The coalition involves members of the Newport Harbor Area, Costa Mesa and Irvine chambers.

Carol South, president of the Newport chamber, said the formation of a coalition underscores the need to recognize that "each city and business community is no longer an island."

Ken Fowler, Costa Mesa chamber president, said traffic circulation as well as state legislation that impacts the local business community will be first on the group's agenda.

LAP SITTER REALLY ONE OF A KIND . . .

which he wrote in longhand between July 1979 and December 1980 and published himself. A neighbor typed the manuscript for him for free.

The book lists 27 lap sitting records Gardner has filed with the Guinness Book of World Records. His record for continuous lap sitting—at least one sitter a month for 94 months—is his most treasured statistic, but he also holds world records for lap sitting marathons, lap sitting at high altitudes and total number of lap sitters.

Gardner has received little official recognition for his endeavors. The Guinness people told him his records weren't valid because he had no competitors, so he's never actually been listed in the book.

In material terms, Gardner has little more than scrapbooks, T-shirts and 3½ lapbooks to show for his eight years of lapsitting. "I've had all kinds of failure," he said. "I've sent letters all over the world that have never been answered."

Gardner records some of those failures in his book; he's never been in an American magazine, never made it onto a television talk show, never landed a major celebrity on his lap. He received a letter once from Carol Burnett which he displays proudly on the board he carries around with him to promote his campaign, but he was never able to actually get her to sit.

"She has a very busy schedule," he explained.

Though he hasn't become a commercial success, Gardner has gotten to do something very few people do—follow an original idea through to reality.

"I've had sitters from almost every country—Russia, Iran, I've gotten most of South America," Gardner said. He's had sitters from a three-week-old baby to an 89-year-old great-grandmother.

He conceded he's lost friends along the way, people who considered lap sitting a little unconventional. But Gardner's made far more friends than he's lost. And he's had some wonderful experiences.

He enjoyed telling the story about the heaviest woman who ever sat on his lap. When she told him she weighed 256 pounds, Gardner said, "You're a good sport to tell me how much you weigh." To which she replied, "No, you're a good sport to let me sit on your lap."

Gardner's lapbooks are filled with the names and addresses of women who've sat on his lap. There's a star placed alongside the name of the Miss Orange

"People root for someone who wants to get somewhere, to achieve a goal or reach a dream."

County Honey Queen who sat on his lap at the Garden Grove school where he teaches fifth grade.

He keeps his lapbooks and a blue folding beach chair in the trunk of his car, just so they're always handy in case he runs into an unexpected opportunity to log another name on the roster.

When the female students in his class ask to sit on his lap he requires them to bring in notes from their parents or have their parents present before he will let them sit.

"I've worked overtime to be a gentleman on this," he said. He's rejected some people's suggestions that he make the sittings X-rated to attract more attention.

"I'm a married man and a family man," he said. "I wouldn't think of it."

Gardner's lap sitting record probably should have expired two years ago when he finished his book and stopped campaigning at beaches and parks. "But people still keep trickling in," he said, and he will probably keep on lap sitting as long as there are women who want to sit.

"People root for someone who wants to get somewhere, to achieve a goal or reach a dream," he said.

As of noon Thursday while at Newport Center, Gardner had chalked up a total of 7,333 women and girls who had occupied his well-worn lap.

Well, make that 7,334. An interviewer couldn't resist helping Gardner make his dream come true, either.

'Strangler' trial hits one-year mark

With no end in sight, jury will celebrate anniversary

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Court will recess early Tuesday in the "Hillside Strangler" case because the jury is having an anniversary party.

It's been one year since the mass murder trial of Angelo Buono brought them together, and the end is not in sight.

"Our last estimate, when we sat down to talk about it, was that it would end in February," Deputy Attorney General Michael Nash said. "But I think it's going to go a few months longer than that."

The star witness, confessed "Hillside Strangler" Kenneth Bianchi, has been on the witness stand for six months giving frequently conflicting stories of the murders of 10 young women and girls which he has blamed on Buono, his cousin.

Bianchi pleaded guilty to five of the slayings in return for being spared the gas chamber.

Superior Court Judge Ronald George, who also faces an effort by the defense to abort the trial, maintains a cheerful acceptance of the proceedings' marathon length.

"I thought it would be done within a year," he said with a smile. "But I've lost my capacity to be surprised at anything in this case."

George said he's grateful for the dedication of jurors, who have not been sequestered. The eight women, four men and six alternate jurors have become like a family, holding birthday parties in the jury room and snapping Polaroid pictures of each other for scrapbooks.

It took three months to seat a jury because of the expected length of the trial.

"It's really renewed my faith in the jury system," George said. "They are a very cohesive group and some of them have come to court even when they were coughing or not feeling well. They take notes and pay attention. I'm impressed with their stability."

Only two jurors have had to be replaced by alternates since the trial began — one man who had a health problem left at the outset and a woman juror had to return to work when her family suffered financial reverses.

One person in court every day

is more disturbed than others about the duration of the trial. Buono, the 48-year-old defendant, emaciated after two years in jail, seems to slump lower in his chair each day, glaring silently across the courtroom at Bianchi, seated glumly on the witness stand.

Defense lawyer Katherine Mader said Buono has been particularly upset by recent defense discoveries indicating a key eyewitness called to corroborate Bianchi, Markust Camden, had spent time in a mental hospital.

"How is Angelo?" Mader responded to a question. "He is furious, frustrated and bitter" that two men whose mental stability has been questioned have kept him in custody for two years.

Bianchi has contradicted himself repeatedly during testimony implicating Buono in the murders. Buono steadfastly denies involvement in the killings. At one point, Bianchi said neither he nor Buono was involved in the killings, then described tortures and strangulations, insisting Buono was his partner. He also changed details in his accounts of how he and Buono allegedly committed the crimes.

Buono "wants it over with," Mader said. "He knows he didn't kill anybody and he wants to walk out of here."

But Mader and another

Kenneth Bianchi

defense lawyer, Gerald Chaleff, say they must point up every possible conflict in Bianchi's story if they are to win Buono an acquittal.

"We have to bring out every point where he is inconsistent," says Mader. "We would be negligent if we didn't."

Chaleff is in his 13th week of cross-examining Bianchi. The prosecution questioned him for seven weeks, and additional weeks were spent playing videotapes of Bianchi's interviews with psychiatrists.

Below Bianchi took the stand, the prosecution had called more than 200 other witnesses. Nash said about 60 more will testify before the case is turned over to the defense.

Chaleff and Mader aren't saying how many witnesses they will call, except to say there will be "a lot."

Meanwhile, they are trying for a mistrial on grounds that information regarding Camden's mental history was withheld from them. At a hearing last week, detectives testified they knew Camden had been in a mental hospital and relayed that information to the prosecution.

However, it was never mentioned when the witness testified and the defense lawyers say they were never told.

The hearing continues Thursday, and George said he expects to make a written ruling on the issue shortly after Thanksgiving.

But it appears unlikely after all this time that he would order a mistrial before the case is placed in the hands of the jury for a verdict — probably next spring or early summer.

Travelers need right questions

By PAT HOROWITZ
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

DEAR PAT: Speaking as president of the Orange County chapter of American Society of Travel Agents Inc., I have a problem. How to get travelers who are shopping for bargain air fares to ask correct questions to get the right information from their travel agent.

With air fares changing daily without any advance notice, including advance notice to travel agents, it is important that air travelers give essential information to their agent when asking for the "cheapest air fare."

Tell your agent when you are going and when you are returning, enabling the agent to determine if your length of stay will qualify for a lower fare. If you are responding to an air fare you've seen in an advertisement, be sure to read everything in the ad: name of airline, type of fare, departure city, validity dates, and destination city. Tell the agent in which newspaper you saw the ad, and know the section and page number. In most cases, the agent will have a copy of the ad in the office. If a "friend" has told you about a bargain air fare, get the same information from him or her.

Keep in mind that all bargain fares are very restrictive in the number of seats sold at that fare. If you wish to book it, ticket it at the same time. Presently there are no cancellation fees for domestic air fares, only international.

When your agent "quotes" a fare it is only good at the time of the quote. It's possible that the fare could change or expire prior to your trip. Almost all bargain fares have an expiration date. Ask your agent when the fare expires when a bargain fare is quoted. And, it really is a disservice to your travel agent if you shop for a fare. With proper information, as detailed above, your own agent will be able to find the best travel bargain for you. Thanks for your help, and happy traveling to everyone.

Caltrans deserves rap from 'Little Hoover'

The Corona del Mar freeway is a short stretch of road with a long history — too long, many would suggest.

The freeway today extends to just northwest of Irvine Avenue. Southbound traffic pours onto Bristol Street for ultimate transfer to Jamboree Road or MacArthur Boulevard.

Bristol, it seems, is always congested, snarled. Add a stalled car or a minor fender-bender and Bristol becomes a parking lot.

For years, local officials pushed for extension of the freeway to MacArthur. That battle was won over protest of Caltrans, the state highway agency run by Adriana Gianturco, who, one can safely say, doesn't like freeways.

Work on the $10.5 million extension to MacArthur is scheduled to begin some time after

Jan. 4, 1984. Officials say it will take at least 18 months construction for it to be completed.

Should the freeway have been built in piecemeal fashion? Should it have taken local officials year after agonizing year to convince the state to fund the extension?

Just these questions soon will confront the Commission on California State Government and Economy, commonly known as the Little Hoover Commission. It's coming to Santa Ana this week to get the low down on the history of the Corona del Mar freeway. The inquiry is part of a study on whether Caltrans develops and completes projects on time and at the lowest possible cost.

We think the commission will determine in the case of the Corona del Mar freeway the answer is a resounding "no."

Newport needs broad plan

It should surprise no one that following the Newport Beach Council elections, the parade of development has started.

The Irvine Company announced last week it would seek an amendment to the general plan allowing the construction of a 325-room hotel on a five-acre parcel near Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Newport Center. The hotel would be operated by Four Seasons Hotels, a Toronto-based firm that owns the Pierre in New York City, the Four Seasons Clift in San Francisco and the Olympic in Seattle, Wash.

The Irvine Company's latest request comes less than a year after it abandoned plans to expand Newport Center to the tune of $126 million. That expansion drew heated opposition from some in the community.

Another chunk of the $126-million expansion is also back for another airing. The Marriott Hotel Corp., which owns the 377-room Marriott in Newport Center, wants to build a 12-story addition to that facility with another 234 rooms.

That would make Marriott's Newport Center hotel the largest hotel in the county, boasting 611 rooms. The last time around, the Marriott request was tied to the Irvine Company's plans. When the latter failed, the former also died. Marriott's request comes before the planning commission this week, while the Four Seasons plan won't be aired until the spring.

The point here is not really whether more hotels or these hotels in particular are good for the city of Newport Beach. The problem is that when the Irvine Company withdrew its planned $126 million addition to Newport Center under threat of referendum, the city lost its chance at an integrated, well-thought-out proposal that would have provided the necessary public improvements for roads.

By doing the development piecemeal, there is greater risk of overtaxing the road system and of failing to properly integrate new and existing projects.

Although we support further development in Newport, Beach, we find the "project a week" process distressing.

The players have been changed since the last time around. There is a new member on the city council who will be seated in January. Paul Hummel, a vociferous opponent of the Newport Center project, will be gone. In addition, the Irvine Company has a new president and a posture leaning more towards sensitivity to the communities it touches.

Perhaps it is time to sit down again with an overall plan for this area, rather than to proceed on these individual projects. There was a good deal of talk during the last election about fact-finding, seeking consensus and finding fair solutions to problems. Maybe Newport Center is a way to put that to the test.

He simply has his driver take him to an inconspicuous white hangar at the north end of National Airport and hops aboard a Coast Guard plane kept there for his convenience.

When Federal Aviation Administrator J. Lynn Helms wants to take a trip, he uses his agency's $800-an-hour Citation jet, and generally takes his wife along for the ride.

THE PLANES Hayes and Helms commandeer for their trips are just two of the 650 aircraft owned by federal agencies other than the Defense Department. The planes are worth $340 million and last year cost $446 million to operate. Most of them have proper uses, such as inspections and surveillance, but many are routinely abused by high officials with an inflated sense of their own importance.

My associate Peter Grant checked the flight records on Washington-based Coast Guard and FAA aircraft for the last six months, and found that they are used mainly to stroke the egos of imperial bureaucrats. For example:

—Adm. Hayes' use of the Coast Guard plane sometimes costs the taxpayers 10 times what a commercial flight would have cost.

—The FAA's two planes at National Airport are intended primarily for use by agency inspectors to monitor the nation's air operations. They require a support staff of 20 people and an annual budget of $3 million. Yet during the period studied, almost half the flights the two planes made were by Helms or his deputy, Michael Fenello, to receptions, conventions and ceremonies. The General Accounting Office found that Helms' trips during his first eight months in office cost $400,000 more than commercial flights would have.

—Helms is no dog in the manger; when he's not using his plane, he lets Attorney General William French Smith borrow it to keep speaking engagements. And when Helms uses the plane, he not only takes along his wife, Lorraine, but often the wives of crew members and, on one occasion, the wife of an aviation lobbyist. "Helms is an extremely family-oriented man," an FAA spokesman explained.

—Helms has scheduled four trips to Florida this winter. The agency spokesman said this is the busiest flight season in the South and that Helms, a licensed pilot who usually flies the FAA plane himself, is able to check first-hand on agency systems and programs. His monitoring efforts, of course, duplicate those of FAA personnel whose job is to supervise the programs.

—The Coast Guard's Washington air station (the hangar at National Airport) consists of a Gulf Stream jet and a turboprop plane, a staff of 20 and an annual budget of about $2.5 million. Its mission is "to provide transportation on demand" to the Secretary of Transportation, the Coast Guard commandant and anyone else authorized by the commandant. A Coast Guard spokesman explained that the admiral uses the private planes so that he can change destinations in mid trip when an emergency arises. However, no one could remember when there had been such an emergency.

—THE COAST GUARD also uses its planes to win friends and influence big shots. Presidential Counselor Ed Meese, his wife and daughter were flown to a Coast Guard Academy football game; Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., was picked up at his hometown and flown to a ceremony in Norfolk, Va.; Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., took a hopscotch tour of Alaska that cost almost $40,000 in flight expenses alone; Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., was given a tour of Coast Guard bases in Puerto Rico, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., was flown to the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., for a visit that included a cruise on the academy's sailing ship Eagle. All of these members of Congress, incidentally, serve on committees that fund the Coast Guard.

—Deputy Transportation Secretary Darrell Trent was ferried on the Coast Guard jet to Dublin, Paris and Zurich. The air fare alone cost $40,000, as opposed to $1,500 on commercial flights. A DOT spokesman said Trent needed the Coast Guard plane so he could be back in Washington for the swearing-in of the new commandant.

Aunt's importance a relative matter

I've been making a study of aunts in America. We take aunts too much for granted considering how important they have been to all of us. I conducted my study by studying my own mind, and these are my conclusions:

—Aunts are more apt to be eccentric than uncles, but they're often nicer to you.

—Out of every 100 women in America, 84 of them are aunts.

—A aunt who has children of her own is not as important as an aunt who does not have children.

—IN LITERATURE, aunts have been pictured too often as small, prim, uninteresting little women of no particular importance to anyone. This is wrong.

—Aunts live longer than uncles but not as long as grandmothers.

—One out of every four aunts drives a secondhand car.

—As nice as they are, they aren't usually very good cooks.

—The word "avuncular" pertains to an uncle. If a person is referred to as being avuncular, it means he's "like an uncle." There is no comparable word that means "like an aunt." This is unfair to aunts, not that "avuncular" is all that good a thing to be called.

—Some aunts are more auntlike than others. Many aunts are nothing like one at all.

—Aunts should be generous to their nieces and nephews. They should read to them when they're young and take them to places that their mothers and fathers wouldn't. They should give them $5 once in a while.

—No one should bother keeping track of anything but real aunts. It isn't necessary for the wife of your husband's brother to be an aunt to your children unless she's very rich or especially nice.

—Rosalind Russell was the only really important aunt in a movie and there have been almost no aunts at all on

Things I Learned En Route to Looking Up Other Things:

—That steadily increasing numbers of Americans are required to go back to school in order to retain their jobs: some form of continuing education is now mandated for at least 16 licensed professions and paraprofessions in 45 states.

—That throughout its billions of years of existence, the Earth has never passed through the same place twice and it will never return to the place we are now in the cosmos.

—That as late as our Civil War, it was generally considered that the best history of the American Revolution was written by an Italian, Charles W. Botta — who wrote his account originally in Italian!

—That the fastest-growing therapeutic centers in America are the "pain clinics"; there was only one in the country in 1970, and today there are more than 300.

—That the planet Neptune was the first in the solar system to be "discovered" wholly by mathematical calculation, before it could be seen with a telescope.

—That in the 1950s, only 12 percent of American women with children under the age of six were in the labor force; today there are four times as many working mothers with children six or under.

—That it was Thomas Paine, an exiled Englishman, who first applied to this country the name "The United States of America."

—That one recent study disclosed that 10,000 aspirin tablets are swallowed each minute in New York City alone.

—That Patrick Henry rather than George Washington deserves to be called "the father of his country" — Henry had 17 children to support.

—That Dean Swift used his unlettered servants as a sounding-board for his masterpiece, "Gulliver's Travels," reading aloud each section of it as he wrote it, to make sure they could understand every sentence of the text.

—That the death rate from stomach cancer in Japan (which has largely a fish diet) is nine times that of Americans — and double among Japanese men as compared with women.

television. This is probably good for aunts but bad for television.

—Aunts are ranked ninth among relatives. The listing goes: 1) mother 2) son 3) daughter 4) father 5) brother or sister 6) grandmother 7) cousin 8) grandfather 9) aunt 10) uncle. It is interesting that niece and nephew are only 13th and 14th in order of importance.

—Aunts come on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

—It is best if a niece or nephew doesn't have more than two aunts. Three is maximum and if there are more than four it is as bad as not having any aunt at all.

—There has never been a popular song about an aunt.

—Aunts are not big spenders.

—Aunts improve with age.

—If some of your relatives have moved to California in past years, it is possible to have an aunt you've never met. This is not necessarily bad.

—NOT MANY Americans pronounce aunt "ahnt." If they pronounce aunt "ahnt," they also say "tomahto" and "neye-ther." In America aunt is pronounced "ant" but there is never any confusion in anyone's mind with the bug of the same pronunciation.

—Even if your mother has several brothers and sisters with children, it is hard to think of her as an aunt.

—It is almost impossible to get to be famous as an aunt.

—There are not even any aunts in the Bible, and if there are, don't write me about it.

—Aunts are good to have in Florida or San Francisco in case you want to go there and visit. Aunts are generally better if they don't live too close.

—Aunts ought to hire the people who do commercials for politicians to improve their image. They're wonderful people who haven't had the credit they deserve.

Spectators scream and yell for their team but can't muster enough enthusiasm and energy to stand and sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

New tax bills put more jingle in your jeans

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans are about to reap the benefits and pay the penalties of the 1981 and 1982 tax bills passed by Congress.

Many of the major provisions of last year's tax cut did not take effect until this year. You will see the first dollars-and-cents tax impact of things like all Savers Certificates, Individual Retirement Accounts and the reduction in the marriage penalty when you file the return due April 15, 1983.

Congressional action this year was much more limited, but the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 also could affect the amount of money you owe or the size of the refund you will get.

The most sweeping change is the four-stage reduction in rates that began in October 1981. The impact on last year's tax bills was relatively small — a 5 percent cut was implemented on Oct. 1; spread over the entire year, it meant a reduction of only 1.25 percent.

The 1982 cut, however, is a full 10 percent and so is the 1983 reduction. The 1984 cut will be 5 percent.

Here's an example of what it means:
Assume you're married with a taxable income of $30,000 and are filing a joint return. Your federal income tax bill for 1981 was $6,160. Your marginal tax rate — the maximum rate you paid — was 37 percent.

Your 1982 tax bill will be $5,607 — a cut of $553. Your marginal tax rate is 33 percent.

Your 1983 tax bill at the same income level will be only $5,064 — a cut of $543. Your marginal rate will be reduced to 30 percent.

The rate changes mean that income you earn next year will be worth more money in your pocket than income you earn this year. And, on the opposite side of the coin, this year's deductions will be worth more than next year's.

Suppose you earn an extra $500 this year. You get a Christmas bonus or make an extra sale. The Internal Revenue Service will take 33 percent or $165. If you earn that extra $500 next year, the IRS will take only 30 percent or $150.

Conversely, suppose you reduce your taxable income by $500 this year — not by earning less, but by cutting the amount that is subject to federal income tax through a deduction, exclusion or exemption. You'll cut your tax bill by $165. Next year, the same reduction in income would be worth only $150.

"The year-end planning strategy is to try to defer your income until 1983 . . . and to accelerate deductions into '82," said Sidney Kess, a partner with the accounting firm of Main Hurdman and the company's director of tax planning and policy.

Kess said taxpayers should start looking for savings in the category of exclusions and adjustments to income — money that doesn't have to be counted as income for tax purposes. You don't have to itemize your deductions to take advantage of these exclusions.

The interest earned on an All Savers Certificate, for example, is excluded from your income up to a maximum of $1,000 for a single person and $2,000 for a married couple filing jointly. The certificates went on sale Oct. 1, 1981; they will be available until Dec. 31, 1982. If you haven't earned the maximum, you might want to buy one of the certificates; interest earned in 1982 can be excluded from 1982 income.

Contributions to an Individual Retirement Account or a Keogh plan also can be subtracted from your income; there is no tax due on the contributions or on the interest they earn until you begin withdrawals. Starting this year, any wage earner can set aside up to $2,000 in an IRA; the limit on contributions to a Keogh plan — a similar tax-sheltered pension for the self-employed — was raised to $15,000. You have until April 15, 1983, to open an IRA for 1982; you can deduct contributions from your 1982 income even if you don't open the account until 1983. The rules for a Keogh account are different — you can contribute to an existing plan until April 15 and still take the exclusion on your 1982 return, but you must open the account itself by Jan. 1.

Two-income couples will get a break this year. They can adjust their income to subtract 5 percent of the lesser of the two incomes or $1,500 — whichever is less. The maximum deduction rises to $3,000 in 1983. A married couple with incomes of $15,000 and $10,000 for example, can deduct $500 — 5 percent of the smaller of the two incomes.

While many people will pay less tax than they expected, the unemployed may pay more, Kess said.

That's because the 1982 tax act changed the way you calculate the amount of unemployment compensation benefits which are taxable.

Under the old law, the amount of unemployment compensation included as part of a taxpayer's gross income was the lesser of two figures: The amount of the compensation itself or half of the sum over $20,000 for a single person or $25,000 for a married person filing jointly.

Under the new law, which is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982, the threshold goes down to $12,000 for a single person or $18,000 for a married person filing jointly.

Here's an example of what the change means:

You're married, filing a joint return. You earned $17,000 from January through August, then you lost your job. During the rest of 1982, you received $4,000 in unemployment compensation benefits.

Under the old law, none of your unemployment compensation benefits would have counted in your gross income for tax purposes since benefits and income combined did not exceed $25,000.

Under the new law, you will have to include $1,500 of the is practically zero. I work maybe once a year, income. Depending on your taxable income — after deductions — that can mean several hundred dollars added to your tax bill.

The bunny delivers balloons for the birthday girl

Officer Zeke on party patrol but he won't be keeping peace

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The party is in full swing. The guy in the bunny costume has delivered a bunch of balloons along with best wishes to the birthday guest of honor. Everyone is having a great time.

Then suddenly, a police officer appears at the door, asking for the birthday girl. He checks her identification and announces he has a warrant for her arrest.

'I do excellent role playing. The dancing well . . . But I don't get carried away and use foul language or shout. I stay real polite and calm . . . This one old lady either didn't believe me or didn't care. She just came up, kissed me and said, 'I'm too old, you can't take me anywhere.'

She laughs. Another gag, right? "Come on," the host says, "we're having a party here. There must be some mistake." One of the guests with legal training steps forward to examine the warrant. It looks like the real thing to him.

The officer searches the guest of honor. She is beginning to wonder what will happen if this isn't just a gag.

"Don't just stand there," the host's wife shouts. "Do something!" The guests are starting to get nervous.

Then the officer takes out a pair of handcuffs, takes the guest of honor by the shoulders and gives her a big kiss. "Happy birthday," he says, as the music starts to swell and he unbuttons his shirt.

Officer Zeke has struck again. Officer Zeke is Zeke Torok, 27, a Hungarian-born graduate of the Golden West Police Academy who needed to make some money while waiting to get hired onto the police force.

So he took a job with Balloons Unlimited of Costa Mesa, offering an alternative to the any professional dancing — or stripping — before.

"I just go down to bikini briefs," he said. "I keep it nice and clean."

A friend of his referred him to Darr last March, and after he got over his initial reservations, Torok agreed to start stripping for parties.

The act has been successful, he said. He usually works every weekend and two or three times during the week.

Much of what he does during the Officer Zeke routine he learned from police academy training, he said. "I do excellent role-playing," he said. "The dancing, well . . . But I don't get carried away and use foul language or shout. I stay real polite and calm."

Torok quotes real penal codes when he tells his clients what they are being arrested for. "I usually use a parking violation and tell them they have failed to appear in court," he said.

"Most of them end up crying," he said. "But whether they cry or not they all believe me eventually."

There was only one case where Torok couldn't get his client to fall for the police routine. "This one old lady either didn't believe me or didn't care," he said. "She just came up, kissed me and said 'I'm too old, you can't take me anywhere.'"

Torok made up his own dance routine, using his ballet background. He usually strips to "Finger on the Trigger," or "Turn Me Loose," he said.

But the cop delivers a warrant to Keeli Davenport.

The officer frisks the lady and before she knows what is happening, Officer Zeke strikes again.

Daily Pilot Photos by Lee Payne

He adds some acrobatics to liven up the show. "I'm dancing around, taking my clothes off, and I do a back flip," he said.

Torok, whose family moved to the U.S. from Hungary in 1956, grew up in New Jersey and served in the Navy as a diver in 1974. He still works as a diver — repairing ships docked in Balboa — when he isn't stripping.

He attended the Golden West Police Academy and graduated in January, 1982. Since then, he has waited to be hired by a local police force. He has also applied for a job as a stuntman.

His friends who are policemen love his act, he said. "They ask me to do it for their wives, and once they even wanted me to strip for a chief's secretary," he said. "They really enjoy it — they wish they could do it."

But Costa Mesa police officer Phil Hartman wasn't so enthusiastic about Torok's act. "I think it's in really bad taste," he said. "It doesn't portray what we'd like people to think of a police officer."

Another Costa Mesa officer said, "It's really kind of embarrassing."

Torok will continue to strip until he is hired as a police officer or something else comes up. "I'm playing it by ear," he said.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A1085 ♦AKQ72 ♠AQ5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Since this hand has all the earmarks of a possible slam, it is your duty to advise partner of this. The surest way to get your message across is with a jump shift, and the only one that presents itself is a jump to three clubs. Don't worry about partner raising clubs; you can return to hearts at the same level. If partner bids three no trump over three clubs, a simple four hearts will be adequate to complete the description of your hand.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ105 ♥A4 ♦954 ♠J876
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Because of partner's reverse, you are again in slam territory. The principle is the same as in the above — you flash the signal to partner by jumping. Here, the obvious jump is to four clubs. Since you have bypassed three no trump, you must be expressing slam interest.
Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ1062 ♥A98 ♦73 ♠854
 Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—Don't let that fifth spade talk you into doing something rash. You have a relatively balanced hand worth 9 points in support of spades — no more. That qualifies your hand for a sound raise to two spades. Anything else would be foolhardy.
Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A1076 ♥5 ♦J952 ♠AQ95
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 3 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your hand revalues to about an opening bid, and an opening bid facing a hand that has opened and jumped is in the slam zone. So it is simply a matter of orderly investigation. Start off with a cue-bid of four clubs. That will convey your intentions. Thereafter, all further moves are up to your partner; you have done your bit.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ782 ♥85 ♦7 ♠K8752
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♥ Dble 1 ♦ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—It looks as if East is taking advantage of the vulnerability to engage in a bit of psychic bidding. If he has spades, where are all the hearts? Partner surely isn't doubling with shortage in spades and heart length. The way to expose him is to start off with a double, then jump in spades yourself.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A84 ♥K5 ♦Q5 ♠KQ10652
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your hand is worth a shot at game, but we do not suggest that you bid three no trump. It is a sound principle that, when contracting for a close game, the stronger defensive hand should be on lead — you could gain a trick or tempo from that if partner had as little as J-x in spades. So we would cue-bid three spades to give partner the chance to convert to three no trump.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are living in the same house, but we have no marriage. I work full-time. He hasn't given me a dime in years.

Our single daughter, age 25, and her adorable 7-year-old son live with us. "D." is on welfare. She is also on drugs. Every dime she makes goes to support her habit. She is a lousy mother.

My son insists I sell this big house. He says it's foolish to cook, clean and wash clothes for a man I no longer care for. I'm always broke and just plain miserable.

When I move, I don't want "D." to come with me. I would gladly take my grandson, but she wouldn't allow it. She'd probably move in with some hophead and I'd be worried sick about the boy.

How do I get out of this mess and still sleep at night? — DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Sell the house, move to smaller quarters. Take your daughter with you. Urge "D." to go to Alcoholics Anonymous.

Because government funding has been cut, many drug abuse centers have had to fold. Alcoholics Anonymous is filling the void in a magnificent and highly successful manner.

For you, I recommend Families Anonymous. This organization is a support group for relatives and caring friends whose lives are being disrupted by someone (most often a teen-ager) who is abusing some substance (drugs or alcohol) and creating the related problems that raise havoc with family life.

Families Anonymous is a self-help group, like AA, free and open to all who wish to attend their meetings. The philosophy is to change your approach to the drug abuser, get off his or her back, make him responsible for his behavior, be more loving and less condemnatory.

Anyone interested in learning more about Families Anonymous should write to the national headquarters, P.O. Box 344, Torrance, Calif. 90508. Or, phone 213-775-3211. (This is NOT a free call, but it may be the best money you ever spent.) Good luck and God bless.

Brian J. Whitaker and Donna Soto-Moretini in "Sweeney Todd."

'Sweeney' a musical assault

By TOM TITUS
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Sweeney Todd could be a real pain in the neck, and the musical chronicling his bloody exploits in the barber shop is not for those faint of heart or squeamish of stomach.

The UC Irvine drama department, in a definite coup, is presenting the nation's first production of "Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street" since the show's post-Broadway tour. The abbreviated engagement runs Tuesday through a closing performance Saturday at UCI's Fine Arts Village Theater.

It's a powerful and unsettling experience noticeably lacking in comic relief, save for a few choice moments late in the first act and early in the second. Composer-lyricist Stephen Sondheim leads a musical assault on the audience of near-operatic proportions and his hard-driving score is relentless in its thrust.

At UCI, director Robert Cohen and musical director Irvin Kimber have teamed for a brilliantly executed (no pun intended) production. The only flaw in the show is the indistinguishability of the chorus' lyrics — at least in the back row. It's not that they're drowned out by the music; they just can't be understood.

Audiences may find themselves on the horns of a moral dilemma as far as personal sympathies lie. Sondheim's hero, a barber victimized by unconscionable injustice, becomes a Charles Bronson-like avenger, wielding an indiscriminate razor while his widow companion prepares meat pies downstairs from the cadavers produced upstairs. In short order, the hero turns into the villain.

In the title role, Brian J. Whitaker is outstanding, a formidable presence whose effect on others, and the audience, is almost hypnotic. Whitaker does an exceptional job with a part written in a single, vengeful key. One does not have to empathize with him to appreciate him.

If there is a shred of comedy in "Sweeney Todd," it is gobbled up by Donna Soto-Moretini as the woman who cooks the "world's worst meat pies" and falls readily in with the idea of changing her recipe. Hers is a lusty, lively performance brimming with all the humanity her partner lacks.

Christopher Nilson is splendid as the young sailor in love with Todd's beautiful daughter, strikingly portrayed by Pippa Winslow. William Kerr is a formidable villain as the judge who keeps her sequestered, while John Cardone makes a lasting impression as the young helper who discovers the hideous plot.

Andrea Press turns in a haunting account of the beggar woman who becomes increasingly more crucial to the plot, while David Way and Barron Blackman impress in supporting assignments.

Technically, the UCI production is a masterpiece; with Laura Stowe's stark scenic design establishing a somber mood, and PJ Csanakas' elaborate platforms moving effortlessly in and out of their backstage "hangars," Christopher Burrill's subdued lighting sustains the ominous effect.

Curtain is 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday for this final week of "Sweeney Todd" at UCI's Fine Arts Village Theater. It's a show that underscores just how far the musical theater has come since "Oklahoma."

Sterling Hayden portrays his hero

Actor fiery abolitionist on 'The Blue and the Gray'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sterling Hayden was gazing out to sea — the sea that has lured him during much of his lifetime.

"There's Catalina," he said, pointing to an island in the Pacific Ocean from the 17th-floor balcony of his hotel room. "And there's Palos Verdes. Madeleine (Carroll) used to have a house there. She would pick me up at Paramount in her limousine with a French chauffeur. That was before we were married, and we had to be careful that we wouldn't be seen by the columnists."

Hayden was in Los Angeles publicizing the CBS miniseries, "The Blue and the Gray." He appears in the final episodes of the Civil War epic Tuesday and Wednesday nights as the fiery abolitionist, John Brown. It is an ideal role for an actor with a full beard, and who often has lived outside the normal boundaries of society. (Part two of the miniseries airs at 9 p.m. Tuesday on KNXT, Channel 2).

"John Brown was one of my longtime heroes, and it was with no little temerity that I accepted the role," Hayden says. "There are some things I am hesitant about, and playing a hero of mine is one of them."

I've been offered the role of Franklin Roosevelt, and I wouldn't presume to undertake it.

"Brown was something else," he said. Hayden said the script was well-written. "The words were so beautiful that I couldn't resist," he said. "I only worked two days, but the first day was the best I have ever spent before a camera. I was working in an Arkansas courthouse before 140 extras, and it felt awfully good. The best."

It is not surprising that Hayden feels an affinity for the firebrand Brown. The actor's own life has been full of turmoil.

He ran off to sea as a teen-ager, sailing for several years on schooners. A photograph of him was spotted by someone in the film industry in a magazine and he was lured to Hollywood.

During World War II, he served as a Marine in the OSS. It was after the war that Hayden quickly plunged into controversy: He testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that he had been a member of the Communist Party and he named others in order to avoid being blacklisted.

A few years later, he defied a court order and spirited his four children to Tahiti on his schooner.

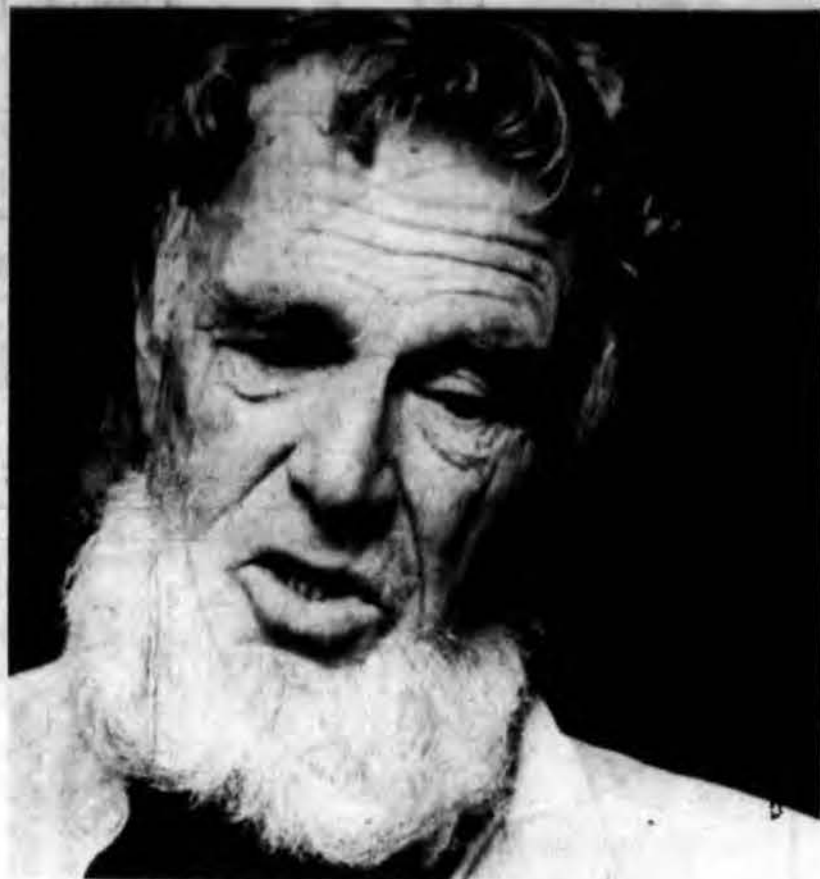

Besides acting, which he claimed to hate, he produced an autobiography, "Wanderer," in which he details his marriage to Miss Carroll and his fights with studios. He also wrote a sea novel, "Voyage."

During his 40 years in the public eye, the 66-year-old Hayden gained a reputation as a world-class drinker. That's over, he said.

"I haven't had a drink in 10 months," he says. "I'm an alcoholic, and I realize I can't drink any liquor. Sure, I miss it. But I know now that I can't function unless I stay dry. I found that out in a hospital I went to in the Midwest after I had cracked up."

"I didn't have a drink until I was 22 years old, and I didn't have a hangover until 1965," he said. "I really didn't give too much attention to what booze did to me; it seemed like a very natural thing to do. The last five or six years have been real bad — four-day binges, then four days to sober up. I was either cursed or blessed with a strong constitution, so I was able to withstand the punishment. But I can't anymore."

Sobriety has not improved Hayden's concept of the acting life: "My acting career is practically zero. I work maybe once a year, and often I'll take jobs because they offer good locations."

Sterling Hayden

Edison draws a wild card

Sunset pitted against Del Rey; Newport faces Norwalk

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Edison High has drawn another wild card entry, Fountain Valley won a coin flip and will host an old playoff nemesis (Loyola), Huntington Beach draws the Del Rey League's No. 1 entry (St. Francis) and Newport Harbor has drawn Norwalk in the first round of the CIF football playoffs.

Each of those four contests, as well as the majority of the first round, is scheduled for Friday night.

It's the Del Rey League vs. the Sunset League in the Big Five Conference, as Sunset League co-champion Edison duels Crespi at Orange Coast College, the Barons host Loyola at Huntington Beach and the Oilers tangle with St. Francis at Glendale High.

Angelus League runner-up Mater Dei has drawn Long Beach Poly (featuring the much sought-after Kirk Jones, a premier running back) and Coach Wayne Cochrun is trying for Santa Ana Bowl as a playing site on Thursday, because Jerry Witte's Saddleback Roadrunners have the Santa Ana Bowl tied up Friday night with their Central Conference duel with Artesia.

El Toro and Mission Viejo are in the same situation with the Mission Viejo campus the site for both schools — and a coin flip to determine who gets the Friday game was set for today.

It's much the same situation in the Central Conference in terms of league vs. league with the Suburban League's entries of Norwalk (against Newport), Bellflower (against El Toro) and Artesia (against Saddleback) pitted against one another.

GREG HENRY

JERRY WITTE

WAYNE COCHRUN

Newport Harbor's Sailors, 6-4 overall and boasting solid size in the front lines, will meet Norwalk at Excelsior High in Norwalk.

For the Sailors, it marks the first time since 1978 that they will make an appearance in the eliminations.

But for Huntington Beach, it's the first since 1966, and against a team which truly belies its 5-5 record.

St. Francis lost narrow decisions to such highly regarded teams as Pasadena, Long Beach Poly, Bishop Amat, Fontana and Crespi — five straight — much in the style that Fountain Valley dropped five in a row.

Since that skid, however, the burly Golden Knights have won four straight, including victories over Notre Dame, Alemany and Loyola the last three weeks.

"Very honestly," says Huntington Beach High

Coach Greg Henry, "there are some things we feel we can do."

"St. Francis plays a different style of play, sort of a traditional type of football. They line up in a straight 50 and play it tough, and their defensive backs don't do a lot of disguising in their coverages."

"They're big, but we haven't played anyone smaller than us."

The big question in the HB camp is the extent of running back Danny Thompson's knee injury.

Edison Coach Bill Workman noted that his team drew a wild card selection a year ago (Servite) and the Chargers' attack may be getting a shot in the arm with the return of linebacker Tony Johann if all goes well today with the removal of pins from his thumb.

Crespi averages 199 pounds per player among its starting 22 positions and among the heavyweights is two-way tackle John Kidder (6-6, 255) and end Lance Faria (6-5, 225).

The classic matchup, however, is the Fountain Valley-Loyola skirmish.

Steve Grady's Loyola Cubs were 6-0 at the outset and 8-0-1 before losing to St. Francis, 13-3, in the last round of the Del Rey League's black-and-blue sessions.

Loyola sent Fountain Valley packing in 1979 when the Cubs rolled to a 42-25 decision, and the 1977 playoff game was one of the more memorable in CIF history — a 21-20 double overtime verdict which ended Willie Gittens' prep career, in addition (See CIF, Page C2)

Cavaliers gain a little solace

But Lakers win anyway

By CURT SEEDEN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

INGLEWOOD — In defense of the Cleveland Cavaliers, well, even Clarence Darrow would be hard-pressed to talk in their behalf.

The NBA's worst team a year ago, which is working on that same title again this season, the Cavaliers came to the Forum Sunday night to face the World Champions.

While the results were predictable — the Lakers won, 111-98 — it really wasn't that easy a victory. The Cavaliers now 1-7, did plenty of things right to keep themselves in the game, but there were lots of no nos, namely 22 turnovers that once again made Cleveland look more like the Cadavers.

For the records, the Cavaliers have now lost 25 of their last 26 games dating back to last season. Only an overtime victory against Golden State the other night has left a blemish on their record.

What made this game so interesting was the statistical edge in both rebounding and shooting percentage departments which, in the end, went to the Cavaliers.

In fact, Cleveland out-boarded the Lakers 49-33, thanks to some hard-working big guys in the middle like Cliff Robinson and reserve Phil Hubbard.

But in the end, it was the 30 points from Laker forward Jamaal Wilkes and a very low 11 turnovers which helped Los Angeles gain its seventh victory against just one defeat.

Ironically, that one defeat was administered by the only team the Cavaliers have beaten — Golden State.

"They certainly made a concerted effort," conceded Laker forward Kurt Rambis. "They were all inside and they were really cutting down on our effectiveness on the break. The whole team was crashing the boards."

"When we play a team like Seattle, the coach really doesn't have to say too much," noted Wilkes, who was also the most productive player against Cleveland last year. "But it's games like this that make the difference between winning your division and almost winning your division."

Indeed, the Cavaliers were probably taken lightly by both the Lakers and the 12,806 fans who showed up for the contest. Yet despite holding a 32-18 advantage after the first quarter and a 57-46 lead at the half, the Lakers couldn't shake the pesky and, no doubt, hungry Cavaliers all night.

When reserves Mark Landsberger, Mike McGee and Clay Johnson don't make an appearance in the late stages of a Laker game, it's a pretty good bet Laker Coach Pat Riley isn't savoring a victory.

"I don't think any opponent is inferior. They're all pros," Riley said after the contest. "We're 7-1 and I'm just glad to be out of the blocks like this."

The Lakers' first seven victories have come over teams with a combined 13 wins this season. They have yet to be tested by a Philadelphia or a Boston or even Seattle, which, incidentally, is now 10-0 and still atop the Pacific Division standings.

"I'm not worried about Seattle. It's going to come down to the team which cracks first. Every game is significant and we want to win as many as we can now," added Riley.

The Lakers managed to do just that Sunday night as Wilkes pumped in 14 of his 30 points in the third quarter, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was hitting 11 of 15 shots from the floor on the night to finish with 25 points.

"It was just a good team effort tonight," explained Wilkes of the victory. "There's a danger of taking a team like Cleveland too lightly, especially when we're going on the road for (See LAKERS, Page C2)

Owners won't budge

New proposal doesn't stir management

NEW YORK (AP) — A report that the National Football League players union is drafting a new proposal isn't enough to bring the Management Council back to the bargaining table, Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, said today.

The New York Times quoted a player at union headquarters, who asked not to be identified, as saying the leadership was "preparing a package to give to the mediator."

But Donlan told The Associated Press the Management Council would not return to the table just to receive another union demand.

"We're not going to go back to the table just off the news that they have a new proposal," he said. "If they send a copy of a proposal over to us and it's something that's very close to what we have on the table, then it might be worth coming back. But just saying they've got something new doesn't excite us at all."

The New York Daily News reported today that the six-man executive committee of the NFL Players Association voted Sunday to accept the general framework of the owners' offer. Approval of the 26 player representatives would be necessary for approval, however.

David Sheridan, spokesman for the players association, said Sunday night that 26 player representatives had met "for a 30-minute informational meeting. No votes were taken."

The meeting did not start until 10:30 p.m. EST, after being postponed several times.

There were several indications Sunday that negotiations would not take place again without movement on the players' side.

"I don't think they will meet soon, not unless the ballplayers move further from the position they've already taken," said Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, after separate talks over the weekend with management negotiator Jack Donlan and union chief Ed Garvey.

MacMurray said he expected both sides "are going to have to let the pressures build up" before there is movement.

Meanwhile, Donlan said Sunday he has told mediator Sam Kagel that he saw no reason to have another meeting with Garvey. Kagel recessed the latest round of bargaining Nov. 6 after little progress was made.

At that time, Donlan made what he called a "bottom-line offer," a package the owners valued at $1.313 billion over four years, starting in 1983, and $60 million in bonus money in 1982. The union has asked for $1.1 billion over three years, starting in 1982.

Donlan conferred Sunday with Chuck Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots and chairman of the owners' executive committee.

Sullivan, asked if he felt the best interests of the league were being served in Donlan's rejecting Kagel's proposal to restart the talks, replied: "Absolutely. The meetings we had in Cockeysville Md., and New York were a waste of time. It created feelings in the fans and players that something was happening when, in fact, nothing was happening."

Garvey pulled a reverse of sorts last week by enlisting the aid of MacMurray in his quest to resume the negotiations.

OSU-Michigan to be aired

NEW YORK (AP) — Next Saturday's Big Ten college football game between conference champion Michigan and Ohio State will be televised nationally by CBS-TV although the game will have no bearing on the Rose Bowl for the first time since 1971.

The network announced Sunday that it will air the annual Big Ten showdown only because LSU turned down a request to move its game with Florida State in Baton Rouge from night to day for national TV. LSU, which traditionally plays its home games at night, had indicated that it would be willing to move for a national TV game, but later changed its mind, according to a CBS spokesman.

Champion prays for fallen opponent

From AP dispatches

LAS VEGAS — Lightweight fighter Duk Koo Kim clung tenaciously to life Sunday despite having no sign of any brain function, while a distraught Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini attended an impromptu Mass to pray for the South Korean.

"I pray for him and I ask the people of America and my family to pray for him," said Mancini, the World Boxing Association champion who knocked out Kim in the 14th round Saturday with a vicious right hand to the left side of the face. "I also pray for his family."

Kim, knocked unconscious by Mancini's savage attack, was being kept alive by life support machines in Desert Springs Hospital, said neurologist Dr. Lonnie Hammargren.

"There was no sign of any responsiveness," Hammargren said after examining Kim early Sunday. "What functions remain, we don't know."

Hammargren, who operated on Kim for nearly three hours Saturday night, said the fighter had a blood clot on the entire right side of his brain. He said the 23-year-old Kim took a turn for the worse during the night and indicated there was little hope for survival.

"You always try, you always hope," he said. "But it would be very unusual if he turned around."

Hammargren said it was "most probably the last blow" that tore a blood vessel in Kim's skull.

Adams, Lucas spark Phoenix

Alvan Adams, forced into the role of substitute by the flu, came off the bench Sunday night to score 22 points and team with Maurice Lucas and lead Phoenix to a 102-94 victory in Portland. Lucas, playing against his former team, added 21 points for the Suns.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Seattle guard Gus Williams netted 20 points to lead undefeated Seattle to its 10th straight victory, 102-99 over Houston. The Rockets remained winless in eight games. Cedric Maxwell sank one of two free throws to break a tie with 15 seconds left, lifting Boston to a 100-98 win over Milwaukee. Larry Bird canned 20 points, as the Celtics recovered from blowing a 16-point lead they had held in the second quarter.

Julius Erving scored 25 points and Moses Malone added 20 to carry Philadelphia past Washington, 102-93, in a nationally-televized game.

Quote of the day

John Johnson, on learning that he had been released by the Seattle SuperSonics after 12 years in the NBA: "Am I eligible for unemployment?"

Bourque, Bruins blast Blues

Defenseman Ray Bourque, playing in only his fifth game since a head injury, scored two goals and assisted on two others Sunday night in leading Boston to a 7-3 romp of the St. Louis Blues. The Bruins broke a 1-1 tie to go in front to stay on goals by Peter McNab and Brad Palmer just 65 seconds apart in the second period. Elsewhere in the National Hockey League, Wayne Gretzky had two goals and two assists to pad his league-leading total of 45 points, as Edmonton snapped the New York Rangers' five-game home winning streak with a 7-2 triumph. Gretzky has at least one point in every Oiler game this season. Pittsburgh's Dave Shelden tallied with 2:08 left to play to lift the Penguins into a 6-6 tie in Buffalo. Rookie Steve Larmer scored three goals, as Chicago nipped Minnesota, 5-4. Morris Lukowich netted two third-period goals as Winnipeg edged Vancouver, 6-5.

Pryor's use of stimulants denied

MIAMI — Aaron Pryor's physician denied allegations Sunday that the World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion used stimulants in retaining his title defense against Alexis Arguello.

At a news conference in which Arguello's agent announced that a formal protest had been filed, Dr. Ronald Cheeks of Cincinnati called the charges "ridiculous."

"I can guarantee there were no stimulants used in Mr. Pryor's water or inhalation or any other form," said Cheeks.

Arguello, sporting stitched cuts around his left eye, said he wouldn't question Pryor. But Bill Miller, Arguello's agent, said the protest was filed with the WBA on behalf of his fighter, but without Arguello's consent. It asks that the fight, stopped in the 14th round, be declared "no contest" and a rematch ordered.

"The basis for the protest is that obvious misconduct took place either before the contest in the dressing room and/or in the corner where champion Aaron Pryor was administered obvious foreign substances against the rules."

Waters fired at Michigan State

Michigan State football coach Muddy Waters was fired Sunday, the school announced. Michigan State beat Minnesota Saturday, 26-7, but the victory only improved the Spartans' record to 2-8 this season. Outstanding defensive play and the passing of quarterback Dieter Brock propelled Winnipeg to a 24-3 Western Division semifinal victory over Calgary in the Canadian Football League playoffs Sunday. In another game, Kevin Starkey's five-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter keyed a 30-20 Ottawa upset of Hamilton in the Eastern Division. Scott Hoch, winner of this year's New Orleans Open, won the Pacific Masters Golf Tournament in Gotemba, Japan, earning $65,000 and a Japanese car. Wayne Hardin, Temple University's head football coach, said he is resigning at the end of the year. Arvidas Sabonis, a 7-2 teen-ager, scored 25 points as the Soviet Union beat Indiana University, 87-77, in an exhibition basketball game Sunday in Bloomington, Indiana.

to finishing a 10-game winning streak for the Barons.

Loyola has the beef, too, with 6-6, 265-pound tackle Craig Kaminiski spearheading an offensive line which averages 221 pounds from tackle to tight end.

The defense averages 201 pounds, and that includes the secondary, so it's a very large obstacle in the Barons' way.

"Loyola is just a very big, physical, quick and skilled team," says Fountain Valley Coach Mike Milner. "They have a lot of blocking schemes and the defense is similar to Marina in some ways."

Seniors dominate the Norwalk offense, but in contrast to Newport's junior-oriented and sizeable front, Norwalk's Lancers get it done without a 200-pounder in the lineup.

Norwalk's offense has produced an average of 12 points a game aside from its 1-0 forfeit win over Glenn High.

In the defensive trench there are two juniors and a 155-pound sophomore counted on — and that defense has allowed 15 points a game aside from the forfeit over Glenn.

"It's the only league we didn't scout," said Newport Harbor Coach Mike Giddings, "so we don't know much about them."

Bob Bobkiewicz, a 6-1, 182-pound senior quarterback, has completed 100 of 238 passes for 1,193 yards and 7 touchdowns for Norwalk.

Bellflower spreads the defenses out with its double slot offense and quarterback Mike Wilson can hurt the opposition with his passing and running.

Artesia also is considered a small, but quick outfit, employing split backs.

South Coast League co-champs Mission Viejo and Capistrano Valley draw Loara and Hacienda Heights Wilson, respectively, in home assignments.

Loara's Jon Derakhshanian, a tailback-safety, is considered the Saxons' chief threat.

Volleyball teams draw home games

Corona del Mar, Laguna Beach, Mater Dei and San Clemente all draw home assignments for the quarterfinal women's volleyball 4-A CIF championship playoffs Tuesday night (7 o'clock).

Corona del Mar's No. 2 seeded Sea Kings face Bay League champion Santa Monica while Laguna Beach's No. 4 rated Artists are hosts to Sunset League champion Westminster.

Mater Dei's Monarchs, winners of the Angelus League title, will host No. 2 seeded Newport Harbor while San Clemente's Tritons host No. 1 rated Mira Costa.

In a small schools game, Mission Christian, the No. 1 rated team in that division, travels to Chadwick in Palos Verdes.

Corona del Mar, under coach Harold Noriega, had trouble getting started Saturday night against St. Joseph's but once the team started moving, it had little trouble in posting the victory.

"They got the best of us in the second game but the girls started pushing themselves a little harder and came back very strong," Noriega said. "When we got the ball to our hitters, we were virtually unstoppable and that's what happened in the final two games."

CdM will start Sea View League MVP Pam Lawrence (5-9 1/2, Sr.); Brooke Herrington (5-11, Soph.); Ilene Hess (5-7, Sr.); Kara McGuinn (5-11, Jr.); Mary Ann Mueller (5-11, Sr.); and Cammie Doder (5-9 1/2, Soph.).

Laguna Beach's Artists, like CdM a perennial contender for the CIF crown, has depth to its advantage. Mollie Merchant is the starting setter for Coach Bill Ashen's team with sophomore Brook Binley able to fill in without a letdown.

GWC needs win Tuesday

The Golden West College water polo team finds itself in an unusual position as South Coast Conference action enters its final week.

Coach Tom Hermstad's Rustlers, who have won the state community college championship the past four seasons, need a victory Tuesday against visiting Cerritos (3:30 p.m.) to put a lid on the conference title.

Golden West, 8-2 in conference play, is narrowly holding its head above water with both Santa Ana (8-3) and Cerritos (7-3) breathing down its neck.

"A win over Cerritos would put us in the driver's seat," admits Hermstad. "It's an extremely important game for us."

Mazatlan race completed

By ALMON LOCKABEY

Daily Pilot Boating Writer

When the yacht Intrepid crossed the finish line off Mazatlan Harbor at 9:19 a.m. Sunday it marked the windup of the 12th Los Angeles to Mazatlan race sponsored by Los Angeles Yacht Club.

There were 21 starters in the race and Intrepid was the 20th boat to cross the finish light at Creston Light. The other boat, Midnight Sun, abandoned the race at Cabo San Lucas because she was stalled in light airs and several of her crew had to return home.

Led by Richard Catlin's Samurai, the speedy, light displacement Santa Cruz-50s dominated the fleet and Class A in the final corrected time standings.

Following Samurai in the overall standings was Kirke Erskine's SC-50 Earl of Mar out of Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club. Saving enough time to edge into third place was the Class C yacht Brisa, a Choate-48 skippered by Dick Meine of Los Angeles Yacht Club.

Class handicap results:
CLASS A — 1. Samurai (SC-50) Richard Catlin, Stillwater, YC; 2. Earl of Mar (SC-50) Kirke Erskine, Monterey Peninsula YC; 3. Oaxaca (SC-50) Larry Burgin, Santa Cruz YC; 4. Night Train (SC-50) John White, Los Angeles YC; 5. Martin (Lee-67) Bill Lee, St. Francis YC.
CLASS B — 1. Revenge (Olson-40) Wayne Willenberg,

Pierpoint Bay YC; 2. Mimi B (SC-40) William Wilson, LAYC; 3. Miramar (79 ft. ketch) John Scripps, San Diego YC; 4. Notorious (Olson-40) Randy Greenfield, Windhamers YC; 5. Sumatra (Lapworth-50) Al Martin, LAYC.

CLASS C — 1. Brisa (Choate-48) Dick Meine, LAYC; 2. Heat Wave (Davidson-44) Dick Pennington, Long Beach YC; 3. Will Of The Wisp (Peterson 2 ton) Donald Wilson, North San YC; 4. Arriba (Choate-48) Ben Bennett, Balboa YC; 5. Inseparable (Neilson-Marek-41) Tom Armstrong, California YC.

LAKERS . . .

the next few days.

The Lakers play back-to-back games Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in Phoenix and Dallas after playing six of their first eight games at home this young season.

And Riley is hoping Wilkes can continue to quietly go about his high scoring like he did Sunday evening.

"Tonight I felt like I was in a groove — not at the start of the game but certainly in the third quarter," Wilkes continued. "A couple of easy layups really helps your whole game."

Still, it wasn't quite as easy a victory as many would expect.

Robinson, the former USC standout, finished the night with 20 points, tying guard Ron Brewer for team scoring honors, and forward Scott Wedman added 18 in a losing cause — which is about the only way the Cavaliers do score.

LAKER DRIBBLE — The Cavaliers led on several occasions early in the game, but the Lakers went on top for good by scoring 18 of the final 20 points in the first quarter. Cleveland never got closer than seven points after that. The last Cleveland victory over the Lakers was a memorable one. It lasted through four overtimes and ended up 154-153 in Cleveland back on Jan. 29, 1980.

Ron Brewer was accidentally poked in the eye by Jamaal Wilkes in the waning moments of the game and did not return. He was later seen being assisted into the Lakers' training room for treatment. It is not known if the injury is serious. Both road games this week — Tuesday night's contest in Phoenix and Wednesday night's game in Dallas — will be televised by KJLH, Channel 9, beginning at 6:30 both evenings.

Faulty suits force NASA to scrub space walk

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Serious problems developed this morning with National Aeronautics and Space Administration's new generation, $2-million space suits and Mission Control canceled the long-awaited joint space walk by two shuttle astronauts.

It was the first test of the suits, which have had a history of development troubles that more than doubled their cost.

NASA officials were considering the possibility of extending the shuttle mission for one extra day, to Wednesday. But morning-long efforts to fix the problem led nowhere and the astronauts were preparing to return Tuesday, as originally scheduled.

Shuttle manager Glynn Lunney told reporters, "We still feel very good about this flight," noting the crew last week had accomplished its main mission — deployment of two commercial satellites. But he readily conceded, "We're disappointed"

by the suit failures.

One suit, worn by Joseph Allen, had a bad oxygen fan, and its balkiness — a "motorboating" sound — was clearly audible to Mission Control. The trouble with the second suit, donned by William Lenoir, could only be seen on a gauge. Officials said a regulator indicated low pressure.

After Allen's fan broke down, officials wanted Lenoir to test his suit in a space "standstill" by moving out into Columbia's airlock, the ship's doorstep to space. That also had to be scrubbed.

"This isn't our day for suits," said Allen, who had rehearsed the two-man space walk for month-after-month in water-tank simulations.

"Good try but no cigar," said Robert Stewart, the ground communicator. "You know how Monday mornings are." The scrub came an hour before the 4:50 a.m. PST space walk was to have begun. The astronauts were never in danger, and even if the problems had occurred after the walk had begun, Lunney said there would have been time to safely end the walk.

The suits were developed by Hamilton Standard Division of United Technologies under a $46.9 million contract covering 43 suits and 13 life support systems. Problems, including an oxygen fire in an unmanned suit and a pressure leak because of failed stitching, contributed to cost overruns that pushed the actual price to more than $107 million.

"We'll be right back," Lunney added, saying the walk might be rescheduled on one of three flights planned in the first half of next year. NASA would like to have this experience before committing an astronaut to maneuver away from the ship with a thruster-powered back pack on flight 11 in 1984.

The space walk was the only disappointment of NASA's fifth shuttle flight.

Who'll have the last lap?

By KAREN E. KLEIN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

One night in November, 1974, John Gardner had a crazy dream. He dreamed he was sitting in a department store somewhere with a woman sitting on his lap and a crowd gathered around him.

Everyone has had crazy dreams. But not very many people think of carrying them out, much less making personal crusades out of them.

But John Gardner's not just anyone. Gardner turned his eight-year-old dream into a reality and into his life's greatest adventure. He became the world's official lap sitter. He wrote and published the world's only book on the same subject. He called it, "The Iron Lap."

When he woke up that morning in 1974, Gardner had no idea he'd ever really live out his dream. But he just couldn't shake the feeling that the dream was to be his destiny.

So, on Feb. 1, 1975, his wife, Jean, became the first person to officially sit on his lap and record her name in his lapbook. His daughter, Karen, who was one at the time, became number two.

As of Thursday, 94 months and over 7,000 sittings later, Gardner was still continuing to follow what he calls his "G-rated serendipity."

"Even if I don't get anything back from it, I have no regrets in following my dream," Gardner said. "I've met people from all over the world. This is my thing, my dream, and I just had to take it to the limit."

Gardner has spent $3,800 of his own money on his lap sitting project and $2,500 on his book. (See LAP SITTER, Page A3)

Shelter needs help

Pet facility must have volunteers to stay 'life oriented'

By JOEL C. DON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

WANTED: Volunteers for the Laguna Beach Animal Shelter. Lovers of dogs, cats and other assorted critters preferred. No experience necessary.

City officials have long been proud of a good record for finding owners of lost pets or homes for stray or unwanted animals.

But that humanistic effort may be in jeopardy if the shelter can't get enough volunteers to help out at the Laguna Canyon facility, according to Nancy Goodwin, animal shelter manager.

She said the shelter needs a minimum of 14 people to donate their time for three-hour shifts in the morning or afternoon. The animal center has 12 volunteers, but will lose half that number at the end of the month.

"It's through the volunteer effort that we're able to stay life-oriented," she said, noting the shelter manages to save 98 percent of its temporary boarders from destruction.

Goodwin explained volunteers are essential to the operation because they help answer telephones, check inquiries about lost pets and, most important, set up animal adoptions.

The shelter is staffed by one full-time and two part-time workers.

"We try to find homes for the animals but there never is enough help," Goodwin said. "We work very hard at adopting anything that comes through."

Animals are fed and cared for by the staff and volunteers are spared "the dirty work" jobs such as cleaning out kennel cages and decking, she noted.

However, volunteers may ask to help groom or exercise the animals. (See SHELTER, Page A2)

Andropov pledges better U.S. ties

MOSCOW (AP) — New Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov met with Vice President George Bush after the Brezhnev funeral today and pledged that his country is ready to work for better relations with the United States on the basis of "full equality," Tass reported.

The Soviet news agency said U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko also sat in on the Kremlin meeting, which took place just hours after the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev was buried in Red Square.

Bush, leading the U.S. delegation to the funeral, earlier issued a statement calling for a reduction in "today's massive expenditures for arms."

Immediately after the funeral,

Bush went to a Kremlin reception, where he shook hands and chatted briefly with Andropov, who was chosen to succeed Brezhnev as Communist Party general secretary, the Soviet Union's most powerful position. Their formal closed meeting came afterward.

Tass said the American vice president expressed condolences to Andropov on Brezhnev's death and the Soviets expressed gratitude "for the respect which was shown by the American administration."

The two sides also had a "brief exchange of opinion on key questions of Soviet-American relations," the report said, but it did not detail what topics were discussed.

Laguna to weigh building heights

The Laguna Beach City Council is expected Tuesday night to request a review of building height regulations.

The council wants the planning commission to look over the situation because some builders apparently have managed to exceed the city's 36-foot limit for commercial and residential structures.

Current zoning regulations call for building height to be measured from the curb adjacent to the front of the property. Because of Laguna's sloping terrain, some builders have taken advantage of lots that have frontage on two streets, said City Manager Ken Frank. In those situations, height has been measured from the highest curb, permitting buildings as high as 60 feet when facing the structure from the lower curb.

"A number of the council members believe there are some buildings that have been built too tall," he said.

The city council also plans to appoint two members to the Board of Adjustment, a group that regulates zoning ordinances and oversees the design of commercial structures and some single-family homes.

The council has received five applications for the posts, including one from board member John Hefti. Ralph Yates has decided not to be considered for another two-year term. Other contenders to the five-member board include Clyde Lane, Margarita Parker, Wayne Peterson and Yana Ruzicka.

In other business at the 6 p.m. meeting at City Hall, council members are expected to approve a 10-cent boost in city parking meter rates to 30 cents per hour. The city also will review its cable television task force report on public access to equipment and services through its franchise with Storer Cable TV.

More bull than fight in Mesa

About 1,200 angry ticket holders expecting to see a bloodless bullfight Sunday at the Orange County Fairgrounds were turned away red-faced when the fight was unexpectedly canceled.

About 18 Cosa Mesa police units were called to the grounds to help control order when the fight — scheduled to go on at 4 p.m. — was canceled at 7:30 p.m. No one was arrested.

Fairgrounds manager Ken Fulk said the bullfight was canceled Sunday when promoter Ruben Bohorquez said he didn't have enough money to pay for the bulls or the matadors.

Bohorquez turned away about 300 fans Saturday, saying that the arena was too soft. He told them to return Sunday, Fulk said.

Fulk said that only a handful of the spectators Saturday received refunds on the tickets that ranged in price between $5 and $30.

No one received refunds Sunday. Bohorquez told fairgrounds officials that about $5,000 to $6,000 was missing from the cashbox Sunday and he had no money for refunds.

Fulk said fairgrounds officials requested that Bohorquez be detained by Costa Mesa police to determine if an unlawful act had occurred. No arrest was made.

Bohorquez said spectators could receive refunds today from his office at 541 S. Spring St., Suite 306, Los Angeles.

OCTD saves 2 proposed Coast cuts

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Responding to complaints of area residents, Orange County Transit District directors saved service today on several bus routes originally recommended for elimination.

The directors, on a 3-2 vote, agreed to save one of two daily round trips on an express route from San Clemente to Fullerton on Line 201. They also agreed to save the daily round trip from Fullerton to Newport Beach on Line 204.

Also saved was one of two daily round trips on Line 291 from San Clemente to Santa Ana and one of two daily round trips on Line 209 from San Clemente to Cal State Fullerton. Line 202, originally from San Clemente to Orange, will now run from Laguna Hills to Orange.

Proposed cuts in Saturday Dial-a-Ride service were not discussed at this morning's meeting. The directors agreed to discuss that proposal at the next meeting in December.

Several other routes serving the Orange Coast were eliminated by the directors, reflecting an earlier recommendation from OCTD staff.

Those routes include Line 71 from Buena Park to Huntington Beach, Line 93 running through Mission Viejo and Laguna Hills, and Line 206 from Newport Center to Mission Viejo.

Directors said that keeping the routes that were not cut would save the district about $126,000 less than had been anticipated. The cuts still are expected to save at least $1.46 million in annual operating costs.

OCTD officials, citing figures that showed both ridership and passenger-generated revenues below expectations, originally had called for the elimination of four local routes, seven express routes and Saturday Dial-a-Ride service.

Statistics for the first quarter of the current July 1-June 30 OCTD year showed a ridership total of 7.9 million passengers. The budget for the year had been drawn up with the expectation that 8.3 million passengers would use OCTD services during the quarter. OCTD General Manager James Reichert said revenues also were down because local sales tax collections, payments from which support about half the transit district's budget, were lower than expected due to a sluggish economy that slowed retail sales.

Despite those problems, many residents who use the lines proposed for elimination, especially Dial-a-Ride users, voiced strong objections to the cutback proposals at a Nov. 1 public hearing.

Those affected said other, unspecified, alternatives to the route reductions should be considered.

One fumes victim still hospitalized

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A single victim exposed to a cloud of toxic gas that escaped Friday night from an Irvine manufacturing plant remained hospitalized today in Newport Beach.

Benjamin Aquino, 55, was listed in stable condition at Hoag Memorial Hospital. He was one of five people admitted to local hospitals after ethylene oxide leaked from a ruptured pipe at Bentley Labs Inc. at 9:37 p.m. Friday.

Another of the victims, Irvine police Sgt. Phil Povey, was released Sunday from Western Medical Center in Santa Ana. Bentley Labs, at 17502 Armstrong Ave., lies within the industrial and commercial area bordered by the San Diego and Costa Mesa-Newport Beach freeways, Barranca and Jamboree roads.

More than 1,000 employees working night shifts in all of the plants within that eight-square mile district were evacuated Friday because of the danger of exposure to the gas.

Most of the workers came from such large industrial plants as Smith Tool and American McGaw Labs, said Irvine police Lt. Bob Lennert.

Businesses honored for support of arts

Eight Orange County businesses and affiliates were honored Sunday night for the contributions to the arts at the first awards ceremony of the 18-month-old Orange County Business Committee for the arts.

Four non-profit organizations also received awards at the ceremony conducted at the Ritz restaurant in Newport Beach.

In the large-size business category (more than 500 employees), honors went to Chevron Oil Field Research Co.; Disneyland; Fluor Foundation, an affiliate of the Fluor Corp., and Mission Viejo Co.

Chevron was cited for its support of the Orange County Pacific Symphony Orchestra, while Disneyland was praised for initiating the "International Very Special Arts Festival."

The Fluor Foundation was lauded for its grant of $2 million to the Orange County Performing Arts Center and 23 other cultural arts groups, while Mission Viejo Co. was cited for its support of South Coast Repertory and numerous other arts organizations.

In the medium-size business category (50 to 500 employees), honors went to the Daily Pilot and Irvine Mirror; Deloitte, Haskins & Sells, and C.J. Segerstrom and Sons.

The Pilot and Mirror were cited for providing an advertising training seminar; Deloitte Haskins & Sells for contributions of space, services and corporate talent, and Segerstrom and Sons for land donations for South Coast Repertory and the performing arts center.

In the small-size business category (less than 50 employees), the award winner was Deepwater Chemical Co. for its support of South Coast Repertory.

Awards for Cultural Arts went to South Coast Repertory and Stop-Gap, a non-profit theater designed, according to the awards committee "dedicated to building communication bridges between people in order to overcome gaps created by age and disability."

Special Category Awards went to Chapman College and KOCE Channel 50, Huntington Beach, the county's public television station.

The Business Committee for the Arts was founded in June, 1981, by David Tappan Jr., president of Fluor Corp. and other county business leaders.

U.S. summary

Snow stretched from the upper Midwest across much of the Ohio Valley early today, becoming rain as it reached the mid-Atlantic states.

The snow spread across the Great Lakes region and the upper two-thirds of the Ohio Valley. The snowfall was light except at a few spots along the lower Great Lakes.

Snow gave way to rain over the Carolinas, Virginia and along the mid-Atlantic coast.

A few rain showers, meanwhile, hovered over southern New England.

The mercury registered in the teens in the Texas panhandle, and over the upper Mississippi Valley to the western Great Lakes.

Light snow was forecast later today across New England, rain was expected over western Washington, and cloudy skies were predicted over the rest of the Pacific Northwest. There was a chance of showers in southern California, and sunny skies elsewhere.

California

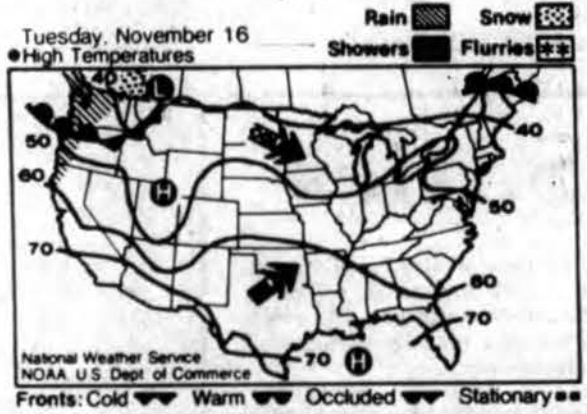

California's lift lines were jammed over the weekend as skiers frolicked in the residue of last week's heavy storm and the National Weather Service predicted light rain was on the way.

Rain showers were expected Tuesday throughout much of Southern California following the weekend's fall skies and warmer temperatures. A slight cooling trend was expected in the Los Angeles area, but highs Tuesday should be in the 60s, the National Weather Service says.

As snow lingered in prime skiing areas over the weekend, rescue workers Sunday found a missing Illinois man who had been trapped in his camper near the crest of Pine Mountain Ridge since Tuesday's storm hit.

Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Anthony Grace said early today Thomas Scheltens, 28, of

'Strangler' trial hits one-year mark

With no end in sight, jury will celebrate anniversary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Court will recess early Tuesday in the "Hillside Strangler" case because the jury is having an anniversary party.

It's been one year since the mass murder trial of Angelo Buono brought them together, and the end is not in sight.

"Our last estimate, when we sat down to talk about it, was that it would end in February," Deputy Attorney General Michael Nash said. "But I think it's going to go a few months longer than that."

The star witness, confessed "Hillside Strangler" Kenneth Bianchi, has been on the witness stand for six months giving frequently conflicting stories of the murders of 10 young women and girls which he has blamed on Buono, his cousin.

Bianchi confessed guilty to five of the slayings in return for being spared the gas chamber.

Superior Court Judge Ronald George, who also faces an effort by the defense to abort the trial, maintains a cheerful acceptance of the proceedings' marathon length.

"I thought it would be done within a year," he said with a smile. "But I've lost my capacity to be surprised at anything in this case."

George said he's grateful for the dedication of jurors, who have not been sequestered. The eight women, four men and six alternate jurors have become like a family — holding birthday parties in the jury room and snapping Polaroid pictures of each other for scrapbooks.

It took three months to seat a jury because of the expected length of the trial.

"It's really renewed my faith in the jury system," George said. "They are a very cohesive group and some of them have come to court even when they were coughing or not feeling well. They take notes and pay attention. I'm impressed with their stability."

Only two jurors have had to be replaced by alternates since the trial began — one man who had a health problem left at the outset and a woman juror had to return to work when her family suffered financial reverses.

One person in court every day

Angelo Buono

is more disturbed than others about the duration of the trial. Buono, the 48-year-old defendant, emancipated after two years in jail, seems to slump lower in his chair each day, glaring silently across the courtroom at Bianchi, seated glumly on the witness stand.

Defense lawyer Katherine Mader said Buono has been particularly upset by recent defense discoveries indicating a key eyewitness called to corroborate Bianchi, Markust Camden, had spent time in a mental hospital.

"How is Angelo?" Mader responded to a questioner. "He is furious, frustrated and bitter" that two men whose mental stability has been questioned have kept him in custody for two years.

Bianchi has contradicted himself repeatedly during testimony implicating Buono in the murders. Buono steadfastly denies involvement in the killings. At one point, Bianchi said neither he nor Buono was involved in the killings, then described tortures and strangulations, insisting Buono was his partner. He also changed details in his accounts of how he and Buono allegedly committed the crimes.

Buono "wants it over with," Mader said. "He knows he didn't kill anybody and he wants to walk out of here."

But Mader and another

defense lawyer, Gerald Chaleff, say they must point up every possible conflict in Bianchi's story if they are to win Buono an acquittal.

"We have to bring out every point where he is inconsistent," says Mader. "We would be negligent if we didn't."

Chaleff is in his 13th week of cross-examining Bianchi. The prosecution questioned him for seven weeks, and additional weeks were spent playing videotapes of Bianchi's interviews with psychiatrists.

Before Bianchi took the stand, the prosecution had called more than 200 other witnesses. Nash said about 60 more will testify before the case is turned over to the defense.

Chaleff and Mader aren't saying how many witnesses they will call, except to say there will be "a lot."

Meanwhile, they are trying for a mistrial on grounds that information regarding Camden's mental history was withheld from them. At a hearing last week, detectives testified they knew Camden had been in a mental hospital and relayed that information to the prosecution.

However, it was never mentioned when the witness testified and the defense lawyers say they were never told.

The hearing continues Thursday, and George said he expects to make a written ruling on the issue shortly after Thanksgiving.

But it appears unlikely after all this time that he would order a mistrial before the case is placed in the hands of the jury for a verdict — probably next spring or early summer.

AT YOUR SERVICE

Travelers need right questions

By PAT HOROWITZ
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

DEAR PAT: Speaking as president of the Orange County chapter of American Society of Travel Agents Inc., I have a problem. How to get travelers who are shopping for bargain air fares to ask correct questions to get the right information from their travel agent.

With air fares changing daily without any advance notice, including advance notice to travel agents, it is important that air travelers give essential information to their agent when asking for the "cheapest air fare."

Tell your agent when you are going and when you are returning, enabling the agent to determine if your length of stay will qualify for a lower fare. If you are responding to an air fare you've seen in an advertisement, be sure to read everything in the ad: name of airline, type of fare, departure city, validity dates, and destination city. Tell the agent in which newspaper you saw the ad, and know the section and page number. In most cases, the agent will have a copy of the ad in the office. If a "friend" has told you about a bargain air fare, get the same information from him or her.

Keep in mind that all bargain fares are very restrictive in the number of seats sold at that fare. If you wish to book it, ticket it at the same time. Presently there are no cancellation fees for domestic air fares, only international.

When your agent "quotes" a fare it is only good at the time of the quote. It's possible that the fare could change or expire prior to your trip. Almost all bargain fares have an expiration date. Ask your agent when the fare expires when a bargain fare is quoted. And, it really is a disservice to your travel agent if you shop for a fare. With proper information, as detailed above, your own agent will be able to find the best travel bargain for you. Thanks for your help, and happy traveling to everyone.

R.A., Laguna Beach

Thank you for providing information that can simplify travel arrangements for both agents and travelers.

Area teams gun for finals

With the CIF women's volleyball playoffs under way, there is little change in the proceedings as far as teams from this area are concerned. The one big difference this season is that the No. 1 rated school is not from the area in the 4-A playoffs.

Mira Costa High, leader in the Ocean League with an undefeated league record, is No. 1 with Corona del Mar No. 2, Newport Harbor No. 3 and Laguna Beach No. 4.

Perhaps it's the fact that CdM lost to Rim of the World, the No. 1 rated team in 1-A and the defending Division II state champion and that Mira Costa defeated Rim in the San Marcos tournament in one game early in the year.

If all goes well, CdM, Newport or Laguna Beach will be among the entrants in the CIF Southern championships to determine a state finalist in Division I and Rim will be successful in defending its Division II title.

The CIF Southern Section playoffs end Saturday St with the Southern California tournament at Cal State Dominguez Hills on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 3-4.

The state tournament will be staged at Sacramento State Dec. 11.

FOR HIGH SCHOOL volleyball fans, Mira Costa gained strength this year when it was merged with Aviation High. Players to watch include hitter Barbara Fontana, twins Lee and Lisa Hoven and middle blocker Wendy Fletcher.

Corona del Mar has a highly skilled and experienced team with senior captain Pam Lawrence playing well on both offense and defense and being named MVP of the Sea View League. She is the team leader with sophomore Brooke Herrington paving the way at the net and Ilene Hess as the setter.

Newport, runner-up to CdM in the Sea View League, has an outstanding setter in Lara Asper, a 14-year-old freshman to go along with all-leaguer Mandy Kenny, Beth Price and Julie Evans.

Laguna Beach, under Bill Ashen, has a young team with two seniors, three juniors and one sophomore as starters. Included in the group are Cathy McKeown, Paula Berney and Cissy Weldon as outside hitters; Anna Reigal and Lisa Feigaus as middle blockers; and Jenny Englander or Molly Merchant as setters.

Volleyball in the state of California is running a close third to basketball and softball in popularity with high school players. There are over 22,000 high school girls playing volleyball and the sport has had the most dynamic growth of any sport in participation — 150 percent since 1966.

POLLY PLUMER, a graduate of University High and now a freshman at UCLA, set a freshman record in cross country this fall for the Bruins to go along with her national mark in the mile run set last spring.

Plumer, honored as the amateur athlete Headliner of the Year in Orange County last week, placed fifth in the Pac-10 cross country championships at Fresno last weekend and qualified for the nationals.

On the future, other than running for UCLA, she says: "I will run both the 1,500 and 3,000 in track in the spring and see what happens. Some poll had me among the contenders for the Olympic team in 1984 in the 1,500, but right now I prefer the longer race."

STANFORD UNIVERSITY has come into its own as a volleyball power this year along with cross country. The Cardinal is second to San Diego State in the WCAA standings in volleyball and will play USC's Trojans at Edison High Friday night.

One of the big reasons for the upsurge is freshman Kim Oden from Irvine High. Oden is among the conference leaders in kills, total attack and blocks. Her average is best in kills with 17.1 per outing in the most recent WCAA statistics.

McEnroe wins again

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John McEnroe is still winning as the United States tennis team prepares to defend the Davis Cup against France.

He downed Brian Gottfried 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 in the final of a Grand Prix tournament at Wembley Arena Sunday and has now won 49 sets in a row.

McEnroe will play in exhibitions in the United States this week and then heads for Grenoble, where the Davis Cup final is scheduled for Nov. 26-28.

"I must be pretty close to playing the best tennis of my career," McEnroe said. "Anyway, I am potentially at my best for next year."

"I am looking forward to the Davis Cup. I always enjoy the Cup matches because it is an honor to play for my country."

McEnroe has not dropped a set since Jimmy Connors beat him in the U.S. Open final in September.

The Wembley tournament was an important Davis Cup warmup for McEnroe. In the quarterfinals he scored a hard-fought straight set win over Henri Leconte, the brilliant 19-year-old French star who is likely to play him again at Grenoble.

Leconte played brilliant tennis at times but was not good enough to hold McEnroe on a medium fast rubber court.
