Storm chaos for victims

Residents seeking disaster center aid frustrated, confused

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The pounding surf and high tides are gone, but life isn't back to normal for Howard Hunter, a disabled retiree whose Sunset Beach home was flooded during the storm last month.

"We lost a lot of our electrical appliances, shoes, clothing and antiques," he said. "Anything that could be destroyed by water was — our tools, bicycle, typewriter."

John Angelini, who works at the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Center in Long Beach, has finally moved back into the Seal Beach duplex he was renting, now that the landlord has repaired the windows and put in new carpeting.

But Angelini has no bed and few other furnishings. The flooding destroyed the furniture he had recently purchased on credit.

"I'm still paying for things I don't even have now," he said.

Hunter and Angelini were among the first 50 people who visited the Federal Emergency Management Agency's Orange County disaster assistance center, which opened Monday at Mary Zoeter School in Seal Beach.

Assistance officials said the center will be open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily until all applicants are processed.

Frank Madden, a state official working as manager of the assistance center, said the Seal Beach facility was one of four opened in Southern California to aid victims of last month's storms. (The other centers are in Santa Barbara, Malibu and Del Mar near San Diego.)

Madden said he had expected a larger turnout, but said the number of applicants could swell as word of the assistance spreads. (See DISASTER, Page A2)

Coercion denied by Krishna defense

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Robin George was never coerced into joining, or remaining a member of the Hare Krishna movement, a lawyer for the group has told Orange County Superior Court jurors.

George was taken into the movement's temples partly because she told members she was being mistreated at home,

Los Angeles attorney Marshall Morgan said yesterday.

In his opening statement, Morgan painted a different picture of the Cypress woman's involvement with the movement — which each side agreed started with a visit to a Hare Krishna temple in Laguna Beach — than George's attorney had in his remarks Friday.

George and her mother Marcia are alleging in a $16-million lawsuit that Robin's involvement was the group in the mid-1970s resulted in her false imprisonment. Their lawsuit also claims there was emotional distress to the family that led to the death of Robin's father, Jim. Robin is now a 23-year-old graduate of Cal State Long Beach.

San Diego attorney

Milton Silverman, representing the Georges, said Robin was subjected to "a series of mind-bending, mind-altering exhortations" and other actions that broke her will and turned her against her parents after she joined the movement. She was 14 at the time.

But Morgan said the youth joined the movement "of her own free will." He said "there was no restraint on her whatsoever" to prevent her from leaving.

George's life in the Krishna movement "posed a dilemma for these people," Morgan said, because she was a minor but was claiming that one reason she wanted to stay with them was to escape abuse by her parents at home.

He said the Georges' story should be "played against the background of the constitutional right of freedom of religion and the constitutional right of the practice of religion."

"You may not like them (Krishna devotees) and you may not like the way they dress, but it's not a question of whether you're for or against an Eastern religion," Morgan said.

Layoffs facing coastal colleges

Coast Community College District administrators have unveiled a proposal to lay off approximately 100 full-time teachers and administrators. The layoffs would help reduce by one-third the $5.5 million budget deficit facing the district during the coming school year.

The plan will be considered tomorrow by the district's elected board of trustees. The board, which oversees operation of Orange Coast, Coastline and Golden West colleges, will meet in public session at 8 p.m. in the district headquarters, 1370 Adams Ave., Costa Mesa.

District spokesman Richard Simon said the proposed layoffs would affect about 114 district employees, but because some have the right to "bump" part-time employees for other jobs, approximately 95 people would be left out of work.

The layoff proposal was attacked last night by members of the American Federation of Teachers which represents the 640 full-time teachers employed at the three colleges.

Phyllis Basille, president of the local AFT chapter, said she is hoping a large turnout of teachers, students and community members will convince the board not to act on the layoffs. She said she hopes the trustees will examine other cutbacks suggested by teachers to save jobs.

Regarding the administration's proposal, she claimed that many of the teacher cuts are in subjects also taught via television courses, including psychology, biology, history and anthropology.

Other cuts are in nursing, theater arts and speech instruction.

Simon denied that television courses were a consideration in the proposed cutbacks.

Scott Buettner got on his knee to propose marriage and Tanya Reddick accepted.

A real valentine's surprise

Huntington man does marriage proposal 'up right'

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Scott Buettner of Huntington Beach has the spirit of old-fashioned romance.

He believes if you love a woman and want to marry her, there's no better time to propose than on Valentine's Day.

And Scott, 28, did it up right yesterday when he and Tanya Reddick, 23, also of Huntington Beach, dined at their favorite restaurant.

After they finished their meals, Scott softened Tanya up with a half-dozen long-stemmed roses, a box of candy and a bottle of expensive champagne.

A violinist hovered over their table, playing appropriate strains.

Then Buettner sprang into action, pushing aside the table and slipping to one knee.

"Oh my God, Scott, are you serious? I can't believe it," Tanya said.

But Buettner was undeterred. "I love you very much, will you marry me?" he asked.

She said yes, they kissed and onlookers applauded as the violinist played on.

Buettner, a graduate of Marina High School in Huntington Beach and USC, is a commercial insurance underwriter.

Reddick, who went to Marina High School, is graduating from Cal State Long Beach in June. She is a checker at a Westminster supermarket.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Businesses praise CM renewal plan

By JODI CADENHEAD
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Costa Mesa business leaders say they are enthusiastic about a report put together by a team of private urban planners aimed at revitalizing the city's aging downtown.

They said yesterday there is an "electrifying quality" waiting to be tapped in the commercial core.

However, some business people expressed concerns about proposals that would lead to demolition of their businesses and construction of a sunken freeway.

Costa Mesa Tomorrow, a group of downtown business owners, was to meet today to discuss findings released earlier this month by nine panelists from the Washington-based Urban Land Institute.

Peggy Reinert, president of Costa Mesa Tomorrow, said most retail owners in the 200-acre redevelopment area are enthusiastic about plans to revitalize downtown with new shops, landscaping and higher-density residential construction.

However, merchants interviewed yesterday unanimously expressed opposition to the ULI panel's recommendation that the state construct a below-street-level freeway along Newport Boulevard.

Reinert said business owners still support construction of the Costa Mesa Freeway (Route 55) along an adopted route that bypasses downtown and swings westward. The ULI-supported route would cause severe problems during construction, she said.

The city's Redevelopment Agency will meet March 28 to consider some of the panel's suggestions. They include:

— Increasing the current 8-acre "Superblock" at Harbor Boulevard and 19th Street, which would require demolition (See CM, Page A2)

Ocean View offer agreement looms

Tentative agreement on a new contract between the Ocean View School Teachers Association and the district has been reported in Huntington Beach.

The tentative agreement calls for approximately 500 district teachers to receive a 7 percent pay increase — retroactive to July 1 — and a 6 percent pay increase in 1983-84.

Additionally, district officials have agreed to adjust all teacher salary steps (automatic raises based on education level and years in the district) to the Orange County average.

District negotiators also agreed to add $300 to each teachers' fringe benefit package this year and next year.

Cost of this year's increases is estimated at $1.1 million.

The new wage package will increase the pay of the average teacher to about $25,865, officials said.

Tentative agreement was reached over the weekend, following around-the-clock negotiations Thursday night and Friday.

The agreement must be ratified by votes of the teachers and district trustees.

The Ocean View district is made up of 23 elementary schools in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley and Westminster.

DISASTER CENTER . . .

Storm victims were directed to various tables offering benefits such as temporary housing, unemployment aid, disaster grants and low interest personal and commercial loans from the Small Business Administration.

Madden cautioned that no applicants would leave with grant money or loans in hand. He said the applications must be processed and the damage inspected.

"We have to be very careful because we're dealing with taxpayers' money," he said.

Brian Odum, who was coordinating the SBA loan program at the center, said low interest loans would be issued based on the applicants' ability to pay and the ease with which they could borrow from the private sector.

He said 70 percent of the loans would be issued at just under 6 percent interest, but the remainder would be as high as 11 1/2 percent.

Still, some storm victims seemed a bit confused and frustrated by the paperwork.

Art Boynton was looking for help because the bottom half of the duplex he owns in Seal Beach was destroyed by the storm. He said the damage totaled $20,000.

After meeting with some of the assistance officials, Boynton said he wasn't sure whether he'd qualify for the loan he was seeking. He said he might have to pay an interest rate that is not much lower than commercial lenders.

"It's a little discouraging," he said.

Margery Murray, an 83-year-old widow wishing to repair her Seal Beach duplex, said she was seeking a federal loan because her bank was prepared to charge her 21 percent interest.

"I'd rob a bank before I'd pay that much," she said.

The Seal Beach assistance center was opened to permit residents to take advantage of relief services made available by President Reagan's designation of Southern California's storm-battered coastal area as a national disaster area.

Reeling from a $61,000 bill for their election last June, members of the Irvine Ranch Water District have decided to shift the district's 1984 elections from June to November.

The change is expected to reduce the district's bill for election services from the Orange County Registrar of Voters Office by as much as 84 percent.

It also means two members of the board of directors — E. Ray

Quigley Jr. and James Goodrich, whose terms expire in June — will serve an extra five months.

Al Olson, county registrar, explained to board members during their regular meeting last night that costs associated with the June primary are higher than other elections because ballots must be printed for six political affiliations.

The parties are Republican, Democrat, Libertarian, American Independent, Peace and Freedom and Independent.

In November, all voters receive the same ballot, so Olson said labor costs to compose the ballots and adjust the presses are six times less.

Of the water district's $61,000 bill, about $60,000 went for costs associated with printing, he said, adding that state reapportionment created more ballot types, thus more printing.

Officials noted that both the water district and city of Irvine initially agreed to hold elections in June so voters could follow both local races at the same time. But they said financial implications weren't considered then.

Board Chairman Peer Swan said shifting the elections will ensure less expense for the district and also a larger voter turnout. November general elections attract more voters than do primaries.

City leaders haven't decided whether to switch election dates. Irvine was billed $8,500 for its June 1982 election but Olson said expenses will rise because the water district won't be sharing certain printing costs.

New HB planner to take seat

John Erskine will take his seat tonight as the seventh member of the Huntington Beach Planning Commission.

Erskine is replacing Tim Paone, who announced his retirement recently for "personal reasons." Tonight's meeting starts at 7 in the city council chambers, 2000 Main St.

Erskine, 31, is director of government affairs for the Orange County chapter of the Building Industry Association, a home builders' trade association.

He formerly was a land-use specialist on Orange County Supervisor Harriett Wieder's staff. He also served as Wieder's alternate on the South Coast Regional Coastal Commission in 1981.

Erskine has been a resident of Huntington Beach for nine years.

South Laguna coast plan hits few snags

Despite some reservations by a handful of residents, South Laguna's local coastal plan has encountered little opposition before the county Planning Commission.

The plan, scheduled for a final commission vote Feb. 23, still must be approved by the Board of Supervisors before it is submitted to the state Coastal Commission. The plan governs all development in the South Laguna area.

Residents of several blufftop neighborhoods objected at hearings yesterday to providing coastal access for non-residents at nearby beaches. They claimed the beaches could not safely accommodate large numbers of people.

Also, several individual landowners living above Three Arch Bay protested the open-space designation proposed for land adjacent to their homes.

In one case, the commission promised an immediate remedy. Dr. Al Clark told the panel that the parcel on which his home is situated had been designated as open space in the plan. Commission Chairman William MacDougall said the designation was an error and would be corrected.

Parents plead for safety

4-way stop sign urged for Stone Creek students

Residents living near Stone Creek School in Irvine have made a plea for a four-way stop sign near the school to help their children cross West Yale Loop.

During a sometimes emotional session with the city's Transportation Commission last night, residents claimed a four-way stop at Stone Creek South is needed immediately before a serious accident occurs.

The corner currently has stop signs halting traffic on Stone Creek South but not on West Yale Loop.

Commission members, however, chose to postpone a decision on the sign until they hear from more neighbors in the new residential section as well as the city police representatives.

Some of the residents left angry. "We hate to point fingers, but we have to have this stop sign," said Steve Sanders, one of about 20 parents who attended the meeting.

The postponement actually came as a political benefit to the neighborhood group because a majority of commission members seemed willing to follow the advice of city traffic specialists to deny the request.

Commissioner Dana Hutchins was the most adamant. Hutchins said the city already pays a crossing guard to help school children cross the street. He said adding an additional stop on West Yale Loop would only offer false hope to parents and aggravation to drivers.

"If they don't think they should stop at a stop sign, they won't," he said.

Commissioner Steven Kuhn disagreed. Kuhn also is president of the Woodbridge Homeowners Association, a group that has backed the neighbors' plea for the four-way stop.

"We don't want any kind of accidents," he said. "But I would rather see minor, rear-end type accidents than a child struck by an automobile."

Chairman Alan Miller said he hoped more residents from the area would contact the city to express their opinions before the commission meets again Feb. 28 to discuss the sign.

Reactor down again at Onofre

The 1,100-megawatt Unit 2 reactor at the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station has been shut down again, this time because two air conditioning units in the control room failed an engineering test.

The $1.7 billion unit, which began low power testing last February, has been shut down a number of times for a variety of problems. A full power license was issued last September.

The latest occurred Friday when tests on two control room ventilation systems failed. The systems, which were modified last November, serve Unit 2 and the uncompleted Unit 3 reactor at the power plant south of San Clemente.

Russ Hawkes, a spokesman for Southern California Edison Co., major owner of the power station, said the ventilation systems are meant to keep the atmospheric pressure inside the control rooms at a higher level so no dust will blow inside.

The system is designed to prevent radiation and gases from entering the control rooms in case of an accident.

Hawkes said Edison engineers will "jam in a couple of other eholes during the down time." No startup date has been set.

He said the frequent shutdowns and startups of the new reactor are not unusual, adding, "It's like a new aircraft carrier. It's going to be constantly up and down during the startup phase."

"That's the nature of test programs," he said. The unit was operating at about 50 percent capacity at the time of the shutdown.

Conditions told for Mesa project

The City Council has been told that a proposed affordable apartment project can only be built if Costa Mesa reduces the price of the $1.6 million property and offers the builders mortgage-revenue bond financing.

The council directed Redevelopment Director Marilyn Whisenand yesterday to look into the possibility of using the county's revenue bond program and to consider increasing the proposed 50-unit family complex to 72 apartments.

Valley fire damages 12 autos

Twelve cars were damaged when flames swept through a carport at a Fountain Valley apartment complex early today.

The vehicles, including a 1975 silver Corvette, were virtually destroyed, according to Fountain Valley Fire Marshal Lynne Michaelis.

She said the fire, reported shortly after 4 a.m., broke out in the front seat console area of one of the cars at the Sundance Apartments complex, 10260 Warner Ave., across the street from Mile Square Regional Park.

Arson has been ruled out but the fire still is under investigation, Michaelis said.

said he would not be happy about giving up his shop on the west side of Newport Boulevard. He said he'd rather see walkways created.

Dana Vaccher, owner of Marvac Electronic at 1870 Harbor Blvd., said he would be willing to give up his shop for the sake of redevelopment if he were paid "fairly."

Vaccher said he was concerned that existing downtown merchants won't be able to afford the rental price of the new shops when they are built.

to obtain financing at lower-than-market rates.

By reducing the price of the city-owned land and offering the tax-exempt bonds, monthly rents for the two to four-bedroom units could be priced 25 percent below market rate at $456 to $575, Whisenand said.

Plans by Shapell-Coles Inc. to build the complex on land purchased by the city with federal community block grant funds have been stalled since last year, when the federal Housing and Urban Development program to subsidize construction was defeated.

If the financing scheme is approved, Whisenand said construction can begin this summer on projects at 1930 Wallace Ave., 2015 Pomona Ave. and 765 W. 20th St.

Man injured in Mesa crash

A Santa Ana man is in stable condition today at Western Medical Center following a traffic accident in Costa Mesa, police said.

Jose Angel Arevalo, 22, was eastbound on Sunflower Avenue yesterday, when he ran a stop sign at Main Street and slammed into another vehicle, police allege.

The driver of the other car, Danielle Difabio, 22, of Santa Ana, was not injured.

WEATHER

Coastal

Increasing high clouds today. Highs from near 68 along the beaches to 76 inland. Mostly cloudy tonight with a slight chance of rain or intermittent showers. Overnight lows 46 to 56. Partly cloudy on Wednesday and a little cooler with highs 60 to 70. Elsewhere, from Point Conception to the Mexican border and out 60 miles. Winds over outer channel waters becoming northerly 10 to 20 knots on Wednesday. Westerly swells 3 to 5 feet, increasing to 10 to 15 feet late tonight. Winds light and variable over inner coastal waters, becoming southwesterly 5 to 15 knots this afternoon and northwesterly Wednesday. Westerly swells 3 to 5 feet, increasing 5 to 10 feet late tonight. Wind waves 1 to 2 feet today. Partly sunny today but mostly cloudy tonight with a chance of light rain. Partly cloudy Wednesday.

U.S. summary

Central sections of the Atlantic coast were hit by high winds today and gale warnings were posted in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

Slight chance of light showers tonight

The winds stemmed from the remnants of a storm that struck the Carolinas and Virginia on Monday and then spun out to sea. Under clear skies, temperatures dropped rapidly overnight in the mid-Atlantic area and in southern New England.

Skies were cloudy in much of the southern and central Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region.

Parts of Texas had severe thunderstorms Monday night, with rain falling at the rate of an inch an hour. The heaviest rainfall was near Austin and San Antonio.

Showers and thunderstorms were forecast today from Texas across southeast Oklahoma and Louisiana into southern Mississippi.

Skies were expected to be cloudy from North Dakota across the middle Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region, but generally clear from 8 degrees above zero in Glens Falls, N.Y., to 87 degrees in Brownsville, Texas.

California

A Pacific storm brings a chance of rain and increasing surf tonight as coastal residents devastated by last month's storms line up for federal disaster assistance.

tonight, said Alan Thompson of the National Weather Service in Los Angeles.

A four- to six-foot surf was expected to increase to six to 10 feet Wednesday, but storms now moving across the Pacific were not likely to be as powerful as the series of storms that caused $94 million in damage statewide last month, he said.

Dozens of people whose homes were damaged or destroyed in January signed up at the Disaster Assistance Center in the Malibu Civic Center on Monday, seeking federal aid for repairs or replacing what was lost to angry seas.

The center was one of four federal aid stations opened this week in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and Santa Barbara counties following President Reagan's federal disaster declarations in 17 California counties.

Judith Soszynski said her family's Malibu home between the Pacific Coast Highway and the ocean at Black Rock had been heavily damaged.

"We had like $2,500 in the bank, and it's gone," she said. "We have no septic tank. Everything is ripped out everywhere. It's a mess. We're here looking for help."

Soviet ships cruising within 50 miles of Gulf

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A squadron of four Soviet warships has ended a two-month operation in the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico that at one point brought the ships within about 50 miles of the southern U.S. coast.

Navy officials said they were not sure whether the ships were nuclear armed. But they noted that Soviet warships are normally equipped with both nuclear and conventional armament.

3 robbers invade Army post

EL PASO, Texas — The FBI has been asked to investigate the wounding of two soldiers in a Fort Bliss nightclub by three robbers wearing gas masks and Army camouflage uniforms. The robbers also pistol-whipped a barmaid Monday and escaped — even though gates were sealed at the base where about 22,000 Army personnel live.

SALT LAKE CITY — Barney Clark spent his 76th day with a mechanical heart in a private room with a view of Great Salt Lake today, after his condition was upgraded from serious to fair for the first time since his pioneering operation.

Maureen Reagan renews ERA vow

RENO — Maureen Reagan celebrated the birthday of women's suffrage leader Susan B. Anthony with a call for a renewed struggle on behalf of women's rights. The president's daughter, speaking to a convention of Women in Business and Management, vowed Monday that there will be another Equal Rights Amendment. "It's not if, it's when."

President embraces new job plan

WASHINGTON — Two months ago, President Reagan threatened a veto when the Democratic House approved a $5.4 billion jobs program. Now he's embracing a $4.3 billion plan that contains many similar elements. Congressional sources reported Monday the administration's proposal includes $1 billion for local governments through Community Development Block Grants.

Tijuana bus drivers on strike

TIJUANA, Mexico — A strike by more than 400 Tijuana bus drivers enters its third day today, with about 80 percent of this border city's residents without public transportation. Drivers say their minimum wage of 455 pesos a day, slightly more than $3, is not enough in light of Mexico's soaring inflation rate.

County, Marines agree on fire pact

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A mutual aid pact has been expanded to allow firefighters from the Marines' El Toro Air Station to respond during emergencies anywhere in Orange County.

The agreement replaces a 2-year-old pact in which the military firefighters were dispatched to emergencies no farther than three miles from the base.

Under the new pact, signed last week, county paramedic and rescue crews for the first time also are available to assist on the base. The former agreement called for the county government to supply only firefighters upon request.

Fire chiefs Larry Holms from the county and Donald Mayers from the base described the new agreement as a logical way of increasing fire protection at little cost.

The military base uses three fire engines while Orange County has 71, said county spokesman Capt. Gary Stenberg.

The county Fire Department covers all unincorporated areas and contracts its services to several cities, including Irvine.

Under the agreement, Marine Corps firefighters automatically will respond to any calls within the three-mile perimeter of the base and also will assist if called to other emergencies, Stenberg said.

County crews will help at the base upon request.

HB blacked out by fallen limb

A falling tree limb severed a 12,000-volt power line in Huntington Beach yesterday, knocking out power to about 3,000 homes and businesses for 30 minutes.

The outage occurred in an area near Brookhurst Street and Adams and Atlanta avenues, according to officials at Southern California Edison Co. Traffic signals also were disrupted by the 1 p.m. power failure.

Bill Compton, Edison's West Orange County manager, said the outage occurred when a limb fell into the line as a resident was trimming a tree.

Compton said officials should be notified when trees pose a hazard. Company employees will remove the limb or assist the property owner in doing so, he said.

Compton said the unidentified resident will be asked to reimburse the company for costs of restoring service.

Millions spent to dig out East Coast

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The Blizzard of '83 was the Budget Buster of '83 for snow-removal funds of some Eastern Seaboard cities and states which are paying millions more than they had budgeted for digging out.

"God has been good to us, but occasionally he dumps on us," said New York Mayor Edward Koch.

That dumping will cost New York City about $5 million — $5 million more than it had left in its snow fund, the Sanitation Department said Monday. It will need a special appropriation from the Board of Estimate to pay for cleaning the city's 6,200 miles of roads.

Boston had the same problem. It spent $675,000 this weekend, bringing the winter total to $1.7 million. It had budgeted $1 million and hoped for a mild winter.

"It's the equivalent of going into an expensive restaurant with five bucks in your pocket," said Joseph Casazza, Boston public works commissioner.

Massachusetts spent $3 million to clear its roads, the last of the state's $10 million snow-removal budget, and Washington, D.C., spent more than $1 million — nearly all of the snow fund.

"We'll continue to do what is necessary to clear the streets and figure out later how to reduce in other areas of the budget," said Thomas Downs, director of the district's transportation department.

Virginia spent $9 million on cleanup, more than any other state. New Jersey spent $2.5 million and the bill was estimated at $1 million in Connecticut.

"It's the equivalent of going into an expensive restaurant with five bucks in your pocket."

New York City used 1,500 snow plows and four-wheel drive vehicles to dig out of the snow, up to 22 inches in some parts of the city.

As early as Saturday, the Sanitation Department has issued a blanket offer to rent any dump truck front-end loader, bulldozer or tow truck. About 115 vehicles responded and the city paid operators $40 to $50 an hour.

In Virginia, where there are 52,600 miles of public roads, the storm was the most expensive in recent years. The $9 million bill left less than $7 million in the state snow fund.

About 5,000 maintenance workers in Virginia worked in shifts over the weekend, using 3,000 vehicles. The state also rented 500 bulldozers and tractors from private citizens and companies.

Massachusetts, which spent $17 million cleaning up from one blizzard in 1978, had 3,500 snow-clearing trucks on the road Saturday.

"We expect the final cost for the season to reach $15 million or $16 million," said William Pizzano, spokesman for the Massachusetts Department of Public Works. The extra money will come from supplementary budget requests, he said.

Connecticut's snow removal fund was barely touched by the storm. The $1 million cleanup bill still leaves more than $9 million in the state's fund, said Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns.

In Maryland, 1,300 vehicles

Storms hit east, send rain on parade

By The Associated Press

A storm spinning off the Eastern Seaboard brought high winds and choppy seas to the Atlantic Coast today, as Northeastern cities strained local budgets in digging out from under the Blizzard of '83.

Meanwhile, Texas was hit by heavy thunderstorms Monday night and the weather service predicted rain on today's Mardi Gras festivities in New Orleans.

The storm off the East Coast caused high winds and tides in Carolina, along with scattered light snow or rain as far north as New Jersey earlier Monday.

For the Northeast, Monday was another day of digging out from the blizzard that struck Friday and Saturday from Virginia to Massachusetts.

The death toll from the blizzard, which dumped up to 3 feet of snow, had reached 89 by today — including 24 dead and 9 missing and presumed dead in the sinking of a coal ship in rough seas 30 miles off Virginia.

In North Carolina, ocean waters surged across Ocean Boulevard on Topsail Island, washing out several piers and gazebos, residents said Monday. High tide pushed across the north end of Ocracoke Island, and the weather service said there was a strong chance of serious beach erosion along the Outer Banks.

"It's the highest tide we've had since hurricane David" in 1979, said Louis Williamson, manager of Scotch Bonnet fishing pier on Topsail Island.

Two ferry operations remained shut down by high winds late Monday, state officials said. Two other ferries that were closed briefly resumed service in the afternoon.

Meanwhile, Jim Barry, director of New Jersey's Consumer Affairs Division, said his office had heard from 50 motorists Monday complaining that they had been overcharged by tow truck operators who removed their cars from snow-covered roads.

and 2,000 state employees worked throughout the weekend in 36- and 39-hour shifts.

There was no cost estimate, but Morris Zentz, of the state's Highway Maintenance department, said: "It's going to be a lot because Friday was a state holiday (for Lincoln's Birthday), so that's double time and a half." And weekend pay is at the rate of time and a half, he added.

State officials in southeastern Pennsylvania said they spent $1 million for labor, equipment and outside contractors. About 260 trucks and plows and 375 state employees cleared snow and spread 4,000 tons of salt and 5,500 tons of anti-skid mixture of cinder and salt.

About 900 state employees in New Jersey worked 12-hour shifts, operating 500 plows, graders, loaders and dump trucks. Of New Jersey's $2.5 million cleanup bill, about $1.5 million went to outside contractors.

GEM WISE

In my last column I welcomed your inquiries and questions about the appraisal service done in our Accredited Gem Laboratory in our store. I was surprised to find there was so much confusion about appraisal services. I was asked by several people if the Gemological Institute of America wasn't the last word in appraisals. The G.I.A. doesn't give appraisals at all. They do issue "reports" which have been called certificates by outsiders. Their reports identify gemstones and grade diamonds regarding color and clarity. They will not put a price on any piece of jewelry or gemstone.

More confusion comes from the many "independent" gem labs that have sprung up all over the country and have adopted names that seem to give them official or governmental association. In contrast to those so-called "independent" gem labs are others located on the premises of members of the American Gem Society... these are called Accredited Gem Laboratories and the following requirements must be met: The form must have a Certified Gemologist (not merely a Graduate Gemologist) in its employ. The laboratory must be at all times, under active supervision of a Certified Gemologist.

Accredited Gem Laboratory

The laboratory must be equipped with the following gem testing instruments, as a minimum:

Refractometer
Polariscope
Dichroscope
Gem Scales (accurate to .01 carat) and equipped for determination of specific gravity.
Diamondscope or equivalent magnifier employing a dark field illumination, capable of magnification of at least 30X.
Diamond grading lights.

At least 5 AGS Master Diamonds which have been graded for color on the AGS Colorimeter.

Source for ultraviolet light.
Leveridge Gauge.
Proportionoscope.

Adequate gemological library. In addition to the above minimum requirements of equipment, the laboratory must be operated in a professional and ethical manner. Any member who operates a lab in such a manner as to bring discredit upon the Society, by unwarranted discounting of a competitor's merchandise, or by any other unethical conduct, shall be subject to expulsion.

We are very proud to be certified by the American Gem Society as an Accredited Gem Laboratory.

Suspect had fraud, not murder, in mind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Newport Beach resident has testified he didn't kill a wealthy 80-year-old widow but admitted dumping her body in the ocean and pretending she was alive in order to "scam her estate." Lawrence Remsen told a Superior Court jury Monday that Thelma Gaston had died of natural causes when he found her body in her West Los Angeles home June 29, 1981. He is charged with murdering her.

Remsen, who said he was a companion and aide to Mrs. Gaston after he had filed for bankruptcy, testified that he devised a plot to convert her estate to cash while pretending she was still alive.

"The longer I could make people think she was around, the better chance I had of putting this . . . thing together," he said. "I figured I was going to get what I could get and leave the country."

Remsen said he was especially trying to complete the sale of a $1.4 million parking lot downtown before leaving.

He said Ms. Gaston had cut short a trip the two made to Las Vegas and returned home alone. He said upon his return he tried for two days to call her at home and finally went there when he could not reach her.

He found her on the floor

when he went inside the home, he said.

"I was just in shock. I thought it was a nightmare," he testified.

Remsen said he shut the door and went for a drink. He said a friend convinced him to bilk the estate by forging documents and volunteered to provide a notary seal.

Then, he said, he went back to the house, put her body in the trunk of a car and took her to South Laguna Beach, where he carried her to sea aboard an inflatable raft and dumped her.

Students fingerprinted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Voluntary fingerprinting will start Feb. 26 for the 280 students at the Prairie Street School in the city's Northridge area.

"We're stressing it for their protection," said Prairie PTA president Jo Ann Grofsky.

Schoolchildren are being fingerprinted in several states with the support of many PTA units, who see it as a way to help find children who are kidnapped or otherwise disappear. The Missing Children Act, signed into law last year by President Reagan, encouraged fingerprinting programs.

"Because we believe this is extremely vital to the safety of all children, we encourage the community at large to join in this effort," Ms. Grofsky said.

The fingerprints, which will cost $2 per child, will be placed on a special card to be given to parents for safe-keeping, she said, adding that any child fingerprinted at the school must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Playing card solar cells dedicated at largest plant

VICTORVILLE (AP) — Twenty acres of solar cells are aimed toward the sun, and electricity is now flowing from a unique power plant, billed as the largest of its kind in the world.

Looking like a field of giant square playing cards standing on end, their faces slightly tilted to the sun, the plant contains 960,000 photovoltaic cells that convert sunlight directly to electricity, according to Southern California Edison Co. and ARCO Solar, which owns and built the facility.

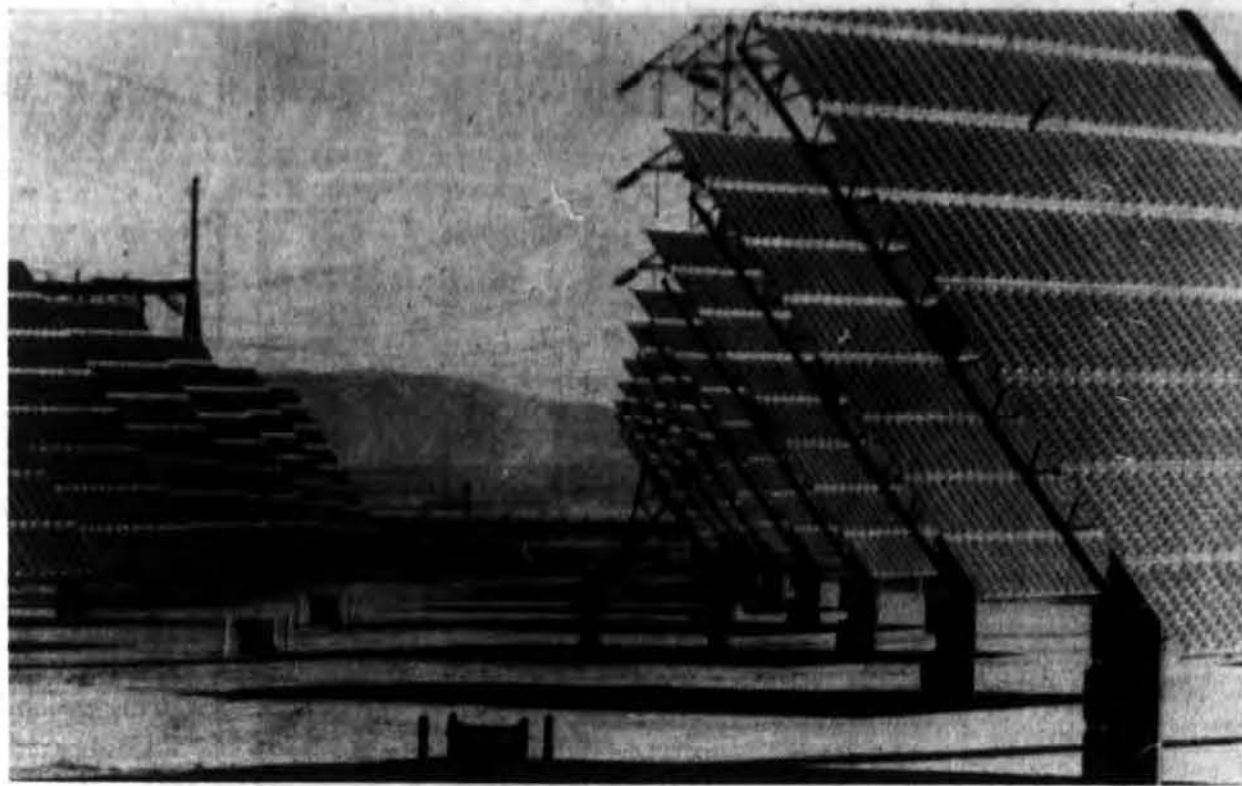

The squares, each 32 by 32 feet, are called trackers. Each can swivel 180 degrees to follow the sun for maximum solar exposure, said ARCO spokesman Al Greenstein.

The 108 trackers, lined up in 13 rows, are covered with the pancake-sized cells, flat silicon components that react to sunlight by producing electric current. Each cell is capable of producing one megawatt, or 1 million watts of power, enough to supply up to 400 homes at peak power.

"The plant is elegantly simple in its construction, operation, and, I would estimate, in its long-term maintenance," William Gould, chairman of Southern California Edison, said in a statement released yesterday.

ARCO Solar, a division of Atlantic Richfield Co., held dedication ceremonies today, but the plant 10 miles southwest of Victorville has been in full operation for three months.

The photovoltaic system differs from the more common thermal projects because it does not have to first heat water or produce steam to make electricity. Instead, the cells create a direct DC electrical current when hit by sunlight.

"We feel this photovoltaic system is the most cost-effective system around," Greenstein said.

However, the company is not divulging the cost of the plant. State and federal tax breaks for solar energy development amounted to 37 percent of the cost, he said.

The plant is located adjacent to Southern California Edison's Lugo facility, and feeds directly into the power supply for San Bernardino County residents, he said. It has no storage capacity and is designed only for direct tie-in to a utility company.

Construction began in June and was completed in October, with the solar cells produced by ARCO's Camarillo factory.

Previously the largest photovoltaic solar plant was in Saudi Arabia, Greenstein said, adding that ARCO's is three times as large.

The largest thermal solar plant in the world is also located in San Bernardino County, in the high-desert community of Daggett. The plant, a collection of giant mirrors surrounding a 300-foot tower, was built and is operated by Edison, the utility said. It can produce 10 megawatts of power, or electricity for 5,000 homes.

He said the earnings — a 71.1 percent rate of return — "far exceeded our expectations."

The earnings were made on $1.4 million from the city's employee retirement fund.

Upper Newport Bay rescue is imperative

The fate of Upper Newport Bay will be the topic of discussion tonight when the first of a series of public hearings is held at 7:30 p.m. in Newport Beach City Hall.

Text for the sessions will be a foot-thick report prepared by Boyle Engineering Corp. for the cities of Newport Beach and Irvine.

It offers six proposals for rescue of the mud-clogged bay, once a favorite recreation area for boating, fishing and water skiing, but now abandoned to flocks of migrating birds and occasional joggers or horseback riders who can find trails around the perimeter.

For years now, the bay has been absorbing up to 85,000 tons of silt, sand and sludge annually, all washed down by the San Diego Creek and built up by winter storms. Now the upper reaches of the bay have become a weed-filled mud flat.

The bay rescue operation was started last year with a $3.7 million dredging operation that included installation of two silt-catch basins in the creek. That is expected to cut the annual intake of silt by some 15,000 tons.

But it was just the beginning. To complete the rescue, says the Boyle report, it will be necessary to spend up to $7 million more to dredge out another million cubic yards of silt and create three new catch basins. And that would have to be followed by annual maintenance operations.

The proposals under study range from a $2 million expenditure for construction of the catch basins to a $10 million operation that would involve building a dozen catch basins in the Santa Ana Mountains where much of the silt flow originates. But the report indicates that the combination of three catch basins in the creek and further dredging would be the most practical approach.

There has been ongoing debate as to how much blame for the deterioration of the bay should be placed on developments around the creek and how much on run-off from agricultural areas and open land. The Boyle study found most of the silt came from undeveloped open areas, a similar amount from farmland and a much smaller percentage from construction sites.

This, undoubtedly, will be the subject of discussion by those who feel developers should take some responsibility for the clean-up job.

The first-phase clean-up was financed largely by the state through the Fish and Game Department which now owns the ecological preserve established in the bay some years ago.

Financing further operations would involve a search for federal, state and local funds, and no fewer than nine government agencies would have to be consulted before work could begin.

But begin it should. The deterioration of the once-lovely bay, which includes contamination of its remaining water with pollutants, as well as the silt build-up, has been going on for more than 10 years. Every year of delay compounds the problem. It is unthinkable that such a spectacular natural resource should be condemned when the rescue operation has just had its small but successful start.

Concerned bay lovers should try to attend the hearings, offer constructive suggestions, and plan on supporting whichever rescue operation is found to be the most feasible.

Mobile homes 'trap' seniors

To the Editor:

It may have to be "Back to God" for many of California's 1,100,000 mobilehome residents, since the "promised land" of mobile home living is proving to be America's "Venus Fly Trap." A trap where our seniors and others with moderate income have been lured to invest thousands of their hard earned dollars (their life savings) in what appeared to be a beautiful place to live.

The beauty is primarily credited to and created by the mobile home residents who take pride in their surroundings, plant flowers, trees, add colorful stones and drift wood, etc.

But, like the Venus Fly Trap, in the center of the park is the trigger which snaps the trap closed. With or without a rental agreement, the trap is sprung. The "beauty" as seen from the inside is not so beautiful. Slowly, the rent for your small space begins to increase, and at first you shrug it off like an outer garment. But the second increase compounds the first, and you suddenly realize that it's the shirt next to your skin that is being eaten away. If you're on a fixed pension or Social Security, you don't have enough money to buy a new shirt.

THE THIRD increase compounds the first and the second, and like the "Fly Trap" begins to absorb any other assets you may have. All the while the suffocating trap closes in on you, tries to break your spirit, dehumanizes you. It's slimy juices try to dissolve your will, force you to give up, sell at a loss, leave. Your home is devalued and may be totally devoured, your life savings despoiled.

The next, and the next increases (allowed every 60 days) compound all of the other greedy actions and the mobile home fly trap grows so huge that even the disinterested public recognizes it for what it is.

It may be "Back to God" to find "Paradise" unless the obnoxious weed is cut down and an adequate system of weed control is maintained so that the environmental danger is reduced and real live Americans can escape the "Trap."

History muddled

To the Editor:

In a recent article by Pat Neisser ("Laguna Beach remains natural and basically simple," Jan. 30, 1983), I was both pleased and disappointed to read some of its opening paragraphs. Pleased because Neisser included some of the local history which is so often overlooked by the average resident who flew in only five years ago. Disappointed, because the inaccuracies of that history — false history is worse than none because it is harder to correct.

The area of Laguna Beach was never called "Lagones" by the early California Indians (nor by the late ones for that matter). "Lagones" is simply a misspelling by the none too educated Spanish colonists. And it was descendants of those Spanish colonists, the Acuna and Olivares families, in the 1830s who first arrived there — the "white" settlers of the 1870s were merely the first Anglos.

TELEPHONE YOUR LETTER TO THE EDITOR
See instructions below

The two native American cultures spoken of are really one. The "Uto-Azteka" (Uto-Aztecan) is actually a language family, like Indo-European, of which the "Shoshones" (Shoshonean) is a branch, like Germanic. The Indians who lived at Laguna, the Juanneno, spoke a language within the Shoshonean branch. Their term for the area was Tom-ok.

All of the above information is available in standard California Indian texts and journals. You might try contacting the Laguna Beach historical society for more such information.

Surinam tilts toward Cuba

WASHINGTON — The execution of 15 prominent citizens in the Surinamese capital of Paramaribo last December has caused consternation in Washington and Pittsburgh, a certain relief in the Hague — and undoubted satisfaction in Havana and Moscow.

The shootings — along with possibly 20 more — virtually destroyed the opposition leadership to the leftist military regime of Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse. They also gave the Dutch an excuse for suspending the remainder of a 10-year, $1.5 billion aid program they had promised their former colony on the northeast coast of South America.

SURINAM WAS known as Dutch Guiana for 300 years; the British swapped it with the Netherlands for Manhattan Island (which the Dutch had bought from the Indians for $24 worth of trinkets). In 1975, the Dutch granted the colony independence, partly because they could no longer afford to subsidize it.

At the time, a secret CIA study gave Surinam a better chance of surviving — and even thriving — than most former colonies. It noted as assets "a tradition of non-violence; an ample reserve of a marketable mineral, bauxite (the crucial aluminum ore); a relatively literate and educated population."

At the same time, the CIA warned of possible problems: an increasingly pro-Cuban attitude, a population accustomed to "a fairly high level of living," and "enmity between the two major ethnic groups, the Creoles (blacks) and East Indians." It was possible, the study said, that the departure of the Dutch would "take away an important source of revenue and heighten racial antagonism by removing a major source of social cohesion."

That, unfortunately, is precisely what happened. Soon after the Dutch pulled out, the Creoles dominated the government; the skilled Hindustanis fled to the Netherlands.

In February 1980, a group of disgruntled army sergeants staged a coup. Bouterse, their leader, at first allowed a civilian head of government, and rejected Cuban overtures.

But within two years, a marked leftward tilt had occurred. The civilian president was dismissed last February and a right-wing coup attempt was smashed.

Last August the Soviets sent their first ambassador to Paramaribo. In September, a full-time Cuban ambassador arrived — a senior diplomat and top Communist Party leader. The Cuban intelligence service became more active in Surinam, and Bouterse reportedly even accepted Cuban bodyguards.

Alarmed by Bouterse's increasingly Marxist leanings, labor leaders, journalists, lawyers and religious leaders began agitating for a return to civilian government. Bouterse promised elections early this year.

Instead, he claimed the opposition was planning a Christmas Day coup, arrested the leaders and had them shot, while they were supposedly trying to escape from a downtown Paramaribo prison. The battered bodies, put on display, belied the escape claim.

THE UNITED STATES reacted to the killings by suspending a $1.5 million aid agreement signed last September. Surinam has ejected two of our diplomats; we have kicked out one of theirs.

There remains the bauxite situation. According to CIA reports, reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta, Suralco, a wholly owned subsidiary of Alcoa, is Surinam's biggest bauxite company. Suralco's influence has always irritated Bouterse and other Surinamese leaders, who mutter darkly about "decisions made in Pittsburgh" that could be devastating to their bauxite-dominated economy.

But now it is decisions made in Paramaribo that are worrying not only the aluminum executives in Pittsburgh but Cuba-watchers in the White House and State Department.

Teen driving right a modern tragedy

From appearances, the 16- and 17-year-olds in California have a powerful and active lobby working on their behalf in the legislative halls of Sacramento.

How else can it be explained why these children are allowed access to their own vehicles, in which to speed about killing and crippling themselves and others at a pace that is increasingly apparent and just plain criminal?

THERE SHOULD remain little doubt in this enlightened era that young drivers pose to society a danger of monumental proportion. Data from insurance institute studies and law enforcement journals clearly established that the overall number of automobile accidents in the United States would drop dramatically if the driving age were raised to 18.

Yet not a single state in the Union has such a law.

Assemblyman Alister McAlister, D-San Jose, is planning to address the issue during this legislative session, but his approach is both timid and complex when the required solution is bold and simple.

WATERS/BLACKBURN

McAlister will introduce a bill prohibiting 16- and 17-year-old people from driving a motor vehicle between the hours of midnight and 5 a.m. unless an exemption has been granted.

The only real answer to this permissive child neglect is to change the law: 16- and 17-year-old children should not be allowed to operate an automobile any more than they should be provided with alcoholic beverages or drugs. Dead, after, is still dead.

This sanction will not be an easy one to achieve. Because parents are anxious to put a halt to the constant hassle of having to drive their teenagers here, there and everywhere, and because of the magic lure that autos hold in modern American society, it is easier to hand over the ignition keys than it is to say "wait."

So — for what appear to be shallow, selfish and unnecessary reasons — we continue to turn over to these innocents the vehicles that all too often take them on the one-way road to early death.

Ken Sherer, a high school drivers' education administrator, has his doubts about the wisdom of allowing children to drive before reaching the age of 18.

"They need time to adjust to society before they are ready to be responsible, contributing citizens," he says. "The number one thing lacking is maturity."

KIDS REALIZE when they are gambling, adds suicidologist Dr. Robert Good. "They just don't realize the stakes." He says that young people have no concept or respect for death when behind the wheel of an automobile.

In this particular case, realizing the stakes is the responsibility of others. Just because (as an official of the Department of Motor Vehicles, Bob Lewis, says) driving is necessary in our culture, there is no reason in the world why the young should be sacrificed on the altar of adult negligence and stupidity.

Somewhere along the line, the Legislature will deal with this situation, and its members will be called upon to examine the current practice of issuing drivers' licenses to children who have reached the age of 16. Perhaps enough adolescent blood has been needlessly spilled to warrant a change. Perhaps brave lawmakers will demand a change. Perhaps.

Safety aids bilingual

By PAT HOROWITZ
Special to the Daily Pilot

DEAR READERS: To help Indo-Chinese newcomers adjust to American consumer society, the state Department of Consumer Affairs has produced several bilingual posters on fire safety, poison prevention and electrical safety.

The legal-sized sheets cover three common household hazards including stove-top fires, the storage of household chemicals and small electrical appliances. Each topic is printed in three versions: English-Vietnamese, English-Laothian, and English-Cantonese. They are printed in black and white with touches of red to indicate danger.

The posters, which were funded by a federal contract, were tested by Indo-Chinese refugees enrolled in a Sacramento consumer education class. After passing the field test, the posters were distributed to local resettlement offices and to English as a Second Language teachers in California.

For free copies of the material, write to: REFUGEE SAFETY, California Department of Consumer Affairs, P.O. Box 310, Sacramento, 95814.

Day care business

DEAR PAT: My sister and I are considering the possibility of opening a day care center in Northern California. We need some information about the business end of such a project. Do you know where we can get some materials on this subject? We've already checked out library resources.

S.T., Costa Mesa
The University of California Cooperative Extension's consumer/management specialist has put together some suggestions and sample, usable forms for organizing and running day-care centers as a business. They've been published by UC Cooperative Extension of "Day Care as a Business" Leaflet 21314.

Covered in the new publication are: charging for child care, contracts, recording income, paying expenses, liability insurance, and advertising day-care services. Sample forms include a daily attendance sheet, customer account sheet, yearly income summary, business expense record, business expense summary, and mileage record.

The leaflet is one of several included in a "Caring" series published by Cooperative Extension. The new publication can be obtained by writing to UC Cooperative Extension Publications, 1422 Harbour Way South, Richmond, Calif. 94804. Enclose a check payable to the UC Regents for $1.26 to cover postage, tax and handling. Copies also are available at many of Cooperative Extension's county offices.

Got a problem? Then write to Pat Horowitz. Pat will cut red tape, getting the answers and action you need to solve inequities in government and business. Mail your questions to Pat Horowitz, At Your Service, Orange Coast Daily Pilot, P.O. Box 1560, Costa Mesa, CA. 92626.

Dino DeLorean and Barbara Kane still manage hug though each shows the weariness of kissing marathon.

Smoochers set record, but it's no romance

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Dino DeLorean and Barbara Kane will be keeping stiff upper lips for a while, paying the price of kissing glory.

The couple called it quits on Valentine's Day after claiming a world record for a marathon kissing session that began Feb. 8 in the window of a boutique and ended when they puckered out six days later.

DeLorean, 20, and Ms. Kane, 24, passed the old record of five days, 12 hours early yesterday and then padded their lead out to 12 hours before breaking off at 5:30 p.m., said publicist Chris Harris.

The pair, both aspiring actors, were a little sore around the mouth after their week in the window in Sherman Oaks.

"I feel like I'm just on a cloud," said Ms. Kane when the kiss-athon ended. "My lips are quite swollen but otherwise I feel very well."

DeLorean conceded that his mouth was in "bad shape," but contended that the stunt had been worth the trouble.

"I loved it. I would do it again," he said.

Would he really? "Yes, as a matter of fact in about five minutes," he said amid the post-marathon festivities. "I found a nice lady that I spotted."

"Frankly, I'm gonna have to go home and kiss my husband hello, but he's very understanding and I don't think he'll make me kiss him very much," she said.

The pair were attempting to further their careers by besting the previous kissing record listed in the Guinness Book of World Records. It was set by Jim Schuyler and Debbie Luray at the Ocean Mall in Singer Island, Fla., from Feb. 14 to Feb. 19, 1980.

DeLorean and Ms. Kane weren't even kissing cousins when they started. The marathon was DeLorean's idea and he selected Ms. Kane after she responded to an interview broadcast over radio station KIIS.

Hotel seeks 'offspring'

CORONADO (AP) — Since the Hotel Del Coronado was built in 1888, it has housed about a thousand honeymoon couples a year.

The resort hotel, one of the oldest still-in-use wooden structures in the country, would like to track down the offspring of those 95,000 marriages for a contest to celebrate its 95th anniversary.

The anniversary is Saturday, but the hotel will hold a drawing on Labor Day weekend to choose the winner of its sweepstakes prize — a week's stay for two in a lavish suite occupied last year by President Ronald Reagan.

The winner will receive transportation from anywhere in the world to the hotel for a free week's lodging. Four other names will be drawn and they'll receive "exotic" prizes, which haven't been chosen yet.

According to General Manager Scott Anderson, statisticians figure that each of those honeymooning couples produced an average 2.5 children. That means that nearly 250,000 people are eligible to enter the contest.

College offering geology courses

Five geology courses are being offered by Orange Coast College's Physical Science Division this spring.

Several different sections of each geology course are on the spring agenda. The classes meet during the morning, afternoon and evening hours, Monday through Friday.

Courses on the spring schedule include: "General Geology," "Historical Geology," "General Geology Laboratory," "Historical Geology 2," and "Introduction to Mineralogy."

Registration information is available by calling 556-5772.

Students' needs analyzed

Chapman College will offer prospective students a free computerized financial aid analysis Monday at Chapman's "Exploration Day" at the Orange campus, 333 N. Glassell St.

According to Anthony Garcia, dean of admissions at Chapman, prospective students attending Exploration Day should bring a copy of their Student Aid Application for California (SAAC) and in return Chapman will provide them with an estimated expected family contribution and an estimated conditional offer of financial aid at Chapman College.

"Those who don't have an SAAC can bring us six basic pieces of information from their 1982 family records and still get the analysis completed," said Garcia. "We need to know the adjusted gross income, itemized deductions, medical and dental expenses, federal taxes paid, non-taxable income and elementary/secondary tuition paid."

Campus Exploration Day at Chapman begins at 8 a.m.

Reservations for Exploration Day at Chapman are requested but not mandatory. Additional information can be obtained by calling Chapman's Office of Admissions, 997-6711.

OCC flight program soars to top spot

Maintaining "very close ties with industry" is an important part of Orange Coast College's Airline Flight Service program. Judy Luskin, an OCC associate professor of flight service for the past nine years, said, "we truly have an outstanding instructional staff."

The strength of OCC's two-year program can be attributed to its teaching faculty, which includes two fulltime and six part-time instructors. All have been, or are currently, employed by the airlines.

Luskin worked 10 years for Continental Airlines and operated her own public relations firm specializing in trade show promotion before coming to OCC. She is still a consultant to the airlines and fashion industry.

In 1965, OCC became the first community college in the state to introduce a program in Airline Flight Service. Today, it is the largest and, according to many airline executives, the best in the state.

More than 200 students are enrolled in the program. "Our students are given current, up-to-date information from instructors who are closely associated with the airlines," Luskin said.

OCC's other fulltime instructor is Pat Toney, a 15-year Continental employee who has been on the Orange Coast staff for four years.

Part-time instructors include: Maria Lind, a supervisor of flight attendants and trainer for Jet America; Maggie Lloyd and Denise Walters, members of AirCal's inflight management team; Lee Partin, owner and operator of her own travel agency for the past 22 years; Kareri Pfaff, air airline management consultant; and John Gavin, air transportation instructor and private pilot.

Though the public thinks that airlines are not hiring new employees, and haven't been for some time, Luskin says that isn't true.

"Many of our students are being grabbed up by the airlines," she said. "The major airlines are not hiring the same number of individuals they did in the past, but there are many, many new airlines that are hiring at a tremendous pace."

OCC students have been hired in recent months by Pacific Express, Jet America, Pacific East, Sun World, and Westwinds International.

Many airlines regularly visit the OCC campus to interview candidates.

Orange Coast's program enjoys a strong reputation among the airlines.

"Not only do they come on campus to interview our students, but they also regularly recommend our program to young people who are looking to get into the flight service industry," Luskin said. "We frequently have students enrolling in the program from out of state, simply because they were referred to us by an airline."

The OCC program, designed for both men and women, prepares students for service careers in the airline industry. In addition to regular classroom work, the students also gain practical experience.

The first semester focuses on airline requirements and working conditions. Later semesters concentrate on employment preparation.

Since airlines place great emphasis on personal appearance, classes cover such areas as communication skills, skin and hair care, diet, exercise, speech and visual poise.

Students also receive instruction in airline scheduling, 24-hour time, airport and airline codes and government agencies and laws that apply to aviation travel. Field trips are taken to nearby airport, air traffic control towers, flight service stations, airline training centers, airport fire stations, and flight kitchens.

Students have an opportunity to gain experience by working in AirCal's customer service department, handling passenger complaints and many work as agent understudies for Jet American at Long Beach Airport.

Perhaps the most unique aspect of OCC's Flight Service Department is its Airport Terminal Attendant Training Program. Students are allowed to work a total of 54 hours of at the John Wayne Airport Information Booth.

Graduating students may receive either a certificate of achievement or an associate in arts degree. Students hired by the airlines are put through a two-week training school before actually beginning work.

"Our students are prepared to go right to work, but airlines spend the two weeks explaining their emergency equipment to the new employees," Luskin said.

Condo conversions saving mansions

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — If your mansion is falling into disrepair these days — and whose isn't, what with rising taxes, fuel bills, the cost of help — there's a relatively new way to keep the old place standing. Turn it into a condominium.

It's a trend in the Northeast from the plushness of Newport, R.I., where the great houses were always called "cottages," to the fashionable Hamptons where they were known as "country homes," to enclaves of big money such as Princeton, N.J., and patches of Westchester County along the Hudson River.

Cities such as Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have also had some historic buildings preserved by such conversions.

One such conversion took place at the 29-room Jacobean-style mansion built by Junius Morgan in 1897 in Princeton. The estate was originally a farm on 82 acres, but some of the land had been sold over the years, whittling it down to 47 acres.

A. Perry Morgan, a direct descendant and an architect, had lived in part of the enormous red-brick dwelling, as did his sister and her family and various other relatives. They had sort of parceled sections out, but in the 1970s rising costs made it prohibitive to maintain. Morgan recalls it cost something like $20,000 a year just to heat the building.

"What a change in 80 or 90 years," says Morgan. "It was sort of traumatic packing up and leaving the house."

But he and his wife had first choice as to which of the condos they would return to and he retained control as the architect of record to make sure the entire project would preserve as much of the grounds as possible.

The neighbors in this high rent district were mighty worried when they heard the word condo.

"The neighbors formed an association and wanted to know how we were going to keep the Winnebagos and fiber glass motorboats out of the front yard," says Jim Harvie, vice president of Collins Development Corp., developers for the conversion.

"The neighbors didn't understand that these wouldn't be the people buying the condominiums we were creating," says Harvie. Price was the reason — $240,000 to $320,000 per condo.

Morgan adds that most of the neighbors are now delighted with the project, and, "I hope somewhat chagrined that they caused so much ruckus."

Model living room at the Morgan mansion that has been converted into condominiums.

The main mansion was divided into six condos and the carriage house became an additional two. The rest — there will be 60 in all when the project is completed — are new structures that blend in with the old. A swimming pool and tennis courts were added.

Her world wider

Tot romps outdoors for first time with aid of a special 'spacesuit'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Four-year-old Betsy Fishman, who has spent most of her life in two nearly empty rooms, romped in the snow Monday, breathing freshly cleansed air through a specially designed "spacesuit."

"She wasn't grinding her teeth or anything, which would be the main sign she was reacting to something outside. She was smiling, she was even laughing," said her father, Joel Fishman.

"I feel terrific," said his wife, Penny.

For the past three years, Betsy has spent most of her life within two bedrooms containing just a cotton mattress and some toys.

Doctors say Betsy suffers severe allergic reactions — including screaming fits and wooziness — to such things as pesticides, insecticides and yeast, and they offer little hope of a normal life for her.

The bright-eyed, pig-tailed child ventured safely from her Pittsburgh home for the first time in her life Saturday, breathing deeply and painlessly with help from a battery-powered suit.

At her side was James Lyddy, a private consultant from Cambridge, Mass., who designed the suit and breathing apparatus. "I took a guess really as to what would be appropriate. And it works. I'm totally amazed," said Lyddy, who worked with the Fishmans only by telephone.

Lyddy, with Penny's help, created a hooded jacket made of white barrier cloth with a scarf covering the mouth and nose. With it, he designed a small aluminum case fitted with filters and fans to draw in air, purify it and blow it in Betsy's face. The lightweight case resembles a backpack but is worn in front.

Betsy's problem began in 1979 after she received a measles and mumps shot. She unknowingly was exposed to chicken pox the week before and soon developed a rash.

The disease eventually subsided, but left damaging scars. By January 1980, her speech had deteriorated to a few words; within four months, she stopped speaking. Her body stopped developing.

The Fishmans contacted the Environmental Health Center in Dallas in November 1981 and were told to make Betsy an environmentally safe room — no paint, no rugs, no chemicals of any kind. Within a week of moving into the room, Betsy improved.

CAVALCADE

New breed 'uncaring'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back I read a letter in your column about how a young man drowned in a swimming pool because the lifeguard said it wasn't "my territory." I was shocked. This morning I read a United Press International story that convinces me we are growing a new breed of human that is very different from my generation.

In River Falls, Mass., two men stood on a bridge and watched an elderly woman drown because they said the water was too cold.

Will you please explain what goes on in the hearts and minds of such people? I am at a loss to understand. — DISGUSTED IN MISSOULA

DEAR MISS: Several readers sent the same clipping and asked similar questions. I have no answers. Perhaps the new breed is a result of a mobile society that has emerged since World War II.

Economics are such that millions of families move every three to four years. They don't wish to put down roots or get to know their neighbors. They have grown callous, uncaring and suspicious. It's every man for himself.

Happily there are many exceptions, and I wish the media would give more attention to acts of generosity and heroism. We need to believe in brotherly love again.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please check this out with one of your medical authorities?

Since such things are being done now with plastic surgery, is it possible to change the eyes of children with Down's syndrome and to restructure their tongues? These children are so lovable and willing. If they looked more normal, people might be less fearful of them. Could restructuring the tongue enable them to talk normally? I don't know who to ask but it seems like an important thing to try. Thank you. — R.R.

DEAR R.R.: Dr. Joseph G. McCarthy, director of the Institute of Reconstructive Plastic Surgery at New York University Medical Center, says victims of Down's syndrome (also known as Mongolism) can be helped to look more normal in appearance by undergoing surgery around the eyes and ears. Surgery can also be performed on the jaw to alter the relationship between the upper and lower teeth. This, along with tongue surgery, enables the child to eat with less difficulty and to speak more distinctly. Many Down's syndrome children have benefited greatly from these surgical procedures.

Anyone who wishes additional information should write to the Society for the Facially Disfigured, 550 First Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. They do splendid work.

female anglers pair up in a boat to see who can outsmart the local bass. This year, the men announced the competition would be restricted to men only. Their reason was some wives might object to their husbands spending the day with another woman and — you got it — the old where-would-they-go-to-the-you-know-what.

The first complaint seemed rather invalid when you tried to figure out what you could do in a boat on a lake bobbing with other boats and fisherpersons.

The response to the second reason came from the women anglers themselves who said, "The men are just afraid the women will show them up."

The association finally compromised by letting each entrant check off whether or not he was willing to fish with a member of the opposite sex.

What the critics don't realize is that these things have a way of working themselves out. Women who have traveled with men before are well aware of the problems. I am married to a man who has bionic kidneys and has been known to travel an entire day on the road without stopping for so much as a chili dog or a gallon of gas. And I have sat beside him in a boat all day long waiting for the six most beautiful words in the English language, "They're not hitting. Let's go in."

As for unisex bathrooms: They're not so bad. They work real simple. First the man goes in and locks the door and comes out. Then the woman goes in, locks the door and comes out.

Californians Barry Crane and Kerri Shuman were unable to defend their World Mixed Pair title at the recent Olympiad in Biarritz, France. But the title stayed on this continent when Canadians Dianna Gordon and George Mittelman waltzed off with the crown.

Dianna sat South on this deal. Her double of three diamonds simply showed a maximum no trump response. East let the world know that his doubles of the major suits were sound. He was in the swing of things, so when South wriggled out of three no trump into four clubs, he felt obliged to make one more double, on general principles.

When West led her single ton heart, two down seemed certain. After getting a heart ruff, West could shift to the queen of diamonds, and the defenders would collect the ace of hearts and two ruffs and two diamond tricks.

That is certainly how the play would have gone were it not for one hitch — Dianna dropped the king of hearts under the ace! That sent East into a stew for a while. Finally, he decided that it was unlikely that such an attractive young lady was trying to pull the wool over his eyes. So he shifted to a club and Dianna quickly cashed her ten tricks for a top score

PUC wants changes in AT&T breakup

By The Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO — The basic cost of owning a telephone in California could pass $25 a month next year, compared to the current $7, unless plans to break up the Bell System are revised, the state Public Utilities Commission says.

Ship refitting deal OK'd

WASHINGTON — Even before the demise of United American Bank of Knoxville, Tenn., federal regulators were expecting dozens of bank failures this year, much like in 1982.

The Tennessee bank was the fourth largest commercial bank to fail, and the fourth so far this year.

Bank failures, which totaled only 10 in 1981, soared to 42 last year, the highest rate since the 43 of 1940.

William Isaac, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said in a recent interview that he expects the failure activity this year "to be at least as busy" as in 1982. The insurance corporation backs depositors' money to $100,000 in banks.

WASHINGTON — Yields on short-term Treasury securities have reached their highest level since last November after climbing for the fourth straight week, officials said.

At yesterday's auction, about $6.2 billion in new three-month bills were sold at an average discount rate of 8.256 percent, up slightly from the 8.252 percent of last Monday.

In addition, the government sold about $6.2 billion in six-month bills at an average rate of 8.389 percent, up from last week's 8.345 percent.

Four new productions raise curtain this week

By TOM TITUS
of the Daily Pilot Staff

A pair of dramas, a comedy and a musical touch all the theatrical bases as four new stage productions raise their curtains this week.

First on the boards is Harold Pinter's latest dramatic work, "Betrayal," opening Wednesday for a four-night run at UC Irvine. Noel Coward's comedy "Private Lives" bows in Thursday at the Newport Theater Arts Center.

Two more shows arrive Friday evening as the musical "West Side Story" hits the stage of Saddleback College and the drama "Lilies of the Field" is unveiled by Showcase Productions.

Pinter's "Betrayal," opening a week ahead of a production of the play at South Coast Repertory, is being directed by UCI drama department chairman Robert Cohen. Comprising the cast are Kristina Lankford, Kevin Skousen, Andrew Philpot and Warren Sampson.

Four performances will be presented, Wednesday through Saturday in the UCI Concert Hall with an 8 p.m. curtain. Reservations are being taken at 833-6617.

"Private Lives," one of Coward's more popular comedies, is being directed by Patricia Terry. Andrew Battershell, Mary Gough, Naomi Meyers and Douglas Stauter are cast as the mismatched lovers, with Barbara Sorenson playing the maid.

"Private Lives" will be staged Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m. for four weekends at the Theater Arts Center, 2501 Cliff Drive, Newport Beach. Call 675-3143 for ticket information.

"West Side Story," the Romeo and Juliet saga set against youth gang warfare in New York, will play a two-weekend run at Saddleback College's main theater on the Mission Viejo campus under the direction of Patrick J. Fennell.

Performances will be given at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 3 p.m. Sundays through Feb. 27. Further information is available at the box office, 831-4856, from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. weekdays.

Showcase Productions opens its 1983 season with "Lilies of the Field," the stage version of the movie that won Sidney Poitier an Oscar. Jean Koba directs the story of a black handyman who helps five nuns build a chapel in the desert.

Kevin Duffin, Monica McAllister and Alan Schneider head the cast of the drama, which will be presented Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 and Sundays at 2 p.m. through March 6. Reservations are taken at 894-6786.

Three local productions will give their closing performances this weekend. They are:

— "Godspell" by the Mission Viejo Playhouse at the Forum Theater on the Festival of Arts grounds, 650 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach (770-0381), winding up Thursday through Saturday at 8:30.

— "A Far Country" at the Costa Mesa Civic Playhouse, on the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa (754-5159), closing with performances Thursday through Saturday at 8:30.

'Winds of War' second

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "The Winds of War," which ended its 18-hour run Sunday night, is virtually certain to log in as the second highest rated miniseries behind "Roots."

ABC announced overnight ratings from six monitored cities for Sunday's final installment of the $40 million production. In New York, the show received a 47.4 rating and a 60 share, the highest totals in the seven nights.

A rating measures the percentage of all TV sets that are tuned in to the show, while a share reflects the percentage of sets in use that are tuned in to the program.

The rating-share figure for the other five cities Sunday night was: 41.2-50 in Chicago, 42.3-58 in Los Angeles, 45.3-58 in Philadelphia, 41.8-57 in Detroit and 39.8-57 in San Francisco.

Overnight ratings for "The Winds of War" have closely paralleled the national numbers. Through Thursday night's fifth episode, "The Winds of War" has averaged a 38.6 rating and a 54 share.

"Roots," which ABC broadcast in 1977, finished with an average rating of 51.1 and a 71 share. "Shogun," NBC's 1980 miniseries, appears to have dropped to third position with a 32.6 rating and a 51 share.

Carl's mother tells him. "She's not up to you."

The story then moves north, where Carl furthers his education and Sheila gets a job. This independence scares Carl and causes friction. The hardest part about being married to a black man is "being married," says Sheila.

But, in week three, the story gets strange. Years later, it returns to England and focuses exclusively on Jill, Carl and Sheila's rebellious daughter. At this point, the entire project takes a disjointed, dissatisfying turn.

The disrupted flow could stem from this being the first true co-production between the BBC and public television. Both organizations contributed equally in resources, staff and artistic control.

An itch Robinson can't scratch

I wanted to get back in football, says Rams new head coach

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

BEVERLY HILLS — For weeks, the Rams had been criticized and ridiculed for their procrastination in hiring a new head coach to replace the discharged Ray Malavasi.

And with each NFL vacancy that was filed (there were eight openings at one time or another), the pressure became even greater.

As one capable candidate after another seemingly slipped through the Rams' grasp, concern began to grow as to whether the organization would come up with a quality coach at all.

The Rams fooled everyone. The club went beyond pulling a rabbit out of its hat Monday. Instead, it came up with an elephant.

John Robinson, who nobody suspected would be a head coach again — nevertheless with the Rams — officially became the team's 17th field general at a Beverly Hills press conference here.

"Two and a half months ago I made a big decision. This past weekend I had the opportunity to make another one," said Robinson.

"I thought I wanted to be out of coaching and into administration. What it came down to was this job and a chance to be in the organization were too good to pass up."

Robinson's decision to return to coaching, for a myriad of reasons, was surprising. First, everyone believed the former USC coach when he announced last November he was resigning because "I have the desire to do something that transcends coaching."

Second, Robinson turned down a lucrative pro coaching offer last year from New England. Third, and probably the biggest shock, was nobody figured Robinson was interested in the job.

"I always thought about having John Robinson. But I never thought I had a chance," admitted Rams owner Georgia Frontiere.

According to Frontiere, she met with Robinson "for the first time" last Monday.

"Some friends called and asked if I had thought about John Robinson for head coach," Frontiere added. "I told them yes, but I didn't think John was interested."

"They assured me he would be interested if I would be interested."

According to sources, the "friend" was attorney Ed Hookstratten, a longtime friend of Georgia's and Robinson's agent.

"Yes, I contacted her," admitted Hookstratten, but that was all he would say.

Robinson, 47, who guided the Trojans to a 67-14-2 record during his seven years, reportedly received a revolving five-year contract (meaning at the end of the season the pact is automatically renewed for five years) worth an estimated $2 million.

"Mrs. Frontiere was very appreciative and very generous of acquiring John Robinson," Hookstratten offered, refusing to divulge specific numbers. "Carroll (Rosenbloom) couldn't have (See RAMS, Page C3)

Ram players can't believe it's Robinson

By JOHN SEVANO
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Asked how he felt about John Robinson's appointment as the Rams' new head coach Monday, linebacker Jim Youngblood couldn't help but have a little fun.

"I was just stunned to have a coach at all," joked the Fountain Valley resident. "For awhile, I didn't think we would have one."

"I kept hearing about all these assistants being hired elsewhere and I said, 'Shoot, they've let a lot of good people go by.' I kept thinking, 'Shoot, who are they going to get?'"

Humor aside, a couple of Rams players did admit to being stunned by the Robinson announcement.

"I was surprised, I think along with a lot of people," admitted safety Nolan Cromwell. "But I'm very happy."

Happiness was a term everyone used in talking about Robinson. And it was a genuine happiness, too, not the placid acceptance most athletes figure they have to express whenever a new field general joins an organization.

"I've never met John Robinson before," Cromwell noted, "but he showed a lot of class and a lot of personality as coach at USC."

"I think that part is as important to the players as being a good technical coach."

"I was working out with several guys this morning and they were all happy to hear the news," (See PLAYERS, Page C3)

UNLV gets to the top hard way

LAS VEGAS (AP) — In this hype-happy town, where superlatives reign supreme, No. 1 has a new meaning.

The University of Nevada-Las Vegas Rebels, in their first season as a PCAA member, were perched atop the Associated Press college basketball poll today for the first time in their 25-year history.

The Rebels, 22-0, and the only unbeaten team in the nation, took over first place after Villanova upset last week's leader, North Carolina. The Tar Heels fell to third place while Indiana slipped into second.

For Rebel guard Danny Tarkanian, the rating was particularly sweet. He had watched his father, UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian, roll up 12 straight 20-victory seasons en route to becoming the winningest active coach in college basketball.

Yet until last week's No. 2 rating, a Tarkanian club had never been ranked higher than No. 3.

"When you're ranked second, third or fourth, you're always behind somebody," the younger Tarkanian said. "In 10 or 15 or 20 years from now, I can say to my kids that I was on the No. 1-ranked team in the country."

"If they ever dreamed of not making us No. 1, it'd be the biggest ripoff ever. Everybody else has lost, and some more than once," the fiery guard said.

"They haven't been giving us the justice we deserve," chimed in forward Larry Anderson after Monday's practice. "I didn't think they'd give it to us. I really didn't think this would happen."

The news of the latest poll by a panel of sports writers had hardly cleared the AP wires when signs began popping up on Strip marquees proclaiming the Rebels as the nation's best college basketball team.

Alpert, Goldstein give foes headaches

By ROGER CARLSON
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A lot of high school wrestlers would probably deny it, but there are nevertheless many who are probably just as glad to see a long, hard season over, it is a pretty demanding sport.

But, when you're winning as are Edison High's Arnold Alpert and Gary Goldstein, two Sunset League champions with definite sights set on berths in the state championships such is obviously not the case.

"They're not stale at all," says their coach, Terry Lorentzen. "But the fun is over at this point. Now the work begins because there are no second chances."

Goldstein, a 148-pounder with a 29-4 record, has found the right formula in that area.

"It's a lot of hard work, but working out with Arnold in practice can be really competitive. And, when I'm down (mentally and/or physically) he gets me up, and when he's down, I get him up."

Arnold is a 129-pound senior with a

31-3 record who just about destroyed his opponent in the Sunset League finals with a 20-1 decision. Goldstein was a little easier on the opposition, settling for an 8-2 decision on his way to his 15th straight victory.

Lorentzen sees a big future for both as they ready for the CIF sectionals at Cypress College Friday and Saturday, which qualifies four for the CIF finals a week later.

"They're just two top quality kids," says the Edison coach. "With Arnold, most of it's heart and mental toughness, but skillwise he's very good with his legs."

"He uses his legs like arms and gets a lot of torque on his opponent's body with his legs."

Alpert has 16 pins within his 31 victories, usually leading with a cross-body leg torque, which develops into a half nelson.

"We've had some pretty good wrestlers here," says the 10-year coach, (See ALPERT, Page C2)

Five sports dropped at Orange Coast

Orange Coast College announced Monday it will drop five intercollegiate sports for the 1983-84 school year.

According to OCC Athletic Director Dick Tucker, the college is facing a reduction of almost $2.2 million in its operating budget for the next fiscal year. That represents a cut of approximately nine percent of the total budget. OCC cut $2.3 million from its budget last year.

Tucker has presented OCC President Dr. Bernard J. Luskin with a list of five sports to be eliminated from the program. That list is expected to be reviewed and approved by the district's board of trustees later this month.

The programs recommended for elimination include men's volleyball, water polo and golf, and women's soccer and gymnastics.

The five sports cut last year were wrestling, surfing, skiing, sailing and badminton.

"I feel very badly about these cuts," says Tucker. "All of the sports that are being cut have been extremely successful here over the years."

Orange Coast has won more state championships the past 3½ years than any other community college in California. The Pirates have captured 10 state titles during that period.

OCC's men's volleyball team captured the South Coast Conference championship last season and finished third in the state. The women's gymnastic team won the state title in 1982.

"I hate to see these five sports go," Tucker adds. "Whenever we have added a sport to our program over the years we have always made sure that it met two criteria: first, that it interest a significant number of students; and, second, that we be competitive in that sport."

"All five of these sports continue to meet our criteria. They generate student interest, and we have been extremely competitive. We are facing a severe financial crisis, however, and we must come to grips with fiscal reality."

OCC is making cuts in numerous campus programs, but the athletic department's will be among the most visible.

Oilers' return recalls past glories

Sometimes it takes a while for the wheel to turn — but sooner or later with a bit of pushing — most will, and for Huntington Beach High basketball faithful it's a welcome relief.

For years the Oilers were a perennial first-rate power, racking up one championship after another, leading to the parade of championship banners in the gym, which has been imitated by many since.

Records in the early years are tough to verify, but it was noted in 1908 the Oilers had won the Orange League championship for the third straight year and in 1912 they claimed the Southern California championship.

In 1914 the Oilers claimed their eighth Orange County championship in 10 years — and later, during the 30s, 40s, 50s, 60s and early 70s, 17 league crowns were captured, the last in 1975, Elmer Combs' last year.

Combs coached the last eight title teams, and among those juggernauts was a powerful forward named Roy Miller.

In 1968 Miller and friends (Mike Contreras, Greg Snyder, Brian Ambrozich and Rick Seibert) were used to a lot of winning, racking up a 27-4 record and averaging 73 points a game on the way to the CIF 4-A finals.

PREP SPORTS

ROGER CARLSON

When Combs stepped down after 20 years it was Miller, a product of Long Beach State, who inherited the job.

Twice Miller's teams finished runner-up in league play — not tops, but not bottom, either. Then, two straight 1-9 league records virtually wiped the Oilers off the face of the basketball map.

The 1980 team finished 6-15 overall, the worst won-loss percentage since 1950. A year later they struggled to 12-11 overall after winning 11 of their first 13 contests.

Since then Miller and the Oilers have absorbed one blow after another, but despite very big setbacks, they're back.

Now they possess the Sunset League championship as they await the CIF 4-A playoffs, including the No. 2 ranking in Orange County and

No. 7 status in the CIF 4-A, in addition to their 9-1 league and 18-5 overall record.

And, they have their second nine-game winning streak in hand this season as they await Friday's first round in the CIF 4-A playoffs against the survivor of the Notre Dame (Sherman Oaks)-Dos Pueblos game on Wednesday.

"Yes," admits Miller, "those rankings do make me feel good about things. We wanted another banner on the wall."

"And, we're having fun."

It's no secret — there have been a lot of winning teams through the years without that happy feeling for one reason or another (usually the me-first syndrome with players unhappy that they (1) aren't starting (2) aren't scoring enough (3) aren't All-CIF (4) haven't been contacted by the Celtics yet).

As for setbacks, well, consider these items Miller has had to endure:

— Cliff Wimberly, a sensational prospect as a freshman, moved to Las Vegas as a sophomore.

— Jeff Washington transferred to Edison after playing just his freshman season at Huntington Beach.

— Mike Newton, the standout guard at Even in 1912 the Oilers were looking good on the basketball floor.

Fountain Valley, was in line to attend Huntington Beach before transferring prior to his freshman year.

— Jimmy Amanuel, a 6-7 star who went on to play at Gahr and Long Beach Poly before finally ending up in Michigan, was originally an Oiler.

— And, Jamel Garner, the current sophomore star of the Oilers, was erroneously rumored to have been on his way out of Huntington Beach, destination Inglewood.

Clearly, it was enough to give a coach a good case of ulcers.

"You look at the kids we could have had if they had finished school here," says Miller, "and we could have been pretty awesome."

After six years Miller says it's clear to him that any ideas of matching Combs' longevity record are far removed from reality.

"I don't think so," says Miller. "Coaches with 20 years — the Tom Danley's (of Katella High) are extinct as a dinosaur."

There was plenty of pressure to win in the 60s, but Miller says things have changed, at least in his case.

"Kids' outlook on athletics is different," says Miller. "It's a me-first attitude, a reflection on what is going on in society."

"A coach is dealing a lot more with personalities. Elmer didn't have to administer much discipline at all, it was already there."

And, that is what made this campaign the pleasure it has been for Miller — the lack of problems within his squad.

The starting unit has been intact virtually since the start, but there hasn't been the customary complaints, usually from disgruntled parents or boosters.

"If you're having problems it can take a lot of the thrill of winning out of it," says Miller. "This group is very close. But those problems have driven a lot of coaches out."

The CIF 4-A playoffs are next for the Oilers, a 32-team single elimination beginning Feb. 18 at Huntington Beach, with the gold awaiting at Long Beach Arena March 5.

Later it's the state playoffs at the same site.

Everyone is playing on borrowed time at this point, but one thing is certain — the wheel has definitely turned at Huntington Beach.

Did writer find 'Duel' truck driver?

From AP dispatches

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — Remember the movie "Duel" with Dennis Weaver? Bill Smith, the executive sports editor of the Charleston Daily Mail may have found the driver of the truck.

Smith was on his way to a basketball game between West Virginia and Massachusetts Saturday, but ran into more trouble than he bargained for, first a six-hour snow-bound drive and then a patch of ice forced him to pile into a snow bank.

He spent the next hour flailing his arms at uncooperative motorists before it appeared a friendly truck driver would give him a lift.

"He didn't stop, just slowed it to a crawl and said 'Hop on the other side,'" Smith said. "Like a fool I did. I figured the guy was going to give me a lift and take me somewhere where I could get help."

Smith also figured the driver was going to let him inside the cab to warm up.

"Instead, he started gathering speed. Twenty miles an hour. Twenty five. Thirty. And there I was . . . outside, hanging onto the passenger's side of the cab. My hands were freezing. I was freezing. I pounded on the door with my foot. I yelled 'Hey if you aren't going to let me inside, slow this thing down and let me off.'"

"Maybe the guy thought I was a leftover independent striker bent on doing him bodily harm, I don't know."

Quote of the day

Mary Harmon Bryant, widow of football coaching legend Bear Bryant, on why she asked that classes not be canceled at the University of Alabama on the day of her husband's funeral: "He wouldn't have canceled football practice."

Canadiens top Gretzky, Oilers

Larry Robinson and Mats Naslund scored in the first 3 1/2 minutes of the second period to give Montreal a three-goal lead and goalie Rick Wamsley made a number of timely saves as the Canadiens beat Edmonton, 4-2 to highlight NHL action Monday. The Oilers were led by Wayne Gretzky, who scored his 47th and 48th goals of the season . . . In the only other game played, Wayne Babych scored his first goal in more than two months and Bernie Federko added another power play goal five minutes later in the second period, pacing the St. Louis Blues to a 6-4 triumph over Buffalo.

Yarborough escapes injury

DAYTONA BEACH — Cale Yarborough went from elation to dejection in less than a minute Monday as he appeared to lock up the pole position for the $1 million Daytona 500 with a spectacular qualifying lap over 200 mph, only to ride his car through a wild crash the next time around.

The three-mile Winston Cup champion broke the Daytona track record on his first trip around the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval, turning in a lap at an average speed of 200.503 mph in a new Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS.

Yarborough was not injured, but the crash damaged the frame of the car so badly that the Ranier team was forced to withdraw the entry.

Express cuts Foreman

Chuck Foreman, a five-time National Football League All-Pro running back with Minnesota, was released Monday by the Los Angeles Express of the new United States Football League. Foreman, 32, was one of five players released . . . Eamonn Coghlan and UC Irvine product Steve Scott, the two fastest indoor milers in the world, will meet for the first time at the Michelob Invitational track meet Friday night in San Diego . . . Donna White fired a four-under-par 68 Monday and won the rain-delayed LPGA Sarasota Classic by one stroke over Alice Miller, JoAnne Carner and Nancy Lopez . . . Neil Bonnet passed Darrell Waltrip with two turns left and went on to win the crash-filled, 50-mile Busch Clash at Daytona International Speedway.

Busy season looming International Star Class getting ready

By ALMON LOCKABEY
Daily Pilot Boating Writer

The International Star Class, oldest one-design sailboat racing class in the world, is grooming for one of the busiest seasons in its history — with much of the action centered on the West Coast.

The high point of the year, as always, will be the world championship for the class which this year will be held out of California Yacht Club, Marina del Rey, with about 80 of the top skippers in the world participating.

First event of the year will be a Marina del Rey next weekend where the Stars will sail in the Southern California Yachting Association Midwinter Regatta.

Another high point for the class will be the Pre-Olympic Regatta at Long Beach, July 30-Aug. 6, which will also draw Star sailors from all over the world, many of whom will remain in Southern California for the world championship.

BOATING

The 22-foot Star boat, one of the seven Olympic classes, came into existence in 1911 and is still considered one of the premier sailboat racing classes in the world, spawning top sailors in other world yachting events, such as the America's Cup.

Several America's Cup defenders have come out of the Star Class including former world champions, Bill Ficker, Newport Harbor Yacht Club, 1970, and Dennis Conner, San Diego YC, 1980. Both Conner and Tom Blackaller, this year's candidates for the America's Cup defense are two-time former world champion Star sailors.

Lowell North and Malin Brunham, former world champion Star sailors, were unsuccessful candidates for the America's Cup defense in 1977.

Another former world champion Star sailor from Newport Beach is Don Edler, staff commodore of Newport Harbor YC.

Major events for Star sailors this year:

SCYA Midwinters, Marina del Rey, Feb. 19-20; Bacardi Cup, Miami, Fla., March 6-13; Keel Boat Invitational, San Francisco, March 19-20;

Spring Silver Star, New Orleans, April 8-16; King of Spain Trophy, Marina del Rey, April 30-May 1; Pacific Coast Championship, Berkeley, Circle, Richmond, May 6-7-8; Patterson Bowl, Marina del Rey, May 15; Rollins Bowl, San Diego, May 28-30; Blue Star, Berkeley Circle (St. Francis YC), June 10-11-12;

Sir Thomas Lipton Trophy, Santa Barbara, July 2-3; Baxter Bowl, Newport Harbor YC, July 9-10; Macho Regatta, Los Angeles YC, July 23-24; Pre-Olympic Regatta, Long Beach, July 30-Aug. 6; World Championship, Marina del Rey, Aug. 14-19; Labor Day Pitcher, San Diego, Sept. 3-4; Calvin Paige Trophy, St. Francis YC (San Francisco) Oct. 14-15; Fall Regatta, San Diego, Nov. 12-13.

Crews picked

The Defender-Courageous Group has announced assignment of crews for both yachts in their effort to win the right to defend the America's Cup later this year.

Taking the helm of the new yacht, Defender, is skipper Tom Blackaller. Gary Jobson will be the yacht's tactician, and Peter Stalkus is handling Defender's navigation.

Others in the Defender crew are Rod Davis, mainsheet trimmer; Jim Plagenhoef and Bruce Epke, grinders; John Mulderig, belowdecks; Ken Keefe, mastman; Dana Timmer, bowman, and Mike Toppa and Paul Cayard, tailers.

John Kolius has been named skipper of the 10-year-old Courageous, a two time America's Cup winner. John Bertrand will be tactician and Bill Campbell, navigator.

Other crew members on Courageous are John Gluek, mainsheet trimmer; Courtenay Jenkins and Mike Sullivan, grinders; Hank Stuart, belowdecks; Jim Whitmore mastman; Robbie Young, bowman, and Glen Darden and Curt Oetking, tailers.

DeRoux found alive

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Missing French round-the-world yachtsman Jacques DeRoux has been found alive, according to ham radio operators here in New Zealand, but his vessel Skolern Three is dismasted and sinking.

DeRoux was found by Englishman Richard Broadhead, a fellow competitor in the Boc Solo Yacht Challenge, a spokeswoman for the round-the-world race said Saturday. She quoted the ham radio operators, who had monitored messages from the yacht.

Eleven yachts are on the third leg of the round the world race between Sydney and Rio de Janeiro. The drama is taking place in the South Pacific about 2,000 nautical miles from Cape Horn.

ALPERT, GOLDSTEIN LEAD EDISON . . .

"and both of them have the mental attitude that is really good. They've created a lot of interest on campus because of their success and in the fact that they are very exciting wrestlers to watch. They have to rank within our Top 10."

"When it starts they don't stop, especially Arnold. Any particular move can turn into a pin."

Alpert is strictly a wrestler, and if Lorentzen could want more from any area, it would be with his feet on takedowns, to ensure more takedowns.

Goldstein is a more versatile athlete, with a gymnastics and diving background. And maybe his best asset lies within his foot work in the takedown area.

A finalist in the CIF diving finals as a junior, Goldstein says he expects to be diving again this spring, but gymnastics is obviously out because of the fact the school dropped the sport.

"Goldstein is really good on his feet," says Lorentzen. "He has a real good little series with an outside leg takedown."

His weakness might be in escaping. His best asset is takedowns. Escaping can really be important when you get into tight matches. If you're down 2-1 and get away to make it 2-2 then it comes down to the best man on his feet."

Goldstein says his thoughts about the sectionals are simply to do well enough to qualify for the CIF finals, while Alpert has a decidedly different attitude.

"I have some people I want to beat there," says Alpert. "I definitely want to get first. Colleges (coaches) are looking around and it's important."

Lorentzen adds this about the competitive Alpert. "He's not making a lot of friends on the mat, there are some who want him so badly they can taste it. But you have to realize there's a lot of heat in wrestling. If you lose, you lose, nobody else. Sometimes the manhood is tested."

Adds Alpert: "I love wrestling, there's nothing that can compare with it."

Goldstein has nearly a 20-pound edge on Alpert, but the two work out regularly.

"Gary has a definite edge with size," says Lorentzen, "but he has a hard time getting away from Arnold. If he gets his legs on you, he's tough."

Both have the same thoughts in regard to the balance of the season. It's strictly a matter of concentration and desire.

"Once you win the first round you know you can't let down, because the next match will be tougher," says Alpert.

"It's just a matter of getting mentally ready," says Goldstein. "you take each one thinking it'll be the hardest match of the year."

They're co-captains of Edison's team, each is 18 and can boast of a Sunset League championship.

And each has an eye on a collegiate future with wrestling as the stepping stone. And the next step is at Cypress College.

Girls' CIF pairings set

Sunset League entries Edison and Fountain Valley high's women's basketball teams will host opening round games Saturday night (7:30) in the CIF 4-A playoffs.

Edison, 23-3, and the league's No. 1 representative, will host Plus X (14-9, Angelus League No. 2), while Fountain Valley (15-6, Sunset's No. 2) will entertain Royal (16-6, Marmonte League No. 2).

Ocean View, meanwhile, (19-7, Sunset No. 3) will travel to Morningside (23-2, Ocean League No. 1).

In the 3-A division, Corona del Mar will host San Clemente and Pacific will be at Estancia, while University visits El Dorado.

Corona del Mar has an 18-3 record and is the No. 2 representative of the Sea View League. San Clemente is 13-8 and the No. 2 entry from the South Coast League.

Estancia, the Sea View's No. 1 team, has a 21-3 record, while Pacific (Citrus Belt No. 2) is 16-9.

Rustler women win opener, 71-61

SAN LUIS OBISPO — The Golden West College women's basketball team started its season off on the right foot Monday night by downing Cuesta, 71-61 here in non-conference action.

Sophomore Jill Guthrie poured in 28 points for the Rustlers.

Freeways hinder study

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children in schools near freeway noise have lower math and reading scores than children attending quieter schools, a California Department of Health Services study says.

The two-year study paired up nine sets of schools, one near a freeway and one farther away, and compared test scores of third- and sixth-grade children.

"Both third- and sixth-grade children in noisy schools generally did less well academically in reading and mathematics than their counterparts in quieter schools," Jerome Lukas, coordinator of the noise control program in the Department of Health Services and author of the study, said yesterday.

"On average, third-graders in noisy schools were about 0.4 years behind in reading (on a nationally standardized test), while the sixth-graders were about 0.7 years behind," Lukas said.

Math scores were also lower in the noisy schools, but by a smaller percentage.

Lukas gathered the data in 1979, but his study was released only last month. Lukas said he was "quite confident" that the two sets of schools used as the basis of his study were comparable because he had matched the student bodies by race and ethnic status and family income.

"I just don't see any other variable (other than freeway noise) that would account for the difference," he said.

At the Second Street School, located next to the Golden State Freeway in East Los Angeles, principal Maria Casillas said she didn't need a study to tell her that freeway noise was a problem.

"I don't know how much money they put into it (the study), but anyone here could tell you about the problem," she said. "The Golden State seems to get all the trucks, and sometimes it feels like we're shaking."

Second Street School, like most of those studied, has no air conditioning or carpeting to muffle the noise.

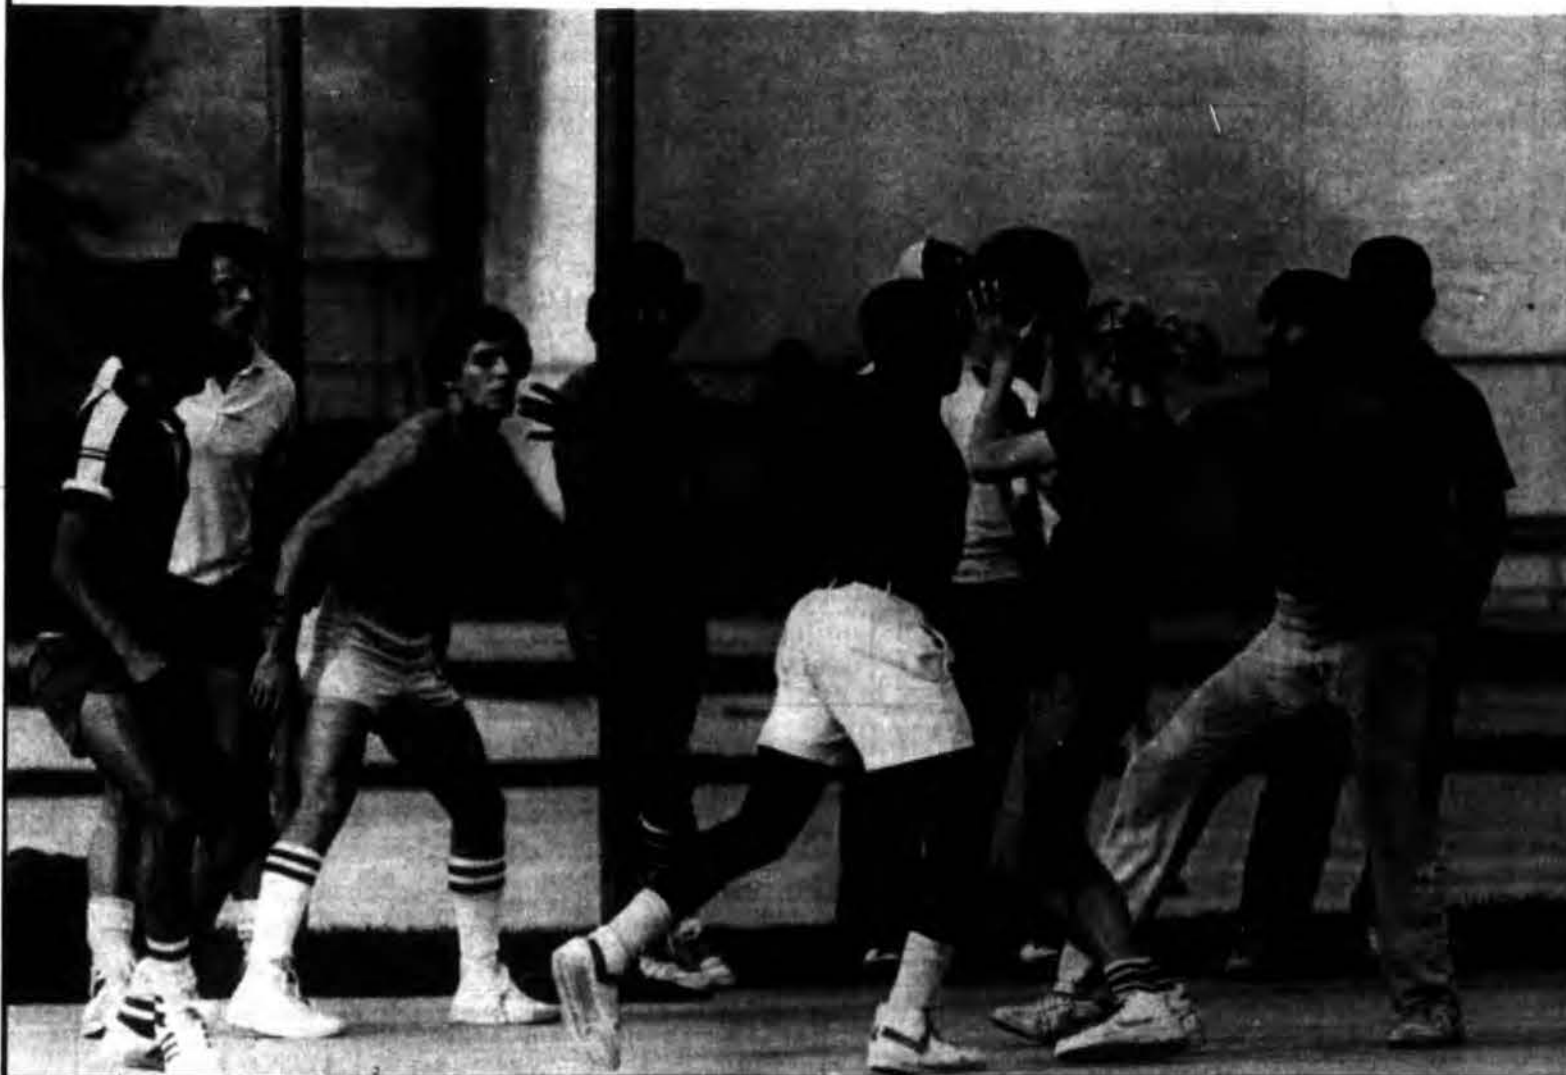

Since 1972, only six Los Angeles schools have received noise abatement relief, although 10 more have been approved by the California Department of Transportation.

Caltrans and the U.S. Department of Transportation are obligated by law to remedy severe noise coming from freeways.

Howard Hunter of Sunset Beach lost furnishings in storm.

Storm chaos for victims

Residents seeking disaster center aid frustrated, confused

By PHIL SNEIDERMAN
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

The pounding surf and high tides are gone, but life isn't back to normal for Howard Hunter, a disabled retiree whose Sunset Beach home was flooded during the storm last month.

"We lost a lot of our electrical appliances, shoes, clothing and antiques," he said. "Anything that could be destroyed by water was — our tools, bicycle, typewriter."

John Angelini, who works at the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Center in Long Beach, has finally moved back into the

Seal Beach duplex he was renting, now that the landlord has repaired the windows and put in new carpeting.

But Angelini has no bed and few other furnishings. The flooding destroyed the furniture he had recently purchased on credit.

"I'm still paying for things I don't even have now," he said.

Hunter and Angelini were among the first 50 people who visited the Federal Emergency Management Agency's Orange County disaster assistance center, which opened Monday at Mary Zoeter School in Seal Beach.

Assistance officials said the center will be open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily until all applicants are processed.

Frank Madden, a state official working as manager of the assistance center, said the Seal Beach facility was one of four opened in Southern California to aid victims of last month's storms. (The other centers are in Santa Barbara, Malibu and Del Mar near San Diego.)

Madden said he had expected a larger turnout, but said the number of applicants could swell as word of the assistance spreads. (See DISASTER, Page A2)

Margery Murray of Seal Beach relates how duplex was flooded.

Coercion denied by Krishna defense

By STEVE TRIPOLI
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Robin George was never coerced into joining, or remaining a member of the Hare Krishna movement, a lawyer for the group has told Orange County Superior Court jurors.

George was taken into the movement's temples partly because she told members she was being mistreated at home,

Los Angeles attorney Marshall Morgan said yesterday.

In his opening statement, Morgan painted a different picture of the Cypress woman's involvement with the movement — which each side agreed started with a visit to a Hare Krishna temple in Laguna Beach — than George's attorney had in his remarks Friday.

George and her mother Marcia are alleging in a $16-million lawsuit that Robin's involvement with the group in the mid-1970s resulted in her false imprisonment. Their lawsuit also claims there was emotional distress to the family that led to the death of Robin's father, Jim. Robin is now a 23-year-old graduate of Cal State Long Beach.

San Diego attorney

Milton Silverman, representing the Georges, said Robin was subjected to "a series of mind-bending, mind-altering exhortations" and other actions that broke her will and turned her against her parents after she joined the movement. She was 14 at the time.

But Morgan said the youth joined the movement "of her own free will." He said "there was no restraint on her whatsoever" to prevent her from leaving.

George's life in the Krishna movement "posed a dilemma for these people," Morgan said, because she was a minor but was claiming that one reason she wanted to stay with them was to escape abuse by her parents at home.

He said the Georges' story should be "played against the background of the constitutional right of freedom of religion and the constitutional right of the practice of religion."

"You may not like them (Krishna devotees) and you may not like the way they dress, but it's not a question of whether you're for or against an Eastern religion," Morgan said.

Layoffs facing coastal colleges

Coast Community College District administrators have unveiled a proposal to lay off approximately 100 full-time teachers and administrators. The layoffs would help reduce by one-third the $5.5 million budget deficit facing the district during the coming school year.

The plan will be considered tomorrow by the district's elected board of trustees. The board, which oversees operation of Orange Coast, Coastline and Golden West colleges, will meet in public session at 8 p.m. in the district headquarters, 1370 Adams Ave., Costa Mesa.

District spokesman Richard Simon said the proposed layoffs would affect about 114 district employees, but because some have the right to "bump" part-time employees for other jobs, approximately 95 people would be left out of work.

The layoff proposal was attacked last night by members of the American Federation of Teachers which represents the 640 full-time teachers employed at the three colleges.

Phillis Basile, president of the local AFT chapter, said she is hoping a large turnout of teachers, students and community members will convince the board not to act on the layoffs. She said she hopes the trustees will examine other cutbacks suggested by teachers to save jobs.

Regarding the administration's proposal, she claimed that many of the teacher cuts are in subjects also taught via television courses, including psychology, biology, history and anthropology.

Other cuts are in nursing, theater arts and speech instruction.

Simon denied that television courses were a consideration in the proposed cutbacks.

Scott Buettner got on his knee to propose marriage and Tanya Reddick accepted.

A real valentine's surprise

Huntington man does marriage proposal 'up right'

By ROBERT BARKER
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

Scott Buettner of Huntington Beach has the spirit of old-fashioned romance.

He believes if you love a woman and want to marry her, there's no better time to propose than on Valentine's Day.

And Scott, 28, did it up right yesterday when he and Tanya Reddick, 23, also of Huntington Beach, dined at their favorite restaurant.

After they finished their meals, Scott softened Tanya up with a half-dozen long-stemmed roses, a box of candy and a bottle of expensive champagne.

A violinist hovered over their table, playing appropriate strains.

Then Buettner sprang into action, pushing aside the table and slipping to one knee.

"Oh my God, Scott, are you serious? I can't believe it," Tanya said.

But Buettner was undeterred. "I love you very much, will you marry me?" he asked.

She said yes, they kissed and onlookers applauded as the violinist played on.

Buettner, a graduate of Marina High School in Huntington Beach and USC, is a commercial insurance underwriter.

Reddick, who went to Marina High School, is graduating from Cal State Long Beach in June. She is a checker at a Westminster supermarket.

No date has been set for the wedding.

15-story hotel addition OK'd

By STEVE MARBLE
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A 15-story addition to the Marriott Hotel, approved by the Newport Beach City Council, will make the facility the largest hotel on the Orange Coast.

The council, on a 5-2 vote last night, agreed to let the hotel chain expand its Newport Center operation despite protests from residents and Mayor Evelyn Hart.

With the expansion, the hotel will have 611 rooms, a new ballroom, swimming pool, health club, video game room and rooftop lounge. The enlargement is to be completed in 1985. The hotel currently has 377 rooms.

Hart and Councilman Don Strauss took exception to the building scheme and urged a smaller-scale project be considered.

Strauss said the city is patterning itself after Honolulu, which he described as a "terrible and rotten city" that "I wouldn't spend 10 minutes in."

"You (the city) are being hypocritical," charged Pat

Hollander, a Newport Beach resident. She said the city has lost credibility in its fight to block expansion of John Wayne Airport because it approves hotels that bring in airport passengers.

"Jets and hotels — each generate business for the other," added Kathy Jorgensen, a Newport resident and opponent of airport expansion.

Newport Beach has been under constant criticism from politicians in other areas of the county for approving hotels while battling the airport. It has been more than two years since a new hotel was approved.

"I get tired of these sanctimonious lectures from politicians in other areas while they go ahead and build hotels," responded Councilman Bill Agee. "It's a joke."

As a condition to the expansion, the Marriott will shell out more than $600,000 for road improvements. Part of the money will go toward the eventual widening of Pacific Coast Highway in front of Newport Center.

Newport seeking sewage burn sites

Admitting they are courting controversy, Newport Beach city leaders have agreed to seek locations for a proposed trash-and-sewage-burning power plant.

Two private firms have offered to build garbage-burning facilities in the city, but no potential sites have been named.

An Oklahoma company has proposed a 13-acre plant at a cost of $35 million. A Costa Mesa firm — O'Connor Combustor Co. — has advanced plans for a smaller and less-expensive plant that would burn only trash.

The city would not be asked to share in construction costs.

Ken Delino, executive assistant city manager, warned the city council yesterday to expect some public outcry once a list of possible sites is unveiled.

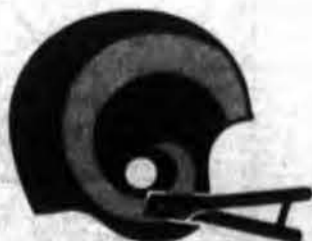

The city's interest in a waste-to-energy plant was prompted by the increasing cost of hauling trash to Coyote Canyon, a county-operated landfill near Irvine.

Delino said with a privately run trash burner, the city could save as much as $500,000 a year. (See SEWAGE, Page A2)

DISASTER CENTER . . .

Storm victims were directed to various tables offering benefits such as temporary housing, unemployment aid, disaster grants and low-interest personal and commercial loans from the Small Business Administration.

Madden cautioned that no applicants would leave with grant money or loans in hand. He said the applications must be processed and the damage inspected.

"We have to be very careful because we're dealing with taxpayers' money," he said.

Brian Odem, who was coordinating the SBA loan program at the center, said low-interest loans would be issued based on the applicants' ability to pay and the ease with which they could borrow from the private sector.

He said 70 percent of the loans would be issued at just under 6 percent interest, but the remainder would be as high as 11 1/2 percent.

Still, some storm victims seemed a bit confused and frustrated by the paperwork.

Art Boynton was looking for help because the bottom half of the duplex he owns in Seal Beach was destroyed by the storm. He said the damage totaled $20,000.

After meeting with some of the assistance officials, Boynton said he wasn't sure whether he'd qualify for the loan he was seeking. He said he might have to pay an interest rate that is not much lower than commercial lenders.

"It's a little discouraging," he said.

Margery Murray, an 83-year-old widow wishing to repair her Seal Beach duplex, said she was seeking a federal loan because her bank was prepared to charge her 21 percent interest.

"I'd rob a bank before I'd pay that much," she said.

The Seal Beach assistance center was opened to permit residents to take advantage of relief services made available by President Reagan's designation of Southern California's storm-battered coastal area as a national disaster area.

SEWAGE BURN SITES . . .

"But there are a number of risks," he added. He said air quality permits might be tough to obtain and that current zoning in Newport Beach wouldn't even allow a trash or sewage-burning facility.

Additionally, ash residue from burning the waste is deemed to be a hazardous material, according to state law. Delino said there is a move to change or modify the law.

The energy produced from a burning operation would be sold by the private firm.

Mesa project cited as 'electrifying'

By JODI CADENHEAD

Costa Mesa business leaders say they are enthusiastic about a report put together by a team of private urban planners aimed at revitalizing the city's aging downtown.

They said yesterday there is an "electrifying quality" waiting to be tapped in the commercial core.

However, some business people expressed concerns about proposals that would lead to demolition of their businesses and construction of a sunken freeway.

Costa Mesa Tomorrow, a group of downtown business owners, was to meet today to discuss findings released earlier this month by nine panelists from the Washington-based Urban Land Institute.

Peggy Reinert, president of Costa Mesa Tomorrow, said most retail owners in the 200-acre redevelopment area are enthusiastic about plans to revitalize downtown with new shops, landscaping and higher-density residential construction.

However, merchants interviewed yesterday unanimously expressed opposition to the ULI panel's recommendation that the state construct a below-street-level freeway along Newport Boulevard.

Reinert said business owners still support construction of the Costa Mesa Freeway (Route 55) along an adopted route that bypasses downtown and swings westward. The ULI-supported route would cause severe problems during construction, she said.

The city's Redevelopment Agency will meet March 28 to consider some of the panel's suggestions. They include:

— Increasing the current 8-acre "Superblock" at Harbor Boulevard and 19th Street, which would require demolition of buildings across the street and all the Newport Boulevard shops between 18th and 19th streets.

— Realigning Harbor Boulevard at 19th Street to Park Avenue or north of the Pacific Federal building so the "Superblock" can be developed in one chunk.

— Creating a shopper's lane on the east side of Newport Boulevard to increase pedestrian traffic and encourage displaced merchants to relocate there.

Irvine water election date shifted

By GLENN SCOTT

Reeling from a $61,000 bill for their election last June, members of the Irvine Ranch Water District have decided to shift the district's 1984 elections from June to November.

The change is expected to reduce the district's bill for election services from the Orange County Registrar of Voters Office by as much as 84 percent.

It also means two members of the board of directors — E. Ray

Quigley Jr. and James Goodrich, whose terms expire in June — will serve an extra five months.

Al Olson, county registrar, explained to board members during their regular meeting last night that costs associated with the June primary are higher than other elections because ballots must be printed for six political affiliations.

The parties are Republican, Democrat, Libertarian, American Independent, Peace and Freedom and Independent.

In November, all voters receive the same ballot, so Olson said labor costs to compose the ballots and adjust the presses are six times less.

Of the water district's $61,000 bill, about $60,000 went for costs associated with printing, he said, adding that a state reapportionment created more ballot types, thus more printing.

Officials noted that both the water district and city of Irvine initially agreed to hold elections in June so voters could follow both local races at the same time. But they said financial implications weren't considered then.

Board Chairman Peer Swan said shifting the elections will ensure less expense for the district and also a larger voter turnout. November general elections attract more voters than do primaries.

City leaders haven't decided whether to switch election dates. Irvine was billed $8,500 for its June 1982 election but Olson said expenses will rise because the water district won't be sharing certain printing costs.

Visitors to $65,000 mini-park observe points of interest along coastline.

Thalia mini-park dedicated

Nearly two dozen city officials and Laguna Beach council members had crowded onto the viewing platform.

The mayor gave a short speech, a white ribbon draped across the wood structure was cut, and the politicians and planners applauded and went home.

The new Thalia Street mini-park was officially dedicated in a ceremony late last week.

By early today, a steady stream of surfers, couples, tourists and Laguna residents had visited the $65,000 mini-park, enjoying the view from the two-tiered platform above the bluff.

The ceremonies were two years in the making, the result of community pressure to scale down the size of the proposed park.

The city council, 1 1/2 years ago, turned down initial plans for the park at the ocean-end of Thalia Street.

The council bowed to petitions signed by several hundred

Lagunans who said they didn't want a massive wood structure hanging over the blufftop.

The council sent its planners back to the drawing boards. Last October, it approved plans for a subdued platform that fit the contours of the rock and dirt bluff.

Funding for the project came from a federal grant administered by the California Coastal Conservancy, and the park was constructed by Hondo Company, Inc., of Santa Ana.

USA Today's newsracks hit

The blue-and-white newsracks for USA Today, a new national newspaper, have triggered concern by Newport Beach officials that green, purple and even pink newsracks may not be far behind.

"Couldn't we just spray them brown or something," asked City Councilman Phil Maurer during a meeting yesterday.

"They sure stick out," added

Councilman Bill Agee. "I don't think we have a felony on our hands here but I do sense a problem."

As in other Orange County cities, USA Today racks have prompted Newport Beach officials to go running to the city code book to see if there's a way to tone down the colorful racks.

But in Newport Beach, there isn't. City officials admitted USA

Today has permits for all 40 racks in the city and that current law says nothing about color. The law says only that the racks be "attractive."

City Attorney Robert Burnham, noting the racks stick out like "the proverbial sore thumb," proposed revising the rules for newsracks with an eye toward color — brown being the popular choice.

Noel Hatch, an attorney for the newspaper, defended the colorful racks. He said the city already has approved them and suggested the city is going through "a change of heart."

City Manager Robert Wynn said if new color restrictions for newsracks are adopted, there would be a "moral obligation" to let the USA Today racks stay.

Concern over the racks comes from Police Chief Charles Gross, who reported they will distract motorists and pedestrians and lead to accidents.

Riedel rites held

Family graveside services for Newport Beach resident and physician J. Adolph Riedel, who died Saturday at age 99, were held today at Pacific View Memorial Park in Corona del Mar.

Dr. Riedel practiced medicine for 50 years in Chicago after graduating from the University of Illinois in 1908.

He is survived by three sons, Dr. Henry A. Riedel of Corona del Mar, the Rev. Wesley U. Riedel of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Dr. L.S. Riedel of Oakland. He also leaves eight grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

The family has asked that memorial contributions be made to Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach.

Reactor down, air conditioning fails

The 1,100-megawatt Unit 2 reactor at the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station has been shut down again, this time because two air conditioning units in the control room failed an engineering test.

The $1.7 billion unit, which began low-power testing last February, has been shut down a number of times for a variety of problems. A full-power license was issued last September.

The latest occurred Friday when tests on two control room ventilation systems failed. The systems, which were modified last November, serve Unit 2 and the uncompleted Unit 3 reactor at the power plant south of San Clemente.

Russ Hawkes, a spokesman for Southern California Edison Co., major owner of the power station, said the ventilation systems are meant to keep the atmospheric pressure inside the control rooms at a higher level so no dust will blow inside.

The system is designed to prevent radiation and gases from entering the control rooms in case of an accident.

Hawkes said Edison engineers will "jam in a couple of other ehoes during the down time."

No startup date has been set. He said the frequent shutdowns and startups of the new reactor are not unusual, adding, "It's like a new aircraft carrier. It's going to be constantly up and down during the startup phase."

S. Laguna plan hits few snags

Despite some reservations by a handful of residents, South Laguna's local coastal plan has encountered little opposition before the county Planning Commission.

The plan, scheduled for a final commission vote Feb. 23, still must be approved by the Board of Supervisors before it is submitted to the state Coastal Commission. The plan governs all development in the South Laguna area.

Residents of several blufftop neighborhoods objected at hearings yesterday to providing coastal access for non-residents at nearby beaches. They claimed the beaches could not safely accommodate large numbers of people.

Also, several individual landowners living above Three Arch Bay protested the open-space designation proposed for land adjacent to their homes.

In one case, the commission promised an immediate remedy. Dr. Al Clark told the panel that the parcel on which his home is situated had been designated as open space in the plan. Commission Chairman William MacDougall said the designation was an error and would be corrected.

Bay study due unveiling

A study which lists alternatives for keeping silt out of partially-clogged Upper Newport Bay will be formally unveiled tonight in the first of several public hearings.

The study marks the final leg of an effort to determine where the silt, sand and debris come from and how best to keep it out of the bay.

There are six alternatives. Authors of the study are pushing a $7.5-million operation that would include dredging in the bay and the installation of silt-catching basins in the San Diego Creek, the bay's main waterway.

The 7:30 hearing will be held in the Newport Beach Council Chamber, 3300 Newport Blvd. Through public hearings, an alternative will be selected.

HB collegian in Who's Who

Scott Belcher of Huntington Beach has been selected to appear in the 1983 edition of Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

Belcher is a student at the University of Redlands. Students are picked for the directory on the basis of academic achievement, service to the community and potential.

WEATHER

Coastal

Increasing high clouds today. Highs from near 68 along the beaches to 76 inland. Mostly cloudy tonight with a slight chance of rain or intermittent showers. Overnight lows 46 to 56. Partly cloudy on Wednesday and a little cooler with highs 60 to 70. Elsewhere, from Point Conception to the Mexican border and out 80 miles. Winds over outer channel waters northwesterly 10 to 20 knots. Winds becoming northerly 10 to 20 knots on Wednesday. Westerly swells 6 to 8 feet, increasing to 10 to 15 feet late tonight. Winds light and variable over inner coastal waters, becoming southwesterly 5 to 15 knots this afternoon and northwesterly Wednesday. Westerly swells 3 to 5 feet increasing 5 to 10 feet late tonight. Partly sunny today but mostly cloudy tonight with a chance of light rain. Partly cloudy Wednesday.

U.S. summary

Central sections of the Atlantic coast were hit by high winds today and gale warnings were posted in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

The winds stemmed from the remnants of a storm that struck the Carolinas and Virginia on Monday and then spun out to sea. Under clear skies, temperatures dropped rapidly overnight in the mid-Atlantic area and in southern New England.

Skies were cloudy in much of the southern and Central Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region. Parts of Texas had severe thunderstorms Monday night, with rain falling at the rate of an inch an hour. The heaviest rainfall was near Austin and San Antonio.

Showers and thunderstorms were forecast today from Texas across southeast Oklahoma and Louisiana into southern Mississippi.

Skies were expected to be cloudy from North Dakota across the middle Mississippi Valley, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region, but generally fair over the rest of the nation. Temperatures around the nation at midnight PST ranged from 8 degrees above zero in Olean, N.Y., to 67 degrees in Brownsville, Texas.

California

A Pacific storm brings a chance of rain and increasing surf tonight as coastal residents devastated by last month's storms line up for federal disaster assistance.

tonight, said Alan Thompson of the National Weather Service in Los Angeles.

A four- to six-foot surf was expected to increase to six to 10 feet Wednesday, but storms now moving across the Pacific were not likely to be as powerful as the series of storms that caused $94 million in damage statewide last month, he said.

Dozens of people whose homes were damaged or destroyed in January signed up at the Disaster Assistance Center in the Malibu Civic Center on Monday, seeking federal aid for repairs or replacing what was lost to angry seas.

The center was one of four federal aid stations opened this week in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and Santa Barbara counties following President Reagan's federal disaster declarations in 17 California counties.

Soviet ships cruising within 50 miles of Gulf

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A squadron of four Soviet warships has ended a two-month operation in the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico that at one point brought the ships within about 50 miles of the southern U.S. coast.

Navy officials said they were not sure whether the ships were nuclear-armed. But they noted that Soviet warships are normally equipped with both nuclear and conventional armament.

3 robbers invade Army post

EL PASO, Texas — The FBI has been asked to investigate the wounding of two soldiers in a Fort Bliss nightclub by three robbers wearing gas masks and Army camouflage uniforms. The robbers also pistol-whipped a barmaid Monday and escaped — even though gates were sealed at the base where about 22,000 Army personnel live.

SALT LAKE CITY — Barney Clark spent his 76th day with a mechanical heart in a private room with a view of Great Salt Lake today, after his condition was upgraded from serious to fair for the first time since his pioneering operation.

Maureen Reagan renews ERA vow

RENO — Maureen Reagan celebrated the birthday of women's suffrage leader Susan B. Anthony with a call for a renewed struggle on behalf of women's rights. The president's daughter, speaking to a convention of Women in Business and Management, vowed Monday that there will be another Equal Rights Amendment: "It's not if, it's when."

President embraces new job plan

WASHINGTON — Two months ago, President Reagan threatened a veto when the Democratic House approved a $5.4 billion jobs program. Now he's embracing a $4.3 billion plan that contains many similar elements. Congressional sources reported Monday the administration's proposal includes $1 billion for local governments through Community Development Block Grants.

San Francisco woos convention

SAN FRANCISCO — Mayor Dianne Feinstein will be twisting arms trying to hit a $40 million jackpot next week when she flies to Washington D.C. in hopes of bringing the Democratic National Convention to San Francisco. The mayor, battling Chicago, Washington, Detroit and New York, will tell convention planners that San Francisco is prepared to spend $6.5 million to help pay for the convention.

15 Vietnam vets begin desert run

DEATH VALLEY — A group of Vietnam veterans were faced with a second day of 80-degree desert heat today on a 100-mile run across Death Valley to show the "can do" attitude of veterans. The 15 veterans began their journey Monday with a flight out of Las Vegas, Nev., and a parachute drop into an area near Bonnie Clair.

Gun backers spend $5.8 million

SACRAMENTO — The National Rifle Association and other weapon proponents brought out their big guns last fall, spending $5.8 million to defeat an anti-handgun measure, while gun opponents spent $2.8 million. The NRA alone spent $3.7 million, according to reports filed Monday with the secretary of state.

County, Marines agree on fire pact

By GLENN SCOTT
Of the Daily Pilot Staff

A mutual aid pact has been expanded to allow firefighters from the Marines' El Toro Air Station to respond during emergencies anywhere in Orange County.

The agreement replaces a 2-year-old pact in which the military firefighters were dispatched to emergencies no farther than three miles from the base.

Under the new pact, signed last week, county paramedic and rescue crews for the first time also are available to assist on the base. The former agreement called for the county government to supply only firefighters upon request.

Fire chiefs Larry Holms from the county and Donald Mayers from the base described the new agreement as a logical way of increasing fire protection at little cost.

The military base uses three fire engines while Orange County has 71, said county spokesman Capt. Gary Stenberg.

The county Fire Department covers all unincorporated areas and contracts its services to several cities, including Irvine.

Under the agreement, Marine Corps firefighters automatically will respond to any calls within the three-mile perimeter of the base and also will assist if called to other emergencies, Stenberg said.

County crews will help at the base upon request.

HB blacked out by fallen limb

A falling tree limb severed a 12,000-volt power line in Huntington Beach yesterday, knocking out power to about 3,000 homes and businesses for 30 minutes.

The outage occurred in an area near Brookhurst Street and Adams and Atlanta avenues, according to officials at Southern California Edison Co.

Traffic signals also were disrupted by the 1 p.m. power failure.

Bill Compton, Edison's West Orange County manager, said the outage occurred when a limb fell into the line as a resident was trimming a tree.

Compton said officials should be notified when trees pose a hazard. Company employees will remove the limb or assist the property owner in doing so, he said.

Compton said the unidentified resident will be asked to reimburse the company for costs of restoring service.

Millions spent to dig out East Coast said New York Mayor Edward Koch.

That dumping will cost New York City about $5 million — $5 million more than it had left in its snow fund, the Sanitation Department said Monday. It will need a special appropriation from the Board of Estimate to pay for cleaning the city's 6,200 miles of roads.

Boston had the same problem. It spent $675,000 this weekend, bringing the winter total to $1.7 million. It had budgeted $1 million and hoped for a mild winter.

"It's the equivalent of going into an expensive restaurant with five bucks in your pocket," said Joseph Casazza, Boston public works commissioner.

Massachusetts spent $3 million to clear its roads, the last of the state's $10 million snow-removal budget, and Washington, D.C., spent more than $1 million — nearly all of the snow fund.

"We'll continue to do what is necessary to clear the streets — and figure out later how to reduce in other areas of the budget," said Thomas Downs, director of the district's transportation department.

Virginia spent $9 million on cleanup, more than any other state. New Jersey spent $2.5 million and the bill was estimated at $1 million in Connecticut.

Storms hit east, send rain on parade

By The Associated Press

A storm spinning off the Eastern Seaboard brought high winds and choppy seas to the Atlantic Coast today, as Northeastern cities strained local budgets in digging out from under the Blizzard of '83.

Meanwhile, Texas was hit by heavy thunderstorms Monday night and the weather service predicted rain on today's Mardi Gras festivities in New Orleans.

The storm off the East Coast caused high winds and tides in Carolina, along with scattered light snow or rain as far north as New Jersey earlier Monday.

For the Northeast, Monday was another day of digging out from the blizzard that struck Friday and Saturday from Virginia to Massachusetts.

The death toll from the blizzard, which dumped up to 3 feet of snow, had reached 89 by today — including 24 dead and 9 missing and presumed dead in the sinking of a coal ship in rough seas 30 miles off Virginia.

In North Carolina, ocean waters surged across Ocean Boulevard on Topsail Island, washing out several piers and gazebos, residents said Monday. High tide pushed across the north end of Ocracoke Island, and the weather service said there was a strong chance of serious beach erosion along the Outer Banks.

"It's the highest tide we've had since hurricane David" in 1979, said Louis Williamson, manager of Scotch Bonnet fishing pier on Topsail Island.

Two ferry operations remained shut down by high winds late Monday, state officials said. Two other ferries that were closed briefly resumed service in the afternoon.

Meanwhile, Jim Barry, director of New Jersey's Consumer Affairs Division, said his office had heard from 50 motorists Monday complaining that they had been overcharged by tow truck operators who removed their cars from snow-covered roads.

vehicles to dig out of the snow, up to 22 inches in some parts of the city.

As early as Saturday, the Sanitation Department has issued a blanket offer to rent any dump truck front-end loader, bulldozer or tow truck. About 115 vehicles responded and the city paid operators $40 to $50 an hour.

In Virginia, where there are 52,600 miles of public roadways, the storm was the most expensive in recent years. The $9 million bill left less than $7 million in the state snow fund.

About 5,000 maintenance workers in Virginia worked in shifts over the weekend, using 3,000 vehicles. The state also rented 500 bulldozers and tractors from private citizens and companies.

Massachusetts, which spent $17 million cleaning up from one blizzard in 1978, had 3,500 snow-clearing trucks on the road Saturday.

"We expect the final cost for the season to reach $15 million or $16 million," said William Pizzano.

Teachers pay hike gets tentative OK

Tentative agreement on a new contract between the Ocean View School Teachers Association and the district has been reported in Huntington Beach.

The tentative agreement calls for approximately 500 district teachers to receive a 7 percent pay increase — retroactive to July 1 — and a 6 percent pay increase in 1983-84.

Additionally, district officials have agreed to adjust all teacher salary steps (automatic raises based on education level and years in the district) to the Orange County average.

District negotiators also agreed to add $300 to each teachers' fringe benefit package this year and next year.

Cost of this year's increases is estimated at $1.1 million.

The new wage package will increase the pay of the average teacher to about $25,865, officials said.

Tentative agreement was reached over the weekend, following around-the-clock negotiations Thursday night and Friday.

The agreement must be ratified by votes of the teachers and district trustees.

The Ocean View district is made up of 23 elementary schools in Huntington Beach, Fountain Valley and Westminster.

GEM WISE

In my last column I welcomed your inquiries and questions about the appraisal service done in our Accredited Gem Laboratory in our store. I was surprised to find there was so much confusion about appraisal services. I was asked by several people if the Gemological Institute of America wasn't the last word in appraisals. The G.I.A. doesn't give appraisals at all. They do issue "reports" which have been called certificates by outsiders. Their reports identify gemstones and grade diamonds regarding color and clarity. They will not put a price on any piece of jewelry or gemstone.

More confusion comes from the many "independent" gem labs that have sprung up all over the country and have adopted names that seem to give them official or governmental association. In contrast to those so-called "independent" gem labs are others located on the premises of members of the American Gem Society... these are called Accredited Gem Laboratories and the following requirements must be met:

The form must have a Certified Gemologist (not merely a Graduate Gemologist) in its employ.

The laboratory must be at all times, under active supervision of a Certified Gemologist.

Mary Barr, Certified Gemologist

CHARLES H. BARR

Member of American Gem Society

Accredited Gem Laboratory

17th & Irvine, Westcliff Plaza, Newport Beach 642-3310

The laboratory must be equipped with the following gem testing instruments, as a minimum:

Refractometer
Polariscope
Dichroscope
Gem Scales (accurate to .01 carat) and equipped for determination of specific gravity.
Diamondscope or equivalent magnifier employing a dark field illumination, capable of magnification of at least 30X.
Diamond grading lights.

At least 5 AGS Master Diamonds which have been graded for color on the AGS Colorimeter.

Source for ultraviolet light.
Leveridge Gauge.
Proportion scope.

Adequate gemological library. In addition to the above minimum requirements of equipment, the laboratory must be operated in a professional and ethical manner. Any member who operates a lab in such a manner as to bring discredit upon the Society, by unwarranted discrediting of a competitor's merchandise, or by any other unethical conduct, shall be subject to expulsion.

We are very proud to be certified by the American Gem Society as an Accredited Gem Laboratory.

Suspect had fraud, not murder, in mind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Newport Beach resident has testified he didn't kill a wealthy 80-year-old widow but admitted dumping her body in the ocean and pretending she was alive in order to "scam her estate."

Lawrence Remsen told a Superior Court jury Monday that Thelma Gaston had died of natural causes when he found her body in her West Los Angeles home June 29, 1981. He is charged with murdering her.

Remsen, who said he was a companion and aide to Mrs. Gaston after he had filed for bankruptcy, testified that he devised a plot to convert her estate to cash while pretending she was still alive.

"The longer I could make people think she was around, the better chance I had of putting this . . . thing together," he said. "I figured I was going to get what I could get and leave the country."

Remsen said he was especially trying to complete the sale of a $1.4 million parking lot downtown before leaving.

He said Ms. Gaston had cut short a trip the two made to Las Vegas and returned home alone. He said upon his return he tried for two days to call her at home and finally went there when he could not reach her.

He found her on the floor

when he went inside the home, he said.

"I was just in shock. I thought it was a nightmare," he testified.

Remsen said he shut the door and went for a drink. He said a friend convinced him to bilk the estate by forging documents and volunteered to provide a notary seal.

Then, he said, he went back to the house, put her body in the trunk of a car and took her to South Laguna Beach, where he carried her to sea aboard an inflatable raft and dumped her.

BULLETIN BOARD

Hoag to present medical lectures

A weekly medical lecture at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach will be sponsored in March by the hospital's pulmonary department.

On March 2, Dr. John Rumsfeld will discuss lung cancer and related disorders. On March 9, Meredee Anderson, a nurse, will discuss "Body/Mind Integration."

A two-part discussion on medicine and using medicine properly will be held March 16 and 23. It will be presented by Bobbie Farrington, a director of Los Angeles County's Medical Education Program.

On March 30, Dr. Rumsfeld will discuss treatment of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

The weekly classes begin at 1:30 p.m. and are held in the hospital conference center.

•Friends of the Hortense Miller Garden will hear a slide presentation on the Pyrenees Thursday night at 7 p.m. at the Laguna Beach Library.

Basil Hancock and his wife are naturalists from York, England, and the slide show will present their three-week tour of the mountain range.

The meeting is open to the public and there is no admission.

•The Orange Coast YMCA is seeking the donation of used station wagons to provide transportation for its after-school programs.

Enrollment in the YMCA's Sunshine Co. program, which picks up youngsters after school and takes them to the YMCA, has increased, according to Amy Gorum, director of the program.

For more information, call 642-9990.

•The Up With People Show will be in San Clemente Feb. 22 and 23 at 8 p.m. in San Clemente High School.

The San Clemente Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring this two-hour musical experience performed by a cast of 100 international young men and women.

Tickets are $4 for senior citizens and students, $5 for adults and are now on sale at San Clemente Chamber of Commerce, 1100 N. El Camino Real.

Students fingerprinted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Voluntary fingerprinting will start Feb. 26 for the 280 students at the Prairie Street School in the city's Northridge area.

"We're stressing it is for their protection," said Prairie PTA president Jo Ann Grofsky.

Schoolchildren are fingerprinted in several states with the support of many PTA units, who see it as a way to help find children who are kidnapped or otherwise disappear. The Missing Children Act, signed into law last year by President Reagan, encouraged fingerprinting programs.

"Because we believe this is extremely vital to the safety of all children, we encourage the community at large to join in this effort," Ms. Grofsky said.

The fingerprints, which will cost $2 per child, will be placed on a special card to be given to parents for safe-keeping, she said, adding that any child fingerprinted at the school must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Golden West offers speakers

Organizations looking for speakers to appear at spring meetings can contact the Golden West College Speakers Bureau. There is no fee for this service; participating Golden West instructors and staff members donate their time.

This year, 38 Golden West teachers and staff members are participating as speakers. Their topics range from letter writing to time management, from wine making to a look at modern China.

More than 80 topics, drawn from 31 subject areas, are listed in a new speakers brochure, available from the Golden West Community relations office, 894-2297.

A double tax break for Californians only.

No U.S. income taxes. No state income taxes.

TAX-FREE

9.08%*

Payable monthly

Federal taxes. State taxes. The more you make, the more they take.

But, now you can keep it all. When you invest in the California Series of the Municipal Investment Trust Fund, you keep everything you earn. Nobody takes a penny of it. Not the State. Not the IRS. It's completely tax-free*.

And the current yields are attractive. 9.08% — and that's after all sales charges and expenses. And there's no management fee.

We think that you'll agree that the California Series of the Municipal Investment Trust Fund scores high on all counts.

All of the municipal bonds in the fund are rated in the category A or better by Standard & Poor's or Moody's. Because it's a fixed portfolio you'll know exactly where your money is invested. And, because it's diversified, your risk is reduced.

You may redeem or sell your units at any time without charge or interest penalty at the then prevailing market price. If you're a Californian in a high tax bracket, double tax-free income may give you a lot more spendable income.

Write today for a Prospectus. It's free and without obligation. Just call Jerry Jones at (714) 955-7555 or mail the coupon.

*This represents the annual interest income, after estimated annual expenses, divided by the public offering price. It varies with changes in either account.
